A PRACTICALL CATECHISME

Or,

A view of those principall truths of the word, which most directly tend to life and godlinesse.

Divided into three Parts.

The first, shewing the misery of all men by nature, both in respect of sinne and punishment; with the true use of the morrall Law in that behalfe.

The second, manifesting the remedy ordained by God to deliver them from this misery, together with the meanes of receiving it, viz. Faith, and how it may be attained.

The third, declaring how those who are delivered, ought to order their whole Conversation; with the meanes to procure it, the lets resisting, and the priviledges encouraging to it.

Serving for the use of those who first heard them taught, as also for all others who shall carefully peruse them.

The third Edition, corrected and much enlarged.

By D. Rogers B. in Divin. and Minister of the Gospell.

Rom. 7. 9. For I was once alive without the Law; but when the Law came, sinne revived, and I died.

Esay 12. 3. Therefore with joy draw yee waters out of the wels of salvation.

2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore these promises, let us cleanse our selves from all filthinesse of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holinesse in the feare of God.

A PRACTICAL CATECHISM.

To the Right Honorable and vertuous Lady, SVSANNA, Counteſſe of Warwick, wife to the Right Honorable ROBERT, Earle of Warwick, Baron of Leez, &c. Grace and peace.

MADAM:

Good Readers love good bookes for themſelves, and were all Readers ſuch; (which neither they ever were, nor ever will be) I meane ingenuous or judicious, there would be the leſſe uſe of Dedications. But it is with bookes as with Meates: not all our cooking and dreſſing (doe what we can) will faſten them upon ſuch as have no appetites. And the moſt will want them; either out of diſtaſte of Stomacke, or elſe infirmity; carping at whatſoever ſutes not with their malicious fulſomneſſe, curioſity, or ignorance. Againſt ſuch as theſe, bookes juſtly ſeeke Protection from eminent perſonages; and ſo doth mine from your Honor. Both that the ill affected and prejudicate may leſſe hurt us, being ſhrowded under ſuch covert; and that the weake (if poſſible) ſeeing wiſer and better than themſelves to rely and feede upon that ſavorily, which they refuſe, may recover appetite, and treade in their ſteps.

Another reaſon of my offer is. That this my Treatiſe hath heretofore come forth torne and diſguiſed, partly by accident, partly by wilfull default; You know ragged children run into holes to hide themſelves as aſhamed; but having gotten apparell upon them amended; they dare preſent themſelves to their beſt friends. The truth is; full loath I was to offer the former diſmembred copy to the view of many ſuch as I ought ſpeciall ſervice unto. But having now by providence, ſomewhat darned it up, and reſtored it to order, I am bold to offer it, (ſuch as it is) to your Honours view and acceptance.

But becauſe thoſe who are wiſe, do not ſomuch ſeeke great ones, as good ones, to be patrons of their workes; Therefore to ſpeake the truth, the maine motive mooving me to entitle your Honour to theſe my labours, is this, That I have deemed you one, in whoſe perſon greatneſſe and goodneſſe do concur; your Ladiſhips more than ordinary ordinary respect unto some faithfull Ministers of Christ (my selfe one of the unworthiest of them, not being excluded,) hath witnessed for you, that not greatnesse onely, but goodnesse hath found favour with you. And I doubt not, but that experience hath taught you, by so much the more to set a price upon goodnesse, by how much you see, that onely it can make you great, when greatnesse alone can create no goodnesse. Not to speak much of your religious care to worship God in secret, mourning for nothing more than for your inability to serve him with the best of your strength and courage, in your Meditations and private entercourse with his Majesty. All which perswade me, that God will enable your Honour to afford my poore labours such patronage, as both they specially seeke, and this age most needs; that is, of your practise, and the expression of those three sacred Truthes; of Selfe-deniall, Faith, and the New Creature, which are therein presented to you.

Alas! (Right Honourable) as the proverbe (which in all languages is so common) telles us, There is a Satiety of all things (outward) heere below, yea the choycest of them. Those who know you can tell, first what parentage and descent God hath vouchsafed you; To that, what wealth and estate he hath added; To both, what titles of honour he hath caſt in upon you. But what of all theſe three? They are not that threefold cord, not eaſily broken; they are not thoſe Delicates which admit no Surfeit; they cannot all of them make up a crowne which withers not; No, rather they are of themſelves (without goodneſſe) wormewood, withering garlands. Yea, had you (beſides theſe three) all other accompliſhments which either your owne heart, or any friend could wiſh either to your ſelfe, or to your Honorable Compeere (to whom my ſelfe am much obliged for ſundry favours) If, I ſay, you might wiſh and have either worldly proſperity either for your ſelves, or for that poſterity which marriage hath intereſſed both your Honours in; with the bleſſedeſt harmony and correſpondence of body, of ſoule, which this world can afford; Alas yet! Where is your happineſſe? Can Pharaoh's privy Chamber it ſelfe keepe out frogs? Can all worldly welfare ſhut out regret and fulſomneſſe? You know it cannot.

But the things which the Lord offers to your in the three linkes of this Golden chaine before mentioned (a cord not eaſily broken) are dainties and fatneſſe, in which your ſoule may delight it ſelfe without wearineſſe; and will ſet a crowne upon your head, which fades not; and afford you a Treaſure which no Theeves can dig through or ſteale; ſteale. Buſie your ſelfe then (Right Honourable) as your privacy ſhall occaſion (whereof you have enough) in the meditation and practice of theſe three; till they have ſo poſſeſſed you, that your ſolitary houres with God may become pleaſant unto you; You ſhall (by peruſall) eaſily meete with them mixt with other like ingredients) in this enſuing treatiſe; ſelfe deniall firſt will frame your ſpirit to ſuch an abaſement in your owne eyes. Yea, it will reſigne you up ſo wholly from your ſelfe, unto meere grace; that what good ſpever you enjoy, you ſhal take it with a kind & thankful heart & hand from God, as being leſſer than the leaſt of mercies: & whatſoever you want, you ſhal be content, as confeſſing that whatſoever is not utter miſery, is more than you deſerve: And when you can not equall your objects to their deſires, yet you ſhal levell your deſires to them, becauſe you deſire to be no other than God will have you to be.

Then ſecondly, Faith, in the life thereof, will ſo ſtrengthen your heart (through hope) that whatever you ſhall be called to be, to do, or to ſuffer; the promiſe of God al-ſufficient ſhall enable you thereto, ſuſtaine you therein: ſo that you ſhall ſay. Not I now, but Chriſt dwelling in me, ſhall doe all my workes for me. My ſtrength ſhall be to ſit ſtill; not as wholly careleſſe, but as wholly caſting my cares upon him; Yea by this ſhield of Faith, Gal. 2. 20. Eſay 26. 12. Eſay 30. 7. and 15.

all the fiery darts of divels, of men, of Diſcontent, of Diſcouragement, ſhall be quenched and vaniſh.

Thirdly, by the influence of the New Creature, you ſhall finde the Spirit of Chriſt to inſpire your ſpirit from Heaven, in ſuch ſort, as to carry you forth to all good converſation, both inward to God, and outward to man, with comelineſſe and due proportion; your heart ſhall be alway on

And what more (good Madam!) can be wiſhed than this? Surely if Providence fore-ſee any other Comfort meete for you which you want (ſo that you ſeeke his kingdome firſt) God will caſt it in as an overplus; He ſhall grant your Honour ſweet complacence at home, grace and favour with God and man; carry you (as Noah's Arke above the hils) above your corruptions, your feares. And when your warfare ſhall be accompliſhed, ſhall ake you and ſhut you up for ever in the Arke of eaven, where no floods of waters ſhall come neere neere you; For the which (good Lady) pray, watch, and waite continually; and my ſoule ſhal ever crave anſwer for you from the Almighty; to whoſe grace and bleſſing, recommending the peruſall of this your Booke, but eſpecially your whole proſperity, I reſt,

Your Honours obliged unto all due ſervice in the Lord,

D. R.

To my loving Countrymen in generall, who have embraced the truth of the Gospell, or desire to embrace it: and in speciall to my beloved Brethren and neighbours who have heard these things handled in the Ministry: greeting.

Deere friends, [Auditors and Readers,]

IT is no new thing, for stuffe and substance, which I offer to you in this ensuing Tract: how can I, in an Argument of this nature, wherein the object determines the minde and pen of the Writer? If therfore novelty be your ayme, save your labour. Only for the manner and order of expression, this I would say: That as the Ancients, looke what they desired deepely to fasten upon themselves or their children, they were wont to conveigh in it the familiarity of a Song or Rime, that it might become their own with ease: so doe I heere, under the ease and familiarnesse of Catechisme, (which is no other than a forme of godlinesse) reach out to thee & thine, a direction to Heaven so that if hereby the truth as it is in Iesus, may be emplanted in thy spirit in any measure, I have my desire. Thou wilt say, Who ever denyed but Catechisme serves to this end? I answer, I wish that the practise of all that catechize and are catechized did approove it. The slight answer of men betrayes them, who being asked, If their Minister did preach to day? answer, No: he did but Catechize: If the Preaching of a Catechist were conceived as his best worke, could men so speake? No surely: were Catechizing used to such solemne ends, none but barbarous & blind ones could be ignorant of the eminency and and fruite thereof. I have mine Lonely aide. As I blesse God that Catechizing is so frequent, and that there are many able Preachers who aime at a profitable course: So I wish that all who doe not, would follow such examples.

I wish also that before the handling of the ordinary heads of contemplation which Catechisme affords, as of the Deity, Creation, Predestination, and the like: or of those most usuall peeces, as the Commandements, Creed, and Lords Prayer, the former whereof exceede the capacity, the latter confound the memory of most hearers: men would be pleased to cull out some practicall heads, breefly at first, and more largely afterward, whereby not onely weake memory might be confined, and capacity might be relieved: But the hearer might further be sweetned by the goodnesse of Catechisme, as well as enlightned by the truth thereof. And so, being prepared by the order and sweetnesse of practique principles tending to a scope of conversion and Salvation, both Minister and Hearer might afterward returne to their ordinary course, with discretion to conceive, and grace to profit by all other points of Doctrine in their order, which commonly are spilt, and (the more is the pitty) doe not ground or edifie them.

As touching you, my Christian Auditors: You know, one full third part of my poore labours hath beene, thus (and in this order and ayme) to Catechize. And where as I observed in the preaching hereof, that the particulars grew to a larger extent than I looked for, you know that once a yeare at least, I gave you a breefe view of all the parts in a few Sermons. Which course because I saw to be profitable then, therefore (bethinking my selfe now in this my privacy, how I might witnesse the continuing care of my heart for your good) I have conceived the reviving of that Method, to be the best way to recommend my love unto you. Written copies I saw would proove so chargeable, that few would have enjoyed any benefit hereof: and therefore I yeelded for your ease (to that which my selfe should have shunned) to Print the Copy.

I proceeded, (you knew,) in my Ministery towards the end of the Satisfaction, being the second Article of the second part. I have by my labour since (with Gods blessing) added the rest of the Parts & their Articles through to the end, handling both one and other (for the most part) according to the proportion of my Larger course: at least, no point of Substance being omitted. Your losse (in a sort) becomes your gaine in this. That where as scarce in two yeares you should have heard that which is heere added: Lo, now you have it presented to you at once. Let not (in any case) this gaine of yours become your losse by carelessenes: but let it rather by your diligence become a double gaine to you & yours.

Now to the intent that this view of Catechisme may be profitable, in few words conceive it thus. Three words containe all my scope in this Tract: Sinne, Grace, Obedience. Sinne, in the first part, that each unregenerate man may know how to get out of his false peace, seeing himself in the glasse of the Law to be that cursed one. Grace, in the second, that each humbled one under his burden, may (in the mirror of the Gospell, and the offer of Reconciliation) behold and embrace the hearty and unfeigned meaning of the Lord to forgive and save him. Obedience in the third, that each forgiven soule may know, that God, in shewing him mercy, aimes not onely at the ease of the soules burden, but at his owne honour, in laying on another burden (though easy and sweet) of living by faith, and obeying his Commandements. Set these three then before thy eye as the scope of the whole. And so each part shall not onely profit thee in the severall branches, but much more in the connexion of the scope thereof: all tending to make the soule happy here and hereafter. If then thou meete in the first part with many Articles and heads of weight, rest not in the doctrine of the things, but conceive them from first to last, as steps and degrees to convince thee of sinne: that the sence of thy naturall estate may make thee and leave thee such an one in thine owne eyes, as thou art in the Lords. If in the second thou meete with sundry discourses of the way and meanes of Deliverance, dwell not upon the points themselves, but consider their scope, that God, in offering thee Christs Righteousnesse to be thine, speakes as truly and according to his purpose, in this, as he did in the first, that he might convince thee of his Righteousnesse. Likewise in the third, so reade and meditate of the grounds therein contained as remembring that all of them tend to this one marke, That the truth as it is in Iesus, must convince thee of the great a necessity of putting off the old, and putting on the new man, as before it did of thy Righteousnesse. And thus thy reading over and over this Treatise with meditation and prayer, may through the Grace of Gods Spirit, leade thee towards Heaven.

The Christian acceptance by all sorts of my former Edition, (wherein their love caused them to hide a multitude of errors, both of disorder and print:) hath caused me in like love, and due respect to their charity, to take the occasion of this third impression, to restore the one, and correct the other, Not without additions (the Substance of the same heads not altered) to enlarge and supply such defects, as the haste and miscarriage of the former Presse had committed. Especially, I have supplyed those maine points of the second part: viz. The Welsprings, the privilledges of Condition, the Offer, Preparation to faith, and uses of faith it selfe. Which (I doubt not) with other many, will not be unwelcome to the well affected Reader, whom I desire to take the more paines in his perusall: Not thinking it enough to buy a booke, and so to keepe it faire and neate, in a cloath, but to verse it carefully till God make it his owne by frequent attendance.

As touching the order of the Treatise, and their owne parts I chuse first to premise such a Text of Scripture to each of the 3. parts as may naturally and familiarly comprize the breefe sum of what is contained fully in the part following it by which course the Reader may perceive, that not a man, but the Holy Ghost is the Author of contracting the Body of Truth into such a short view; And then, afterward, I doe proceed to annex the larger explication of that view, in the forme of Catechizing.

Ghost

And now one desire is at an end, for which I blesse God; to wit, this third Edition. But our desires are endlesse in writing, for now I have another, that as Ieremy dealt with his Ier. 36. 2. Prophecies, he wrote them in a Rolle, that they might be in daily view and better beleeved: So those of my people (for I see many goe for such as they are not) who would never by the preaching of these points, understand the coherence and use of Deut. ult. 1. this Summe of Godlinesse, might now stand upon this Pisgah, and behold this Canaan of Practicall Religion, and that goodly Lebanon thereof especially, I meane the Doctrine of faith in Reconciliation, and the new Creature. The use of the whole Posie of all the Flowers herein bound together is, That ye may be better grounded in knowledge, and heare Sermons daily with better understanding, discerning and practise. Reade therefore and consider. Pray for blessing also, that this Treatise may returne into your bosomes with double fruite. If you profit not, how shall strangers? In hope whereof, I commend your Reading to the Lord, and my selfe to your prayers. Farewell.

THE FIRST PART OF THE PRACTICALL CATECHISME.

The Ground of the first part.

TITUS 3. 3.

For we also were in times past, unwise, disobedient, deceived, serving the lusts and divers pleasures, living in malicionsnesse, and envie, hatefull, and hating one another.

Question,

Hat is the connexion of this Text?

A. The Cretians, to whom Paul writes, having received the profession of the Gospell upon them, teaching them to beleeve in Christ the Lord of all, and to stand fast in the libertie by him purchased to the conscience; began to thinke themselves too good to serve their Superiours, Princes, Magistrates, or Masters. But the Apostle presseth them to a close obedience and walking with God both in this and all other Commandements. And he urgeth this point of obedience to God and Man (which is the summe of the third part of the Catechisme) by a comparison of the first and second part of the Catechisme: viz. Sinne and Grace; thus: It were a shame for Christians to walke under grace, as as they did before, during the time of sinne and ignorance. But of this latter sort were yee Cretians sometimes, viz. foolish, disobedient, deceived, &c. Now, since the Grace of GOD appeared, yee are saved and under grace. Be ashamed therefore to live now as then, and become obedient.

Thus we see by this Argument the three parts of the Catechisme are couched together.

Q. What is the meaning of the third verse, in which the Doctrine of the first part is contained?

A. He describes the misery under which these Cretians lay in their unregeneracy. In which although all be not said, which other Scriptures containe; yet so much is said, as may be a ground-worke to the rest. The order is this. First he layes downe the misery of their mindes: they were foolish, that is, voyd of all sound knowledge in Gods matters or their owne good, meere spirituall fooles in the midst of their carnall wisdome. This foolishnes, is partly originall, partly actuall. Originall is the depravednesse of the understanding, and the guilt thereof. As in fooles there is a naturall disabilitie of the powers and organs of nature, and so an utter impotency to reach the truth of things: even so in all naturall men, whether under meanes or without them, they are fooles in respect of wisdome to salvation. And, as Law strips fooles of all right to an estate, making them obnoxious to a kinde of misery: so doth spirituall ignorance rob the soule of Heaven. Secondly, this foolishnes is actuall, standing in the naturall defilement of the minde, with all idle and erroneous thoughts of God and themselves, with pollution of judgement and understanding issuing thence.

Q. What else doth the Apostle adde?

A. The next is, Corruptednes of the heart or will, expressed in the terme of Disobedience, which is also Originall or Actuall. Originall is the utter losse of true freedome of the will, in point of subjection to the minde. So that, as the mind is wholy blind, so is the will wholly rebellious and unsubject, voyd of all submission to any Commands of God, quite avertse from any thing which he doth or can impose; either in obeying or beleeving. And the guilt hereof is liablenes to wrath or justice. Secondly, hence issue all actuall habits of Rebellion, as impiousnesse, unrighteousnesse, intemperancy, and the like.

all

Q. Is this all which Paul describes sinne by?

A. No. he useth three other descriptions: first he sayth they were deceived, that is, As a foole is cheated easily by every one: so is a spirituall foole: this toucheth the actuall sinnes of the minde. The second is, Serving lusts: which implyes a Slavery to the Devill, world, and lusts, lusts of the heart, lusts of the eye, and pride of life: as a beast led to the Shambles. The third is, Trading and Conversing in actuall sinnes, such as accord with the particular nature of each sinner: some of which distempers are noted, a few of the commonest for all the rest, Pleasures and riot; envie, hating, and being hated, &c. all which are added to give a bitter reliish to this misery, as else-where Ephes. 4. he names lying, &c. These three are the penalties of the minde, will, and conversation: To be deceived, is a penaltie of a blind mind: to serve lusts, is a plague of the heart and will: and to be a Trader in sinne, is a punishment of our course; and this is the curse of sinne.

Q. Why sayth he so little of the other part of misery, standing in the curse?

A. Not because he excludes any essentiall part of it, but because one Text will not conteine all, but that which the drift of it lyes unto, Some Texts include all three parts in one Verse, as Ephes. 5. 8. Some expresse one generall part some another, and in that part, some one branch, some another. Therefore what is here lacking, must be supplyed by some other.

Q. What doe other Scriptures adde?

A They adde these. 1 Spirituall enmitie against God, hating him whom we have hurt, and being hated of GOD; Cutting off and estrangement from God and the life of God; excommunicated from him by our Apostacy: impotent propensenesse to all evills and ill practice, which our nature is taynted with (though with some restraint of providence) impotent aversnes from all possible willingnes to recover any better estate in our selves And 2. Temporall cursednes in our soules, in our bodies, names estates, posteritie, affayres and whatsoever belongs to us, which the Holy Ghost calles plaguing with all adversitie: as frenzie distraughtnes of the minde: diseasednes, fevers, gouts, dropsies. beggery, povertie: baseaes and scorne: crossing in attempts: ill marriage? cursed children: bad government; in Magistracy, Ministry, family: pestilence, sword, famine. Thirdly, eternall, that is, after separation of soule and body, horror for the day of Iudgement, and departing from God to eternall Torment. The which are mentioned in Ephes. 4. and 5. Of which (God willing) I treate at large in the Articles following: But it's meet that we have such draughts of Scripture before our eyes, that as corner stones they may hold in these grounds from vanishing. Let us come now to the Articles.

THE FIRST ARTICLE of the first part.

Question.

The generall scope of this first Part.

WHAT is the generall scope of these Articles?

A. All tend more or lesse to lay forth the substance of the first part, (which is sinne) in her colours, and what use the soule is to make thereof.

Q. What is the first of these?

Article 1.

A. That in Adam, mankinde was created in perfection of light and holinesse.

Q. Why, was not man miserable from the beginning?

Man created in Gods Image. Eccles. 7. 29.

A. No, in no sort. For God created man, male and female in his owne image, Eccles. 7. 29. Gen. 1. 26. 1 Cor. 11. 7. Col. 3. 10. Ephes. 4. 24. Reade the places. First, for the matter: in respect of his better part, he was made a spirituall, immortall, invisible, intelligible being, as God. A little sparke of divinitie. Secondly, for the manner, as one Gods essence is subsisting in three persons, so one

1. For matter.

1. Manner.

one soule in three powers, as naturall, sensible, and reasonable. Thirdly, for endowments, and qualities, pure, lightsome, orderly, righteous, holy, and perfect, though not in actuall power and stabilitie: yet in habituall integritie, he was righteous, but not righteousnesse, (for thats the Gospels worke) not immutable, but left to his freedome of will. Fourthly, In his body, although of Earth, yet by the breath of God putting life into the earthy frame thereof, he was made a creature of great authority and majesty, a modell of the Creation: as in Psalme 8. Reade it over. A Lord and Soveraigne (under the Creator) of all his Creatures under himselfe. A strange Master-piece for all to stoop to, even as he onely to stoop to his Creator. Heb. 2. A little lower than the Angels: a petty Vice-roy under the Lord himselfe. The very ruines of him are admirable; as when we behold the rubbish of some Palace, we may guesse at the first magnificence of it a farre off: so when we see the admirable reliques hereof in Philosophers Moralists, Politicians, Artists, and naturall effects of men, we may guesse at the originall.

3. Endowments.

4. In his body

Psal. 8. 4. 6. 8.

Heb. 2. 6. 7.

Q. May there be any thing more distinctly spoken thereof?

A. Yes: for order sake, we may consider this Image of God, in respect of these three: First, Body. Secondly, Soule. Thirdly Person.

More distinctly in three things.

Q. Touching the body first, how was Adam therein created?

1. The body.

A. We may consider therein two things. First, The production or making thereof. Secondly, The frame of it being made.

The production of it.

For the former, the Lord addresses himselfe to it more solemnly than to other Creatures (for this concerns his body as well as his soule) Let us make man: not thus, Let man be; as to the other creatures. The Trinity is called to this worke, noting it should be divine, excellent, and complete.

Gen. 2. 26.

The frame in three things.

Secondly, The frame of it: being made, it was so as God intended it, a speciall resemblance of the Creator: He made not the soule, but man, consisting of body and soule, according to the Image of GOD. So that, whatsoever resemblance the other creatures had, remotely; Adam had an immediate, neere and engraven Character of Gods Image, as might be in a materiall thing. The Lord saw it was good, and to his liking.

Verse 26. twice repeated.

Consider it in these three things. First. The organicalnesse: that it should be a materiall instrument created with peculiar aptnes and fitnes for the service and execution of an immateriall divine soule: yea every way in all points most instrumentall.

Secondly, that out of so base and earthly a substance, the Lord should rayse up a mixture and constitution of elementary, and yet immortall, and durable nature, never to dye: with a consequent freedome from all alterations or impressions by Diseases, or Infirmities, tending to dissolution of the same; all paines, distempers, weaknes, or the like, (actually I meane) removed.

3. Thirdly, A difference of habit, of proportion, and gesture from all other creatures: For such reverend markes there were, in the colour, temper, guise, awfulnes, erectnes, and gate of man, as caused all creatures to stoope and doe obeysance. The Heathens observed it, in the upward looke of man, and the prone downeward looke of other creatures.

Q. But the Holy Ghost especially aymeing at the soule: proceed to speake of that.

2. The Soule in 2. things. A. The soule of man resembled the Creator much more: and that in two things.

1. Nature of it. First, The nature of it, like Gods (as hath beene said) incorporeall, intelligible, immortall, free to will or nill: nothing in it grosse, carnall, or base: the purpose, counsell, understanding, deliberating, resolving, discoursing and judging faculties being Divine sparkes.

2. Functions. Secondly, The severall functions and powers thereof, resembling the communicable Attributes of GOD, in their perfection: his knowledge, his pureneſſe, his freedome, his righteousnesse: These may be referred to two sortes: inward and outward The inward, standing in understanding, will, and conscience: The understanding having perfect knowledge of God his nature attributes, will and worship, of himselfe, of all other things, yea the formes and very natures thereof, whence he gave them names: in all respects his understanding was an Vrim of distinct, pure and perfect light: so was his will (as I may say) a Thummim of Holines, perfect righteousnesse, originall rectitude, and was thorowly subject to the edict and charge of the mind: and so the operations and actions satable to both. God then sate in the throne of the minde as supreme, the will was subject to the mind, the actions to both. In the conscience, he enjoyed a pure and true reflex of himselfe in all these: perfectly glading and comforting himselfe in the privity to this excellency: a Musicall harmony without all jarre, remorse or anxietie.

1. Inward.

Secondly

Secondly, the outward acts of the ſences, members, naturall, civill, oeconomicall or religious, ordered by knowledge, There was a poſitive power and free will to good, and to evill negative: [as now in the unregenerate there is a freedome to evill and not good: and in the regenerate, partly to good, partly to evill.] Onely not unchangeably ſo: not becauſe (as ſome dreame) he muſt then have beene as God; for many Angels were unchangeably ſo, and yet but creatures: but becauſe it pleaſed the Creator ſo far and no farther to impart himſelfe unto him, for what cauſes, baſe curioſitie muſt not deſcant. 2. Outwards.

Q. What Image of God was in his Perſon? 3. His perſon.

A. That which I ſpake of his bodily excellency (for the inſtrumentalnes,) is much truer of his whole Perſon, that it was an expreſſe Image of God. Firſt, in his moſt reverend and awfull behaviour, as being (under God) the Lord of the Creatures. Secondly, In that honorable entertainment vouchſafed him by the Lord, even as a Prince into his Palace; all the world being finiſhed in her due parts and ornaments, man is brought in as the royall Creature, poſſeſſed of all the rich treaſure of the Creation, ſet therein as in a Theatre of the workmanſhip of God, that all ſhould be ſubject to him.

Q. What uſe then is there to be made thereof?

A. Manifold: for although the crooked nature of man thinkes it but her miſery, to thinke how happy ſhe hath beene: yet the Lord purpoſeth by this meanes, to bring her backe to her firſt excellency, if ſhe will be ruled by him.

Firſt then, this ſhould teach us to adore that deepe workmanſhip of God, which once enſtamped ſuch a lively Image of himſelfe in man, as cannot be quite defaced, no not by ſinne it ſelfe, I meane, in reſpect of ſome Characters of it, which by his merciful providence he hath left in common nature, not onely in the Notions of the mind, but the Image of the perſon. Vſe 1.

This poynt will better ſute the third Article; here onely I bring it in, to ſtirre us up to two Meditations: Firſt, If ſinne (as defacing a blemiſh as it is) yet could not ſo quite roote out that honour and Majeſtie of God in man, but ſtill he hath reſerved (for univerſall ends) ſome reliques thereof; (for elſe whence is it, that the Lord hath denyed thoſe uſefull creatures the Horſe and the Oxe and others, to feele their own ſtrength and the curſe of man, ſo that they ſhould quite renounce his ſervice vice? Doe they not still feare the shadow of Gods Image, and are they not awefull, nay doe they not yeeld themselves to his taming and subduing power? even Lyons, and Beares, and the most savage?) If then there be such a deepe Print of this Creating hand; what an indelible Character is there in his second Image of righteousnes, enstamped by the Spirit of Christ? Who dare say, that any thing can ever deface that lasting Image?

Coloss. 3. 2. 3.

Vse. 2. And Secondly, what reverend respect should we yeeld to this ruined Image of God in the Creature? Who should dare to mocke and disdaine those whom God hath doubly impayred his Image in; even the lame, the blinde, the deafe, the impotent, and crooked? still there should be a due respect to the first copy: and this deformitie should rather cause us to wonder at that providence, which suffers not all men in their birth to bring in the markes of this ruined Image of God: than to scorne such as haue: See Ioh 9. 3. where it is called declaring of the glory of God.

Iohn 9. 3.

Vse 3. But Thirdly, and especially it should smite a terror and awe into us, of their persons, to whom the Lord hath committed the government of inferiors, as Magistrates, Ministers, Parents, and Superiours, yea although unsanctified, (but much more if renued by grace) let us behold God in them preserving his authoritie in them, though they have raz'd it out by their sinne. If the despiser of the poorest (not religious) dishonour his Maker: how much more such as disdaine the gifts of God in those that are learned, experienced, wise, and of good, comely carriage, personage, and behaviour?

Pro 17. 5. & 14. 31.

Vse. 4. Fourthly, Nay: how tearefull a confusion doe they bring in, who adde a second defacing to this once defaced, (yet mercifully continued) Image of God, abusing their parts of Authoritie, of Policy, of Esteeme, of Beautie, good personage, presence and behaviour, to the abominable maintenance of sinne, profaneness, Atheisme, Stage-playes, whoredome, oppression, rapine, flattery, or the like? Shall God give them a third restitution of Image?

Vse 5. Fifthly, The recognisance of this first Image of GOD, should occasion to us (that now by the Ministery of the Law are convinced of our woefull losse) first, to shame our selves: secondly, to provoke our selves.

To shame our selves first, by the reflex of our odious and degenerate qualities, upon our owne spirits. Oh! that one created to immortality immortality and vertue in the Image of his Creator, ſhould ſo deeply and far diſguiſe and forget himſelfe, as to bow to an Idoll of wood and ſtone! to grub here in the pit of this world among baſe pebbles and dirt, thinking the attaining thereof to be an happineſſe? nay, to grow to ſuch villany, as to deſtroy the Image of God by bloudſhed and cruelti e? Would it be thought that it were poſſible for any to decline ſo far from that originall, if they did but know it? If that Heathen thought it a reaſonable ſpeech What can ſeeme great in this world to him, by whom the frame and dimenſions of the whole world are comprehended? how much more here? What wealth, profits, baſe pleaſures, riot, drunkenneſſe can ſeeme ſweet, to whom that beautifull Image of God himſelfe (according to which he was made) is made knowne? how ſhould common ſence ſhame ſuch?

Branch 2.

Secondly, How ſhould the thought hereof provoke ſuch (as are not quite forlorne) both to mourne, that for ſo baſe objects and luſts ſake, th y have deſpiſed ſo great graces as have beene offred them; and alſo excite their appetite (as oft as they heare the Lord offer to reſtore them againe to their integritie) to long after it, and to grone under their inabillitie to beleeve it? ſaying, Oh Lord, I was borne to excellency and honor: and ſhall not thy perſwaſions draw my heart to recover my loſt ſtate? If we had but loſt a faire picture of our Father, would we not harken after it? and ſhould not each day ſeeme ten to us, (when we may regaine it) till the Lord hath ſettled it againe in Chriſt upon us?

Vſe 6. Pſal. 8.

Sixthly, This is Inſtruction, to teach us not onely the unſpeakable Excellency of the fountaine it ſelfe, a drope of which lighted upon man, as David, Pſal. 8 concludes: but in particular alſo, and eſpecially the goodneſſe of this Majeſtie, who would communicate himſelfe not onely to Angels, but to a peece of earth, and that in ſo ſtrange a manner, to make it capable of ſuch perfection. To ſee the skill and workmanſhip of Bezaleel in braſſe and ſilver and wood, was ſtrange: but to ſee the Lords face, greater; were it but in a Leafe, a Lilly, a Gnat, which are above all Solomons glory. But to behold his skill and curious worke in mans body, eſpecially his ſoule, to communicate himſelfe ſo farre to a peece of clay, what meditation can equall it?

Vſe 7.

Seventhly, It ſhould teach us much more to beleeve, how admired he can make himſelfe in all his Saints, by his ſecond creation, eſpecially at his ſecond comming; and the whileſt, in repayring of his Image more perfectly in those that beleeve; faith being a greater excellency, and tending to a neerer union than ever any perfection of Adam. Oh! it should convince us of the goodnesse of mercy, and cast out that enmitie of ours, which cannot be-Ise 8. teame God one good thought.

Eightly, It should teach us the equity of Gods commands, and justice of his threats even against our corrupt nature. For the Lord lookes not at our inabilitie, but his owne goodnesse, in the enabling of us once to obey. And whereas some cavillers alledge, that Adam had not faith given him, therefore God cannot justly require the punnishment of unbeliefe. I answer, yes: for although Adam had not the grace he needed not, yet he had such grace as enabled him to obey, as well in those charges which God should put upon him, as those he had already: which he losing by sinne, is justly punisht for it, and encreases wrath Vse 9. thereby.

Lastly, It should stop the mouth of all cavillers against God, for not creating Adam with a confirmed nature to persevere. Rather let us turne our selves to condemne Adam, and confesse, his judgement was most just, that for so needlesse and so frivolous an addition of content to his appetite, he would lose so unspeakable a Iewell as he forfeited.

ARTICLE. II.

Qu. But, did Adam continue in this integritie?

A. NO. He fell from it by wilfull transgression, Gen. 3.7. Rom. 5. 12. Eccles. 7. 29. Rom. 5. 19. And this disobedience was the violation of the charge of God, not to meddle with the Tree of good and evill. This sinne was not a bare eating of the forbidden fruit, but a compound and fardell of all sinnes in one; A proud, disloyall, needlesse, distrustfull, revolting, discontented, unthankefull, rebellious departing from the blessed God, to a base creature, even when he was set in the midst of all perfection, above

Q. But how could this be, he being Gods Image? Why?

A. He was actually so, but not unchangeably. Therefore having his will left in her freedome, and unestablisht by gracious determining thereof to good: Loe, when a sensible object is presented by the Devill, first she (as the weaker) then he by her meanes, freely chose to leave God, and to embrace the creature. And hereby, when he was made able if he would, to stand, (although so, as he might fall) he turned this voluntary might, into a necessitie of falling, and an impossiblenes of returne by himselfe.

Q. How lay yee forth this sinne more fully?

A. By two things. First, The description of the Holy Ghost. Secondly, By the parcels of the sinne. For the first; The Scripture calles it, That disobedience: That offence: That transgression: noting it to be the compound of al in one, yea the roote of all, most odious of al, as being the first of all, which durst enterseer with the righteous nature and will of GOD. But especially Solomon, Eccles. 7. ult. calls it a Finding out of inventions. No man can finde out any thing that good is, beyond God. God had found out and bestowed upon Adam and Eve all goodnes in perfection: yet out of a wearines of welfare, they would finde out beyond him, and be wiser than he: supposing to better their estate; but they found out nothing but their own findings, sin and sorrow: as it was just they should do, who would goe beyond God: They found out indeede new occasion and worke which God never set them: and then devised lyes and shifts, but they found out misery to be their portion, when all the rest vanished, and left them in sad confusion.

The fall opened 2 wayes. Gen. 3. 6. Rom. 5. 1 Tim. 2. 13. 14.

1. By the description. Eccles. 7. ult.

Q. How by the parcels of sinne?

A. First, by the circumstances. Secondly, by the fall it selfe. The circumstances are as the persons belonging to it. First, The Serpent. Secondly, Satan. Thirdly, Eve and Adam. Touching the first; The Serpent, being the wisest and subtillest creature, fittest for Satan to worke by, and of least suspicion, both readiest to take fire from hell, and to set Eve on fire therewith, is used. Satan comes not, we see, without his tew and tackling, but strong and well prepared: here was the maine fight, upon which all his Kingdome hung; either now or never: therefore now he unites all his feates and forces; strength, crueltie, subtiltie, diligence, malice, in one. Is there any one wiser and apter creature, to convey temptation by a voyce, than other?

2. By the parcells.

1. By the circumstances of Persons,

1. The Serpent.

That

That he chuſeth. Is either of the two parties ſillier, weaker to be gulled than other? Her he lights upon. Is this woman at any odde time leſſe her ſelfe, weaker than weaknes it ſelfe? Then he comes. Is there any way either to lay out the excellency of the object, or to extenuate the attempt urged, to alay the charge, or to traduce the Commander? That he lights on.

2. Perſon Satan. 2 Cor. 11.

The ſecond perſon is Satan: who had beene an Angell of light: but he and his fellows (as other Scriptures doe prove) being left juſtly by God to the temptation of Ambition, and aſpiring to be as God, fell to be diſcontent with their eſtate, and to puffe up themſelves with pride, and to withdraw themſelves from their place, and forſooke their ſervice, (for how ſhould pride ſtand before a God of Holineſſe?) Oh! this clipt their wings of readineſſe, Pſal. 146. Then all chearefull, loyall ſerviceablenes was gone! By this meanes, God caſt them downe to Hell, and there reſerved them in chaines: they having loſt that they had, and that they deſired, turne their rage againſt God who had plagued them, and their envie againſt man his favourite, never linning till they had alſo caſt him out of Paradiſe.

Pſal. 146.

3. Perſon, Eve & Adam.

The third is Eue and Adam joyntly: who did moſt immediately concurre to this their owne tranſgreſſion.

Q. What things obſerve you in their fall?

1. The remote cauſes, three.

A. Things of two ſorts. Firſt, The remote cauſes. Secondly, The more neere and proper. The former were theſe: Firſt, changeableneſſe of their will. Secondly, Vnarmedneſſe againſt the temptation. Thirdly, the peculiarity of the temptation.

For the firſt, Let us not blame God: but looke at man: whoſe habituall holineſſe wanting a confirmation of grace, determining the will againſt the object then and thus offered, was corrupted to a paſſive capableneſſe of evill. Beware here of murmuring againſt God, ſaying, What was it to make them thus perfect; wanting an holy neceſſitie of nature to ſtand? Oh man, who art thou!

The ſecond, was their unarmedneſſe. They meant indeed no evill: but they uſed not that power to ſtand, which God had put into them: they watched not to keepe pure, being made ſo: its not enough for a ſervant not to purpoſe to goe out of his Maſters worke, except he reſolve alſo faithfully to dwell upon it, without unſettling. They knew good from evill evill in the ſpeculation: for they had heard the charge and threat of God: both of not eating, and of death by eating: but they feeling all well within for the preſent, reſted to much in it, felt not their owne changeable will, prone to hazzard all their pearles at one caſt, feared no hurt from without: and here they were caught.

The third was, the aptneſſe of the temptation: the Devill 3 feared not their perfection, he makes it ſtrong and alluring, both in the binding of their minde, and bewitching of their heart: Let it not be imagined by you (ſaith he) that it is ſinfull or deadly to attempt: God knoweth the contrary. What ſhall it boot you to obey him that envies your good? And as for the hurt yee feare; Loe, by eating yee are ſure of a better eſtate than yee are in. Thus by the ſtrong bayte of ſweetneſſe he attempts the affection, and ſo corrupts the judgement.

Q. Proceed to the more neere cauſe of their ſinne.

A. It is threefold. Firſt, Inward tickling of their affection, Secondly, Snaring. Thirdly, Secret conſent.

The more neere cauſes were three. The firſt Tickling. Iam. 1. 55

For the Firſt, So excellent a creature could not have beene ſuddenly ſurpriſed, but by ſteps. For why? Sinne as yet was not: it could not therefore be with them as with us. Iam. 1. 5. We are firſt led away by concupiſcence, but they had none. Therefore there muſt be a ſtrong mooving and drawing of their mindes, a travaile with this indetermined freedome of theirs to ſway it: and this ſupplieth the roome of concupiſcence. Satan ſuſpends the act of goodneſſe in them, brings them to a ſlacke remiſneſſe, and corrupts their bent of ſpirit: as if a man would ſuffer an enemy to come within gun-ſhot of him, when he might have kept him out; and ſo liberty is queſtioned, as if a man at Dice would call in queſtion whether his owne be his owne or not. This was the firſt ſpawne of the ſinne. And this ſtood in fooliſh credultie, curioſitie, and dalliance. Credulitie, to ſecure herſelfe of her owne welfare, as if nothing could or would hurt her: whereas ſhee ſhould have beene ſuſpicious of the leaſt accident threatning her. Curioſitie, to interchange talke and ſpeech with a creature, ſhe being the Lady of all the creatures, (yea knowing her ſoveraignty) and therefore ſhould not have admitted ſuch a parlee, but wiſely have thought, This is no place for a ſervant to intrude himſelfe, and to jangle with me, being uncalled.

1. Credulitie.

2. Curioſitie.

called: Speech is not for a Serpent: it becomes not me to seeke better content than I have, by an idle, curious and vaine discourse,
3. Dalliance. I know not what, whence, nor to what purpose. But this her vaine jangling was her ruine. Then Dalliance in bandying so many replies one after another (who knowes how many?) and venturing to prate of so weightie a thing as her happinesse, not doubting that so minute a point threatned her ruine, but hazzarding all upon her owne wit, tongue, conceits and answers, as if shee could have pluckt backe her foote at her pleasure, and prevented sinne in the very kindling: I say, what is this but bold venturousnesse upon the danger, because she felt her selfe as yet untouched?

The 2. cause, Snaring. These three brought forth the second, which was Snaring: for by this tickling of her, she takes the Devils snare into her wil and thoughts, so farre, that as a bird in a grin, shee could neither goe backward nor forward: but is limed and hampered with that which at the first she was free from: her wings beginne to be clipt; and now she is ready to tell where her great strength lyeth: and now an uncleane delight begins to defile her, her freedome staggers, she admits a thought. What if I venture and try; what hurt can come of it? Now her directive light begins to dazle, her pureness to be defiled, and false sweet to expell true: And so ceases to be in her own power, as the bowle rolling downe the hill.

The 3. cause, Secret assent. And so thirdly, succeeds Secret assent to the temptation, and yeelds up the inward weapon of her Innocency, to the Devill, rests in the thing offred, as very good, meet, sweet, delightfull, standing upon thornes till she doe, as she is tempted. What wonder? when she refuses to be led by that inward light and grace she had received? Therefore God leaves her to call good evill, and evill Esay 5. 20. good. And so shee tooke it, eate it, gave it her husband, who though he were not first, yet he was last in the transgression; and 1 Tim. 2. 14. yeelded to doe as the Devill had drawne her to doe; and so both of them disobeyed.

Q. What consider you in the fall it selfe?

The 2 Generall the fall it selfe, A. Not only the act of the transgression, but with it a fardell of abundance of foule corruptions of heart. And those are of these two sorts, either more speciall, or more generall. The speciall were, Pride, Securitie and Sloth, Vanitie, Special sinnes therein. Sensualitie, Discontent, Sacriledge, Cruelty and unrighteousnesse, neſſe, with the like. More generall and fearefull, diſtruſt of GOD, Rebellion againſt God, Vnthankefulneſſe, and Apoſtaſie totally from God. For the Firſt, Pride, how fearefull was it for a creature made in Gods Image, to aſpire like Satan to be checke mate with his Maker? Secondly, Sloth and ſecuritie in a ſlacke neglect of ſo great a truſt repoſed in his cuſtody. Thirdly Vanitie in ſo inconſtant and unſettled curioſitie to pry into matters forbidden. Fourthly, Senſualitie, to affect a preſent contentment to the ſence and appetite, upon ſo infinite hazzard. Fifthly, Diſcontent with the preſent eſtate, ſo excellent, and ſo inſtantly upon their enjoying it, before they had begate and conceived a ſonne. Sixtly, Sacriledge, in prophaning the ordinance (if it be true that the fruit was Sacramentall) and tye of God. Seventhly, Cruell injuſtice; in caſting away not themſelves onely, but all their poſteritie. But eſpecially the generall: Firſt wofull diſtruſt, in aſcribing no credit to God either in charge or threat, but rather to Satans malicious ſlanders: and ſuffring themſelves to be pulled from the Simplicitie of Gods Word, 2 Cor. 11. 3. entertaining baſe thoughts of him, to be falſe, envious, yea admitting a roote of bitterneſſe and indignation againſt his love. Secondly, Rebellion, to dare ſo openly and with full butt to ruſh againſt the command of God, and to provoke him, to try whether he would doe as he had threatned, fearing nothing: And Thirdly, Vnthankefulneſſe, and a wearifome reſtleſneſſe in that ſtate of happineſſe: even departing from God the fountaine of living waters, when they enjoyed all in him that heart could wiſh, even needleſly, in coole bloud. Laſtly, Apoſtaſie, utter revolting like traytors, from that happineſſe of theirs, and the Lord the Author thereof, to Satan, ſinne and curſe, totally and finally for ought was in themſelves.

Q. What uſe is there hereof? doth it affoord any inſtruction?

A. Yes, ſeverall: Firſt, from the Serpent; who by abuſing his parts, teacheth us to boaſt our ſelves or reſt in no outward gift of God for it ſelfe: ſeeing (if unſanctified) it may be inſtrumentall to ſuch villany, and diſhonor to God, either in our publique or private places, and ſo prejudiciall to our owne ſalvation, as we ſhould wiſh rather we had beene Idiots, than ſo egregious.

Vſe 1. From the Perſons. Branch 1.

Secondly, from Satan, We learne that he feares not to attempt the beſt, and moſt godly, hoping to prevaile: for if he could bring in ſinne where none was, how much more increaſe creaſe it where he findes it? Alſo to ſuſpect him in his ſweet enchantments, and when he attempts our Eve, that is, our ſenſuall part, overthrowing our Adam, and judgement thereby, then to handle him roughly, knowing him (by his meſſenger) not to be far off. Beſides, beware of an aſpiring heart, diſcontent with our portion and eſtate: If Adam had argued thus, To what a dignitie hath my Creator raiſed me from the duſt? who am I, poore earth, earth, earth! he had ſtood firme: but now looking about him and letting up his briſtles, loe, pride cauſes his ruine! Oh! how ſafe are we, while we are under!

Branch 3. Pro. 16. 18. Vlt. And laſtly, from Eve and Adam, Let us learne not to truſt our ſelves too farre in our privations, that we intend no evill: but be we armed alſo as well againſt evill of all ſorts, leſt it be with us, as if we had nothing at all in us. Let us beware of dalliance and admitting parlee with temptations of ſenſualitie, leſt wee fare as Sampſon by Dalila, and would faine get off the hooke, but cannot, being ſnared. Thus men thinke it cannot be dangerous to admire, prayſe and accompany beautifull women, to thruſt themſelves into the company of fine fellowes in their pleaſures, and to ruſh our ſelves upon ſnares of deepe worldly buſineſſe. They purpoſe not to be catcht (they ſay) till their wings be ſinged with their venturing ſo neere the candle, and then they ſtruggle in vaine. Better had it beene for them to have beene birds with wings, and ſo in vaine ſhould the net have beene ſpred for them. And to end this uſe, how ſhould the deſcription of Adams ſinne, for ever ſcare us from ſlighting it? We eſteeme it by the outward act: but that which makes it ſo odious, is the attendant fearefull circumſtance of it. To let fall a peece of coine into the dirt is little: but to throw it and ſtamp it under our feete in ſcorne, is treaſon. Not to give all to the uſe of the Church, (being ours) is nothing: but to withdraw it being Gods, with a lye to the Holy Ghoſt, is mortall! Oh, the ſinne of Adam is inexcuſable! committed in the full ſtrength of grace, in the fulneſſe of all Paradiſe contentment, needleſly for a triſle, when there was no ſinne to draw them, and the like; ere they had ſanctified one Sabbath of Thankes.

Vſe 2. Secondly, Let it be inſtruction to ſhew us what little wonder there is to be made, that now in our corrupt eſtate, the abundance of gifts, bleſſings, encouragements, good helpes of nature, education, cation, art; nay, holy ordinances of God granted us for the better, doe not profit thousands, nay, turne to our hurt? Surely, if Adam in all his excellency, yet by meere absence of confirming grace, could abuse his freewill to so fearefull a fall: we neede not wonder, that in this state of his necessary misery, he profits so little by all helpes: no wisedome or righteousnesse of his could free him then; and shall any thing in the want of both helpe him now? Man is set up by God, and yet is a beast. The Cat was once made a Queene, but in her glory she hunts after a mouse. How much more being corrupt?

Vse 3. Thirdly, Blesse God, that in his second grace by Christ, he changed old Adams perfection into a better and surer, from a selfe-subsistance in grace according to our owne freedome, to a subsisting in another; betrusting us no more with our owne Treasure, but keeping it under the locke and key of his owne power in Christ. So yet looke what we come short of Adam in the measure of grace in this life, we goe beyond him in the unchangeablenesse: for alas! how little are we fit to be trusted withall, but we would lavish it, if under our owne keeping? The Lord is faine to humble us rather under the burthen of our infirmities and corruptions, because we are not here capable of any great matter. Being so unfaithfull in the smaller, who should trust us with the great treasure? Luk. 16. 11.

Vse 4. Lastly, It teaches us to esteeme highly of the grace of selfe deniall, as being the contrary grace to Adams corruption. For he fell by too much trusting himselfe: we stand by the grace of selfe renouncing. And its not amisse to consider; how justly the greatest penaltie of man stands in the losse of his free-will, and in the slavery of the will to sinne: because this freedome abused, caused his ruine. So fearefull is the error of them that maintaine, that man hath still free-will in himselfe remayning to that which is good.

CHAP. ARTICLE

Article. III.

Qu. Was there no other thing to make up his misery, save onely his fault?

Adams sinne made him miserable, in 2. respects.

A. YES. The effects of it caused him to be miserable: both the effects of sin and punishment.

For sinne first, his actuall brought forth originall; his originall all actuall sinnes; and both these procured all penalties: And that thus. God having threatned him death if he sinned, did justly inflicte sinne for sinne, and gave him over to his desire, and concupiscence. Seeing he would forfeit his Image for a trifle, he left him to be as he desired; a masse of corruption and rebellion. As a Pitcher dashing it selfe against a stone wall, is justly split to peeces. So that by the wrath of God was inflicted upon him the losse of Gods Image standing in righteousnesse and true holinesse: a deprivall of the glory of God, both in soule and body: as if the Lord should say, Seeing thou wouldst needs thus rebell, fill thy selfe with it, be so to the full. Hence came that utter impotency of minde and members, to purpose, to will, or execute any good. Nay, an utter averseneſse from it, an utter incapableneſse of it, a contrarietie of spirit unto it, Ioh. 14.4. and 5.14. Psal. 5.15. Rom. 7.23.24. and many other. For a taste, take these: originall darkeneſse, erroneousnesse of judgement, captivitie, and thraldome of will, insensibleneſse of heart, impotency of the faculties, enmitie to all goodneſse, totall impuritie of the whole spirit, propension to any sin, and unaptnes to any good occasioned, servileneſse of the will, unsubjectneſse of the outward man, unsavorineſse, and in a word, the death of the grace of Creation. This for sinne.

2. Penalties of sinne.

So for the penalties, a seed of utter impenitency, dedolency obstinacy, apostacie, and excommunication from God, Ephes. 4. 18. From this fountaine, proceeded both actuall sinnes, and actuall penalties; sinnes of commission, omission, ignorance, presumption, inward habits; as hypocrisie, earthlineſse, ignorance errours, prophaneneſse, unthankfulneſse, hardneſse of heart; and outward acts, as in both Tables, impiousneſse, unrighteousneſse neſſe, intemperancy, and the like: of which, ſee Rom. 1. and 3. 2 Tim. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. 5. So penalties actuall, as the impuritie and curſe of conception, and birth, the loſſe of the right and dominion of the Creatures, the curſe upon Gods bleſſings, helliſh terrours, diſeaſes, povertie, diſcredit, impriſonment, feare of death, guiltineſſe of judgement, and utter miſery of loſſe and ſence of hell. Rom. 1. & 3. 2 Tim. 3. 1. 2. 3. 4.

Q. You have laid many things together: and I conſent to all: Yet I deſire a little more diſtinct order of them: bring therefore all theſe to ſome few heads.

A. I will in this Article lay downe the order of the point, and leave the further enlargement of it, to his due place in the fift Article following. Conceive then the point by the Apoſtles ſpeech, Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man, ſinne entred into the world, and death by ſinne, &c. Where we ſee, that the actuall ſinne of Adam, determined not the bound of miſery, but brought a ſecond miſery with it, even the miſery of our whole nature. While wee ſtood in Adam, his obedience kept his whole eſtate and nature entire: but when he fell, though the ſinne were a limited thing in act of eating, yet it was an unlimited exceſſe in reſpect of the committer, and the frame of his revolting heart. And therefore it was juſt with God to plague his whole nature, for this ſinfull act: And the plagne thereof was, to inflict ſuch a penaltie upon Adams nature (of the Propagation I ſhall ſpeake in Article 4.) as made it truely miſerable, in ſtead of being before truly happie. Note then, Adam having actually diſobeyed, the Iuſtice of God offended highly by it, doth puniſh whole nature for it. As if he had ſaid thus, Haſt thou indeed freely choſen to leave me on plaine ground? To embrace luſt and Satan, and pleaſure of appetite before me? To caſt dirt upon my pure Image? Be it then ſo with thee, as thou deſireſt! Be that in nature, which thou choſeſt in thy free will to doe. That Image of mine which thou caredſt not to preſerve, be ſtripped off: that image of thine owne invention, which thou preferredſt, be ſatisfied with, fill thy ſelfe with, enjoy and delight thy ſelfe with to the uttermoſt: I will not ſuffer mine to harbour with thine, light and darkneſſe, corruption and pureneſſe: therefore depart my Image, from this ſtie of uncleaneneſſe, and let him who needes would be filthy, lye lye downe in his filth, and he that would forsake a reall fire of heat, to compasse himselfe in his owne sparkes, let him lye downe in sorrow. As I threatned, so I sentence thee, In dying, dye: dye the death of thy sinne, and finde thy owne inventions to the selfe: I utterly cut thee off, and excommunicate thee from my presence, and in token of it, from Paradise the place of thy former happinesse: in one word, Be miserable. Note then whatsoever Adam brought himselfe unto by his act of sinning, was penall: because it was a stroke of justice. Not onely death and all other punishments, before and after it, but even Originall sinne it selfe is a penaltie. it is a sinne indeed, but it is a penall one, God justly punishing actuall with originall: and so we must conceive, that although in us it be truly sinne, yet God inflicting it, did not infuse it as sinne into us, but onely as a just penaltie of that which Adam himselfe in the freedome of his wicked will, had first forged in his owne heart against God.

Q. How many branches doe yee divide this Misery into?

Misery of sin double. 1. Originall.

A. Into two. The misery of sinne, and the misery of punishment: either of which, had beene misery alone, but justice would not suffer misery to be within narrower bounds than these: that he who by doing made himselfe, might by suffering be made miserable. The former, viz. misery of sinne, is either of the roote, Originall, or the branches, Actuall sinne: both making the soule truly though not equally miserable.

Q. What is the former of these? Shew in what the misery of Originall sinne standeth?

In 2. things. 1. Guilt.

A. In two things. 1. Originall guilt. 2. Originall staine or pollution: both being the fountaines of all actuall guilt, and pollution of conscience.

What it is, and in what it stands.

Originall guilt is that privitie and reflexion of conscience in Adam fallen, whereby he told himselfe continually that he had fallen, and therefore must dye the death, in each kinde of it, body and soule. This perpetuall alarum of conscience in his nature, was the first part of his sinfull misery. And the Holy Ghost expresses it in those words, They saw they were naked; and Adam when God called him, hid himselfe in the bushes, and gave the reason, because hee was naked. The Lord askes him how he knew it? The meaning was, his conscience in presenting to him his fault, did gugge him also with feare, and expectation of revenge. So that, as in his innocency, one

Gen. 3. 7.

excellent

excellent part of his welfare was, that he knew himselfe so; so now one especiall part of his woe is, that the conscience did ring his sinne alway in his eares, and made him obnoxious, that is, to feare God in point of that punishment, which he looked for from his Iustice for his sinne. And to say the truth, what misery is like to this? to be ever on the racke of a mans owne spirit, suggesting and boading to him sad things to come for his sinne? dogging him as the Iaylor, who will not suffer his prisoner to goe one inch from his custody? How bitter doth it make all things, when as a sword hanging by a twined thred over a mans head, it doth threaten him perpetuall ruine and tye him over (as a bond and recognisance of great forfeit) to the great assize of wrath and judgement, there to answer for himselfe? yea, and there without all bayle or maineprize, unescapeably to suffer eternall death of body and soule? This the Author to the Heb. 2.15. toucheth, saying, Who all their life time by the feare of death were subject to bondage: id est, walked under the chaine of this guilt, alway afraid left by death of body, their soule should slide into hell, to abide there, till the body came thither. True it is, Adam dyed not at the first committing of the sinne; but had he found no more favour than Cain did, loe, all those nine hundred yeares he had beene tossed and terrified with this guilt, till it had seazed upon him. And whereas yee will say that, those that lived without the law, were better than wee, because they were miserable and knew it not: I answer, they had law enough in them to hold them under a guilt of horror for such evills as they committed against the naturall light, although ignorance had worne out the true dint of this conscience. Besides, although to know a mans misery, onely, increaseth it: yet so to know it as we may prevent it, is better, than by not knowing it, to escape the sence and bondage of that which yet lyeth upon us, Heb. 2.15.

Q. Wherein doth the misery of Originall staine of sinne consist? 2

A. Wee may either conceive it in the whole, or in the parts. Touching the whole, the best way will be, to take the word which the Holy Ghost useth, which is Death. For death is the resolution of nature: and so is this death of the soule, a totall abolishment and corruption of that blessed frame of creation, (I meane in the point of her Pureneſſe:) In mind The staine of sinne, what, by light, in will and heart by holinesse. Now then looke how contrary a carcasse is to a lively body: so is this to the life of creation, as in these few things may appeare: in the well framed constitution of body, appeare, First, Vnion of parts. Secondly, Order. Thirdly, Sweetnesse and Beautie. Fourthly, Strength and Activitie, Aptnesse to the end it serves for. But in a dead carcasse, together with the absence of the life and soule of reason, what appeares save contrary effects? Impotency to all former Rom.3.23. ture, corruption of the Image of GOD. Touching the parts both faculties and powers of the soule and body, it were endlesse to mention all.

Ephes.5.8. In the minde there is a death of all pure light and knowledge, a nakednesse of Gods Image in poynt of that ruling and over-ruling power, by which shee conveyed direction to all the inferiour faculties, will first, and then affections and operations: now she is both darknesse in her selfe, and losse of her birth-right, to rule other parts: unto darknesse, adde death of judgement, easily deceived in matter of discerning of Rom.8.5. judgements, keeping in memory noysome, and hurtfull objects.

Rom.7.1. So secondly, Death of the will, especially in the matter of her subjection to the lore and leading of the understanding: then also in her facultie of willing and nilling, or suspending, a corruptnesse in the freedome thereof by meere bondage both unto sinne and by sinne, a depravednesse of the chusing facultie, and so of the rest: yea a dispositednesse to will onely and continually evill, to nill good, to suspend onely from good, and not evill, save for bad respects, to chuse evill before good. So truely, doth the

To these adde, the death of affections in poynt of their due direction to the objects, and whole inclination of them to a preposterous and disordered liking of evill, dislike of good, a disposition thereof to extremities on either hand, either to love, hope, sorrow, feare, pittie, shame, zeale, and the rest, more than ought to be, or under that should be: and thereby to overthrow the course and order of the whole conversation. Iere 2.25. Ephes. 4.25.

Ioyne to these the death of the conscience, both in respect of her starving death, that shee wants matter of excusing peace, and content, having lost all welfare: and the death of her pureness, to represent objects to the soule aright, either with comfort or accusation: not to speake of her proneness to be defiled, disabled, seared, sensles, and slavish, according to the corruption of the minde, both which goe together, Tit. 1.15. Isa. 57. ult. Tit. 1.15.

As touching the spirits, and the sences, and the members, there is a death in them of that abilitie, soundness, vigor, and serviceableness to the soule in good things, and a proness and tickling to be vainely and frothily imployed, except worse be offred, even prophanely and unholily. And to conclude, there is a death of the person, in respect of that right and soveraigntie over the creatures, with a slavish proness rather to Idolize them both in the worship of some, and the love or use of others: a declension from GOD, and a revolt to the base creature, as Eve did to the forbidden fruit. Rom. 6.8.

Q. Now what is the misery of Actuall sinne?

A. The depravedness and death of all the operations flowing from the soule within, or the body without: for whereas these resembled the pureness of the principle at the first, loe, now, they bewray the contrary: all confusion, disorder, ignorance, and unrighteousness, being broken into them. As appeares in this, that in the first table, the soule departing from God, sets up to her selfe other gods: profit, pleasure, ease, worldly lusts; worships him after her owne devices: lives as seemeth best to her selfe in her conversation, abhorres his Sabbaths, and the like. In the second, that forsaking the law of righteousness and sobrietie, the soule defiles her selfe with disobedience and rebellion to man, to unnaturall, cruell and unmercifull carriage, to uncleanness, to revenge, to wrath, to unjust, oppressing, defrauding wayes, to lyes, tricks, and slanderous aspersions: to a continuall lusting after unrighteousness. And all these not onely in open acts (which are not so usuall) but in the actuall Mat 15.19. Gala. 5.19. 2 Tim. 3.2-3. 4.5. Psa. 14.3.

Rom 3.9. thoughts, desires, projects and counsels of the heart, yeelding and consenting thereto, and delighting to thinke of, talke of, to love and commend sinfull practises; as, swearing, drunkennesse, debate, wrong, intemperancy, and the like. For these are but one of a thousand of those actuall sinnes, which as sparkes flie up from the former furnace. Nor all these in every man, but some in one, and some in another. See 1 *Cor.*6.7. Such were yee, some of yee, &c. Which phrase is the same with this.

1 Cor 6.7.

Q. And wherein stands the second generall part of misery, to wit, of punishment?

A. In the manifold penalties both of soule and body: and those properly expresse that threat of God, When thou eatest, thou shalt dye the death. In the soule first, (for of all other, these are fearefullest, because they are sinfull penalties of sinne) first, an averseneesse from God, or from returning to God any more, but going from him further and further infinitely: an insensibleneesse of Gen.2 17. Esay 53.4. Touching the body, where shall I begin or end? What languors and diseases are there incident to the body: what povertie, baseneesse, beggery and want to the estate? what reproach to the name and credit, aspersions, slaunders, dishonour? What misery in family, in Church, Common-wealth? What obnoxiousneesse to Satan, to his instruments temptations, mischiefe, bondage to the ungodly, suites, services, dependances with hard conditions, crosses, streights, pursuites, losses forfeits, death of friends, imprisonment, accidents, and shrewd turnes, bad tydings, confusion in the state, famine, warre, pestilence, pestilence, and a thousand wayes for him to goe wofully out, who came but one way into the world? Besides griefe of minde, melancholy passions, and distempers of the spirit, bad conscience ill marriage, lewd children, ill successe, ruine of estate, and at last a miserable death? And yet the upshot of all is worst after, viz. A finall separation from God, and losse of his eternall presence, with the sence of unutterable, intolerable, unavoydable wrath of God in hell upon the whole man for ever, without the least hope of helpe or redresse in or from himselfe. And to this place not unfitly (in my judgement) belong all those vanities, uncertainties, casualties and hazards which the poore life of man is obnoxious unto. Before his creation, how safe, happy, secure a creature walked he? So that David beholding him in this glory, makes a wonderment at him, and calleth him One set in honor as a pearle in gold. But alas! looke now into the map of his life, and what will it proove but vanitie and vexation? Take the best of it, what is it save a confuzed running up and downe the world, doing nothing but the same things over and over, and having done all from yeare to yeare, weary of the worke of his hands, and crying out, what hath a man of all his labour? What a poore Lazar-like body, diseased, and disconsolate (for lacke of grace) doth many a poore bed-rid wretch live? As Iob saith, why is the light given to wretched man, to behold his misery? How are others of good worth and place suddenly snared by banquerupts, and so through discontent and worldly sorrow, swallowed up in death. Others how oppressed in their good causes by false evidences, forsworne witnesses, corrupt Iudges? Their judgement wholly taken away from off the earth, and they left to shift with the amends in their owne hands? How many a mans case is it to be robbed by theeves, left not worth a groat, and perhaps abused other wise? How many innocents, both old and yonger intercept'd by violent hands, poysoned in their meate and drink, knockt on the head, laid wait for and destroyed, yea perhaps through the mistake of some other man, and yet none left to revenge? How long doth the Lord (as one a sleepe in a tempest, and caring for nothing) suffer his poore beloved Church, to be tossed as a ship with the waves of most hideous, trouble? Oh the sad dangers not of the badd onely but even of the best! That all things should fall out alike to the one and to the other? Heere one stumbling on plaine ground, and breaking a limbe, another off his horse, bruised and loosing his life, not onely in his drunkennesse, but in his greatest sobriety? So that as Solomon saith, our life is among snares, and looke as the silly bird, peark and lusty, hopps about the snare, and feares nothing, by the bayt of a worme is suddenly entrapt and taken, even so is this more silly creature snared and snatcht, ere he be aware. For alas, race is not to the swift, nor battel to the strong, nor wealth to the wise, but time and successe is a like to all: Some base unworthy wretch in a towne (neither of goodnesse nor parts) carries away more mucke, then ten wise, godly, and provident men! Is it not a burden, to see the Prince goe on foote, but the pezant to ride on horsbacke, the wise to keepe silence, and fooles to speake their minds? I say, these are all vanities and vexations which though they befall not every one, yet none is free, and he who is now freest, is at another time catcht in the gin. This is but an handfull of the rest: It comes to my mind, what I have read in the story of the Emperors of a valiant Captaine Bellisarius who after may conquests, being taken captive, was faine to prostitute his Lady to defilement, and to stand by (his eyes being put out) with his hands extended, saying Give, Belisarius one halfepeny. Whose heart should not such a sight peirce? How miserable a lot is it to behold an honest man matcht with a Queane which defiles his bed continually? Is it not irkesome neither to know how to live, or die from such an one? To see a most innocent creature, fall into the hands of some cursed helhound, who accuses him, and beares him downe upon oath of Adultery or some infamous crime the innocent having no redresse, but forced to lye under the reproach all his dayes! onely supported by a good conscience.

Oh! that the Meditation of this Vainty of our life, might procure other manner of use, then it doth from the world, who doe nothing but gaze upon such examples, and having so done give over and vanish! Never mourning to see the shiftlesse misery, which sinne hath brought upon man, nor laboring to worke upon such as are thus oppressed: never wondring that the Lord should so mercifully save them in the midst of so many calamities, never thankfull for either themselves or their children from such accidents as they see some infants borne with, lame, blind, monsters in excesse, or the defect, and so in other kind: Oh! I say, how few humble their soules under the mighty hand of God, and call to mind that bitter root which all comes from? and so walke holily and thankfully for the escape of such maladies as might have fallen on themselves Nay upbrayding their Maker with a mocking tongue, and laughing at others for that which provokes the deepest pitty. Sure some time should be employed in such meditations! This I thought to put in an vse by it selfe, leaving the generall to the next question. And to conclude, what wise man would not in these respects, seriously seeke the Lord for mercy and grace: which onely can make a vaine uncomfortable life, cheerfull and savory, which is the priveledge onely of the beleever: he only makes that sweet which others find miserable.

Q. I partly conceive this view and mappe of the misery of the fall: now conclude the Article with some use of it.

A. First, here is confutation of all Papists, who flatly deny this Article, and tell us, that our nature is indeed shrewdly maimed and wounded, much like him who fell among theeves betweene Ierusalem and Iericho, and left halfe dead But as for us, that maintaine this dying the death, this quite and cleane deadnesse in sinnes and trespasses, they cannot abide. No (say they) there be left even in the unregenerate such abilies, and devotions, as may congruously dispose God to pardon them: And by some helpe of grace, merit also full forgiveneſse. Yea they boast themselves of their performances, and duties, whereas Paul tels us, that all boasting is cut off. And they tell us, Baptisme washeth away all originall sinne, when as yet Paul grones under the burden of not being regenerate. Also all Pelagians or their adherents, who affirme that old Adam is, as one in a darke Dungeon, who by reason of darkneſse, cannot see; but if he have a light put in, hath his eyes very quicke, and can see any thing: and so wee want but light, and then wee are able to discerne and apprehend any truth put into us, of our selves: Also such as blanch the matter with the colour of Grace, added to our nature: for by that (say they) nature, being holpen can put on the cordes (as Ieremy in the dungeon) and addresse himselfe to come forth. What hath a dead man with all the light and helpe in the world, to addresse himselfe to live? This also reprooves all Naturall Papists, that doat upon their civill, morall, or religious duties and devotions, and cannot abide to heare that those who so duly pay all debts, all dues, who give so many almes to the poore, heare ſo many Sermons, keepe ſo many Sabbaths, reade ſo many bookes, keepe ſo much good company, commend the Miniſters, and welcome them, and maintaine them, ſhould yet be as the Publicans and ſinners: I doe not ſay yee are; but I ſay this, Except yee alſo deny your ſelves, and behold this miſery of your Natures, yee will fare worſe in time c[illegible] by your righteouſneſſe, than if yee had none; for why? doe yee not graffe upon a rotten ſtocke, and guild a rotten poſt? So alſo, ſuch as commend mens natures in the poynt of Religion, ſaying, Oh ſuch are ſo ſweetly natured, courteous, loving, milde and harmleſſe, that there is but little betweene them and Heaven! Alſo ſuch as ayme at Religion, onely thus farre, to colour their wings and tip their tongues, or their outward dealings with ſome out-ſide: but as for that heart within, and nature, they ſuſpect not. And to conclude, ſuch as being told of their paſſions, defend them by their nature, It's my nature to be ſo hot. I have ſoone done. Why poore foole, thinkſt thou thy nature is more excuſable than thy paſſion? and yet what is more common with men to ſay, than this If I were an Adulterer or Drunkard, I were willing the Miniſter ſhould thus ſharply rebuke me; but to be ſo bitter for mens infirmities, and againſt that which we cannot doe with, nor heale, and avoyde, and againſt unbeleefe, or the like, methinkes he might be wiſer! Vſe. 2. Secondly, This ſhould cauſe thee to looke upward, and to gage the greatneſſe of Chriſts love, which could finde in his heart to ſatisfie for ſuch a miſery, and to fetch happineſſe out of the depth of it. Even in this Article is layd the foundation of thy eſteeme of Chriſt, in the next part of the Catechiſme: Chriſt will be little ſet by, the height and depth of mercy cannot be ſounded, till thou take meaſure of it by a Reede of thy miſery. Little ſinne to forgive, will make Chriſt little loved. As we ſee at the Aſſyſes, that baſe theefe that thinkes to conceale ſome of his his robberies, and is loth to have all come out at once fearing the mercy of the Iudge: when his inditements come to be read the second time, loses his life. Let us beware lest it be so with us. Let us not lessen and mince our sinnes, in hope of more easie pardon: but if we would magnifie the grace of Christ, let us first magnifie and enlarge our sinne to the uttermost; if Christ see, that we rather hope in our small sinne than his great grace, we are dead men. The way to get pardon, is to equall his price to all our misery. Say thus, If Lord, my sinne had beene onely a share in Adams eating, and no more; or in some actuall few evils, or if in the meere privation of some good things, or in sinne onely and not in penalties, or if in bodily onely, and not spirituall, or if spirituall onely and not eternall; somewhat might seeme to lessen thy love: but surely that love that would satisfie for all, rather than any should condemne me, is of unspeakeable dimension! Oh! learne by this how to esteeme the price of grace! If each step of this first part, if each of these Articles make thee not miserabler than other, no Article of the second part shall be able to comfort thee! Be confounded under the ruine of thy misery! and vow with that good Iabez, If the Lord will indeed rid me of all this great evill, that it may not grieve me! If he will enlarge my coast, and bring me out of this heape of woe, then he shall be my God, and I will make songs of his mercy! 1 Chro. 4. 10. Oh! let all that hath beene said of this misery, make thee goe as shee, Luk. 13. 11. bowed together, under an intolerable burthen! Lay all together, to make up such a loade as may pinch thy shoulders, and cry out, Who shall deliver me? Who could thinke such a weight as I have here described could be carried with ease! especially through so many Sermons of conviction as many heare! Oh! that any should sleepe in such deepe debt, so bankerupt as they be, snort with such an intolerable weight crushing them! Surely except there were a plague of insensibleness added to all other misery, it could not but affect men otherwise. But till sinne begin to be out of her element, and feele her misery, Christ and the soule can never be reconciled in one.

Thirdly, This should cause us to wonder at the goodnesse of Gods dispensation of this misery! That both in the sinne and in the penaltie it should be so mitigated by the providence of that God, who for universall ends restrayneth the force. Vse. 3.

force and violence of this misery; why should God so order it, that he in whom the fountaine of all sinne abideth, should yet be in his particular nature stinted and shortened within the compasse of some few foule sinnes? What hinders (in us) why not all as well as any sinne should be our beloved? who hath so appointed, that in this plentie of Plagues, (the cause whereof we carry about us) so few of these should light upon us? Hath not sinne made us a dunghill of misery, and a sea of sorrow? Why then see we so few blind, deafe, lame, dumbe, maymed, out of their wits, poore and miserable creatures, as we doe? Shall we by this indulgence be hardned to thinke our selves lesse wretched and miserable than we are? or rather admire that goodnesse that suffers us not to be so cursed Iob 9.1.3. as we deserve? No: it is the glory of providence to dispense thus.

I say, let us acknowledge singular patience in God, to dispence so mercifully and manifoldly with man, having incurred this Premunire with the LORD, that he did not quite destroy him, but alloweth him so many comforts, encouragements and helpes of nature and life, all which he might have stript him of: All save hell being meere indulgence of mercy, as the support of nature in health, in strength, with wits, sences, breath of ayre, use of Earth, influence of Heaven, marriage, posteritie, wealth, credit, government, &c. more than he ought to damned Rebels, who might have beene destroyed when borne.

Vse.4. Fourthly and lastly, It's instruction to judge aright of this sinne, not to slight it as Papists, and prophane men doe. To count our selves miserable by it: to esteeme it above any actuall sinnes; to judge of it, not by the matter or act of it, but by the villany of it against the Majestie of GOD, his Crowne and dignitie. The little weighing of this, hath caused men to make such small account of actuall sinne, to make it a merriment: as Fornication, they will say, it is a tricke of youth, &c. And the truth is, from the slender esteeme of sin, comes that base esteeme of Christ with many. Whereas, except Christ had been made sin in the roote it selfe, by imputation and satisfied for it, all the imputation of actual, could not have profited us. If to raze the picture of a Prince be such a crime, what is it to deface the Lords? Oh wofull wretches, who dare say Baptisme doth abolish that which all the grace of Christ cannot wash off, till death? All other sinnes are committed ted in a corrupt estate, this in a pure one; and therefore Christ that immaculate Sonne of God was faine to lay aside all his holinesse, that he might clense the staine and the guilt thereof (as a double dye) out of our nature. One of the miseries of originall sinne, is, that its uncapable of the due conceiving its owne woe: but thinkes it selfe in good case, as a drunkard forgets the sentence of death, and dreames of great wealth. And therefore we had not need adde thirst to this our drunkennesse, by esteeming it slight, but desire the Lord rather that he would awaken us out of this delusion. But more shall be said of the use of this in the sixt Article.

ARTICLE IV.

Qu. What is all this misery to us, who never sinned Adams sinne in the kinde?

A. IT is over-spred as a leprosie of the whole body over the whole nature of mankinde, all sorts, sexes, states, degrees: Not one free: as all misery is in every one, so over all without exception, Psal. 14. 1. 2. 3. Prov. 20. 9. 1 King. 8. 46 Eccles. 7. 22. Rom. 3. 9. Iam. 3. 2. 1 Iob 1. 8. Iob 14. 4 and 15. 14 Psal. 51. 5. Examine the Texts, All, both Iew and Gentile, Barbarian, Scythian, bond and free, noble, simple, learned and idiots, yea all who are to be. For as they are in our loynes, so we were in Adams: Adam not being a single person, but in the whole stead of mankinde, before he had issue. Adams sinne is our sinne Psal. 14. 1. 2. 3. Pro. 20 9. 1 King. 8. 46. Eccles. 7. 22. &c.

Q. How doth this truth appeare more clearely?

A. Both by the Scripture and reason. Paul sayth, Rom. 5. that by the disobedience of one, sinne entred into the world, and by sinne, death. What is that? Sinne and Curse seazed upon all the whole world, as well as Adam and Eve. And the like proofes follow in all the verses, as verse 14. Death reigned from Adam to Moses. Explication. Rom. 5. 10. Ver. 14.

Verse

17.18.19. Verſe 17. By one mans offence, death reigned by one. Verſe 18. By the offence of one, judgement came upon all to condemnation: and verſe 19. As by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners. So that this Article removes all conceit of any man whatſoever (I ſay meere man:) to be exempted from this maſſe of corruption.

Rom.3.12. No, Rom. 3.12 All are gone out of the way, not one doth good, no not one. All the ſinne, all the penalties of ſinne belonging to Adam himſelfe, belongs to us: we may uſe Peters choyſe word, 1 Pet.1.18. 1 *Pet.*1.18. By the tradition of the fathers: All theſe are conveyed to us by the tradition of Adam (not example, but propagation) no one of all theſe tokens miſcarryed, but as he ſent them to us for a curſed memoriall what he had done for us: ſo were they all and each of them delivered to us, we fayle not in the receiving of the whole ſumme, to the utter moſt farthing.

Q. But in what order is this maſſe of evill derived to us?

In what order ſinne is derived to us from Adam: A. In this: That firſt the actuall ſinne of Adam and Eve, eating the forbidden fruit, is conveyed and made over to us: then originall, then actuall, then penalties, all hanging each upon other, as the leſſer boates tyed to the great Shippe. But yee will object, that Paul himſelfe, Rom. 5. ſayth, That others ſinned not after the ſimilitude of Adams tranſgreſſion I anſwer, True: nor againſt a ſet Law as Adam did, but yet they were held guiltie before Object. Anſw. GOD of Adams ſinne, as if they had knowne it. So then, marke, although we did not individually and perſonally ſee, talke with the Serpent, put forth our owne hands, and put the fruit into our mouth: yet we did eate it as well as he. And why? Becauſe the ſinne which Adam committed ere he had begotten a ſonne or childe, was the ſinne of nature, not of a Perſon. As it is ſayd,

Heb.7.9. Levi himſelfe payde tithes in Abraham: ſo we in Adam: he to God, and we to Satan. And that by the juſtice of God: who, as he would moſt juſtly have imputed the integritie of Adam to us, if he had ſtood therein, ſo might impute his ſinne. We were all in Adams loynes, for better or for worſe. And as it was in the ſecond Adam, the Lord did impute our ſinnes to him, who yet never ſinned after the ſimilitude of ours, againſt a law: becauſe he looked at him in the nature he ſuſtained: So he doth impute Adams ſinne to us, although we in perſon ſinned not, becauſe we ſinned in his nature. And as our Lord Ieſus had beene wronged, if he had ſuffered for that ſinne which was none of his [and we alſo were farre from Redemption of righteouſneſſe righteoulneſſe could not be really ſettled upon us by imputation.] ſo except Adams ſinne were firſt made ours by imputation, wee ſhould be wronged in ſuſtaining the penalties thereof.

Imputation, I grant, differs in the manner and forme of it, being in Chriſt, onely by Gods account, in us inherent: but ſtill reall in both, (reſpects duely obſerved.) And thus by partaking with him in the act, we alſo partake with him in all the conſequents of ſinne, and penalties following. If it be demanded (as Paul doth there) whether Heathens and Infidels that lived from Adam to Moſes, and ſo ſince, were thus defiled? The anſwer is, Yea, Sinne reigned both in the guilt and puniſhments, all that time, among millions of ſinners, waſting and deſtroying generation after generation: onely the difference is, Before Moſes there was little ſence of it, they were under the reigne of it, the guilt, the plagues of it; but ſtill they never ſaw the face of their King, luſt and concupiſence, old Adam, the law of the members, the ſinne and curſe of Adam, who hurt them, they knew not, onely felt the ſmart of a blind ſtroke: never the further off from the miſery, but much further from eaſe or remedie. As for the Relique of that law they carried within them, alas, it was eaſily dazeled by forgetfulneſſe, or damped by ſtrong luſts (being dimme in it ſelfe) but as for the roote of the diſeaſe, that they never ſaw by that law, as after in Art. 5. ſhall be ſpoken.

Further Illuſtration of it

Anſw. Rom. 5. 14.

Q. Is there any thing elſe to be ſaid to open this?

A. Yea: The Lord would reſemble this contagion of ſin, from Adam to his poſteritie, by that ſpeech, Gen. 5. 3. that Adam (having ſinned) begat a ſonne in his owne Image, who elſe ſhould have beene begotten in GODS: Noting that with the generation, the ſinne alſo was derived. And although this be a dead notion in the generall: yet when wee ſee how the LORD inflicts a ſenſible marke hereof, even ſtill in our propagation: as namely, when ſome notorious vices of uncleanneſſe, malice, hollowneſſe, intemperancy, treachery, crueltie, choler, and fury, doe even goe in a bloud, as in a ſtreame; overflowing not onely ſome families, but even ſome Countries, which are as by-words and reproaches for their drunkenneſſe, vanitie, pride, and luxury; ſurely by the actuall infection that appeares, the other of originall may be diſcovered unto us.

Gen. 5. 3.

Q. That it is thus, it appeares plainly, but I deſire to know by what meanes this conveyance is made; for the difference of men in this, make some doubt of it?

More fully of this conveyance.

A. That shall not neede. And all grant it. And all must confesse that generally it is by Gods just imputation, which realizes the infection into the whole race of Adam. But as touching the way, some thinking it to be by bodily generation, others by Gods infusion of the soule stained with her blot: both being unsafe, this I would briefly say, Man begets Man: not a peece of him: and therefore in begetting man, he must needes beget sinfull man also. How that is, I may expresse thus; Beside the bodily Traduction, man begets man, in his Receptivenesse of the soule, and in those bands and tyes, which knit body and soule, to wit, those Spirits of Reasonable nature; and by the infection of these spirits, the soule is also corrupted. For my selfe, I confesse it decides all the doubt, when I thinke of the realnesse of Gods imputing, though I should know no more. I say therefore againe, the taint of the spirits of man, flowing from the power of Generation doth convey it. Man not onely begetting the body of man, but man, with an habitude of spirits to infect the soule. But let it be enough that whatsoever the manner of conveyance be: sure it is, the curse of sinne is incurably, and perpetually, and wholly over-spread over all our nature: though (as I noted) with some indulgence to some, in respect of open expression.

Q. What use flowes from hence?

Use 1.

A. Still, a good Reader would be glad to apply each Article practically to himselfe, for the better insight into the nature of his corruption. Each Article should adde to the view of sinne. And so doth this. For what a depth of dye, how festred a canker or leprosie, how deadly a poyson is in this sin of Adam, which could not be washt out in so many waters as it hath passed through in many hundred generations? Nay, the iron-moll and the staine of it is as fresh, and will be to the worlds end, as at the first, and the fruits much fouler. Its a true speech, old Adam is not as other old men, crazie with age: his age is renned in every new generation: as the father in the sonne. It must needs be strong poyson, which hath so present a dispersion of it selfe through the body into each veine and artery of the whole to make it like it selfe. What then is it which God would teach us by this leaven? Surely when we see how it hath leavened such a lump of mortalitie, it should make us lye downe with horrour under the hugeneſſe of it, and feele it to cruſh our ſoules, yet more ſenſibly. It ſhould take away all life and ſpirit in us in ſtead of our priding our ſelves in our brats, and their features, being the generation of Vipers.

Secondly, It ſhould make ſome of us to tremble to thinke what we have put into them, even a leaven, which grace it ſelfe will never throughly purge them of in this world. What joy ſhould be in our ſpirits, while this thought abides in us? Eſpecially how ſhould we endure to thinke that ſome of us doe ſuffer our children (thus alreadie poyſoned) to runne up and downe the world, to gather more and more actuall ſcurffe to their naturall, and wee never reſtraine them from this riot? I ſpeake to ſuch as have great poſterities, of all others (for although thou haſt but one, it concernes thee too: for ſome one may have as much poyſon in him, as ſome five or ſix) let theſe looke to themſelves: thou haſt diſperſed old Adam, and ſowne his ſeed at large: take heed thou be as carefull to roote it out, and plant the ſecond Adam in the roome of it: els thy poſteritie ſhall be thy greateſt hell. But to all, this I ſay, ſlight not this ſinne of Adam: ſay not, If I had not this ſinne imputed to me againſt my will, I ſhould never have deſerved it. Nay rather, except thou hadſt deſerved it, it had never beene imputed: taxe thy ſelfe: ſay thus, I was deceived by the Serpent, ate, and was curſed: had I beene there, I had done no leſſe! Oh, ſo great and wide an infection, ſhould breed as large and deepe a dejection of ſpirit in every one that beleeves it! The common ſpeech is, Fornication is but a tricke of youth. If a man ſhould behold this ſinne in the cloake which God once put upon it; Numb. 25. 9. died in the bloud of 24000. men and women, durſt he thinke it a tricke of youth? So, originall ſinne is thought but our nature, and that which cannot be avoyded, wee may pitie it, but wee cannot blame it. No, but you muſt repent of it, and get Chriſt to cover and pardon it, elſe it will blame and damne you! But to returne, if we would behold this cloake dyed in the bloud not of ſo many thouſands, but millions both of Heathens and Chriſtians, durſt we make a (But) of it? Take heed of ſuch boldneſſe! Vſe 3.

Thirdly, It is ſharpe reproofe to ſuch as ſolder up this fearfull ruine, by any outward accompliſhment, which makes them glorious in mans eye, and ſo blind themſelves willingly from seeing their abomination before God. If many truely turned to God; having lived under good meanes, Ministers, education, yet have beene deepely humbled by the cursednesse of their nature, because they never felt themselves humbled for it: what shall be their case, who have nothing to commend them, save outsides of ingenuitie, moralitie, gentlenesse, or better breed and parts than others, having never beheld the misery of their owne spirit and frame? This world is now so full of debauchednesse, that we may be glad of such in our common dealings: but such may have small cause to be glad of themselves. Rather let them reade that in Act 17. All are of one bloud or seed. Oh proud heart, boast not of thy selfe above another: lest those very clothes of thy pride defile thee, and make thee worse. Say thus, I may be learneder, civiller than another: but I am worse than another: The finest bodies if putrified, stinke worst; and if I thinke my selfe better, its because I am worse This should make even the greatest, Iona. 3. to come downe, and licke the dust, and call corruption and wormes their brother and sister, till grace have separated the precious from the vile.

Ionah 3. 5.

Vse. 4. Fourthly, It teaches, that if the Lord exempt any from this leven and infection, they must count it a peculiar grace: for hee is tyed to none, hee hath all at vantage, all having sinned. Oh, that the free goodnesse of God in Christ should make any difference where so little was! It should turne all pride of man into deepe astonishment and prayse: especially wonder at this freedome, that when all other respects are alike, one age, temper birth, two lying in one wombe, as Iacob and Esau; two at mill, two in one bed, in the field, yet one should be taken, and the other refused: nay, perhaps the worser, viciouser, baser partie of two, often, the most despised in a family taken, the likelier and better rejected: that grace should put honour upon one, and shame upon others: As Pharaohs butler and baker, being in one crime, yet differing in Pharaohs favour. As those two theeves in the same just condemnation. One base Creeple among seven brave ones.

Mat. 24. 42.

Gen. 40. 21. 22.

Vse 3. Thirdly, Let all Pharises learne to take this razor, and cut the combe of their owne conceitednesse. When one and the same misery shall be laid upon the proudest hypocrite and the prophanest Publican, whom the one scorned in respect of himselfe, when one hell and judgement belongs to both, the

the Lord putting no difference because neither of their hearts purified by faith: nay, when the yonger brother, a base spend-thrift, upon his meere submission, without any worke wrought of deserving at his fathers hands, shall be accepted and pardoned: oh what ground of selfe-denial and humiliation ought this to be!

ARTICLE V.

Qu. But perhaps this misery is not of it selfe so deepe, but there is way sufficient for man to escape it?

A. NO possiblitie to man-ward of himselfe to escape. He lyes forlorne of himselfe under the confusion of his misery: As a prisoner lying in a dungeon with chaines, being under sentence of death. He is uncapable of any way offred him, therefore much lesse able to embrace it. No manner of feeling of it selfe, fearing of danger, or hope of rescue. Nothing in nature, art, education, nothing of worth or congruitie, nothing from selfe, or other men, or Angels, to helpe out of this desperate ruine. Nay, when a remedy is offred, nothing in any naturall freedome of will concurring with the meanes can doe it. Nay, the grace it selfe of God imparted to the soule, cannot worke it selfe to the meriting of a pardon, if weakened by sinne: except the same freedome of mercy should still tye it selfe thereto. Nay, no elect childe of God can out of himselfe, procure the least desert of acceptance, (if separate from Christ) so much as for himselfe, much lesse another. See Psal. 49. 7. 1 Sam. 2. 25. Iob 4. 18 Iob. 14. 4.

No possibilitie for man of himselfe to escape this misery.

Psal. 49. 7. 1 Sam. 2. 25. Iob 4. 18. & 14. 8.

Q. Is there any thing to be added for the proofe of this our inabilitie, to deliver our selves from this misery?

A. This being taken (as it must be) for granted, that all offences committed against infiniteneſſe, are infinite in their guilt: and therefore Iustice cannot (with safetie of her selfe) chuse, but require the offence at the hands of the sinner, both by holding him under guilt and punishment accordingly: how can it be imagined that there ſhould be any thing in a finite ſinning nature to procure her peace, at the hand of an infinite wronged Majeſtie? Its true, that a Prince may at the inſtance of an equall, yea inferior, pardon a treaſon, although no ſatisfaction be made: becauſe the offence was but finite. But to thinke ſo of God were blaſphemous. Againe, let the reader looke backe into the third Article, and ſee what is ſaid of the ſpirituall penalties inflicted upon man for ſin. If they be true, that is, if man be both ſo inſenſible of his woe, ſo uncapable of the way which GOD hath deviſed to redeeme him, ſo oppoſit and rebellious againſt it, ſo well ſatisfied in that his Hell, as if an Heaven: who can thinke he ſhould ſo much as thinke of a recovery? much leſſe be able to comprehend any way to get out of it?

Q. What uſe is to be made hereof?

Vſe. 1. A. Still each ſtayre muſt bring this wofull ſoule lower and lower, till it can fall no further. Theſe Articles ſerve to plucke out, each of them one or other, and all of them, all thoſe falſe crootches and props which corrupt-ſelfe holds upon, to keepe her from catching this deadly fall under her miſery. If there be any evaſion for fleſh and bloud, any ſtarting hole to get out at, ſhee will be ſure to finde it. This is the laſt ſtoppe of all: which ſhould quite ſinke the proud heart of a ſinner, though hee carry his chin all this while above water. I ſay to all the former, this one of utter irrecoverableneſſe, and deſperate impoſſibleneſſe to get out, ſhould even kill the hopes of a wretched heart, and burſt the belly of it. Hopeleſſe miſery ſhould make an helpleſſe ſoule, lying panting at the mercy of a Saviour, and gaſping for breath, that if there be no more for her, out of her ſelfe, than within her, ſhee may give over all. And while ſhee ſees no hope in her ſelfe, ſhee may deſpaire in her ſelfe. Till this laſt Lecture be read and beleeved by the ſoule, in vaine is Chriſt offred to her; while ſhe hath a wing of her owne, to flie over him with neglect: Both wings and feet muſt be cut off. Thoſe that come to Chriſt, muſt be wholly beaten out of all holds, and thoſe ſtrong holds of ſelfe-hopes and ſelfe-loves, either of nature meere, or mixt with ſome helpe ſupernaturall: Chriſt will never be ſought to; if any other can be deviſed. Sleidan reports, that when ſome Souldiers were ſurprized in in their Caſtle, and all throwne downe from the top of it to be daſht in peeces: one of them (among the reſt) falling through the boughes of a Mulbery tree, clapping thereon with both armes, ſtucke by it, and ſaved himſelfe from death. Wee may conceive he was loth to dye. Much more are wee! From the top of the firſt Article of this firſt Part, to this laſt and loweſt ſtayre, the Lord throwes downe the ſoule of a ſinner, to kill his ſpirit, and humble him: but ſo long as the leaſt crootch laſts, the ſoule that loves her owne corrupt life, abhorres to be killed. But in Gods feare let this put an end to all fancies, and corrupt conceits of fleſh: and let it bring the ſoule to the earth, and caſt downe every high thing and ſtrong hold, which ſets up it ſelfe againſt the neede of a Chriſt, and the neceſſitie of faith. Give up now all weapons, and ſay, If it be thus, Lord, thou haſt overcome! I am bereft of all, and I muſt ſtand to the mercy of a Conquerour! I have nothing to merit, or helpe me: it remaines now that utter miſery provoke mercy at the hands of a mercifull God: with whom the fatherleſſe ſhall finde it. To conclude, put caſe the Angels ſhould mediate for us, yea if a man were for his owne part as free of ſinne as Adam, yet for that which is paſt, the offence of an infinite Majeſtie, he could not ſay any thing to it, it is a matter of higher nature.

Secondly, It quaſheth all Popiſh pride and arrogancy, all Pelagian and Popiſh conceit of the remnant of free will in us towards our owne recovery. Not onely in deviſing or feeling neede of any helpe, but accepting it being offred by the helpe of ſupernaturall light and grace preſented. Man is as truely blinde in himſelfe, as in a dungeon of darkeneſſe. Though light be offered, hee is as impotent to ſee it, as unable to procure it in the want of it. The very roote of all errour and evill, hereſie and prophaneneſſe, being nothing elſe, ſave their ignorance of originall thraldome under ſinne. It ſhould greatly abaſe us that wee are thus hurt, and know not how: much leſſe how to outgrow it. This vſe our age greatly needeth; wherein formalitie is readie to blot out the impreſſion of all truths of this kinde, and nouzle it ſelfe in an eaſie Religion, voyde of power. Vſe 2.

Thirdly, It teacheth what a myſtery grace is. It is true which Paul ſaith, Great is the myſtery of godlineſſe, which is 1 Tim. 3. 16. Vſe 3.

Christ manifested, &c. When Christ came and brought light foure thousand yeares after the Creation, it was as strange as at first. And now when grace findes any man, how doth it prevent him? even as the light comes upon the drunkard in the depth of his snorting and surfet. Oh, the sweet peace the sinner findes in his misery! As Israel made their bondage an ease: so we Hell it selfe our Heaven by custome. We adde delusions to our blindnesse and senselessnesse, by false errours of our own and others. We sleepe as Peter by worse than sixteene men armed even betweene foure quaternions of our Keepers, Devils, Sinnes, Law, and Wrath. The Proverbe is verified, The life of an ideot, is the sweetest of all, for he hath nothing to trouble him. So here, the life of a man dead in sinne, is not to be aware of it; pinch, burne, wound him, its nothing to him; threaten, allure, all is one; preach terror or hope, woe or weale, he is dead. The Law, curse, Christ and grace, hope of Heaven, are indifferent. Nay, such a fearefull offence is the Word to a dead sinner, that even that which should occasion convincement and feare, workes confidence in him: the Iewes tooke the Law (a killing letter) to be the way and object of justification. Nothing can worke the soule to humiliation, save wofull experience, when all is too late. Thus much for this Article.

Act. 12. 3. 4.

ARTICLE VI.

Qu. Is there any way then from the Lord, for the revealing of this misery?

The convincing Ministery of the morall Law, is the revealing of this misery 1 Tim. 1. 5.

A. YEA, and that is the morall Law of GOD soundly preached to the Conscience. See 1 Tim. 1. 5. The Law is not given to the righteous, but to the disobedient, &c. where the Apostle divides the worke of the Law, into two sorts (by implication.) One is upon the righteous, as its an eternall patterne and direction of righteousnesse: and so it concernes the third Part of the Catechisme, but in this sense it belongs not to this place. Secondly, as its a meane to convince the ungodly, and to reveale to them their sinfull and cursed condition. Note this double use of the Law, to avoyde the confusion which thousands runne into, both in writing, and hearing the Word preached.

to

Q. What say you then of such as want this Law?

A. They are of many sorts, yet truely it may be said of all, They are without the true knowledge of the Law. Touching Heathens, Turkes, and Infidels, the question will be the lesse, because they wholly want the revealing of the Law: and therefore of them its verified, That although sinne reigneth among them in the guilt and curse of it on Gods part, yet not on their part, by vertue of any light from God, For sinne is not imputed without a Law, that is, not laid to their charge by Gods enlightning their conscience, concerning the true object, roote, nature, or fruit of sinne. As concerning those notions which were left in them, and were in stead of a law, they were onely enough to condemne them, not otherwise. The most ignorant and vicious among them, easily blew out that dime sparke they had, by the blast of their strong lusts, and were given up to a reprobate sense, and horrible lusts. Their most morall Philosophers, although (to the shame of Christians it may be spoken) hatcht up their sparkles of dime light to some measure, yet as touching the true knowledge of sinne, they had it not: they thought some sinnes no sinnes, some sinnes, vertues; and some vertues, vices: and the sinnes they saw, they never saw them by a word, or in the curse due to them: they saw a dimme twilight of an unknowne God, vertue, vice, punishment, or reward, and therefore were far from any true enlightning: and much more from conversion; in an ordinary way. Rom.5. 14.

Q. But what doth the Law worke in particular?

A. Two distinct things: Knowledge and Conviction. For the first, reade Rom.7. I had not knowne sinne, if the Law had not said, Thou shalt not lust. In which respect, sinne is said to raigne from Adam to Moses: yea and under the old Law, in respect of any convincement. But since the Ministery of the Word of reconciliation came, the Lord hath enlarged the power of the Ministry of the Law, as a preparative thereto in the hearts of men. As Paul saith, 1 Cor. 14. Those that heare the Word plainly preached, and by name the Law, in the true spirituall sence and savour of it, they fall downe and say, that God is in you of a truth. Not that the Ministery of Christ is properly Legall, (for we are Ministers

The worke of the Law two-fold.
1. Knowledge of sinne as sinne.
Rom.7.7.
1 Cor. 14. 25.

Matth.5.17. Ministers of reconciliation) but not excluding it. Christ came not to destroy the Law in the doctrine of it; for it leads to Christ, save in the rigour and dominion of it. The Law then first searches Prov.20.27. the soule, its the candle of the Lord, and pierces the bowels of the spirit, those secret windings and corners, shifts, and evasions of it, be they never so colourable and subtill. It is as a great torch-light in the dead time of night, in the hand of an Inquisitour, which searches an house for Papists and Iesuites, and finds them in their Masse, and takes them with all their bookes and trinkets. As the persecutors of the Saints searched all vaults and privy doores, barnes and mowes of hay and corne, with speares, sharpe spits and swords: so is the Law acted by Ioh.16.9. Heb.4.12. that spirit of convincement and search; Ioh. 16.9. the discoverer of the thoughts: and Heb. 4.12. pierceth betweene the joynts and marrow. The Lord hath given it authoritie over the conscience as his owne Bayliff, to hunt out and discerne sinne in the colours, in the kindes of it, open, secret thoughts, affections, yea concupiscence: not the bare letter of the Law, but the spirit: for Rom.7.7. Paul (notwithstanding all Gamaliels teaching) knew it not. And the conscience of the unregenerate, being once thus stirred is as the light of the Law to bring God into each privy part. Not a dimme twilight, but a Sunne at noone-tide, which shines from East to West all over the spheare of Heaven, and makes every soule come out as Adam from the bushes, by the voyce of God: so cleerely bewraying a man to himselfe, that for the time he thinkes all other men see him pointed at by the finger of God, as we see 1 *Cor.*14.25.

Q. How is it that the Law of GOD is the revealer of sinne?

How the law becomes this Discoverer: A. That most holy and wise God, who first contrived and uttered it, put the light of his owne pure Majestie into it, and enabled it to discover sin to the soule, not as other Lawes to speake to the eare, but to the conscience: and although there is no commandement in the whole booke of God, which comes not from the same Author and spirit of light and truth, Psal.19. Psal.119. Heb.4.12. Ephe.5.10,11 Ioh.3.20. yet the Lord hath more peculiarly put this power of Enlightning into this his morall Law, as containing a more full exact and cleere view of all sinne, both in the nature and penalties of the same: and according to his ordinance, so it worketh: not by the bare ten words and syllables, but the effectuall Ministery thereof, accompanied with the Spirit. And looke what what I say of light, the same I adde of conviction also and her worke: both are put into the Law by the same God whose fingers wrote it,

Q. Is unbeleefe of the Gospell discovered by it?

A. No. The Law is a modell of the righteousnesse of Creation, in which there was no neede of faith: therefore it onely reveales those sinnes which make us guiltie without a remedy, that it might drive us to seeke a remedy. Yet we must not thinke it an imperfect light for this cause For as no man cals the rules of Grammar imperfect, because the rules of Rhetorique are not in it: so none call the discovery of the Law insufficient, because it reveales not the sinnes against the Gospell.

Q. What sinnes doth the Law discover?

A. All sorts, by name Actuall and Originall.

The Law discovers first Actuall sin.

Q. What neede any more be sayd of this? Have we not heard enough of the nature of Misery in the third Article, both in Sinne and Death?

A. Even that wee spake there, flowes from no other Spring than the Law of God; onely here we adde this Article to that, for this cause: In that we onely bounded misery within her Compasse, shewing wherein it lyes simply considered. But when we adde, The Law reveales sinne: we meane as sinne, and the curse lyes upon us, as we are guiltie of it and cursed by it: the Law doth set the saddle upon the right horse, and so shewes sinne in her colours to the soule, that it might apply the knowledge of it to thee and me in particular: and this is a further worke.

Q. Well, proceed to the enlightning worke of the Law about Actuall sinne: what is it?

A. First, the Law in the spirituall Ministery thereof, doth disperse those mists and skales of the blinde eye, that suffer not light to enter. Secondly, It opens and gives light to the eyes to see sinne in her true colours. For the first, According to the sorts of sinners, so doth the Law take away their lets of knowledge. Take three or foure Instances. Put case CHRIST had purposed to enlighten a Pharise in the knowledge of sinne, hee would have removed all the corruptions of the Law and darkenesse of the Text. They had established a Corban which might free a childe from the fifth Commandement: as their heires the Papists at this day dispence dispence with many murthers, or villanies, if for their Catholique cause and ends. They had curtolled the law in poynt of her extent; confining her to some grosse crimes, and taken away the key of light from the people about particulars. They had set up an exposition of their owne invention: they had made what they listed to be sinne, and what they pleased to be none: they had soothed the people up in this course, and sowed pillowes under their elbowes, thinking the Law was given them to obey, and not to enlighten or convince of sinne. They had taken away foure or five sinnes from the Law, (as the Papists now doe the second Commandement) as yee see in point of Adultery, and Divorce, of oaths and perjury, of justice and revenge, of love and charitie, *Math.*5. vers. 27. 33. 38. and 43. What was this but to call light darkenesse, and darkenesse light? If then CHRIST had meant to give them true light, he would have scattered those false and base conceits and corruptions, as indeed his Sermon on the mount was chiefly to that purpose.

1 Dispersing the mist of ignorance.

Instance 2. Secondly, Come lower, to those that live in the Church of GOD; many are ignorant, by meere want of meanes, as thousands of Congregations at this day are, though baptized. I remember the speech of a Reverend man, that once on the Sabbath, lighting upon a Company (as he was going to preach neere-by) who were some at foot-ball, some dancing the Morris, others quaffing in the Ale-house, asked them, Sirs, why doe yee thus prophane the Sabbath? They answered him, Alas good Sir, we know not that we doe ill in our dancing, or drinking: (which drew teares from his eyes.) If then God meane to enlighten such, he will give them a Ministery of light, to teach them what is good and what is evill. So to come further, put case a third sort hath some kinde of light, yet still maintaining a civill, prophane, or hypocriticall course, what will the Lord doe to enlarge them with cleere knowledge? He will take away their barres also.

Q. What are they?

A. These or the like.

Branches of this second Instance.

First, Their prejvdice against the light, and the meanes of light, and instruments of light, which hinders them from knowledge. They have perhaps a conceit, that its a needlesse thing, curious and unprofitable, a new fangled toy of some men: or very difficult to get, if not impossible: These Ministers and their preachings preachings are but novelties, and might be spared, keepe people from their callings: trouble the peoples braines, and fill them with fancies: These and the like false principles of prejudice, Act. ult. 22. The Lord will remove. Act ult. 22.

Secondly, Their custome in darknesse: they have lived as their forefathers, and done well enough: new matters are irksome: also custome in profanenesse which holds them from comming where any light is: for men are loath to know that which should unsettle them in their love. See Iohn 3.19. 20. Men that love darknesse, hate light, lest their evils be discovered. 2 Ioh. 3.19.20.

Thirdly, Their hardnesse of heart and purpose to live in their lusts still: For although order of law may compell them to Church, yet when then they see that knowledge robs them of their lusts, they fare as a Beare robbed of her whelpes, and fight against the light of the Law, as Pharaoh against the returning waters: because their free-hold is toucht: Lose their lusts, cosenage in buying and selling, deceit, lying, pride, revenge, they lose their life. 3 Exod. 14.27.

Fourthly, That wofull dulnesse of edge and bluntnesse of spirit: by which they make themselves incapable of knowledge, Heb. 5. Especially of any maine and materiall points. 4 Heb. 5.11.

Fifthly, Generalnesse or slightnesse, by which they please themselves to know the meere common sinnes which every one may reade in great letters, running: and through ease, seeke no further; because indeede knowledge is not their ayme, but their policie to avoyde the shame of grosse ignorance. A man that hath no more use of a Mappe, than to see the breadth or situation of Essex, will content himselfe with the generall Mappe of that Shire: but if a man would have a due Survey of some Towne, what breadth it hath, what such a Lordship therein situate is; what lands, woods, pastures, hop-grounds: he will get a Draught of that Towne, or Survey of those particulars. So here: If God meane to enlighten a carnall, generall, and formall professor, hee will take from him his generall Mappe, and subtill universalities, whereby he detaines the truth in unrighteousnesse, and teach him a more speciall Mappe of sinne to study upon. 5

Sixtly, He will remoove his selfe-love, by which he is loth to be informed in truths: his partialitie and subtiltie, which suffers him not to heare such Truths, as are like to oppose his personall, precious, and beloved evils: whereby he is loth to heare of any sinnes, save other mens, not his owne: and so he shunnes 6

particular light of things, which might proove either against his lusts, ease, credit, or course in evill to understand. If a man be a good Iustice, hee is willing to know the Statutes and be informed in them well, that hee may be able to punnish sinne to purpose: If not, hee is willing not to be informed of them. So is it here; but if the Lord will enlighten him, hee will enlarge his Law to him, and him to his Law, that he shall be gladdest, when he meets with the most distinct and cleere light, And so I might be infinite: let this view be sufficient for this former.

7 Seventhly, It scatters those errors of our owne conceit of found righteousnesse, to wit, That we have served God well, both in shunning of sinne, or doing of dutie, when we have beene drawne to it onely by forreine compulsion, or outward occasions: As when God by providence doth stop us: when we can no other doe, or not doe: necessitie, feare, shame, awe of superiours, example of others, draw us from some evill: or some advantage hoped for, in good acceptance with men, in the love of Parents, hope of credite, gaine, good marriage, good trading good opinion by the company of the good, or the light of our Conscience mooved us to some good. The law pluckes off such mufflers, and layeth the soule open for hypocrisie and falshood.

Q. How doth the Law give light to the eyes in knowing Actuall sins?

A. Both in themselves, and in their penalties.

How the law enlightens.

Q. In themselves how?

A. Sundry wayes: some of which (and the chiefe) I will note, by them desiring the wise Reader to judge of the rest. First, The Law doth present the soule with the authoritie of GOD in commanding, and sets up her selfe, not in the sences or back-parts of man, but in his conscience, the most privie chamber of the soule. This no Law of man can doe. No, nor can any destitute of the Law, be truly seazed in conscience by any sinne. But the Law sets up the Law-giver in the conscience, presenting him to her in all his soveraigne Iustice, Wisedome, and Power, that so, she may esteeme of sinne, not as touching man, but trenching upon God in all his attributes; as for example, when unbeliefe is layd forth by the contempt of patience, of mercy, of providence, the continuance of the Gospell, and the warnings of Conscience. This is a great discovery, and causes sinne to be conceived as it is, not as the passing act seemes, which begins and ceases with time, but this is infinite in time, merit, extent, and scope, because against an infinite God. For example: An ignorant man having hurt his neighbour, lookes at the sad consequent of the fact onely, how he hath hurt him in his name, cattell, wife, goods, and so the damage is the sinne to him. But the enlightned conscience lookes at the Law-giver: knowing that not man, but God hath made the Law against hurting man: man is the next, but God is the chiefe and last object of his sinne. And therefore God must be agreed with, else conscience will keepe it upon Gods record to appeare in due time. And, put case man would be appeased, yea, is satisfied, yea, perhaps mans Law is satisfied by the death of the offender, yet God still must be compounded with, as chiefly offended: as for theft, murther, uncleanenesse, &c.

1. In the sins themselves; and that many wayes. The first by her authoritie.

Q. How secondly?

A. It presents it selfe to the soule in the coherence and consent of the Law, This no man can see except enlightned. S. Iames cleeres this, Iam. 2. 10. Hee that breakes one, is culpable of all. Meaning, that such is the chaine of the Law, and so are the words couched together, that being by one and the same Spirit ordained, hee that breakes one, violates all as hee that breakes any linke of a golden chaine, breakes the coherence. Men thinke othewise: But as hee who breakes his neighbours fence, trespasses him as well as if hee ranged all over his ground, because the bond is broken: so here. It were strange to tell a drunkard, he hath broke more than the seventh Commandement. But to tell him that hee hath broken all (as indeed hee hath) were strange to him. Not perhaps in actuall deed: but yet in power and effect, because he hath broken the bond of that God who hath made all the rest. And yet there is a further thing in it than so: for in a sort, some actuall sinne breakes all. As one hath described it in covetousnesse, so might I doe it in drunkennesse. For what drunkard makes not his cup, and companions, an Idoll-god? what cares hee for Gods worship, daring to be drunke in an Ale house, within the sound of the Preacher? What conversation toward man lookes he at in family, neighbour-hood, oaths, vowes to God or men? What Sabbaths doth he not breake? What parents and Magistrates doth he care for? but rather undoes the estate of the one, and contemnes the censure of the other? What cares he in his cups to breake the head of, yea, yea, to stabbe his fellow? What uncleanesse and bastardy is hee not guiltie of? What booty by the high way will hee balke, and perhaps with bloudshed, to get money to drinke? What lyes and slanders? what colours and shifts to defend his villanies and cover his sinne, will he forbeare? This is meet to thinke of, to open the harmony of a law. But howsoever this be, sure it is, there is no sinner, not onely grosse; but even secret, who is not guiltie of all the Law in the breach of any Commandement becauſe his undue carriage fights against the Lord of the whole Law. The discovery of this light might be as much as some mens soules are worth: for what is the speech of men? As for unrighteousnesse, I aske God no mercy! As for stealing (saith one) or for adultery (saith a second) or slander or murther, or usury, I never feare what GOD can alledge against mee! Indeed such, or such a sinne I aske him mercy for! Well said: but in the meane time, its no thanke to thee: God and providence suffred thee not, for thou wouldst have broken all as well as one, thy heart was bad enough, if he had not limited thee! Oh, this light well received, prepares way for conviction.

The 3. way Her royaltie. Iam. 2. 8.

A. The Law discovers it selfe to the soule in the poynt of her Royaltie. So Saint Iames cals it, Chap. 2. 8. That as a King is not prescribed against by the qualitie of any subject offending, why hee may not hold him guiltie: so in this, No person is accepted with GOD in this kinde. Oh! its a great discovery of errour! the heart of man is proud, and soone exempts and dispenseth with it selfe by some priviledge. But this Royall Law is impartiall. As a glasse will shew a Queene her spots as well as a poore woman, Paul labours this poynt, Rom. 2. against the Iewes priviledges. No difference with God. All, both bond and free, Barbarian, Scythian, Iew, Gentile, none excepted: God hath shut up all under one disobedience. Oh, its a great abating of a proud heart! One sinne, one hell, one wrath, one Tophet for Princes, for subjects, for learned, for idiots, for noble and base, for Pharises, and Publicanes! This cuts the combe of the sinner! Psal 149. 8. He bindeth Kings in Chaynes, and Nobles in fetters of iron! Neither can the poorest scape at a little mash, nor the richest at a great, of Gods net. Againe, his Lawes are no Cobwebs. Apply this (as it is the scope of the fourth Article supra) to thy selfe.

Esay 30. 33.

Psal. 149. 8.

Q.

Q. How fourthly?

A. It discovers it selfe to the sinner in the point of integritie, and soundnesse of her light: That is, opens sinne to the soule in one kinde as well as another. Such is the corruption of Adam, that it will suffer much of the body of sinne to vanish in the survey. If sinne be either of knowledge or ignorance, although knowledge shall be of some note, yet ignorance will vanish. If other sinnes be of omission or commission, ommission sinnes will fayle in the reckoning. If againe sinne be of presumption or infirmitie, Sinnes of infirmitie are counted nothing. If presumptuous sinnes be either of particular presumption, or of totall revolt, Particulars seeme nothing to a selfe-loving rotten heart. But where God enlightens, loe, he discovers sinne in all her sexes, male and female, strong and weake, remembred and forgotten, ignorance, or knowledge; and in a word one and other: And this also is a great discovery; for want of which, many a soule never comes to the barre of Gods conviction. But now, this rule will not onely tell the soule the differences of these: to wit, that one is of greater crime than other; one may both omit and commit sinne, and yet know neither; hee may sin of knowledge, yet not of presumption necessarily, because he may be prevented by feare, Satan, violent lust, and not voluntarily consent: he may also presume with a different heart yet the least of these in their nature is damnable.

Difference of sinnes.

What these sinnes are.

Q. Make a little stop by the occasion of naming those sorts of sinne of Ignorance or Knowledge, of Omission or Commission, of Weaknesse or Presumption, of Presumption actuall, and habituall or finall: and shew the Differences of these.

A. It is a thing of some weight and use; For as the conceiving hereof is profitable for sundry causes, so mens erroneous mistake of them is great. Briefly then, I answer;

A digression: having six branches.

I

First, Sinnes of Omission, are passings by and balking of some dutie behooving to be done, whether against or without knowledge: (ignorance not excusing omission of any thing which we are bound to doe) whether it be an omission of the opportunitie of fitting us to dutie, as to get grace and pardon while it is offered: or of some speciall dutie it selfe, either vowed by us, (as to neglect reformation of our selves, upon some great affliction) or at least required of God, as of prayer, fasting, mercy to the distressed, duties of familie, and the like.

Secondly, Sinnes of Commission are actuall doings of some evill (in thought, word, or deed) against the revealed will of God, whether wee be convinced or not convinced thereof, to be sinne: As, To worke upon the Sabbath, to speake vainely, to nourish base thoughts: whether the sinne reach to the committing of the highest degree, or the putting our selves upon the occasions leading thereto. Generally note, sinnes of Commission are more haynous than sinnes of Omission, and yet (as the case may stand) some sinnes of Omission may exceed some of Commission, because their consequence may be more fearefull.

3 Thirdly, Sinnes of Knowledge are Transgressions of the Law of God, against a mans Conscience, and the check of it, whether greater or smaller: as, when Shemei passed Jordan against his owne covenant: or, when a man goeth against his owne light. Sinnes of ignorance are, when a man transgresseth, but yet not knowing his sinne to be sinne: as Abimelecks coveting of Sarah, Pauls persecuting the Church, some Iewes crucifying the Lord of life. For although ignorance may in a sort excuse from so great a sinne: yet not wholly from sinne; and therefore Paul confesseth his ignorance to be joyned with unbeleefe of that which he ought to have knowne, 1 Tim. 1. 10. Observe also here, that although generally, sinnes of knowledge, exceede sinnes of ignorance: yet in some cases, Ignorance being wilfull and affected (and avoydable) may be greater and fouler, than some sinnes against knowledge.

4 Fourthly, Sinnes of weakenesse or Presumption differ onely from sinnes of knowledge in the intention of him that sinneth. Not each sinne of knowledge amounteth to a sinne of Presumption: Though all presumption must needs be against knowledge. Sinne of presumption then, is sinne of knowledge, committed with an high hand; And this high hand is, a bold venturousnesse and bearing of our selves upon the grace wee have received, as if wee should thereby escape punishment: I say, an usurping of libertie of sinning, either out of an impudency of spirit, putting off threats, as Deut. 29. 19. or a bearing our selves upon grace, more than others that want it. This is (in truth) a kinde of despising of grace, or slighting it, as if wee would reconcile grace and sinne, thinking to keepe God, and yet have our willes nevertheless.

Sinne

Sinne of weakenesse, is a sinning against such knowledge, as yet is prevented in her worke, through accident: as, either inabilitie of Grace to sticke to knowledge, or through timorousnesse and feare, although dalliance and wantonnesse be absent; and though conscience be present to accuse. To which sort may those sinnes be referred, which proceed from rashnesse, and undeliberatenesse, as when a man is forced by violent occasion of others; or an unresistable force of temptation, as Peters deniall; or suddennesse of occasions, whereby the soule hath no leisure to bethinke her selfe.

Fifthly, Sinnes of Presumption it selfe, are not all one: for some are onely presumptuous in act, as Davids Adultery and murther: Others are totall, when a man is totally and finally carried in a presumptuous streame of habited sinning. This trencheth most horribly against the patience and long-suffering of grace, as well as grace it selfe: and commonly drawes impenitency of spirit upon it selfe, which cannot repent when it would. This degree is not incident to the Elect: whose hearts God secretly so ruleth, that they cannot powre out themselves so farre, either for measure or time, as quite to shake off the Spirit of grace: which as an immortall seed lyeth and liveth at the roote. 5

Sixthly, A just fruit of this Dalliance with grace habitually: is that totall and finall Delertion of Gods Spirit, giving over the Presumptuous heart to such a sinning against grace, as at last despiteth that grace which it hath so long slighted: as the Gnat which burneth it selfe in the Candle. And this is called Sinning against the Holy Ghost; differing from habited Presumption in this, That in that a man sinneth against the grace of the Spirit: but in this, a man despiteth the Spirit of grace it selfe. And this sinne is a meere contradicting of all good as good, fully, and finally: although perhaps there may be wanting some opportunities of expressing that revolt, and malicious contrarietie of heart. And this sinne is not called unpardonable, as if the bloud of Christ could not satisfie for it, but because the soule is not capable of it. Thus much for this digression: I returne. 6

Q. How fifthly? The 5. way, Her extent.

A. The Law reaches forth to the soule her key of knowledge in the poynt of her extent. Shee who hath her Ladyes keyes, knowes all, and can fetch out of each boxe. So cannot the poore droile in the Kitchin. So, this is the priviledge of one that hath the Law, to be hers. It is a great peece of the light of the Law, to extend it selfe in the soule to all parts and degrees of sinne. First, in poynt of Spiritualnesse of the Law: teaching us not to rest onely in open, grosse, morall offences, but to goe to spirituall wickednesses. The Law is spiritually morall as well as externally. Thus Paul. Rom. 7. 12. & 1 Tim. 1. 5. The Law is holy and good. I sold under sinne. And 1 Tim. 1. 5. The end of the Commandement is love out of a pure heart, good Conscience, and faith unfeined. Then it must be very spirituall: and as well meet with infidelitie, hypocrisie, unthankfulnesse, impiousnesse, profanenesse of spirit, securitie, hardnesse of heart, contempt of the Word and Sabbaths, &c. as open lewdnesse of life, riot, stealth, or adultery. And so also it enlarges the chiefe breach of a Law to all lesser degrees and steps to it. As the seventh commandement reaches not onely to grosse incontinency: but to intemperancy, drunkennesse, riot, voluptuousnesse of sences, &c.

1. In her spiritualnesse.

Rom. 7. 12. & 1 Tim. 1. 5.

2. Her inquisitiveneſse. Heb. 4. 12.

Secondly, Her Inquisition and Search: For the Law, Heb. 4. 12. is very searching and piercing, divides betweene the joynts and marrow, dare and can goe to any part of the whole man, and fetch out any poyson out of any corner; hath an unlimited Commission from the Law-giver, to fetch out and binde any malefactor: not onely scene and manifest words and deeds, but also, the most retyred and close thoughs and intents of the heart: the Power of GOD is with his Law to search for the King, all vaults and dungeons, and nothing is hidden to the eye, no more than the earths surface or bowels to the Sunne. Sinnes of great consequent evils, or lesse: small sinnes, in mens esteeme, and great thrill, and crying; hidden from man, and open to his view: granted, or defended: carrying colour, or condemned by the world; Old ones, or new: In a word, The Law inquires upon sinne, according to the Anomaly of it, not onely the circumstances. And this was our Saviours chiefe scope in that holy Sermon, Math. 5. 6. 7. Chapters, correcting those base limitations of the Law which the Pharises made, tying men onely to a grosse litterall sence.

3. Her aggravation.

Thirdly, in her agravating power: whereby shee enlarges sinne by her Circumstances, causing it thereby to seeme the more odious, and setting the worse colours upon it; as because cause such a person committed it, a publike man, against such light, when he needed not, from meere malignitie of spirit, in the midst of blessings, against mercy, Gospell, vowes, covenant &c. which I doe not speake, as if all sinnes were a like, but because all are sinnes and culpable.

Fourthly, in her Puritie. The Law doth not goe to tell the soule of each sinne: but sets the Mirror of Gods pureneſse before her, that she may according thereto, discerne and judge of sinne; good and bad, true and evill. Truth (wee say) is a Rule of her selfe and her contraries. There is a secret pureneſse in the Law, whereby the soule discernes an evil in things which the world sees none in: and againe, sees none in some, wherein an hypocrite sees much. For the former, A soule that hath cleere and thorow light in himselfe, is a Law to himselfe in some things of specialtie, and accuses it selfe for the departing from the pure manner, ends, ground, and measure which GOD requires: as sometime in the keeping of the Sabbath, in use of liberties, in speech or silence, in doing or abstaining: hath a Law within him: not so much what this morall precept bids or forbids, as, what the pureneſse of it imports. So that looke, what sorts most with will, flesh, ease, or the inclination of nature, shee suspects: yea even in doubtfull cases, yet withdrawes (for safetie) rather than ventures upon termes of her owne; abhorres appearances, as well as substance of evill. And as in matters of God, so in matters of men, this Pureneſse rules the case, when perhaps no Law is at hand: as Phil. 4. Finally brethren, whatsoever is holy, whatsoever pure, honest, of good report, &c. An heart enlightned can better judge by this Rule than any thing, and sooner espies what is honest, savoury, than any other can doe: yea, and by this, casts off all those base additions of man which want a word, and therefore although they carry a shew of holinesse, yet are base copper coine, both makers and creatures, as Col. 2. 23. being farre from pleasing GOD for lacke of a word to carry his pureneſse into them. This I thought good to speak of the light of the Law: to give a taste of the rest: for a wise Reader will guesse at the Lyon by the paw. Onely one thing I would adde, that some of these latter things I would crave the Reader to make use of in the fourth Article of the third Part, so farre as it may serve for use of Christian direction: and so I shall there spare this labour in some kinde.

Q. But is all this light requisite for a soule which seekes conviction? or may lesse serve?

A speciall caveat. viz. God is not tyed to our scantling.

A. I answer, I doe name these, as helpes to serve the worke of the Law in convincing, not to forestall the worke of the Spirit. The more sound light the soule hath, the better: howbeit God is free to worke in what way and measure he please. Its one thing to say what light the Law can affoord to some (and doth) toward conviction: another, with what degree it may please the Lord to be content to worke. He can use these helpes, or perhaps the sight of originall sinne, to abase a wretched heart with; greater light or lesse may serve him, as he pleaseth. But the truer the light, the sounder the Conviction. The Lord doth in this case, as the state of the soule best admits: sometimes keepes away exceeding light in all these, lest the soule should lye oppreſt under her burden; culling out some sin with due circumstances of vilenesse and shame, to bring the soule upon her knees in a most kindly manner. He is not bound herein: yet he doth worke by all these in some.

Q. How doth the Law present the Penalties, with light to the soule?

The 2. Branch. The Law discovers sin by the Penalties. Of which in Article 3.

A. To add so much here, as may make up that of the third Article: this I say, That the Lord shewes the like power, authoritie, and efficacy of light in these as the other: He takes away all distinction of veniall and mortall sinne from a man, presents himselfe to him in his full justice of revenging all sinne without exception: removes all cavills and subtill extenuations of punishment as well as of sinne: makes all sin appeare mortall to the soule without Christ, and veniall with him: Tells the soule, Deferring of punishment is no removall of it: That some sinnes goe before, some follow after, but all meet earlier or later in judgement, Eccles. 12. 14. 1 Tim. 5. 24. That all sinnes deserve all punishments. That the least cost the Lord Iesus his bloud, and he that beleeves it not, shall pay for it in hell: That God doth indifferently hate and punish all: Tribulation and anguish is to each soule that sinneth: Cursed is every one: There is no lying hid from Gods eye: no shift, or evasion besides faith and Repentance; No amitie or Combination of sinners, no joyning hand in hand, no counsell can prevaile against God, who hath all penalties and executions in his hand to worke by. That the Court of God is not as the Popes: no Relaxations, Commutations of penance, Dispensations to be had there: That the having our hell here, is no Release or Heaven for hereafter: but, if we have not had here we shall there have all: if we have had here, we shall there have the full summe of punishment, without Christ. And by this the Lord prepares the sinner for conviction, following in a farre deeper measure, as in the point of terror shall appeare.

Q. How doth the Lord reveale originall sinne to the soule?

A. To adde a little of this also to the third Article, the Lord doth this many wayes. First, by the speciall termes of his Word: Secondly, by comparison of actuall sinnes. Thirdly by the properties of this originall. The 2. Generall: How it discovers Originall sinne.

Touching the first, the Lord is in no one thing so emphaticall, as in the names he gives to this poyson. He calls it, The Old man; The flesh, Lust, Concupiscence, The law of the members, The Law of sinne reigning in the members, The Old husband, who hath the wife in subjection, The body of death, and the like. Which affectionate termes (sought for the nonce) doe fearefully lay forth this corruption, to be that which men little think for. For why? What a tame, still, close, and harmelesse thing seemes this sinne, being yet, if once stirred, a raging Tyger, and wilde Monster? What doe these termes imply, save that, this sinne is the Doe-all in the soule: as she will, so it must be; and in a word, she is all sinne both the length and depth of it: all that is in sinne is in her. And therefore except the Lord Iesus had beene made sinne (note the word 2 Cor. 5.21.) for us, as well as sinfull, he had never satisfied: his expiation being chiefly for sinne in her nature, and for the acts by Consequence: in which respect he is truly called the second Adam, made the sinne of nature by imputation, that hee might by his nature of Righteousnesse and suffring, both satisfie for it, (the losse of Gods Image) and then restore it. Looke upon these Texts; and meditate of them. 1 By the termes *Rom.*7.1.2. *Rom.*7.7. *Rom.*7.23. 24.25. *Gal.*5.17. *Rom.*8.2.

Secondly, by comparison. For when the soule hath had the view of actuall sinnes before, as most irksome, and now comes to see greater abomination than these, as the Lord tells Ezekiel, Chapter 8.15. Oh how out of measure sinfull seemes it to the soule? how doth she cry out, miserable man! for marke; thus she speakes, Although actuall sinnes were enough to sinke me into misery, yet I see they were but evill in respect of their part: but now I see a body of all parts and members, a King 2 By Comparison.

in his throne. I see now my selfe cursed double and treble. No sooner doe I get out of one actuall sinne, or set good duties against bad with some hope of ease that way, but the Lord beats me downe by my inward nature of sinne! yea when I would faine comfort my selfe in my duties, and suffring and prayers; Loe then my very clothes, this venomed Iob 9. 31. shirt upon my skin, defiles me, and turnes all hony into the gall of Aspes; Indeed God hath freed me from being a worldling, whose hope is below, from a covetous mizer, whose God is his Mammon: I am free from open uncleanesse, and Phil. 3. 18. inward hypocrisie, and profaneness of heart: but oh Lord, the nature of these things dogges me: sometimes the wooff of my nature makes me feele small difference betweene my selfe and these vices! The nature of loving pleasures more than God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. the nature and savour of a proud vaine heart, of distrust, of worshipping God unsavourily and for forme, of selfe-love and ends, doth so dogge me, that its worse ten fold than the breaches themselves. Yea, and the more I seeme to affect the contrary, the more Satan dogges me with them; thoughts, desires and endeavors after them, (if it be so, be glad) yea, and selfe love with them so blind-foldes me, that often they seeme to please me, and make me be as I would be, and by the suddainenesse of the darts and assaults, prevent my armour, and so foile me, and leade me captive. So that we see the sting of nature, if duely weighed, is farre greater than of actions.

Q. Proceed to the third, How doth the Law present the properties of Originall sinne to the soule?

A. By ripping up the body of this death, and shewing it what is lust, Rom. 7. 7. &c.

First, Shewing it to be sinne in an eminency of being. Its 3 By her Properties, Rom. 7. 7. more sinne then other sinnes; whatsoever is in any of them, is here more notoriously; whatsoever filth and base qualitie may be spied in all sinne, or any, as impudency, vanitie, pride, resolution, disdaine, is here more singularly, as light and heate
1 Eminently sinfull. is in our fire, or the ayre, or the Moone, but eminently in the Sun, the first subject and seate of it. That wherein a qualitie is first, that is eminently most. As the chife coldnesse, drynesse heate, and moysture in the Elements. So when a Iudge is unjust, in the place of equitie, hee is eminently, unjust. Even so here. All ill qualities are first planted here: and its sinne in the Spirit,

Spirit, in the place of excellency, even of Gods Image. That whereby another thing is qualified so or so, that it selfe is much more so qualified As wee say; Those wofull, desperate Traytors in the Gun-powder treason, were so and so desperate, rebellious, cruell, fierce: but by whom were they made so? by their father Garnet and grandfather the Pope: Garnet and the Pope then must be much more so. So, all the poyson of actuall evils is seaed in the originall, after whose copy they write; and therefore originall is greatest: as the seed, which in her power containes thirtie-fold.

2. Predominantly.

Secondly, The predominancy of this sinne: both in matter of fulnesse and force: for fulnesse, it hath all sinne under it, and in it, as the perfect body hath all the members: so this dead rotten body, containes fully all dead members of hypocrisie, uncleanesse, &c. in it. As the word used by Divines prooves: they call it the Fewell, meaning of the fire of sinfull acts. Great farmes keepe great fires, because of the plentie of wood they have to nourish them. This is the fewell that maintaines all fires in the soule, in hall, kitchin, and parlour, sinnes of pride, sinnes of common formalitie sinnes of base lust: all are kept upon the altar burning with this fewell, which is set on fire it selfe by hell. So, of forciblenesse also: therefore Paul cals it a Law. Princes rule strongly by their lawes, they are as a soule wholly in all and in each part. Nothing so forcible: there is a necessitie in a law. It breakes downe and carries before it all opposites, word, threats, dangers, all counsell, perswasion, cannot heare, is incorrigible, unchangeable as the Law of the Medes and Persians. It carries the soule to her trade with courage, force, resolution, and irresistableneesse; being the pillar of Satans Kingdome, ruling as a strong man in sinners, and keeping all in deepe peace.

1. For fulnes.

2. For force.

Dan. 6. 15.

Luk. 11. 21.

3. Perpetuall.

Thirdly, It is perpetuall. We say, The King hath a perpetuall patrimony that is not alienable; so hath a sinner by his originall sinne. He may fayle in his spending money, as in his policie, and strength, and industry to oppresse, to defile his body: but his stocke and patrimony never fayles. If it be so in the best of Gods servants, (Luther himselfe little molested with covetousnesse, yet he had this stocke still within) how much more is it true of each sinner?

4. Over-flowing, and naturall Fire wall.

Fourthly, Its an over-flowing sinne, and most naturall

Fire and water are ill Masters, but they burne and over-flow naturally: even so here. As in breaches of the Sea, we see tops of Steeples, and of Towers under water: so, this over-flowes all the Image of God in us. This sinne goes in the haire and streame of nature, and therefore its called Concupiscence and Lust. Iam. 4. 5. The spirit that is in us, lusts to envie: it pleases us, because it is naturall, and hath a selfe-loving perswasion which carries it smoothly, and unsuspiciously, and by priviledge: It is my nature to smite when I am angry: its my nature to be soone hot: its therefore the more dangerous and cursed. Its like bread of deceit, and stollen waters, which are sweet: And this appeares, if it be crossed, it rages and frets: As Rachel, Give me children, or I dye: so here, give this old lust, children, and store of ill fruit, or else she is madde: for shee is a fruitfull harlot, above all other.

Iam. 4. 5.

Gen. 30. 1.

3. In the bondage of it.

Fifthly, The Bondage of it. It bindes up the soule in death, hardnesse, insensiblenesse, incapablenesse of any good, averseness to all meanes of Grace. As we say of sleepe, it chaynes up all the sences: so this, all the powers and members in utter feeblenesse and unableness to make towards God; Minde, Iudgement, Will, Affections, allare asleepe. Ephe. 5. 14. Awake thou that sleepest. Its the sleepe of all other parts, and the Nurse that rockes them also, and the Cradle they all sleepe in: yea brings in an utter disabilitie, languor and decay of all parts, loth to stirre, and counting the anguish of their bondage (by custome) another Heaven. As the Israelites cared for no Saviour, because so saped in slavery.

Ephes. 5. 14.

6. The unlimitednesse.

And lastly, Not onely an utter impotency to any present obedience urged by the Law: but so rooted a languor, as rejects whatsoever GOD might impose: in which respect, even the unableness to beleeve, is chargeable upon originall sinne, in respect of that opposite contradiction of it to all, not actuall charges lying upon the creature by Law onely, but possible to be imposed by the Gospell. And this for a briefe view of the Lawes discovery of originall sinne, especially in her properties.

Vse 1. Branch 1.

Q. What use is there to be made of this former worke?

A. Manifold. First, Touching the sinne of Ignorance: blesse God, that hath freed us from the darkeneese and corruption of Popery, whose principles do for ever keepe soules farre from the possibilitie of sound knowledge of their naturall estate, by by either actuall or originall sinne: Their rotten grounds (of which before) are direct against it.

Secondly, Beware of nouzeling thy selfe in places under ignorance, or to abide ignorant under the use of meanes: bring not God a Sacrifice, that wants this eye of knowledge of thy sinne. Else no conviction, no terror, no need of Christ can follow. Beware of foule sinnes, lusts of ignorance, resolution to hold them: lest God smite out the eye of knowledge. Had they knowne the Lord of life, they would never have crucified him. Ignorance is a necessitie of Misery. If thou knewest the gift of God, &c. Ioh. 4 10. Oh, that thou hast knowne the things of thy peace! But, alas, hidden! Thinke not by ignorance to sleepe sweetly under all terrors! Such a sleepe will have a sad waking. Psal. 58. 4. 5. Be not as the deafe Adder. Psal. 32. 9. Be not as the Horse and Mule. Beware lest God leave thee to thy selfe. He that is ignorant, let him be so still. Remember, although knowledge is not conviction, yet conviction cannot be without it. Branch 2. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Ioh. 4. 10. Luk. 19. 42. Psal. 58. 4. 5. Psal. 32. 9.

Admonition to all sinners to goe to worke aright, to get sound knowledge of their estate. Consult not with dead teachers: goe not to blinde guides, to such as thy selfe, to deceivers: consult not with thy wits and carnall wisdome, thy corrupt hopes, blind devotions: Refuse no informations, for feare of losing thy libertie in sinne. Esay 8. 19. Should men goe from the living to the dead? Oh yee silly ones, goe to the law and the testimony! The Lord that made the Law, hath put this gift into it, to be a Schoolemaster, to send yee by the sight of sinne to Christ. Refuse not the Lords discipline in this kinde, else never seeke further! Oh, how many poore wretches know not the right hand from the left; if they knew sinne, what it were to breake a Sabbath, to play the drunkards, &c. How glad would they be? Oh! shalt thou neglect the meanes thou hast, and stand up to the chin in waters, and dye of thirst? If without knowledge the heart be naught: what is it when men will not come to the light, lest they should see it? and shun the net, lest they be taken? Oh! beware both of Pharisaicall making more sinnes than God ever made, or cutting off those which hee hath made, from his roll and Law! Oh! Its now come to this passe, that, except the Lord put some bitter reall rods of affliction upon Vse 2. Esay 8. 19. Ionas 4. ult. Prov. 19. 2. Ioh. 3. 20.

upon men, the Law is made as a Scarecrow in a field, to the birds, out of the nose whereof they will picke strawes! But know it; no affliction without the Law can discover sinne: though men be never so sensleſſe without it.

Vse 3. Exhortation to all that would be kindly convicted; to come to the light for sound information of sinne. The want of this will be a flaw for ever in thy Religion: they who Psal.119.18. never knew themselves, never were humbled ones, nor beleevers. I discourage none for measure: That light which makes all manifest, is enough, be it never so little, if sound:

This Aquila (as meane as it seemes, I meane this Law of God) must teach great ones, Apolloes, learned Doctors, and all sorts, to become fooles, that they may be wise. Especially be able to say with Paul

Psal.149.8. her Disciples, hell must be their portion: for she hath chaynes to binde the proudest despisers! Oh! blesse God that ever so cleared the coast and the troubled waters of thy owne conscience, that thou camest to see this Nature of thine to the bottome; For the want whereof, I dare say, thousands build upon the sand of selfe-love: never comming to know what an enemy she is to conviction, and to faith:

Vse.4. Fouthly, That every one who seekes the true end of this first part of the Catechisme, doe willingly open himselfe and the doore of his conscience to the light of this Law, comming into it. As I have sayd, no one of the former five Articles can he knowne to a man save by the Word, and especially the Law, so to yeeld up the soule to the cleare displaying of this ordinance. For although nothing can be hid from it, yet it may still be hid to us, if we stop our owne conscience, and keepe some some beloved lust in a cloyster, which will see no light. Let the Law have her honour in our hearts, that we doe truely and lavingly see whatsoever the former five Articles said of sinne: consenting to all that they are true. Chap. 1. 24 Saint Iames saith, A foole seeing his face, goeth and forgetteth himselfe. Beware wee doe not so: but if ever we would come to the mirrour of the Gospell, in which we behold the face of God plainely, let us make way to it by Saint Iames his Glasse: Divide not the things which God hath put together. Although the Law have no Christ in it, yet the Maker of it uses it as a Schoole-dame to him: Let her then poynt at every letter in the Crosse-row, and rip up every errour, and distemper: doe not abuse the rule, nor crook it wilfully as Pharisees, to mistake the sence, to hide, to descant upon, and to diminish or excuse any evill, but let it be the Lords light set up for the ends that follow. Detaine not this part of the Word in unrighteousnesse, lest thou never come to the next step but perish in a twilight for want of a cleere discovery. We are loth to be informed of that, which when we know, wee are loth to renounce: Grace begins at the roote of enlightning. Examine thy selfe in thy uprightnesse herein. Iam. 1. 24. Gal. 3. 10.

Sixthly, It layeth open the unspeakeable justice of God in suffering such darkenesse to spread over the world for so many ages, and still in many Nations, who sit in the valley of darknesse. Wee have many travellers into those Indian parts who in the beholding of the faces of Savages, should tremble to thinke that the Lord for so long should not regard their ignorance, when yet he suffered a great part of the other, Asia, Affricke, and all Europe, to see light. Oh poore wretches! What can the dimme light of common conscience helpe to discover darknesse? how merry are they in assured destruction? and how should it yerne the hearts of Christians to behold them? As for the state of thousands under the governement of Protestant Kings, who having Baptisme and the Bible in English, yet never had the blessing of a searching Ordinance, what shall we ascribe it to, save the wrath of GOD, upon a wofull Nation kept, and content to be kept in darknesse, because their workes are evill? Both the leaders and the led must fall into the ditch. The Lord end this plague of soule destruction. Vse 6.

The next vse thereof may bee instruction to teach us how deepe a blindnesse is cast upon the soule in point of discer- Vse 7.

ning her owne sinne and danger. Nothing is further off, than the reflex of our owne corruption upon conscience: nothing more tedious than to be informed of sin in the kind. He that comes to tell us what we are, is our deadly Enemy: and many professors have gone many miles to get them a Preacher, whom they have persecuted, when he hath taught them the mistery of iniquity in themselves, their privie pride, hypocrisie, spirituall wickednes of unbeleefe, ignorance and love of the world, but especially their old Adam, plucking their mufflers from them, and laying them naked, and awake to their owne conscience. Oh! it is the joy of the unregenerate man, when he can make himself beleeve he is not the man he yet knowes (or may) that he is. Alas! sin lies deep, and Who can gage the deceit of the heart, save onely the Lord, and the spirit of the Law which divides betweene the spirit and the soule? yea the woe is, that at this day Congregations which have long enjoyed convincing Ministers, rejoyce and dance before Idols and hugge them, because they may goe unbitten!

Iere. 17. 9.

Vse 8. Lastly, How should this teach us both Ministers, and people, to loath all generalities, and to learne the Law in the true sence and the through-enlightning of it? It is a foolish speech of some who desire that they might fall into some grosse sinne, to humble them by. But (howsoever the Lord awakens some by the the lowd cry of their foule sinnes, as drunkennesse, blasphemy or the like) surely that which is likest to prevaile with the civill and morall sort, is the enlightning of the tenth Commandement. For they can wash off actuall sinne, with colours as fast as they offend, laying good against evill; but when the spring of their cursed nature appeares, which runneth upon them continually, I say then, this body of death will doe it.

Rom. 7. 24.

Q. What is the second worke of the Law?

The 2. worke of the Law convincing two-fold. 1. The judgment,

A. This conviction (which I call the second worke of the Law) is twofold: partly concerning the judgement, and partly the soule or whole man: the former I call simple conviction, the latter conviction with terror. Touching the difference whereof note well. When once the soule is throughly enlightned, if the Law proceed in her worke, thee comes to apply her light to this convincing of the soule: and first, by causing the conscience to joyne against it selfe, and to say, Thou art

the man: this differs from light, bee it never so particular, because it is light with application to the soules selfe in speciall. Againe, having beene thus convinced in conscience, I am this sinner, if the Law still worke, it proceeds to the second degree of convincing, Which is not onely an application of sinne to her selfe, but a due yeelding of the soule to lye under the bondage and feare of punishment belonging to such a sinners wofull estate. A man may heare, and not so much as be enlightned. He may have great light, and yet never be convinced in conscience. He may be convinced, and yet never be duly held under any true bondage, as wee see in Saul and others. But the Law workes all, if duely applyed in her severall workes.

Q. What then is this worke of Conviction by the Law, which you call, of the judgement?

A. It is the second worke of the Ministery of the Law, by the efficacy whereof, the soule beleeves her selfe to bee that which shee knowes, to wit this sinfull and cursed one. A most powerfull worke! yet no other than the poore Minister of GOD enabled by the authority of the Law may and doth performe. For why? When the poore soule sees that the Lord hath reacht her out the Key of light to see the wonders of his Law, to no idle ends, but that hereby shee might goe further, and apply it to her selfe, confessing her selfe to bee the partie: what hath shee to doe, save to let all other guiltie ones passe, and to passe sentence upon her self, confessing she is this miserable sinner? Neither can any thing hinder this proceeding, except it bee a lewd heart that is unwilling to put her neck in the coller, and so detaines the truth and light of the Law in unrighteousnesse. But if the Law can prevaile, this light shall proove beleeving and conviction, See Ephes. 5. 13. where the Apostle saith, The light doth argue or convince. For that disputes thus, That soule which is thus sinfull and cursed, is truly miserable, and so abides of her selfe. But I am thus sinfull and cursed, Therefore, &c. The assumption is conviction. The conclusion is terror. Conviction argues so strongly against her selfe, that shee reflects the light of the Law upon her conscience, making it her accuser and Iudge, and stopping the mouth of the heart from gainsaying, or kicking against the pricks. Thus was it with Paul, Act. 9. hearing that voice, I am Iesus whom thou persecutest; he fell downe and asked, True, Lord, what wilt thou have

Act. 9. 5.

Act. 2.38. have me to doe? Thus the murtherers of Christ were convinced by Peter, They were pricked in their hearts. This followed the beleeving the fact, Surely we have pierced the Lord of life. This was ſignified in the handling of the Leper, after the due view of the Prieſt, Levit. 13.45. he was to lay it to his heart, and cry out, Vncleane, vncleane. To this purpoſe, Paul ſpeaketh, 1 Cor. 14. 28. But if yee ſpeake in a knowne tongue, if an Idiot come in, he is convinced of all, and cryes out God is in you of a truth, I am a woefull wretch. Thus Peter was in ſpeciall convinced of his baſeneſſe, Luke 5. 8. Lord depart from mee, a ſinfull man, And David by Nathan, 2 Sam. 12. 13. I have ſinned. So 1 Cor. 4.2,4. Wee manifeſt our ſelves to the conſciences of all men: that is, preach ſo that we may convince you of the truth. So Ioh. 16.8. The Spirit, (meaning in the Miniſters of the Law) ſhall convince the world of ſin: their conſcience ſhall not be able to reſiſt the truth of it.

Levit. 13.45. 1 Cor. 14.28. Luk. 5.8. 2 Sam. 12.13 1 Cor. 4.2.4 Ioh. 16.8.

Q. How doth the Law effect this conviction?

A. As in the former worke it remooved darkneſſe: ſo in this it remooves three lets, eſpeially: Firſt, Deadneſſe of ſpirit, Secondly, Sloth and eaſe. Thirdly, ſubtiltie and hollowneſſe: And contrarily puts a quickning, and a diligent, and plaine conſent to the light, into the ſoule. Theſe it doth by a further power of the ordinance: by the benefit of the key of light, grappling with the ſpirit of the mind, and wreſtling with it to unlocke the barre of it and ſet it wide open, that it may confeſſe her ſelfe to be this partie.

How the Law convinces. 1. By remooving Lets.

Q. What cauſeth this deadneſſe and hardneſſe in the ſpirit, to be convinced?

A. Love of luſts and cuſtome therein with delight, doth defile and beſot the powers of the mind, that as one buſie in his game, doth not liſten to a ſad tale: ſo neither doth this minde the end of the Law in enlightning. That which our Saviour, Iohn 3.19.20. ſpeakes of evill workes, that They will not come at the light: may be as truely ſayd of this alſo. They will not ſuffer the light to come at them, in the reflexe, application, and ſeaſure of Conſcience. It is as if an unhappy boy, while one is grafting a tree, ſhould throw a little pebble between the clift, that the ſyen and the ſtocke might warpe aſunder. So here: corrupt luſts by the ſweetneſſe doe let the Word (although clearely knowne) from cloſing with the conſcience, ſo that the Law and the ſoule are two, and come not home one to the other.

1. Deadneſſe:

Q. What is ſloth and eaſe?

A. Looſe incogitancy and careleſſeneſſe, by which men runne up and downe with light, as the dog with his chaine broken looſe. So doth a ſlothfull heart even cut its owne throat; as Solomon ſayth, Eaſe ſlayeth the foole. To this purpoſe Saint Iames ſayth, Hee is as a foole, that beholds his naturall face in the Glaſſe, and the ſpots of it, but forgets that they are his ſpots. If he did minde them, hee would be afraid to ſhew them: and would goe waſh them off. The obedience to this hard convincing Maſter, is harſh: men are content to forget it: at leaſt, that goeth out of minde alone, through lothneſſe to fall to it, and then comes the Devill, and puts in buſineſſe that muſt be done, pleaſures, company, when yet the heart ſayth, There is a better worke would be done; and indeede, if it were pleaſing to the fleſh, it would plead to be done. But now eaſe and libertie plead againſt it, and put it off, ſaying, One day I will be ſerious, but the heart is daily worſe and worſe to it. For why? All other worke ſhould be ſet aſide, to follow this, while the heart is upon kindling of thoughts and deſires to it: leſt the quenching of this ſpirit doe make the heart utterly unſavoury to it. Thus *Matth.*13.7. Cares of the world, and pleaſures choke the Word that it dyes. Oh, men ſay, They cannot dwell upon a thing ſo long! But it is your giddineſſe and vanitie, which ſees not what a Iewell they forgoe for a ſhadow, which after will ſting them without remedie. As the Prophet ſayd to him who let his priſoner go which was to be kept, excuſing it, That while he was talking of this and that, he ſlipt from him. Thy life ſhall goe for his. So I ſay, This vanitie and eaſe will ſlay the foole. 2. Sloth. Pro.1.32. Iam.1.24 Mat.13.7 1 King.20.40

Q. What is ſubtiltie and ſlyneſſe?

A. The worſe of the three, viz. when men pretend that they have received the light to beleeve it: but they lye, and their falſe hearts are defiled with ſome ſecret roote of bitterneſſe, which will not ſuffer them to be plaine. Examples are plentifull. When Balaam would needes goe with the men, againſt Gods charge, the Lord ſet his Aſſe to convince his folly: and againe the Angell ſtopt his way, ſo that hee daſht his foote againſt the wall. And thirdly, the Lord oppoſed him: but hee was ſo ſet upon his wages, that hee an- 3. swered his very Asse, and smote her. What was the cause, but a false heart, pretending to doe no other than God bad him, but in truth meaning nothing lesse? The like estate are all hypocrites in, who have their pangs and devotions, oft promising that they will doe as the light calls for: but in secret keepe a false measure, and sooth up themselves, as they are, wanting truth to doe it. And there is nothing more perilous than this, to dally with sinne under pretext of religion and zeale, when yet the heart is utterly loth to take the point of this knife into it.

Q. How doth the Ministery of the Law grapple with these?

How the Law grapples with these?

A. By jogging the soule, and not suffering her to be any of these, but being more forcible in setting the Word home to the soule, and breaking open that locke which will not shoot of her selfe. Some view of this briefly I will give to the Reader, and so come to the use. Thus then: the Lord doth ayme at this (where he will convince) not to suffer the soule to lye in her halfe convincings, but beats her off from all her subtill shifts, washes off her colours, and puts her to silence, that shee hath no more to gainesay: and this he doth many wayes.

1. Way.

First, By entring into a solemne judiciall course with the soule, and applying the light to her by particular evidence giving in against her, that shee is this childe of death. Take an example. While the Thiefe heares the Iudge give his charge to the Country, and enlighten the Country in the Law of the Land, hee gives way to all, but is no whit troubled, because its not brought home to himselfe, but in generall spoken against all theeves, murtherers, &c. But when the Iayle is delivered, this Thiefe called and examined, how then? will his pleading not guiltie, serve the turne? No, The Iudge cals the witnesse, reades the confession, sends out the Iury, who bring in a verdict against him. And how then? Oh! then he is convinced and cannot deny, but grants, I stole it, my Lord, I brake the house, I shed bloud. Thus the Lord deales here: will not let the sinner alone, but dogs him with his light: doest not thou remember the time, the place, the odiousnesse of such a villany? Canst thou deny it? Speake truth and shame the Devill! I know thou hast no power to deny: confesse it then and discharge charge thy conscience, give God the Glory. Oh! when the Lord meanes to goe throughly to worke, hee will suffer no lust, no sloth or falshood to keepe off the soule from her light: But (will she, nill she,) she shall not onely, almost, but altogether be convinced. Now, to bring the light and the soule close together, is the great wisdome of the Spirit in the Ministery of the Law. Sometimes hee first insinuates into the heart, by slight and cunning, and traps the soule ere it be aware, in his net. Thus Nathan comes upon David with a parable of another matter, that hee might the more freely speake his minde: and having so wound in, fals upon him unavoydably, Thou art the man. Severall convincements. 1

Secondly, Sometimes hee takes the soule napping in the midst and heate of her sinne, while the sent is fresh: Thus hee dealt with Saul: would not suffer him to lye three or foure times over. First, I have obeyed. Secondly, These were reserved for sacrifice, the rest slaine. Thirdly, I feared the people, &c. None of his tricks would serve, What then meanes the bleating of Sheepe, and lowing of Oxen? Can dead Cattell bleat and low? He tooke him in the manner. 2 1 Sam. 15.

So thirdly, By contesting with conscience, and urging her to speake truth upon her experience, Rom. 6. 21. What fruit had yee of those things, whereof yee are now ashamed, &c. Now, in all these insinuations, the life of the convincing Law is unspeakeably forcible, especially the Lord presenting himselfe, and speaking to a soule willing to learne 3

Secondly, A second course is Violence and Necessitie, when no other course will serve. This the Lord doth by his Threats apart, and sometimes by the Addition of some workes convince. Thus when Saul would hardly yeeld to Samuels words, hee falls upon him thus, The Lord hath rent thy Kingdome from thee, &c. this rent him from his base colours! So that sometime the subtillest hypocrite must cry out, God hath gone beyond him! Thus Iosh. 7. No way to get out the sacrilegious thiefe, but violence. The Lord therefore causes the lot to be cast; and first finds out the Tribe that hee was of. This would not search him. Next, he casts a second for the Family in grosse: neither could this prevaile. The third time hee knockes at his Fathers doore; that would not serve. The last lot lights upon Achans necke. And then, My sonne 2 Way. See 1 Sam. 13 Iosh. 7. 19.

Iosh.7.19. some confesse, &c. But before, there was no convincing him. So the Lord is faine to cast a direct lot upon mens consciences, and so closely to sting them, that they are forced to cry out, and can forbeare no longer: I am the man: the lot is Luk.14. faine upon mee! Thus was it with him who was pulled out Matth.22.12. from his fellowes, for want of his wedding garment. Thus God dealt with the crazy consciences of those brethren of Ioseph: they were faine to be arrested upon hiew and cry as theeves, bound and cast into prison, threatned as spies, ere they were meet to be convinced for selling Ioseph: and then Gen 42.21, they could say, This is, because we heard the voyce of our brother in the pit, and would not pittie him. Thirdly, the Lord sometimes is faine to circumvent a sinner in his owne course, and to bring forth the long-concealed markes of his sinne to Gen 38.29. his face; bidding him deny if he dare. Thus Tamar dealt with Iuda in his hypocriticall severitie: If I must needs be burnt, sayth shee, then goe carry him those tokens, his Cloake, Staffe, and Signet, asking, whose they are? and then, Oh, shee is more righteous than I! I instance not in these as if they were close examples of this kinde: but to shadow out the truth. So al-
2 Chron.33.11 so, sometimes by crosses. Thus Manasseh is said to be taken in the bushes: meaning, that when God hampered him with sorrow and affliction, hee began to come home to himselfe. So the prodigall. And truly without such helpe, the Word workes but little in these dayes, in which the Spirit of Luk.15.29. Grace and mourning is streightned. And lastly, sometime by patience and long-suffering, strange deliverances, great Iere.31.18. blessings (even in the worst estate) the Lord workes some convincement, as Rom.2.3.4. And thus Saul (in a pang) was 1 Sam.24.19. convinced by Davids innocency: Come againe! Who will meet his enemy, and let him goe? And that poore blinde wretch, Matt.17.25. Iohn 9. by his cure, when yet he felt no mercy. These I give
27. as a taste, to shew how the Lord pierces the dead-lazy and fabull heart of such as having knowledge, yet, else, would vanish away in their owne misery. By these, aime at the rest.

Q. What use make ye of this second worke?

A. Very weighty.

Vse.1. First, of sad mourning for the daies wee are in, in which this spirit of the law seemes to be lost: even as the Arke, and Ephod were in the daies of the second Temple. Oh! It is heavy to ponder, how few consciences are rowzed up and gastred from their dregs, under Ministeries of 7. 10. 20. yeares continuance! But still the same men, and change no colour. Wee dreame that wee shall one day meet with it, as if it were some others error, not ours, that our hearts are so lockt up! But alas! we are closely imbarkt in a secure ease, as that woman, who notwithstanding her vile life, yet scorned and flouted away the convincing of Christ, till he pierced her to the quicke. Ioh.4.10. Oh, let us looke to it in time, in Gods feare! Tremble to thinke how thicke conviction is sowne, and how thin it comes up! Doubtlesse if conviction must be the picklock, the body of people are fast locked up in their sinnes! Men give good words, as Nephtali: but as light and feathery as ever! When Oh Lord, (shouldst thou say) shall that showre come, that shall fetch up the graine of my light, from under my dry clod? Alas! dayes of Law conviction are past long agoe, we are for nothing but promises! If we should goe onely by sence, we might cease preaching! And sure, a good Minister should tremble to preach many promises, (as some doe seeing so little conviction,) least hee should deceive them. Gen.49.21.

Admonition both to Ministers and people. Vse.2: Branch 1. First, to Ministers; that they pray and strive for the Spirit of conviction. Its Gods gift. And one chiefe part is, to be Ministers of the Spirit, not the letter: The manner of our dispensation is more than our voyce, and as much as our matter. Wee should labour to be so honest in our way, sincere, loving, faithfull, tender to soules; denying our selves, and sealing the truth by our sufferings, not pulling downe that wee have seemed to set up: bearing the privy marke of that wee Preach, in the authority of our words, and the stampe of conviction in our selves, that wee might not wrong the Word we teach. It is not the roling of speech, our lowd words, but sincerity and simplenesse of our scope, that must prevaile, as Paul saith, 2 Cor. 4. 2. 3. Oh, tell men, If any heare the words of this Law, and blesse themselves with peace. Gods wrath shall smoake against such! Doe not blanch, doe not dawbe with bad morter, sow no pillowes: but rather plucke off mens mufflers and vizors, and cry as those Boanerges did, Awake oh dead, slothfull, subtill heart! 2 Cor.4.2. Deut.29.

Be not beaten off from this, by the peoples unthankfulnesse, and repining; plow we with Gods Heifer, and hee shall teach our tongues this Logicke. Studie we our selves first, then the Scriptures, and the Spirit of convincement shall follow us, which the world shall not resist. Wee shall be a sweet savour to God in all: both who are saved, and who perish, if we doe thus: else, wee shall pay for their bloud. Suffer no Sycophant to disswade us, as he did Mishaia. Though the wicked will say, Wee are informed, and have plowed with other mens heyfers: and wee never speake well to them; yet in the end, faithfull witnesses shall be honoured.

Exo. 33. 3. 4. 1 King. 22.

Branch 2. Secondly, See, the people must be warned to shake off their lets of conviction. Let the righteous smite you: it shall bee as balme. Thus Abigail was welcome to Dauid. The poore man, whose impostume was let out by an enemy, fared better by him, than by all his Physitians. Hunt out those three enemies before, and adde a fourth of selfe-love. It is an Adder, which will not heare the voyce of the charmer. The sweetnesse of usury, pleasures, lawfull liberties, ease, will be a Dalila, to keepe off the least conviction of the Law: How can I want such a sinne! Who can prove such a gainful lust to be so sinfull? Surely hee will sting thee with it, as Dalila did Sampson, (when the sweet is past) who now so enchants thee; and then most of all, when thou cryest, The bitternesse of death is past. Againe, thinke not each pang, or glimse of light, or holding of a truth to be conviction: For so the Devill will betray thee, if ever thou be called to suffer. Nay, in thy ordinary course, thou wilt confesse a Christ, but deny him before a Papist: Thou wilt say, Thy soule is more worth than the World, but stake it for a groat: Conviction is no opinion, but the ouer powring of the Conscience. If the truth be no stronger than the Soules resistance, there is no Conviction; The Martyrs gave their blood for Transubstantiation: Which they had never done, had they not seene and beene convinced of the issue of it.

A fourth Let to be added to the former viz. Selfe-love.

Vse. 3. Thirdly, Examine thy selfe about this weighty worke of the Law, that thou mayst hope to goe on more safely. Try it by these markes. First, By the love of a convincing Ministery, and loathing of the contrary. Secondly, A clearing of God, and the righteousnesse of his Law: call thy selfe the slave sold under sinne. As hee to Achan, Give glory to GOD Hug the Chirurgion that lanched thee. Thirdly, Shame and confusion for sinne, Dan.9. The Publican durst not looke up. Peter bids Christ depart, for hee was utterly confounded at the power of Christ. Thus they in Ezra 10. under the raine of Heaven, so thou under this showre, Rom. 6. 21. What fruit had yee of those things? Fourthly, By thy thankes to GOD, (1 Cor. 14.25. God is in you of a truth,) for this mercifull worke. Fifthly, Be thou under thy confusion, till God raise thee up, Habac. 3. let rottennesse enter into thy bones, that peace may be in the day of trouble. Crust not over thy sore: waxe not weary of this worke of God, as most doe. A man once throughly shamed and confessing, is hardly after defiled. Lastly, let it end in true consternation of soule, and terror for thy sinne: of which we are to speake. Thus farre of Conviction of judgement.

Ioſh.7.28. 3 Dan.9.5.6. Ezra.10. 4 1 Cor.14.25. 5 Hab.3.16. 6

Q. What is the second worke of conviction?

A. The second is of the whole soule called terror and bondage. For when the former worke of conviction hath prevailed: it workes thus, that such a soule is as under an arrest, and seeing it selfe this sinner, this cursed one: hee is thereby killed, and the spirit brought into terror and bondage. And this the Lord sees meet to add to the former, for else as a dog with his chaine loose, so the conscience runnes riot with the worke of bare knowledge of sinne. But if the dogge be fastned to his chaine, hee is vnder custody. And this is that which is so oft spoken of in *Rom.*7 when Paul saith, When the Law came, I dyed. Meaning in spirit and in Conscience. That selfe of jollitie, ease and securitie which sinne afforded, was nipt and quasht; and in stead of it, a sad item given to the soule, taking away the taste of her morsels, mixing the gall of Aspes with her drinke, and stinging her as an Adder, and stabbing her to the heart as a sword, for her convinced villanies; yea and none more than this body of death, which still dogges her and wounds her as fast as she licks her selfe whole with all her duties, or abstinences, and workes, and shifts, prooving her a slave sold under misery, and shewing her a nature, a world of sinne and woe, to beare downe all her morallitie and hypocrisie. An heart under this bondage cannot be stild with Rattles: the Spring comes so fast, that there is no stopping it by the wit of man, till a stronger streame turne it backe. The like speech is that, Sinne by the Law slew mee. Hee meanes not any mortification, but hee touches upon that point of the jollinesse of a sinner, who (that sinne might be out of measure sinfull) prides himselfe in his estate. This pride the law resists, lets out the rankenesse of it, and abases it with terror of hell and wrath. And that in so great measure of times, that when God leaves them from hope they wickedly bereave themselves of life. And yet this terrour is not grace: but in the elect a seed of it: without which the Lord were no more fit to treat with them about salvation, than a Smith to meddle with a wilde horse: but when he hath cast him, hee can handle him at pleasure. This worke in Scripture is called the Spirit of feare, or Bondage: not bondage to sinne, but by it: whereby, as they who are prisoners under chaines, doe lie in sorrow and horror without escape or hope, so doe these. Their spirit is enslaved to feare, their conscience to guilt, accusation, to the whip of wrath and justice, yea crusht downe to Hell by the torment of such a spirit, as cannot sustaine it selfe for the restlesse anguish thereof, but abides and hangs betweene earth and Hell.

Rom. 7. 10.

Rom. 8. 20.

Q. Seeing this poynt of legall terrour is one of the maine poynts of this first part, tell me how many things make for the understanding of it?

Explication of Terror, by three things.

A. Three things especially. First, the difference. Secondly, The nature, the effects, and end of it. Thirdly, The extremities or abuse of it.

Q. What is the difference of it from the former legall workes?

I By differencing it from the former conviction.

A. The worke of enlightning casts out ignorance: the worke of convincing, resists deadnesse and insensiblenesse. But this third of consternation or terrour, resists that pride and jollitie of a sinner, overbearing himselfe and lifting up himselfe in his sinne without checke or remorse. And this latter is of all other the most proper worke of the Law, to tame and beate downe the loftie heart of man, setting up a Law to it selfe to walke as it listeth without Law, or feare: it is as Leviathan pulling downe all children of pride.

Q. What is the nature of it?

2 It is a presenting (more or lesse) of the wrath and penalties penalties due to sinne, unto the whole man, by the conscience, for the casting of it downe at the feete of God. Marke these heads. Eirst, Its a presenting: for the dead bare letter of the ten Commandements cannot doe this by any magicall power: No, its the worke of the powerfull Ministery of the Law, which can doe it. The Lord, who put the former gift of conviction into it, puts this also of subduing and casting downe, into this Law Ministery. Although in appearance it be weake, yet God setting it on worke with the authoritie of his Spirit, with power to carry his errand into the soule, it shall be able without feare or flattery to doe it, and to doe that which no Law of Princes can effect, even to flait and gaster the conscience. Lawes of men are absent; but this Law is presented by God to the soule. From him it first came, and by him it was given in terror and earth-quakes by strong Angels, to master the proud heart of man: and is still pronounced and presented to the same, upon the mount Ebal of the legall Ministery in the open assembly: as it came therefore from God, so it is supported in her power by God, and serves for his use: in all places to arrest and cast downe all sinners, and carry them to prison under sentence, at the Iudges pleasure. 2. By the nature of it. The parts of the description. 1.

Secondly, It doth present the wrath and penalties of sinne especially. Till these come, sinne is at peace: Even as the fellon while the Iudge is reading his commission, or giving his charge, or calling a Iury, or hearing the crime debated: but when the thiefe sees more, that hee hath power to give oath, take evidence and verdict, and pronounce sentence of death, presenting the messengers of it to the eye, the knife, the hatchet, the fire, the halter; then his courage comes downe. The Law in her Ministry is this voyce of God, and Iudge of a sinner: therefore called the Ministery of the letter, the messenger of wrath, the law of sinne and death, Rom. 8. 2. Not of the wrath of a man against a man, but of God against a sinner; not able to kill the body, but to cast body and soule into hell. This law curseth from Gods mouth every stale sinner, soked in his lees: Cursed be every one that abides not in all things to doe them: cursed from God be every lyar, swearer, adulterer, hypocrite, worldling: desolation, and destruction, tribulation and anguish be upon every soule that sinnes, high and low, without bayle or mainprise: and 2. if if God curſe, curſed they are, and who ſhall bleſſe them? It is no curſe of a ſinner upon a ſinner, no Popes curſe with booke, bell and candle, (which yet made Kings to tremble & made them as blacke as ſoote, in the opinion of fooles) no not the curſe of a Father, (which may turne to a bleſſing, as Iacobs did to Simeon and Levi) but the curſe of the eternall God, whoſe wrath is the meſſenger of death, and blaſteth indeed whereſoever it lighteth, and whatſoever reſiſts it. This wrath, I ſay (marke well) in the penalties of it, temporall, ſpirituall, and eternall, the Law preſents to a ſinfull ſoule. Temporall in this life, reade Deut. 29. ſetting God againſt the ſoule in all her courſe, walking contrary to her, becauſe ſhee hath walked ſo to him, vexing her with all adverſity, and ſuffering nothing to goe currant (either in one kinde or other) marriage croſſed, children curſed, untoward, ſucceſſe naught, God againſt me in all. Spirituall, and farre worſe penalties in the ſoule, deſerting it and leaving it to her impenitency, ſecurity, hardneſſe, obſtinacy, which is Gods curſe under ſeale, Lam. 3. 65. as a Bayliffe holding under arreſt, even till hell: eternall at death, even a ſeparation from the preſence of God, and a tormenting of it for ever in hell, in the fulneſſe of this wrath, which inded is the dying the death, and yet never dead, without hope, eaſe, or remedy.

Deut. 29.
Levit. 26. 24.
2 Chro. 15. 6.
Lam. 3. 65.

Thirdly, Seazing upon the whole man, by the conſcience: for as the Law is the worker, ſo the conſcience is the immediate object of this warth. God hath made it the lawes object: created it with a marvailous power of ſenſibleneſſe (above all parts) to record and to apprehend all ſinne and wrath for it: if God had not ſo ordained, it could never receive into it ſelfe ſo infinite wrath of Gods Iuſtice, as now it can: It exceeds the apprehenſion of any the tendreſt part, when its ſtung with an Adder, ſcalded with water or boyling Oyle, burnt with fire, cut with a ſword: the ſence of conſcience ſeazed with this wrath of God, is unſpeakeable, and cannot be uttered by man; it cannot enter into man that feeles it not, to conceive the ſting and vexation of conſcience, being thus wounded for ſinne, in which its differenced from all other conſciences, either, firſt, Ignorant, erroneous and ſuperſtitious conſcience, not fearing, or fearing amiſſe. Secondly, defiled conſcience, dallying with God, halfe convinced, and halfe whole, hypocritically feeling God in ſome of his Law, but

but prevailing by ſubtilty againſt the reſt, that ſo it might ſhunne the dint thereof. Thirdly, Seared, and hardned conſcience, which by long rebellion and reſiſtance of the Law, hath got the maſtery of the Law, and is waxen ſenſleſſe and uſeleſſe, forgetting her Offices. I ſay, theſe are curſed, neither ſhall they avoide the dint of this Law, at the length, earlier or later their dog ſhall awake one day, and how ever they ſleepe, yet, 2 Pet. 2. 6. Their damnation ſleepes not. Only this conſcience (of which Solomon ſpeakes) Who can beare the load of it? This wounded conſcience differs from all theſe, and is the object of the Law, thus preſenting wrath to it, that by how much the more it ſeemes in worſe caſe than the other three: yet by this feeling of God, ſhee might in due time prove better than the beſt of them. And I ſay, conſcience is ſo the next object, that yet the whole man thereby partakes of this wrath: As Iob ſpeakes of himſelfe; Thy feares are upon me day and night: The arrowes of the Almightie ſticke faſt in me; Thou ſcareſt me with dreames and viſions, no reſt is in my fleſh for thee. And chap. 33. My bones clatter, and ſticke out, all daintie meate is loathſome, and hee is chaſtned with paine in the multitude of his bones, his life abhorres bread, his fleſh is conſumed, his ſoule drawes neere the grave, v. 19, 20, 21, 22. Oh, thus body and ſoule by ſympathy muſt ſtoop under wrath, when God frownes; all parts have ſinned, all muſt ſmart! Pſal. 39. 11. When thou art angry for ſinne, man is made as a garment moth-eaten! The Lord Ieſus himſelfe could not eſcape it, his ſoule was heavie to death, hee ſweat drops of blood, hee thought God quite gone from him! And yet this (at the worſt) is better than any other of the three I ſpake of. And this wee have ſeene and daily doe in men (in ſpite of theſe hardned times) the Lord breakes in upon ſome, and ſets the ſinnes of youth and age before them: Oh, that wee could ſee the fruit of it after! To this I adde, the Lord doth this more or leſſe in the ſoule. I purpoſely ſay ſo, becauſe God is not tyed in his courſe to any ſet meaſure, he can reſtraine or enlarge as hee pleaſes. Many under a good Miniſtery or teaching, have little felt this way of God, doubt of their humiliation: but if they can proove that the Lord hath hidden the violence of terror by long and frequent trayning, that here and there the LORD hath revealed himſelfe more or leſſe

to them, with fruit to be deſired, let it not trouble them. More uſually the Lord deales thus with ſoked ſinners, that they might vomit the morſels which they have long taken in: that by this courſe, their change might bee more apparant, and for ever theſe markes of God might abide in their fleſh to awe and bridle them; yet I ſay, God is not tyed: I have noted greater terrors in the choiſeſt educations (as the caſe hath ſtood) than in openeſt Prophaneneſſe.

The fourth point. Fourthly, and laſtly, I ſay the act of this Law, is in all this, to caſt downe the ſoule at the feet of God. For as I ſayd, there is in nature an intollerable bearing up of a mans ſelfe in his eſtate, a priding of himſelfe, boldneſſe, boaſting of his ſinne: he is ſo farre from being aſhamed, that till the Law come home to him thus; hee is alive, reade Rom. 7. 9. that is jolly, jocant, merry; as the foole that caſts arrowes, darts, and ſaith, Am I not in ſport? A ſinners Crowne is not his bare ſinne, in corners and by ſtealth: that is his woe, his law: but his crowne is his liberty of ſpirit in it, to doe what he liſt, to runne, ride, talke practiſe, to drinke ſweare, lye and cozen and no man may controll him: This is to be alive, (note the phraſe) and to ſay, my ſelfe am my owne, my tongue my owne, I am bound to none, (ſee Ioh. 8. ver. 33.) a freeman to go and doe as I liſt: as he ſaid, liberty is to live as a man liſt. The crown of a drunkard, or adulterer is, to revel and toſſe and defile himſelfe without feare: as the Pope, who may carry innumerable ſoules to hell with him, and who ſhall ſay, What doſt thou? Now I ſay this jollity and boldnes and pride in ſin, the Lord in his miniſtery of the law, reſiſts, and that he doth when by all I have ſpoken hee pulles downe this ſinner upon his knees, caſts his crowne in the dirt, diſmounts him as hee did Saul from his palfrey, Act. 9. and the deſperate Iaylour in his profaneneſſe and cruelty, and thoſe killers of Chriſt, Act. 2. ſaying Lord what wilt thou have mee to doe? Oh, then hath wrath ſeaſed upon the ſoule when it hath killed this jollitie, and let out this pleuriſie out of it! And hence its cald the ſacrificing knife, ſharper than any two edged ſword, the killing letter, that which ſlew Paul, not by mortification, but by ſhedding the bloud and bowells of ſinnes jollitie to the ground! Oh, when God comes into the conſcience, loe all is turned upſide downe, now I feel the vileneſſe of my pride, now the wrath of God is upon me, for my coveteouſneſſe: now I feele this fire in my bones, this ſting of a ſerpent: now I feele what it is to dare heaven, and to live like a maſterleſſe hound in the world! Oh when that is verified which Micaiah told Zedekiah, Thou ſhalt be glad in that day to runne from chamber to chamber to hide thee: then thy puſhing hornes thy ſcorne and pride ſhall be farre from thee: When the Lord ſhall make him that durſt act his parts upon any ſtage, now not to know what ground to ſtand upon, to become as if a mans body ſhould hang in the ayre, unſuſtained and reſtleſſe in it ſelfe, not to be able to weild himſelfe for the anguiſh, confuſion and agonies of a wounded ſpirit! Oh, then the Law hath done her part indeed, and tamed former liberty, and jollity in evill: Examples are not wanting hereof in all places, where this great Miniſter the Law hath become. But in the uſe I ſhall apply it. 1 Kin. 22. 25.

Q. And what ſecondly are the effects hereof uſually?

A. Among others theſe three apparantly. Firſt, Stoppage of a courſe in evill openly. Secondly, Inward unſettling of a rotten peace. Thirdly, Holding downe the ſoule under bondage. The effects of Terror three.

The firſt, ſtopping in a courſe of evill. This differs from that effect of Providence, whereby the Lord doth limit the number and meaſure of ſinne in the wicked, for the preſervation of peace and civill ſocietie: for though that be a divine worke yet its not the immediate worke of the Law: but either providence without a word, or elſe by the generall power of the word reſtraining ſin: but this is a ſpeciall kind of reſtraint, iſſuing from the worke of the Law for the good of the ſoule ſo reſtrained. And it is a lothſomneſſe of the ſoule, finding no joy in old courſes, beholding them with repenting and irking of thoughts, wiſhing them undone, and abhorring to returne to them through the terrour of conſcience, being under this whip of the Law. When horror lay upon Saul Act. 9. his letters in his pocket, and commiſſion from the Prieſts, and trade it ſelfe of Purſivantſhip was bitter: no more of that for the preſent. As the ague ſtirring the diſeaſed humors, makes that ſtomacke loath a Partridge, which before could have eaten ruſty bacon: ſo here, this terror makes the ſweeteſt ſinne loathed, which before devoured all. And although this be not grace, yet the Lord is laying a beginning thereof hereby in the ſoule, which in due ſeaſon may come to ſomewhat. I remember a pretty ſpeech of an Heathen in one of his Epiſtles ſaying: who being ſick dare do, as while 1. Stopping in evill. What it is not, and what it is Act. 9. 6.

while he is well? who then guzzles, or is uncleane, or railes or is covetous? That is much truer of this soule-sickneſſe: in which the ſtomacke hath more liſt to vomit then to eat! Now the reaſon of this worke is, becauſe while the ſoule is in her hurry, ſhee hath no care to heare God ſpeaking to her: ſhe is ſo buſie with her trade, that all is ſpoken as it were in her caſt. Beſides the Lord loaths to worke upon a ſoule, in the heat of her luſt: firſt he will frame her to his diſcipline, ere he beſtow any grace upon her. And rarely doth the Lord honour any bold revolting ſinner, during his courſe, till firſt hee have ſtopt him ſome time from it. So then, terror firſt turnes edge, and gets within and over-goes a ſinner in his way, as Zara over-takes Pharez in his haſtie iſſue out of the wombe.

Vſe. 1. The uſe briefly (that ſo I may be ſhort in the main uſe when I come to it) is, firſt not to imagine all reſtraints from evill to be grace; try them firſt: God entends them for good, but they are as farre from mortification, as a trembling or Lyon-couchant is from a dead one: The vileſt Harlot (that Roſamund in her vault) was actually kept from her uncleanneſſe as well as chaſt matrones: but her heart was as before, her principle was uncleane ſtill. Not the love of good, but loathing of evill reſtraines legally. For the time Judas was ſo farre from his peeces, that he chuſes to hang himſelfe rather then to fall to his trade. And therefore reſtraint onely is not to be reſted in: howbeit God, where he meanes to proceed ſavingly, doth reſtraine wholeſomely, if wee could judge: but ſeeing this is a ſecret, truſt not our ſelves or others herein, till the Lord hath by this ſtep trained us further. Rejoyce for the leaſt degree (as I confeſſe in ſuch a looſe debaucht age, reſtraint of ſome yong drunkards would ſeeme high Religion) its better to have halfe the loafe then no bread: but follow the Lord, in the favour of his Law, to a ſetting a true principle of pureneſſe and grace, and love, to renue and change thee, and to forſake ſinne, with a true abhorring, as hell.

Rom. 12. 9.

2. Effect. Shaking of a rotten peace.

Q. What is the ſecond effect of this legall conſternation?

A. Vnſettling and ſhaking the priſon-walls of rotten peace, in a ſinfull ſoule: I ſay, falſe, ſecure peace, which it takes to her ſelfe, and pleaſes her ſelfe in it, when God debarres her of all ſound peace, Eſay 57 ult. This is a fertile field to walke in, but I will bee ſhort. A ſinners life is his rotten peace, both without a law law, (by reason of his hurrying on from sinne to sinne, without leisure to call himselfe backe, and selfe-love, pleasing himselfe in the sight of his eyes, and the joy of his heart) and with, or under a lawby sundry practises and colours. 1. By nouzling himselfe under flattering meanes, such as are quiet and safe, and sowing pillowes, threatning no disturbance. 2. Withdrawing from stirring ones, and resisting them, and expelling them as Ahab did Elija and Michaiah his two enemies that never spake good to him. Markes of it. 1 2 1 Kin. 22.3. 3.

Eſa. 57. ult. What rotten peace is.

3. If conviction assault, yet holding it off with obstinate errour or profanenesse, and colouring with halfe yeelding: and shew of consent, the heart being rotten. The Law of God fights against all these, (having once the soule upon the hip and vantage of terror) and doth cleare the deluded bribed judgement, stabbes the heart for her long rottennesse and rest in it, rends off and sweeps down with the hand & besome of the Law, all the paper-walles and copweb devices shee had spunne; and utters it selfe both to her selfe and others, in deepe detestation against them. All that league of a rotten heart with sinne, selfe, hell and danger, Esa. 28.18. the Lord batters against the hard stones of terror, that it may be dasht in peeces. And do for the time it holds (except the soule shake it off) and therefore at the worst is infinitely better than all old peace. A just warre is to bee preferred to unjust peace alway: and the hardest day of terror to a mans conscience for all his old rex, is better than the sweetest he ever had in evill, and the pleasures of it. Oh, his companions, his excuses, colours and deceits are revealed to be hellish! the curtaine now is opened, and he sees them all meere Paint of an Harlot to keepe him in a spirituall fornication. Hee is now so farre from peace, that hee sees hell gaping upon him to devoure him for his sweete pleasures! Let the use bee treble. Esay 28.18.

First, Iudge thy selfe, if thou bee not yet come thus farre, that thy false peace is broken off by the Law, thou art in wofull case, and the man thou wert wont. Oh, how few other doe we meet with, in our Ministery! Men wil do much to be well thought of by other men, but take no paines for the Ministery of Gods Law to hunt out their soothing and hollow love of themselves: Alas, why doe yee spend time to nouzle your selves in selfe-love, which tenne times might bee better spent in bringing yee. Vses of this Branch. 1 yee out of conceit with your ſelves, and abhorring your rotten league that ſo the Lord might begin to thinke well of yee? But men cannot abide to be thought ill of: what doe ye thinke amiſſe of them? Even as the life of bankerouts is, to ſet a good face on it, and borrow what they can get and brace it out with their wealth, and goe brave in apparell, till ruine come: ſo here men occupy with a ſtock that is none of theirs, and yet ſcorne to have their ſtates ſuſpected, but are as good as the beſt of all others! Oh, falſe peace will bring yee to ruine at laſt! That yee would catch at, yee ſhall never get: but that yee do ſo ſhun, ye ſhall for ever meet with; utter ſhame with God and men, and deſtruction to your ſelves.

Vſe 2. Secondly, Labour for this worke of the Law, to pull yee down and bewray your falſe peace: try your ſelves by this, that now yee cry out of all dawbers with untempered morter, falſe Prophets, and preachers of peace, together with that Arch-falſe Prophet of ſelfe-love: and cling to the faithfull, and count their wounds Balme: as for your owne vanities, they have cauſed yee to forſake mercy.

Vſe 3. Laſtly, Let not this be enough that ye are brought thus farre; till Chriſt have wholly expelled that ſtrong man, who rules and lockes up the houſe in peace; and till he bring in a true bottome of peace into yee, by ſprinkling yee with his blood that ſpeakes better things than that of Abel. When this Sheriffe comes, hee will fetch out all dwellers in the houſe, and breake open all: happy are they to whom the Law brings this writ of ejection: eſpecially if the other Sheriffe of the Goſpell bring in a new and a ſound peace, for an eternall gueſt.

Q. What is the third effect of the Law?

The 3. Effect. Spirit of bondage. Rom. 8. 15. Heb 2. 15. Heb. 12. 25.

A. The Spirit of bondage, of which ſee Rom. 8. 15. Heb. 2. 15. and Heb. 12. 25. Ye are not come to mount Sinai, to thoſe terrors and ſmoke, which made Moſes himſelfe to ſay, I quake for feare: hee ſpeakes of the firſt condition under the Law: they were paſt a Taskemaſter and Schoolemaſter, and were come to mount Sion, and to the libertie of the firſt borne, &c. But here hee intimates how they came by it. Now this differs as much from meere feare, as a paſſage differs from an act.

What God aymes at in it.

The Lord ayming by this to hold and keepe the ſoule whom he will ſave, from all revolt to former luſt and liberties. The ſpirit of bondage is the frame of a fearefull heart, held under slavery and chaynes of the Law, from all escaping. As wee say, such a man hath the spirit of mirth, or covetousnesse in which hee is rooted. So in one place a woman is sayd to have a spirit of infirmitie, when her disease had so prevailed over her, that she was crazed by habit. So the spirit of bondage, Gal. 4. 7. is to be as one sold to it, that cannot get out. It might be wondred at, that the Lord should use such a course to doe the soule good: but considering our cursed base heart (which is like the slave, no longer to be in worke, than the whip is upon the backe:) it is no marvaile. Take a similitude. We know it is one thing to be rankt in the forlorne band which goes against the Cannon mouth: another to be beleaguered in a Cittie a long siege. The one looke at present danger, which when its over, they are past it: but in the Citie men are held under continuall feare: they see the image of Death before their face ten wayes; by famine, pestilence, sword; here one wall beaten downe, there another; here one slaine, there another; some dye of famine, and threaten the rest to follow: so here: to be under bondage, is to lye under chaynes, as Peter, under many keepers: by which meanes, frequent terrors assault daily more or lesse: and the soule is held to it, as poore Israel under bricke and clay. Never was this Taskemaster of more use than in these dayes, wherein men shunne legall feares, as Toades or Serpents, or if any come nigh them, they shake them off with violence. Its irksome to the flesh to be under the whip long: some way of breaking out of this house of Correction they devise, thinking themselves never well, till they be at their old libertie out of the hands of so hard a Master. But as it is with the breaker of the house of Correction or prison, his end is commonly to be hanged: so is it with such as despise this remedy of a licentious heart,

Gal. 4. 7.

Act. 12. 5.

Q. What use is to be made thereof?

A. First, Admonition, to beware that we rest not in this servile state. Whatsoever the Lord meanes to doe by it in time, when hee offers the Gospell to the soule, sure it is, this is no state to rest in. For why? It differs, from true feare as much as from true libertie. True feare, is the Loadstone to attract the soule to God, and to acquaint it with God; this rather (of it selfe) drives it away from God, especially if it be in any excesse. Secondly, This feare hath a respect to ſinne onely as an occaſion, to puniſhment as a cauſe. As wee ſee in the Slave who lookes not at his ſloth, but the whip. But the true filiall feare lookes at ſinne as the proper cauſe of feare, but a puniſhment as the occaſion. Thirdly, True feare ſoftens: this rather hardens and imbitters the heart: As wee ſee both in the examples of Ioſiah, who melted; and Ahab, who hardned his heart by his feare, and returned to his prankes. The feare of a condemned man is an hardner of him, but hee that heares of a pardon, relents at it preſently. Fourthly, It hath exceſſe in it, both for the conſtant aſſault of it without intermiſſion, in all places, duties, and occaſions: and alſo for the dangerous inconvenience it brings after it oft times: Hinders all fitneſſe of ſpirit, both to dutie, and in dutie, to calling, worſhip, libertie, ſolitarineſſe: defiles all, and is a ſpeciall ſparke to light upon the ſad and melancholike temper of the body, (which the Devill ſeldome fayles in) to make it flaſh up and blow up the whole frame of nature! yea even in the godly themſelves often its a maine enemy to faith, hope, or other graces or duties. Fifthly, And the truth is, looke how the feare of her that played the harlot, differs from the loyall wifes, ſo doth this from the feare of the regenerate: the one feares danger and hurt from her husband; the other reverences him from love. Saul feared David, becauſe he lookt for danger from him, no otherwiſe. Well ſayd Paul, We have not the ſpirit of feare.

First use of this point.

Vſe 2. And ſecondly, Let none here ſtumble at my deſcription of it: for although it be no better in it ſelfe, yet the Lord can moderate, qualifie, and correct it ſo, that it ſhall be a ſpeciall medicine to prepare the heart for that which lightneſſe and giddineſſe would diſable it from attayning. Pray therefore for a moderation of it, and a directing it to the end which God intends it for: and the leſſe good is in it, of it ſelfe, the more adore his wiſedome who uſes it to good both in the reſtraint of evill, and the preparing of the heart to more ſtayednesſe and ſobrietie. Other uſes ſhall follow of the whole doctrine in due place.

Q. What is the end of God in this worke of the Law?

God's end in ſetting his Law on worke.

A. To make way for a ſinners reconciliation, which otherwiſe were not poſſible to worke. As ſoone catch an Hare with a Taber, as a wilde wilfull ſinner by the charme of the Gospell. That woman of Samaria scoffed at Christ telling him the well was deepe, and there was no bucket. But when hee had well tozed her, she changed her humour: See Iob. 33.23. If then, (after long terrors) there be an interpreter one of a thousand, to declare to man his Reconciliation: he will be good to him, and be entreated, saying, Deliver him, I have accepted a ransome. But how appeares this? Doubtlesse hitherto appeares no such things in all this tedious Law-course: no, as the Law is for her use, so is the Gospell for hers: neither intimating other, but opposite save in the intent of the ordeiner. But if we looke thereat, we shall in sundry respects confesse this a most wise and fit way to bring on the remedie. Iohn 4. Iob 33.23.

First, by this meanes, God joynes all wholesome Doctrine together. For it is not his purpose to leave the soule in this case, to seeke out of her selfe after ease, seeing its not in her power: But he himselfe will have his Minister to joyne all Doctrines together in the order of Catechisme: both of remedy and misery, in their due order. Not because all that heare them, can for the present apply them, but that hereafter they might: and the whiles want nothing which might set them on worke. How this appeares. 1

Secondly, by this consternation, hee doth tyre and weary the spirits as in a Labyrinth, working them to an utter hopelesnesse in themselves to be better: that in such a case, the least inkling of mercy might be as newes out of a farre Country. 2

Thirdly, That by the heare-say of it, their hearts might be raysed up to make serious inquisition after it, and not to perish in their misery: When the prodigall was brought to huskes at the trough: then, and never till then, the notion of a father pierced him really. When those Lepers saw their lives past hope, they resolved thus; If we sit here, wee are but dead men: and we can be no worse by the Aramites, than by famine. So, they made into their Campe. Thus doth a cast-downe-troubled sinner resolve to doe. If there be a way of possible escape, the matter is not now whether I shall finde it: but, I know I shall surely perish without it: and sure I cannot bee worse than I am: I may be better: I will venture the tryall, and my selfe upon the Promise. 3 2 King. 7.

The use briefly is, First, To observe how God prevents a sinner by this wisedome. For what is all the complaint of a poore Vse of this particular. 1.

poore soule when the promise is offred? Oh, its true, if I were loden, I doubt not of ease! Thou lyest against thy selfe, thou doest doubt of ease by the promise: for of the former thou canst not doubt, having beene enlightned, cast downe and convinced by the Law. That then which is the more easie to grant, the Lords workes first, as a part of the condition of Grace (for even legall bondage is the first part of it) that is, to be loden: that when the harder comes to be urged, that is, Faith, the Condition already wrought, might be ready to comfort the poore soule.

2 Secondly, Wonder therefore at this wisedome, which most fitly to the soules condition, doth even worke by contraries, life out of death, and order out of confusion, and descant not by carnall reason against it.

3 Thirdly and lastly, In all the Ministery of the Word, let the Minister and people of GOD, still fixe their eye upon the scope of GOD, mooving onwards with him; and going even pace with his ordinance, for the effecting of his owne ends, and the glory of his Grace, in our salvation. Let us both so teach, and so heare, that still the Starre may guide us, and then our journey shall not be tedious to us, how long so ever, because it is our way.

Q. Conclude with the extremities and abuses of this legall worke.

The 3. generall. The extremities. 2. A Presumption. The 1. kinde.

A. First, for the extremities, they are two, legall presumption, and finall despaire. Touching the first, I call it Legall, because there is another and more dangerous one by the Gospell. This presumption is two-fold. One this, when the sinner waxes bold and venturous to shake off this yoke of the Law, before his spirit bee convinced and cast downe. And this is that solemne Caveat, Deut. 29. 19. Deut. 29. If any shall applaud himselfe (hearing the curse) and say, I shall have peace, adding drunkennesse to thirst: the wrath of GOD shall smoke against such a man. Such there are then, yea surely: bondage is of it selfe irkesome, but when it meetes with a bold heart, and is not set home by the Law: commonly it provokes wearinesse; and then, seeing that GOD seconds not his Word alway with plagues and death, and curses indeede: the deferring of sentence, sets the heart on gog to evill, and perhaps worse than before. Thus Psalme 50. 19. the hypocrite

Psal. 50. 19.

growes

grewes to thinke God to be like himselfe. This sinne made Adam, and all us cursed, even presumption against threats. Oh, when we thus fall to our old trade, the Devill falls to his, and finding the soule thus swept, returnes with seven worse than himselfe. Let us tremble at it, and learne to inure our selves to heare all threats with feare. Learne to beleeve this doctrine, which I have at large described. I speake not now of saving faith, but against presumptuous boldnesse against the Law. To credit the Word to be Gods, who cannot lye, may fall into a supernaturall conviction, although not yet saving. Matth. 12. 45

The second presumption is, When the consternation of the Law, seazing without the addition of the Gospell, causes the soule to waxe confident of it owne welfare, because it hath beene humbled, and perhaps holds some impression of it still, not daring to resist her light. But this is rare, and where it is, dangerous: for its a signe that the heart is secretly false: Rest in no checkes of conscience, where conscience her selfe is not first purged, both to checke and also to excuse and comfort the soule in the satisfaction of Christ. The second kinde.

Q. What is Desperation?

A. The other contrary, offending as much on the left hand, through the excesse of terror. Thus Saul and Judas. And it commonly growes from the first: Satan never seeking more to poyson with presumption, and dalliance with the Law, than where hee meanes to snare with the contrary of despaire. How oft was Saul convinced of his malice and persecution? But returning to his vomit, brought soule and body to a desperate end. So Cain and Judas by their hideous sinnes brought themselves to this, that mercy and Christ were not able to doe them good: their sinnes were growne beyond forgivenesse! A woefull fruit of boldnesse! And yet just: for hee who will undervalue grace in the worth thereof, is justly left to overvalue sinne in the merit of it. Hee that never can finde season to beleeve the Word being offered, is justly left to seeke it with violence when the season is over. And so, either its never time with them (as hee spake of marriage) or else past time. Many compare these sinnes each with other curiously: but the wiser way is to prevent both, and the latter in the former. Doubtlesse it is the sinne of the damned, to live in the perpetuall despaire of release; and in perswasion that The second extremitie is Despaire, that Grace is unable to doe them good. Let us know, farre worse sinnes than these may destroy: let us never presume to venture, so farre as to dye by these.

Vse of this point. 1 And for use of the point, learne we daily to roote this cursed Roote of bitternesse out of us: by two things ensuing: First, A spirit of humilitie and feare to keepe our selves under the bondage of our Schoole-master, rather than to affect the libertie of presumers! and in so doing to beseech the Lord to proportion out our stripes according to our strength, and to keepe our despaire within the compasse of our selves, and any thing in us; but to be farre from the least thought of enlarging our basenesse, above the infinitenesse of mercy.

2 Secondly, To nourish in our hearts above all, those Meditations of Mercy and Grace in Christ, which may set us upon a Rocke above our selves, and all fearefull distrust, and carry us in the streame thereof with holy irresistablenesse. Frequent, holy and loving thoughts of God, are the surest remedies against this hideous monster!

Q. What, lastly, is the abuse of this worke of the Law?

A. Double, each contrary to the other.

The Abuse of it. 1 First, On the right hand many (not of the worst) abuse it, when they nourish themselves in a needlesse bondage, whereas they know that they are in case to hearken after the remedy, and will not: pretending they have not yet been cast downe or troubled enough. What madnesse is this to nourish a disease against Physicke? or to thinke that our trouble pleaseth God? or to thinke that to be of substance of Grace, which onely is for preparation unto it? And yet many sullen and Melancholicke ones, are thus abused by Satan, to thinke their Babel and captivitie, yea their Hell, another Heaven! Let them rather haste themselves out of it, when God cals them, and know the Lord loves a cheerefull giver. So farre should they be from censuring others, who welter not (as themselves) under their bondage. He is cast downe enough, who is in case to heare of raising up, so hee deceive not himselfe in the soundnesse of it.

2 Secondly, on the left hand, those doe farre worse abuse this doctrine, who being weary of terror and bondage, as soone as they fall into it, cast with themselves, how they may shake it off, pretending that this is no estate to serve

God

God in: And so, they returne some to their sport and pastimes, some their pleasures, some their profits, some their old companions, some proove more desperate worldlings, and others with Cain to build them Cities, and while out their time here with singing sad thoughts away: Let these know, that the course they take, is violent, and much like to them, who to stop the cry of their Infants, put into the brazen belly of Moloc, did oppresse their own eares with the noise of Pipes and Tabrets. As their childrens cry prevailed to bring an heavy plague upon them, which no Pipes could still: so when the sleepe of these Epicures is over, they shall awake with such sad confusion, that all the noise of their Rattles shall not be able to still them. And so much be spoken of this poynt of Consternation, and of the three acts of the Law, and the uses in speciall.

Q. Before wee adde the use of Terror in generall, one objection offers it selfe, viz. that Paul, Rom. 7. 7. sayth; When the Law came sinne revived: how then is Terror the Lawes worke? Obiect.

A. Both may stand together in one unregenerate man, according to divers parts. For when the Law had slaine conscience, then concupiscence revived. And wee must distinguish betweene the naturall worke of the Law and the accidentall: Terror is the proper worke of it, and when its wrought, it is as it ought to be. But when rebellion ariseth, its otherwise than ought to be. When the Sunne reviveth, and sweetens the earth, it workes properly: when it drawes up the noysome stench of a dunghill to poyson the ayre, its accidentall, comming from the loathsomnesse of the dunghill. So, when sinne rebels, shee doth her kinde: for shee doth as the Devill when he went out, hee foamed and raged and tyrannized first. It proceeds from the fulnesse of the stomacke of sinne, lothe and disdaining to yeeld to a new guest. But however sinne doe her kind, yet if the Law doe set her selfe to doe hers, this rebellion shall not hinder the killing power of it: It shall rather encrease it: For when the soule comes to see, how lothsom sinne hath made her, that even when the Law by her righteous good nature seekes to destroy sinne, then shee most covets it, cleaves to it, and rushes her selfe upon it to justle it aside: this makes her conclude her selfe out of measure wofull by sinne, and out of measure sinfull. And Answ. Explication of it.

when rebellion begins to be tamed, the heart growes more and more under feare: Although nothing hinder why both may not at one time be together. Onely in the bad, commonly it encreaseth, till it have cast out all terrour, and so causes the soule to waxe worse for the Lawes inlightning, because the sweet of sinne hath so prevailed, that with an high hand of rebellion it strengthens the jollitie of sinne, and so reviveth. In the godly, in whom God will use the Law as a seed of regeneration, and a way to a remedy, the Lord will enlarge terror and conviction so farre, that rebellion shall not stand it out, but stoop with confusion under the power of it. But its certaine, many perish at this second rocke of rebellion, having shot the gulfe of ignorance.

Further cleering of the Text.

A. To this end, first wee must cleare the Text. Secondly, lay downe the objection, and answere it. First, For clearing, note, That Paul by Sinne meanes, Originall sinne, body and members. By himselfe (I dyed) hee meanes the powers of soule and body: these must be well distinguished. Secondly, observe that Paul compares, Sinne and himselfe in this point, viz. The time before, and the time after the Lawes powerfull comming by conviction and terror. Before the comming of it thus, Sinne was dead, and Paul alive. What's that? Sinne was dead in poynt of her stilnesse, peace and quietnesse without any distemper: Why? because either no Law came at all, or else came not in her power. Againe, Paul was alive. What is that? Merry, jolly, lusty, secure, without any feare. Why? Because there was none to oppose. The death then of sinne ere the Law, was no true death, for still her poyson remained as the Snakes in her cold hole. The life also of Paul was no true life, (for he was dead in point of misery, a dead carrion to the life of God) but alive onely in the matter of his jollitie and lustinesse. Thirdly, note, Sinnes death, and Pauls life, caused this deepe consent betweene them both: I say, her quietnesse and his jollitie made them as close as buckle and thong: for why? sinne was glad to see Paul lustie: and Paul was as glad to see her quiet. Thus it was betweene them ere the Law came. But how since? Oh, quite contrary. Sinne revived, Paul dyed. How? sinne perceiving ving the Law resolved not to give over, till it had divided her and Paul, (who had so long lived at peace together, and traded with gaine and pleasure each by other) and to scoure her house of her guests, whom she so corrupted (the minde, the will, affections, conscience and members of Paul, being the creation of God) begins to revive, to be no longer quiet as before, when her trade prospered: but to fret, rage, and be unquiet. On the other side; Paul also seeing the Law resolved to gaster him out of his wicked haunt, what doth he? dyes, is all amort, forsakes his old mistresse Concupiscence, and begins to be weary of his trade.

A Similitude to illustrate it.

I cannot open it better than by a Similitude. There is some lewd huswife in an end-way of a Towne, that keepes a base Suckling house: and there be many lewd drunkards her companions that sucke her. Marke: Ere the Constable come, shee is still and quiet, utters no distaste at all, followes her trade at ease, and puts up her wicked gaines: and the more quiet shee is, the more merry her guests be, throwing all out at windowes, and so, both consent most inwardly: yea, and perhaps while this league lasts, although the Officer come, yet at first shee keepes her quiet, and they their jollitie, and both out-face the Law. But marke: The Officer comes the second time upon them, and they understand hee is fully bent to execute the Law, to pull downe the Ale-house, and to divide the keeper and the guests from each other: how then? Then the guests all turne jollitie into feare, they are all a-mort, well is hee that can betake him first to his heeles, out goes one at one posterne, another at another, and leave their hostesse! What doth shee? Alas, shee is the house-keeper, shee must bide by it, shee hath forgone her trade, therefore shee mutters and rages, and gives threatning speeches, they will undoe a poore woman, &c. And if shee can by any meanes tell in her flayted guests, shee will, and tels them, Shee must not be so forsaken, they must sticke to her better than so. Howbeit the Officer is diligent, and tells these guests, I am resolved to breake your knot: yee shall no more rout here, it shall cost yee all yee are worth to your skinne, rather, and if there be Law to be had, I will breake your meetings. As for this base huswife, shee doth her kinde: I never looke to see her honest: I will watch her as well as I can: but as for reforming her, I never looke for that: I may bind her to good behaviour, tyne and yoke her, and hold her downe as I can: but her ill will I looke alway to have, and care not for it, and I know (as shee can) shee will play her pranks. But as for you of whom I have more hope, let me perswade yee to refraine. What comes of this? The base woman frets still, and malignes the Law: but the guests being overpowerd with authoritie, leave their trade: and the more the woman rages, the more they are ashamed: not onely by the feare of the Officer, but by the rebellion of their old hostesse, they grow more to lothe their old trade. This for the first, to wit, the clearing of the Text.

see

Q. Now how cleare you the doubt?

The conclusion. A. Easily. For what is it against Pauls dying, that sinne reviveth? what is it against the guests shame and dying to their trade, that their old hostesse rages? Rebellion is in her, not in them: they are shamed and flayted, though shee will know no Law: conscience and concupiscence are two things.

Q. I understand plainly: but now because the point of sinnes rebellion in one whose conscience terrified, is somewhat unusually taught, speake a little of it: shew what it is, and so with a little use conclude all.

Three sorts of Rebellion A. This then we may conceive what this sin-reviving in the soule cast downe, meaneth, if we distinguish the sorts of Rebellion in generall. Its three-fold: First, Naturall or corrupt. Second, Penall; and the third, Mixt.

1. Naturall: What it is. The first kind is, when the Word or Law comes so to the corrupt soule, that as yet it carries no power or authority over the soule with it, but still the soule holds her owne: for then so close is sinne and the soule, they so consent, that to be parted from their filthy fellowship, is even death to them both, sinne incorporating her selfe into the soule, that she is as one with them, though in truth there is as great oddes betweene them, as betweene the creation of God, and the confusion of the Devill: howbeit, so it is by their neerenesse and Inmateship, the one so defiles another, that it is as easie for Sampson to part with his Delila, as for these to be sundred. Here therefore as both band in evill: so both doe conspire in rebellion against all the Lawes of God; all his Knight-Marshals, ſhals, Conſtables, and Officers: its as eaſie to rob a Beare of her whelpes, as theſe of their ſinfull pleaſures: and when any thing is done by the law againſt them, Oh, what a livery doe they give it, and Gods Officer for it? Oh, hee comes to make uproare and bring in confuſion among neighbours, that lived before at one; Oh! ſay they, its pittie that ever ſuch were ſuffered, to breake the love and liking that was before! Oh, how they combine to caſt him out, that they might roll backe to their old mire! The Miniſter is to ſuch as the Marſhall in London is to Harlots! an eye-ſore, a reproach, and common wonderment! Their gaine, their ſweet trade, their ſhrines for Diana are ſtopped: therefore now they cry out more then ever, Great is Diana: their drinking, their luſts, pride, and covetouſneſſe, were never ſo ſweet to them, as now the oppoſition of the Word makes them bitter. The good, and holy Law of God, makes them worſe and worſe; they ruſh their crazie ſoules againſt the pillar of Gods truth, and ſplit themſelves at it, and become more out of meaſure ſinnefull. This is the firſt rebellion in the unconvinced: the moſt ordinary and common rebellion to bee ſeene now a dayes, where the Word comes powerfully upon ignorant Conſciences, ſnorting in prophaneneſſe. This is not here meant.

2. The Penal What it is. Eſay 28.22.

The ſecond is Penall, a fruit of this, onely encreaſed by the juſt wrath of GOD upon the former rebells: whoſe chaynes the Lord makes ſtronger, Eſay 28.22. by how much the more they kicke againſt the prickes: I ſay, when the Lord penally ſmites them, and ſuffers them to encreaſe and fulfill the meaſure of their luſts, to grow frozen in theſe dregs, deſperate in their luſts: to ſcorne, purſue, deface the meanes, and waxe impenitent in their rebellion, ſo that they finde no place of repenting. See theſe Texts, Mat. 23.32.34. Act. 14.19. Act. 28.27. and the like: neither is this meant here. Mat. 23.32. Act. 14.19.

3. Kinde Mixt. What it is.

The third is Mixt: When rebellion is allayed with terror of conſcience, and not permitted to her ſelfe: as wee know a theefe in hold, is one thing: and at libertie, is another: Now this mixt terror is the accidentall worke of the Law (in a convicted and troubled conſcience) working corruption to a rebellion and reſiſtance, that ſinne might be odious, and the ſoule more humbled. So that by this it appeares, that this reviving or rebelling is no act of conſci-ence,

ence, or the ſoule: for its planted in another ſubject, to wit, ſinne. Conſcience all this while is oppreſſed with thraldome by the Law, and held downe: the rebellion which is, comes from the principle of luſt, which cannot endure ſeparation. To apply then the diſtinction, I anſwere, This objection hinders not this truth: That the proper worke of the Law, is to caſt downe and embondage the guiltie ſoule.

Q. Well; the chiefe doubt remaining, is: How a troubled Conſcience, privie to much reviving of corruption, may diſcerne, that it commeth not from her ſelfe, but from ſinne?

A ſpeciall Caveat to be noted.

A. This may be diſcerned eaſily by many markes. Firſt, from the worke of the Law that hath ſeparated her from ſinne, and that amitie, which once was betweene her and it. This is no hard matter to prove, if once the ſoule can ſay, her old luſts and ſhe are divided by the Lawes terror: How can ſhee then thinke that ſhe ſhould rebell againſt the good Law, for working that which ſhe is glad of?

2 Marke.

Secondly, It will appeare by this, that whereas true rebellion muſt come from a free will and principle of the agent: but that cannot be conſcience, nor her ſelfe, becauſe ſhee is convinced by an over-ruling Law, which hath killed her freedome; therefore this Rebellion is from ſinne.

3 Marke.

Thirdly, By this, that rebellion where it is unconvinced, doth not onely fret in reſpect of ſomewhat ſhee is denied, but alſo at that which croſſeth her for it ſelfe. But in this legall rebellion, when the ſoule is in chaynes, the ſcope of this is as much in reſpect of that which is denied, as at the Law ſimply. Take an inſtance, Act. 19. 25. When Demetrius made an uprore againſt Paul, the Iewes alſo tooke occaſion to oppoſe him: but how? Demetrius looked at his gaines: and if hee might have had them, hee was quiet: hee oppoſed not Paul in his preaching. But the Iewes lookt at Paul, as Paul a Preacher of Chriſt, and in no by-reſpect: Even ſo, when the ſoule lyes under the horror of the Law, ſinne rebells becauſe ſhee wants her old factor and agent, that is, Conſcience, with which ſhee was wont to conſent, fretting onely becauſe old commerce and traffique in evill is cut off, and would be well pacified, if ſhee could recover that againe: But ere conviction ſeaz'd upon the Conſcience, the Conſcience and ſinne both equally joyned in opposing the Law, as it is a pure and holy Law resisting sin simply, and therefore must needs be the strongest rebellion. Force united (wee say) is stronger. Vnderstand this wisely. The summe is, when sinne wants Conscience to rebell with her, she is not carried with so hatefull a rebellion against the holinesse of the Law, as when conscience was as ready to rebell as her selfe.

Fourthly, Try it by this, when rebellion comes from the soule, it encreases ordinarily: but when from sinne it decreases: because the Lord more and more weakens her by terror of Conscience. These and the like may serve for Answer. 4. Marke

Q. Now finish with some Vses, what are they?

A. First, Let us from hence conceive the woefull state of a wretch, ere the Law comes in terror to him, he and his sinne are in a cursed league, and commit hideous villany together. To thinke of this time of ignorance, might alone breake any heart, except as hard as a stone. They were (as Iob speakes of his flesh, and the wormes) even two sisters. As Simeon and Levi sworne brethren. The cursed pranks which they plaid in Shechem, are not so odious as those which sinne and conscience did in secret ere the Law came. They are not to bee named. All was then locked up in peace, and there was little cause of rebellion. Yea perhaps when the Law came, ere it could convince the soule, much naturall rebellion encreased. Oh that the thought of such cheats would gaster men! making them say, My soule, come no more into her counsell and consent! How much better is the Lawes little-ease, than such libertie of hell? Vses of the point. Vse 1. Iob 17. 14.

Secondly, Let this teach Gods Ministers of the Law to ply their tooles. God hath put a weapon into their hand, able (if well urged) to seperate even sinne and the soule: Doe not suffer this law to perish for lacke of execution: Thou complain'st that good Iustices and Iudges are so rare, there can bee no Law gotten against lewd houses; Beware wee, least wee suffer a worse Inmateship, and spy it not out, I meane privy sin and conscience. Though we preach all our dayes against morall offences, drinking and the like, yet we shall never doe good, if we urge not the Law upon these two, and put a separation betweene Gods Creature and the brood of Satan. Ply it therefore. Vse 2.

full Ministery of the Law: they call it debate, and raising up strife (as I said:) but oh yee lyars! wee doe not envie your neighbourly peace, nor lawfull consent: but your close league in your lusts: Wee would divide you and your concupiscence that God might rule by that division, whom yee barred out by your consent. I remember Ioabs speech to the woman of Abel, who accused him for robbing the City of her Inhabitants: No (saith he) no such thing, God forbid onely there is one Sheba a traytor here, and if yee cast his head over the walles, loe I leave all the rest to their libertie! Oh, that our Apologie for our innocency might speed no worse than his! Oh, that the head of sin might goe off!

2 Sam. 20. 21

Vse. 4. Fourthly, Beware all such as nourish rebellion against the Law in the point of her holy pureness! If this rebellion here bee odious, under terror, what is rebellion of sinne and conscience joyntly, I meane willfull and wicked? Beseech the Lord to use any means, rather than such rebellion should bee nourished in thee! Oh, beg of God, rather hee would divide thy sinne and thee, by the hardest courses, than thou shouldst rebell against the Word for doing her office. Cleere the Law, and say its holy: I am the slave that is sold under sinne. There is nothing more common now a-dayes than to fight against the officer of God, his holy Law. We know that it is counted a poore vantage to strike a Constable: such are faine to pay sweetly for it. Take heed the Lord leave not thy naturall rebellion to penall, which would faine relent and yet cannot, for smiting his officer.

Rom. 7.

Rom. 2. 3.

Vse. 5. Let it be exhortation to all such as God hath thus humbled, to blesse him that he hath chosen to tame the soule by terror, and stirring up of rebellion, rather than to leave it to it selfe. And let such be comforted in all their feares of their owne rebellious hearts against the Law of God, that the rebellions committed under terror, are none of hers, but sinnes-worke within her, which shee abhorres. Let her bee glad (even in her feares) to consider how God hath begun to separate her from sinne, and that so early, by the Law, making it to be an officer, to gaster her from it. Oh, if the Lord begin to doe it thus soone: What will he doe in time, when Christ shall set up his throne in her? Store up this experience.

Vse 6. Meane while, let all such comfort themselves in these rebellions lions of sinne: they are markes of good, signes of the battering of Satans and sinnes kingdome! Sinne would never so rage if shee were at as good peace as formerly! Beware of closing the second time with this Harlot. Beseech the Lord to nourish terror: though it be not grace, yet it is a seed of it: pray him him rather for a time to quash rebellion, than to suffer rebellion to destroy it. And be of good cheere, the Lord doth all this for good. When he hath cooled and rooted out rebellion, hee will after a while roote out terror also, and in due time bring thy soule out of all her adversity, turning both into a sight of the premise, and hope of the remedy: onely now he is laying the first stone of the building, be patient, and he who begun shall also perfect. And this may serve for the use of this point, and Objection from Rebellion.

Q. Now the doubt is taken away: proceed to the generall use of the former point of Terror, and so finish.

A. First it may teach us to esteeme duely of sin according to her foule nature. For must it not be a foule odious thing which should bring in such confusion, as to turne that Law of God which was given for comfort of conscience and rule of life, to become the greatest terror, and matter of vexation? Who lookes upon the Officer with feare, save a malefactor? Let us tremble to consider what a disorder sinne hath brought in! Vse 1.

Q. What else?

A. Secondly, To discover what sinne is in her kind, when shee may act her selfe upon her owne stage of ignorance. Shee is an hideous Monster. If that phrase of Paul (I was alive ere the Law came) were understood it would helpe us to know it. When Ezekiel was led to see those Iewes in their privy houses of Idols, Tammuz and the like, hee was astonished to see: Should not wee bee so if we saw a blind Idiot in his kind? Hee is alive, That is, as the Wise-man saith of the foole, He casteth firebrands and arrowes, and saith, Am not I in sport? The life of sinne is not onely the committing it, (for so it may be in stealth) but when he is at libertie to it, none to controll him: when hee may lye, cog and sweare, bee drunken, uncleane, leading others with him to Hell, and none say, What doest thou? This is the crowne, the life, the jollitie of a sinner, to play his parts without rebuke, Vse 2.

or remorse. Ease, quiet, and securitie in evill, is Satans kingdome, both while hee can barre out all light of the Law from the soule: and when he can barre out the soule from it. Then he playes Rex in the soule, and keepeth the house shut, holds possession in peace. The comming of the Law into such a conscience is, as the approach of a Sheriffe with a writ of Ejectio firmæ: to drive a man quite out of his possession. And if we lived in place where, to see the wofull revell and ryot which the Devill keepes in men, who are alive in their sin, it might bee a sight little better than hell. And although the Word reformes not all where it is, yet if it bounded not men from their bold jollitie in sinne, there would be no living in a Common-wealth. And as the common proverbe saith, If the Adder could heare, or the Snake see what mischiefe would come of it; So if the Lord did not sometime enlarge this controllment of terror, to the reprobate as well as the Elect, what a world should wee live in? Whereas now, how doth God in secret cast chains upon sinners, so that the boundles mischiefe which some would doe by their malice against the godly and others by their wicked example, is limited. They cannot doe as they would, conscience yokes them and scares them: or else they say, Give us our scope in sinne, and take your liberty in religion. Surely, else the unbridlednesse of drunkards, swearers, and bad ones, would pull downe all fences. And where it is otherwise, that God restraines not the villany of men by conscience, the wicked grow immeasurable, and thinke they doe God good service in pursuing those that they love not. So that we should pray, Lord either put thy hooke into sinners nostrils, or let them have no subsisting: for they will marre Church and Common-wealth, blast all, and make religion hang downe the head, and die in a whole Country, till the face of it be lamentable and unlike it selfe. While the wicked reigne, the people mourne, or should doe.

Vse. 3. Note well these Vses as the scope of all this first part.

The third use, is the very scope of this first part. Even to all who would bee truely moulded by the truth thereof, in the feare of God, to looke to themselves, and take in kindly and readily this point of the sword into the bosome of their soule, that this speare may let out the water and blood of it, I meane that quiet, jolly and secure heart in sinne which holdes it as with cordes, to be content to be slaine, and to goe into captivity.

tivity. For as it fared with Iehoiakin, Ier. ult. because he was content to give up himselfe to bondage, the Lord long after lifted him out and made him a Prince: so the way which the Lord takes with a sinner to lift up his head, is to cast him into this thraldome. Therefore I say, apply all these fixe points home to thy heart, that the next part may prevaile the better, when this hath gone as farre as shee can. To none but to lost ones (not in a wood or a Labyrinth) but in this Legall conviction; to none but to desolate ones, forlorne, fatherlesse, stripe, and cut off from God and hope, plunged into utter selfe-despaire, can this next part of the Catechisme bring comfort. Not for any worthinesse in it, but because a secure heart resting in her peace and security, cannot savour it. Abhorre then first to stand out in rebellion: put up thy weapons, and fight not against God, whose naked arme is against thee. Abhorre secondly, a dead, blockish, sensuall heart, not affected or mooved with this voyce: aske thy soule, If the Cedars and hils shall tremble and melt, Esay, 64.1. And thy hard heart shall stand still insensible? Abhorre thirdly, a presumptuous heart, which having heard of some hope, abuses it to forestall the Lords work, and saith, Deut. 29. yet I shall have peace. The wrath of the Lord shall smoke against such. Abhorre fourthly, all meanes of Satan, which might turn off quice, & dash or quench this work. Yeeld not to the impossibility of recovery, run not into despaire, take not thought for thy sweet sinne, God will make thee no looser: dispute not against the hardnesse of yeelding, the length of it, the feare of destroying thy selfe, or that God will never restore thee. Let not melancholly surprize thee, and besot thee: especially beware lest the returne of thy lusts, and the Devils creame in a Lordly dish, doe not snare thee to runne out of Gods blessing into thy old warme sinne, after three or foure yeares, to thy old drunkennesse, riot, Ale-house companions, ill counsell, former lusts: sculke not into corners, to cast thy selfe off this yoke: let God that put it on, hold it on his time, till hee have truely tamed thee: if it seeme long know there is a cause. But to bee weary of God, and to shake off his yoake in coole bloud, is to cast him off quite and cleane: He will put on a yoke of iron upon such: let I say this be Admonition against what ever might crosse this worke.

Let it teach us to pitie the loose and follie in sinne. Oh! they Vse. 4. Exhortation, they make either worke for hell, or (if God recall them) for the Law: for their chaines must be hereby encreased, and they shall meete with a Iaylor that will handle them accordingly. Oh heare counsell betimes, the counsell of Minister, husband, wife, parent, Master, friend, yea childe, or servant, to yeeld to God at the first, that so thy yoke may bee the easier. Obiect. But perhaps I may escape it, for all are not so yoked. Answ. Such as subtilly seeke to scape this net, except God let them goe quite, shall be most hampered. And yet wee tye not the Lord to one measure of dealing; many under constant meanes have waded more easily through this gulfe, and Lydia and Zachee were not so deepely wounded: because the Lord ment to make shorter worke: but under ordinary meanes, the Lord more or lesse holds his course. Furthermore, let the Lord try us in this point of our selfe-deniall.

The Lord may bee said to try us, and wee also in a sort with reverence be it spoken may be sayd to try him: and both in one thing. Hee tries us whether wee are fit for mercy, and whether we bee vnder the condition or no: And that by our denying our selves. As Gideons souldiers were tried by their lapping water, as a dog lappeth, so doth the Lord try us by our selfe-deniall. If we love the ordinary course of the world, the easiest way, that which is most naturall, ready and pleasing to our flesh, the Lord hath enough of us. But if we love the way which most resists flesh, ease, and selfe denying our base hearts in all, not lusts and liberties onely, but performances, duties, devotions, affections, ascribing all to free, naked, pure mercy, we are they who are likest to obtaine it. So doe we also try the Lord, that is, whither hee bee that indeed, which his word would make him to be or no. And that is, when we are lost to God, to hope, to comfort, to heaven, and are brought to such a sad point, and deadly desolation, by our sinne guilt and the wrath of God seazing vpon our soules for it, that (with Christ) wee are in the garden before our passion, wishing the cup might passe from us, and crying, O Lord, why hast thou forsaken me? Oh, the losse of thy favour, is as the losse of my life, and I seeme to lacke a subsisting, as one ready to drop into hell! Backe againe I must not go, and if I go forward I goe into hell: What shall I doe? What shall become of mee? As one wildred or lost in a wildernes, or a child bereft of father, and mother friends and all, left to the desolate wide world, and to the mercy of strangers is glad to meete with a guide, with a friend, so must it be with us. Till wee be thus we seeke mercy to play with, to dally with for our owne ends, as one makes use of a bridge to keepe him from drowning, and there leaves it: But if thus forsaken and lost, the Lord is at hand to shew mercy. With thee the fatherlesse shall find mercy: Not those that have an hundred waies of evasion, and can subsist in any if mercy faile, in their witts, parts, learning, friends, wealth, hopes, devotions: but those who are lost to all, as Paul Phil. 3. who had made shipwracke and counted them all losse to him, in point of grace, knowing that none of them all could ease his sad and heavie heart, none of them all could helpe in the evill day, but leave him in the suddes. Such a man seemes to men and himselfe quite lost, but to God he is found. Such a one tries what is in the Lord and in mercy. He onely can put it to the venture as those Lepers did, because he cannot bee in worse case then he is, if he be in any better it is mercy, but hee is in hell already, lost and desolate and now he will try whether mercy be merey or no: Truely this is the way, the narrow way, few finde it, but walke at a breadth; they will never venture upon a promise, so long as they can catch at any ragge to cover their shame withall. Onely Christ is precious to a lost soule, that can turne him no way. Pray therefore, Lord robbe mee of all my props, shew me what is in them, all or any: pull me off all my bottomes, and lay me upon the dunghill, with a potsherd to scrape me, if ever thou wilt do me good.

I end therfore thus with Exhortation. Bury not the worke of this Spirit nnder these clods of flesh: streighten not the Spirit of conviction. Beg of God, that by all these sixe staires thou mayst fall lower and lower, till thou art brought to the Earth. Here is no place for freewill, for civility, or the Religion of a Pharisee in almes, mercy to the poore, good nature, good duduties: all these lands vanish in Gods Map of misery, when God is pulling the conscience upon her knees. Happie thou, if when the Law seemes to have done working in the world, it beginnes to slay thee: so that by all these sixe steps, as Eutichus from the Loft, thou mayst be taken up as dead. Aske of thy selfe, When Lord, shall my laughter, light, frothy, merry, quiet heart be met with throughly? Not to say onely, True it is there is ſmall cauſe any of us ſhould be proud (for ſo thou mayſt, and be as proud ſtill) but to meete with the Beare and Lyon indeed, and be afraid of devouring. There is difference betweene a face chalked over, and the paleneſs of one that hath lyen under a quartane a twelue-moneth. Lye under this worke, and ſuffer affliction: ſay, I ſee the Lord is in earneſt, Hell is no painted fire, the eaſe of a ſinfull courſe differs from that little eaſe of the Law: I am in a ſtreight, I know not whither to turne me! No wealth, friends credit, marriage, honour, eating, ſleepe, play or Muſicke, can helpe now. Away now all old companions: the Lord hath laid ſorrow upon my ſoule, ſuch as no tales or Iigs can put by: my meat is now mingled with gall: and God ſeemes to forſake me: wrath, Hell and horror are upon me, my nights are weariſome, my dayes miſerable. As one in a Forreſt loſt, ſeeth twentie deaths before him, by wildring, by thirſt, by wild beaſts but no eſcape: ſo doe I fare, not knowing what weapon conſcience will uſe to devoure mee. Chuſe rather to be thus for the killing of thy fleſh, than at libertie to the death of thy ſoule. And wait in this eſtate upon God, till he cauſe light to breake out: which in a word, I will adde in the next queſtion, and ſo end this part. Thus much of the firſt Article.

ARTICLE. VII.

Qu. What is the seventh and last Article?

A.  Hat the Soule brought thus farre, rest not here, but proceed on to a further step of calling and conversion, by the hope of the Gospell.

Q. What avayleth the doctrine of the Law to Conversion?

A. True: If God should so leave the soule. But here marke the Connexion of this to the second part following. The Lord, where he means to save, keeps not the soule alway in this anguish, but causes some upholding of his secret spirit to keepe up the soule of him whom hee will save, from utter extremitie. This hee doth, by shewing of them a doore of hope in the Wilderneſse, as hee sayth in Hoſea 2.15. causing some glimpse a farre off to appeare to them, as a crevis of light in a prison-wall: as to consider that God hath had a gracious meaning to thousands whom he hath thus humbled; that by Hell lyes the way to Heaven; that God delights not in this course, if the Rebellion of the heart did not require it: that God doth that which the soule shall not know till after, hee meanes to make Christ sweet, precious, and welcome, not as Hony to a full Laodicean stomacke; hee begins to lay some ground of mortification, which in the due time the Gospell shall perfect. See that in the 10. of Ezra, the second verse; There is hope concerning this thing: also Iona 3.9. Who can tell whether God will repent? So in Act. 2. How were those murtherers of Christ stayd by that the Apostle told them? And yet they had not felt the promise: But by such glimpse of the Gospell, which God requires to be joyned with the Law, the Lord keepes his from revolt to old base lusts (whatsoever come of them) from a despaire of mercy, and undoing themselves, or from a careleſse dissoluteneſse which end goeth forward. And having so upheld them by the chin from sinking for a time, hee doth let in light by such degrees as he sees them meeteſt to beare, and to keepe them low from waxing bold and venturous: till at length he settle them upon his promise, as in the next part shall appeare.

Q. I partly conceive you: howbeit this close of the first part, being weightie, open it a little; and first, what reasons are there, why God useth this method?

Explication. Reasons of this method of the Lord.

1 A. First, To keepe the soule from extremities of presuming or despairing (of which see in Article sixt) both being dangerous rockes, the one separating the meanes from the end, running to their old liberties, and yet hoping to fare well: the other separating the end from the meanes after all their humblings, yet thinking there is no mercy for them. See Ier. 2.25. The Lord by this light at a crevis holds up the soule from both.

Iere. 2.25.

2 Secondly, He encourages such to beare the yoke of the Law, as otherwise for the tediousnesse of it would shake it off.

3 Thirdly, He deales according to the capacitie of their weakenesse: because they cannot beare much terror, he eases them: and because they dare not hearken to much comfort at once, he gives them a little at once: in the former shewing himselfe a pittifull God, who delights not in the misery of any poore soule, under his lode, or to adde sorrow: In the latter, a wise GOD, to feede with a few crummes, when morsels will not goe downe, and to refresh with drops, when draughts cannot be digested.

Esay 63.9.

4 Fourthly, He doth it for the honour of his owne worke of calling: hee hath promised to call those whom hee hath chosen, which hee should not doe if hee left them in these briars. Moses tels the Lord, If hee should leave his people in the Wildernesse, the Nations would say, Because hee could not bring them into Canaan, hee left them there. So, this is a strong cause.

Numb. 14.15

5 And lastly, by this hope hee shewes them, that hee is as able to give them his full promise, and the effect thereof, sound peace, as he can stay them up from sinking, when they are at so low an ebbe of casting downe. Not to speake of the method that God takes with his, to begin early to reveale himselfe to them, in his smaller providence and sustainings, that they may learne to trust in him the better, for ever after, even in the greatest.

Q.

Q. By what meanes doth he worke it?

A. By presenting to them duly the sight of a possibilitie to get out of their terror. That hee deales not in afflicting his, as with the wicked. Esay 27.7,8. Did he afflict them, as those who afflicted them? He will doe it in measure. That he abhorres excesse in his terrors, Esay 64.12. Wilt thou refraine thy selfe, and hold thy peace still, and afflict us very sore? So Chap. 63.15. Where are thy rollings, are they quite restrained? Psal. 44.21. 23. Will thou alway bee angry? Forget to shew mercy? No; hee answers himselfe, Esay 57.16. I will not contend for ever, nor be alwayes wroth: for the Spirit should fayle before mee, and the soules which I have made. That hee barres none from him, who barre not themselves, 2 Chron. 15.2. That there is a necessitie of afflicting them with such tedious terrors, or else hee delights not in it: Reade Esay 57.17.18. For the iniquitie of his covetousnesse, I smote him: he went on frowardly in the way of his heart, (viz. till then:) I have seene his wayes, and I will heale him, &c. That he hath not done this to destroy, but to humble: for alas! if hee meant so, What are the bushes to his consuming fire? And all these hee doth cause them to digest and stay themselves by, and fasten upon in more or lesse measure to keepe them from extremitie: causing terror to decrease, and hope to succeede, as wee see in his course with Iob, as tedious as it was, Iob 32.40. in sending Elihu, and Chap. 40.1. 2. 3. in speaking himselfe: for the proportion, both doe agree.

Reade the place. How the Lord workes this hope? Esay 27.7. Esay 64.12. & 63.15. Psal. 44.22. Esay 57.16. 2 Chron. 15.2. Esay 27.8. Iob 32.40. & 40.1.

Q. Is this hope, grace, or can any such be said to beleeve it?

A. No, hope is the fruit of faith: this hope goeth before faith. Yet it is such as the Lord enableth to uphold them betweene the horrours of the Law, and the grace of the Gospell: the LORD being as truly in his way with them, whom he will bring home, even in the first seede, and begining, as in the perfectings thereof, if wee knew assuredly who they were. See Acts 15. 18.

A doubt answered.

Q. What are the markes of this hope?

A. Such as these.

The markes of this hope.

First, In the entrance it is very weake and staggering, betweene feare, and hope, very doubtfull, Ionas 3.9. Who can tell? Its a great hazard. Onely (as it is in Gold-weights, the least straw will cast them) so here it is, especially when the hand of God casts it into the ballance of the thoughts.

1. Ionah 3.9.

2 Secondly, Yet this little hope keepes from the hardest and desperatest attempts. Who else should have thought that those Ninivites, being so put to for fortie dayes, would not have prevented so generall an horrour and calamitie, by destroying themselves? But God supported them in secret.

3 Thirdly, It rather bends the eye to the end why GOD troubleth the soule, than at the trouble it selfe in a plodding manner; Who knoweth whether hee will asswage, and shew mercy for all this?

4 Fourthly, Its weary of trouble rather by that ease which God sheweth, than by tediousnesse. See Hab. 3.16. Rottennesse entred, that I might have peace: As Hagar, when she saw the fountaine a farre off, ended her anguish. Every creature is naturally weary of trouble by meere time: but a soule under Gods hand, is not weary till God enclines it.

Hab. 3.16.

5 Fiftbly, It weakely turnes the thoughts, to muse, What would follow upon it, if GOD should shew mercy? Oh, this is great newes to one that was so oppressed: As Iob saith, When I looke for ease, loe, trouble is present! And the Church, Lam. 3 17. Thou hast removed mee farre from prosperitie: Oh, now therefore to swither up with thoughts of welfare, is a great change.

Ionah 3.9. Iob 3.26. Lam. 3.17.

6 Sixthly, When trouble decayes, and hope encreases, as that little oyle and meale wasted not till plentie came. And the like.

Q. What uses are to be made of this doctrine?

A. First, this point should strengthen the former Article: and the more earnestly presse the point of the Law convincing and holding downe the soule under the burden of sinne and wrath. A thing which is rare to finde, in these dayes: wherein the power of all Truth is so restrayned. But yet so many as can approve themselves in the former Article may take comfort to themselves in this. There is no hope of the Gospell, much lesse comfort from a promise, belonging to any save to such as are loden and tyred with the thoughts and horror of their cursed condition. Onely these may lay claime to it, and resolve that to them the promise of ease belongs: Onely to them who are pinched in spirit, in a streight, desolate, lost, forsaken, at a pludge, sick at heart, and fatherlesse; the promise belongs. These phrases the holy Ghost useth to expresse the estate of a man who is at last cast, out of himselfe, and past paſt hope, or remedy for ought he findes in himſelfe. Thoſe that have beene in ſuch a caſe can ſpeake by experience: others cannot: for it cannot be counterfeited. One who walkes light and eaſie, cannot conceive what it meanes to be loden with an intolerable burden, cruſhing him to the earth: a man going on in his way, cannot conceive, what it is to be loſt in a wildernesſe or Forreſt, or Wood: in which he is like to periſh for lacke of a guide. A child having father and mother knowes not the preſſure of an Orphan. One that is at liberty, cannot tell what it is to be at the advantage, and courteſy of an adverſary, who hath got the day of him, and hath a power to ſtrip him of all he is worth. Therefore, deceive not thy ſelfe: diſſemble not with God, and thy ſoule: Hope and poſſiblity of pardon, cannot be the portion of any who cannot proove themſelves truly loden (by the fix former Articles) with the burden of their eſtate. Therefore I ſay, let it be a ſpurre to the enforcing of the former point, proove thy ſelf truely loden, and I wil proove that the promiſe belongs to thee. Thou wilt aske how ſhould I proove that? I anſwer, Goe through the laſt Article, and try thy ſelfe thereby: for he who is truly convinced, is truly loaden. Yet for thy ſatisfaction I will branch out ſome markes of tryall. Examine thy ſelfe by them.

Firſt, A loaden ſoule looks back to her former liberty and eaſe in an evill courſe, with admiration and aſtoniſhment, how light and jolly ſhee was in her Element: how impudent, preſumptuous and ſenſleſſe ſhee was, and could be then; whereas now the ſence of one ſinne (being out of her place, and courſe) doth ſo extreamly annoy her! Oh! ſhee ſees and deteſts that infinite ſtupor and ſottiſhneſſe which lodges in a ſinfull ſoule, till the Lord ſettles her lode upon Conſcience.

Secondly, A loaden ſoule feeles her ſelf diſcharged from all thoſe falſe ſhoulders, which diſcharged Conſcience from feeling that to be any burden which yet was intolerable. As a ſtout fellow putting his ſtrength under a weight, which elſe would fall upon a weake body, keepes it off for a while: but if hee pull away his ſhoulders it muſt fall upon him that is weake and cruſh him. So it is here. The Law abandons all falſe ſupports of the ſoule, as eaſe, peace, ſecurity, pleaſures, profits, falſe opinions, worldly welfare, ſo that nothing can keepe the ſoule beſotted, when God will have it loaden: Then all contempt of Miniſter and reproofe, deadneſſe of heart, bad cuſtome, ill example, ſweetneſſe in evill, baſe gaynes by ſunning, and the like, muſt leave the ſoule to her ſelfe, and then ſhee muſt needs ſinke, and lye under her burden: and when inſtead of her merry veine of evill, a veine of vengeance is let in, how ſhould the ſoule ſubſiſt (of her ſelfe) any longer?

Thirdly, A loden ſoule is appalled with a thing above it ſelfe, and feeles it ſo. We have a ſaying, That when a thing exceeds all naturall ſence, either it weakens it, as the Sun-beames doe the eye; or deſtroyes it, as the fire doth the body. Such is this effect to the ſoule: it over-powres weakenes and kills it. And the cloſer it comes, the more it oppreſſes.

Fourthly, A loden ſoule is paſt modeſty, or biting it in. If one can conceale a burden and not complaine, its no true lode becauſe there is a ſhift. Men and brethren what ſhall wee doe? as Act. 19. Act. 2. They could not hold in.

Fiftly, A loden ſoule, covets eaſe, cryes out for it, cannot diſlike it, nor reject it, finally. It cries out, who ſhall rid me! joyes when it meetes with any ſuch helper, it cavills not with the inſtrument, is not coy, but glad of it.

Sixtly A loaden ſoule confeſſes, God hath cauſe ſufficient in juſtice to lode her: and beſides, that hereby, ſhee is made, for ever after, more tame, tender and wary of ſinne, then thoſe that never feele this burden kindly: who commonly waxe looſe, before they come to enjoy the fruit of Chriſt, in a ſettled manner.

Seventhly, A loden ſoule, feeles not onely a burden above ſtrength, but a lode ſo nayled to her bones through the fleſh, that ſhee cannot disburden her ſelfe. It ſtickes as a venomed dart in the ſoule, the more ſhe ſtruggles, the more her load ſettles.

Eightly, Other mens loades trouble her not as her own: Shee hath neither leaſure, nor ſpirit to looke at others: ſhee hath ſo much upon her owne ſhoulders. And (for the time) ſhee feeles no other lode, but this: As one that is under deepe thirſt, and famine, thinkes not of poverty, or debt, or loſſe of wife.

Ninthly, A loden ſoule, if eaſed, ſhall not readily returne to his old luſts, nor winde out of Gods fingers.

Tenthly, It ſhall not be a lode cruſhing a part, as a Legge, or Arme, but oppreſſing body and ſoule, even the whole man: a to all burden.

Theſe and the like markes may direct for triall, and teach men to come to a strict survey of themselves. If they can find that the Law hath thus setled a loade vpon conscience: then shee may conclude, that she is vnder a condition of ease, and hope of pardon. If thou seele then that the Lord hath thee at this infinite advantage, thou mayest conceive some comfort, in the middest of thy streight. And although thou mayest finde it hard (perhaps) to grapple with the Promise as thou wouldest: yet (as one who is under an execution) would choose to put himselfe vpon the mercy of his Adversary, rather then be quite vndone; (for why? If he will not shew him favour, yet hee is but as hee was, an undone man:) But perhaps his enemy may be moo-ved with compassion towards him: so here a poore soule may and ought to choose the hazard of a Promise (although hard to beleeve) rather then be desperate, and disdaine to come in to seeke reconciliation. Let all then who would be under hope, prove themselves to be under a streight. For no other are under any possibility of mercy: but lie under the absolute condition of wrath.

to

Secondly, Instruction to Gods Ministers to discerne wisely of the season of staying the troubled heart. For else they may spend much labour in vaine. It fares with an heavie heart as with the bleeding wound, and the deepe humor of melancholy: while the dint is, they refuse plaister and counsell. Iobs friends sate seven dayes and seven nights by him, and said nothing, because they saw the griefe was great. And againe when they see the season come, let them ply God his fittest Medicines, as Esay 50.4. A word in season is as apples of Gold. Sure it is that for lacke of counsell Gods people doe miscarry oftentimes; as appeares in their agonies and feares, that when their spirit is unable to sustaine it selfe, they are ready to faint and give over; yea some to lay violent hands upon themselves. Oh! in such a case, discerne of the state of such a poore soule, and pitty it! Bee yee O yee Priests of the Lord, cloathed with salvation, 2 Chron. 6.41. Doe not apply your selves harshly to an heart overloden already; Rather give wine to such, that they may forget their sorrow, Prov. 31. 6. Blessed is hee that considers wisely of such a condition! Let terrors serve for the desperate and refractory sinners that they may come vnder Gods chain; But such as are bound in it already, must not bee oppressed more, as if there were no saccour for them, no Balme in Gilead But let this doore of hope at least stand upon the latch, ready to open.

unto them; For God will not be angry for ever, lest flesh should faile.

Be wee wise then, to discerne; both how farre its expedient still to hold them upon the hooke, least a giddy heart returne too soone, (to which corruption is most prone) and powre not out all Gods consolations at once, till they runne over, and forget all heavinesse at once; But put difference betweene some seeds of terror, and the spirit of bondage: yet on the other side, play not Ionas part, to bee more streight toward the distressed soule than God himselfe! But keepe a wise mediocrity. We are but servants for the good of the Elect: it is not in our power, to make Gods way a jot easier or harder than himself hath made it; Therefore according to the measure of his working, so apply wee our selves. The folly of Ministers is great in this: Either they are too forward to thrust this hope into the bosome of each Complainer; or else to hold it backe unmercifully from the truely loaden. The Lord who will have none to picke up their crummes too soone, yet will not have sorrow unseasonably added to sorrow.

Vse 3. Thirdly; Let such as are to receive their counsell, beware of being stout and obstinate by melancholly and sullennesse. Many people make their chaines heavier then God makes them, Branch 1. and will not suffer a thought of hope to enter through the anguish of bondage. So it is said of the Israelites in Egypt, when God sent them a delivery, they looked not after it, Exod. 6. 9. This Exod. 6. 9. is a sullen heart, to make prison to become libertie and our meat to bee as gall by ill customes, or a melancholicke spirit: The Lord delights not in it. These discourage Gods Ministers from helping them.

Branch 2. Thirdly, All such as, because they cannot feele so strong comforts as they fancy, therefore quarrell with God, and reject such as he offers them. No, let not God be tempted by thy frowardnesse, when he seekes to try thy humilitie. All Gods people are little ones, Zaches: little things are welcome to them, till greater come, and every somewhat hath some savour with them. They who are lesse than any the least blessing, count each little great; as a pledge of better to come, they despise it not because there is a blessing in it. And let them not grieve Gods Ministers, in slighting of Counsell: but count it a great priviledge; for how many poore soules perish for lacke of Counsell. Hos. 4. 6,

Hos. 4. 6, and lay violent hands upon themselves? which rarely fals out where any Counsellors be. Oh, be base, and vile in thy owne eyes, thinke it a mercy that thou mayest tread upon the earth, (so the Publican thought, Luk. 18. 13.) but the honour of an Angell (for so it is 1 Pet. 1. 12.) to heare one Sermon of Christ. Hos. 4. 6. Luk. 18. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

Fourthly, Its exhortation to all poore troubled soules. First, To get and pray for ready and willing hearts to heare and see Gods voyce and steppes for ease: and doe not devoure their owne flesh, Prov. 9. 12. Get Abrahams wisedome, Gen. 22. 13. Who although Isaac had the knife at his throat, yet had an care to heare the Angell, an eye to see the Ramme caught in the bush, in stead of his sonne. So bee you apprehensive of the least sound or syllable of hope: and dispute for God and thy owne soule, as the prisoner at the barre for his life. Seeke out and bee wise for thy selfe, that's true wisedome, Prov. 1. 32. Catch at a Word from God, for so doe Captives and fearfull ones, 1 King. 20. 32. Vse 4. Branch 1. Pro. 9. 12. Gen. 22. 13. Prov. 1. 32. 1 Kin. 20. 32.

Secondly although your hope bee small, yet because your freight is great, consider whether it be not better to venture upon uncertaine hope, than upon assured woe. Thy case is as the Lepers, 2 King. 7. 4. If wee sit here, wee dye: if we goe into the campe of Aram, we may dye, but perhaps we may live: Howsoever wee are but dead men; And so they ventured, and the Lord was with their resolution. Doe thou so in the strength of God and prosper. It is a sweet signe that the promise is digested by the soule, and not suffered to passe away as a sound of waters, when thou canst not chuse but fasten upon it in some confused measure, when yet thou seest not any certaine escape. As a man in the waters strugling for life, though he be not sure to avoid drowning: yet in his confusion is able to lay both his hazards in the ballance, and resolve upon the lesse: On the one side he knowes the mercy of the waters is cruell: drowne he must without helpe: on the other side he sees a reed put towards him, which hee cannot tell whether he shall bee able to reach, or whether that will save him. What doth he; he chuseth an uncertaine hope before a certaine death: here I die, there I may live: If I might escape, how happie were I? The reed is offered me to save mee: I can but perish; If I perish, I perish; But I will surely make toward it, I will not perish wilfully. Waite upon the Lord, and Branch 2. 2 King. 7. 4.

let there be no crevis of light, but thou mayst spie it. For as the Lord would have loose hearts to be beaten from their holds, so he studies how to speake to a fainting heart, lest it faile, as I noted out of Esay 57. 18. God hath comfort for thee and thy mourners: yea for them a farre off, as well as the neere, if thou seeke not thy owne ends.

Lastly, To include all in one, let the last use be to such, that they suffer not bondage to swallow them up in their legall sorrow: that they thinke not their Hell, an heaven by custome, but as speedily as they can get out at this privie doore, blessing God for such a mitigation of misery, that in the discharge of the duties of their places, they might attend upon the further worke of GOD, abhorring to thinke themselves well, because the Law hath them under bondage, till the Gospell have comforted them.

The End of the first Part.

XUM

THE SECOND PART OF THE PRACTICALL CATECHISME.

The ground of the second part.

Titus 3.4,5,6. &c.

But after that the kindnesse and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared: Not by workes of righteousnesse, which we had done, but according to his mercy he saved us, through the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the holy Ghost: Which he shed on us aboundantly by Jesus Christ our Saviour.

Question.

THE connexion of this being opened before, what doth this text containe?

A. A cleare view of the doctrine of the second part of the Catechisme, I meane, of the deliverance of a sinner from this misery, together with the use of it to all that want it.

Q. Open the parts thereof more fully.

A. Generally the scope is, to oppose deliverance to misery, as appeares by the adverbe (but) q. d. Thus indeed it was with us by our own deservings, and Gods Justice: but yet the Lord could not find in his heart to let us lye thus in our wofull shiftlesse estate: but when he saw none to save, himselfe saved us, Ezek. 63. as a man seeing a perishing creature in a ditch, and ready to despaire for lack of present helpe, himselfe stepped forth to helpe it out: (he of duty, the Lord of meere goodnesse) but thus he did found out a way to set man upon dry land againe, out of the gulfe and depth of misery, so that the one was not so hideous, as this is precious and gracious.

Q. More particularly, what do they consider?

A. A sweet view of the chiefe parts of this Redemption. First, the first hidden and secret eternall Workeman of this deliverance, and that is God the Father. In whose bosome this depth lay before all worlds, who fore-seeing this ruine and his endlesse Justice against sin, yet purposed not to abandon all grace out of his heart towards desolate man, but to retaine some still in the bottome of his wisedome and good pleasure. And note, that this appeared not at first, yet it was there then, and appeared after. This is the cause why God the Father is heere called our Saviour, and why he is said to save us, in ver. 5. viz. as in 2 Cor. 5. 17. he is said to Reconcile us: not by meriting it, but by first and originall ordaining it as the first agent in the working of the Trinity, the deviser of this salvation, and of the Lord Jesus the meriter of it. Now marke this act of God is described by a double argument.

1. The first, is the impulsive cause, set down by three words, Kindnesse, Love, Mercy, Whereof the latter interprets the former Kindnesse and Love, noting the remainder of that goodnesse of Creation, as if the Apostle should say, The sin of man could not root out this goodnesse so, as to take it from God, but still he had a bottomlesse goodnesse and kindnesse left in himselfe. But the third word (Mercy) addes to them both, q. d. The Lord imparted himselfe to Adam, in this goodnesse of his, ere he was fallen, but he shewed him no mercy, for he needed none. But being become miserable; Lo, he addes mercy to goodnesse, and enlarges his first kindnesse and love by a second compassion and pity, respecting him now in his blood and misery, in which he exceedes the former as much as the Sun at noone tide doth the rising: mercy being the perfection of love.

2. The second argument is from the denyall of contraries, Not by workes of righteousnesse, &c. The summe is, this eternall mercy was free in the conception of it. The Lord foresaw not who should in time embrace this mercy, nor left it in a middle doubtfull uncertainty who should and who not, suspending his pleasure upon mans will; but he did out of the freedome of grace and mercy (when as yet no good in us was foreseene, much lesse actuall)

when no naturall or supernaturall goodnesse was to be seen in us even then he saved us, because he would so do.

Q. What is the second branch of this description.

A. The instrumentall meriting cause of this salvation, set forth in those wordes: when this love appeared: and againe, verse 6. Which he shed abundantly through Iesus Christ our Saviour. Note the sweet phrase which Paul delights in, to stile both the Father and Christ our Saviour, the latter flowing from the former. Now, in this point, note, first he sayth, It appeared. As we see the like word Chapter second, verse 11. The summe is, Whereas it had bin impossible for man or angell ever to have dived into the depth of this mercy; Lo, the Lord caused it to appeare in the fulnesse of time, and brake open this sealed fountaine of his bosome, by the manifesting thereof in his Sonne: for no man at any time hath seene the Father, but the only begotten Sonne of God, comming out of his bosome, hath revealed him.

And who is this Appearer, who made mercy appeare in himselfe Iesus Christ our Saviour. It must be so, that howsoever mercy was hidden in the Father, yet it could not appeare but by Jesus our Saviour: he truly God and man in obeying and suffering, must bring justice to kisse this mercy by appeasing that infinite anger of the Father for sinne, and performing such a righteousnes for man, as might afford a sufficient satisfaction to God in his uttermost justice: Christ, and none else could thus doe or suffer, none else may satisfy, he himselfe without all this, both obedience and bloud could not doe it: none of his love, or prayers or poverty, but Jesus our Saviour in this his full payment, as a surety and Sacrifice of bloud could save us?

Q. All this is evident: but what else addeth the Apostle to make up this description of deliverance?

A. The third point is the object upon whom this blessing is bestowed, intimated in these words, Towards (man) and save (us) and shed on (us), &c. By which as he implieth that Man in his misery, the selfe same man that fell from God to hell, was the object of mercy: so the number of all those to whom the Lord doth savingly appeare in this mercy of his election in Christ, are the full object of mercy, and all that mercy can bestow. The Church of Christ is she, who is the sole and equall object of Christ: all he did and suffered, was, not for the reprobate, but the Elect: these he redeemed, gave himselfe for, that he might make Ephes. 5.

Ephes. 5. them a peculiar spouse to himselfe without spot or wrinkle, as he saith to the Ephesians in plainer termes.

Q. And what are those excellent things which Iesus our Saviour hath purchased? doth this Text mention them?

A. Yea, very fully: and that both in generall and speciall. For the first, he saith he saved us. Which is as if he had said, He restored and set us in as good an estate as we lost, and quit us as fully of all our misery, as ever old Adam did plunge us into it. If he lost us, Christ saved us: if he betrayed us to bondage, He redeemed us: if he brought us to utter hatred, He reconciled us: if he condemned us, Christ forgave us: he did deliver us (in a word) from all sinne and curse, and laid a plaster on us, full as broad as the sore. Yet this must be added, that Not as the offence is, so is the gift. For in Adam we were so made the Image of God, that we lost it presently: but the second Adam so saved us, pardoned and reconciled us, as never to be lost, never to be cursed, never condemned the second time.

And more yet, Adam was not created to any happinesse save immortality upon earth, in a created righteousnesse: We to an uncreated Union and Communion with God in Heaven, in the presence of God. This in generall. More particularly the words heere are three, Saved us, Regenerated us, Renewed us. By the first of them, understand the negative part of this deliverance, viz. from what he freed us: Sinne, Law, Satan, Wrath, death, Judgement. By the latter two, the positive good things purchased us. First, by Regeneration, he meanes all those graces, which concerne our estate in the grace of Justification; standing in somewhat out of our selves; the imputation of the righteousnesse of our Lord Jesus, removing our guilt, and bestowing on us pardon, acceptance to favour and right to eternall life, as adopted heires thereof. And in this respect we are regenerated and borne againe, by reconciliation. Secondly, by Renuing, he meanes somewhat within us, which is the Inherency of that Image of Christ, infused into us, and abiding in our nature, soule and body, and all the powers and faculties of both: purging out and killing old evils, and planting good anew in the stead thereof. In both these stands the new creature, renewed in Christ, to true righteousnesse and holinesse in this World, and hereafter to the glorious Image of God in perfection. And this latter concerneth our Renovation.

Q. Doth

Q. Doth the Text mention any more?

A. Yea, the instruments of applying these good things to us: And that both outward and inward. Outward, the Word and Sacraments. He nameth not the Word, but yet includeth it. For a seale is nothing without a covenant. He meanes then, that by the word of truth, the Covenant of Grace, offering us to be reconciled to God, preached freely, generally, without exception (to such as need it,) to all sorts, ages, sexes, conditions, the Lord (as by an externall ordinance) doth apply and convey these good things of Jesus Christ to his elect. And then having so done, he sealeth up and assureth them, by the answerable seale of Baptisme.

Then, the inward instrument of application, (without which the outward is barren) is the work of the Spirit of regeneration, which attends the Word and baptisme, and washeth the soule by the power thereof, even the spirit of Christ. To the which end, this Spirit doth ingender the grace of Faith in the soule, for the apprehending of our part, in our particular Salvation and Regeneration: Which grace of Faith, although it be not heere named, yet is implied sufficiently in this worke of the Spirit. For there is no other way for the Spirit, to settle these benefits upon us, but Faith only. And thus we see how the Apostle doth in this text most pithily contrive the chiefe heads of this Part, as in the Articles following appeares.

The first Article of the second Part.

Question.

W. Hat is the first Article in this Second Part?

A. That there is a deliverance, ordained and granted to miserable man out of this his thraldome. As the matter of Adams creation lay before the Lord, at his free choyse whether to create it, or not: so the object of Redemption (fallen man) lay at the Lords courtesie, whether or no he would deliver him. If man had been wholly left to himselfe, his mends had been in his own hands. In all outward miseries its otherwise: a man may be lost in a Forrest and perish: pursued by enemies, assaulted by diseases, oppressed by death, and perish without helpe. Heere not so: misery was the furtheſt from meriting, but not occaſioning mercy: As in that type of Chriſt Iſaac, ſo in Chriſt himſelfe that was verified, in the mount will the Lord be ſeen; when no other way could be deviſed, then did God provide this ſacrifice by his ſpeciall providence. The Lord freely out of meere mercy, beheld miſery, and when there was none to ſave, he himſelfe did; yea, uſed this ruine as a meane of declaring himſelfe to man, the authour of a farre more excellent eſtate than he loſt by his fall. And this purpoſe of God the Father to permit the fall, that he might worke his own endes thereby, viz. the ſetting forth of the riches and treaſure of his grace of election in Chriſt, by the meanes of calling and the Goſpell, is that which the Holy Ghoſt doth make the object of the admiration and aſtoniſhment of men and Angels: Who pry into this miſery, as the Cherubins into the Mercy ſeate. So that firſt note: In the moſt wofull ruine of man, there is a deliverance, ſecondly, its appointed by the Lord out of the unſearchable treaſure of his wiſedome, uſing it as a meane to declare himſelfe to his Church in all thoſe excellencies of his attributes, eſpecially the conjunction of mercy and juſtice, which in the creation could not appeare. See Col. 1.27. 27. Eph. 2. 10.

1 Pet. 1, 12.

Eph. 2. 1. 1 Theſ. 1. ult. Luke 1. 74. Eſay 63. 5.

Col. 1. 27. Epheſ. 2. 10.

Q. By what acts may it appeare, that God hath wrought this Deliverance.

Acts of it two.

A. Partly, by his eternall purpoſe within himſelfe, and partly by that expreſſion of himſelfe to his Church and to his elect. Both theſe, the intention of his heart toward them, and the declaration thereof to them in his word, doe ſhew that it was not the Will of God that man ſunke into the dungeon of woe, ſhould lye ſtill there and periſh, but recover out of it and live: and this he would have no ſecret in his own boſome, nor hidden from us, but known and revealed. By vertue of both which, he teſtifies, that he will not hold enmity againſt us, but be freely reconciled: yea and beſide that, will afford us all good things, and ſhew us both mercy to reſtore, and reunite us unto himſelfe; and alſo his Alſufficient grace to uphold and ſuſtain us, in himſelfe for ever, ſo that nothing ſhall be wanting to us, in this pilgrimage of ours: Nay further, he will ſettle upon us, a farre other and more perfect eſtate, than ever Adam was capable of, and all this without forfeit or feare of loſſe, which Adam never had. Hee ſuffered not loſt man to periſh in his ſinne, nor a chaos of confuſion to cover ver the face of the world, but sayd within himselfe and uttered it by a Covenant, I will cull out to my selfe a Remnant, a peculiar, to whom I will be a God, and they shall be my people: yea, this I will doe by occasion of the sinne and curse of man; thence will I search matter of my infinite praise and glory.

Q. Is there then no difference, betweene the Election and the Covenant of God? if there be, shew it.

A. The difference is great and large. For the election of God is a secret within his own brest and bosome, hidden from us (till we believe) and so come to know it by the fruit. I say, it is altogether absolute, unrespective, unconditionall, the cause of every thing and the effect of nothing. But the Covenant is a publishing, and Proclayming from Heaven this his meaning, that so the Church might not lye in darknesse: as if the Lord could beteame to save her, and let her not know it. No. But he would speake to her very heart in his covenant, and discover his secret affection, by falling (as he did upon his brother Benjamins) upon her neck, and telling her his purpose. See Ioh. 3. 16. both together. Difference between them.

Q. Although this Booke scarse reach so farre, yet by this occasion, shew what both these Acts of God are about man fallen: and first what his Election is?

A. Conceive it thus: From the beginning, all the acts and waies of God were known to himselfe in a cleere and present view, all at once without successiveness or disorder: And therefore I say, That the Lord from Eternity foreseeing wretched man rolled out of the sheet of his created integrity, into the dung and mire of corruption & curse; purposed within himselfe not to suffer him to fall finally, as he had permitted him to fall voluntarily: But intended with himselfe and actually so decreed, to exempt a Number (to himselfe known) out of this Destruction, and that for the expression of his rich and boundlesse grace, which he would have the world stand at wonder, to gaze at it, and magnifie it. And yet, out of his Justice, not to extend this Deliverance to all, but to passe them by (as not bound to rescue them) and leave them in their corruption still: and this to manifest his infinite Justice against sin; and in both these attributes to seeke to himselfe addition of honour, much greater than he had yet sought in that goodnesse of Creation. 1 Act. What Gods election is.

Q. What then is the Covenant of grace?

2 Act. What the Covenant is.

A. It is (as I ſaid) the Promulgation and publiſhing of this his purpoſe, in and by his word: that is, by his Sonne, the eternall Word of the Father: (for the covenant of grace, is a conditionall thing founded upon the Mediation of a Surety, in whom it is eſtabliſhed.) And (properly to ſpeake) this Covenant reaches equally to election, and no further, (although the covenant in generall reacheth to all, as Baptiſme alſo doth:) And the ſumme of it is, that God will be their God, to pardon, ſanctify, protect and ſave them, will not be aſhamed to be ſo called by them: nor of them to be his own beloved, but hold them in this everlaſting Covenant of his, till he receive them to immediate fruition of himſelfe: This Covenant by ſundry ſteps and incklings hath been made known to the Church, firſt to Adam, then to Noah, and Shem, then to Abraham, Moſes, the Patriarkes (yea in the Law at Sinai darkely, and ſo farre as might drive them from all other covenants,) and ſo downward to the Prophets, till at length it brake out in fulneſſe and noon-tide of light and brightneſſe, when the day of Chriſt came, in whom it was ratified.

What the generall Covenant is.

Q. You ſpake of another covenant: what meane you by that?

A. The generall covenant of ordinary calling by the offer of the Goſpell, and the common badge of Baptiſme: which is made to all without exception (who exclude not themſelves) but differeth from the former, and is much lager than Election. For thereby the Lord doth not utter his ſecret will, but his revealed only: not telling men what he meaneth finally to doe with them; but what he would have done by them, to wit, that they believe, repent, and be ſaved. Now it behooved, that this offer be univerſall. 1. Becauſe whom the Lord calles, he calles and culles out of the wicked world: Now, when his voice reacheth to all, none can except themſelves out of his Call: Thoſe who receive it, ſhew themſelves elect; thoſe who finally reject it, periſh by their own unbeliefe, and ſhew themſelves, to be none of Gods number. 2. His Miniſters being his ordinary inſtruments, cannot put difference between the Elect, and the not elect: therefore they are to publiſh it generally to all, that ſo it may appeare whom the Lord will call. 3. If the covenant ſhould be diſpenſed with reſtraint, this might ſtrengthen the rebellious, in their cavilling againſt the decree, and faſten the cauſe of their perdition upon God which only is from themſelves. This I heere adde to make ſome difference betweene the wayes of God manifeſting himſelfe. To these may be added; The promise of God, which is an encouragement annexed to the offer, and taken from the faithfulnesse of him that offereth to all that performe the condition of the Gospell, which is, to beleeve. Of the which in their due place, Article 3. for this whole second part is nothing else, save a declaring of this covenant in all the parts thereof.

Q. But doth not the Scripture tell us Heb. 8. 9. & 10. that there was another old covenant under the Law, which is now abolished by this new one of the Gospell? what! hath God two Covenants?

A. You doe well to mention this: and, it had bin well, if some of our first moderne Divines had answered this doubt. To proceede with more cleernes, I answer by a distinction, that if we looke at the substance of Gods Covenant with his elect, its but one, which is that he will be the God of his people reconciled first, then All-sufficient. But if you aske touching the expression, or the condition of it, its divers, yea contrary: the one requiring on our parts, obedience and doing: Doe this and live: the other fayth, beleeve this and live, which two are contrary.

Q. How can that be? doth God speake contraries, and yet meane one and the same thing?

A. He pleased first to make a covenant with Adam, of immortality and happines in paradise on condition, that he continued in his created integrity, whereof a marke was, his obeying the charge of onely eating of the Tree of life. But this covenant of workes (though he was then able to have kept it) yet he brake it and so forfeited life. Now his posterity standing hereby accursed, the Lord by sollemne voyce, renewed this covenant with the Church of Israel, at the mount Sinai, and often afterwards by Moses, strenghtning it by legall ordinances, ceremonies and sacrifices, all standing in the deed done, that if they fayled in doing the morall, yet they might be relieved and pardoned by doing the ceremoniall. And this is the first and old covenant. Now since this, he hath made another in Christ, with his Church, that he will give her life, upon the condition of believing only, these are contrary in their conditions: yet not in their scopes. for therein the covenant of workes is only subordinat to the latter covenant of grace.

Q. How doth that appeare?

A. By this, that first, notwithstanding the covenant of workes, yet the Lord did both to Adam, and to Abraham, and after to the Prophets declare his other covenant of grace, that the seed of the woman should breake the Serpents head: and that in his seed, all the Nations of the Earth should be blessed: that is in Christ whose Father God promised to be, and of his seed, that is, all believers. By which it appeares that the Law of workes comming about 4000. yeeres after, could not infringe the first covenant of grace: And also, that the Lord did not expect any due performance of obedience to himselfe, through any strength of man, for why? he knew he had lost it, and that he was disabled thereto. But he enjoyned it to those blind and sturdy Iewes, to curbe their rebellions, and to drive them out of themselves to another, which was Christ. Adde hereto, that even the sacrifices, Sacraments, and ceremonies of the old covenant, although considered barely in themselves, they required no more then doing: yet, in their true scope, they lead the people out of themselves, to another, who by the sacrifice of himselfe, should grive pardon of sinne, true righteousnes and life to all that should trust in him. These things being seen into by men but darkely, were the lesse effectuall, and therefore men clave to that carnall way of doing, which they understood better, and so overthrew the way of God in the second covenant of grace in Christ. But so many as saw into the scope of these, renounced their Law righteousnesse, and the old covenant, and clave to the Messia to come to deliver them from their sinne and curse, which else they saw, they could not escape. All which shewes, that the Lord only aymed at one covenant finally, which was the covenant of grace, and the other was intended only as subordinate unto the latter.

Q. Shew then breefly the differences of both?

A. First, the old covenant at mount Sinai was given with great terror and astonishment: but, the New to Adam, and so to Abraham with exceeding mercy, and love. The first by Moses, the Mediator of it: the latter by Christ, the promised seed: the first was confirmed by the priest-hood of mortall weake Aaron, a man: the other by the priest-hood of Melchisedec, that is Emannel God and man. The first by the blood of beasts often shed: the second by the blood of him, who was once for all, Priest and sacrifice: as also by his presenting of this his satisfaction to his Father in Heaven, whereby the Father was appeased and so made a covenant of grace with his Church (in which respect its its called the new Teſtament in Chriſts blood) the firſt had only annexed to it, perfect obedience, as the condition of it: the latter only had the condition of Faith added to it. The former was weake, unprofitable, gendring to bondage, cauſing wrath, through our corruption. and inability to keepe it: the latter perfect, lively, and profitable every way to remove ſinne and guilt. The one convinceth, condemneth, and ſtrippeth man of all hope: the other reviveth, and quickneth him by the merit of another, and the acceptance of grace. The one admits of no mercy, but of righteouſneſſe deſerving life: the latter doth wholy aboliſh that, eſtabliſhing the ſoule upon free mercy alone. That was made to the old man: was before Adam himſelfe: this to the new man, and came after the tranſgreſſion. Read for the firſt, *Coloſſ.*3 10. *Eph.*4.24. Rom. 2. 14. 15. For the ſecond, *Ioh.*1.17. *Ioh.*5.46. *Heb.*4.2. Luke 1 41.& 2.67.&c.

Q. Are there any more differences?

A. Yes, for to ſpeake ſhortly (as one ſaith) they differ. firſt, in kind, for, the firſt was a covenant of friendſhip with Adam: this of reconciliation with enemies. Secondly, In the efficient, for in the firſt God and man both covenant; in the latter God only, man being diſabled. Thirdly, In the object: in the one all are covenanted with, in the latter, a few. Fourthly, in the principle: of the firſt God in his Sovereignty; of the 2. God in meere mercy. Fifthly, the ground-worke: the firſt in mans free will, the latter in Gods free grace. Sixtly, in the matter: of the firſt, the matter, was only life and immortality; of the latter, reſtitution, righteouſnes, life in the preſence of God. Seventhly, in the conditions, for the one required obedience as going before: the other, faith, and that following after, being Gods gift. Eightly, in the effect; the firſt requiring, the latter working righteouſneſſe. Ninthly, the one for a time; the other eternall.

Q. Make ſome uſe of this point of Gods Covenant firſt before you come to the uſes of the Article.

A. It ſhould teach us to adore the wiſedome of God in this manner of manifeſting himſelfe. The Lord held in this covenant of his a long time, ere it could breake out cleerely: only ſuffered a dim light of a Meſſias to come, to be ſcattered among his people, (but from all the world beſide kept it wholly) yea, he darkned it by a world of Ceremonies and Shadowes; and yet fur- Uſe. 1.

ther by a Covenant of workes, which seemed quite contrary to a covenant of grace; and yet by implication, made a darke way to it, convincing men of their inability to keepe it, that so the other might be desired. The loving heart of the Lord was still one and the same to his Church, howbeit the expression of it was reserved to riper times, when the Lord Jesus brought the Spirit of the Covenant with him: Oh! Then how should we in these times, blesse God for making his league and covenant more evident, and not speaking in parables to us as to them? How should the Ministers of God now rejoyce, that the least of the kingdome of the Gospell is greater and more glorious, than the greatest was who lived in and under the ministration of the letter, and outward Covenant only? How should the people cry out and say, Why hast thou revealed thy selfe to us, and not to the World? Especially such as lye under the sence of misery (cut off from hope in themselves) how should they wonder and say: If God had not stooped to this course, what had become of us; where had our amends been, save in our own hands? How should it cause them to be well seen in this Charter of God? to scan and consider well of the parcels and particulars of it, never linning till they be throughly informed of Gods meaning in it, and that to themselves? How should it cut off all our cavils and preposterous exceptions, all carnall reason, bondage, and enmity against God?

Use. 2. Secondly, how should this Covenant of God be as an hiew and cry in the eares of all such as are in the heate of their flight from God, and in the pursuit of other objects, which they are in league with, their lusts, will, pleasures, profits, vanities, which bereave them of mercy? Poore wretch, whither in the Name of God, runnest thou, or flyest thou to seeke ease? or say, thou flyest from the angry brow of wrath; yet I say, why dost thou so? Looke back and hearken, Lo, heere is a covenant of mercy strengthened with the oath and seale of God that cannot lye, and all to perswade thee to breake off thy old league, and to embrace this new one, this eternall one, the sure mercies of David. There is hope (poore wretch) in a covenant, except thou be so saped in sinne or loden with bondage, that no hope of a delivery out of Sion (to save his people from all their iniquities) can savour with thee? If thy medicine be so unpleasant, how unwelcome should thy disease of being out of Covenant be unto thee? especially since that God who offers a Covenant to thee, hath power to be revenged of thee thee for such contempt, and to be revenged of thee for the quarrell of his covenant: that thou walkest contrary to him both in law and Gospell: how should he choose but walke contrary to thee? Shall thy league with lusts and hell fence thee from the revenge of God for this contempt? (See Esay 28.9.) No verily, for thou makest thy selfe equall to that arch-enemy of God, Satan himselfe, and debarrest thy selfe wilfully of that Covenant of grace offered, which he is excluded from finally: but thou excludest thy selfe. This for the point of Covenant.

Q. What else may be said, to lay open this point of Gods finding out this deliverance?

A. This may aggravate it, that the Lord God devised this out of the abundance of his love, and the riches of his mercy, which the holy Ghost useth to call in one word, the graciousnesse of God, of which more shall be spoken in the fourth Article.

Q. Speake somewhat of these, what is the goodnesse of God, or his love, and mercy?

A. It is that attribute of God, whereby he stands well affected to his creature, wishing it well, and desirous to communicate himselfe unto it, in all the meanes of the well-fare of it, for the perfection thereof. This goodnesse, or loving kindnesse first uttered it selfe in mans Creation: wherein such was Gods admirable goodnesse of nature that whereas he might have contented himselfe with the enjoying of himselfe in his own aboundant excellency, or in the angelicall natures and spirits which he framed at the first, as neerest to himselfe: he yet, would not, but caused his infinite fulnesse of goodnesse, to overflow and to communicate it selfe to Earth and dust: as it were to shew what he could doe, in so base and silly an object: Wherefore, of the Earth he framed his flesh, and of his own breath, his spirit: furnishing both with the perfection of his image. Now, when man had lost this goodnesse, yet God lost not his, but still held it out, and continued good to the lost creature.

Q. How did he utter it?

A. In a peculiar kind of goodnesse, that is the love of his mercy: which is the perfection of the other: whereby the Lord, when he might quite have destroyed man, yet would behold him with an eye of love and an heart of mercy as he was miserable, utterly sunke into a dungeon of woe. Then he beheld him with a better goodnesse, even a goodnesse, which imparted it

ſelfe to a miſerable one: finding in the bottome of his heart (though juſtly enraged againſt man for his tranſgreſſion) a ſeed of mercy: which mercy was ſo rich, that, both it ſilenced the loudery of juſtice and revenge; overcame it, exalted it ſelfe above it: and not only prevailed to the bare reſtitution of man, (for ſo he might have done, if he had created another Adam:) But to the reſtoring of him to an uncreated, unchangeable, and eternall happineſſe, ſubſiſting in Chriſt, unto finall perſeverance: yea, deviſed meanes by this fall, how he might both declare all other his attributes in their full beauty, (which in the creation did not appeare) juſtice, wiſedome, mercy and all in one way of deliverance: and alſo make man happier then ever. In the which two (beſides other) ſtands the riches of this goodneſſe and mercy of God to the loſt nature of Adam, as in that of Titus, 3.3.4. hath bin before ſaid in the preface.

Q. What uſe may be made hereof?

A. Surely this, firſt to teach us to eſteeme this attribute of rich mercy and accept it thankfully according to the excellent and full nature thereof. A rich man may give what he will: no hurt to him. Secondly, not to reſt in any inferior goodneſſe, as being of leſſe uſe now, in this our miſery, then before. True it is, there is a relique of Gods firſt goodnes to be ſeen in the creature, and in providence, to ſupport the poore being of man: the Lord in goodnes extends himſelfe to man and beaſt, yea, to ſuch as he never meanes to ſhew mercy unto: but this is only as the act of a Prince, granting to a traytor his life, and liberty of a priſon, with meate and drinke for a while, that ſo he may bring him forth at laſt in open view to execute his juſt revenge upon, by condemning him to moſt bitter execution. Moſt men reſt themſelves ſatisfied with this generall goodnes to the Creature (which yet I grant hath generally mercy in it) but, that excellence of goodnes and love which ſtands in peculiar mercy, in compaſſion of a miſerable loſt creature, for the pardoning of it, reconciling of it to God, ſaving it, and ſettling it in ſuch an eſtate as never ſhall decay, a better then ever Adam had, oh this, they have no joy to looke after! Any inferior degree of kindneſſe, in life, health, wealth, marriage, poſterity, filling belly and purſe, clothing back, &c. will ſerve their turne, though they never equall the Lords beſt love of mercy by applying it! They care for no other goodneſſe, ſave that which may leave them as curſed as it found them.

The

The love of God differs not in substance from his mercy or grace, but in circumstance only: As our condition by nature, is one, that is corrupt, howbeit it admits many respects; so Gods goodnesse to us is one, yet it respects us diversly: as we are shiftlesse to helpe our selves, so he embraces us by free grace, when we never dreamt of it: as we are miserable and stript of all good and hope of it, so he embraces us with mercy and compassion: and as we were enemies, who having hurt the Lord, hated him traytor-like and rebelled against him, so he embraces us with love and affection: shewing what a bottomlesse spirit he hath of goodnes and a fatherly heart, how neere love sits to his soule, that it is more deeply seated in it, then justice and displeasure. Teaching us, not only to gage our own spirits throughly, that we may find out the uttermost rancor and venom that lurkes in us against him; But to breake our hearts in the bosome of this love, and say, Who would so entreate his enemy (having him at so infinite advantage) as thou, Lord, hast entreated me? And more then so, to cast out all base enmity out of our spirits, which judges of God, by our own measure, musing of him as we use to others. Yea, shewing forth a placable, and forgiving heart even to our enemies, that we may shew our selves truely bred of the seed of mercy.

Q. What other uses flow from the Article it selfe?

A. Singular, and that many waies, first. That although Redemption be one undivided worke of the whole Trinity inseparably (as all workes are which are called, without:) yet even in this, there be severall and incommunicable workes of every person concurring: The Son merits and workes out the way of redemption: The Holy Ghost workes the perswasion of it in the Soule. But God the Father is the first moover and ordeyner of it, as the wel-spring whence the purpose and also manifestation thereof proceeded. Beware then, least either we confound these three actions, or yet exclude any of the persons from their own operations. But let us adore them all: the Spirit in the worke of applying of Christ, and the Father in the worke of giving Christ, and in that love of his from which both Christ and the Satisfaction came. We see that, Titus 3.3. the Father is called our Saviour, Ephes. 1.3. God the Father is the fountaine of all blessing both earthly and heavenly: and so in 2 Pet. 1,2,3. and in Ephes. 1. 18. Paul prayes that God the Father Use. 1.

Father would reveale the myſtery of Chriſt in the acknowledgement of him. Therefore do not only learne to conceave aright of God in thy mind, but to direct thy ſoule aright in Prayer unto him: That as he is the Root of Redemption, and was in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5, 16. 17. reconciling the world to himſelfe, and is the God of Chriſt and above him (as Mediator:) ſo he would graciouſly be the firſt mooving cauſe of thy effectuall Calling alſo. And yet let not this hinder thee from approaching this ſealed fountaine, in and by Chriſt, who onely hath revealed him; for elſe he is inacceſſible, yea, a gulfe and depth to devoure, but an open fountaine in him, as in Zach. 12. 10. Thus (I ſay) thou mayeſt come to the Father, beſeeching him to accept his Sonne, and ſend his Spirit into thy heart to draw thee, to convert thee, and to ſeale up his love unto thee, according to his firſt good pleaſure in chuſing of thee. That ſo thy ſprings being all in God, and thy hope in God, thy ſtreames alſo of thankesgiving and glory may all flow through Chriſt unto his Sea, againe; of which after.

Uſe. 2. Secondly, behold in the Father an infinite depth of love and mercy toward ſunken man, thus to repayre him: Let it be as a great depth unto thee paſt ſadoming: ſay with Paul, Oh! The depth of the riches of the wiſedome and the love of God! how are his wayes paſt finding out! Aggravate it to thy ſelfe as the Scripture doth, Mica. 7. end. Who is a God like to our God, paſſing by, pardoning and ſubduing the ſinnes of his heritage! So Rom. 5. Doubtleſſe ſcarſe for a good man one would dye, but not for an unrighteous: but God even while we were yet enemies, gave his Sonne even as a patterne of bottomleſſe love: For who will ſave his enemy having him at vantage? So 1 Ioh. 3. Herein is love, not that we loved him firſt, but he loved us having nothing but odiouſneſſe in us, even that he might ſhew what was in his heart, and what he could doe. So Eſay 55. 7. For my wayes are not as your wayes, nor my thoughts as yours: but as much above them as the Heaven above the earth. You thinke that your enemy would not ſpare you, becauſe you know your own heart would not ſpare him. But God intended to deſtroy all enmity in Redeeming man.

Branch. 1. Therefore judge aright of this love firſt: And ſecondly, profit by the meditation of it. Judge of it, to be the very fulneſſe of all in all: to be a length, depth, height, and bredth, neither to be be reached unto, searched into, comprehended or atteyned: but only by faith embraced and rested upon. The height of it was from all eternity, from the Love of the good pleasure of his will, past our reason, yea above the Angels, as much above our sence, as before all time. The depth of it, reaching lower than hell, beyond the possibility of devils and all the gates of Hell to reverse or disanull. The length of it extending to all eternity and enduring for ever without all repentance or shaddow of change. The bredth of it universall, even as wide as all the ends of the earth, as far as God hath any elect: and inclosing all sinne, guilt and curse within a circle, so that none of them can get beyond the compasse of the fulnesse and intent of it. Oh! What a meditation might it afford to the boundlesse, restles, thoughts of man? Looke back into the text, Tit. 3. 3. what hath been sayd of the kind of this love: it was above the love of Creation, by which God (out of his perfection) would communicate somewhat of himselfe to a peece of earth: But by this love of mercy he would finde out further goodnesse to the distressed. This for our judgement.

For our benefit, let it comfort all poore soules that need it, both as concerning the Propensenesse of God to love them: and his constancy of love toward them whom he already loveth. If thou hadst procured this love, well mightst thou feare the losse of it; But if infinite goodnesse and a bredth incomprehensible were the fountaine of it (I speake to a poore soule under the condition, loden and lost) what doubt is there of his loving thee? If he freely first meant it, and cut off the way of justice, and the bridge of vengeance that he might not passe it over; why shouldst thou thinke that he should destroy his owne worke? Why should he not be willing to love thee, what soever thy sinne be? And having loved thee eternally, what shall or can enter into him to change this principle in him, or cause him to repent? Branch 2.

Moreover, this Doctrine serveth especially to stay the heart of a distressed wretch in the sight of his misery, by this light and dore of hope: Although farre from believing it, yet by hope to sustaine it selfe from utter sinking. Oh, blesse that fountaine which could not be dryed up by sinne! rather occasioned it selfe to mercy by misery. Wonder why Angels were left remedilesse, not we! Ponder it in our deepe feares, and Use 3.

remember the Gospell of deliverance is from God as well as the Law of terror: despaire not, the Lord cuts off none, who cut not off themselves.

Use 4. Againe, let it teach us to gather to our selves a strong bottome, against that slavish feare and enmity of our spirit against God. Why, Oh, man! If God were as thou framest him, where had thy hope been? Dost thou not see that the Lord Jesus himselfe came from the mercy of an enemy? Is then anger alone in God, who against the cry of infinite justice, had a deeper mercy in store? dareſt thou call him an hard Master or adversary, who of his own will and love cut off his owne plea, and devised a delivery, when no man or Angell could dreame of it? Is he like to reject a poore soule, who hath layd the foundation of his grace in such a foundation as Emanuel? Doest thou so requite him? Did he so love the World, and doest thou still deeme him so hatefull?

Use 5. Fifthly, let it teach the Ministers of the Gospell to looke to the order and substance of their teaching. The order, not to mismatch these two doctrines of the first and second part of the Catechisme, teaching this before the other be well grounded in the hearer. For the substance, taking heed least they defraud the soule of this point, when she is low brought: but to offer it to her as an upholder for a time, till more come.

Use 6. But especially, let this be a meane to carry a poore heart, that would faine believe, quite beyond and out of her selfe. The meditation of this freedome of Gods purpose first and especially for the glorifying of himselfe in all his attributes, should ravish the heart, and carry it out of the baseneſſe of selfe and selfe-ends, into the streame of this soveraigne will and glory of God. It should be above our own salvation. And it cannot be well conceived how those preparatives to faith should be wrought in the hearer savingly, and not slavishly, as endeavours of our own, except this streame of Gods Glory, and ayme at his own endes above ours, be set before our eyes, to abandon all selfe-respects in the matter of faith and salvation. Let us diligently try our own spirit from the true Spirit of Grace by this marke.

Further addition of the scope and purpose of this Article.

Q. What else doth this Article containe?

A. Besides this, that God hath not left man to sinke in his own misery, but hath in his deepe wisedome found out the way of his deliverance: this Article aymes at a further end, viz. to make God the Father, the most free and soveraigne worker and applyer of this deliverance to the soule. For what else should it profit us that he hath devised such a way as Christ, and such meanes as the Gospell believed: except he tooke it upon him to possesse the soule of it also? And the Holy Ghost is frequent in Scripture, to proove God the Father to be the only free agent in this worke: calling him the begetter of us; of his own free will: the Worker of both will and deed in us of his owne good pleasure: the faithfull beginner and finisher of his owne worke. Especially that it is neither of the willer or runner: but meerely of his mercy that we be called effectually. No man can come to Christ, except God draw him. God is as soveraigne in his applying, as in the finding out of this way. And why? Surely, because as in the way, so in the working the soule to it, he seekes his own glory, and the deepe riches of his grace to be magnified, and himselfe to be adored in the joynt meeting of his justice, mercy, power and truth, in one: that through Iesus Christ praise may be given to God the Father; and that as all things are from him, and by him, so they all may be to him and to the prayse of his glory.

Iam. 1. 17. Phil. 2. 13. Heb. 10. 23. Rom. 9. 16. Ioh 6. 44. Col. 3. 17. Rom. 11. 36.

This point well weighed, would lead us as by a thred through each branch or Article of this second part, with light and favour: when we conceive the Lord Jesus himselfe only as a Servant of this soveraigne Will of God: who is therefore called Gods Christ, reade 2 Cor. 3. ult. when we conceive the offer of Grace his; the benefits offered his: yea not only faith, but also the conditions of it, an humble and hungering soule; his gift, his preparations: and so throughout all this second part, looke upon God as that free principle, in whose meere will it is to enlarge or restreine the heart of a man, as he sees good. A point of speciall consequence, and properly belonging to this place, 2. Cor. 5. 17, 18. he being as the root of all, and being in Christ, reconciling the World to himselfe, not imputing the sins; till which great worke be effected, this deliverance is not effected in us. And therefore Psal. 32. 1. the Lord is said to impute no sin, and 2 Cor. 5. 21. to make us his righteousnesse.

1 Cor. 3. 11.

And, although I referre the point of imputation to the second Article of Christ, (as presupposing his merit of necessity) yet for the Worker, its properly a consequent of this Article.

God doing all his workes perfectly, and as I ſaid freely, for the attaining of his own ends in us, that he who boaſteth, might boaſt of the Lord.

Vſe of this addition.

Q. Doth this point tend to any uſe?

Branch. 1.

A. Yea, and that ſuch, as I wiſh every good hearer and reader of the points following, to lay it to heart: For firſt, this will teach us to conceive in what ſence the Lord doth offer us his Chriſt, command us to believe, and promiſe to eaſe us if we hunger, mourne, be poore in ſpirit: To wit, that he is farre from intimating any power or will in us, to concurre with him in any the leaſt of theſe, or to aſcribe ought to him that willeth or runneth. But rather to ſhew what thoſe excellent graces are, which he freely worketh in all whom he will ſave. He for his honour ſake will effect all theſe meanes in whomſoever he hath appointed to the end it ſelfe of Redemption. Sweete is that place, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. 10. That he may be admired in all ſuch as beleeve, becauſe they have received our word, in that day. He ſaith not that all they may be admired who have themſelves believed: but he admired in them. For what? ſurely not for their working grace in themſelves, but for the works ſake of God that hath wrought it.

Branch 2.

Secondly, this will helpe us to judge, who thoſe parties are, in all likelyhood, whom God will concurre with and aſſiſt in the uſe of meanes tending to deliverance. Such is the baſe ſlavery of man, that he diſtruſts him ſooner in no one thing, than in that wherein God offers himſelfe to the ſoule. As in Manoa's example and Gedeons appeares, Judg. 13. 22. and 6. 13. Oh, ſaith a fearefull heart! God is free, and neede not worke, ſave where he liſt, and therefore he is bound to none, and I feare he will worke in 100, ere he worke in me! Oh, poore wretch, Hath he not ſhewed his will, in whom he will worke? Even in thoſe that ſeeke his end more than their own in the uſe of meanes. If thou knowing what God only aymes at in all his Redemption, viz. the glory of his rich grace, and all his holy Attributes (and not at thine or my ſalvation for our ends) ſhalt yet goe to worke heere thine own way, then know, God never did or will croſſe his own end; nor bleſſe any ſuch as ſet up other ends of their own againſt, with, or above his. But this followeth ſoundly; That all ſuch as in meanes uſing, doe fixe their eye upon Gods purpoſe, and abaſe themſelves in the ſight of their their own fillineſſe, to reach ſuch a thing as deliverance is: and adore his free ſoveraigne working, as the only able effecter hereof: all ſuch I ſay, as thus worke with God, and under God, may know that the Lord will aſſiſt them: for why? he aſſiſts and ſeconds his own way in them who ſeeke his glory above their own ſalvation. And although he be ſo free, that he is tyed to none, yet I ſay (with reverence) he tyes himſelfe graciouſly to ſuch as doe ſeeke him, not themſelves; for elſe ſhould he contradict his own ends, which is blaſphemous: And this point I deſire to be marked. For who ſo they are who will not ſee this truth of Gods free working for his own glorious ends: I affirme its unavoidable, but either they muſt moſt murmuringly and repiningly reject the way of God to Heaven, as contrary to fleſh, (which is the greateſt ſigne of a caſtaway) or elſe mixe themſelves, their wits, wiſedome, policy, and devices in the getting of Heaven, with Gods grace and mercy, and ſo make Chriſt a Stalking horſe to their own parts, and to ſerve themſelves.

Thirdly, this point doth moſt lively inſtruct us how we may ſo goe to worke in the uſe of meanes, as our own Conſcience may not accuſe us, for taking Gods office of freedome and ſoveraignty out of his hands. It troubleth many (to inſtance in one particular) how they ſhould ſo goe to worke in hearing, praying, and Sacraments, for the attayning of the Condition of Faith, that is, mourning and hunger, &c. that they might not ſeeke faith upon their own termes. They ſee the word full of promiſes of eaſe and comfort, to ſuch as doe mourne: and they would gladly ſeeke Heaven in Gods way: only they cannot ſee how a condition to Faith can be urged of us, without our own labour and will be acceſſary (which if it be, what doth our doctrine of the condition differ from Popery, and her diſpoſitions?) I anſwer, The reaſon of this darkeneſſe is, becauſe men cannot be beaten from this, that in ſeeking theſe conditions, they muſt ſeeke, firſt their owne good and welfare! This is the maine ayme of moſt hearers, if they have Faith, they are ſure to ſcape hell: and if they have the conditions of Faith wrought, Faith will follow: hence the condition is ſo layd at by people: even as men covet money or wares, for their uſe. But poore ſoule: tell me if this be thy ayme, wherein differeſt thou from a drunkard or ſwearer?

Is any man so forlorne, as not to desire to dye the death of the righteous?

Oh (say men) but drunkards use not the meanes, and we doe? I answer, Yes, (now all sorts use meanes, none are so vile, but they will be religious) but I will grant thee it. Is the question whether thou be lesse ill than such, or whether thy ayme be sound in seeking the condition or no! If so, then I say, thou in ayming finally that it may goe well with thee, differest not in kinde from such an one! No, the honest soule sets up God in his own way of Christ, in his own ends, the glory of all his attributes (that he may be admired in working Faith in such a wretch) the freedome of his working, that in all these her own thoughts, affections and zeale, might stinke as Peters nets did, (when Christ so strangely had fished for him) and the truth is, her scope is as much to abhorre her selfe, and looke into an higher cause, as thine is to get Heaven for thy selfe. She seekes the glory of his wisedome, power, mercy, and freedome; who sought out such a deliverance, workes it in her, and all that concerne it, Faith and the conditions of it: the thought of the Asses is turned to the thought for the Sonne; she sees that divine purity and excellency in being Gods instrument to these ends, that she looses her selfe, and all in the meditation thereof, and suffers the Lord to save her, while her soule is set to adore him in his own ends, as most precious. And this setting ayme aside, her seeking the condition of Faith, is but as a morall worke with her, savoring of her selfe.

Quest. Some will alledge, Doe ye thinke every weake beginner to be so holy as to preferre Gods glory to his own Salvation? I answer, No, not all, but I take them to be in forwardnesse to it, and not farre from it. And secondly I say, its one thing to aske such a question of a weake beginner (who would perhaps stagger at it) another thing to say what God works in such a one, although he know it not! For sure it is, such is Gods worke in his, as to convince them in experience, that all seeking of grace, for a mans own happinesse, is poore seeking (for the present, till God worke better:) and all seeking for selfe must be from selfe and by selfe. But when the boate is tyed to the Ship of Gods glory, she needs no more rowing of her selfe, than the boate doth: its enough for her, that she is set upon such a streame, and tyed to such a Ship, as can carry her of it selfe, and drown all her own welfare in the Lord. Sweete was that speech of honest Mephibosheth of Ziba: Yea, let him take all, foraſmuch as my Lord the King is come home in peace: The loſſe of his owne lands was forgot in Davids happineſſe. The greater pitty that he ſhould ſo requite an innocent: but however he fared at Davids hands, doe thou ſo, and try if the Lord can faile thee! Oh, ſay thus, Lord to farre am I from ſeeking the condition of Faith, for Faith and my ſelfe, that I deſire to ſay If Lord thou ſee that a broke heart, mourning, poverty of ſpirit, yea faith it ſelfe may tend to thy glory of the working them in me: Oh, worke them. Elſe, Lord, what joy ſhould I finde in them, as they come from my ſelfe? What were Heaven it ſelfe, if it were not to glorifie thee there! Lord, I would deſire to have none, rather than in having all to want an heart to admire thee in thy wayes of mercy and truth, or ceaſe to be raviſht with the ſight of thy glory! For without this, its impoſſible but either I muſt mixt my ſtuffe with thine, or which is worſe, fret and rage at the freedom of thy working. And this I deſire may be weighed: and ſo much for this firſt Article. 2 Sam. 13. 3

Article II.

Queſtion.

What is the ſecond Article of this ſecond part?

A. That the only happy meane and inſtrument ordained by God for the foundation of election, and the purchaſing or making good this his purpoſe of deliverance, was the Lord Jeſus, the eternall word of the Father, made Emanuel, God with us, No other name under Heaven is given to ſave us, by way of mediation or inſtrument, but he, Act. 4. 12. And this Jeſus eternally intended to the Church, the Lord in the fulneſſe of time ſent into the world, to make open declaration of this worke. Rom. 3. 25. God ſet him forth as a Propitiation, that all might ſee the Salvation of God. The onely inſtrument of working out this deliverance, is the Lord Ieſus. Eph. 1. 3. Acts 4. 12. Rom. 3. 35.

This Article fitly ſucceeds the former. For, as in that I have ſhewed the abundant love of God to loſt man, in reſpect of Election and covenant: So, this ſecond ſheweth in and through whom he intended that this covenant of his should be established. The Father of our Lord Jesus was content to part with his own Sonne, and to make him the worker of this deliverance: rather than it should faile in execution thereof. For in him the Lord purposed as in a Mirror to declare the infinite grace of his election: the freedome of the Offer, the efficacy of calling, of Faith, Sanctification and eternall life: all being established in him, and nothing toward salvation subsisting without him. Therefore at the end of each gift, Christ is mentioned as the gift of that gift. Rom. 7. 24, 25. Who shall deliver me? I thanke God through Iesus Christ. So 1 Tim. 1. 10. Mercy and truth abounded: In whom? Christ Iesus. 1 Cor. 15. end. Thankes bee to GOD who hath given us victory. Through whom? Christ Jesus. So, Rom. 6. ult. The gift of God is eternall life! by whom? by Christ Iesus our Lord. All the whole frame of grace and godlinesse is founded and sustained by him: election it selfe, Ephesians 1. 4. and all the linkes of this Chaine are fastened by him, as the Tabernacle with Taches and Sockets. No wonder therefore that the Scripture useth such words to expresse this act of God, and the effect of it, as being the most eminent, precious and free gift that ever was given to the Church: farre above that perfection of Adam. Sometime that he gave Christ, Iohn 3. 12. God so loved the World that he gave his onely Beloved Sonne, &c. Sometimes he is said to commend his love unto us in this, Rom. 5. 8. So 1 Iohn. 4. 10. Herein is love, that God sent his Sonne for us. So Gal. 4. 4. In the fulnesse of time, God sent his Sonne. In which respect Christ is sayd to obey and come, Heb. 10, 7. Iob. 3. 19. So he is sayd to be set forth, and brought forth (as he had long been shaddowed) Rom. 3. 25. where both the eternall and temporall gift of Christ is mentioned: and so Heb. 1. 6. in which the royalnesse of the Lord Jesus his gift is described. So that he gave him freely, undesired, unsought, unexpected, undeserved. The whole world then lying in profaneneſse; yea he is as old a gift as sin was a transgression.

And although it be needelesse for us to descant whether the Lord out of his deepe Wisedome could have found out any other way, but this to save us: yet this we may say, that seeing this is the Lords way, it behooves us to thinke it the best. Nay seeing we cannot conceive any other way in congruity, how an infinite offended majesty could be satisfied save by an equall

person and payment to his justice, it were an infinite derogation to his Wisedom and predestination, to thinke, that this was not the only way, not only which is, but which could be devised to this end. For seeing a greater and fuller could not be, what injustice were it for God to put that upon his Sonne; which might have been put upon an inferior mediator? Therefore the Scripture runnes upon it as the only necessary and full way, as Rom. 8. 3. When through the infirmity of flesh, the Law could not save, God sent his Sonne, &c. Now as he was that only full, necessary way: so yet he could not effect it without satisfied justice cryed for revenge, and called upon power and wrath to execute vengeance upon all transgressors. Till this was satisfied fully by a surety undertaking a full ransome and price: the Lord could not (without denying of himselfe in his Attributes) hold a sinner guiltlesse. Therefore when the Lord intended a free and mercifull exemption of some from that perdition they were in: he did co-intend the Lord Jesus to be the Foundation of it, by saving his justice unimpeached, in a satisfaction. Not his incarnation or union only, not some reproaches, or some act of his offices, as Prophet, or King, or Priest; no not some effusion of blood, but such an one as the pouring out of his Soule to death, must effect it; because, till there was full content given to justice, mercy was locked up from discovering it selfe. Esay 35, 12. Rom. 8. 3.

Now as without this last and chiefe worke, nothing could helpe us, neither miracles, teares, preaching or praying: so, all these and all the acts and preparations of his life standing in order and respect to this Ransome of his, are joyntly meritorious and expiatory for our redemption; his obedience to parents, walking in calling, keeping company, temptings, fastings, preachings and the like.

Q. Tell me what especiall heads may this whole worke of his meditation be referred to?

A. Its a maine point to consider of for the stay of a poore soule; for seeing the scope of God and Christ was to give and receive so full a price of reconciliation, that Justice accepting it, the sinne and curse of the elect, might as fully be pardoned and removed, as if they had never sinned, or could themselves have sufficiently satisfied, it imports us to be well seen in the contents thereof. For looke how many heads there are thereof, so many wel-heads or springs the soule hath to revive and encourage encourage it selfe by, in the approching to the Father. I answer then, this whole price of Christ stood partly in a qualification of his person, to be in case to satisfie; Partly in the actuall performance of the satisfaction it selfe.

Q. Touching the Qualification of person, what doth it containe?

A. Two parts, Union and Unction.

Q. What meane you by Union?

A view of all the welsprings of our Salvation in Christ. 1 Union hath 3 heads.

A. Three distinct things. First, The incarnation or flesh of Christ. Secondly, The Divinity of Christ. Thirdly, The joyning of these two natures into one person: or more truely, the assuming of the nature of flesh unto the second person of the Sonne of God, not to swallow it up, but to retaine still each his own distinct nature, yet within Union. Let the learned pardon my logique in this division.

Q. Proceede on, and name the rest, that they may be under our view altogether, and then we will touch them briefely in severall: What meane you by Vnction?

2 Unction.

A. The calling or separation of the Lord Jesus being thus united in his natures, to be a meete Mediator: which was the Sanctification of him in time actually to the worke of a Mediator, to which before all time, God had deputed him.

Q. Being thus qualified, what is the performance it selfe?

A. It stands of two parts: either Meriting this price for all the elect, or actuall Applying it unto them.

Q. What is the meriting part?

3 Merit. 1 In active obedience. As a surety, not only an Arbiter.

A. Its a double performance, both of Actuall obedience to the Law, and suffering the curse required thereby and due to sinne.

Q. And how performed he these two?

A. By way of reall suretiship, and no otherwise: for taking upon him the person of a Mediator, to stand between wrath and us, not by Arbitrement (as in humane Sequestrations) but by payment for us: loe, he takes therefore our person upon him, becomes piacular, that is, first, seazed with our sinne by imputation, that by his righteousnesse he might deface it, and fulfill the Law broken by us: and secondly, seazed with our curse, that by his suffering death, he might quit us of the feare and punishment thereof. This ground is to be specially noted.

Heb. 2. 15.

Q. Touching the latter of these: his suffering or Passion, (because cause it hath the honour of a more immediatly essentiall obedience and merit) tell me how many parts hath it?

A. Two, the Sacrifice it selfe or Passion, and the conquest or victory ensuing it, whereby he gave the passion a full power to become, or rather to be declared satisfactory. 3 Passive. 4 The Conquest.

Q. To conclude, what is the Applying part?

A. The act of his interceding Mediation heere on Earth, and especially in Heaven, serveth to settle the merit of redemption upon all the elect in the due season thereof. 5 Application of Merit.

Q. You having given a briefe view of this maine Article; tell me, why you call them wel-springs of salvation, shew me the number of them, and then in order shew what each of them is, with the use thereof?

A. I first call them so, because the holy Ghost, Esay 12. 3. termes them so, and because they are so many grounds of justifying Faith, at least meanes of warranting the soule to apply a promise if duely preached and heard. Their number is seaven. First, Incarnation. Secondly, Divinity. Thirdly, Personall Union, with Annointing attending it. Fourthly, Actuall obedience. Fifthly, Passive. Sixthly, Conquest. Seventhly, Applying of all to the elect. Some of which although some doe sever from the matter of merit, yet we will herein take liberty to differ from them, by the warrant of the Word. Why called wel-springs. Their number. 7.

Q. What is the first?

A. That by the power of the Holy Ghost sanctifying the flesh of the Virgin, and without any active principle of conveying sinne by man, the Lord Jesus being conceived in, and borne of the poore Virgin did submit himselfe to such unspeakeable abasement as to take upon him the nature of man. Not of Abraham or Peter, but of mankind; (the selfe-same nature, which sinned) in the generality thereof: That in and by it, he might obey and suffer those things which the Divine nature could not be capable of; and that being seen dwelling and conversing among men, he might put it out of question, that not for Angels, but for our nature, even man, fallen and cursed, he became a satisfaction to God. And that so he might bring this nature into an happy condition againe, and every one that needs it, might enjoy it without any doubt or distrust. See these texts. The first, Incarnation. Matth. 1. 18. Iohn. 1. 2. Gal. 4. 4. Heb. 2. 14. Luke 1. 35. Matth. 1. 20. Esay 7. 14.

Q. What further things are to be observed in this point of the incarnation?

Explication of the point in 3. things. 1 Realneſſe.

A. Theſe three. 1. The realneſſe of the fleſh of the Lord Jeſus. 2. The differences of his incarnation from all others. 3, Reſolution of ſome doubts about it. Touching the firſt, by realneſſe I meane, that he tooke very fleſh of very fleſh, and not (as ſome heretiques taught) And ſome of the Separatiſts relapſed from their old tenents, among other deluſions of theirs, have written, viz. That Chriſt tooke not very fleſh of Mary, but only the nouriſhment of a fleſh already given to her by the Holy Ghoſt, thus overthrowing the very foundation. That he tooke only upon him a ſimilitude of fleſh, and a meere ſhaddow of it: (abuſing that text Rom. 8. 3. where ſimilitude is put for Samenes.) And that it was ſo, not only his own words proove, Feele me and handle me, and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as I have. Luke 24. 39. but the circumſtances of his incarnation, as that it pleaſed the Father not to make him a grown man at the firſt, but to bring him through all the degrees of a man, to be begotten in the wombe of a ſinner, to be borne, to grow up, and to undergoe all abaſements of infancy, child-hood, education, ſubjection, converſation among men, that it might be beyond exception that he was truely man.

2 Differences 1. 2.

2. The differences of his incarnation were theſe. 1. In reſpect of his Father: He was not ordinarily begotten by man, but by the holy Ghoſt who fulfilled the worke of a Father: He overſhadowed her (to note the myſticalneſſe of this generation, farre above the power of man to declare) and 2. in regard of his mother a Virgin before, in and after his incarnation: not defiling him with her corruption becauſe ſeparated from her, nor he defiled by her wombe. A Virgin killed: and a Virgin is the meane of ſaving. Divines make theſe foure differences of generation. 1. When man is made man without Father or mother, as Adam in his creation: The 2, when man is made without a woman, as Eve was: The 3. when man is made both by man and woman, and ſo are all her poſterity made: The laſt when man is made without eyther man or woman, and ſo was the fleſh of Chriſt made. Thirdly, in regard of himſelfe thus borne, who was not as other men, ſubſiſting perſonally in themſelves as individualls: But he tooke our nature, the ſeede of Adam according to the Scriptures: and cauſed it to ſubſiſt in the 2 perſon of the God-head: which could not have beene if he had been a man in perſon, for then a perſon had been ſwal-

lowed up in a person, or else there could not have been one person of the Mediator. But his flesh being a meere nature might easily be assumed into a person, and make up one and the same person of Emanuel.

The third point is the resolving of some doubts: which may be these three: the first is, Why it was necessary that our Lord Jesus should be flesh? I answere as before, that he might thereby be fitted and accommodated for the worke of suffering: which else could not be. Reade Heb. 10, 9. Lo, I come, in the volume of thy booke it is written of me, that I should doe thy Will O God: Sacrifice thou wouldest not (for their bloud could not satisfie in a shaddow) but a body thou hast prepared for me, wherein I might performe the worke. No expiation of the Law could be done, save by bloud; but the expiation of the Gospell must be done, by better bloud. The God-head could not suffer: the man-hood could not merit infinitely: the God-head therefore must merit by a flesh that could suffer. 3. The doubts. 1. Heb. 9.

Secondly, why must the flesh of a man and his nature be taken to satisfie? I answere. The flesh of a person could have reached to a personall satisfaction only. But the flesh of our nature, or the nature of flesh, might satisfie for nature it selfe, and all persons contained under it. Not to speake of another cause, to wit, Christ tooke flesh of his Mother, not his Father, that he might avoyd the contagion; Contagion in the active principle of nature and the sinne of Adam. As we know that among the Israelites the Males only were circumcised, not because the females also might not (for we reade in story that sundry of the posterity of Ismael, circumcised their females also) but to typify this very thing. But to the question it selfe, I say further, The reason why the flesh of man must satisfie, is, because the threat of God to Adam was this, That when he ate of the Tree he should dye the death: now this must needs be suffered by himselfe, or by one in his nature; for as the soule that sinneth shall dye, so the nature that sinneth must dye. See Hebrewes 2. 14, 15. He tooke not the flesh of Angells; but seeing the children did partake of flesh and bloud, therefore it was meete also that he should take part with them. As if a man should build an house of Cedar, having pulled down an house of studds: so doth the Lord by this his device glorify his power and love, in raysing up a building of glorious immortality in Heaven, out of our 2. Quest.

own ruines, the flesh of Adam, &c. Secondly that so he might be a fit person to mediate and goe between two parties at oddes: for a mediator is not of one, Gal. 3.20. and therefore himselfe must partake of both, that he might reconcile both. Thirdly, our right of redemption must come from Christ as next of kinne to us, that he might rayse up seed to his dead kinsman old Adam, who dyed without issue of grace: and so by this meanes the inheritance (not the old, but a better) is settled upon our family. Lastly, hereby we are assured of our Resurrection; seeing the head of the body is risen, the body shall not be drowned in the water, nor abide in corruption: So saith Paul 1 Cor. 15.22. As by man came death, so by man came the Resurrection: Our flesh cannot chuse but arise with his (in her order) because his body is not compleat without us.

3 Quest. Thirdly, it is demanded, Why the second person in Trinity must take flesh? I answer, though it be curious, yet it is sensibly to be answered; first, because the word of Creation and first subsisting in created goodnesse, must also be the instrument of the uncreated. Secondly it behooved that as Christ is the engraven forme of his Fathers likenesse, and the brightnesse of his Person: therefore so, he should be the instrument to bring us to partake the same image after we had lost it: and the like proportion holds between him and us in point of service and Sonne-ship; it was fit that the righteous servant and naturall Sonne of God should make us his servants and adopted children.

Uses 1. First, conclude with the uses; let none expect all uses which may flow from hence; I only ayme at the point as it is a welspring of Salvation; and as in this so in the rest, I only attend my scope. First, its confutation not only of old fantasticall heretickes, but of late Papists who destroy the realnes and truth of the body of our satisfier, and so of the satisfaction it selfe. Let us not thinke the quarrell of our Martyrs to be needlesse, who shed their bloud in the defence of the verity of flesh, against their ubiquity which destroyes the properties of the true body, and so, the body it selfe. While they seeme to extoll the flesh above it selfe, loe, they depresse the satisfaction farre under it selfe. As the Lord Jesus therefore sayd to one that dissuaded his suffering, so doe we to these who disanull it, much more,

Matth. 16. 22. Get thee behinde me Satan, thou savorest not the things of God,

but of men. To answer their frivolous cavills is not for this place.

Secondly, its instruction, teaching us to magnifie this mystery of godlinesse, Jesus incarnate, 1 Tim. 3, end. Its true, that as those Jewes and Gentiles used the matter, the flesh of CHRIST was a stumbling block and foolishnesse, through his baseness: But since the Gospell revealed this mystery, it became a Mirror, and indeed so it is, a glasse in which the view of religion is beheld cleerely. Take away this, and take away the doctrine of pardon, of sanctification, take away faith, hope, fellowship in Christs sufferings: take away adoption, glory, mortification of sinne, all these subsist in it. Its a modell of the unspeakeable justice, love, wisedome of God in one: a farre greater excellency is in it, then in the Creation. An infinite evidence of the humility and Selfe-deniall of our head, teaching us how to empty our selves, and be nothing for his sake: when we see he hath forsaken glory and the opinion of holinesse to be shame and sinne for us, that we might be grace and glory for ever. Its the uniting and reconciling into one, all the shattered parts of the Creation, heaven, earth and hell, (in a sort) are become at league with us: yea restored to themselves, their order; beauty, influence and obedience: without this flesh, the frame of all would perish. It was and is the song and wonderment of the Angels: It was then and still is that which brings Glory to God, peace to the earth, good will to men. It caused Mary to exult and magnifie God, the Shepheards to report it, the Wise men to travaile after it, Herod and Jerusalem to tremble, Simeon and Anna to rejoyce, blesse and embrace; and all the Church of God to triumph! and shall we hold our peace or want affections and admirations? Only it is the horror of divels, and the confusion of the gates of hell, and those that shall behold him whom they have pierced. But for them for whom he was pierced, he is their life, their breath, grace and glory! Oh, That we could so behold it, not onely carnally in twelve dayes of the yeare, but in a perpetuall jubilee of Spirit, yesterday, to day, and for ever. Use 2. Branch. 1.

Secondly, it should teach us to cast off all our base carnall reasons and distrusts, either touching our salvation or protection. Hereafter judge not God by outward appearances: In the fulnesse of 4000. yeares flesh came, which seemed to have quite bin forgotten, what then shall seem impossible? If the body of all Branch. 2.

Promises

Promiſes be come, how ſhall the branches be performed? It Eſay 7,14. was uſed by Eſay as an anſwer from GOD of delivering his Church from Aſhur, as a thing including all other Salvations: and ſhall we diſtruſt him for any petit one, who hath granted the maine? Whatſoever our feares, ſtreights, vexations, diſcontents be, let all vaniſh before the face of this eminent deliverance; hee that hath given us this, what can hee deny us?

Branch. 3. Thirdly, let us learne whither to goe when we want any preferment in priviledges, or any grace to furniſh our hearts or lives, or to fit us for our places, duties and callings, or for uſe of ordinances: eſpecially when we are under ſtreights and bitter enemies, Oh! doe as the kindred of a favorite in Court would doe: they would confidently improove that favour which a brother, father, or kinſman of theirs hath with the Prince, and hope (as dwarfes upon Giants ſhoulders) to get above their adverſarie, or to attaine ſome grant of their petitions: ſo let us be perſwaded alſo. That our fleſh glorified in Heaven, beares ſuch ſtroke with the Father, that he will heare him in all he requeſts; yea let us remember that he therefore tooke fleſh and felt all our ayles and infirmities, that he might pitty us; and be afflicted with us in all our afflictions and temptations, as Eſay 63, 9. and will not let us lye under any ſtreits which he can rid us of: For he counts ours his, and our ſelves his; will doe for us in this as in all other things, as for his own fleſh, purge our fleſh of our ſinfulneſſe, and heale us of our diſeaſes, and ſanctifie us, with his excellencies, that they may appeare in us, and he be admired in us both here and at his comming, and after his glory, to which he will not linne till he hath brought us farre above the reach of ſinne, Satan and ſorrow.

Uſe. 3 Branch. 1. Thirdly, let it exhort us to ſundry duties: I will preſſe them by degrees. Firſt, in the difficulty which we finde in the life of our Faith, let us draw neere to the fleſh of our Mediator for influence and ſuccour: Oh! how farre off doe promiſes ſeeme to be unto us? Chriſt is our peace in guilt of conſcience, ſtrength to ſuſteine us with patience in our croſſes: liberty from all bondage: ſufficiency to enable us to walke with GOD, to crucifie corruption, to perſever, to attaine the Reſurrection of the dead. Why then are theſe and we no more familiar? Surely ly unbeliefe makes them ſtrangers to us. Why ſo? Is the Lord Jeſus ſtrange? Is he ſo farre off that we ſhould neede to climbe up to Heaven for him, or digge to Hell for him? No, he is neere us, his fleſh is the ſame with us, bone of our bone: And ſhould it be ſo hard with us to apply him in theſe our wants, as if he and we were as farre diſtant as Heaven and Earth? No ſurely: his Word and promiſe are neere us, made yea and Amen by his fleſh, and by the ſameneſſe of nature with us: let us helpe our ſelves by his neereneſſe, and be ſtrengthned to believe, that theſe graces cannot be farre off, when the ſubject of them, our fleſh is ſo neere us?

Secondly, it ſhould encourage our faint, timorous hearts, (ſo many as are loden with our burdens) to come to the fleſh of this Mediator for eaſe. And heere note theſe ſteps following. Branch 2. Of ſome ſteps. 1. First, that we behold in this fleſh of Chriſt a generall fitneſſe in him to receive every one whoſe nature hee beareth: for in that nature each perſon is incloſed. And as at his birth all ſorts welcommed him, ſome idiots, ſome wiſe, ſome Citizens, ſome rude ſwaines, ſome noble, ſome meane, ſome poore, ſome rich: ſo it was a ſigne that he was a Chriſt for all ſorts ſave unbelievers: and as he was, ſo is he ſtill, ſo that none that neede him, ought to diſtruſt him. 2. Secondly, we ſhould helpe our weakeneſſe in comming to God the Father, by comming by this fleſh of the Lord Jeſus. Learned men tell us, that in old times thoſe that went farre jorneyes by Sea, as for example, when Salomon went to Ophir, he could not goe the direct way by mayne Seas: but was faine by the ſhore-ſide, to ſayle with long and ſafer journeys, for lack of experience. The like ayde ſhould this ſafe and eaſie ſhore of Chriſts fleſh, become to our unexperienced and untrayned ſpirits in the point of believing. The Father of himſelfe is a deepe Sea, yea there is a gulfe ſet between him and us: wee cannot come at him: but by this ſhore we may ſayle ſafely to him, without feare of being ſwallowed up. Thirdly, let us come and plead our part in the Lord Jeſus for our portion of forgiveneſſe and mercy: when thoſe trecherous ten tribes fell out with the two Tribes for David, their argument was, he was of their fleſh, yea they had ten parts in him, to their two. But the two tribes being neerer in kindred to David than they, overcame them in the eagerneſſe of their ſpirit. Such a difference there is betweene them that hold upon Christ: Some are of generall kinne to him, who will talke lustily, and beare themselves boldly upon him in words: Others are neerer a kinne and closer to Christ, such as doe pleade his flesh and kindred to be theirs, and will not be beaten from him, nor give over: Such should all truely poore soules be: they should pleade their part in the Sonne of God, and the fiercer their affections are towards him, the surer they shall be to speed of him. Matth. 11. 11. David was not so loving to the men of Juda, as Christ will be to thee, if thou canst claime kindred: he will not scorne thee for thy labour; as the rich doe the poore that claime theirs.

Branch 4. Esay 12. Psal. 110. 7. Fourthly, by Faith come and draw waters from this well-spring of salvation. The Psalmist saith, that Christ dranke of the brooke (the grace of the Divinity) and therefore should lift up his head. Even so shouldst thou come and drinke of this Brooke (the merit and satisfaction of this flesh of Christ) In this flesh and the holinesse thereof, hath our head overcome all enemies, sin and Satan, wrath of God, hell and death, that so he might bring us to God; Yea, the Father bestowed upon him a body, and he submitted to accept it, and in the uttermost Abasement thereof in life and death, to worke out the Salvation of the elect. So that the Lord having taken all wayes for compassing the good of a poore soule; and having even in that flesh of ours (which is most corrupt and sinfull) merited mercy, and appeased justice: What a strong consolation is this well-spring to all that fly for refuge from the Avenger of bloud to the hornes of this Altar, to take hold of his strength, to make peace with the Father, and by Faith to cast Anchor upon it for their own Reconciliation. So much for this first.

Heb. 6. 18. Esay 27. 4.

Q. What is the second Branch?

The 2. Godhead of Christ. A. That the Lord Jesus our Mediator was true GOD also. By which I meane not only, that it was the second person, and no other, who tooke flesh; but that it was a Divinity, which enabled an humanity to obey and suffer, that Gods justice might except against neither as insufficient. Eli's speech in 1 Sam. 2. 25. If a man sinne against his neighbour, man may accord it: But if a man sinne against God, who shall be his surety? Is answered thus: man may be his surety, if he be assisted with the power of God: Alas! although the flesh of Christ was most holy, yet (in it selfe) finite and mortall, no more able to equall Gods wrath wrath by any act than a dwarfe can reach the talnesse of a Giant. But the acts and sufferings of Christ (as flesh) reckoned to his Divinity, made an equall satisfaction to Gods offended Majesty. The influence and valour of the divine nature assisting the humane, for the fulfilling of the merit: for if the surety fayle in any point, his undertaking is uneffectuall. The Mediator then being to mediate between God and man, must be God. Rom. 1, 3. Eph. 1. last. with other places.

Q. This well-spring is deepe: prooue more fully, that our satisfier must also be God.

A. I have already said, That an infinite Transgression must coast an infinite satisfier. But that our Lord Jesus was so, many Scriptures and reasons may evince. 1. The Name of Essence, Jehova is communicated to him. Ier. 13. 16. Hos. 1. 7. This name is not given to him for honour, as to Princes (I said yee are Gods) but properly for essence. Phil. 2. 3. He compted it no robbery to be Equall with God, He was found in the forme of God, that is, his Substance. Heb. 1. 3. He was the brightnesse of his glory, and the engraven forme of his person. So Esay 9. 6. he is called, The mighty God. Ioh. 1. 1. That Word was God. Rom. 9. 5. Christ who is God over all. 1. Tim. 3. 16. God manifested in the flesh. 1. Joh. 5. 20. The same is very God. The Attributes of God are ascribed unto him. 1 Being in himselfe. 1. Joh. 1. 1. He that was from the beginning. So Heb. 7. 3. 20. A Priest after the order of Melchisedeck who was without beginning of dayes or end of life, without successivenes of time, Ioh. 8. 38. Heb. 13. 8. Ioh. 8. 58. Before Abraham was, I am. Alway present without periods or discontinuance. He is the Lord of seasons, and limits time, and supports it, and sweares that Time shall no more be. Dan. 12. His generation is eternall, the Father and the Son being correlatives. He is the first being, Revel. 1. 8. Alpha and Omega, which was, is, and is to come. He is perfect, needing nothing. Acts 14. 25. giving to all. He is most holy and wise, immortall, invisible. 1 Tim. 1. 17. He is incomprehensible, Ephes. 1. ult. fills all in all. He is alway with his to the end. Mat. 28. end. So also unspeakeable, Esay 53. Who shall declare his generation? He gives being to all things. Ioh. 1. 2. Without him nothing was made. Workes not agreeing to any save to God, are given to him: forgivenesse of sinnes, Mat. 9. 6. To worke miracles of himselfe Ioh. 10. 25. So divine honour. Ioh. 14. 2. So also the Propagation of the Gospell, 1 Tim. 3. 16. His power declared in his Saints, both doing, Eph. 1, 20. 21. and suffering, as Revel. 12. 11.

And it was most absolutely necessary, that he should indeed be very God. For both those evills which he was to expiate, as sinne and uncleanneſſe; and those enemies he was to vanquish, as Satan, death, wrath; and those good things he was to purchase, Eternall Righteousneſſe, the Image of God, and Glory hereafter in the presence of God (farre above Adams happineſſe) I say these evils could never have been removed, nor those enemies subdued, nor those good things purchased, save by him that was God: The infinite worthineſſe of the Lord our righteousneſſe could only compasse them.

Q. But what necessity was there, that our Mediator must bee God?

A. Beside what I have generally said, understand the necessity thereof in three grounds. First; by the removall of all other Mediators (who are not God) as insufficient. The divineſt creature is an Angell: who for two causes could not satisfie, First, Through their finitneſſe which hath no proportion to the offended Majesty being infinite. He found folly in his Angels (saith Iob) noting that they had need of establishing in their Condition, else they might have fallen as their fellowes. Again, if the Angels were able to redeeme, yet they are but Persons, they are no natures, and therefore they could redeeme but each of them a person. Now if the Angels cannot do it, how much leſſe the Saints in triumph? To which of the Saints wilt thou turne thee? Least of all can a righteous man upon the Earth, no nor all the righteous ones of it laid together, effect such a worke. None but Christ God can do it. These have Oyle little enough for themselves.

2. Ground, sin cannot be taken away till satisfaction be given, both to God, and to his Law thereby destroyed. Sinne is enmity to both. The least title of the Lawes purity, is better then Heaven and earth.

Touching the Law, it hath 2 parts; the Commanding part, and the forbidding. As we are Creatures, we owe both positive and negative obedience to both, and as we are sinners; we owe payment of our debt in Hell for ever. If we faile in the least point, we are held offenders against all. Among men, if a servant faile one dayes worke, he may satisfy by another. Not so heere. Now for this sinne we cannot satisfy. Luke 17.10. We are unprofitable servants; of our best obedience we may say as he did of his axe-head axe-head, Alas! Master it was but borrowed, and how should we pay debts with that which is not our own?

So for our suffering. Had we all gone to Hell, we had not bin able to satisfie: but alway lye there, and never have out our bond. Never could say, its finished. No Creature could ever reach so much love, as to satisfie for others, by enduring wrath, as Rom. 5. Perhaps for a good man one would dy, but not for a bad. Paul wisht to be Anathema for the Church, but not ever bereft of God. If Adam had no power to continue in active obedience, much lesse we in passive. Only God can doe this.

The third ground. We cannot satisfie God in point of eyther the good, or the honour we have robb'd him of. His goods were the graces of Creation: which with the prodigall we wasted most dissolutely. If a man should go about to satisfie for the losse of our light or subjection, or beauty and order of affections and conversation; much more for abusing the grace of redemption. So then sinne destroyed much good, but can restore none. Job. 38 30. Iob 40.18. except we could make another World, another image of God, or covenant of grace: only Christ the Son of God can do this.

But, besides goods God hath lost honor, which is worse. If a begger should wrong a King in his goods, it were possible he might make him some amends: but not in his honor. Its the deerest thing to God of all, Esay 42.5. The husband will take no ransome if his bed be violated. Its hard to satisfie for this. By sinne we dishonor Gods sovereignty, cast a defect upon all his Attributes, we digge pits and forsake the Fountaine. Gods very being is struck at by sinne: a sinner would have no just reveng ing God, 1 Ioh. 1.13. What Creature then can make amends for it? The ends of God, are the Creatures, but the Creatures cannot reach Gods. Only Jesus Christ hath made amends for both; sinne had spoiled the Creature, Christ would repaire it, and to that end, spoile himselfe of all his reputation, and be emptied to death. This losse of Christs honor, equalled Gods lost honor, infinitely. So Jesus Christ can make a new Law, yea is the founder of it: Hee can restore and fulfill all obedience, and service. He did more service in 33. yeares, then all the Creatures could have done in all their life. In 7 houres upon the Crosse, he created more then in the 6 dayes of Creation. And judge whether he restored God his full honor or no in that, Phil. 2. he raysed him on high for his worke, above all principalities and powers. Christ had as much honor to looſe as his Father had to recover, he was equall to God, and counted it no robbery, he was his ingraven image, and brightneſſe of his glory. Joh. 5. 23. All muſt know the Father, and honour him, but thus only through Christ God: Indeed, it was hidden, for if they had known him, they had not crucified the Lord of glory: but he was glorified even in his fleſh with the ſame glory his God-head (in meaſure) had bin. His glory is no reflexion of his Father, but his own, radicall and inherent in his perſon. If all the Starres had loſt their light, yet a new Sunne might reſtore all. So doth Christ. What an honor were this to a King, that another King, as great as he, ſhould goe out of his Kingdome, and of his own accord do homage to him, as if he were his vaſſall? Thus we ſee the abſolute neceſſity of Christs being God, to become a Mediator.

Vſe 1. Q. What uſe is to be made hereof?

A. First, let this teach us to adore ſo this myſtery of the God-head of Christ, that we reſt in no inferior object whatſoever the world can afford us, no not in the Lord Jeſus himſelfe (as Paul ſpeakes) if he were heere in the fleſh, to reſt in him bodily for outward fleſhly ends, to heare his Miniſtery, prayers, counſells, to lye in his boſome, to eate, drinke or converſe with him, only: But to remember, he is God bleſſed above all, and hath merited by his glorious power a glorious deliverance for his Church, from death, to eternall life. This is eternall life, that wee believe him to be very God, and thereby to have ſatisfied that wrath of God, which none elſe could. Till we have attayned this, let no other gifts, Complements or ſeeming graces content us. It was not needfull our Mediator ſhould be God for the purchaſing for us ſuch tranſitory contentments. But that he might truely by his Omnipotent power, ſave our Soules, turne our hearts to God, and put a divine ſavor of Faith, humility and repentance into us; which fleſh cannot attaine unto: Oh, Let not us, then fruſtrate him of all the coſt and labour which he hath taken for us, but concurre in ſpirit with him in ſetting him up in our ſoules, by believing and accepting his eternall Righteouſneſſe for our pardon and ſalvation. Whatſoever is under this, is under Christ God our Mediator, and under the purpoſe of the Father that ſent him, therefore let it alſo be under our endeavour and deſire.

Vſe 2. This point ſecondly, affordes us a notable worthy ground of under-understanding a reall difference of the persons in Trinity. No other point affords a more convincing ground thereof, than this, God the Father sends God the Sonne into the world to save it by the power of God the Holy Ghost, conveying and sealing his merit to the soule of the elect. Now I aske, except there be admitted a reall distinction of the Persons in Trinity, how shall one and the same God for being, be the party satisfying and satisfied? It cannot be supposed, but there must be a confusion brought into the mind of man in the conceiving of this mystery. On the one side to affirme that Satisfaction could be made without the God-head, were false; and on the other, to conceive a double object of giving and taking this satisfaction (except in one being of God these persons were distinct) is impossible. Let this then be a ground unto us.

It is thirdly, exhortation to all who are loaden with their sin, desiring ease: to come to this second well-spring of salvation, and drinke water of life freely from it, that is, believe it for themselves. Heere let me proceed by paces. And first, let this doctrine truly humble us in our selves. Use 3.

Especially, let this beate down selfe in us, in the matter of our conversion. Let us be beaten downe wholly in our selves, as Peter was in his Nets and fishing, when he beheld Gods power, Alas! What should we bring to God for our Redemption? Can we bring any light to this Sunne, any drop to this Ocean? No. Fall we down as nothing before the Lord both our maker when we were earth, and our satisfier, when we were sinne and curse. Let us take nothing from his God-head and All-sufficiency of merit. Bring we nothing to him: All fulnesse is his, he must doe all for and in us, before and in conversion. Be we low, vile and base in our selves; The great worke of redemption is done to our hand, and that by God whose workes are all perfect, and no man could ever find out any thing after him: no deeds, affections, or concurrences of will with his grace, can adde to our stature the least cubite. But both will and deed is all his to worke: he hath left nothing for us, save to renounce our abilities, to bid him depart from us sinfull wretches, to set seale to his promise: He is God Omnipotent, it were a dishonour to him to joyne us with himselfe in so great a worke. Branch 1. Luke 5.

Secondly, let us lay hold on this Jesus Christ God, who hath satisfied God, and taken away wrath. Reade Esay 63. 1. Christ is Branch 2.

described by his mightinesse to save. It was his God-head which brake through the host of enemies to rescue us captives, to fetch water of life for us. Therefore Esay 27. 3, 4 lay hold upon this strength of his, and make peace: for by this strength, anger is not in God, he is well satisfied: no more needed to appease God save God, by his infinite death and satisfaction. The Father will now require no second Attonement to be made: he is once satisfied by Christs once dying: let not thy foolish heart call for a second Satisfaction, because thy sinnes seem great to thee; but know this one will serve for all thy sinnes, were they sinnes of a thousand yeares: for he is God, to whom a thousand yeares are as one day: He is mighty to save; let Satan and unbeliefe seeme never so strong to destroy, he is mightier to save. A strong helper, an horne of salvation. With thee nothing seemes possible, but to him nothing is impossible. Let who so will lay ought to thy charge, yet seeing God hath discharged all, seeing it is God that justifieth, who shall condemne? Fetch all second comforts from this. Whatsoever thy wants are, thy God Jehova Al-sufficient can furnish thee, and hath given thee all pertaining to life and godlinesse through him. Let thine enemies, streights be what they will, lowre not at men, their malice, unthankefulnesse, unfaithfulnesse; thy Redeemer is the holy one of Israel, who hath power to deliver thee.

Branch. 3. Yea let this give a beeing and bottome of Truth, to all the promises of God in our soules: Oh, Let our Faith be in God. Let all 1 Pet. 1. 21. the Promises of God be established as yea and Amen to us, because God hath settled them. No lesse than Gods bloud could wash out such a staine as sinnes was. No lesse than God could be in Christ reconciling the world to himselfe. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Heb. 7. 25.

Branch. 4. Oh! Therefore since all this was for us, if we need it, let us draw neere with confidence to the God of promises, let our weake Esay 27. 4. hearts be strengthned (as to obedience) so to Faith in this promise made to us: And comfort our heavy heart in the view of the hainous circumstances of her sinne, making it out of measure sinfull; as depth of continuance, odious greatnesse against knowledge, meanes of grace with an high hand. Be not dismaid: Hee that is thy surety, made not thy peace for small and some, but all and the greatest: so that thy thought must be how to receive this fulnesse, not for the greatnesse of thy sinne. The Lord Iesus offered Heb. 9. 14. himselfe up by his eternall Spirit, that an eternall Majesty might be be appeased for sinne of an eternall guilt and curse; and such is all sinne, but especially crying sinne: his merit is more out of measure deserving, than sinne is sinfull: and hath merited far more happinesse than Adams sinne forfeited. Get humblenesse and Faith, and then thy great sins shall be as dew to the Sunne, and as a spoonfull of water cast into the Ocean. Iehova thy Righteousnesse can disperse them as a mist.

Q. What is the third thing considerable?

A. Union of both natures into one person, by the unconceivable worke of the Spirit; Its much that a soule and body, but much more that flesh, and the Word should be really one person. I doe not say that the Divinity of Christ was a nature as the humanity: for Christ was so a nature, that yet a distinct subsisting person of himselfe. But the meaning is, that this person of the Word tooke the nature of his flesh into his person, therein to subsist. The flesh of Christ was no person, as Abraham, or David, but a nature only having no subsisting of it selfe at all, but as it dwelt in the Godhead. See Ioh. 1. 1. Mat. 1. 23. The 3 hypostase: or union of natures, into one person.

Q. Why call you this Vnion of Christ, personall?

A. To distinguish it both from other unions in Christ, and all unions whatsoever. Christ is a wel-spring of unions: yet there is no personall union in them. The union of Christs God-head with the Father and the Spirit, is reall, but it is essentiall. His union with his invisible Church, is true, yet only spirituall and mysticall. His union with water in Baptisme and with Bread and Wine in the Supper, is a true, but yet only a Sacramentall union. Secondly, by this name (personall,) we distinguish it from all other unions in the World, whether naturall, artificiall, or voluntary. In which the things united are one, either by bare notionall apprehension, as the thing understood by the fancy: or else one by Compounding, as when of three or foure drugges, is made one Medicine: or else by mixture and confusion, as when Water and Wine are made one substance; or else by divine Institution, as when man and wife are made one flesh. None of these are personall unions. But personall union is such an one as whereby both Natures so retaine their distinct properties unconfounded, that yet they remaine indissolubly united in the person without the least separation, no not at death or in the grave. Why it is called Personall?

Q. What uses flow from this third wel-spring?

A. Sundry. And first, Instruction, to teach us how to conceive ceive aright both of God the Father, and the Holy Ghost: and also of the person of Christ, We must not forge to our selves any such conceit of God, as our flesh would frame: but we must come to God in and by the flesh of the Sonne, the second person: we must not presume of any Spirit of God, otherwise than by the Flesh of Christ, whose attendant the Holy Ghost is. As the high Priest durst not come into the Holy of Holies, save by bloud, and thereby hee carryed reconciliation to the people from God: so neither may nor can we come to God a consuming fire, save by the blessed qualifying of the flesh of Christ assumed into divine Union. Againe, it instructs us how to pray to, to worship, and to conceive of Christ; not in a separation of his flesh from the God-head, or of God from his flesh. But the equall Terme and object of our worship must be this personall union, that is, the man-hood of Christ must as truely be adored and prayed unto as the God-head. It is sinfull to conceive the Lord Jesus in any kinde save in this. And therefore its dangerous and sinnefull to please our selves in Pictures of Christ or Crucifixes, because they pull in sunder this union, and are not able to expresse it, beeing unexpressible by Pensill and Picture.

Use 2. Secondly, it teaches us a difference between the subsistence of Christs flesh, and all other subsistings. We subsist in the union of body and soule, which two make one and the same person. But the man-hood of Christ is no person or subsistence by union of soule and body: but by assuming that Nature of man into the person of the Sonne of God. So that the flesh hath no subsisting at all, save in the upholding power of the God-head. This a worthy Divine (whose labours, both in Preaching and forming of Preachers is worthy of eternall memory) expresseth by the Plant Misselto, which is a distinct bough and stock from any other Tree, yet hath no Roote to subsist in, save the Tree which it groweth out of, and draweth sappe and nourishment from, whether Apple-tree or other. Againe, in the Union of Persons in the God-head all three are equall in the excellency of their natures; but in Christs personall union, although there be no equality in the Natures united for their excellency, or eternity, yet there is an equalnesse in point of being, for it is as impossible to conceive of Christ without the union of flesh to God, as of God to flesh. W. P.

Use 3. But the chiefe use is, To encourage the soule that is affraid to draw neere to God for reconciliation and mercy in Christ, because of the estrangement of it selfe from God by losse of his Image. Lo, the Lord is willing to unite himselfe unto thee (poore soule) in his Sonne, by vertue of his union with thy fearefull and fraile nature. Nay, hereof he hath given assurance in and by this personall union. For by this union he hath purchased a Spirituall union between himselfe and the sinfull Soule. There is no benefit of Christ, which can be conveyed to it, neither justification, adoption, regeneration, or the like, till union goe before. How singular an encouragement then should this be to a poore soule to fasten upon the promise, when he sees it assisted by this All-sufficient merit, issuing from the union of both natures, both suffering & meriting? What holy, yet reverend boldnesse should this doctrine put into the soule? The Lord beeing willing to bestow himselfe upon it, wholly by union, before he vouchsafe any speciall Grace of Sanctification upon it? He that gives himselfe to thee, what can he deny thee? Personall union derives the properties of God to the man-hood, and the properties of it to the God-head. In so much that it is said, that we were redeemed by the Bloud of God &c. And why? Save to assure us that heereby the Lord will communicate to a poore soule his own blessed properties of mercy and holinesse, by the union of his Spirit? Let us therefore come and drinke of this wel-spring also with confidence: and say, Sithence the God-head and man-hood were united in the worke of suffering and meriting, what question is there of the Sufficiency thereof to the soule which believes?

Lastly, is this doctrine most sweet to all broken soules, in their approach to the Throne of grace. What is so bottomlesse and unsubsisting a thing in it selfe, as a soule in the anguish of conscience? Yet even then looke up to Emanuel, and he will unite thy poore empty, bottomlesse spirit to his own person, that in him thou mayst have a reall being and subsistence! Oh, poore soule, who thinkest thy selfe meerely lost in this thy estate; In time thou shalt see it was mercy brought thee to be out of hope in thy selfe, that the hope of thy well being might be in him: for even the flesh of Jesus himselfe had the like unableness of subsisting, except the second person had taken it to himselfe. Use 4.

Q. What other use may be made of it?

A. To say the truth, all the following points touching the Merit of the Lord Jesus, his Unction, his obedience to the Law, his passion, death and buriall, Resurrection, Ascension, Intercession, depend pend upon this: Neither is it possible that the use of any of them, should reach to us, if the vertue of that Union whereby Christ, God and man is made one person, and our flesh, is assumed to subsist in the Divinity of Christ. Our happines purchased by our Lord Jesus, standes in union for ever with God: But how shall that becoms ours, save by this union? How shall there be any true union between our person of body and soule, with his person, save by this union of his God-head with our Nature? How shall the Word of God be able to become one with us? how shall it affect us with feare, reverence, or obedience, except the vertue of this Word of the Father, who first ordeyned it as the instrument of Faith and conversion, did not accommodate it to our apprehensions, and affections? If Christs flesh were not working in the Ministery, and conveighing the power of God into it by a promise, how should our shallownes be capable of it? How should the Lord Lesus be sacramentally united to Bread and Wine, save by the conveyance of his flesh? How is it possible, that he should be afflicted in all our afflictions, to succor us, how can it be, that we are kept from sinking under them, if he our head by his flesh did not susteyne us? How should wee clayme audience of our prayers by the vertue of his, how should we hope to conquer sinne, Hell, and death, how should wee looke one day to be where he is, to have all enemies put under our feet, to rise againe from the dead and stand up at the Resurrection, if it were not for the union of our Lord Jesus. God and man? And so of all other benefits. Therefore hold Union, and hold all.

Q. What is the Vnction of Christ?

3. The Vnction. It is included in the Vnion as a Consequent upon it.

A. It is a consequent upon his personall union, whereby the God-head made the man-hood full of himselfe, and of all gifts and graces of the Spirit; meete to enable him to his worke of mediation, and by name, separated him from men to be excellent, as to be the Prophet, Priest and King of his Church. That this was from the wombe, appeares by sundry texts: and many glorious effects exceeding man, as that in Luke 2. at twelue yeares old. Yet especially his Baptisme was the anoynting of him to the entire and immediate execution of these Offices: for therein hee did more fully receive the annoynting with the Oyle of gladnesse above his fellowes, as was prophecied, Psal. 2. Esay 42. 1. and Esay 61. 1, 2, 3. Hee was

Psal. 2. Esay 42. 1. Esay 61 1, 3. Mat. 3. 1. 2. 3. 4, 6.

Priest

Priest to satisfie and pray for, Prophet to teach, and King to rule and deliver his people. Which three offices doe mutually serve each other. So then, in a word, this holy union of Natures in Christ, did sanctifie the flesh of Christ; made it full of the graces of the God-head, yea made it pure, holy, undefiled: and secondly infused all graces into it, for the worke of a Mediator.

Q. This point of Vnction is of great weight, affoording much light to the next Article of the priviledges: therefore explane it a little: and first, What is the Vnction of Priest-hood? and what is to be considered in it?

A. To the first part of the Question, I answer. That it is the chiefe part of the Unction of Christ; because by vertue of that office he performed the great worke of satisfaction: and therefore hee received from his Father the most abundant measure of the spirit, as we reade Esay 61. verse 1,2,3. To the second question, I answer. Two things are to bee considered in this Annoynting of Christ our Priest: first, the peculiarnesse: secondly, the furniture of gifts. For the first. Although there were many things in the ordinary Priest-hood of Aaron which resembled Christ both in his Person and performance, for the generall: yet because, there were many things (in both respects) very different; therefore the Holy Ghost sets him forth to us by the type of Melchisedees Priest-hood: For as he was without beginning and end (in his story) so was Christ, not as Aaron, mortall, mutable, sinfull. Aaron had need to offer Sacrifices for himselfe: Aaron slew other Sacrifices of Bulls, Goates, and Lambes: Aaron sacrificed often, because he offered Creatures: Aaron had successors: Aarons Sacrifices purged the Ceremoniall conscience: Aarons Sacrifice and Priest-hood ceased. But the Lord Jesus offered only Sacrifice for others, not for himselfe: Christ offered up himselfe as a Sacrifice: Christ offered himselfe but once for all as most perfect: Christ is an eternall Priest abiding for ever; and of his Priest-hood there shall be no end: None shall abolish his Sacrifice, but it shall be as himselfe is, perpetuall to the end of the World: Iesus Christ yesterday, and to day, and the same for ever.

Explication of it.

1. What it is.

2. Wherein it consists?

1. In a peculiarneſſe of it.

Heb. 5. and 7. &c.

The second thing is the furniture which this Unction filled the Lord Jesus our Priest withall, and that without measure.

The 2. Furniture of it.

For,

For, as the fulneſſe of the God-head dwelt in him bodily: ſo all the communicable gifts and excellencies thereof dwelt in him: Eminent wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, humility, unblameableneſſe, holineſſe, ſeparation from ſinners, and all other graces. But (as I take it) one fruit of his Unction was his peculiar fitneſſe to ſatisfie: That holy, free conſent of his to the will of his Father to doe, ſuffer and fulfill all righteouſneſſe; I ſay, this abſolute and unſtayned obedience, to goe through all difficulties, meekely, long ſufferingly, cheerefully, univerſally, and conſtantly, emptying himſelfe to the death of the Croſſe, was the maine effect of his Unction, and the bottome of that infinite Complacency which his Father had in him, ſaying, This is my well beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed.

Q. This ſhall ſerve for the firſt Vnction of Prieſt-hood, becauſe this whole ſecond Part following ſhall treat only of it, and the uſe of it: Proceed to the other two, and firſt, What relation there is between the one and the other?

Harmony of the 3. offices of Chriſt.

A. All the three offices of Chriſt doe conſpire moſt ſweetly together; The Prieſt-hood before the other two, becauſe elſe we can have no right to them. But then the prophecy and the Kingdome doe returne their ayde to the Prieſt-hood. Firſt, the Prophecy teaches what the Prieſt-hood is, and by what order and degrees the Lord ſettles reconciliation and peace upon a poore ſinner; opens the Doctrine of Faith, and is the revealer of the myſtery of Salvation: Then it teaches how to put on the Lord Jeſus our Prieſt dayly, to apply him continually for forgiveneſſe as our dayly Sacrifice, and how to live by Faith, and to be guided in our particular courſe and converſation according to knowledge (as in Part third, and Article third appeares.) Secondly, the Kingdome conveyes the power of the Prieſt-hood into the ſoule, and effects that which the Prophecie teaches; and then having ſo done, it ſets up a perpetuall rule in the ſoule, giving it power to obey both in doing and ſuffering, according to the truth revealed; ſuſteyning and preſerving the whole body of elect, in the Faith and obedience, and under the protection of the Lord Jeſus, til all uſe of theſe offices ſhall ceaſe, and the Kingdome ſhall be delivered up to the Father, that he may be all in all, after the whole worke of Mediatorſhip is accompliſhed.

Q. You ſay well. Open a little the ſecond Vnction of Prophe- cy,

ry, shew what it is, and what fruite wee reape by it?

A. It is that infusion of divine light into the manhood of Christ, by vertue of which he did all at once habitually receive all that knowledge and wisedome of God whereof he was possibly capable, far above all that nature, Art, experience, or education could attaine to; yea far above all that (not Philosophers only and wise heathens, but) whatsoever Prophets, Apostles or any creature renued, yea Angels themselves could ever comprehend. Only those mysteries excepted which finit flesh could not conceive; as the day of judgment, &c. The fulnes of light did not swallow up his understanding, but endued it with such knowledge as it could reach; yet so as (according to our Nature) he still grew in knowledge in respect of the manifestation of light, by the capacity of his yeeres. The 2. office of Prophecy what. Luc. 2. ult.

Q. What gaine we hereby, such I meane as believe?

A. He is made unto us of the Father by vertue hereof true wisedome. Both in the purging of our corrupt minds from all blindeneſſe, and our judgments of all rashneſſe, error, headlong conceite, and our spirits from all misleading and misguiding of us in our conversations. So that neither the delusion of Satan, nor diceplay of men, nor other errour can carry us from the truth as it is in Jesus. And againe, it infuseth into our understandings a renewed light of knowledge of things in their lively and spirituall nature, restoring the principle of light in us which we lost in Adam, as the first part of Gods Image; causing us to search and dive into the secrets of truth, which of a naturall man cannot be conceived; To discerne of things that differ, and of Gods matters especially; laying aside prejudice, false opinions, carnall reason and the love of lusts which smites out the eyes of the soule. And this gift is partly tending to make us wise to Salvation, and to judge of our estate to be good by sound evidence, and grounds of the word, of which Paul speakes, 2 Tim. 3. 15. As also to direct our feete in the way of Peace, as Luke 2. 74. that is, to leade us from one part of life to another, so as Christ would have us walke, who therefore is called our leader, Esay 55. 3. And thence it is that the Spirit of annoynting doth issue from the oyle that floweth from the head of Christ, whereby we have right to know all things, and need no carnall teaching; whereby we judge all, and are judged of none. Whereby we are wise unto sobriety. This Spirit Esay calls, a voyce behind us, calling and saying, This is the way, walke Our gaine by it. Eph. 4. 13. 1 Cor. 2. Esay 30.

walke therein: Concerning which see more in the third Part, and second Article, of Conversation. In a word, although our occasions of life be manifold; yet by this Unction we are enabled to accommodate and apply our wisedome to speciall occasions of life, as company or solitarinesse, things necessary, indifferent and expedient; or otherwise, as recreations and liberties, our Tongue when to speake and when to be silent; because it is a Fountaine whence we draw light for light. As the eye of the body being light, causeth the whole body to be light, so doth this cause the spirituall man to be.

The 3. office the Kingdom.

Q. Let me heare you shew what the Vnction of Christs Kingdome is?

What it is?

A. It is that influence of the God-head into the man-hood, by vertue whereof Christ Mediator is the Vice-roy of God the Father, deputed under him to governe the whole World, but especially his Church. Breefely, the end of it is, to support the Priesthood and Prophecy in their Vigor and efficacy; that he may be a Prince and Captaine of salvation to the elect, to bring them to God. Psal. 2. Esay 42. Esay 61. Eph. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 2. Revel. 1. God is sayd to annoynt his King, to give him the ends of the World for his possession; yea all things in Heaven and earth to be his, Math. 11. 27. Especially he hath set him upon mount Zion, and established him upon his Throne, and establisht him with justice and power, crowned him with glory and honour; that he might sway the Scepter of righteousnesse, and bring to passe all his purpose without contradiction.

Q. But except the Kingdome of Christ do appeare more glorious, then in his flesh when he only rested in a shadow thereof, men will scarse beleeve it: discover it therefore.

A. It may appeare to our sence. Kings have Dominions, Thrones and Regalities got by conquest, inheritance, or election: but Christ by all. Kings have weapons, warlike munition and Armies to support their dignity, so hath Christ both the Sword spirituall and temporall at command: as the weapons of the Word, and Ministry, ordinary administrations. 2 Cor. 12. 4. able to subdue and cast down all high thoughts and things to himselfe: and as weake as they are in shew, yet they have conquered the World to Christ. If the King of France should cause it to be proclaymed in England, that hee commands all the English freely to turne subjects to him, how ridiculous were it? But Christ hath ſubdued the conſciences of men at his bare Word to himſelfe.

Christ

So againe, Princes have homage done, and tribute payd them by their ſubjects: ſhew me a penny, &c. So hath Christ the bodies and ſoules of all, eſpecially his Church ſubject to him. All knees muſt bow. The very freeſt thoughts are tributaries to him, and nothing can preſcribe againſt his prerogative, the very ſecret thoughts and inner man, the very ſpirit of the ſoule, and conſcience ſtands to this barre.

Kings by their power protect their harmeleſſe and quiet people from the rage and wrong of their more injurious ſubjects. So doth Christ ſend out his Miniſters and poore Sheepe among Wolves, Foxes, Lions and all ſorts of wild beaſts, to convince and condemne them by the word: now if he had not a ſtronger protection then man, how ſhould his ſilly ones ſubſiſt, and not be torne in pieces?

Q. Before we proceed, is there any uſe hereof?

A. Yes. And firſt we muſt know, that till the time appointed of manifeſting this Kingdome, it ſeemes a poore matter to the word, as Chriſts riding upon an Aſſe, to the Phariſes: its unſeene, unregarded, more ſpirituall then externall. As we ſee it foretold Pſal. 2. As it was fulfilled when Herods Souldiers and Pilate, ſcom'd him, whipt him, ſet a Crown of thornes upon his head, ſmote him and bid him prophecy. A ſadde eclipſe: and now juſt is it ſo, it appeares not till his comming in his glory at the latter times, either what he is or what we are.

Secondly, yet be admoniſht, whatſoever the World doth, let us adore him, put our hands under his Feete, let us kiſſe the Sonne, as our King, for he is great and will at laſt prevaile, and become that mighty Stone which ſhall tumble down and beat down the great Tree (as Daniel ſayth) he ſhall laugh his enemies to ſcorne, and be annointed upon Zion. Let us ſo demean our ſelves as towards ſuch an one, leaſt he wax fierce, and teare us in pieces. Leaſt he ſay to us. Thoſe who would not have mee reigne over them, bring them hither, and ſlay them before my face. Let not his enemy who ſeekes thy ruine have thee at greater bay, then thy King who dyed, and overcame death for thee? Hate them who hate him, with a deadly hatred. Do to thy uttermoſt yea ſome ſingular thing, to approove thy loyalneſſe to him. Dye in his quarrell. Truſt his eternall ſtrength, againſt World, Luſt, and all the infernall crue', Satan and his inſtruments. Do all in his ſtrength, and know thine own is as Samſons cords and withes, not worth the truſting to.

Thirdly, pray, wait, bee patient till the comming of this Kingdome: believe Eſay 26. 26. that thy prayers ſhall not die. He will come and bring healing in his Wings. Each day of delay haſtens his comming: And then all his proud enemies, perſecutors, blaſphemers of his Name, and ſtoppers of his Kingdome, ſhall be ſure to pay for it and licke the duſt of his feete. Rejoyce in all thou ſuffereſt for him; he that hath ledde captivity captive, wil redeeme thee fully, Mica. 7. 8. 9. and tread them down as myre in the ſtreets. Do not cry a league with his enemies fear not their feares, but ſanctify the Lord in thine heart and let him be thy feare. He ſhall one day equall all incongruities, reconcile all differences, and pull down the Babell of hypocrites over their heads with confuſion.

Q. More particularly, how doth this Kingdome of Chriſt aſſiſt his Prophecy?

How it aſſiſts the prophecy.

A. By ſuſteyning and ſtrengthening the meanes of Salvation, that his Goſpell, Sacraments, Sabbaths and all his Ordinances, together with the Miniſtery thereof, not onely in being, but alſo in their full effectualneſſe of working in the hearts of his people, with conviction, and authority. It is no ſmall Power to preſerve theſe Pillers of his Throne from ruine. For, how many enemies are riſen up ſince his aſcenſion, openly or ſecretly to perſecute or undermine the truth? How hath Satan beſtirred himſelfe by thoſe Lyon like Emperours in the firſt 300. yeares, and ſince by thoſe wolviſh Popes, and by heretikes and other inſtruments of the Divell, to raze the Scriptures, to deface the chiefe truth of God, the divinity, the humanity, the Union, the purity of Spirituall worſhip, the integrity of Sacraments, the Juſtification of a ſinner by only Faith, the workes of the Spirit, the Reſurrection of the body, and the whole power of godlineſſe? To this very houre he worketh againſt all theſe. But in vaine: for this our King looketh down from his Throne and laugheth them to ſcorne, and deſtroyeth their Policies: No deluge or flood of his malice could ever prevaile againſt theſe: but ſtill they continue as a brazen Pillar, and ſhall ſurvive them all, till his ſecond comming. And not only ſo, but ſtill he ſupports theſe in their Authority and ableneſſe to overrule the consciences of men (whom no other Lord can controll) to pierce, perswade, convince, convert, or condemne, whether they believe or despise them. And to settle upon the elect all the liberties of Redemption Adoption, Holinesse and Glory. In which respect he is called the Lord that Spirit of liberty or Prerogatives. See 1 Cor. 3. ult. This for a taste may serve.

Q. And how doth he assist the Priest-hood by his Kingdome?

A. By sustayning and holding up his believing servants, in that estate of grace, both Faith and sanctification in which he hath set them. For it is the Kingdom of Christ which giveth efficacy both to his satisfaction and intercession, for the keeping of all such as are given him by the Father, in his truth and name. He enables his sacrifice to forgive them and reconcile their persons: his holinesse to sanctifie them, to change their natures, to subdue their iniquities, to set up his Kingdom in their hearts; to make them spirituall Kings and Priests to God, in the mortifying of their lusts, and their living to God in the power of Faith and godlinesse. He makes them, Eph. 1.20. to partake that exceeding mighty power of his, whereby he raised Christ from the dead. He forsakes them not, till he have brought them to finall perseverance: and in the meane time makes them partners of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 2. Which is more than a Creation: Also he infuseth into them the fellowship of his sufferings, enabling them to endure the uttermost bitternesse of them and all the circumstances thereof, till they partake his holinesse, and become more than conquerors. How it assists the Kingdom. Rev. 1.

Q. What else doth Christ as our King?

A. He subjecteth all his people to himselfe by the Lawes of his Kingdome. For, he rules not by tyranny, but by Law, and Command. Although he be absolute, yet righteousnesse is the Scepter by which he rules. And therefore in Esay 55.4. he is called the commander of his people. These Lawes he settles upon his Church, both in respect of conversation, and administration. For the former, he is the Law-giver of his Church, propounding all rules for obedience to himselfe and to others: writing them in the soules of his people. For the latter, he is the Lord upon whose foot-stoole all inferiour Lords and Magistrates doe hold and depend, both civill, in all their Lawes and Penalties to keepe men under subjection: and spirituall, to execute his own censures, admonitions, suspensions and excommu- The Lawes of his Kingdom.

nications: and whatsoever Lawes he hath ordayned for the governing of his Church.

Q. Doth he any thing else?

His protection.

A. Yea. He is the Lord of protection also, to cover the heads of all his in the day of battell: I meane to shield and shelter them against all enemies, ghostly and bodily: For he hath fought for his Kingdom valiantly, and got it as well by conquest as inheritance; having overcome Satan, death, hell, and nayled all against us, to his Crosse, triumphing upon it over them all. He sits at the right hand of Majesty, not still and idle, but active and watchfull, to manage his Churches affayres, peace, affliction, persecutions, temptations, and offences, so, that none of them all, nor the gates of Hell may prevayle against them. He will deliver his Israel out of all her troubles: and after long and tedious assaults by enemies, he will bring them to a Canaan of rest; as (God willing) in the point of redemption shall appeare in the next Article.

Psal. 25. ult.

Q. Conclude all with short use.

Vse of the 3. offices and the Vnction.

A. All that I have said, is use of it selfe: and may easily apply it selfe to such as it concerneth. For what an happy estate is it for all true believers, to be Kings, Priests, and Prophets to God through this unction of Christ? The Beard of Aaron, and the skirt of his cloathing were not more fragrant with the over-flow of his oyle of Consecration: then the Persons and soules of the elect are precious and savory, and accepted of God in the Unction of Christ. Whither then shall we goe when we want Wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification, or redemption, save to this Fountaine which is made to us of the Father to convey them unto us? But (to hold my selfe close to my scope) how should this point teach us to acknowledge Christ as an eminent Mediator, as having a calling from God, according to those three sorts of persons whom he resembled all in one by his Unction! How questionlesse should all the Acts and sufferings which he performed, become in our perswasion? The Lord hath made him whatsoever his Church needs, to the end that together with our Union with him wee might partake his Unction, and be so furnisht with his graces (according to our capacity) that in nothing we might be wanting, for substance and soundnesse of the same. Above all uses, this one I especially ayme at. That the loden soule come to the throne of mercy, cy, for ease and pardon, as being confident thereof, from this welspring of Unction? How can that satisfaction want fulnesse which proceeded from this Annoynting, and for whom doth it serve but for the soule that needs it?

Q. Proceed to the fourth, the former part, to wit, the merit.

A. This is yet more essentiall than the former. 2. The fourth then I say, is Active obedience of Christ. I doe not separate the active from the Passive, as if either alone could satisfie, or as if I ascribed the effects of either to the one without the other: but yet distinctly I speake of both for the use of each of them to the soule: Marke then what I have noted. The Lord Jesus became piacular for us not only by bearing our punishment, but by the transferring upon himselfe the reall imputation of our guilt; without the least measure of inherent guilt. This latter would have disabled his person, (for he must be separated from sinners,) yet the want of the former would have made his merit none of ours, and his death unjustly inflicted. Therefore he was made sinne originall and actuall: all the sins of the elect were charged upon him: that he by his perfect obedience might disanull them, and bring in & settle upon us perfect righteousnes. And as the misery of man stands in both sin (and guilt and staine,) aswell as in curse, so must our surety performe righteousnesse aswell as beare the curse. Now this righteousnes of Christ is both his Naturall and his actuall, opposite to this naturall and actuall unrighteousnesse of Adam. I say, both the purity of his humane nature, infused by Union, and also the obedience to the whole Morall Law to the uttermost extent thereof. And this is as true a part of the materiall cause of our justification, as the other of the Passive, though not to be disioyned.

The fourth. The Merit of Active obedience.

Heb. 7. 26.

Q. Whereof doth this Article of obedience consist?

A. Of the whole conversation of our Lord Jesus his life and death; but more specially of his latter part, from his Baptisme to his death: In both which (more or lesse) hee performed the worke of his Father, and fulfilled all, both generall and personall righteousnesse. His whole conversation toward God and man was holy: towards God, frequent in his Temple, worshipping, submitting himselfe to both Circumcision and baptisme, eating the Sacrament of his own body; oft in fasting, (yea whole nights) and prayer to God: most holy in his family government, most frequent in doing good. Acts 2. Act. 22. 2.

22. Iesus of Nazareth, a man approved by God in many signes and wonders, &c. Preaching from City to City, yea praying for his enemies: so meeke, that he sets forth himselfe as an example, Matth. 11.29.30. he would not breake a bruised reede, nor quench the smoaking flaxe, Esay 42.2,3. He would not lift up his voyce, but as the sheepe which is dumb before the shearer, so opened hee not his mouth. In the judgment of the worst, he did all things well: He grew in grace and favour with God and men, as he grew in stature; his meditations were heavenly, his words gracious, even to admiration, Luke 4. The workes of mercy and compassion to the miserable, were infinite, towards all he was harmelesse, unblameable, confuting them who would gainsay, and stopping their mouths: In his out-side of carriage very humble, riding upon an Asse, farre from worldly pompe; and poore, without a pillar to leane his Head, yet very content; never ate meate but gave thankes: so good to the poore, that he taught his Disciples, It is better to give than to receive: conscionable of the Sabbath: obedience to parents, content to stoope to a meane trade, in likelihood to live upon: very kind to his friends living and dying: so lowly, that he taught his Disciples to be so, by washing and wiping their feete: and so of all the rest:

But especially for the manner, measure, end, and ground of all he did, most sincere and entire: adding thereto, perfection both of parts and degrees, so that there was nothing amisse, he was a righteous Servant, no guile found in him: and so at his death, Iohn 17. he professeth he had done all the worke of his Father: and till he had fulfilled all the Law, (for which he came, Matth. 5.17.) he could by no meanes be disswaded, but called him divell, who sought it: yea, and to the death and in the death of the Crosse he was most obedient, Phil. 2. 5, 6. (for his Active and Passive obedience were mixt inseparably:) but above all, in this was his excellency, that being both glory and holinesse, he was not onely content to empty himselfe into shame, but even into the assertion of sin, that he might by obedience make a full expiation for it. In a word, Such an high Priest he was, as, not only for his Nature, but for his practise was undefiled and separate from sinners. And all these he was not for himselfe, but for others, that nothing might be wanting to a full satisfaction: and that they who believe in him might fetch from each part of his life, and obedience, comfort and stay in the infirmity of their youth, age, crosses, duties, worship of God, graces, and in the wants of all their services; both ordinary and private, or publique and extraordinary.

Q. I would have you open this point more fully.

A. I will endeavour it. Consider then:

Explication of the Active obedience.

First, Christ being under the Law, and becomming a servant unto it, was not for himselfe, but for us: except then his obedience be for our sakes, it serves for nothing. 1.

Secondly, if our Lord Jesus had suffered for us upon the Crosse, without any obedience to the Law, he might have been as harmelesse an high Priest, by the purity of his nature, as by obeying; so that if there be no other use of his obedience, than this, to qualifie the person of the Obeyer, it had been superfluous. 2.

Thirdly, some part of his actuall obedience was a direct part of his mediation, as his prayer, Iohn 17. Why not all the rest as well? 3. Iohn 17.

Fourthly, let it be supposed true, (which yet is not to be granted) that where sinne is pardoned by removall of curse, there of necessity, righteousnesse and life is restored: yet we must know that Christ restores not his elect, to the meere righteousnesse and life that Adam had, but to the righteousnesse which is of Faith, and unchangeable, and to a life in the presence of God, not of Paradise: therefore it requires a price of a suitable righteousnesse in Christ, more than a mere surety was bound to. But as I said, the former is doubtfull: although each defect of righteousnesse is a degree of sinne: yet there is more in the staine or pollution of sinne, than in the defect of righteousnesse. When a Traitor is pardoned, though he be in a possibility of restoring to favour and dignities by his Prince, yet they are two things, and are oft severed: and if both concurre, the benefit is double. 4.

And Fifthly, where it is objected, that if totall imputation of this righteousnes be granted, there were no use of the passion: I answer, its false: for we are to be considered as liable to the curse of death, for that which is already past: When thou eatest, thou shalt dye.

Q. Well, I am satisfied, proceede to the fifth Branch, the Passive Obedience: what is that?

A. The whole Humiliation of the Lord Jesus, both in the abasement and sufferings of his whole life, through the which he was as one smitten of God and humbled, yea a man of sorrows: The fifth. The Passive Obedience.

and especially that one maine suffering upon the Crosse, whereby he emptied himselfe most throughly, and yeelded himselfe a sacrifice most freely to the wrath of his Father by his death: in the one bearing the incomprehensible weight of his Fathers justice: in the other the exhaustion of his life, bloud, and separation of his soule from body: That thereby sinne with all her penalties, inward, outward, and eternall, with that power which the Law and all enemies, hell and death, had thereby over us, might be abolished, justice appeased, and righteousnesse and life obteined. Rom. 3. 25. Heb. 9. 13, 24. 1. Pet. 1. 19.

Iohn 1. 7. Heb. 12. 24: Wherein it stands, in two.

Q. You heape up much matter together: divide this answer and unfold it?

A. This Passive Obedience will appeare, by distinguishing it into the preparation, and the passion it selfe.

Q. And wherein stood the Preparation?

1, Preparation in 2. things 1. Subjection, of a servant.

A. It partly stood in the condition he undertooke, partly the antecedent sufferings of his life. For the first, it was a willing putting of his neck into the collar of subjection, forgetting (yea emptying himselfe of) his glory so farre, as being Lord of all, to become in the fashion of a servant chiefly to his Father, also to men, yea the baasest of his slaves upon earth, both for us, and our salvation, in which respect he refused no tearmes, but despised all shame, Phil. 2. 4, 5, 6. Heb. 12. 2. 3.

2. The sorrowes of his life.

Secondly, (having subjected himselfe to be a meete object of suffering and sorrow,) he became indeed a man of sorrowes through his life, inuring himselfe betime to the yoke which he yeelded to; as to be borne of meane parentage, to fall to handy-labour for his living, to lye in a cratch as unworthy or unable to hire roome in the Inne; to be persecuted and fly into Egypt even at a month old; to undergoe the reproach of the tongue, being called Demoniack, Wine-bibber, Deceiver, enemy to Cæsar, Traitor, friend of Publicans; to be the object of tentation, to the vilest and baasest creature the Divell himselfe; to crouch in soule and body under the sentence of wrath, ready to seaze upon him not only at the instant, but long before, which dryed up his moisture as a Withered branch, and made him be thought fifty yeares old, (or upon) being little above thirty: losing all his beauty, and being as a man ever under stroke, afflicted and humbled: carrying our common penalties (not personall of this or that disease) of hunger, thirst, faintnesse, wearinesse, harborlesse, and poverty, verty, &c. about him. To have the influence of his deity alway (in a manner) restrained, so that he appeared not to be that he was to his dearest friends: And therefore he concealed his glory, further than it made for the discharge of his Office of Mediator as a Prophet or a King, (for then he stept out of his baseneſſe. See Mat. 21, 12. Luke, 13. 32.

Iohn. 8. 57.

Q. And what may be said touching the Passion it selfe?

A. Somewhat touching the parcells of it: yet somewhat also touching the necessity of moderation. The 2. part the Passion it selfe.

For the parts, first he endured the forsaking of his dearest Disciples; to be taken by his own servant Iudas, by his own speciall Officers, and at the hands of his own deputies, to suffer most intolerable indignities, to be accused, arraygned, endited, and sentenced, as the vilest malefactor, and that at the Gaole delivery of felons and murtherers. The parts. 1.

After that (besides their barbarous spitting upon, buffetting, mocking with a Robe, Crowne of Thornes, and reeden Scepter,) to be put to that shamefull, accursed death of the Crosse; a death for such as not only men compted villains, but God himselfe in a sort held accursed. 2.

To which adde the greatest of all, both in the Garden and upon the Crosse, that most bitter Cup of wrath, which he dranke from the Hand of his Father, which made him in an agony of Spirit, to sweat drops of blood; to pray, that the Cup might passe from him (from feare of drinking it) and to cry out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken mee? And so in that deepe anguish of his Spirit to give up the Ghost: all the divels in Hell banding themselves in that houre of darkneſſe, to pull him from his stedfast confidence. 3.

Q. What meane you by the moderation of it?

A. That in all this abasement, yet that measure was imposed and no more, which suted to the dignity of the person suffering, and to such a one as in suffering, merited, and could not be overcome by suffering. Hence was it, that he had intermissions of his agony and feares: so that he could go to and fro to his Disciples, to admonish them: was upholden in his senses, understanding, memory, affections, in the midst of his dolours: shewed his power and God-head even then in the consternation of his enemies, conversion of the thiefe: his love and providence of his Mother and Disciple: received comfort by the Angels, in the want of selfe-support: Moderation of the Passion in what?

support: was dispensed with as touching the measure of torments, not being capable of those which reprobates in hell suffer because they can never satisfie: the Duration, the disorder and disguisement of these Hellish terrors, being accidentall to his Passion, and to dying the death only the infinite displeasure of God, and true separation of soule and body, which were essentialls, he endured. So also it was impossible the grave should hold him, Act. 2.24. Yea, and the period of three daies and nights, of 72. houres were abridged to 40.

Q. What did he effect hereby?

The effect of the obedience of Christ.

A. He being our Surety in all this, did for us purchase a full satisfaction (of which in the question after) and withall, first all those benefits, in Article the fourth. Then the ratification of his Legacies, and Testament, abolishing of enmity, by Law, Sinne, Satan, Wrath, Hell, and Death: As we know if a Court be quite put down, all the Officers belonging to it, are down also. So also, liberty to enter Heaven, by a living way, not the bloud of a beast: with sundry others.

Heb 9.16, 17. Col. 2.14. Ephes. 2.16. Heb. 10.20.

Why the Passion onely is so much dwelt upon in Scripture?

Q. Why doth the Scripture so much dwell upon the passive, and so little upon the Active obedience, in point of our satisfaction?

A. As I intimated before, the Holy Ghost doth more usually (not alwaies, See Phil. 2.7 8. Esay 53.11. Mat. 20.28. Rom. 5.18.) expresse it this way.

Reason 1. First because in this curse taken away, all the whole satisfaction began to take effect: as we say that the effect of a Prisoners release is delivery from prison: not as if that were all his release: yet thence its denominated: because though the debt be paid before, yet this must follow.

2. Secondly, because the end of a thing is better than the beginning, and the consummation of a thing is from the end. Perseverance hath (we know) the preheminence of all obedience, not as if it were any more than a part of it, but its the finishing and making all out of question. Each moment of a Glasses course is part of the houre, though the last dust of it be the houres end. But

3. Thirdly, and especially: because the Passion was the happiest, greatest, hardest, and fullest part of the whole satisfaction. As, Fortitude carrieth the name of Vertue, not excluding anie.

Q. Seeing all this is (doubtlesse) the maine Satisfaction, goe to the rest of

of both these in one order: and first tell me, why put you them together?

A. For the latter I answer, because this price is like the price of a Diamond payd for ten Malefactors, which is neither all payd for any one, nor any severall part thereof for one, and another for another: but generally the whole for them all, and each sharing in the whole. Therfore looke what is said distinctly of the benefit of this merit, must issue from both Active and Passive joyntly.

Q. What use is to be made hereof?

A. First, the doctrine hereof may affoord us a sweet meditation (which as there are few ancient or godly writers but have observed, so it is pitty we should neglect) viz. The excellency of the grace of the Gospell, purchased by this Satisfaction, which will appeare by a comparison of the worke of Creation, with this of Redemption. The former I grant was a solemne worke, when the Eternall Word made (of earth) the body of Adam, inspiring it with the breath of God, not onely to be a living Creature, but to beare the Image of God in holinesse. And the truth is, Moses describes even this worke more solemnely, than the Creation of any of the other, to shew the eminency thereof above them. But when the same eternall Word creates man the second time, Lo, not a breath, not a few words will serve: himselfe rather must be made a worme, and no man; God himselfe must empty himselfe of his fulnes & glory: this love, his teares, his miracles, his prayers, the baseneſſe of his condition will not all serve the turne: no other price will be accepted for this, save both the actuall fulfilling of all righteousnesse, and the shedding (not of drops or ounces of other bloud) but the last heart and life bloud that was in his holy body, the bloud of the Son of God. Here was a worke indeed of some difficulty! at which not only the deepest conceit of mortall man, but even the Angels themselves may stand and wonder and vanish. Oh! that the view of this might ravish our soules with the worth of grace, to say, The least dramme of grace is more worth than the whole worke of Nature! who is carried by this mediation above whatsoever this world is in respect of the new Creature to compt the whole Creation as vanity! David, Psal. 8. admireth man in that first workemanship of his, as above all others in the world: what then may be sayd of man renued and restored to a second Image of God? if the breath of Creation were such a thing, what is Regeneration, that cost not a breath, but so great a workemanship of this Active and Passive satisfaction?

Uses of both parts of the Merit.

Secondly,

Use 2. Secondly, let us abhorre the conceite of such Sectaries, as imagine that there was no necessity at all of any such price paying to Justice: nor any barre in Gods Justice at all, why he might not have shewed mercy to sinners, without any such satisfaction made at all. Its an horrible derogation to the Scriptures, and to the Wisedome of God: and savoreth of a prophane audacious spirit, making sinne and grace of small esteeme.

Rather let it present to us the hideous nature of sin and justice. Salomon bids us behold the drunkard in his redness of colour, blueness of wounds, that we might loathe his sin. But rather behold it in this glasse of the Lord Jesus his satisfaction. Esay 63. 1. Who is he that commeth from Bozra, with his red garments? I have trod the wine-presse of the wrath of the Lord, &c. If the glasse of the Law have not done it, let this do it; yea behold the sins which we count most veniall in this object of Justice. Not the pettiest oath, or least of our vaine words could be payd for, with the price of a lesser thing than the bloud of Christ; Justice would admit of no other. And the Father spared not his onely Sonne in this point; but would have him drinke the dregs of his wrath, What shall become of such wretches then as despise this price? How shall they struggle with this infinite wrath of God, which the Lord Jesus had bin crusht under as unsupportable, if his God-head had not held him up? Now while sin is in her element, its counted as light as feathers; but being under the weight of justice, and the sence of wrath, it will proove intollerable. Let us count it so now, whiles we may get it shrowded under the Lord Jesus: let us sweat water and bloud, and feele that in us which caused those outcries, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Not to become Mediators to our selves, but to drive us to him that overcame this anguish, and was heard, in that he feared.

Heb. 5. If sin in our selves will not breake our hearts, let it breake them in the view of Christ broken by them: let us, Zach. 12. 20. see him whom we have pierced, and mourne. Not as Papists who whip their bodyes, and cry out of them that betrayed, accused, scourged and crowned Christ, and crucified him: but as those who were the Actors of this Tragedy our selves: that (if by any meanes) our hearts may be pricked as theirs, who heard Acts 2. 38. Peter urge the killing of the Lord of Life. Oh, unspeakeable love, to be willing to be pierced for murtherers, that they might escape! To say, Oh, Father, heere is the surety, lay no debt or punishment upon theſe debtors ! I have taken all upon me, if thou wilt needes have the uttermoſt, powre out thy wrath upon him that can ſatisfy, not upon them that cannot : Try whether there be any drop of mourning in thee, by this due ſight of ſinne and juſtice, and ſay, Oh, Lord, if I were left to be my own ſatisfier, if thou ſhouldſt have ſayd to CHRIST, as once to Moſes, Them that ſinne againſt mee, I will puniſh, of thee I will require nothing, Oh, how terrible had our condition been ?

Fifthly, let this doctrine confute. Firſt, all Sectaries, who that they might be ſingular (to ſay no more) teach heere of late, among us, that Chriſt had no guilt of ſinne caſt upon him by juſtice, for then he could have been no ſatisfier (confounding ſinne imputed and ſin inherent) that Chriſt ſuffered nothing in his ſoule, from Gods Wrath, ſeaſing upon him; nor yet in either body or mind, but that which man could inflict by either paine or diſcontent. But God keepe them, that are the brochers of ſuch ſtuffe, from ſuch a ſatisfaction as this in the day of their diſtreſſe. And whereas they adde, Gods juſtice accepted this for an equall price of ſinne: I anſwer, who hath taught them to dreame of an acceptance, of that which is not equivalent to Juſtice ? Might they not aſwell overthrow any neceſſity of a ſatisfying Juſtice, as teach Juſtice to accept that which is not Juſtice ? Is it not well for us, that the Lord will accompt a truely juſt ſatisfaction of a ſurety to anſwer our debt, (which was more than he ought us) but we muſt goe about to corrupt the price it ſelfe, and dreame of an imputing of equall ſatisfaction to an unequall price ? Let us abhorre ſuch novelties, and know if Chriſt ſuffered no more than the malice of man, there remaineth a neceſſity of a ſecond ſuffering for us, from juſtice. Let us beware, while we goe about to mince and leſſen the ſufferings of Chriſt ; leaſt we deſtroy the truth of a Mediator, and bereave the ſoule of that which ſhould uphold her, in her conflict with Juſtice. Not to ſpeake of unſavory dalliance with thoſe Texts, which are brought to confute them, Eſay 53. 2 Cor. 5.21. and others. For inſtance ; When we urge that text Eſay 63. 1. they elude it thus. That it ſpeakes of the Lord Jeſus his cruſhing the enemies of his Church : as if it were not familiar to the Holy Ghoſt to expreſſe both Acts, I meane of ſatisfaction and conqueſt, in one familiar phraſe,

meete to expresse: As here. To treade the wine-presse, may be referred either Actively to destroy all Rebells, or passively, to satisfie for the elect, by treading out all wrath? So; when we presse our Saviours bloudy sweat, paine of soule to the death, complaint of being forsaken of God: and so, of his being heard by his Father in that he feared, and cryed out with strong cryes to him that could help him, &c. They answer, All this must be understood of that babarous usage which Pilate and the Iewes shewed towards him: which is infinitely to the dishonor of him whom they pretend to honour, in making him more to take on for mans cruelty, than poore Martyres, sinfull men have done. But the truth is, God is not honoured by such curious distinctions, which neither any of the Fathers, nor late writers (one or other, except such as are taxed for Novelty) have ever dreamt of. But we may easily judge from whence such errors grow: if they were truthes, Satan and his instruments would more stirre against them: But they are quiet, using such trickes, as meanes to cover their own Projects, not caring how many of them are broached. And verily I doe not so much impute such Novelties to the Authors thereof, as to the just Hand of God, punishing the people for contempt of their grounds.

Branch 2. Secondly, Let it teach us to abhorre the opinion of those Lutherans, who teach that our Justification stands in the so applying of Christs righteousnesse to a sinner, that he may plead it from the Tenor of the Law; Doe this and live. Meaning that we must be possessed with the very selfe-same righteousnes wherewith Christ obeyed and suffered. And this they imagine to be the matter of our justification, and that else God cannot in Justice acquite us. They say, The elect doe sustaine one person with Christ, in all his acts and sufferings, and they are all made theirs: But thus they make Christ serve to no other ends, but to make us become our own Mediator, and to destroy his own. The error of this conceit arose from a confounding of the valour of worth of this righteousnesse, with the substance of righteousnesse it selfe. For although we cannot be justified without imputation of the fulnesse of the merit, yet we are not capable of that which merited, except we will become infinite.

ſeeth no ſin in any of his, if he have once imputed Chriſts righteouſneſſe to them. This error ariſes from not diſtinguiſhing theſe two, imputation of perfect righteouſneſſe and perfect imputing or accepting of imputed righteouſneſſe. No man is juſtified without the former: but our Faith fayling in the acceptance, muſt needs be looked upon by God. I confeſſe he ſees no ſinne, but he pardons it to his in Chriſt, upon Faith and repentance; but he puniſhes it for their good in mercy. Againe, what if we grant, God ſees no ſinne in them in reſpect of their juſtification? Is therefore their Sanctification perfect? Why then did Davids adultery diſpleaſe the Lord? Or why doe we pray, Forgive us our debts? or why ſaith our Saviour, Say when all is done, yee are unprofitable?

Fourthly, it confutes all ſuch as cut off the Active obedience of Chriſt, from the ſatisfaction, as they cut the garments of Davids ſervants by the middle. I blame them not now as Papiſts, for denying Chriſt to be our price, but for their curious dividing of one member of it, from another. It may be granted them, that the Paſſive is the more immediate conſummation of the ſatisfaction: but to exclude the Active, is moſt audacious. They ſay, Chriſt was bound to the obeying of the Law, as a man made under it. I anſwer, Yea, but except he had bin ſo made purpoſely for us, he needed never to be ſo at all: therefore his willing being ſo, made the merit the greater: and although being a man, he muſt obey; yet ſeeing his being a man, was that he might obey for us, it muſt be of greater deſart. Againe, as the Paſſive is the neerer merit, in reſpect of the eſtate, in which we ſtood accurſed; So the Active is as eſſentiall in reſpect of recovering that Image of righteouſnes, which makes us like God, and in which we were created. Neither was it Hell could have hurt us without ſin. Beſides (to ſay truth) if Adam after his ſin had not bin accurſed, yet in ſinning only he had bin miſerable. It is therefore as eſſentiall to Juſtification, that he be made juſt, as rid of guilt, and brought to Heaven as rid of Hell. But of this before.

Branch 4. 2 Sam. 10. 4.

Object. Anſwer.

Q. Be there any other uſes beſides confutation?

A. Yea. Sixthly, to teach all Gods people to abhorre the ſlavery of hypocrites, who if they could ſhun Hell, would never care for righteouſneſſe. Gods People, although they could ſin unſeene and unpuniſhed, yet would loathe it. They take as deepe thought for God

2 Sam. 14. 30. God as for their own wel-fare. When Absolon was pardoned, yet he sets Ioabs Corne on fire, because he might not be admitted to the Kings presence, chusing rather to dye, than to hang in such suspense. And shall a believer rest in his pardon more than in the righteousnes of God, which may make them accepted and beloved? No, the livery they weare is, The Lord our righteousnesse. Eph. 1. 5. Oh, till I be restored to my dignities, to stand before the Lord, to please him, to feele his Spirit of peace, joy and righteousnesse, and my conscience purged to serve God in holinesse, I can feele no comfort.

Vse 7. Againe, let it raise the price of the Lord Jesus his love in the hearts of all his children. Should he that was glory, and holinesse, be content, not only to become a Worme, base and vile to his enemies, but to lose the repute of holinesse and become sinne, rather than sinne should not become righteousnesse and glory? How great is this love then? and how deare should he be for taking of our imputed sinne and blemish upon him? The more cost, the more love.

Vse 8. Eightly, (to touch his Passion a little) how should it teach us to abhorre all enemies of the Crosse, Atheists, Papists, Jewes, and Pagans, (to whom it is either a stumbling block or foolishnesse) yea all such as hold upon a Christ in profession, but are farre from an humbled suffering and crucified Christ, carrying themselves, rather so in their haire, fashions and oathes, the loftinesse of their stomackes, as if their Christ were rather some great Epicure, Libertine, or Champion of the world? not only in the twelve dayes, but all the yeare long?

Vse 9. Ninthly, if this death of the Lord Jesus be our satisfaction, and the freedome from sin and curse, our pardon, peace, and Heaven; where is the dwelling of our hearts upon it, the delight of our soules in it? Commonly we will weare our choise Jewell neere our heart; and why is this Jewell which cost the bloud of the Son of God so far off it? Surely except this be our soules crowne more than the crowne of the aged are their children, or the Ministers crowne his people, or the husbands his deere wife, (not to speake of gold, pleasures, or outward wel-fare) how can it be well with us? If the perfection of love be joy, and the perfecter the object is, the greater the love: How is it, that each base shaddow of joy can affect us, when this can not?

1 Cor. 15. 19. If our hope were heere onely in Christ, of all others wee were

most

most miserable. Nothing heere can keepe thee from misery; what is then thy happinesse? This satisfaction only. Let it be all in all to thee, the seasoning of thy blessings, supply of all wants: if thou wert left as an Owle in the Desart, if no Calfe were left in the stall, yet let God be thy Salvation. Let thy life be bound up in it, as Jacobs in Beniamin. Hab. 3. 17.

Tenthly, and especially, let the chiefe streame of this points use, bee this: First, To all Ministers to teach it, and the people to apply it to themselves in all their feares, yea the greatest agony, yea death it selfe; whatsoever thou forgoest, hold this. For Ministers, let them remember their office (as hee to Archippus) and fulfill it. Paul presses it: compare 2 Cor. 5. 21. with 20. Him that knew no sinne hee made sinne, that wee might bee his righteousnesse. And what of this? Wee being Embassadors of God, as if Christ by us did entreate you, so we urge, Be reconciled to God. Be no Idols, none Preachers, be no Preachers of any thing before this: Preach not with a veile as Moses: stand with open face, and hold this mirror to poore sinners, that they may behold The Lord their righteousnesse. If the worth of a soule were knowne by us, and the blood of soules prized and pitied, then the preaching and declaring of this righteousnesse, Job 33. would be the scope of our labours. We are Ministers of the Law, but not only so; but also serving the Ministery of reconciliation. Let us mainely looke to this, to save our selves, and them that heare us: if we have wrought the use of the last Article, of the former part upon them, learne the skill of this second, and sinne not with God, till he say to us, Deliver him, I have received a ransome. we could find this veine, and the treasure hid in this field, all would be as Iacobs seaven yeares, for the love of Rachel, and easie. Use 10. Col. 3, ende 2 Cor. 5. 21. 2 Cor. 3. 14. Iob. 33. 24. Matth. 13. 44. Gen. 29. 20.

And for people also: Consider yee who have truly seene the Serpent of the Law, sting yee mortally in the other part, come, apply the remedy in this: looke upon this brasen Serpent and live, and first I say, feele the strength; Secondly, take hold of it, and make peace for the former; know, without a promise from God, there is no peace unto you: and promise there can be none without this satisfaction. This is the strength of an offer and a promise: its elfe (as he spake of the Serpent) Nehushtan, and a piece of brasse. As sinne is the strength of the Law, so is this price of the blood of Christ, the strength of the promise. Note well the Merit is 1. sufficient strength.

mise. Thou hast to deale with the Father in the point of justifying thee: ponder well then this strength, as thou wouldest the weight of gold in the ballance. If thou canst feele this strength so farre as to say, Esay 27, 4. or to heare the Lord say, Anger is not in me, I am appeased, thou beginst well. Anger abides in God, without this price, and thou art but as the bush and dry stubble before it. Be assured then, that no promise speakes to thy soule, and to thy heart, except it have this strength of Christ, in whom each one is yea and Amen. Looke upon a promise if thou need it, as its furnished with this: for hence comes all wrath to be turned to love: and this will make God willing to offer, and faithfull to performe, else not. That bottomlesse depth of mercy in thy Judge and enemy, cannot be gaged without this bucket: by this, thou mayst reach it.

2 Only it is the strength of the soule. Mica 6.

Againe, as this is sufficient strength, so it is that only, which can redeeme thee. Let that Mountebanke of Rome who would bring thee to the treasure of Saints merits, be odious to thee: Say this, Mich. 6. What shall I give the Lord for the sinne of my soule; My Gold or Pearles, Oyle or Wine, or the first borne of my body? No, he hath shewed me the only way, to be his righteousnesse. He redeemed us (saith Peter) not with Pearles, but with the pretious bloud of his Lambe. Wilt thou goe to the holy ones in Earth? Alas, they were as vile as thou but for this, and they have no more of it than will serve their turnes. Wilt thou goe to Heaven to Saints and Angels? Alas, Esay 63. Abraham knowes thee not. What then? wilt thou goe to thy duties, performances, grace? Alas, they had no bloud of expiation in them; all these will say, Satisfaction is not in us. Where then? Surely here only.

Matth. 15. 8. Esay 63.

Use 12. Twelfthly, If so, abandon all, and cling to this only. Take hold of this sufficient and only sufficient strength, as the Prophet bids thee. Carry it with thee to thy Judge, and make supplication to him in this strength. Peter, calles it the answer of a conscience, good in the Resurrection of Christ. What ever enemy pursue thee at the heeles, this is thy refuge: that here thou might'st have strong consolation in all feares, against all enemies. Feare'st thou the sinnes of youth, or age? The Lord Jesus was conceived in the wombe, that the infant (elect) which never saw light, might be saved by him: youth notwithstanding her disobedience, age for

for all her rebellion, might be forgiven. Doe thy morall sinnes, of murther, stealth, uncleannesse, swearing distresse thee? This Lord Jesus fulfilled all righteousnesse for thee. Doe thy spirituall wickednesses oppresse thee, and the penalties of them: an unbeleiving, secure, hard-heart by the contempt of the Gospell? The Lord Jesus suffered the powring out of his blood, to breake the heart of those that pierced him upon the Crosse. Art thou poore? Thy Satisfier was so rich? Hee was the Lord of all. Are thy sinnes great? He dyed for Noahs drunkennesse, Lots incest, Davids adultery, Small? Loe, even thy least vaine word, cost him his life-bloud. But perhaps not some sinnes, but sinne it selfe and the body of death troubles thee: He was made sinne that knew none. Oh then, what soever sinne can say, yet goe on to be the throne of grace, as Heb. 4. 16. and looke to finde mercy in time of neede. Doth the divell, the gates of Hell, conscience, or the Justice of God threaten thee? They cannot, save for sinne: if they doe, thy conscience hath her answer to God against all. And so plead this thy pardon to the Lord. Say thus, Oh Father, even thou cuttest off thy plea in giving this price, in accepting it, in offring of it to mee, I (Lord) am heere before thee, pinched and damned by my sinne: if thou doe not, reckon it unto me. Oh Lord, I put this blessed price between me and wrath: Lord have no power to deny it me. Even I, if I were left with an orphans estate, could not keepe it from him: Lord, I am fatherlesse, my orphans stock is in thy keeping: thou tookest it, to bestow it. Lord, let my soule have strong consolation in her seeking refuge to thee, because this price warrants me. If a debtor be in prison, and be bid to come forth, he will answer, I am heere for debt. I cannot: but if urged, he will lay hold upon this Strength, Surely some Surety hath payd my debt: and then his heart answers, I will come out. Oh! So let this strength be layd hold on by thee, if thou looke for deliverance. In the end of this second part, I shall adde somewhat touching Faith. Meane time let this be as the river leading to the Sea. And this much of the merit of obedience.

Application of the merit to all occasions and conditions.

Heb 4.16.

Q. What is the sixth branch of this Article, and wherein stands it?

A. The conquest of Christ. For notwithstanding all this satisfaction of Christ thus performed: yet, if it had been possible for any enemy, to have prevented him of the effect of it, that he could not have overcome all enemies, and death it selfe, his whole worke had been frustrate. But this could not be:

The sixth welspring. The conquest What it is? and the ground of it.

be: for he rose againe from the dead, and gave a full being to the merit of his satisfaction. Conceive the point in three estates of Christ, briefly. First, Before: Secondly, At. Thirdly, After his death.

In 3 respects.

1. In the first respect, though the Lord Jesus his flesh was not exempt from mortality and infirmity, but subject to all through our sinne: yet even under all these through his whole life, he conquered in suffering: for he endured no more than him pleased: before the time of his death, no enemy had power over him, to surprise him by any casualty, by any other death, or at any other season than himselfe would. In Luke 4. we reade, that his own Citizens, Led him up to the brow of the Hill to have broke his necke. Oft were Officers sent to take him: stones cast at him: upon the Sea he was subject to the violence of the Waves: none of these had power to fasten upon him, hee went through the midst of them, and through a thousand deaths, without hurt. Esay 43,2. It was prophecied of him, The fire should not burne him, nor waters devoure him: till his houre was come to suffer that Death, and onely that which God had layd out for him, and then nothing could hinder.

2. Secondly, at death, although as our mediator he must needes drinke that Cup, which his Father gave him: yet he was a conqueror even then too, and above any enemy, Judas, the Priests Act. 2, 24. and Pilate could do no more, than himselfe was willing to yeeld John 10, 18. to his Father in. No man takes away my life from mee, I lay it downe my selfe. Hee yeelded to those that tooke him, even when he had cast them to the ground as a conqueror. And therefore by the Union of his God-head, even in that houre and power of darkenesse, when his life was taken from him, and they looked to have had all their will on him: all the infernall powers assaulting him at once, by reason of the withdrawing of his Divine Nature, and the wrath of God, yet, even then he gave them the greatest foyle of all, and in death overcame him who had the power of it, and all his instruments, made his Crosse, his Trophee, and his Chariot of Triumph over them all: like Samson who more hurt his enemies at death, than all his life.

3 So thirdly, after death, when they had got his dead Body into the grave, thinking that the sealing of the stone could have made him theirs, never to rise any more: Loe, by his power he he kept his union ſtill, and after his forty houres ſleepe was over, he reſumed his body and ſoule againe, and gave them another blow worſe than all: roſe againe, conquered their malice; never more to be conquered, to die no more: All the enemies in hell, and upon earth; his triumph being begun, he was out of their reach. See for all, Act. 2, 24. Rom. 1. 3. Acts 2. 24. Eph. 1, end. Phil. 2, 5, 6, 7.

Q. What uſe make you hereof?

A. It is a nice Schoole point, whether Chriſt by all his doings and ſufferings, did merit any thing for himſelfe: Somewhat like to that other queſtion, Whether Chriſt as a man were ſubject to the Law? The anſwere which they make is, That Chriſt merited onely one thing for himſelfe, That is, exaltation: of which I ceaſe heere to ſpeake much: not doubting but that bare Union with the God-head did neceſſarilie procure that, without ſatisfaction. Yet to yeeld ſomewhat to the words of Paul, Phil. 2. 5. 6. Wherefore GOD exalted him on high, and gave him a Name above all Names, &c. Yet doubtleſſe both his obligation to the Law, and his whole conqueſt was eſpecially for his Church, and for her ſake hee both merited and conquered. Many things might conſequently befall the Lord Jeſus as Mediator: but the maine and firſt reſpect which hee had was our Salvation and benefit.

First, therefore the maine uſe (which is alſo the ſcope of this ſixth Branch) is, the aſſurance which the poore ſoule under a condition of grace, may take to it ſelfe in pleading her part in this ſatisfaction. For, what gave a being and life to this ſuffering of Chriſt? Surely his conqueſt. If any enemy could have held him under chaines from his victorious Reſurrection, all his ſatisfaction had bin fruſtrate. But that could not be. It was unpoſſible, as we ſee Acts 2. 24. that death ſhould hold him. Now then by his conqueſt, how lively, renowned, powerfull a merit gave hee to all his ſufferings? Hee ſent his Church into aſſured poſſeſſion of all his merits. Oh, as the author. to Heb. 10. 22, ſaith, Let us come with thus aſſurance of Faith to the throne of grace, ſaying, Lord, give thy poore needing ſervant, the fruit of my Lord Jeſus his obedience, the power of his Conqueſt, the full efficacy of his redemption: That as he Rom. 1, 3. Eph. 1. 21. by his God-head declared himſelfe a Conquerer, and aſſured the truth of his merit and death, yea conſummated it, (although he ſayd upon the Uſe 1. Heb. 10. 22. Rom. 1, 3. Eph. 1. 23.

Mat. 26. Croſſe, All was finiſhed) ſo my ſoule may take hold of this ſtrength, and claime the life and power of this ſatisfaction, with fuller aſſurance. Oh, let us not want the ſtrength of this perſwaſion, but preſſe it and ſay, Lord, I come to thee in the merit of a Chriſt not dead but alive, a Conquerer that made good to mee all his ſufferings by his victory, and gave all his enemies a deadly blow, when they looked to have overthrowne him. Let this be the firſt uſe: learne this as the maine, to drinke at this ciſterne, this well of Salvation, as the former, and then the other Comfortable Uſes will follow of themſelves.

Q. What other follow hereupon?

Uſe 2. A. Sundry conſolations to a believing ſoule, touching the Sundry conſolations. Aſſurance of Faith and Perſeverance, Victory in combats and all afflictions. The Lord Jeſus hath the Key of Death in his Hand, and will make his, more than Conquerours in all: nothing
1. ſhall ſeparate, Rom. 8. ult. any of his from him. Touching Faith, how many are the feares that a poore ſoule hath, that ſhee ſhall never bee able to believe? Within her ſelfe what weakeneſſe, forgetfulneſſe, melancholy, guilt of Conſcience through corruption, and dead heart, ſlaviſh and fearefull, preſumptuous, hardned by the deceit of ſinne, unworthineſſe, neglect of the ſeaſon of grace, this body of death oppoſing all ſavour of goodneſſe? And ſo even death of body makes them afraid, they may dye ere they believe. So without them, what temptations againſt God, and the Scriptures? what enemies have they to darken and dull them, their ſences, underſtandings and heart? what enemies of the wicked have they without them? Ill huſbands, Wives, to diſmay them, telling them that they cannot be aſſured in this life of their ſalvation. How doe enemies affright them with malice, threats, bigge lookes, diſdaine and ſcorne, putting them in feare they ſhall never eſcape out of their clawes? In this variety of affliction, what is there to ſuſtaine them? What is it which teacheth them to kiſſe the rod, take up their croſſe, and beare the indignation of the Lord, till hee
Mica. 7, 9. pleade their cauſe, and bring forth their light? Surely the ſtrength of their Captaine, and Conqueror the Lord Jeſus, who hath told them. In the World they ſhall have affliction, but bee of Iohn 16, ult. good comfort, I have overcome the World. Its he that tells them, till Gods ſeaſon of their ſuffering be come, ſo much, ſo long, and that very croſſe God hath ordeined for them, no enemie ſhall doe doe them hurt. And when they doe, hee will make it tollerable and easy unto them, doe them good for their sakes that hurt them. But above all, they are made Conquerors, and their chinne is kept above water, they fight under hope of victory, and say with the Church, Mica. 7. 8. Rejoyce not over mee, Oh my enemy, for when I am downe I shall rise; and when thou art fallen, thy wound shall bee incurable. There is a fable that when the Goate cropped the Vine branches, shee bids the Goate, bite and spare not, but shee should beare so much Wine as should serve to sacrifice the Goate. This Vine is the militant Body of Christ: so that as hee feared not his enemies, because hee subdued them in suffering, so should they. Reade the third Article, in the point of Redemption, more fully of this use.

Q. What else?

A. Thirdly, it comforts them by Faith, in the Conquest of our Lord Jesus, against the power of Death and the grave. For as it was with their Head, hee could not bee held in it: so with them, their flesh rests in hope of that triumph: Oh Hell, where is thy sting, Oh grave where is thy victory? 1 Corinthians 15. The full redemption of their bodies, causes them to feare no Death, nor grave. Nay, their hope makes them say, If wee hoped onely in Christ heere, wee were of all other most miserable: but this conquest makes us happy in all our misery. For why? even by that very death which is the last enemy, and the gate of utter misery to the wicked, the Lord opens a doore of full and finall redemption to the faithfull. Their lowest ebbe is the next step to the highest tyde of their soules happinesse, and finall freedome from all sinne, sorrow, and enemies. As wee see our Lord Jesus his death and grave were the next steppe to his exaltation. True it is, the Saints have many pettit deliverances in this World. But they are not fully redeemed till death, from all enemies, nor from the dominion of death till the Resurrection; But then is their finall redemption. Therefore let not death, grave, nor the rottennesse thereof dismay us: for hee who brake the chaines thereof for himselfe, as Sampson brake his cords, hee shall also breake them for us, that they shall not hold us. Wee shall bee more than conquerors by him that loved us: and by his power shall wee rise though not so quickly, yet as surely as hee did. Whom should not this conquest ſtrengthen againſt the unwillingneſſe to be unclothed? The rayſing of our head, puts us in hope, that we ſhall riſe and conquer finally: ſo that no enemy, no Divell, no perſecution ſhall ever come neere us! We ſhall be as much out of gun-ſhot of them, as the Lord Jeſus himſelfe was after his conqueſt. Were it not for this: long, many, and deepe troubles would diſmay us: but this hope helpes all. And not only outward croſſes, but alſo our poore graces of knowledge, Faith, patience is ſuſtained with this Spirit of the Lord Jeſus, that one day it ſhall be better, when all imperfect things ſhall be done away, the body ſhake off corruption, and they ſee him in whom now they believe: Their life is hid with Chriſt in God: and although it appeare not now what they are, yet when their Captaine comes, they ſhall be conquerours as he: therefore in the meane time, though they be baſely eſteemed of, and ſet at nought; yet their ſpirit of victory and hope props them up and makes them merry, becauſe a day is comming will pay for all.

1 Iohn 3. 2.

Uſe. 4. This alſo is terror to all prophane ones, and ſuch as ſtill abide in the Gall of bitterneſſe: The conqueſt of the Lord Jeſus, is the cruſhing and treading of them as Grapes in the Wine-preſſe of wrath: Its the entry of Chriſt into his Kingdome, for the utter ſuppreſſion of all his enemies: whom Eſay 63. he will deſtroy in his fury. As he is mighty thereby, to ſave all his, ſo he is as potent to deſtroy all them that be his foes. Now he hath recovered power and ſtrength, victory and triumph: and now he turnes the wheele over their heads, and will cruſh both them and their Prince, the Devill. He will now cauſe all thoſe barres which he hath broken, of ſhame, feare, afflictions, horrors, death, the grave, to returne back upon them: And, as the ſame waters which were the ſafegard of Noe, were the deſtruction of the old World: and the ſame Sea which was a double wall to the Iſraelites paſſing through the red Sea, yet was the overwhelming of their enemies, their Chariots, Horſes, Pharao himſelfe, his Princes and Souldiers: So, that croſſe which is the Pillar of Salvation to the Elect, ſhall bee the Chariot of Triumph to the wicked, and ſhall turne upon them whatſoever they impoſed upon Chriſt, to cruſh them, and to become their utter confuſion. He will cauſe a ſpirit of enmity to poſſeſſe them, they ſhall one deſtroy another: their Counſells againſt him, ſhall fall upon themſelves. His agony ſhall worke in their ſpirits ſuch ſuch an unſpeakeable horror and anguiſh of conſcience, as cannot be pacified: Death ſhall ceaze upon them as a Vultur upon a Carcas: it ſhall be as a King of feares unto them: The face of it ſhall be terrible: the very thoughts of it a farre of ſhall be as a Sword hanging by a briſtle over their heads, and appall them as the hand-writing did Belſhazzar, in the midſt of his Cups: And when it comes, it ſhall cauſe their lips to quiver, and their bones to tremble: it ſhall be with them as with him, who cryed out, wretched man, muſt I die? What! All my bagges, my treaſures, my delicate fare, my pleaſures, my revenues, my ſumptuous apparrell and dwellings, my retinue, friends and flatterers, all pulled away! Oh! it ſhall open and preſent Hell, and the jawes of Satan and deſtruction, wrath and eternall fire, to ſwallow them! What ſhift now wilt thou make, O poore ſoule, which wert wont to ſport thy ſelfe, to ſolace thy heavy thoughts and ſpirits, with jeſts and gigges to go, to do, to talke, to lye down, to riſe up at thy pleaſure, and to gird thy ſelfe; but now, another ſhall gird thee, what wilt thou now doe? when all theſe ſhall leave thee drencht and drown'd in the pit of deſpaire, and finall deſtruction? Oh! betimes labour to get thy ſinne pardoned, the ſting of it removed, the power of it ſubdued, the Divell conquered, thy conſcience at peace, thy reckoning ready, and all the enemies of thy peace at league with thee not falſely but truly, that ſo the ſting of death being taken out, thy horrors and feares may alſo vaniſh. Except Chriſts Conqueſt be for thy Redemption, it ſerves for thy ſubverſion. Eſay 28.15.

Contrarywiſe, (as I ſayd before) this victory of Chriſt, ſerves for the infinite comfort of them that fight under his Banner, becauſe for them Chriſt hath conquered as for himſelfe: and (as meane as heere they ſeeme) he hath taken them up into his triumphant Chariot. None of the croſſes, enemies which he hath conquered, ſhall hurt them. Death it ſelfe (the laſt enemy) ſhall be made a friend as Haman (in ſpite of him) to honor Mordecai, ſo to cloath them with immortality. The Divell thinkes to wound them by it mortally: but he ſhall ſhedde their Impoſtume to the ground, never to trouble them any more. Death ſhall be their beſt Phyſitian. And in ſteed of a deadly poyſon, ſhall give them an Antidote, which ſhall for ever preſerve them againſt all their enemies: That ſhall ſet open to them a wide dore of entrance into glory. They ſhall feare nothing in death. For why? Do they feare it, because they have still much corruption to overcome me? Behold their war-fare is accomplished! Do they feare the guilt of it, Hell and wrath of God? The sting and fire of it, which is sinne, is gone. Do they mourne because they have done so little good and taken so little! Alas! in Christ, their accompt is made, their service is ended, their Marriage day is come, their complaints are at an end, their reward is at hand, their rags are cast off, their robes are put on. Or, do they mourne, because they are taken away in their middle age? So was Christ, but he prevented eternity, and his Crowne, thereby. Or are they afrayd of the separation of soule and body? But they are united already in their head, and their separation shall be a perfection at their returne. Or, shall they loose their friends! Nay their friends shall loose them, but their gaine shall be, not to need them. Or, shall they part with the Ordinances of Christ? They shall loose some love tokens, but enjoy their Bridegroome. Or, shall they be layd by the walls and in the moulds? That dishonor shall tend to purify, to beautify them, when their conquest shall appeare. Or, shall they not see the wel-fare of their children, but leave them to the wide World? They shut them up in the Arke of Christs Conquest, never to be hurt or wronged. Thus much of the conquest.

The 7 wel-spring. The Application of the merit. What it is?

Q. Having ended the Merit, proceed to the seventh and last Branch of this second Article: What is the applying worke of Christ, and wherein doth it stand?

A. It is that solemne part of his Mediation, for the sake whereof he forsooke the earth, and was exalted above all principalities, and sitteth at the right Hand of God, his Father, that by his intercession alwayes made for his Church, he might apply to all the members, the power of this satisfaction, that it might worke Faith in those that want it, and confirme it in those that have it.

Esay 53. ult. Esay 53. ult. The Prophet addeth this to the powring out of his soule, that he prayed for the transgressors. And S. Iohn gives him the name of our Advocate with the Father: for this cause, that the Church may enjoy the fruit of his death continually. And the Author to the Hebrewes saith, That he ever liveth to make intercession for us. The High Priest under the Law, appeared once a yeare with blood in the Holy of Holies, to bring forth a generall reconciliation, but the Lord Jesus, for ever. And as the ends heereof are many, to wit, to present the prayers of his people unto God, to hold them close to his Father, and keepe them in his love, to cover their daily offences, and continue their justification and acceptance, to unite them one to another, and to protect them from enemies: so especially to blesse the Ministery of his Gospell, for the breeding Faith in the soules of the elect, by the preaching of this his blood and death. As wee may see cleerely in Iohn 17. (that heavenly Chapter) where all these are described. Iohn 17.

to

Marke then, it is not enough for the Lord Jesus, to procure the price of our peace, but he plyes the Father with it, and offers up by his eternall Spirit, the merit and vulour of his satisfaction, for the effectuall drawing of the hearts of his people, to believe the Gospell. His bloud is the seede of the Church (for what were Word or Sacrament, but for him?) but that which doth cherish this seede, and give a body to it in the consciences of men, is the application of it by this intercession. More fully thus, As by fulfilling all righteousnesse, the Lord Jesus hath pleased the Father, and is so gracious to him, that he grants him whatsoever hee asketh: so doth Jesus to the uttermost improove this favour, and applyeth the comfort thereof to all his, that they may understand how powerfull and prevayling hee is to obtaine whatsoever hee desireth. And hence it is, that till his ascension, the Comforter could not bee sent: but after when he prayed, then came he, and brought to minde, and sealed to the hearts of his Disciples, whatsoever they had heard preached before. So that when wee see the prevailing power of the Word and Sacraments in the weake Ministery of flesh, what shall we ascribe it unto, but the power of this applying worke of our Advocate, who conveyes savor of life, of brokennesse of heart, Faith and regeneration thereby into the soules of his? And in this respect hee is the Key of his Fathers bosome and Fountaine, to unlock and set it open (being sealed before) for Iudah and Jerusalem to wash in, as Zach. 13. 1. Zach. 13, 1.

1. Let the Reader looke in the third Article in the priviledge of Adoption.

Q. What is the use thereof?

A. As it is singular for all uses to the Church in generall, and all the lively members thereof in all concernements of it whatsoever: as acceptance of their prayers, being perfumed with the sweete incense heereof; protection of their persons, safegard against enemies, sustentation of their soules in grace, Use 2.

perseverance and the like: so especially that which we reade Heb. 10. 19. Heb. 10. 19. 10. 21. Seeing by the Blood of Iesus wee have a living way made unto us by his flesh &c. Let us draw neere with a pure heart in assurance of Faith. Oh! it should bee as a welspring of Salvation for every dry soule to come unto, even in the greatest barrennesse, deadnesse and feare of heart, that the merit of Christ should not belong to it. Doe but consider this Advocateshippe of CHRIST, continued for ever for thee, Iesus Christ yesterday, to day and for ever, Hebrewes 13. 8. to this end, that the Gospell and the preaching of the promise might Heb. 4. bee lively, pearcing and powerfull to divide the joynts and marrow, and to create in thy soule the fruite of the Lippes, which is peace. If thou hadst the Kings Sonne for thy Advocate to the King for some suite, wouldst not thou thinke there were life in it? Therefore goe not to the Word and Sacrament any more with a dead and sadde heart, as if there were nothing in them, save an out-side of mans voyce, and efficacy to perswade: behold Christ in them, who by his applying power, conveyes into them, strength, savor, perswasion and grace, that his poore people may not heare his Word as a dead letter, or receive the Seales as dumbe elements, but as divine ordinances assisted with the Spirit of Christ; and therefore able to breed Faith in the soule, and truely to carry it into the streame of his satisfaction.

What is the usuall complaint of most people in their hearings and use of meanes, but this: That the Minister is uneffectuall to them, they heare with small light or quickning of heart? The promise they grant to be faithfull, and the Sacrifice of Christ full of merit: but they are so to such as mixe them with Faith. Why poore soule? doth the Lord so offer thee Christ in his Gospell, as if he left it to thee to shift for Faith? Is not Faith his gift who gave Christ? Divide not the things which God hath put together. Deceive not thy selfe in the condition of Faith, and assure thy self, Revel. 1. the Lord Iesus will give thee both meate and appetite, the object Heb. 12, 3. of his righteousnesse, and Faith to believe it also. He is Alpha and Omega, the author and finisher of our Faith, Heb. 12. 3. and he doth live for ever with God, to make good his satisfaction to his people, by giving power to his word to breed Faith: that as it cannot be without it, so it may subsist in it, and our Faith might not rest in man, but in God.

Secondly,

Secondly, let all ſuch be exhorted to deny their owne ſtrength, conceits, hopes or feares, and as oft as they goe to the Word, remember it is a word of reconciliation. And therefore looke up to this grand Maſter of Requeſts, and apply the worthineſſe of this Prayer to thy poore empty ſoule: ſay thus, The cauſe of my unbelieving hearing, is my little reſpect to him who hath the Key of all grace: if I could looke upon him and ſay, Lord Jeſus, convey ſome part of thy Fathers Fountaine into my heart: derive it by a channell for the nonce into mee; Oh, thou ſhouldſt finde the Spirit of perſawſion to revive, yea to fill thy ſoule in thy hearings! Vſe 2.

Yea, let all the faithfull Miniſters of God comfort themſelves in their weakeneſſe, and defects of preaching, in their deadneſſe of heart to the worke of Faith, in the little ſucceſſe of their labours, in the wofull hardneſſe of heart in the people; The Lord Jeſus, by his Spirit of interceſſion holdes them as his Candle-ſtickes in his right Hand: hee doth as thoſe two Olives, *Zach.*4. aſſiſt his Lampes, and drop in this Oyle of gifts and grace upon them: hee doth make them as Paul, able Miniſters of Reconciliation, that by them and out of their nothing hee may create the fruit of the lips, peace: and he will uphold Goſpell, Miniſtry, and the power of both, in the midſt of their enemies: and although they be never ſo furious, yet, *Mica.*2. 7. his Spirit ſhall not bee ſtraitned, but his Word ſhall ſtill bee good to ſuch as walke uprightly. And of the ſeaven branches of the ſecond Article, thus much. Vſe. 3. Revel. 1. Zach.4.6. 2 Cor.3. Eſay 53. Mica.2,7.

Article III.

Queſtion.

What is the third Article of the ſecond Part?

Gods imputation is the forme of our juſtification.

A. That the act of God the Father imputing the merit of Active and Paſſive righteouſneſſe of our ſatisfier, to a ſinfull ſoule, is the true formall and being cauſe of Juſtification.

Q. This word of Imputation is indeed often uſed in the point of Juſtification: what doth it import?

What it is.

A. It is ſuch an act of God the Father ſatisfied, as doth take this righteouſneſſe and reckon it to the needing ſoule as her own, (although it be inherent in another) to cast upon it an eſtate, of as full and perfect freedome and acceptance, as if it had never ſinne, or had fully ſatisfied. For looke how he deale

2 Cor. 5. 21. with our ſurety; he made him ſinne for us, that is, imputed it to him as his, (which imputation the Lord Jeſus found to be no conceit or notion but a reall thing) ſo doth he take his righteouſneſſe and count it ours, that it might be really ours indeed. Accomptants of ſummes of money or creditors, if they differ about their reckonings, fall to eſteeming of a debt, or a receipt, as they can: and ſo at length, either by not imputing a ſumme due, which yet may be due, or elſe imputing a ſumme as payd, which perhaps is not, grow to an iſſue. And that which mooveth them hereto, is peace. So heere, the Lord enclining to make peace with the ſoule, eſteemes not a deſperate debt, which yet is a debt, and eſteemes it as payd by the ſoule, which yet ſhee cannot pay. See texts. And this imputation is a full diſcharge, no hole can be pickt in it.

Rom. 4. 6. 2 Cor. 5, 17. Q. This doctrine of Imputation is ſomewhat darke to mee, therefore explaine it; and firſt the phraſes uſed by the Holy Ghoſt: for ſometime hee ſpeakes of Imputing ſomewhat, ſometime of not Imputing, and againe in one place, hee ſpeakes of Imputing righteouſneſſe, ſometime of Imputing Faith for righteouſneſſe: Rom. 4. 5. Cleare theſe termes.

A. By the terme of not imputing ſinne, and imputing righteouſneſſe; he intimates in how many reſpects Chriſt hath holpen us: to wit, both to forgiveneſſe in the one, being made ſinne for us: and to acceptation in the other, by clothing us with his righteouſneſſe: yet ſo, as by both Active and Paſſive righteouſneſſe joyntly, not ſeverally conſidered. Conferre Pſal. 32. 1. with 2 Cor. 5. 17.
Pſal. 32, 1: 2 Cor. 5. 17. where both covering ſinne and reconciling, are made the effects of not imputing ſinne.

By the ſecond phraſe, we muſt conceive one thing to be meant. For its familiar with Paul to uſe theſe two phraſes for one thing; namely, imputation of Faith, and of righteouſneſſe. Not that Faith can in any ſenſe be our righteouſneſſe: but becauſe Chriſt apprehended by Faith, is the ſame thing, with Faith it ſelfe in the Scripture. Beſides, we know, Faith muſt ever concurre with imputation in the act of it; and therefore the Holy Ghoſt honours it, with the name of being imputed to righteouſneſſe. That Faith muſt needs ſo concur, note three things in this worke: Firſt, God enables enables the soule to believe on the Lord Jesus by the promise, and the spirit thereof. Secondly, the soule yeeldeth and consenteth. Thirdly, God casteth hereby the righteousnesse (of this believed) upon the Soule, and imputes it to pardon and life. Faith then alway concurres with imputation: the like whereto may be sayd of justification, which it were blasphemy to ascribe to Faith (seeing its God that justifieth) but yet Faith is still sayd to justifie, because of her necessary concurrence. The which Phrase is tropicall, the instrument going put for the principall agent. Otherwise in proper speech, alas! How shall poore faith apprehend in the soule an infinite righteousnesse, except we take it thus, that God by Faith (as his owne instrument) doth convey all the object of Christ at once into us?

And this I would have the Reader to marke for two causes. The first, to decide this question so much demanded, whether Faith apply Christ in each of his merits particularly, or no? Quest. To which I say, that it is the Worke of God the Father, to proportion the merits of Christ Jesus in particular to the soules need; its God the Father, who accepts the merit, and therefore only can proportion it. Poore finite Faith (though it know never so much of the particular merit) yet cannot doe it, because the merit is infinite. Faith only hearing the offer of God (already reconciled and appeased by this merit) to be freely tendred to her, receaves this tender as God makes it, all that is, the Lord Jesus made by God to the soule, wisdome, righteousnes, and what else soever. So that whether we comprehend the thing offered or no, its not materiall, if we believe the offer to bee truely made to us, we receive it in the kind wherein God bestowes it; and in a word when wee cannot comprehend it, the Lord comprehends us. So that Faith is a calling of the soule upon the offer of CHRIST from the Father, giving him all at once in all his good things (which the Spirit reveales; and the more the better) yet Faith is not in this most to be admired for particular applying each benefit, but for her accepting of what the Lord hath couched in the offer, that is, whole Christ. Secondly, I say, this answere is to bee noted against a Schismaticall opinion of some; that Faith, the act of believing, to bee that which God accepts to justification. A dangerous conceit which makes Christ a meere servant to Faith, and under the colour of Answer.

aſcribing honour to Faith, takes away all Chriſts preheminence. For although this opinion exclude not Chriſt wholly, from the reckoning, yet in the act of juſtifying, it onely gives all to the worke of Faith. And they ſay, as the act of Adams ſinne condemned him: ſo the act of our Faith juſtifies us. But the Parallell is fooliſh and abſurd. Adams ſinne might condemne himſelfe and us: but our Faith can neither ſave ours nor our ſelves, of it ſelfe: that which it ſaves us by, is the object and merit which it apprehends, and that by the act of Gods imputing it to us.

Object. Q. You ſeeme to make imputation an act of Gods free grace: the word is uſed as an act of juſtice, for Paul ſaith, To him who worketh, righteouſnes is imputed by debt? I, anſwer, Paul there Rom. 4, 4, 5. oppoſing juſtification by workes, and juſtification by Faith, (for the more currant expreſſion) uſeth one word in both caſes: but very improperly. For its as if a man ſhould ſay to his debtor, Pay me an hundred pounds, and I will impute it as a whole diſcharge. This we know is no proper ſpeech, for in ſuch a caſe its ſmall thanke to him to impute that, for which he is bound to give acquittance: ſo that imputing (properly) is gracious. For it is ſuch an act of God, as comming betweene our believing and his juſtifying, doth not legally take any diſcharge of debt from us, but doth graciouſly impute that which is not ours, as if it were ours, for the making of us guiltleſſe and accepted.

Q. I conceive you ſomewhat better. Howbeit I ſtill ſee that imputation is of ſuch a thing as is our own really: why then not as well of a thing inherent, viz. a righteouſneſſe of our own, as the Papiſts dreame?

A ſecond doubt. Anſw. A. Becauſe theſe two have a wide difference, viz. to bee really made ours, and to be from, or inherently in us: The righteouſnes of Chriſt imputed, cannot juſtifie us, except it be ours; howbeit it is ſo not becauſe it comes from within us, but becauſe its caſt upon us; and in a word, its not firſt in us and then imputed: but firſt imputed, and then made ours.

Q. But how can meere imputation make a thing really ours?

How imputation is a reall thing? A. Yea, Nothing can be more reall than imputation. The imputing of a man is reall, when he imputes an uncertaine and undue payment, as if certaine and due; and this is good and firme among men. Davids not imputing Shemei's rayling, is 2 Sam. 19. 23. a ſufficient releaſe to him of the offence and puniſhment. The imputing of Adams sinne to us, is as reall, as if we had beene in the Garden with him. Christs taking our guilt upon him, was as reall, and as really felt, as if himselfe had been the offender. And shall not his imputed righteousnesse bee as reall as if our selves could in our own persons have satisfied, or as if wee had needed none? Yes verily.

Q. What issueth then from this imputation of God?

A. The act of God justifying us really, and freely from all our sinne and guilt, and all the curse due thereto, quitting us by proclamation (as I may say) from Heaven, by the voyce of his Spirit through faith: so that having disabled all enemies from giving in evidence, loe he absolveth us as having nothing come in against us. As once hee scattered those accusers of the Woman, Iohn 8. so that none came in to accuse her, but turned their backs with confusion, and so discharged the Woman: so doth hee here: having disabled all evidence against us, hee doth impute blameableneſse unto us, and declare to us our righteousnesse, yea proclaiming us righteous. And as the Creditor abhorres to receive the debt of his debtors surety, and yet to count him a debtor still: so the Lord having accepted Christs price for us, abhorres so to disable his Sonnes payment, as to require the debt at our hands the second time: but rather disables his owne Wrath and Justice from thinking of any further demand of us. The issue of this doctrine. Rom. 8. 33. Iohn 8. Iob 33.

Whereas it might bee objected, How can that bee his free act, which hath such a price paid to purchase it? I answer, No man dare call it free on the behalfe of the Father and Christ: for so its the dearest purchase that the World ever heard of: but in respect of both the Father and Christ to us-ward: the Father hath freely given himselfe content in his Sonne, and Christ hath freely yeelded it to the Father: so that (whatsoever it cost Christ) it costs us nothing: wee may come (nay must) without our cost, with empty hands, and buy it for nothing: so that in truth, the more it cost to purchase, and the lesse it cost us to come by, the freer is that justification which absolves us: and the truer is that of Paul, Rom. 3. 24. Being justified freely by his grace. Obiect. Answ.

Q. What is the use hereof?

A. The Vses are many. Let mee beginne with you of my owne Congregation, to whom although as dead, yet I speake Vse 1.

this (being as you know, the last Sermon I preacht among you) let, I say, my admonition unto you, be this: It hath not beene with you as with every Congregation whereto preaching hath beene. To you I may truly say, that now toward these fifty fiue yeeres the Lord Iesus hath beene crucified among you. I doubt not but the Lord hath thousands in many Congregations of this land, who though they have wanted that full and cleare light, which you have enjoyed, yet (as faithfull servants of God) walke with him, and serve him instantly day and night in simplicity of heart and innocency of life. Give me leave to say unto you, in this five or six yeeres of my labours past (besides Sermons) God hath revived the doctrine of Christ and Sacraments: of selfe-deniall, faith, the satisfaction, the imputation of righteousnesse, among you, (and God grant you long to enjoy the doctrine and practise of these grounds:) but what answer shall yee make to God, if as he hath walked in and out with you in all his truths, opening unto you all these well-springs of salvation, and concealing nothing from you, which humane weaknesse hath beene able to utter; you still shall faile and come short of such people, as (I may truly say) have had but the Baptisme of Iohn among them? Thus I speak in respect of that cleere light of all Christ, both in his satisfaction and Gods imputation, in season and out of season urged unto you.

Remember; To whom much is given, of them much will be required. What would many Eunuchs, *Cornelius*ses, and Proselytes, (ignorant of those things that have beene pind to your sleeves,) give that the things you have heard might sound in their eares? Why is all this cost, but that you might also walke in and out, with God, in all your wayes? not onely in a morall, abstinent, harmelesse, and honest manner (which yet is a great favour) but with a broken and selfedenied heart, living by daily in this imputation of a satisfaction? holding your part in it yesterday, to day and for ever? Do ye not accompt it one thing to live by gueesse and devout aymes: and another to know by it your Righteousnesse; to cleave to it by a promise? To cleanse your selves from all looseneesse and privie lusts? to season all your liberties, to alleniate and supply your crosses, to enable you to all duties, to fructifie all meanes, to sanctifie all estates, and to make your death happy and welcome? Beware, beware, lest there be found among poore people (that never heard of the Doctrines which thus long have founded in your eares) many whose simplicity, innocency and zeale exceeds yours. Oh! let not any of you be found naked (at the coming of Christ) of this robe of his, or lying at these well-springs without power to take them! Be not intricted in a Christian course, stand fast in your liberty: go on with God in all meanes, duties, and graces, yea even in the hardest times, streights and distempers: suffer no love of the earth, profit, ease, lust, to eclipse the lustre of the Lord Jesus which hath shined among you. But, as many of Gods Saints, before by parting, and since, have dyed with joy and triumph by this imputation of Christ: so strive ye, and run ye as ye may overtake them, and none may take away this your crowne from you! Decline not (as you do) to sensuality, formality and commonnesse.

founded

Use 2. Secondly, let this bee consolation to all faint and weake children of God, in the sight of their little grace and meane gifts; and in the feare of perseivering to the end. For the first, tell Branch 1. me, weake soule, if I should come and say, Thou wert as holy as Job, as upright as David, believing as Abraham, zealous as Phinees, would it not make thy heart leape within thee? Surely, although I dare not say these of thee, yet I dare say this, if all these had not the Robe of Christs imputed Righteousnesse cast over the holinst of all their graces, their unhallowednesse had defiled them, and the greatest of their holinesse had not profited them. And loe, this Robe thou hast as fully, largely, and deepely, as the best of all these ever had. The imputation of God is equall to all his justified ones: one hath no more than another. If thou couldst come in and say, That Abraham or Peter had more righteousnesse of imputation to cover them, than thou, it were somewhat; But loe, thy righteousnesse of imputation is as large as the largest of theirs. If they have gathered some more patience; and some more knowledge, some more love, thankes, and zeale; that others can repeate Sermons, or pray better than thou, follow thou after them: envie them not: hee that had for them, hath for thee. I say not equall grace, (what shall it need, if it bee sufficient?) but I assure thee, none hath gathered more Manna than an Homer full: so much thou hast, and more they have not, than their Homer of the imputed righteousnesse. Let this joy thee in 2 Cor. 8. 15. thy defects! and teach thee to honour that God with more and more holinesse, who hath honoured thee with the equall Righteousnesse of his best servants.

Branch 2. And secondly, touching thy feare of holding out: I say to thee, Prove to thy selfe thy faith in this act of imputation: and that thou hast received that from God, and then I assure thee, that Eternall Spirit by which the Lord Iesus offered up himselfe for his elect, (the weakest as well as the strongest) shall also susteine thee: It is the stock which thou art (by imputation) implanted into, which holds thee: not thou, it: Looke thou to thy receiving faith, and that shall so inable thee by the vertue of the gift received, that (whatsoever thy feares now bee) that shall uphold thee eternally, and when thou art weakest, the power of it shall be most magnified in thee.

Vse 3. Faith the most excellent grace. Thirdly, this point is use of instruction unto us, teaching us the excellency of the gift of faith. And first, in respect of the Nature of it. Other graces of inherence dwell in the soule, and are active within and upon the soule more or lesse, as patience, sobriety, &c. But the nature of faith (although it bee a gift put into the soule, yet) standeth rather in a Passive receptivenesse than an activenesse: its rather like to a Beggar, then a Worker: the Beggar forsaking his bare walles, seekes out for his living, and takes it into himselfe from without: the Worker earnes it, from the principle of his owne skill. There is no grace appointed to that purpose, to which faith is: viz. out of her home emptinesse to looke out and to receive into her selfe from God the vertue of the Lord Jesus, by this imputing of Righteousnesse: and storing her selfe with water of life from his well-spring, and with wealth from his treasures. Secondly, in respect of the constancy of it: other graces while they last, doe us great stead: as patience under a crosse: thankes, for blessings: but faith alwayes receives his imputation of Christ from the Father, as well to cover and beautify us all our life, as at our first conversion, and carries her influence into each grace, both to strengthen and keepe the life of it, and also to cover the wants of it, yea the defects of our whole course. No grace can supply faith properly: but faith supplyeth all them. For she letteth into them the vertue of the Lord Jesus, imputed by the Father, to accept, cover, and purge them al, (not to speak of the work of sanctification, of which elsewhere.)

The first respect. Nature of it.

2. Respect.

3. Respect. Thirdly, in respect of the prerogative of it, that its admitted to be all in all with God for the soule: I may say it is that upon earth in this militant course, which Holinesse shall be in Heaven.

For

For 'tis faith only which maintaines Union, and thereby communion with God. She is as the Lord privie Seale, thorow whose hands all grants passe and take effect: no one promise can be Yea and Amen, without her. Shee receives from God a right to all mercies, ordinances, and priviledges: concurres with God in this great work of imputing Christs righteousnesse, yea, and the Lord dares trust her with her prerogative. Its said, Salomon set his mother Bathsheba by him sitting on his Throne; for she was safe, and would not pull away, but ascribe glory to him, and compt hers to rest in his. So is faith admitted in a sort to doe all under God, to justifie, to impute, to reconcile, and the rest: because shee is made for the nonce, shee is loyall, and made for the honour of God all that can be (thinking her selfe safe when she can set the Crowne upon his head:) but abhorring all treachery, shee is a grace that excels all which Adam ever had: because she hides all her life, hopes, and welfare with Christ in God: he that steales away her treasure, must rob the Lord first, who keepes it. Whereas, Adam in the midst of all his perfection, yet could keepe no one parcell of it, but lost all at once; shee can both apply the promise offered in Christ, and the imputation of righteousnesse from God the Father, both at once. and hath (in a sort) a kinde of omnipotence with God, and so also, makes that which comes from her, (as prayer, hearing, Sacraments, and the like) of the same, precious, effectuall nature with her selfe.

Fourthly, let it provoke all that partake this imputation, to bee thankfull to God for his most wise and gracious providence, that hath cast their portion so in this life, that if there be any defect, it should bee in things of lesse necessity: but for those that are most essentiall, hee is most large and full in his provision for them. I may say, the Lord deales for the soules of his people, as for their mindes: hee hath so written the Scriptures, that if any obscurities remaine, they are about things of circumstance, which are not so absolutely needfull to bee knowne: but if they bee of weight and essence, they are left plaine and evident. So here, if he faile us in any grace, it is in some fruits of faith, as the grace of thankfulnesse, love, and joy, which are to be imperfect in this life, and so in knowledge of particular cases, or the like, (none of which, though we had them, could justifie us:) but as for the grace of reconciliation, and imputation of perfect righteousnesse, which only can accept us, and pardon us, and cover all our wants, this hee Use 4.

hath provided to the full for us, even in this life to enjoy. I ſay, in the midſt of all imperfection, yet the perfection of that which cannot be wanted, he hath given us. Yea, and this he will have his people to know, although it is the bane of hypocrites; Yet it is the cordiall of each poore believer; Dogs only will ſnap at it, to maintaine themſelves in a licentious courſe, but the believer will bleſſe God for it, and be ſo farre from laying it in his own way, as a block of preſumption, that rather he will ſay, if the Lord hath ſo regarded me, as to accompt me his perfect righteouſnes, in the midſt of my unavoydable corruptions of Nature and life; ſhall I turne his grace into wantonneſſe? or ſhal not I keepe all wilfull wickedneſſe from his eyes, who hath turned his eye from all my tranſgreſſions?

Uſe 5. Eifthly, let it be a ground of Selfedeniall to us. As we would obtaine this righteouſnes of another, ſo let us be naked of our ſelves. I remember what is written of that worthy, learned and holy Scot, Maſter Rollock, in his life: That being on his deathbed, and much encouraged by them that viſited him, by his worthy labours, I abhorre (ſaith he) my rectorſhip of Univerſity, readerſhip of Divinity, and paſtorſhip of Edenburgh (all which with great profit to all, he underwent) that I may be found in Chriſt, cloathed with his righteouſneſſe: all mine own is dung in compariſon of this.

If we be juſt, by imputing of the righteouſnes of other, what ſhal become of our own? As once a Philoſopher handled a Gallant that boaſted of his great Lands in Athens, he ſhewed him a Map and asked him where they lay? ſo in this Map of Gods juſtification, all our abilities muſt vaniſh: we know, a full ſum of debt payed, needs no imputation, it may plead acquittance. Come to the Lord for his royall worke, his Fiat, without any thing, empty and baſe, that thou maiſt concurre with him in that he ſeeketh; the Glory of his grace in his Sonne. Come as Mephiboſheth, a limping
2 Sam. 19. cripple to David, When I was a dead dog, my Lord accepted me. As poore Abigail ſent for to be a Queene, ſaid, Let me be an
1 Sam. 25. handmaid, to waſh the feete of thy ſervants. Shee knew, meere marriage to a King would make a Queene, without bringing any thing. And thus doing, thy unworthines ſhall not hurt thee, but helpe on this robe upon thy bare ſhoulders. Come thus to the Lord and ſay, Heere, Lord, is a naked wretch; put on the Lord Jeſus upon me. I have no clothing to hinder thee; thou bidſt me put him on; Rom. 13. ult. but Lord, doe thou fit him for me in par-particular, for my ſoule, for my ſinne, againſt my curſe; and then take him, Lord, put him on me alſo, reckon him to me, accompt with mee in him, and make mee his righteouſneſſe, as thou madeſt him my ſinne, and I ſhall accompt it as reall, as if I had it of my owne.

Sixthly, let it ſtabliſh and comfort every beleever againſt all his feares. Oh! it cannot ſinke into a poore ſoule privie to all her defilements, that the Lord ſhould ever pardon or accept her. The daily and hourely objects of her ſinnes are before her. But remember, imputation is not a taking of all ſin out of thee at once (that muſt abaſe the heart, as it abaſed thy ſurety) but a not imputing it unto thee. Latimer preaching to King Edward, told him that once a King of England had a Cup-bearer, who bringing him a Cup of wine, by errour let it fall at his foot. The King offended with his raſhneſſe, asked him if that were not ill done? He ſuddenly anſwered, No, if it pleaſe your Grace, if you thinke ſo. Even ſo in this, our bleſſedneſſe ſtands not in our want of ſinne, but in the Lords not imputing it. The Buſh burnt, but the wonder was, that it was not conſumed. The Lord imputes not thy ſinne, covers it, takes away the condemning power, imputes not the actuall offences thereof to thee. Hee lookes at his owne Image in thee; in all thy duties, prayers, there is thy Dunghill, and his Pearle, hee beholds that which is his, covers that which is thine (not to make thee bold, but thankfull and humble.) If thou have a cup of precious wine, thou ſayeſt not to thy friend, Pledge mee in water, though thou have put more water then there is wine into it. Thou eſteemeſt it by the better part. Hold this, and thou mayſt ſay with Paul, Rom. 7. I my ſelfe delight in the Law of God: and not I, but ſinne in me: though elſe he ſaid, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me? Thus much of this fifth branch or ſpring of ſalvation: drink of this Brook, and thou ſhalt indeed, Eſay 12. 3. draw water out of the wels of ſalvation. I have beene larger here, becauſe it is the chiefe of the ſeven, more briefe of the reſt.

Laſtly, let this excellency of faith, as it is comfortable in one reſpect, ſo it may yet humble us in another. For imputation is only for this life, and argueth a defect of that which ſhall be in another. The thing imputed is perfect: but the perſon to whom, is corrupt: and faith her ſelfe ſhall ceaſe and bee aboliſht. Wee will perhaps confeſſe that wee ſhould blank for our corruptions Uſe 7.

of pride and covetousnesse: but the truth is, our grace, and vertues should humble us: yea, faith it selfe, because still our life of inherence and perfect holinesse is wanting. And so much for this third Article.

Article IV.

Question.

Proceed to the fourth Article, shew what it is, and the Coherence thereof with the former.

The Gospell and the offer of grace in it, is the reveiler of this deliverance.

A. It layes forth the meane or why, by which (ordinarily) the Lord exhibits unto and settles upon the poore sinner this deliverance. As touching the coherence, as in the three former Articles the fountaine in God, and the foundation of it in Christ is described: so in this fourth is shewed, how the soule may know them both to be hers: Its said, Heb. 4. 13. That God with whom we have to do, is a Searcher, &c. Note it. The soule in her distresse hath to doe with God, to his Tribunall thee stands as her Judge.

Heb. 4. 13.

Now, it is not the hearing of his giving of Christ, nor of a satisfaction, which can quiet her: but this, that shee may know its given and performed for her. Here therefore in this fourth Article, I say, the offended Father hath accepted this satisfaction, is well pleased with it, his heart is made placable by it, and now his heart is opened, and his bosome of love bared towards a poore wretch: and this hee utters by a proclamation, and by an offer of grace to them, if they will beleeve him to meane as he speakes. See 2 Cor. 5. 20, 21. Him that knew no sinne, hee made sinne, &c. And what of this? Therefore he saith, Be reconciled to God. Now when the soule heares of this ground and building, shee feeles her selfe to have somewhat to say for her selfe in this her dealing with God: I thanke thee, O Lord, for granting it, and for the price paid: but now, seeing thou hast done it, that in thy being satisfied, I might have my part in it, as offered and pind to my sleeve, when I see a thing more precious than the world, layd in my lap by thy hand, I tremble to think I should refuse my own salvation.

2 Cor. 5. 20, 21

Q. Because this point is large, therefore lay downe some particulars lars to unfold it. And first, what is this meane by which God reveales this deliverance?

A. The Gospell in the Ministery of reconciliation, is the instrument of this Revelation, and that both fully and only. The point is plaine, all the World witnesseth it. Paul tells us, that when the love of God appeared, then he saved us: This appearance is the light of the Gospell, and the arising of the day Starre thereby in the heart. Reade by name, 2 Cor. 4. 6. God that commanded light to shine out of darkenesse, hath shined into our hearts. See the place. Briefely, hence it is, that its called the Power of God to Salvation, Rom. 1. verse 16. See Matthew 13. 44. 2 Cor. 3. ult. The Field in which this Pearle is hidden, the Mirror in which we behold the Lord with open face, the Net inclosing the Fishes, the Light, the Leaven, &c. Now yet this Gospell is not the meane, in respect of the bare letters and syllables of it, but in the Ministery of Reconciliation. See 2 Cor. 3. 8. 9. where Paul calls it the Ministration of Righteousnesse, and adornes it with termes of honour above the Lawes Ministery. Especially, see that 2 Cor. 5. 17. 18. Where Paul speaking of this great gift of Christ, twise joynes this with it, And hee hath made us Ministers of reconciliation; as if this were a materiall point: We the Ministers of God, beseech you, be reconciled: receive not the grace of God in vaine.

Proofes of it. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Rom. 1. 16. Mat. 13. 44. 2 Cor. 3. ult. 2 Cor. 3. 8 9. 2 Cor. 5. 17.

As who say, It were a great helpe to our Faith to consider, God hath sealed Ministers to engage their truth for God, that if God doe not meane as he speakes, they are lyers. And lastly, this is the only ordinary way of revealing: (ordinary I say, because what God can doe we spedke not) and no other. So that if God revealed not himselfe thus to his Church, we should remaine as blinde as Moles in the Earth. As wee had never knowne sinne, but by the Law: so neither Grace, but by the Gospell. See John 1. 17. Nay, much more. For although both stand in relation, yet there is more of the Law left in our ruinous nature than of the Gospell: no one sparkle of the latter is in us by nature, it stands merely in Revealing. Hence Paul so oft presseth it as a Mystery hidden from the Foundations of the World, till now the Gospell unveyled the Curtaine. And although the Lord revealed this in a darke sort and within narrow bounds, and in sundry sorts in times past, according to their capacity, yet now, onely by this meane of his Sonne in the Gospell, Heb. 1. 1.

John 1. 17. 2 Tim. 1. 9. 10. Heb. 1. 1.

Q. But

Q. But is there not some peculiar thing in the Gospell, by which he reveales it?

A. Yes and that is his gracious offer, made to the soule therein: which is nothing else, but the expression of the covenant of Grace, that he is willing a poore soule may come to him without doubting and feare, because he holds out the Golden Scepter unto it, and bids it, Bee reconciled. Hither referre all those texts wherein this offer is made, both in the covenant and in the seale of Baptisme, Esay 55. 1. Ho, every one that thirsteth come. And, Let him that thirsteth, drinke freely, Rev. 22. 17. and Iohn 7. 37. In the great day of the feast, Iesus cryed, If any man thirst, let him come. So that as a Prince, having set up his Proclamation in all places, intimates his mind: so the Lord by this Tender of Christ, is acquitted from all aspersion of unbeteamingnesse.

Esay 55. 2. Rev. 22. 27. Iohn 7. 37.

The opening of the point.

And surely who so will profit by this Article, must get this lesson by heart: That the Lord who freely purposed, and faithfully sent his Sonne into the world, still continues his freedome, and doth offer the Lord Jesus with his excellency most freely. A bottome of most unspeakable comfort to all poore, bruised reeds and broken soules. For if he be freely offred, what poore soule should doubt to accept him? What is freer than gift? He that gave him freely, can not withdraw him againe, nor keepe back his satisfaction from a needing soule, as if he repented. And having given him once, hee cannot recall him, for why then gave hee him? And if he be wholly given, even with all his excellency, what particular thing can be denyed with him? It behooves us then much to understand the truth of this freedome: which in a few particulars I will name.

And that in sundry particulars.

1. First, God offers Christ of his owne accord, therefore freely. It never came into the heart of Angell or man to dreame of it, or desire it. Romans 5. When we were yet enemies. The Sunne doth not arise more freely over the head of a Drunkard snorting in his bed, or wallowing in his vomit, than the Lord Jesus came and is offered to a sinner in his blood and woefull misery. Preventing kindnesse is free, ere we desired it. See Esay 65. 1.

2. Secondly, he offers us better than Adam lost: The burning downe of our house was the occasion of our greater repairing. As he sayd, I had perished if I had not beene taken prisoner.

3. Thirdly, he offers to the undeserving. We were then weake, Rom. 5. 3. Some

5.3. Some heathen friends are famous in story for putting themselves forth for their friends: As those two, Nisus and Eurialus, and Pylades and Orestes, &c. But we were Theeves, Traytors and enemies. When we did all we could to pull him out of his throne, yea slew the Lord of life, then dyed he for us. Act. 2. Nay, he plants this offer upon our sleeve, when we minded it not, putt it off, and slighted it. If Moses had had all possible welcome, yet he had been a free Saviour: so Christ: But as their, so our anguish of bondage caused us not to regard him: Who would not have beene dismayed heereby?

Fourthly, he offereth freely who offers instantly upon our neede. No sooner did Adam fall, but the offer followed, The seed of the Woman, &c. No sooner doth a poore wretch need mercy, but it prevents him. Ho, every one, come, &c. He that offers leasurely, is but a cold giver: But speedy offering, is double grace. 4.

Fifthly, when hee hath offered and given, he repents not. Of all workes of which God is sayd to repent him, it is never sayd, he repented to offer mercy. Nay, he is so farre from it, that he hath sworne and will not repent. What is more usuall with unbeteaming men, than to wish their money in their purse againe? God never repents of mercy, that we might repent us of our unthankefulnesse, and unbeliefe. Sixthly, the Lord is exceeding glad when his offer is taken, and no way so displeased, as when its in vaine. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 2, 3, 4. No disobedience is so odious to him as unbeliefe. John 3. 19. Nor for which he will so severely punish. 2 Cor. 4. 4. He is master of his richest gift: counts it his honour to give the best most freely, John 6. 27. He hath a royall heart, and can beteame to the basest Worme the priviledge of Pardon. Adoption and glory: and he gives an heart capable of his offer, also: Else how could an Oyster-shell containe this Fountaine? All to teach the soule to recover it selfe out of her cursed distrust, and measuring the Lord and his gift, by her selfe and her capablenesse. Whereas all his are enlarged by him, with his offer, to be comprehensive of it: The Lord making a poore shallow heart meet to receive his fulnesse. Eph. 3. 17. 5. 6.

Seventhly, he offers without expecting againe: as we say he lends freely, who respects no requitall; the Lord indeed lookes for honour at the hands of his Servants: but first he gives the gift: 7. Rom. 11. 35.

gift: and secondly the heart; and thirdly accepts it as honour, being no addition to perfection. The Lord offers grace to none, whom rather he might not be ashamed to owne. Such is mans basenesse, that even in his greatest freedome, hee seekes himselfe. A Father will give his child his land; but when? after death when it cannot pleasure him, Till then he will have rent. And we have a secret ayme in our gifts, I give, that he may requite. A patrone adopts a some; A Prince marries a poore Orphan; yet some such as is delectable, and pleasing; but the Lord offers to such as can no way content him, or be pleasing: He gives first to make them so, but findes them odious, that he may shew what he can finde in his heart to doe, and make all men astonisht at his meere gracious grace, and to boast of the Lord.

Do ut des.

8. Eightly, he requires nothing in us toward the accepting his offer. All our own makes our accepting frustrate. Come, Revel. 22. and drinke freely of the waters, Iohn 7. If any man thirst, let him drinke freely. God gives, and upbraydes not our nothing. Nay our emptinesse is our best plea; Esay 55.1. Come and buy for nothing; selfedeniall is our best price; and hee that comes and offers to God any thing, and brings cost to God, looses his gift. Thus much for the opening of the Freedome.

To this, may secondly be added the meditation of his attribute of gratiousnesse: so oft spoken of, as in Exod. 32. Ioel 2. Esay 55. which imports not only his free giving and accepting of the Lord Jesus, but especially his offring him freely and fully to us in the Gospell. This gratiousnesse in God, respects 2 things, First fulnes of grace: as a Princes grace, is not as a subjects, but fulnes of bounty: Princes disdaine to give other gifts then their persons admit, that is bountifull ones. Secondly, Freedome of grace. And these two may appeare in these particulars. First, In that God can bestow whatsoever he hath a will to bestow: we (poore dry pitts) are limited by our poverty from doing what we would: See 2. Kings 6. 21. As men are rich in gold, &c. So Gods grace is rich grace. Ephes. 2.4. Secondly, no man can compell him to be thus gratious: he is so out of his owne meer freedome. We do good against our wils, as Haman honored Mordecai. Thirdly, he doth good by no absolute necessity of nature, but by a voluntary principle. God could do otherwise then communicate his his full bounty, if he would: but he chuseth it, mercy pleaseth him. Fourthly, God is gracious, because all need him, but he needs none. Psal. 16. 2. Fifthly, the Lord is gracious, because he is bound by no Law to it: we are bound to God and man, to the uttermost good doing: But God is bound to none, he is upon his own bottome. Sixtly, he is exempt from all tyes and relations: We stand tyed by these: but not he. Rom. 9. 15. Seventhly all Creatures are meerely beholding to him. He may doe with his own as he please. If he shewed no mercy, who can claime it? If he do, its of his own. 2 Chron. 29. 15 Eightly, there is no congruity in the World in us either before, or after grace to deserve any thing. Men may shew kindnes to one more then others by some respect. But not so the Lord: The better some may seeme, the further they are off from God, without grace. Ninthly, he is gracious in respect of the estate in which he finds man, when he shewes him mercy: to wit, deserving hell infinitely, and never able to satisfie justice by all which he can suffer. Thus much to open that Attribute, which is the Fountaine of this offer of grace and salvation.

Yet this I adde, That this offer will appeare so much the freer, if also we marke the circumstances in the which the Scripture expresseth the offer, called the cords of love by Hosea: by which he drawes the soule to see his meaning, sometimes by his long patience and wayting upon her, notwithstanding all her deafenesse of eare, and deadnesse of heart, and dallying with his offer. Oh! his lockes are bedewed with the drops of the night! His long suffering and patience is a bottomlesse depth beyond all the expectation of man! It is long ere thy unbeliefe could weary him; he hath lengthned out the season of grace, according to the length of grace it selfe; forebome thee long, kept off judgement a long while, which might have swept thee away from hope many yeares since. He hath recovered the lives of many of us, twice or thrise, that we might renue our covenants and keep them. And he hath spared us when we have broake them, pressing in upon us with renuing of good motions and affections which we had quenched, as being loth to loose us, giving us helpes and meanes even out of season, after long contempt, professing himself to meane as he speakes; Why lay you out your money, and not for bread, and your silver for that which profits not? Hearken unto me! eate good things! By expression.

So

2. So sometimes by his protestations of his lothnesse that any poore soule should perish! Why will yee dye, Oh yee house of Israel! Anger is not in me, why should I not consume the stubble! What should I doe to my Vine which I have not done? Sometimes his passions and Lamentation, Luke 19.42. Oh! That thou hadst seene, even in that day! the things that concerne thy peace; but now they are hidden! Those teares and mournings over Jerusalem for her hard heart and contempt, have bin and are still over thee! If there be any dampings and affrightenings of spirit, thou hast caused them by thy dalliance and heart that would not repent. But the Lord for his part still cryes, how oft would I have gathered thee as the Hen doth her Chickens? Sometimes by his invitings to this feast of his Sonne, sometimes by his Esay 55.2. Gen.9.26. protestations, as Esay. 55.2. Sometimes by his entreaties and earnest exhorting, sometimes by his allurements, Hos. 2.14. to perswade and toll on the heart that hangs off, by the promises Mat.13.ult. Iohn.3.19. Mar.16.16. of all the good things which he offereth. Sometimes by his severe threats to all that refuse his offers: all these shew how willing and cordiall he is to part with his grace; and lastly, sometimes by the universality of it, that he dispenseth it without all respect of persons, age, sexes, states and conditions, who exempt not themselves. But the especiall properties of the offer to be noted for our purpose are three, first liberty, secondly, simplicity, and thirdly, fidelity; not to speake of his Ability to make good his promise.

The properties of the offer. First, that he offers it to whom he pleaseth, passing by millions of people in the World, and offering it to such and such nations, as he did of old to Israel, neglecting the World; so that it is meerely unconditionall and free, as when Paul came to Athens or Ephesus, who had never heard of Gospell before.
1. 2. Secondly, simplicity, that the Lord being truely pacified in Christ, offers the fruit thereof without grudging, falsehood or equivocation, with an open heart, meaning as he speakes. Understand me of the Simplicity of his Dispensation, whereby he declares what his will is that we should doe: not of secrecy, whereby he decrees what he will doe with his Creature: of
3. which in Article first. Thirdly, Fidelity, whereby he doth most readily and fully performe whatsoever he offers to all who put him to the triall, and accept it. But of this more in the last Article.

Q. Why

Q. What doe you so large in opening of this?

A. Because its the maine hinge whereupon the doore of hope and Faith turneth: the offer of God satisfied, being the immediate object to which the soule is to resolve and empty it selfe. The offer I say assured with a promise. For an offer is no otherwise differing from a promise, than as a generall out of which a particular issueth: the promise is included in an offer, but yet in speciall expressing the Covenant of God to all that receive the offer, that he will receive them, be their God, both in pardon and in all sufficiency. Into these the soule doth wholly powre forth her selfe: which that we may understand, consider this, that we have to doe with the Father immediatly, but with our Lord Jesus onely mediately, as a meane to leade us with confidence unto him. The Father properly lookes at the Sonne as our surety, and us, for his sake: but we looke at him directly, and to our Lord Jesus, as our Mediator. So that looke what we can shew for our Reconciliation, must come from the Father, and that is his offer and promise, Oath and Covenant of mercy. Into that therefore the poore soule is to resolve it selfe, all her doubts, feares, temptations and distempers whatsoever, and so to remaine settled. So that it mainely concernes the soule to understand the nature, ground, and properties of the offer and promise.

Difference of an offer from a promise.

Heb. 4, 13.

Q. Well, I partly conceive you: What use is there of this?

A. Very manifold and weighty.

And first, that we adore that depth of Gods Justice against sinne, that hath still left so many Nations under water of meere Paganisme, without the least sparke of this light, still in their utter darkenesse and brutish ignorance of the Gospell. Oh how should we mourne with good Judas and say, Why hast thou revealed thy selfe unto us, and not unto the World? How should this woefull desertion provoke us to prize the Revelation of this Mystery to us? As for them, how should we pitty them? If Paul wept for enemies, how should wee for Infidels? If wee saw one drunke and merry going to execution how would wee bewayle his desperatnesse? Its reported of two great Captaines Xerxes and Cæsar, that beholding two huge Armies: they mourned to thinke how few of them should shortly be alive. These goe to Hell laughing, and shall we not mourne, (though we live not by them, as yet some of us doe) yet behold them in their deformed, savage nakednesse; beseeching the Lord to shine upon them with this light and offer of the Gospell? Yes verily.

Use 2. And secondly, this is terror to all Papists that maliciously Branch 1. hide and darken this precious offer of GOD in the Gospell, from the eyes of the blind people, abhorring that this Pearle should be seene, and this boxe of spicknard broken, that the whole house might be perfumed: yea by their Inquisition and censures cruelly quashing the least dime or whisper of this glad tydings, lest their Kingdome be trodde down, and their blind devotions discovered: nothing so cuts them to the heart, as that it
2 Thes. 3, 2. should have the least free passage or be glorified, but their own Idols and Masse and Trash set up to demolish it. Oh unreasonable ones! Oh enemies to the Crosse of Christ! Whose God is their belly, whose glory is their shame, who minde earthly things! But let them
Phil. 3, 18. know, that they shall not long continue, the day is at hand wherein both that man of sinne and all his adherents shall perish with the breath of the Lords Mouth, when his Gospell shall break out.

Branch 2. Secondly, terror to all profane scorners, Neuters, Atheists, Adiaphorists and Epicures, who reject the Gospell, and prize their Swine, their pottage, their pleasures, ease and pompe, more than the Gospell, and are not only ashamed of it, but contemne it as standing in the light of their lusts. Beware, for ye proclame, that Christ and reconciliation are none of yours, seeing these meanes of revealing it are so odious unto you, and those that dispense it.
Esay 63, 3. Swine trample upon Pearles, and you tread the Gospell and the Ministers of it under feete: how shall God trample upon you, and tread you in the wine-presse of wrath?

Branch 3. Thirdly, reproofe of all Non-discerners of this Grace of the Gospell, such as put no difference betweene one doctrine and another, see not this mercy, reconciliation and life offered in the same: had as lieve reade a booke in the chimney corner, heare of any morall discourse, as the offer of Grace and Pardon in the Gospell. Oh, the feete of a Minister should be beautifull in this maine respect, (though others also) because he brings glad tidings of peace! Without this, what is the tickling of the eare with other sounds? Learne to know what the pearle is that lyes hid in this Field, and to discerne what Jewell is the most precious in this Cabinet, and set thy mark upon it.

Thirdly, its reproofe to all, that slight the Gospell in the offer thereof, preferre their Oxen and Farmes, their selfe-love, ends and liberties before it: and although they dare not bee openly profane, yet suffer not themselves to be convinced of this excellency which the Gospell offers them, remaine still in their civility, their hypocrisie, their desires, and performances, duties, and good affections: but alas! The offer of grace and reconciliation in the Gospell is nothing with them. If all be true which I have said of this offer, and the properties of it, what shall become of them that for drosse reject it, and rest in somewhat under the grace of the Gospell? If the Mole in the Earth had reason, she would chuse rather to live in the Ayre: if the Tree had reason, it would chuse a nobler life of sense: if a Beast had wisdome, it would covet the reasonabler nature of a man: but the Lord offering no lesse to a forlorne lost sinner than the grace of the Gospell, the life of God and immortality, how few desire it! But rest in the base estate of temporizing hypocrites, of carnall professors, to heare, receive, pray, repeate Sermons, and get some few good desires: but as for that which no hypocrite, or unsound professor can attaine to, a broken, hungry, selfedenied heart, that Christ and his grace might enter and dwell there, oh, how harsh is it? Therefore, remember that in Heb. 2. 2, 3, 4. If those that transgressed Moses Law, and being convinced thereby, yet said within themselves, I shall have peace, and so walked stubbornly, adding drunkennesse to thirst: Nay, if they that sinned only in a ceremony, yet by two or three witnesses, were condemned: what shall they looke for that despise the grace of the Gospell, and that offer which God hath honoured by so many miracles, and such abundance of Sermons, and the powerfull ministery of so many Preachers? Beware of refusing such salvation, as being a more spirituall wickednesse, than any morall offence.

Use 3. Branch 1. Luke 14.

Heb. 2. 2. Deut. 29. 19.

The Apostle, Heb. 12. warneth them, that none faile of the grace of God. Most professors doe as a Traveller, that comes short of his journey, and never attaines the end of it. And therefore, they still lye under the covenant of workes, and although they talk much of grace, and whine for lack of it, yet still through a mysterie of selfe-deceiving, they come short of grace. They come to the threshold of grace, but enter not into it, into the palace of it: Gods grace passeth before them, and they see that it is every way gracious, or else no way: yet they cannot be gotten out of their own bottome of works, or of selfe-concurrence. They know not, they embrace not the grace of God in truth, Col. 1.6. As the truth is in Jesus, Ephes. 4.23. As that Prince who came to see the plenty, 2 Kings 7. but not to eat of it. So, these come faitely unto grace, but not into it. And so, they fall off from grace, as those Galathians did, Gal. 5.4. Its not enough to see our selves lost, and to bee convinced of our rottennesse, and that wee are in the estate of bitternesse: for such an one may seeme to bee weary of his load, and fall to the contrary good duties; but alas! still the free grace of God is wanting, and the soule lyes as a branch halfe pull'd off from her old stock, and yet not taken in, and ingraffed into a new. This is receiving of the grace of God in vaine, 2 Cor. 6.1. and Iude 14. Many a man doth mentally apply grace, but not cordially and effectually to his own soule. They come short of it, Heb. 4. 2. If any shall say, What should we do more, then we doe? I answer. They should renounce the authority of all works, and come under the banner of grace: so that worke may bee no worke with them, but grace may bee all grace. The soule must leave and forsake all the selfe-reliſh of her working, all her duties, devotions, and doings, must bee as nothing to her: Grace is as the Law of Mort-maine, cutting off all the hands that work, in point of grace. True it is, grace having taken possession once of the soule, sets it a work so fruitfully, as if there were no beleeving: but when grace first ceazes upon the soule, it so takes off selfe, as if there were no working in the world: A soule under grace is dead to working; it ceases to be: work is no work. A man that heares an holy man pray, or preach, or vilifie himselfe, as Paula in Hieromes Epistles, as Bradford, &c. would think them odious persons. But indeed they doe so, because work is no work with them. All vanisheth in this Map of grace. Secondly, all truly under grace, confesse, that its well, if ever they have it, though after never such attendance, paines, and diligence, for why? its free. Thirdly, such a soule thinkes it selfe with that Publican, unworthy to breathe, to live, to eat one crumbe, much more to be saved. As Iacob, Gen. 32.8. Fourthly, it cannot wholly give God over, in the deepest shakings, quakings, doubts, feares; the seed still liveth, Ionah 2.8. Lam. 3. Still the Needles point will go to the North-pole. It cannot give over, its still pull'd up, as the woman of Canaan.

Secondly,

Secondly, its reproofe to all cavillers that descant upon this free, plaine, and simple-hearted offer of God. Being urged to receive it, they answer, so they would if they knew themselves elected. But (say they) we are afraid God meanes it us not. If we be chosen, we are sure to be called to beleeve it: if not, none of their Preachers can give it us. It must be God (say they) and not man that must work our hearts and draw us. But, oh vaine jangler, tell mee, hath not God revealed his will in his offer? Doest thou know his secrets? Is not his offer ingenuous? Say not in thine heart, Who shall go up to Heaven, or descend, &c? Lo, the Word is in thy mouth, it is neere thee. If Jeremy in the dungeon had told Ebedmelec, he knew not whether he meant to helpe him out or no, and so have refused to come out, had he not justly been left there still? So when the Lord lets downe the ladder of his offer, into the dungeon, casts thee his cords and rags to put under thy armeholes, that he may draw thee out, doest thou cavill and say, Lord, I know not whether thou meanest me well or no, perhaps I am not elected! Is not this a wofull dishonour to the simplicity of the offer? Was he ever tyed at all to offer it? and doest thou distrust his ingenuous meaning in it? Thy blood be upon thy owne head, in that thou chusest rather to smite the Lord to thy owne destruction, than to set thy foot in his ladder, and put on his cords, that thou mightest come out! The way for thee is first to step upward that thou maist come to the top, than to leape to the top at first, to break thy neck backward. Branch 2. Rom. 10. 8.

The fourth use is, advertisement to Gods Ministers, to magnifie their Ministery in deed and practice, by beseeching the people to be reconciled to God. Conceale no part of this truth of God: but above all ply thy Ministery of reconciliation. This will sweeten, and familiarize all other doctrine: the first Part of the Catechisme about sinne will leade the way, and the third about godly life, will follow this second Part of Reconciliation. Its the office God hath put upon thee, O Archippus, fulfill it. Woe be to thee who maist preach, and canst, and doest not. Or doest, and yet doest not this. Thou art one of Wisdomes handmaids, one of the Kings servants, sent out to bring in guests to this feast of his Sonne: learne thy errand well, mistake it not, get it by heart, let not the fault of rejecting this call, be laid upon thee, and thou hast saved thy owne soule. Paul was so acquainted with this work, that he saith, It was committed unto him: Nay, Use 4. Col. 3. end. 1 Tim. 1.

1 Tim. 1. he addeth, It was (his) Gospell. As Maids use to say, I must go dresse up my Chambers and make my beds, (not because theirs, but because it is their office) so Paul cals the Gospell his and ours, 2 Cor. 4. 4. [If our Gospell be hid:] because it was his office. Let us then all joyne in preaching it, and offering it, not with a veile upon our face, as Moses, but 2 Cor. 3. 13. 16. with open face shew the people this Mirror, that they may be transformed by it from glory to glory.

2 Cor. 3. 16.

Use 5. Branch 1. Fifthly, this should scare all from infidelity and contempt of Gods offer: Oh! Its free and from meere good will, the Lord is tyed to none; He hath rejected Millions of Jewes and Turkes and baptized ones, and chosen to offer grace to thee. And, shall the contempt of the free offer of that which thousands would have beene glad of (upon the price of going from sea to sea for it) bee pardonable? Doe but consider what woefull punishment will lye upon thee, who refuseſt such an offer laid in thy lappe, when as many poore soules would rejoyce if the spending of dayes and nights might procure them a tender and beleeving heart to receive it; and yet complaine, that they cannot come by it. Oh, tremble at the freedome of this offer! Bee humble and base in thy selfe to consider but this; I am a poore wretch, standing to the mercy of a free God, who hath it to give where he will, and to deny it at his pleasure. If he give it to a Prodigall sonne, and deny it to a morall Civilian: if hee give it to one that came into the Vineyard at the eleventh houre, and deny it to him that came in at the seventh: if hee deny it to the willer and runner, (and bee found of such as sought him not, who shall alledge against freedome? May hee not doe with his owne as him pleases? Oh, despise none! Left the Lord make the despisers seeke to the despised (as the Gileadites sought to Jeptha) and be glad of their portion. Oh! Turne all emulation and scorne into humility; and deepe adoring of this freedome.

Acts 13. 42. Heb. 2. 1, 2, 3. Heb. 4. 1.

Branch 2. Secondly, as this freedome should teach thee wefulneſse, so it should teach thee to become a Begger and base, a Lazer, an Orphan, a Creeple, that freedome may finde thee a meet object for her gift. Givers are honoured by beggars: and that is seene on many, who being whole will wound themselves, and counterfet poverty and nakednesse to provoke pitey. Wee would count him mad, who going to begge, should borrow good good clothes to make himselfe better than hee is. We are such: so farre from seeming what wee are, that wee crosse our owne ends, and carry a deniall about us, by our bravery, and wealth. Proud beggars, and able to worke and get their living, lose almes. But such as lye basely at the foot of mercy, as perishing else finde reliefe: Wee must still have our pride; and somewhat to crosse free gift.

Thirdly, let it teach us to wait. Impatient and hasty beggers are as unhappy as proud ones. Such as will fret they are not answered sooner, but are made to wait. Wee thinke they may well stay our leasure, who doe nothing else for their almes: and if they scorne to doe so, wee bid them bee gone, who sent for them? So doth the Lord to all impatient malecontents for Gods delay. What? have I not waited upon you longer? Hast not thou long sought dallying? Will not my gift requite thy tarryance? Branch 3.

Fourthly, let it teach thee to mend thy slow pace, and run, yea, flye to this offer and free gift. What crowding is there at Doles, and great Almes of Princes? If wares in a Market were given, who would not flock? How did those Israelites 2 Kings 8. for corne? But the Lord offers freely, and cannot sell. And why? Alas, the soule hath not onely lost the first gift of God, but hath lost also the sense of her losse. Still shee thinkes God beholding to her for comming to him: Still there is an heart within, contradicting this offer, loath to confesse her losse, and to stand to Gods curtesie. Let a Preacher presse never so much our owne beggery: yet there is a Preacher within that preaches another doctrine, although not with an audible voice. Just like the Mizer in the Poet: The Boyes scorne him for a base fellow: but he applaudes himselfe nevertheless, that he hath that in his Coffers, which makes him rich; even so wee, when Gods Ministers would begger us and strip us, answer, But yet hee shall never make mee worse than I am: my good meanings, prayers, and deeds, no man shall strippe me of. But Oh, poore soule! How then canst thou beleeve, and take this gift with a naked hand? Perhaps because thou canst not want God, thou art willing to gaine by him: But to have God thou art as unwilling upon his owne tearmes, and that hee may have the sole entire glory of saving thee. Onely selfe-deniall makes the royall heart of faith. Faith will not be well by stealth: Branch 4.

But as Joab would have David have the honour of Rabba, so Faith dares make no use of God, save, as (for his glory) God may make use of her.

Use 6. Branch 5. And the next branch is, Dally not with this offer of grace. There is a while of it, a season annexed to the offer. Reade 2 Cor. 6, 1, 2, 3. The same breath which urgeth to receive the grace of God, adds a charge. For he hath said, In an accepted time I have heard thee, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee. Oh, that in that thy day thou hadst seene! Now when is this day? Surely it is not the day of possible mercy, but of seasonable mercy: Then, when as, (besides health, meanes and the offer of grace) the Lord puts a speciall spirit into the Ministery of the Word, so that it pierces into the heart with perswasion: when the terrors of it are weighty and serious, the promise it is (as the early fruit of Summer) welcome and savory: when sinne is bitter to the Soule, and when it is yrkesome to it, to be out of Gods favour: when the heart breakes and mournes after God, and can spend nights after dayes in seeking and enquiry; it cannot be quiet, but is held on by peculiar tenderneſse to attend grace. Looke to your selves, you who have had this season of God upon your soule: ply it and dally not, weary not the Lord who still waites and askes, When shall it be? Put him not to a second season, least he stoppe up all seasons, and sweare, that season shall be no more. When thy gold is turned to brasse, thy tenderneſse into deadneſse, Gods patience, contestings, into bitter weepings Pray that thine head rather, and heart were Fountaines of teares to mourne for him whom thou hast pierced, than that the Lords Soule should mourne in secret for thy rebellion and destruction. When all beames shall be darkned, and all mercy and bowels of compassion dryed up, and thy heart hardned. Especially let such looke to this, as lye under the penalty of this sinne.

Alas! There will be a season of Gods wearineſse; and his spirit shall not also strive with man. He will have also a season of leaving thee to that contempt, which despised the counsell of God for thy salvation. Abhorring of light, preferring darkneſse, despising the Ministery and ordinances, revolting from those insinuations of grace which once seemed precious, I say these are spirituall wickednesses, and farre exceed morall evils. (Although it be just with God that when the Chimney hath hath long been foule, at length it be on fire; and that by degrees inward infidelity and trechery grow out to open contempt, pursuite and malice, yea adultery, riot, intemperancy and all profanesse.) The Lord hath his withdrawing time, and his forsaking time as well as his drawing neere. See *Hos.*4.17. and 5.6. The Lord shall laugh at the destruction of those that having been oft provoked to receive his offer, have refused: *Prov.*1. Provoked mercy turnes to fury; and the hottest place of hell is provided for unbelievers, and revolters. I deny not but the patience of God doth long endure the vessels prepared to destruction; and such despisers, may a while flourish and prosper: and the Lord chuseth rather strokes of inward vengeance, to smite the conscience, than outward crosses, oftentimes. But yet 2 *Cron.*36.16. when there is no remedy, his decree of destruction comes forth stronger than that of Medes and Persians) accursing them, 2 *Cor.*4.3. If that fig-tree which wanted figges out of the season of it, were accursed: much more those that are past their season. Ioh.3.19.

Q. What other uses are there hereof?

A. Especially this, that this Article be a sweet preparative unto us, to frame us to believe. Entertaine we not any base, cursed thoughts of God in the simplicity of his offer. Nourish all possible perswasion in the soule, of his unfeigned meaning toward thee in this kind: thou canst honour him no better, than to agree with him, in his meaning well to thee. There is no greater difficulty of Faith than this seed of bondage in us, to judge of God by our selves. We muse as we use. If we have an enemy, we cannot forget his wrongs, we meete him not without indignation: and therefore so we thinke of God also to us, and the rather, because he hath so much vantage over us. But, Oh, poore wretch! Is this the way to get out of his displeasure, to nourish jealousy against his love? Is it not rather oyle to the flame? Pull down thy traitours heart, hate not him whom thou hast hurt, put on an holy, and childlike opinion of him, who when he needed not, yet purposed, sent, received this satisfaction for thee, and therefore cannot lye in offering it to thee. Say thus, Lord, thy sweete offer, naked bosome, cords of love, Passions of sick love, sometime to allure, sometime to contest, command, urge, threaten, and beseech, turning thee into all formes of perswasion, to winne my soule; all these Use 5.

convince me of thy well meaning toward me. If my own enmity to my enemy, and the ſlander of Satan that thou enviest my good, doe aſſault me never ſo much, and my owne traiterous heart conſpire with them yet this thy gracious offer in thy Goſpell, ſhall beare down all. Reade Eſay 55.7. For my wayes are not as your wayes, nor my thoughts as your thoughts: but as farre above them, as Heaven above the earth. Adde this: All the underſtanding of man cannot comprehend the love of this offer, no more than the eye of a needle can the great Camell: and ſhall I goe about to leſſen it?

Eſay 55.7.

Surely, this ſhould be a great ſtay to my heart, that God hath offered me this grace; and as baſe as I am, what though it cannot enter into ſuch a narrow breſt as mine is, that he meanes as he ſpeakes: yet if it be the pleaſure of a great God to give it (as his offer imports) ſhall I looke at my vileneſſe, or at his greatneſſe, whom it were a diſhonour unto, to give meane things? Oh Lord, rather by this bounty open my narrow heart, and make it large. If the offer of a Miniſter of God be precious, who dares ſeale it upon earth to my poore ſoule; ſhall not the offer of God himſelfe, the ſtrength of Iſrael that cannot lye, much more ſway with me! Oh Lord, captivate all my hatred of ſpirit, and baſe trechery againſt thee! Its reported of a certaine Merchant of London (in the Story of England) that he made much of a poore Cobler that dwelt by him, a cankred Papiſt, and did as good as maintaine him; yet this Traytor went about to betray him to death: This Merchant having eſcaped his hands, yet out of his love uſed all meanes to be friends with him againe, and uſed him as before: all this would not doe, his heart was ſo villanous, he would ſhunne the way of him, and not looke at him. It fell ſo out at length, that he met him in ſuch a narrow lane, as he could not balke him; but muſt needs talke with him. The good Merchant takes him to him, and told him, he was glad he had met him, and hee wondred what he meant ſo to decline from him! What, ſaid he, doe you thinke me your enemy? If I were, could I not cruſh you with a word ſpeaking? Alas, I am not offended with you, for all your trechery, but forgive and forget it. The words of this man ſo pierced the Coblers heart, that it brake inſtantly, and he falling down upon his Knees, and with bitter teares confeſſed his villany, and repented of it, told him:

1 Sam. 15.16.

This

This love should for ever bind him unto him, and so he continued.

This base Papist, is the heart of every child of old Adam: this royall Merchant is the Lord: this narrow lane is the streight of conscience beset with sinne and curse: this kind behaviour is this offer of Grace: Let us not be worse to it than a cankred Papist: but breake our hearts, and melt into teares, and with Saul to David, say, Where shall a man finde such love, as to spare his enemy, when he had him in his hand, and to be content to cut off the lap of a Garment, when he might have cut my throate? Breake my heart in the bosome of this love. 1 Sam. 24. 19.

Q. Is there any more uses of it?

Ans. Yes, This may be one, to informe us of the height, depth, length and bredth of free grace, from the first steppe of our calling, to the last up-shot of glory. Surely if the offer be gracious, then whatsoever is conteind in the offer, is so also. Not only God is gratious in making that soule his, which was not, but his enemy: But also in susteyning that soule which is his, in the estate of grace and favor: yea, in the quickning up the habites of graces, that they may not lye dead, but have their operation: yea, that the soule may persever in that grace. As Austin sayth, Its grace which causeth the nilling will, to be willing, and the same grace which causeth it not to will in vaine: and grace also, which causeth it to persever in willing well. In the next Article I shall dwell upon the priviledges of a believer, all offred in Christ: heere I say, that all those good things are free gifts of grace. Election is of free grace, Rom. 11. 5. for what is that election, which wants choyce, and includes all sorts? Or, what saw God in thee before thou wert, which himselfe meant not to worke freely in thee? And why did he elect thee, and leave others in the very selfe same state which thou wert in save because he would? Use 7.

Secondly, the donation of Christ is free. Esay 9. 5. He doth not give Christ promiscuously to all, as a possible remedy, if they will apply it; but he gives him to his elect. Phil. 2. yee know the grace of our Lord Jesus, that he became poore, &c. He had power in his own hand, to lay down his life, no man could compell him. Luc. 12. 50.

Thirdly, vocation is free: Gal. 1. 15. others as wise, as soft and and tender hearted, as inclinable as thou, are left, thou art called freely. Publicans and Harlots are called, Pharisees and Lawyers left. Not because thou art a lesse sinner, but because grace abounded, where sinne had been great.

Fourthly, justification is of meere grace. Tit. 3. 7. Rom. 3. 24. God neither looks at workes going before, nor following after. Eph. 1, 7. Rom. 5. 6. God justifies the ungodly.

Fifthly, Sanctification is free. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Christ is made unto us of the Father, sanctification, &c. Exod. 31. 13. Power as well as guilt of sinne is freely taken away. All thy strength against thy lusts, all thy resolution of obeying, is from God. The will and deed is from him. Regeneration both of Faith to live unto God, and of the spirit to live in God, is free, as Iam. 1. 16. of his free will he begat us, and Joh. 1. 13. Although there be an inward Principle in us, yet God causeth it, Jer. 31. 31. We do all, but he causeth all. And in this sence we are sayd to purify our selves, 1 Joh. 3. 3. to finish our sanctification in the feare of God, and to cleanse our selves from all filthines of the flesh and spirit, 1 Cor. 7. 1.

Sixthly, all the graces of the spirit are free both for Kind, and Degree. As Faith, Acts 18. 27. when others only believe the story, thou believest the promise. Why? of free grace. So hope, 2 Thess. 2, 16. others have no hope in death, thou hast. Why? through meere grace. So love, to God, his Sabbathes, Ministers, ordinances, servants, wayes, 1 Tim. 1. 4. So, the profiting by the word, is grace, Acts 3. ult. So many as were ordained to life believed, Acts 14. So salvation it selfe, is of meere and free grace. Eph. 2. 8. Else the most holy man and woman, Zachary and Elizabeth, John Baptist, after all their obedience, might be cast off, as unprofitable servants. If it were possible for one to be as gratious as an Angel, yet without grace, freely covering, accepting, and stablishing, he might proove as Lucifer, and be damned, as he was. A naturall man may doe as many Acts of Religion as a believer, but the difference is, That the believer only lies upon grace. Even the manner of obeying, cheerfully, constantly, and entirely, is from the same grace, as the obedience it selfe. When we have both done and suffered to the uttermost, yet we must say, Enter not into judgment, O Lord! And Rom. 8. All our suffrings are not to be compared with that weight of glory: All was done in the efficiency of grace: and we are beholding holding to God, for our walking with him. The best graces, as they run through our pipes, are defiled. God supports thee in thy refuses and corruptions. If thou couldest challenge any thing duly, then should God be beholding to thee, and depend upon thy will, and freedome, not thou upon his. But, Iob 22. 3. Can a man be profitable to God? Iob 35. 7. Eternall life is the fruition of God himselfe: what proportion is there, between thy poore endeavor, and God himselfe, who is thy exceeding great reward? He that thinkes God lookes at his obedience, in crowning it, may in the sence of his guilt and rottennesse, go and devoure himselfe, by the verdict of his own conscience: so much for this. See 2 Cron. 15. 17.

Vse 8. Moreover, this freedome of Gods grace, ought to put some hope into the worst sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. of whom I am chiefe. Give not over. Fall upon the use of meanes: Thou knowest not Gods Secrets, he may freely, if he will, save thee, call thee, breake thy heart, as he hath done others. Ier. 2: Say not, I am past hope. Awake from thy security, thy contempt, infidelity, drunkennesse, if there be any heart to seeke God, the Lord may be found in season. If thy heart be not past melting, God is not past pardoning. Esay 57. 19. And, to conclude, let this freedome of affection in the Lord toward us, moove us to digest and beare such indignities and discouragements, affronts and injuries as we receive at the hands of men without a cause. Oh! if we thinke that we have deserved well at the hands of any, and they seeme to neglect us, or if we finde hard dealing at the hands of any whom we never provoked: how ready are we to fret and murmure? But (poore soule) cast all these upon the Lords score: perhaps thou hast wrong'd him thy selfe, and used him unkindly for his love: however, thou mayst haply fare the worse at mans hand, for the love thou beares to Christ: howbeit solace thy selfe with thine innocency, and remember, that Christ loved thee freely, and without cause, yea, when thou were his enemy. Set his free, undeserved love, against their free and unjust hatred. Christs enemies served him so; they hated him without cause, but the requitall that he made them, was to save 3000. of them at once. So, let free love from God teach thee to digest unkindnes, with the more patience. Compt no man thine enemy who is not Gods; and pray even for him, that he may fare no worse then thou hast done.

A. Touching

Vse 8. A. Touching the maine use of Faith, I shall leave it till the use of the whole part of the seventh Article. Yet this one more I adde, that we learne hence to understand the Covenant of God, and the promise of grace, as it is in it selfe, not a bare naked thing, but filled with all the Merit of an eternall Satisfier, and with all the strength, mercy, justice, and faithfulnesse of an unchangeable Promiser, even the Lord fully satisfied. And so conceiving it, beseech the Lord, so to write it in thy soule. Gods offer is founded upon Christ and the welpleasednesse of the Father by him. Why then, there is no more anger in his heart, Esay 27, 3. for if there were, what should dry stubble doe? But now, Lo, he is reconciled, he cannot be angry with a poore Creature. He hath taken order to satisfy justice by his Sonne: to the end that he might abolish the Proceeding of Justice, and cut off his own advantage and power to condemne. For a time hee was angey for the iniquity of thy sinne; but not for ever, least flesh should fayle before him. Oh! let us well observe this, That all in promise and an offer, is little enough to settle a poore soule against her feares. And this will cause us to be glad to cling to the word and say, if I perish I perish. And thus much be sayd of this fourth Article.

Esay 27. 3.

Article V.

Question.

What is the fifth Article?

The Lord offers Christ to the soule furnisht with all his benefits.

A. It is this: That the Lord offering Christ to the soule, doth not offer him nakedly and barely, but furnisht with all the benefits of his satisfaction. So that in this point, we are to consider what the parcels of these good things are, which the Lord reaches to his Church in the gift of his Sonne. If a Prince come under a subjects roofe, he comes not empty and bare, but with all his bounty, and leaves the markes of his presence behind him. So heere, the Father offering Christ, would not have us think him to be a dry and bare gift, but a rich Cabinet of all choyse Jewels of good things, that so we might be stored and enriched by by him. This is that which the Apostle in Ephes. 1,3. urgeth: Blessed be God, who hath blessed us with all blessings in Heavenly places. And Saint Peter, Epist. 2. Chap. 1, 3. His Heavenly power having supplyed us with all things, tending to life and godlinesse. Eph. 1. 3. 2 Pet. 1. 3.

Q. But yet say somewhat in particular about these, and first: Are all these benefits of one sort?

A. No. For though all are the water that floweth from this wel-spring, yet for order sake, we shall doe well to helpe our conceit thereof with a distinction to avoyd confusion. Some of these Benefits of Christ are concurrent with our first ingrafting with him, and accompany our first conversion: and these I call benefits concerning a believer, in respect of that condition and estate of grace wherein he is called, and in which he is settled. And these concerne this Article to handle. Other are consequent upon this condition, as royalties and priviledges following upon it, and stand not so much in the generall calling of a believer, as in speciall belonging to it: whether inward graces, or outward blessings, according to the severall promises in, and by which God conveyes them. The former sort doe containe the full Right and Title of a believer, to Christ himselfe: the latter, the possession of those good things which issue from him, through the whole life, and the divers occasions thereof, of which in the third part, God willing.

Q. Name then those of the former sort, that belong to the being or estate of a believer.

A. The Holy Ghost in the Scripture doth mention them, according to the severall circumstances of our misery: as that brought us into an estate of guilt, bondage and enmity with God, so this brings us by justification, to a contrary estate of peace, by Redemption to an estate of liberty, by reconciliation to amity with God, and so of the rest. All in substance are one recovery of an happy estate: only they differ in these respects. Now for the naming of them the holy Ghost doth it sometimes more briefely, sometimes more fully: briefely in 1 Cor. 1.30. He is made unto us wisedome, righteousnesse, Sanctification and redemption. More fully in the 1 of the Eph. from the 3. to the 17 verse: read it over, and ye shall be informed of them. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Eph. 1. from 3. to 17.

Q. How many things consider we in this Article of the benefits of Christ?

A. Three. First, the difference. Secondly, the order. Thirdly, the nature and use of them to our soule. As touching the first, there is a fourefold difference to be noted of them. First, that some of them are before time, others in time. And in this respect, Election differs from all the rest. For justification, reconciliation and the rest, presuppose Christ really theirs, and issue immediately from him: but Election is before Christ himselfe, and presupposeth nothing but the first cause of Gods good pleasure and will. And yet its true, that in Christ wee enjoy all: onely with difference, because we are not elected for Christ, but wee are adopted and reconciled for him. Election being that act of God from all eternity, whereby foreseeing the ruine of man, hee purposed out of his free will to chuse some of those fallen ones, to mercy and salvation. So that wee see its one of the benefits of the beleever in Christ, yet not for Christs sake, but the Fathers, who gave Christ himselfe to this end, that hee might bee a foundation of that whereof himselfe was a first cause.

2 Difference.

The second difference is, in respect of the benefits that follow Christ. In which respect, Vocation differs from all the rest. For vocation is no fruit of faith as the rest are, but of election, seeing whom God elected, he calleth to know it. Calling then is a benefit whereby God brings the soule to bee capable of all the rest through faith in the Gospell, and therefore concernes the elect as they are so in God, not to themselves as yet, and serves to this end, to make them to know it by faith. But none of the rest can be wrought in the soule without faith, being the fruits of calling to faith, as to bee justified, adopted, &c.

3 Difference.

The third difference is, betweene those benefits of Christ, which concerne us in this life, and those that reach to a better. And the difference is great. The former being such as releeve the necessity of our present condition, in which wee are imperfectly conformed to Christ in his estate of Humility, and beset with sinne, Satan and enemies: of this nature are our justification, reconciliation, adoption and the like: which all shall cease (as faith, hope and patience shall) in respect of the evils they doe here conflict with: although, out of these relations the good of them shall abide, as sonneshippe, liberty, amity, and the like. But faith in these benefits fits shall cease, because all conflict with evill shall cease; evill I say, both of sinne and punishment. Now for those that concerne the life to come in a perfect conformity to our head, they are of another nature. and belong to that Image of God renued in us in righteousnesse and holinesse, which abide for ever, begunne here in grace, and perfected in glory. These are in themselves the principall, and faith (however here its all in all) yet serves only to settle this image upon us, and having brought us thereto, shall cease.

The fourth, and last difference is, betweene the benefit it selfe which shall abide for ever: and that will appeare, if wee consider the difference betweene the state of an equall image of God, to that which Adam lost, and that which Christ hath purchased above it, as an overplus. If hee had onely purchased unto us, the Image of God, together with immortality, hee had made us as good as wee were created, though wee had lived on earth. But because he being no creature, but God, tooke our flesh into himselfe, that wee might bee as hee is, and where hee is; therefore hee hath cast in this overplus unto us, that in stead of an earthly Paradise with old Adam, we shall enjoy heavenly mansions with Christ in the presence of God, and there have this Image and our immortality perfected. But this note, whatsoever difference there be otherwise, yet in this all agree, that they are the work of the Spirit of Christ setling all his benefits upon the beleever. 4 Difference.

Q. You have spoken of the first. Proceed to the second.

A. The second is the order of them. Wherein although I see men to differ: yet I will avoide quarrels, and for the good of the Reader, speake my opinion. Thus then I conceive, the first in order is vocation (or regeneration, as it concerneth the way and meane of begetting a soule to God) the second is Union. The third is Regeneration, the fourth is Justification, the fifth is Reconciliation, the sixth is Adoption, the seventh is Redemption, the eighth is Sanctification, immediately issuing from it, (containing the mortifying and quickening worke of the Spirit) and the last is Glorification. The 2 thing, the order of them and number 9.

Q. Let us proceede to the opening of their severall natures so farre as serveth for our purpose: annexing their uses in particular. 3 thing, their natures and distinction.

A.

A. It were endleſſe to wade into all: only to ſhew the realneſſe of them, and the uſe of them to the ſoule, that it may ſee how richly Chriſt is offered to the ſoule, I will touch every one of them. The firſt of them is Vocation, See Texts Eſay 55.5. Rom. 8.30. 1 Cor. 1.2. Now this calling is a work of the Spirit, iſſuing from election, whereby whom the Lord hath choſen to be his, he brings to know it. And that by the voyce and call of the outward word and inward ſpirit, crying to their ſoules thus, Come out of her my people, and returne to me. Come out from thy former corrupt eſtate of ſinne, ſubjection of Satan, curſe, miſery, lewd cuſtomes, errour of the wicked, hell; and returne to that bleſſednеſſe which thou haſt loſt. So then calling is that whole workmanſhip of God, whereby he puls the ſoule from a bad eſtate to a good: be it longer in working or ſhorter, darker or cleerer, eaſier or harder: its the drawing of it from darkneſſe to light. Acts 26.18. That from whence its drawne, is an unregenerate eſtate. That whereto, is faith. Betweene theſe, the whole worke of God is calling.

Q. Can you not briefly ſumme up the parts of it?

A. Yes, it may bee conceived to ſtand in theſe two parts. Eyther the preparing worke of calling, or the finiſhing. The former is that, by which the Lord finding the heart uncapable of a promiſe, brings it and prepares it to bee ſuch an one as may ſee it ſelfe capable, and under condition of beleeving, ſuch an one as may beleeve. For as for the opinion of ſuch as imagine that God breeds faith all at once, without preparing the heart, they overthrow that grace (in reſpect of a ſoules triall of her ſelfe, and in reſpect of Gods glory) which they would ſeeme to magnifie. And they ſtrengthen the hand of ſinnefull men in their errour, thinking there is no difference betweene men; all may beleeve in Chriſt. This by the way.

Parts of it 2: 1 Preparing.

The 2. finiſhing.

The latter is that by which the Lord doth finiſh the worke of faith with power: which is the condition of the Goſpell, without which no man can partake any of the priviledges following. For it ſucceeds the condition of the Law: and in ſtead of Do this, ſaith, Beleeve this and live, Note well theſe tearmes: Preparation is the condition of faith, and faith the condition of the covenant.

Note well.

Q. What are thoſe preparatives?

A. Partly

A. Partly legall, partly Evangelicall: in a word, when the Spirit of God by both, leaves such an impression in a troubled soule under the spirit of bondage (of which in the first part) that it comes (by the sight of the Gospell) to so much hope, as workes the heart to mourning and brokennesse, to desire of mercy to esteeme it, and to bee nothing in its owne eyes in comparison of it: together with diligent unwearienesse till it have obtained it. All which are the preventions and assistance of the Spirit of calling, drawing the soule home to God, by such steps and degrees as the soule is capable of. See the opening of the whole doctrine of Preparation in the last Article of this Part.

Q. And, what is the finishing work?

A. That wherein calling is perfected, and wherein true conversation of the soule in begetting it, and bringing it home to God, doth consist: For when the soule thus prepared sees that the promise belongs to her, and that she may and must beleeve it, then the Spirit stamps this gift of faith to receive it. Of which see Article seven, in the preparation to faith. And so much for Vocation.

Q. What is the second priviledge?

A. The second is Union. Which is the first benefit (in order I meane, for else all are together in respect of the soules title and right to Christ) and this opposeth the cutting off of the sinner from God, and all influence and communion with his grace: and by faith so bringeth the soule unto God, that its united, made one, and incorporated againe into him by the flesh of Christ united to his Godhead, (as Article 2.) And its the worke of the Spirit of Christ, making the Lord and the soule one spirit, and causing the soule to partake, by vertue thereof, all that power of his, both in priviledges and graces, which follow. And therefore I set it in the forefront of the rest: for its sure, the soule can no more receive ought from God, till it bee one with him by Christ, than Christ could merit any thing for us, till the Deity and flesh were really united: and no more than the body and soule can impart or receive to or fro, till they be one. See Texts, Ephes. 5.31.42. John 17. often. By all which its evident, that till we be one with God in Christ, wee are without him in the world: the Lord abhorring all relations that want Vnion. But if once united, then he is in us, we in him, he dwels in us, we in him, as an inhabitant in his house, and the soule in the body; he is one with us, we are of him, 1 Cor. 1, 30. in him, Iohn 17. flesh of his flesh, he is our husband, and we are his spouse, and therefore hence issueth all vertue, vigor and power into us, that is meet for our support, either earthly or spirituall, till our union be perfected in glory. To this that belongeth, that is said, we are engrafted into him, as a sience into a stock, which feteheth all her nourishment thence: As the two seales of Baptisme and the Lords Supper do typifie: there being no possibility of the Communion of the latter, without the union of the first.

Hos. 2. Ephes. 5. Rom. 6.

Q. I see union is one of the maine hinges whereupon the life and comfort of a beleever turnes. Therefore I desire to know what it is, and what may be knowne savingly about it?

Opening of it in 4 things.

A. I will endeavour to satisfie you. And therefore having described it, I would first shew the necessity of an union: Then the difference of created union from gracious union, with the cause of it. Thirdly how this union is wrought in the soule: and lastly what effect followes upon it. Touching the first, I described it thus. It is the first priviledge of the condition of a man called, issuing from hence (being indeed the complement of faith, (for faith determines calling, and begins union) whereby the beleeving soul is so brought home, and knit to God in Christ, that it loses her former corrupt estate of cutting off from God, and puts on a new, of being one with the Lord, and he with it; that so the soule may be seazd with true title and interest to all good things which either the Lord can c nvey, or the soule receive; and that in a farre better kind and measure than ever Adam was. Now to the foure branches.

Description of it.

Branch 1. Necessity of it

First I say, Union with God is necessary to all that would partake his graces. For as it was in the Creation, till the Lord had breathed the Spirit of life and himselfe into him, Adam could have no communion with God; so is it in this second creation; no benefit, no fruit thereof can come to the soule till this second creation and union be. But by this as by a channell the rest follow, Reconciliation with amity, Adoption with worship and liberty, &c. Hence it is, that our Saviour so oft presseth this, He that abides not in me, is as a branch cut from the Vine, which withers. Contrarily he that abides in me, draweth life from me and nourishment: he liveth in me, as the living arme receiveth vertue of motion and strength to be usefull to the body, from the head.

The

The second thing is the difference of Unions. The Union of grace is not like that of Creation; neither in the measure, nor in the instrument of it. Not in measure: for the Creation there was a totall and immediate Union (in that kinde) and it was a perfect one, having Gods Image in it without let or impeachment. But this Union of grace is an imperfect Union for measure in this life: because the reliques of corruption and old Adam as drosse mixing themselves with the soule, suffer not God and it to knit fully. But as it is with the branch of a sien put into a clift of a stock, if there be any drosse in the clift betweene the stock and sien, it cannot bee close and grow perfectly: So here. The Lord and the Soule cannot bee so neere in this life, because there is so much scurfe within us, that God and wee cannot close, God being contrary and disagreeing with Belial. And this appeares further in this, That the estate which answers Paradise, is not of grace, but that to come in glory, when corruption and sinne and death shall be swallowed up in incorruption, ful righteousnesse and life. Not that there is not even here, a true and reall union, but not a full and entire one. Secondly, the instruments of Unions are unlike. For that of the Creation needed no other tye or band, save the immediate presence of God in his image, which had then no sinne nor let to divide it. But that Union which now is incumbred with lets and enemies, must needs be maintained by a band of greater Perfection than any is in us: The meere infused grace of light and holinesse joyned Adam to God, and that free will in his nature upheld that Image of God in her exercise and action; but it is otherwise now in this decay of nature; there must bee wrought in the soule another instrument to knit us to God, and hold his grace in continuall exercise.

Branch 2. Differences of unions. 1. 2 Cor. 6. 15. 2.

The third thing is the instrument by which union is begot in the soule; and that is (on our parts) faith; on the Lords part, the Spirit of life in Christ, conveyed by the promise and baptisme. I grant it is but a poore and lame one, even a crutch (as it were) because our life and union is hid with God in Christ, and shall in Heaven bee (as it was in innocency) immediate and perfect; when the crutch shall bee throwne away, and the soule shall bee one with God in the full infusion of all glorious holinesse; I say, it is but a lame instrument, yet a true one. And marke well; Faith must needs bee the knitter of this Union, because it resists that perfectly which cuts us off from God, I meane guilt and curse. I say it selfe is imperfect, yet it resists perfectly; because its given by God to this purpose, to receive a perfect discharge in Christ from all that sinne which cuts us off; and from that excommunication and separation from God which came thereby. Faith then is that which effects this union in this life absolutely. That holinesse which is infused here into us, is imperfect, and therefore cannot fully knit us to a perfect God: faith only can hold Christ to the soule (who is this life of Union) and so keepe us close and knit to God, even when our Image of God in holinesse, is weake. A sweet point. And note againe: by this meanes so soone as faith hath abolisht that which formerly cut off Union, it sets the soule in state of Union as before, and so breeds in it, the true life of grace through pardon and forgivenesse, and comming to God.

Howbeit faith rests not in this her uniting quality: true it is, she holds this her worke through the whole life of a beleever, to cover the defects of Gods Image, and to keepe true and full union on foot, supplying all wants. But shee still strives to settle a beginning of holinesse also in the soule, and an union thereby also: it applyes it weakely and in part, yet it truly applyes it; and even here infuseth (by the Spirit) a most true being of Gods Image, and makes the soule partaker of the divine Nature thereby: even that participation which in glory shall bee one and the same for kinde, though fuller for measure. 2 Pet. 1. 1, 2.

How the Spirit effects this union.

From hence may bee conceived; how the Spirit effects this Union, even (as I said) by the word of promise and the seale. According as Christ was given by God to bring all unto him, and to present them unto him spotlesse and unblameable: so doth the Word convey this power of Christ to the soule. As by Christ it comes to passe, that those who were cut off, were a farre off, Aliens from the Community of Israel, and the life of God, were made neere and one, Ephes. 4. 16. So Saint Paul, Acts 26. tels us, That hee was called to preach, to the intent, that hee might bring men from Idols to the living God: and of Baptisme it is said, That wee are ingrafted into Christ, and planted into the likenesse of his death, and made one with God Ephes. 4.

God. And that thus in a word: (for each of these benefits requires a speciall consideration, though in effect all are belonging to one happinesse). First, the word of the Law gasters the soule for her cursed cutting off from God, and chases it homeward, giving it small peace in her divorce and separation; and causing those lusts which have united themselves to her, and taken up the possession and rule of her, to become noysome and yrkesome to her. For why: they have kept her from Christ her head and husband, whose she is. Secondly, the Word of the Gospell comes in, and makes a Parlee and treaty with her (in this lost case) about a returne and restitution to former union againe: and the soule thus subdued, after many gainesayings, at last suffers her selfe to be rent off from her old stock, and by the prevayling of Christ, which is the Spirit of perswasion, is content to obey and open the dores of the soule for him to enter, surrendring all to him, that she might be his, and be marryed to him, and become one with him, even bone of his bone. And thus Christ comming in, surrenders and unites himselfe also to her, and becomes the soules, and so they live in each other.

The fourth thing is the effect of this union, even Inhabiting and indwelling of the Spirit in that soule which is become one with himselfe: That so it may enjoy communion and fellowship with them in the entercourse of all graces, protection, upholding, and rule as seemes best to himselfe; so that now God in Christ by the Spirit, is that to the soule which before her lusts were, all in all, Lord and King, light and defence, Heaven and happinesse. As wee see that the owner dwels in his House, the King in his Kingdome, and the soule in the body: both for the wel-fare of the possessed, and the honour of the Possessor. The same House of the soule, the same seate which was before is still: but new Rule and Law. Much adoe there is between Christ and old usurping inmates, lust, world, selfe-pride and revenge: but yet the soule gives the precedency to her Lord, and resignes up Keyes and possession to him: Shee is under his Authority, he swayes her by his Kingdome set up in her: defends his house from all Theeves and intruders, he makes Lawes and writes them in their hearts, so that as the wife is the glasse of her husbands purposes, will and affections, answering him as the face doth the face in water; so doth the Church answer Christ ruling her, notwithstanding her disquieting with old tyranny of corruptions. In a word, whatsoever influence, power or authority any head either Civill, matrimoniall, or of Family, can beare over their body, or the soule over the naturall body; that may be said of this Lord who is Father of all the Family of his Church, husband of his spouse, Lord of his Subjects, the soule of his body, to act, direct, defend, provide for, and be all in all to her, till he bring her to glory. As a Principle of union causeth Communion; so doth he: communicates himselfe, all his wisedome, humblenesse, holinesse, experience to her: imparts himselfe to her as her needes are; in her sleights he is her Redemption, in her feares her peace by Justification: in her complaint of corruption, her Sanctification to mortify her, renue her, and so of the rest. This is to make her an habitation to himselfe by the Spirit, not now and then to come stranger-like, or upon pleasure as to a banqueting house for a day: but to walke in the midst of her, to chase away all distempers, and to allow her to walke before him in and out, as his owne; receiving honour from her, as the brightnesse of his Image, and affording to her Protection for his own glory.

Vse 1. Briefe use shall serve. First, it is terror to all hang-bies and time-servers, who have it at their tongues end, they are Gods, and they shall be saved, how few so ever are. But they cannot proove it by any ingrafting or union. No plucking off from the old stock, appeares in them, no planting into a new, no life of grace, no Christ to be theirs, no bringing to God by his flesh and the union of it to God, no promise to fasten upon, by which they may come; no Spirit of God to be betweene them and God to unite both, as the spirits knit the body and soule in one. No Faith to hand-fast them, to marry them, to cut off their old separation, to forgive and reconcile them, and to restore them by the union of Favour, acceptance, and life, to the union of Gods Image, his qualities and holinesse. Away yee counterfeits! This rule argues that you are none of the Lords, because old union continues: Can a twigge live in two stockes at once? If it cleave to the one, must it not renounce the other? Therefore tremble; yee are still cut off as branches that wither, and are (as yet) none of Gods, but in the Gall of bitternesse.

Secondly,

Secondly, all that will needs claime to be the Lords, claime it by union first. Try your selves about it. If yee be united to God, then hath the Lord chased you from your wandring vagaries and old haunts, and brought yee back like the prodigall: The Lord hath convinced you as he did that woman, Iohn 4. saying, Thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou hast now, is none of thy husband: he hath slaine thee by his Law, by thy cutting off from God; from light, life, savor, and sence of God, thy saplesse, and wofull barrennes, and dryneſſe, which shall be as fearefull as Adultery to thee: Thy long trading with strange lovers shall sting thee. Being left thus and divorced from thy husband and thy Father, thou hast beene taken up as a stray, as that Levites concubine, and the prodigall were abused; put to thy shifts to seeke comfort from the dry pits of thy lusts, in steed of the Fountaine. By this meane thou seest how destitute, forlorne and robbed of all, they have left thee, having first had their will of thee. Secondly, the Lord drives thee to an utter unsubsistence, emptinesse and misery, in thy selfe as a branch puld off. In other unions, as of friendship, marriage, each party brings somewhat: but in this the Lord will have thee subsist in him and under him, being no body of thy selfe: forsake all and cleave to him, that thou mayst be one flesh. God will beare rule in a voyded house. Thirdly, the Lord hath by his Promise assured thee, Ier. 3. That notwithstanding thy old adulteries and debauchednesse, yet he will marry thee againe after divorcement. Yea, Hos. 2. 12. in righteousnesse faithfulnesse and mercy he will betroath thee to himselfe. And by the flesh of the Lord Jesus he will make a way for thee to God, who else cannot be approached to: creating the fruit of the lips, that is. Faith in thee, who wert a farre off, Esay 57. and so make thee one with him, his owne Servant, spouse, sonne and daughter, called by his name. That looke what union we have with Christ, the same we might have with the Father. Reade Ioh. 17. ult. That as they are one, so might we be one with him, and he might dwell in us by Faith. Eph. 3. 17, and become another same with us. Lastly, heereby he pulls downe old union and the old house from the Foundations, he shakes and destroyes Satans dwelling, all old lusts, peace and joy and accord with them: that his influence may be all in all, and he may come into thee with all his graces, Try thy selfe then by these 4. Use 2. Ioh. 4.

markes, in what estate thou abidest: if indeed thou hast this Union, thou hast fastened thy Pipes to the Fountaine of living waters, and derivest dayly refreshing from thence, for the supply of thy whole course.

Use 3. Thirdly, its use of thankefulnesse and comfort to all Gods Branch 1. people. 1. of thanks, for who art thou that the Lord should thus Unite himselfe to such a lumpe of Earth and sin? As Elizabeth sayd, Who am I that the Mother of my Lord should come to me! As Abigail sayd, Let me be an handmaid to wash the feete of the servants of my Lord! When Salomon had a promise of the Lords dwelling in his Temple, he wondred, Should he dwell in this house whom the Heaven of Heavens cannot containe? So shouldst thou say, Lord shouldst thou make a sinfull wretch thy dwelling and delight, and repast, thine Heaven upon Earth? Lord depart from me a sinfull man! Oh! what a sight is here! come and see, not the Palace of a Prince, but the habitation of God.

Branch 2. Secondly, comfort against all thy bad inmates and lusts which disquiet thee, and make thee often to thinke thy soule a sty of uncleanesse rather than an House of God: Be of good cheere: the Lord esteemes thee not by these necessary inmates, but by the voluntary; Keepe out them, and the Lord will looke upon his Pearles, not thy Dunghill; and in due time, scoure thee cleane from them, though for a time he suffer them to try Faith, and combat in thee.

Branch. 3. Lastly, yet withall it is caution for all such: That they make not the Lords Spirit sad by the Returne of any lustes to disquiet him, least he hide himselfe in his communion, and leave thee to thy selfe to shift.

Use. 4. Fourthly, it is to teach us, both what dignity and what duty lies upon Gods people in this respect of their union. The dignity must needs bee great, to bee one with God: for by this meanes all his and our things are common, hee suffers in and with us in all our crosses: Hee is honoured or reproached in all our Obedience or disobedience: wee stand not, nor fall to our selves, but to him. To him therefore wee may goe in all our troubles, beseeching him to be afflicted with us. To curbe our enemies, that they may not insult, and say, Where is their God? yea to purge out of us, or remoove from us whatsoever evill might dishonour his name, or be an eye-sore. And secondly, its to teach us our duty; viz. To be sensible of this union continually whereſoever wee become. A Wife that honours her Husband, will ſo carry her ſelfe that her Husband (whom ſhee is one with) may not be impeached by any unſeemely carriage, idle lookes, ſpeeches, or liberties; ſhee lookes at his credite whoſe ſhee is. Such a narrow eye ſhould this union with the Lord worke in us: That his honour and name ſhould be the marke we ſhoot at, and looke what we thinke would jarre with his affections, or trench upon his glory, that we ſhould caſt off. If the Iſraelites might not leave their excrements uncovered, becauſe the Lord was among them, how much more in them? And ſo much for this benefit.

Q. You have ſaid enough of Vnion. Now proceede to the third benefit of Regeneration. And firſt ſhew in what ſence you take it here? The 3 benefit of Regeneration.

A. There being a double meaning in this word, the one ſignifying the begetting of the ſoule to God which was none of his before: The other an enſtamping of the Image of God really in the ſoule: I doe take this word heere in the firſt ſence: and in the eight Priviledge, in the ſecond ſence. Double ſence of it, and how taken.

Q. Why ſo? Doe you divide the thinges which God puts together? Why ſet you the parts of one thing ſo farre a ſunder?

A. No, God forbid. For even in Scripture ſometimes the word is taken joyntly to expreſſe both. But becauſe the word is doubtfull and taken in both ſences, therefore it is meete that the handling thereof in the Miniſtry, and the hearing and reading of it, be conceived with diſtinction: leaſt otherwiſe the markes of vocation and Faith being confounded with the markes of ſanctification, the hearer may be unable to try himſelfe. Otherwiſe ſure it is, that converſion (conſiſting of both) is wrought in the ſoule, as it is offered by God and ſealed with Baptiſme at once.

Q. I am ſatisfied: Now proceed and ſhew the difference betweene this and other Priviledges.

A. All the reſt doe agree with this in the ſubſtance of our reſtoring from our loſt ſtate to an happy eſtate in Chriſt: onely this more ſpecially hath a reſpect unto the meanes by which the Lord worketh thoſe in the ſoule, to wit, both the outward and the inward, the word, the ſeale, and the ſpirit that begets us again. Therefore it ſhall not be amiſſe to inſiſt upon it a little, for the underſtanding of ſundry Scriptures that ſpeake of it in that ſence. How it differs from the reſt.

Q. Is

Q. Is there then any use of handling this subject?

The handling of it necessary

A. Yea, surely, For as most men quite omit and over-see this regeneration of Faith, and begetting the soule to God, both Ministers in their Discourses, and people in understandings: thinking that there is no regeneration save onely renewing of the will, and changing of the corrupt nature of old Adam from bad to good: so heereby they grow to this absurd error, namely to imagine, that whensoever any duty of mortification or holinesse is urged, by and by, and without any more adoe they are the parties spoken to, and so of themselves can mortifie their owne lusts; cease to sweare, lye, or blaspheme: which is to nouzle people in little better than Pelagian or Popish free-will. Whereas if the Regeneration of Faith and all the preparatives thereto were spoken of and urged first, to cast them out of themselves, and lay them at Gods Feete, they would come to heare the point of mortification with more awe and reverence, as knowing it requires another gates disposition of heart than they have attayned, and other practise than they bewray. For although in their moodes they are hote upon reforming their oathes and lewd companies and other lusts, yet alas! Their free-will pangs are as the morning dew, and they fall to their trade worse than ever before, for want, of a true Principle.

The Scripture distinguisheth it.

Q. Why? Doth the Scripture any where intimate this Regeneration of Faith and begetting to God, ere God his image can be begotten in us?

A. Yea, surely. To which end, it will not bee amisse to alledge some. Most eminent is that, Tit. 3, 5, 6. According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration and renuing of the Holy Ghost: which he shedde on us abundantly, through Christ our Saviour. That being justified by his grace, we might be made heires of life. Who seeth not an evident regeneration of the soule unto God to be wrought, before renuing of Gods Image? A like place is that Iam. 1. 18. Of his owne will hee begat us, that wee might be a kinde of his first fruites of the Creatures. What is this first fruit? The early worke of Faith, creating the soule againe to God, and giving it the birth-right of the first borne, beloved, and accepted of God. Paul also to the Galathians, hath a sutable speech: My little Children, of whom I travell in birth againe till Christ bee formed formed in you. Meaning, till by the word and Faith (which is the instrument of the Spirit) he had begotten them to God. Other texts shall be named in the sequele. But when he speakes of the other Regeneration of Sanctification, hee useth other words, as Ephes. 4 18. If yee have indeed received the truth as it is in Jesus, That yee put off the old man, and put on the new, as it is created in the Image of God in righteousnesse and true holinesse.

Q. I understand you; Now shew the order of Gods working of this Regeneration.

A. I shall breefly doe it, yet with this caveat, That if heereafter other priviledges shall offer themselves in the like manner of handling to this heere, the Reader yet be not offended at them as repetitions, but consider that I labour to bound each priviledge within his owne compasse, that he may make distinct use of each. The order then is this. Caveat.

First, the word presents to the soule, her losse of God, not in a few beames or rayes of his, but his whole divine nature, life, and being. Life (we know) is the excellency of being: Things that are without life, are in a sort esteemed not to be: and those Creatures that have a kinde of life without motion and sence, although they haue a growing life, yet are but halfe subsisting, as Trees and Plants: a gnat in respect of her life is a more excellent Creature than a Cedar. The poorest creeple is of more excellent nature, than the goodlyest Elephant: A reasonable beeing and life, exceedes a sensible life, as much as a sensible exceedes a naturall or vegetable: How much more then doth a divine and spirituall being exceede a reasonable? If a meere supernaturall life of common enlightning and knowledge of Gods revealed Will (which is but a quality) doth so much exceede reason, as the spirit of an Angell exceedes the spirit of a godly man: how much more then doth a spirituall life and being of a believer, exceede a supernaturall life of knowledge alone? All which I speake to shew what Adam lost when hee lost the spirituall being of his Creation, the Image, life, and nature of him that created him after his owne patterne! This losse of our being and true life of God (as Paul calls it, Ephes. 4.) the Lord by his Law presents first to that soule in which he purposes to quicken up this second life of grace by the Lord Jesus that quickning Spirit, 1 Corinth. 15. By this losse man is stript and deprived The order of Gods regenerating.

deprived of the glory of God, that is, that excellent beauty and honour, which the life of God did reflect upon him, ſo that as Iacob ſayd of Reuben, Thy dignitie is gone. I ſay not that ſinne hath bereft man of his being, but that divineneſſe of being ſuſteyned his reaſonable nature in a moſt firme manner of ſubſiſting: So that now there is a diſſolution of this Image, and nothing left ſave the bare Ruines of a frame without beauty or amiableneſſe. He is become a meere emptineſſe, a chaos and dunghill of confuſion, the very reliques of himſelfe: even as the ſadde and diſmall Earth being bereft of the Sunne and influence of Heaven, differs from the ſweete ſeaſon of May or the Summer, wherein ſhee is cladde with all her beautie.

It is a ſad ſight to ſee a Carcaſſe voyde of life and breath of man: But to ſee ſuch a Carcaſſe as wants life, to creepe and breathe, and ſtinke in the loathſomeneſſe of it, were worſe. What a ſight is it then, to behold a man endued with naturall life and breath, to walke, and crawle up and downe, voyde of the life of his life, dead, a meere carrion, breathing death of grace in his naturall life, and ſtinking even above ground in the noſtrils of God and man, who are able to ſmell and diſcerne? Breathing corruption in Gods noſtrils, and caſting the noyſome ſavour of it before men! loathſome oathes, drunkenneſſe, ſwearing, cooſenage, deceite, lying, falſhood: not to ſpeake of inward loathſomeneſſe of ſelfe-love, carnall eaſe, uncleane thoughts, infidelity, hypocriſie, ſecurity, profaneneſſe and the like? All theſe the Lord by his Word diſcovers to the ſoule. And beſides that wofull Deluſion of his heart, which makes him to thinke his wound to be healed when he can keepe it ſweete: as if a Prince caſt out of his throne and juſtly depoſed from his Crowne, into a dungeon, ſhould applaud himſelfe in ſome of his beſt Robes and apparrell. So is it heere. When hypocrites can furniſh themſelves with ſome of Gods Attire, and pride themſelves in their knowledge, parts, wealth, wit, credit, and eſteeme, or ſome gifts of reſtraint and morall vertues and abſtinence from evill: lo, they conceive themſelves hereby to be the perſons they are not, and take a counterfeit ſhew of a Parrots tongue, or an Apes laughter, or an Image chattering, to be the true life of grace. Theſe the Lord doth diſcover to the ſoule, effectually and ſtirringly, where hee will regenerate and beget againe; Hee will cause the odiousnesse of spirituall death and deprivall of God, to pierce the soule to the quicke, and will give it sence and conscience thereof.

Secondly hee presents hereby the succession of misery upon this losse, and that most deserved: all the curses, woes and Penalties written in the law, are written also and engraven by the finger of Gods convincing Spirit upon this person as a booke written all over, within and without: the emptinesse, and barrennesse of the mind and spirit of all good, the pronenes unto all evill, a body of death, and dead members, a very numb-Palsie of all holy motion, action, thought or delight in righteousnesse: a totall withdrawing of God from the soule in all his influence and communion, his Spirit, graces, ordinances: a spirituall, totall desertion of the soule in point of peace, joy, rest and happinesse: a losse of the immortality, not of soule, but of a soule in glory; and a leauing it to the pollution of lust, dominion and rule, temptation and malice, of Satan, world, and corruption, as chaines holding a forlorne creature, till the day of utter casting off from the presence of God and from hope of recovering the life of God, into utter darknesse; which is the second death, such a deprivall of God, as can neuer be recovered any more by himselfe. The second work.

Thirdly, the Lord presents this soule, with her fearfull condition in a third respect; Viz. That dangerous ease and quiet which the deluded soule lyes in, in the middes of all this privation and losse of God; No little infant having lost Father, Mother, and friends and all at once: no Idiot deprived of his wits and understanding, are more sensleſſe of their condition than this soule is; for being deprived of God, it is withall a foole deprived of the sense of it; and as a foole pleases himselfe as much in his bable as in all the inheritance he hath lost; so doth this foole in his painted sheath of carnall qualities and endowments of Nature; which in truth doe as little grace him as the gawdy coate of a foole stript of his wits. As it was with Nebuchadnezzar, being driven from his Kingdome and men, to live among beasts, (whether really or in his opinion) he lost as well the reflexion of his minde to tell him in what case he was, as his understanding it selfe (yea much more) so is it here; A most miserable spectacle to behold, a creature miserable, and thinking The third work.

thinking it selfe possessed of all; rich, cloathed, and furnisht with all necessaries. Once the Councell of France, fearing the mutiny of the Peopleupon the death of the King, devised a policy, to array the dead body with all his wonted attire and robes, putting a Scepter into his hand, and a Crowne upon his head, so planting him upon his bed, and all his Chamber richly beset, and his Courtiers about him, and his pale face painted: That so this being given out and by some beheld, might delude the people. So is it heere. The dead soule befooled with her own delusions, being wholly miserable, pleaseth her selfe with a dreame that she is otherwise, and this serves her, in stead of life it selfe.

Fourthly, where the Lord will regenerate to a new life, he brings the soule to the sence of her losse by the light of his law shining as in a darke place (as the light of the morning discovers to a man robbed in the night of his Treasure at once; what a case hee is left in) and seases it with a spirit of misery and beggery, really ignorant now what to doe, wringing his hands and saying, what shall become of me? How shall I live and passe my life? how shall I avoyde the pinch of beggery, the shame of an undone man, and the sorrowes that will ensue? I say, when once the Lord savingly workes this, (for else it may vanish) hee doth in season present the soule with the newes of a second life (to prevent utter sinking) and stayes the heart thereby: Hee shewes it, that (as lost and forlorne as she is) yet there is a way to restore her to her former integrity againe.

Two things done about the way to new birth.

1. Enlightens.

2. In order of it.

Now as touching this way, the Lord first enlightens the soule in it, and secondly, applyes and fastens it upon the same. Hee enlightens it in two kindes: first, about the order of this way: secondly, about the way it selfe. Touching the order of it, hee tells her that forasmuch as shee once had this life and Image of God created in her, and hath wilfully lost it: Therefore, before hee can restore her to it the second time, his justice which is wronged by her sinne, and hath justly accursed her for it, must first be satisfied; and the soule must apprehend this satisfaction to her selfe, as her owne; and by this meanes her guiltinesse and curse must bee washed off and removed out of his way:

3. The nature of it.

For otherwise how can hee and the corrupt soule be brought together? What communion can there bee betweene sinne and ſinne and pureneſſe? Secondly, he enlightens the ſoule in the way it ſelfe: To wit, that in his wiſdome and love hee hath granted his owne Sonne, true God, and the nature which was offended, to ſuffer the imputation of guilt, and the death which it procured, in the nature and for the nature of guilty man: and by this ſuffering he ſatisfied juſtice to the full, ſo that hereby the way which ſinne had ſhut up, might ſtand and lye open for the reſtoring of the poore loſt ſoule, to her former nature and life of God againe.

Having thus enlightned the ſoule about this way, hee then applyes it to the ſoule. And that by a ſecond and cloſer worke of his grace. For firſt, he applyes this worke of Regeneration by the inſtrument of his word and promiſe, which is as a ſeed of Regeneration caſt into the wombe of the ſoule by hearing it preached. As S. Iames ſaith, Of his good will begat he us, by his word of truth. 2. Worke applyes it. 1 By the promiſe.

This word carrieth with it a forming power of the ſecond birth, even a creating of God in the ſoule againe. Secondly, the effieient cauſe is the Spirit of Regeneration, taking this word, and caſting it into the ſoule, and there hatching and cheriſhing the ſame, till it have formed Chriſt therein, who is the ſecond Adam, the true way and life, that quickning Spirit. And thirdly, hee effects this in the ſoule by the power of faith which receives this ſeed of the word, and this quickning of the Spirit: and poſſeſſeth the ſoule therewith. 2 By the Spirit of Regeneration. 3. By effecting it.

Onely note this, that faith doth theſe two things: 1. it receives the way of this life into the ſoule, which is the putting away of guilt and curſe which Adams ſin contracted, and that is pardon and forgiveneſſe: Secondly it receives therewith and at once, the actuall and reall properties and nature of God, to inhere and dwell in the ſoule. And howſoever, when Divines ſpeak of this work, they moſt properly ſettle regeneration upon this latter: yet in working and practiſe, it is moſt certaine, that it conſiſts in them both. I ſay, faith (as S. Peter ſpeaks) doth make us partakers of the divine Nature in both, though the conceaving of ſuch a myſtery, exceed us. Faith doth two things. 2 Pet. 1. 3.

Having ſaid thus much in generall of the way and applying of it, it ſhall not be amiſſe to helpe the deſirous Reader with ſome of thoſe Acts which the Spirit of Regeneration by the word of Promiſe and the Sacrament of Baptiſme workes upon the ſoule, Acts of the Spirit of Regeneration.

Treatise of Sacraments.

[when I speake of Baptisme, let no man mistake mee, as if I tyed the Spirit of Regeneration to it or the Word, in all regenerate ones, for hee worketh in Infants another way, as elsewhere I have written.] To returne then: The Lord offers to a lost soule, this word of promise, I will that thou O dead soule, shalt live in my Sonne: I being satisfied by his death, am content that thy soule receive againe, this life of mine againe. See this Promise in Ezekiel 18. verse 32. For I have no pleasure in the death of a sinner (saith the Lord:) wherefore turne ye your selves and live ye. So Ephes. chap. 5. verse 14. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest and stand up from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. So Esay 55. Heare yee my voice, and your soules shall live. And John 5.25,26. For as the Father hath life in himselfe, so hath he given to his Sonne to have life in himselfe: The dead shall heare the voyce of the Sonne of God, and they that heare it shall live. These and the like promises do offer life to all dead soules that need it, both life here of grace, hereafter of glory, there being no difference betweene these two in substance, but in degree. Now the spirit of Regeneration by this promise workes three distinct Acts and steppes in the soule.

It workes by the promise.

Three things, 1 Conception

First conception: secondly quickning: thirdly birth. By conception I meane the least step to this life, by which the soule retaines and keepes this seed of life, suffers it not to passe away and be spilt (as in hypocrites) but digests and holds the promise to it selfe, till it have bred it longings after this life. Conceptions (wee know) provoke longings of the appetite, lusting after a kinde of alteration of spirituall appetite, and a desire after this life. This is that Esay meanes, Chap. 55. 4. Incline your hearts, and hearken to me. That is, Bee so affected with this promise of life, that yee do incline toward it, and make to it, that ye walke in Gods way appointed to bring yee to it: Bee affected seriously with the excellency of this life, and the happy change which God offers you: that your soules doe diligently ensue it in the meanes: So that in this first work is contained the whole work of the Lords preparing the soule for the receiving of this life, standing in those many affections created in the same by the glad tydings of this word of life: that is, That it stirs the soule to mourne for so long living a dead life, and resisting the offers of life, and resting in a shew of a false conception: it doth long after this exceeding great priviledge, to be partaker of the nature and life of God: it doth prize it above the most excellent inferiour life of this world, though it were Salomons felicity in comparison of it: it empties it selfe and is voyded from all other hopes and desires of life, even as the wombe that conceives must be cleere from all former conceptions: it uses all meanes which God hath appointed with all eagernesse of soule, restlesse till it obtaine it.

and

The second worke is the quickning power of the Spirit of Promise, whereby the Lord infuseth this life of God into the soule; which is nothing else save the soules breaking through the manifold struglings and strifes, which selfe and unbeliefe doe worke within her selfe; doth obey the voyce and command of the promise, that so it may live. As wee see the naturall fruit hath many changes, pangs and strifes within the wombe, ere it come to the birth: so here, the soule hath manifold resistances and oppositions in her selfe against this promise, cannot tell what to say of her selfe, whether she should live or no: often gives over the promise as too good, discourages her selfe by the presence of a body of death which still abides: an awke base heart chusing to lye stinking in her grave of death and sottish ease, and lusts: That so she may turne back to her old vomit, and avoide the trouble and difficulty of this new birth: Oh, it is as the sound of many waters to her, to heare that she should live to God, being a very carcasse of death! Tell not her of it, it is impossible: There bee two Nations in her Wombe, death strugling against life, whether should prevaile: All seemes to be against any hope of quickning to grace and life; But when she sees the promise to carry the power of the second Adam in it, which can breathe the Spirit of life and immortality into the dead earth, nay corrupt flesh: and that the law of the Spirit of life which is in Christ Jesus, is able to deliver her from the Law of sinne and death: and to breathe into her this breath and life of God, that she may live unto him the second time for ever. Loe, shee yeelds to this Law, and obeyes the Command thereof that she may live. Acknowledging that this law of life in Christ is able to beare downe unbeliefe, as the Law of Terrour was able to controll and subdue rebellion before. And so by this gift of faith shee liveth: according to that, Hee that believeth in the Sonne hath life: and againe, I give my flesh for the life of the world: He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternall life. Hee that beleeveth in mee, shall live though hee dye: With an hundred more.

The third work, birth.

The third worke of the Spirit, is the birth of this spirituall life: when the soule comes out of the wombe into the light, that is, discovers her selfe to be alive, and apprehends (as I may say) her owne life, and that God hath begotten her to himselfe. Which is the highest step and degree of life which is bred in her. For as the fruit in the wombe being quickned, yet wanteth the full proportion of its parts, till the forming power of generation, doe by weekes and moneths more and more perfect and fashion them all to a comely being and creature, which at last is brought forth: so here, the poore soule having received the life of God into her, by her weake and poore faith, scarce felt and perceived, yet by the secret power of the Spirit, growes from degree to degree: that although shee hath no other life at the birth, than in the quickning: yet this life is more apparent and sensible every day than other, till at last the spirit fall in travell and bring forth Christ formed in the soule, so that the soule appeares to her selfe and to others, to live and to beleeve: because now she is in the light, perfected and brought forth: So that the infant that is borne doth not more bewray the naturall life, by weeping, laughing, breathing, feeding, sleeping, stirring, feeling, growing: than the life of a beleeving soule, once brought forth, appeares in the operations and works of the new Creature. And this is the effect of the sealing Spirit of Baptisme, added to the promise, and stablishing the weake faith of this poore Infant, till it know it selfe to live, and declare it to others by the fruits of regeneration. And thus much of the Doctrine of this benefit of regeneration (in the first sense) be said. Now I come briefly to shut it up in the use.

Use 1. Branch 1.

First, let it be Terror to all such as being voide of this life of God (as unregenerate ones are, Ephes. 4.) yet walke as alive, merry and jolly in the death of their corruption. Thus was Paul, Rom. 7. alive to sin, ere the Law came, and who but he? Till the killing letter came, and slew him, and made him pull in his hornes. Oh! That God should so long endure a croaking Toade, a carrion, to come into his Temple and spit venome upon himselfe and his Ordinances, and defile the Congregation with the stench thereof. Cry out to the Lord, and say, Oh Lord, I have no one step of thy life begun! Lord set thy law on work to kill my life, that thine may succeed.

See John 3. 5. No Heaven without regeneration.

Also

Also to all Counterfeits who adorne their dead carcasses with the ornaments of Religion: Duties of life and worship of God they will bee full of; but the life of duties, faith to apprehend the Lord Jesus for restoring of themselves to the life of duties, and of obedience, they care not for. Why lay ye out your money for no bread? If shewes of a living man, and a name that there is life, be so precious, when yet thou art dead; what were true life worth? Oh! rest not in any inferiour base life, when the Lord offers thee true spirituall life! Once one made an Image to speak: But was not the poorest Creeple better than it, though the head were of Brasse? Abhorre all false colours of life, duties and performances, when there is no substance: Who would not affect the most excellent life, if it might be had? If men have runne into Cels, Tubs, and cloysters to shun the life of the world, and to live a religious life (which was but hypocrisie) whither shouldst not thou runne for the life of God in Christ, if thou mightst have it? Branch 2. Rev. 3. See Iohn 3. 6. Of flesh only comes flesh.

Secondly, learne here the price of faith! Its that whereby the soule lives here, the life of God, a life better than a Princes, without it. But who cares for it? A life of pleasure, sloth, ease, honour, telling of money, is the only life with most men. But till the heart be purged of this life, Christs life is unsavory. No wombe can conceive twice. This life of faith, is an hidden one to the world. But till the soule live to God, God cannot live in her. It is faith which must breed all operations of true life in the soule: heare, pray, love God and his people, repent, and walk with God: Shee onely can keepe watch and ward in the soule, to stop and turne the course of sinne back. She onely can task and set the soule on work closely, to be meeke, innocent, patient: She only can live with God, because God by her lives, in the soule. And yet of all other graces, she is least set by! Why? save because she is unknowne. No other grace can restore the life of God here but she. Let her be precious. I grant it should humble thee here that thou art faint to live the life of faith, and not of sense: But bee content: prize her, and she shall never leave thee till she have set upon the life of glory. Use 2. Instruction.

Thirdly, pray for the Spirit of the Lord Jesus his Resurrection, (by which the soule is regenerated to this new birth, 1 Pet. 1. 5.) and never lin till by the word and Baptisme, he hath inspired thy soule with this life of Regeneration. Mourne for Use 3.

thy ſtrivings againſt this birth, and cry out (with Rebecca) to the Lord, whence is this rebellion in my ſoule? Why doe I ſo reſiſt thy free and gracious quickning power. Lord Jeſus, breake in with thy life, and cauſe dead bones to live. For thou art able, Ezech. 37. 3.8. As Ezekiel ſaid, ſo ſay thou, Lord, The fruite is come to the birth, and there is no ſtrength to bring forth. Helpe Lord, I am ready to faint in this travell, deliver me, for my paines have oppreſſed me. Be at hand when I am ſpent with wraſtling, and I ſhall for ever praiſe thee.

Vſe 4. Fourthly, try thy ſelfe about this birth, and be not cozened by Satan! Bee content to reſigne up the beſt hopes thou haſt of life heere, ſo that the Lord would give thee ſound markes of true life. See 1 Pet. 1.5. True life is a life of hope of eternall life, yea lively hope: it rejoyceth under the hope of it. It is a cleanſing life and purifies the ſoule. It is a noble precious life, and will not pollute it ſelfe with dead carrion. It is a wayting, patient life under Croſſes, becauſe the up-ſhot of it is hidde with Chriſt in God: and the like. And bee thou comforted if God have thus borne thee to himſelfe and forget thy ſorrowes, more than a woman that hath borne a manchild. And ſo much for the third benefit.

The 4. benefit juſtification what. Q. Proceed to the fourth benefit.

A. The fourth is juſtification; which is contrary to the ſtate of guilt and curſe by ſin. And by this benefit the ſoule obtaines an eſtate of quietneſſe and peace toward God. And that by a clearing and acquitting her at his Tribunall (as if ſhe had never offended,) fully, and perfectly. Which I ad for a difference betweene juſtification and ſanctification, the former is an whole purging us from all our ſinnes, as Saint John, Epiſt. 1. cap. 1.7. Rom. 8. 30. Rom. 5. 18. The other a purging us in part, of which reade Heb. 9.14. The former purging is from guilt and curſe, and that muſt be perfect by imputation (for elſe how ſhould ſinfull fleſh ſtand before a perfect God) the latter is from the Dominion and rule of it; which in this life is imperfect.

Q. For ſmuch as both the matter and forme of juſtification, is handled at large in the 2. and 3. Articles before, here I ſpare to ſpeake of the doctrine of it: and only inſiſt upon the privilege iſſuing thence: What is that?

The iſſue and effect of juſtification is Peace. A. That is peace and quiet of ſoule as I have ſaid, a moſt peculiar bleſſing: contrary to thoſe garboiles and horrors which the convinced conscience felt, beeing under wrath; as also to that rotten peace which the unconvinced conscience walked with, through error: either one, or other of these is the estate of all unjustified ones. But when as once the soule is set at liberty and discharged by Proclamation from these, there being no enemy to accuse, neither will the Lord hold thy soule guilty, but speakes peace to it: so that by this meanes it drawes new breath, and lives at other tearmes of content and complacency, than before. Looke what peace and welfare Adams innocency reflected upon him, before he sinned: that doth justification cast upon the soule, by forgivenesse. Feares are all scattered by this perfect love of God received by Faith, no guilt or accusation by sinne or any enemy, without or within, can now take place. Looke how different the state of a poore man is, when hee is molested with suites and put in feare of losing his whole estate by the wrong of an adversary: from that which he feeles after he hath got the day, and is past all former feares: Such is the odds between the sinfull and the justified soule. She returnes unto her rest (as David speakes,) and eates, drinkes, sleepes, and workes in peace, yea, her flesh which was withered and her bones consumed with the scorching heate of conscience (the wound whereof who can beare;) now returnes as the flesh of a little child.

the

Illustration of it.

Hence, the Holy Ghost never ceases to magnifie this benefit, as Esay 57. I create the fruite of the lips, peace to him that is neere, and a farre off. Its a worke onely belonging to God. and above the first Creation, for heere, Peace is made of a contrary, even warre. The Lord is the onely former of the Conscience, and therefore its a worke equall to Gods power to create peace in it, and to restore it being lost, is farre greater. The Sea raging and calmed doth not more differ, than the peace of Conscience from the rage and distemper of it. Therefore its said, That CHRIST settled peace, and stilled this raging Sea of Conscience, Eph. 2. 15. Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, so settling peace; and Col. 1. 20. He hath made peace through the blood of his Crosse; So that by this meanes, we may turne our swords into shares, and our weapons into tooles: the Lyon and the Lambe may feede together, and the child may put his finger into the hole of the Aspe: inward peace breeding outward, with Angels, with men, with divels, death, and enemies. So againe, Christ is called, Esay 8. The Prince of our peace; noting that it was the worke of Priest-hood assisted with his Kingdome, to purchase it. And likewise his third worke of prophecy was taken up in it, for he was annoynted, Esay 61. to that purpose, to preach glad tidings (of peace, Romans 10.15.) to the meeke. And to this purpose he is called a witnesse both of declaring this truth, and also of deciding the controversie betweene Gods Justice and our soules. For looke how one sufficient witnesse in a Court, may by his verdict settle a mans whole estate upon him, and recover his right: So the Lord Jesus by his blood, beares witnesse that our sinne and curse is gone, setling Pardon and salvation upon us, deciding the question, and making peace: And in this sence we reade Heb. 12. That the blood of the Covenant speakes better things than the blood of Abel; That cryed in Caines conscience, nothing save revenge and horror: but this cryeth peace. To conclude, the like is that which, 1 *Pet.*3.20. the Apostle sayth of Baptisme (the seale of this Covenant in the blood of Christ) viz. That it saveth us, not by washing away the filth of the flesh, but by the answer of a good conscience to God, by the Resurrection of Christ. What is that? Surely this, that when the Lord askes the soule in what plight it is, the conscience steps out and answers, Lord its well with mee. It was as ill as could bee: But now its as well as can bee: Thou hast changed all in a moment, for instead of Warre I have Peace.

Use 1. This point first teaches us the wofull state of all unregenerate ones, in point of guilt and curse of sinne. Surely, whether sensible of it, or no: whether their conscience bee alive and convicted in them hereof: or whether they bee so carryed by their lusts, that they have no leasure to thinke of it, being stupified and hardned: all is one: There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked. The waies of peace they have not knowne, Rom. 3. and they have not seene the things which concerne their peace, Luke 19.42. And therefore either they live in a house continually dropping worse then a contentious woman can drop, I meane an evill conscience; or else embrace a rotten league and truce for a time, which the Lord one day shall breake and disanull, as Esay 28. and let Hell loose upon them when they shall not resist. Oh! The Lord Jesus having done nothing for them,

Lo,

Lo, all is to doe ſtill, and they take no thought but wallow in their luſts, fulfill their meaſure to the full, and ſuffer their wound to feſter and ranckle, adding drunkenneſſe to thirſt. So long as they may have Iehorams peace, they regard not how they hatch the abominations of Iezabel: let them have their willes, eaſe, pleaſure, wel-fare and outward contents, ſo that their life may ſlide away in Pompe and paſtime; let them alone for peace, they can force that upon themſelves by holding out conſcience at ſtaves end. But Oh! yee wretches, yee heape up wrath againſt the day of it, and rake up that fire in aſhes, which one day wil breake out and conſume yee. If you could ſo ſleepe that you could make your damnation ſleepe alſo, it were well: but that ſleepes not; 2 Pet 2. And therefore tremble all yee that ſoder up a rotten peace in ſtead of a ſound one. Tell your ſoules in ſecret, God will avenge the quarrell of his Covenant upon you, for your wilfull rejecting his peace, and living at enmity with him. If he ſet not the cattle yee keepe, the meate yee eate, and the Tiles that hang over your heads, againſt you: that's nothing: he ſmites with an heart of revenge, and is the Lord of Hoaſts, to ſet all the Creatures in battle array to conſume you. But if you ſcape the Beare, a Lyon ſhall meete you; if yee live an hundred yeares and be filled with Gods Treaſures heere, yet it ſhall not goe well with you at the laſt: even in your going away like a Bird, going to the pit, ſinging the bitterneſſe of death away, ſuddenly your peace ſhall bee turned into deſolation: and the Lord ſhall laugh at your deſtruction. Therefore if there be any ſparkle of grace in you, doe as Habakukk did, cap. 3. When I heard thy voyce O Lord, my lips quivered, and my belly trembled, rottenneſſe entred into my bones, that I might have peace in the day of trouble.

Vſe 2.

Secondly, let all that heare this, behold the wonderfull priviledge of a believer, and admire it, yea, ſeeke to have it their portion: This is the firſt ſtep to all other benefits; no peace, no joy, no liberty, no adoption, nothing at all. Its the firſt ripe fruite of the Paradiſe of God, equalling the fruite of the Tree of life. Doſt thou looke upon a believer? Thou ſeeſt a pretious object, a ſonne of Peace. He carries that within his boſome, which coſt the Sonne of God his heart blood, which farre exceedes all Gold and Pearles; For why? he hath Peace within: he is at league with all feares, and in the Suburbes of all prosperity. He hath peace with the very Stones of his field, and may visite his habitation with joy: his life, health, wife, children, wel-fare, and estate, are all at league with him, they are his, and he is Christs: he doth not behold these as the wicked doe, treasured up for others, but their owne, given them in love. Nay more, when lusts and corruptions rise up in their soules, or be injected by Satan, to egge them away: Loe, they feele somewhat within them sweete and precious that makes the image of the other despised; so that they say, Away base companions! Yee have fought long in my members, Iam. 4. 1. and wasted my peace. I will not buy you at so deare a rate as sorrow and repentance, nor forfeit my peace for all the fruit I have got by you, which is shame and death. That Peace of God which passeth understanding, shall so rule me, that I will renounce you all ere I loose one dram of my Peace. Bring mee such peace as Christ hath brought mee by forgivenesse, and then I will say somewhat to you. But till then, farewell, for ever. Nay, yet more, this peace followes them in affliction; when the Lord semes to have a controversy with them, and to write bitter things against them, in their married estate, children, health, name, calling, successes, in their Ministers, neighbours, and best friends, (for this World is full of Time-servers) even then they have peace to stand by them, and as Esay saith, 27.4. They have already taken hold of peace and had peace: that is, held it in their streights. As one said, I will beare my paine patiently, because I know the hardest, and that I shall never feele the paine of the wicked. Therefore I should not feare if I were in the vale of death; for thy Rod and Staffe doe comfort mee. If now my peace were to make, it were woefull with mee. But I blesse God, I am now in peace and enjoy the fruit of it. Nay, lastly this Peace is joyned with a Complacence and joy of heart, telling the soule its happy; and therefore cannot lye hid in the soule idlely, but as leaven which seasons and savours the lumpe: So doth this affect the heart with a liking and joy in her wel-fare. No foole is so tickled with his Paradise, as this soule is really joyed in this benefit. All ye that would have your teeth water after these dainties, behold them and be in love with them, to desire them your own portion.

Use 3. Lastly, let all such as have got this peace, prayse God and keepe keepe it. Pray yee with the Apostle : The Peace of God rule our hearts and mindes : Lord establish our feete with this Preparation of the Gospell, and let it be as the Souldiers shooes of Brasse, enabling us to walke upon the Pikes safely. Oh! Buy this jewell, but sell it not. Beware yee grow not to slight it. Nourish it in your soules, first, by abhorring all sinnes that waste the Conscience and other spirituall secret filth, which might spring up as a bitter roote to defile their sweete peace. Poyson not this wel-spring of life from whence all the issues of life or death proceede. Ensue peace, if we desire holinesse, Heb. 12. Take heed of any secret closing with sinne, upon any false colours, dispensations, and distinctions in a nibbling kinde, and dallying with some degrees, when we dare not attempt greater; for when once our peace staggers, shortly it will proove defiled. Keepe it therefore as a tender Jewell, entire sound and honest, and so wee shall finde it. Even as the tender eye-sight, if it bee lasht never so little, nay, if it have but a moate fall into it, is troubled straightway : so will our peace be. Therefore preserve it from the daily soyle of appearances, of lawfull liberties from the encroaching of ease, worldlinesse, slightnesse, formality, and the like. Renuing it often by Faith in the covenant of Pardon, and renuing our owne covenant, that by daily and oft reckoning we may long keepe him our friend, who hath given us our peace, as the pledge thereof. And this be said of the fourth benefit. Phil 4.

Q. What is the fifth benefit?

A. The fifth is Reconciliation, contrary to the blemish of Enmity with God, and God with us: bringing us into amity and favour with him againe. Ephe. 1. 5. Paul calles it our acceptation and belovednesse with God. Finding of mercy with God is the ground of finding favour in his sight. Then wee returne to our former esteeme and beauty in the Eyes of God, we stand before him as favorites, finde accesse to him, going in and out with wel-pleasing, Col. 1. all former treachery being forgotten. And this addeth yet a further weight to the former benefit. Peace in not perishing is a blessing, yet admission to former royalties and dignity is more. Princes oft pardon their subjects, as David did Absolon, granting them their lives for a prey, when yet they keepe them farre off their presence, and suffer them not to returne to their places; The fifth Benefit is, reconciliation. What it is? Eph. 1, 5.

nor to enjoy their favours: but the Lord having as great power to purge the heart of a traitor, as to pardon the offence, admits every justified person to be his friend, cloathing him with the Robe of righteousnesse, and Hos. 14. 2. calling her beloved, which was not beloved.

Hos. 1 4. 2.

Q. Seeing it is profitable to understand the due bounds of each benefits, both for cleere conceiving the Scriptures, and for fuller comfort; shew more fully, what this benefit is, and in what it consists?

A. As I conceive, three points will include the chiefe substance of this doctrine. First if we shall enquire, wherein the nature of this benefit stands. Secondly, shew how God conferres it upon the soule. Thirdly, what use may be made of it. For the first, The benefit of reconciliation offered by Christ, is the firme, solid agreement and friendship of the soule with the Lord of Heaven, who before was our deadly adversary. The soule which was before an enemy to God, and by him denounced, pursued, and outlawed, cut off from the liberty and protection of a subject: is now by this meane, restored againe to love and amity againe, as if never any Traytor before. Its now become the Lords Hephziba, his delightfull one, amiable one, his favorite and friend in most inward manner: yea received into deerest account and acceptance. For the opening whereof, survey a little these few branches. First from hence, issueth a Covenant of God made with the soule, and of the soule with him. Deere friends breake into leagues and sweare brother-hood: Surely the Lords loves his with his heart, as his owne soule: his covenant with them is most firme and everlasting, a covenant of salt. For its established in the blood of the covenant, which to day, yesterday, and for ever holds it firme and sure. By vertue of this covenant hee is not ashamed of us, but vouchsafeth us to be his. Deut. 26. 17, 18, 19. The Lord hath avouched thee this day to bee his peculiar people, as hee hath promised thee, &c. A sweete Text: as the Lord disclaymed and disavowed us in Adam: so by the reconciliation of the second Adam hee vouchsafeth and acknowledgeth us to be his. And hence are all the names and titles in Scripture of deerenesse and peculiarnesse, of belovednesse, of faire ones, Doves, undefiled, such as in whose love the King can delight, his Ammi and Ruhama, his jewells and secret pretious ones, and the like.

Mal. 3. 2.

Secondly,

Secondly, hence our behaviour and course, becomes acceptable, as Abels Sacrifice for his persons sake, was accepted: so that in all our service and Allegiance we are wel-pleasing through him in whom first God was wel-pleased. And that not in an act or two of speciall nature, but in all our course, in our walking in and out, with him, as a favourite with his Prince. Yea, hee loves us not the worse for our blemishes, but covers them, and lookes upon us as his, upon his owne gifts, not our shame, saying: Thou art blacke yet comely. So that he can content himselfe in us, when yet our infirmities are many and great, as a lover who cannot espy any indecent thing in the face, gestures, speech, or carriage of her whom he loveth. 2. Heb. 11. 4.

Thirdly, hence also flow the most excellent favours and graces of his Spirit conferred upon us, that he might the more take Pleasure in us, as a Bride-groome doth in his bride and spouse whom he hath adorned. Hence are those Abiliments of the Ring, the Shooes, the Robe, the fat calfe brought out for the reconciled Prodigall: Hence those Pearles wherewith the Lord enriches his marryed Bride, Hos. 2. 19. I will betroth thee to me in righteousnesse, judgement, loving-kindnesse and mercy. These are the jewels of highest price which the Lords treasure can afford, humblenesse, meekenesse, the cleane linnen of innocency, pureness, uprightnesse, love, tenderness; contrary to her filthy ragges, which he takes from her, and all that he might joy in her. Nay I might say, That Reconciliation is the true ground of a Church it selfe, and a body of the Saints, at least of the beauty of a Church: if union be the ground, yet reconciliation is that which affords lustre and beauty to it. 3.

Fourthly, the Al-sufficiency of God as a Fountaine is set open by this Sluce of reconciliation. For hereby the Lord can beteame the soule all support and all that is needfull for this and a better life. As we see inward friends will strippe themselves, ere they will let one another want. And this Al-sufficiency reacheth to soule and body. All things are yours, as you are Christs, and Christ Gods. We see Princes delight in casting royall favours upon favorites: nothing falles beside them. Hence are the boones of all Spirituall prerogatives of the Saints, of all the Ordinances of God bestowed upon his Church, Paul, Apollo, Cephas, all gifts and all administrations are cast upon them to serve for their good: preaching and all her efficacy, Sacra- 4.

ments and all their ſealing power, prayer, Communion of Saints and the like, yea the Secrets of his will, hid to others. Hence alſo are all earthly bleſſings which the good will of him who dwelt in the buſh can confer: All are theirs in poſſeſſion or right, and made pure unto them: Marriage with her bleſſing is theirs, credit, love, eſteeme, welfare, and riches, long life and good dayes, their dwellings, poſterity, and the like: They may ſay, They are all mine; given me of God. Nay although theſe are Common favours, yet even in theſe they taſte a Peculiarneſſe. The ungodly finde all bleſſings to bee common: the Godly taſte a peculiarneſſe in the commoneſt. Their ſleepe is ſweete to them: their health is precious, and they can viſite their houſe with joy.

5 Fifthly, the enmity of the whole frame is reduced to an amity with them; there is a league made with heaven, earth and hell, that nothing ſhall hurt them. Heaven ſhall not be as braſſe, nor the earth as Iron. The Beaſtes of the field ſhall be at league, enemies ſhall turne friends, becauſe their wayes pleaſe God. Rom. 8. 36. Diſeaſes, plagues, famines, death, ſhall not hurt them. No affliction ſhall ſting them as a fiery dart, but as ſent in love and from very faithfullneſſe for good, Pſalme 119. I had almoſt forgot that in Hoſ. 2. the end. I will heare the Heavens, and they ſhall heare the earth. And the earth ſhall heare the corne, and the wine, and the oyle, and they ſhall heare Iezreel. Moſt excellent is that to this purpoſe, Col. 1. 20. That Chriſt hath brought all ſhattered peeces of the world together againe into one head: glory to God, good will towards men, and peace on earth: reconciliation reaches to theſe.

6 Sixtly, it reſtores us to our blood, (not onely to our dignity in Perſon, but) in our poſterity: That they are not eſteemed as the brood of Serpents: that the Lord beholds them not in our taynt, but as reſtored from their Treaſon, through this bleſſed Amity of Reconciliation: and ſo received into Covenant, and baptized into the hope of true members of the Church.

7 Seventhly, hence iſſueth the gift of perſeverance, to be endued with a loyall ſpirit, and with faithfullneſſe; never to depart from the feare of God: to have a priviledge which Adam wanted, that is, That our weake and mutable wills be determined to a purpoſe of conſtant cleaving to God; and to have that that apostacy, fickleneſſe, wearineſſe, hypocriſie, trechery and enmitie removed from them. As I ſaid before, no favorites ſave Gods can bee cleanſed from a Traytors heart by all the favours of their Prince. Th s holy inſtinct of fidelity is put into them, to kiſſe the Sonne.

Eighthly, hence iſſueth a ſweet Reflexe of this amity of the Lord with the Soule, a very pledge of that felicity in Heaven, which ſhall fill the glorified ſoule in the ſight of God: Faith (I ſay) preſents a privitie and conſciouſneſſe of this holy agreement with God, with unſpeakable ſecurity of heart and ſoule; which none can utter, ſave they that feele it. To know our ſelves to be beloved, to bee ſaluted as Mary was, by the name of one that found favour: yea, 1 Corinthians 8. To have the Spirit of this reconciliation put into us, to underſtand the good things which God hath given his friends (even here, ere they come home to him) I ſay, to know our feet to be ſet in a large place; and that no enemy ſhall ever ſo ſcrew himſelfe into our Prince, as to looſen us from him, or to ſeparate us from his love? Oh how great things are theſe? The happineſſe of Princes Favorites is fetled upon the fickle conceit of mans opinion, or (at beſt) ends with the breath of his noſtrils. Nay, the leaſt whiſper (oftimes) of a factious enemy, will come betweene Bark and Tree, and make it warpe: But our agreement is founded upon the blood of the covenant: the immortall love of an unchangeable God, who loves his better and better, and the longer, the ſurer. This for a draught of the firſt point of the three, viz. the nature of the benefit. 8. 9.

The ſecond is, The way how the Lord infers it, and that is (in a word) by the ſpirit of reconciliation in the word, working by the Embaſſadors of it. 2 Cor. 5. 20. By this Spirit the Lord diſcovers and preſents a light to the ſoule in the right colours, (and in the glaſſe of the Law) of her inbred and naturall contrariety to God and treacherous enmity of ſpirit: ſuch and ſo deepe, as doth perpetually fight againſt him, yea reject the covenant of amity offered by him. He convinces her of this villany, and that it is that ſeed of the Serpent, who having hurt God, hated him: and this is infuſed into our nature, mine and thine: This fire of hell hath fired the courſe of nature: and cauſed our ſpirit which at firſt aimed at amity, now to luſt after envie, as St James ſaith. It enmith all the ſeed of Adam, like ſo many rebels, and ſa- 2 Generall point. Step 1.

vages, to riſe up in armes Gyant-like, as ſworne foes of God, and his will, worſhip, ſervice, Sacraments, Servants, Sabbaths, and all that is a kin thereto, or that goes with a face of honeſty. As in the North, thoſe that are at deadly feud with a man, are all conjured againſt his whole Tribe. And although each Toade ſpits not like venome, yet the beſt are no better. Nay this venome cauſeth the ſoule to warpe from the Lord even in his favours: and (like a cankered Papiſt) to loathe him for doing us good; as the Jewes did Chriſt for his good workes: in the midſt of mercy, Iudas-like to betray him and his: as a Jeſuite will doe his Liege Prince for preferring him. This is old Adams race, like himſelfe, who durſt not truſt God, nor would give him a good word in Paradiſe, but banded with Satan like a lewd ſonne, who ſcorning his father and kindred, playes the degenerate impe, and joyes in none more than ſuch as hee knowes his father abhorres, baſe villanous companions: As Eſau would fret Iſaac by marrying the daughters of Heth. Nay further, it ſuſpects the Lord in his kindeſt offers, and promiſes: It cannot think he meanes as he ſpeakes: it muſes as it ſelfe uſes, and judgeth him by her ſelfe. It chuſes rather to go to Hell by diſtruſting of God; rather than by ſealing to his truth, to be happy, and ſo makes God a lyar. No condition of peace will prevaile with rebels. This fire of enmity will flame out betweene husband and wife, brother and ſiſter, father and childe, if one abide naturall, and the other be reconciled: And as an enemy ſeeks to damnifie his enemy what he can and ſpares not: ſo do we damnifie God in whatſoever is beſt and deereſt: in his beſt attributes, power, providence, mercy, juſtice; beſt ordinances, Sabbath, preaching, prayer, Sacraments: beſt jewels, his Miniſters and children: beſt benefits, Chriſt and his promiſe; much more in marriage, health, wealth, and life: all are ſworne enemies to him, all powers and members, all thoughts, affections, all the courſe of life, fights againſt him. And as wee fight againſt the Lord, ſo he fights againſt us: ſets himſelfe to be contrary to us as we are to him; never linnes revenging the quarrell of his covenant, and plaguing us with all adverſity, Lev. 26. till he have worried us, and tryed whether he or we are ſtronger: ſo that both conſcience, ſoule, and body, marriage, wealth, poſterity feele his enmity, that by ſtrong hand hee may weary us in our treachery. If by this meanes he can prevaile, to cauſe us to lay this our eſtate to heart, to tremble to thinke that ſtill wee should live, (the Lord sparing to tumble us to Hell all at once) or to consume us by his Armies, (all at command to rout his enemies) yea calling for us to slay us before his face; if this will humble and crack our Traytors spirit, his law hath done her part.

Secondly, he discovers himselfe to such a soule, that he hath afforded to her a price of reconciliation, even the blood of the Covenant: not onely to compound and mitigate some extremities of enmity, but even to abolish it all, and nayle it to his Crosse. This ransome satisfies justice for all the damages and affronts given to Gods Majestie. This breaks downe the wall of separation, and cancels the Records of Heaven, wherein all our rebellions were written: and all those curses which God denounces against such, that perfect agreement might bee made. Not raking the dunghill of our corruption, to pick out inditements: but cutting off all quarrels, and establishing a Law of forgetting them, and covenant of amity for ever with the soule. Step 2.

Thirdly, if this prevaile, to breake, and shew to the soule the bottomelesse love which lay hid in the bosome of God, who was in Christ, and is in the Spirit and word of Christ, reconciling the world to himselfe: if I say, this mercy can break a traitors heart, to see the gulfe of gall and bitternesse in which it lay plunged: if it gugge the soule to think how long she pierced those sides, and stood out desperately against those hands of mercy, angring it to the uttermost, if it could discourage the same: if lastly this guilt cause the soule to give up her weapons, to become friends by contrary, and returne, then the Lord hath what hee would of a Trayter. Step 3.

Fourthly, the Spirit of Reconciliation fastens the offer of being reconciled to God, upon this poore soule by the instrument of faith, the best make-peace that ever was; which faith over-powers the enmity of the soule by the excesse of amity, and mercy in God: and (as it were) compels it to be reconciled: She apprehendeth so much compassion in the bosome of God, as to drown all enmity therein as in the bottome of the sea. And so to kisse the Sonne, sweare allegeance, and come in. This I have said of the way to attaine this benefit of reconciliation: somewhat the more largely, that by this, other benefits may be conceived, both by Ministers in their manner of handling, and by private Christians in the savour of applying these priviledges. Which if they Step 4.

were wisely discerned, great light would appear, not onely in the offer of Christ, but even in all the New Testament, which runnes still upon one or other of these.

3 Generall. Use. 1. The third thing is the Use of the doctrine. 1. Terror to all unreconciled ones. Oh! ye are out of favour with God. Is there not enough in this to scare ye? Tell a Favorite whose life rests in the Princes favour, that his Prince is out with him, and his breath is stopt, ye choak him! what a plight was Haman in, when his face was covered? Tell me, if Gods favour be as life, what is his enmity? If a Kings wrath, nay, a Lions roaring bee so deadly, what is the Lords? Who shall shroud thee from him? All creatures are his sworne servants, and all places are present to him, Heaven, Earth, depths, hell, thou canst go no whither to avoide him. Come in therefore and be reconciled.

Use 2. Secondly, this is instruction to teach all sorts the excellency of this priviledge. No other amity is like. Onely in this, and by it, other amity is blessed: But all other is but dung to it. As some one sweet moneth in the yeere puts downe all the rest for a peculiar pleasantnesse: so doth this amity staine all others, for the contentfulnesse of it. Princes may cause quarrelling subjects to shake hands with each other: but they cannot pluck enmity out of their brests. But the Lord by his covenant is able to settle the heart for ever in agreement with himselfe, never to breake off. All secret rootes and rindes of discord are taken away, and the Lord and the soule are cordially one: wee have a Proverbe, The falling out of lovers is a renewing of love. Especially here. Adam and the Lord fell out, and their enmity was as the Barres of a Pallace. But loe, by this reconciliation, they become neerer, than ever. This Covenant is eternall as the Rainebow. It walkes without feare of any Premunire, or Outlary from God, whersoever it goe. Yea, his very afflictions shall bee no markes of his wrath. For all whom God loveth, hee chastens. Crosses and covenants do not interfeere. But even then, a soule may say, Thy Covenant is sure mercy O Lord: thou hast afflicted mee in very faithfulnesse, Psal. 119. If I sinne, thou wilt chasten me with the rods of men: but thy loving kindnesse, thou wilt never remove. Thy league is not as the league of sworne brethren in evill, as Simeon and Levi: but pure: therefore firme. Oh! let this honourable priviledge draw all to partake it!

Thirdly,

Thirdly, this ſerves to exhort all to prize and eſteeme the fruit of this priviledge, which is the grace and favour of the high God of Heaven and Earth: in whoſe love is life; whoſe anger is the Meſſenger of death. As he ſaith of ſilver, viz. That it anſwers all; ſo ſay I of this; its the price of all bleſſings, graces, priviledges beſides. When the Miniſtery of the Word preſents the hearer with all the promiſes of God, all the priviledges of grace, all the ſufficiency of God to his: what's the queſtion but this, Have I any right unto them, are they mine? Yes, if thou art the Lords, reconciled unto him, and brought into his favour; elſe they are none of thine: But as Iob ſaith, although thou treaſure them up, yet the righteous ſhall divide the booty. So that this is all in all, firſt get the fruit of Reconciliation, and then all things both in Heaven and Earth are thine: on Earth peace, in Heaven acceptance, good will toward men: yea, a true league with death and all miſery, no wrath, ill conſcience, no ill newes, no floods of great waters ſhall come neere thee: Chriſt, Coloſ 1. hath reconciled all for thee, and made even the ſtones of the ſtreet at peace with thee. Hence in the firſt place the Apoſtle wiſhes grace, mercy, and peace to all he writes to, and ſo bids them farewell, grace be with thy ſpirit, Amen; the Alpha and Omega of all. The ſweetner of each bleſſing, the ſupplyer of each want, the ſanctifier of each affliction. If the Lord favour us, (ſaith Caleb, Numb. 14. 5.) we ſhall overcome thoſe Gyants, and poſſeſſe this good Land. In that curſed old world, yet Noah did well, and only he: why? Becauſe Noah found favour with God. Moſes praying for all proſperity for Ioſeph, Deut. 32. premiſeth this, the good will of him that dwelt in the Buſh bee upon his head; and what then? The bleſſings of the Hils and Valleys, the influence of the Sunne, Moone, and all the Hoaſt of Heaven ſhall follow: all Rom. 8. 32. even ſinne it ſelfe, oppoſition of the malicious. Croſſes ſhall turne to the beſt to them that love God, and are loved of him. Therefore let this favour of God be chiefe with thee. All men ſeeke the face of the Prince, but ſeek thou the favour of God, and therein let thy treaſure be. All Nations walke in the ſtrength of their gods, and we will walke in the ſtrength of ours, even in his light and favour. Shew it unto us O Lord, and we ſhall be ſafe. And beſides, let it exhort us to nouriſh this favour of God daily: that it may abide in us, yeſterday, to day, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. If the Lord ſhall withdraw it never ſo little, in the preſence of his Spirit: the peace of the conſcience: Oh, let it bee unto us as death, and let us never lin hearkning, till we have heard the Lord ſpeak peace, that wee may no more returne to folly. Beware of any ſuch ſpirituall or morall rebellions, as threaten the eclipſe of this favour; but if we have fallen, lye not ſtill, let not the Sunne go downe upon our ſinne, or the anger of God, but recover favour, agree with thine adverſary, while he is in the way: and let thy ſoule abide in his love, and the peace of God, which paſſeth underſtanding ſhall rule and keep thy heart in this love, make thee loth to forgoe it, and cauſe thee in the comfort of it, to go on with an enlarged heart in all doing and ſuffering of the will of God, with all cheereſulneſſe, fruitfulneſſe, long-ſuffering, and joyfulneſſe; which elſe will be a meere yoke and burden, and not to be endured: but by this, all meanes will be ſavoury, all duties welcome, and all graces proſperous.

Uſe 4. Fourthly, let it be an uſe of Triall to us, whether we be reconciled. If we are not, we are curſed. If we are: then this Covenant hath drawne from us, an Oath and Covenant with God againe: as the ſingular amity of David and Ionathan begat a covenant and a renewing of it with an oath of God. Oh! ſuch a ſoule will ſweare to keepe Gods righteous judgements; and to walk in all well-pleaſing. This is the laſt marke of all: As our Saviour ſaith, You are my friends, Iohn 15.14. if you do whatſoever I command you. But more than this; friends have ſhed their blood for each other; (ſuch is the power of a ſinfull league) yea for their friends friend. So ſhould we do, even for our brethren. But alas! are we at ſuch coſt for God? Are wee Martyrs or Confeſſors for him? When David heard Ionathan was ſlaine upon Gilboa, he curſed it! Hee mourned for him! we do not ſo much for God, when he is wounded by ſwearers, enemies, and perſecutors of his truth! Alas! we hold a Covenant without the power of it! When David could do Ionathan no good, he enquired for any of his race: and having found a childe of his, a lame Creeple, Mephiboſheth, how he made of him! How few make good that amity of God in the Saints, lame, deſtitute, and forſaken in the world, yet the off-ſpring of God?

Uſe 5. Fifthly, improve this benefit; Seeing the Lord will have us his beloveds and crowne us with ſuch favours, let us not decline them: its a ſafer ambition then Hamans was, for a beleever to ſay, Whom ſhould the King rather honour than mee? Not for thy worth, worth, but for his own favour. Do as Favourites do with Princes. They chuſe favour above all Boones, becauſe its a Fountaine of all. Let not the parcels draw away thine heart from the Fountaine. Let not wealth, and wife, and lands, blemiſh the worth of grace, humbleneſſe, meekneſſe, and the like: nor let all diminiſh the worth of God himſelfe, whence all come. Say as David, Many ask who will ſhew us any good; But Lord ſhew us thy countenance, and for theſe we will take no thought. Seek the face of Iacob, and all ſhall proſper. Pſal. 4.

Uſe 6. Laſtly, abhorre all baſe roots of bitterneſſe riſing up to defile this amity, and weaken it. Firſt abhorre all enmity of unbeliefe; ſuſpition of God, diſtruſt of his promiſes, as if he meant nothing leſſe. This is the deepeſt villany: Never lin till thy large heart can better anſwer the Lord, than Iehonadab anſwered Iehu's queſtion, Is thy heart as mine? Yea doubtleſſe. Make uſe of all ordinances, eſpecially the Supper of Chriſt (the ſymbole of this amity) to ſeale it up to thy ſoule: beteame him ſo much faith, as to abhorre to revive that enmity which Chriſt hath ſlaine and nayled to his Croſſe. And ſecondly take heed of all falſehood in thy Covenant with God. If thou bee looſe to him and yet expectſt him to be cloſe with thee, thou wilt be deceived: He will avenge the quarrell of it. A friend would not hurt his friends friend. Much leſſe himſelfe. Princes include all their allyes in their leagues: ſhutting out their enemies. Shouldſt thou hate him that loveth God? How much leſſe ſhouldſt thou diſhonour God himſelfe? When Abſolom ſaw Huſhai, he asked, Is this thy love to thy friend, to betray him? Beware the Lord have not this advantage againſt thee. And ſo much for the benefit of Reconciliation.

Q. Proceed to the ſixth benefit.

A. That is Adoption: anſwering to her contrary, miſery through ſin, to wit baſtardy, and loſſe of the right and bleſſing of Children. Adam was the Sonne of God by Creation, Luke 3. ult. By his fall he loſt it; is become a Baſtard, ſtript himſelfe of his royalties, birth-right, and inheritance; the dignity of the firſt borne, dominion and Lordſhip of the Creatures, title to Paradiſe and immortality. Adoption is the enfranchiſement of the ſoule into her former eſtate of Sonneſhip againe, being freed from the ſpirit of bondage and ſlaviſh feare, Gal. 4. 6. For as a man freely, and without deſert, takes one that is not his owne childe, to be- The ſixth benefit, Adoption, What?

come his owne, changing his name, adopting him into his Family, and setling that inheritance upon him, which belonged to one descended from his loynes: so doth the Lord here, he restores a sinner to former livelyhood, Sonneship, Lordship, and coheiresship, with Christ the Heire of all. And this benefit aptly followes the former. For having received us to favour, he doth as a Prince (reconciled to a Traytourous son) restore him to the right of his Crowne: so doth the Lord for all his; not only restoring them to the old, but to a farre better than they lost: even the right of a Saint in light.

Q. Open this priviledge of Adoption a little.

The opening of it. 3 Things 1 Generall.

A. If we observe three things, we shall the better understand it. 1. What we had and lost in Adam. 2. What wee recover and hold in Christ. 3. What use we should make of them both. And for the first, although we were no adopted sons in Adam (for what needed it?) yet we were sons by creation, as Adam, Luc. 3. is called the Son of God, being inspired with the breath of God, and framed in body according to his own Image: we bare the similitude of God about us in both, (see Article 1. of the 1 Part) even as a son resembles the father, so did wee of the Lord Almighty: resembling our originall in all light and holinesse. We carried both in mind, will, affection, senses, body, gesture, authority and presence, the glory of our Father about us: were to God most accepted in our walking before him; to the Creatures most honorable and awfull, as Gods Deputies: in the sight of the Angels most excellent; and in our selves most happy, by the reflex and view of our own integrity of sonship: so that we had whatsoever an earthly vessell could contain. Being thus heirs of al and sons of immortality, planted in a Paradise of exquisite perfection: even in the habitation of our glory; when we were full of it, we prostituted our selves willingly to transgresse the bounds of children and sonnes, and the law of our Creation: so that we must either be better than sons, and equall with God, or else nothing: and so by yeelding to the Devill, we fell from God, ate the forbidden fruit: tainted not our spirits only and beings, but our blood also and became most degenerate Bastards, and slaves in our condition, not having one dram left in us of that sonnelike nature, temper and integrity which we had: in steed of bearing the Image of Heaven, we beare the image of earth, stript of our honour, and put downe to the lowest forme of baseneſſe, and made meere shaddowes dowes of what we had beene: forfeited all our royalties, not only of inward content, esteeme, peace and beholding the Face of God as children: but also of outward Title to the earth and to Paradise, dominion of creatures, brother-hood with Angels: And being thrust out of the garden, we became drudges of the Earth, slaves to Satan, and lived in continuall feare of death and wrath: only having a poore hole and corner of the Earth to confine us as prisoners, and to hide our heads in.

Q. And what recover we in Christ?

A. He being God by nature, the eternall word, and also flesh by the power of the holy Ghost, did by his bloody satisfaction over entreate our Father pacifie his justice, and washed off our rebellion and guilt with the curse thereof from us; That so we might passe into the former priviledge of Son-ship, and what ever honour of grace appertained thereto: and that by adoption. For as a rich Prince, having lost his son, takes another child, not his own, and strips him of his name and family, and causes him to take his own name upon him, and to become his own, and gives him right to all he hath, and makes him his heire; So doth the Lord take us poore lost bastards; strips us of our name, and takes us into his flock, arrayes us with his owne robe, sets us at his own table, causes us to forget our Fathers house and all the baseneſſe thereof; restores us to the right of sons of the Almighty, begat of his own seede and spirit, gives us the liberty of sonnes, the title to all his Creatures with pureneſſe; without feare of ever being cast out any more: till we come to possesse Heaven with himselfe for ever. Indeed there is difference between Gods Adoption & mans. For man adopts no child, if he have one of his own; but the Lord having a most beloved Sonne of his, yet adopts us to be coheires. A man adopts some such as may in some kind content him: But the Lord adopts Bastards: shewing that he lookes not at any thing in us, but at what his grace can beteame us. A man adopts to an earthly estate of better quality than before: But the Lord adopts to a better estate in nature, even from Earth to Heaven, to a better than Adams lost. A man adopts to an inheritance, which if it were divided, were lesse; The Lord to such an one as which cannot be lessened by multitude of heires. A man adopts to an estate which may leave the heire as bare of it as it found him; The Lord to an estate unchangeable, which can never be lost as Adams was, but is eternall and undefeatable. these our priviledge of adoption exceeds our Creation; and now
Iam. 1. 17. we become better sonnes than ever, as Iob after his recovery greater than before; even the first fruits of his creatures, and the birthright of them.

Object. Q. But, alas! it seemes farre otherwise! For, who are baser than such?

Answer. A. Its the state of Heaven which directly answers Paradise, Therefore 1 Iohn 3. 2. It cannot appeare heere what wee are borne to. Heere we are as heires under age, and in our minority: we seeme therefore little to differ from servants, yea from Abjects; wondering often with our selves, yea doubting, how God should meane us such excellency hereafter, and yet endure that we should be so base the whilest! We are as the Doves among the Pots, sullyed with the colour of corruption, smeared with the baseneſſe of affliction, tanned by the Sunne of persecution; made the scorne of men, and spectacle of Angells; yea we serve for meere Tennis-balls for base bastards to toſſe up and downe; But yet we are even heere, Iacobs of God, having the birth-right; Iacobs seed was almost 500 yeare old ere they recovered the birth-right. In a word, this World is a totall eclipse of our Adoption, in respect of other mens esteeme; yet the seede of God for our Regeneration abides constantly, in us, as the Sonnship of Christ abode upon him even in all his abasement: and by this meanes it is with us in secret, far otherwise than the malignant World could imagine: If the Iewes could have known the Lord of life they would never have killed him: but our honour is purposely hidden from them, that our baseneſſe might conforme us heere to our head.

Gal. 4. 2.

3 Point. The Uſes follow. And first, it should teach us wisely to digeſt and carry that disproportion of our condition below in the meane time. Oh! what humblenes meeknes, meane opinion of our selves, selfedenial, (to subject our selves for a while to this state of conformity to our elder brother) should we seeke for? What Faith especially need we, firmely to cleave to the word of promiſe, which assures us that the Lord esteemes us as we are? And to abhorre to live by sence, in judging our selves to be base because we seeme so, and the World counts us so? Oh, what a deale of grace need we to repute and beare our selves with that freedome, cheerefulnes and joy, that beseemes such as are adopted sonnes and heires of God! How should we hugge and prize that lively hope, which makes us not ashamed, which suffers us not to be miserable in our own thoughts? Rom. 5. 5. 1 Cor. 15. 19. and makes us happy in the undoubted assurance of the adoption of sonnes! Whereby, in our greatest baseneſſe Gal 4. 4. we dare call our ſelves sonnes and daughters of the Lord Almighty, seeing God hath taught us to say so, 2 Cor. 6. last. 1. Joh. 3. 1, 2, 3. Gal. 4. 5. bearing the markes of Gods children in us, and the first fruits of light and holineſſe, going in and out before him, as confident we shall never be cast out againe: We may be chaſtiſed as sonnes, that we may live, Heb. 12. but never cast off. Let us therefore do so: and as a Princes heire travelling in a private habite, beares it well if he be meanely esteemed, because its his happineſſe to know what his hopes are: So let us compt this our hope and earnest of adoption, to be our chiefe jewell heere in the reproaches of the World.

ble at their condition, that they are baſtards & no sons, or daughters of the Almighty. Who is affected duly with this misery? To be taken drunke, or in a lie, how it diſquiets men! In the meane while to be baſtards, to be ſtript of Gods Image and qualities, to be cut off from the birth-right of the creatures, the preeminence & blood of a Sonne, to be cast out from all liberties and titles of a sonne, whom doth it trouble? As if a man should fret for being robbed of 20. shillings by the way: and in the meane time to be never troubled with the burning down of his house over his eares, and the looſing of his goods and estate by fire, yea his children themſelves! Oh wofull ones! How dare ye venture to come to Gods house, jetting among his children? Durſt baſtards come into the Temple for many generations? Would they not have feared that God would have ſtruck them down right? And yet who feares any thing heere? Men boaſt themſelves that they are the sonnes of men, Anakims like their Ancetors, men of brave ſtomackes, as proud and rebellious as their parents: ſuch as Giant-like doe fight againſt Heaven, and walke according to the sway of their luſts! But to be the Sons of God, they regard not. If one noble man in a Country adopt a ſon, its the wonder of the Countrey: whereas an adopted ſon of God lies by as no body! Titles of honour, worſhip, learning, parentage, blood are all in all: But titles of adoption, true nobility, and grace, are of no value with men. The house of Auſtria goes for the only house of honour: The house of God is despised, who counts them truely noble who are the brethren of Christ, the naturall off-spring of God?

Oh! therefore howle and mourne all yee bastards for your degenerate condition! mourne each one apart, husband for himselfe and wife for hers, each for other, and both for their children, that the Image of God is defaced, and the Image of corrupt Adam set up in steed of it! Oh! how small joy should it be unto you, to see your children boast of their parentage, their inheritances and their hopes here, when they are cast out like bastards, not as Ipta from his brethren, but as Cain from the Lord? What did it boote him or will it boote these to goe and build them Cities, to while themselves with the rattles of false honours, contents and esteeme among men, when (like Reuben) their true dignity is gone? Oh! that the meditation hereof might once sink into such hearts, to thinke themselves such as God thinkes and knowes them; and not to judge themselves according to the false repute of men. Children in their play, and fooles upon the stage, make and act the persons and parts of Kings, Lords, Knights and Ladies; But is any so idle as to count them truly so? Or to thinke any to be honourable whom the King hath not made so. Even so, not whom men applaud for jolly ones, but whom God approoves, they are men; The rest are most base, vile and abject with God, when they seeme most glorious and brave in the world, and when God shall pull off their vizors, they shall appeare in their likenesse, wofull Cains and degenerate ones, having no portion with the sonnes of God, but the damned in Hell: except by this or the like warnings and terrors, they get out of this their woe betimes; Say to the Wormes, to the dust, ye are my sisters; Say to hell, thou art my portion; Pull down your stomackes, pranke not up your selves in other birds feathers: but confesse that beggery, nakednesse & ragges are the true armes of prodigalls and bastards: Humble your selves under this, and come in, and I will receive you (saith the Lord) to be sonnes and daughters to the Lord Almighty.

Use 3. And this is the Third use of it. If the Lord shall indeed prick your hearts for this (I speake now to great ones whom this point most touches) then let the promise of receiving you soke into your hearts. Consider on the other side, what I have sayd of Adoption and the prerogative thereof: doe as adopted children doe, doe, forsake your Fathers poore house, resigne your selves to him who gives you wealth and true honour, passe into his family, come to the Lords Herauld, the Lord Jesus God and man, the Son of God and man, the Mediator of adoption, and offer your selves, unto him, as your elder brother; beseech him to prefer ye to be sonnes and daughters, to sit at the right hand and left hand in his Kingdome: If he make ye sonnes ye are sonnes indeed, and bastards no more, feare it not, none shal ever cast ye in teeth with it. If God justify, who shall condemne? If he reconcile and restore you to your blood, your son-ship; If he vouchsafe yee restitucion to the inheritance of such as are sanctified by Faith in him, who shall defeate ye of it? Therefore come in, receive this offer, and God will be your God, yea your Father, ye shall walke in and out before him as his own with the confidence of sons, he shall guide you here till glory.

Lastly, this should exhort all Gods people that they deceive not themselves, in this great priviledge, for feare that they forfeit the comforts of it. Try it first, and then improove it: a true son and daughter of God partakes of the son-ship of Christ their head. The Angels worshipt Christ the Sonne, when he was brought into the World, and for his sake the Angels are Ministring Spirits for the good of us, and of ours. The Father acknowledged Christ saying, This day I have begotten thee; So doth God in him acknowledge thee, for his child, and himselfe thy Father: The Father made Christ the heire of all things, and all things which thy Father hath are thine, as thou art Christs. Christ was pittied and heard by the Father in that hee feared, and thy Father will be afflicted with thee in all thy afflictions. Christ was faithfull in all Gods House as a sonne, fulfilling all righteousnesse. If thou bee a sonne, what save thy faithfull feare and obedience should proove it? The Lord Jesus being the Lord of all, yet denied all; even to a pillow to leane his head on, and an hole to hide himselfe in. And thou (if a son) shalt and wilt deny thy selfe, and take up thy Crosse, and learne obedience by suffering, despise the World and compt all dung to winne his acceptance. Briefly, if a son; then art thou an Heire of God, and Coheire of Christ: What ever is wanting heere shall be supplyed in Heaven: and yet heere thou shalt partake all the good things of God, For why? Whom doth a Father provide for, but for his children? Whose is all that he hath, hath, save theirs? Againe, if a sonne, then thou knowest the way to the throne of grace, even to the Father, in the Mediation of Christ; and there canst with the spirit of a son grone at least unutterable desires to the Lord, that thou mightst be once free from bondage to this body of death, from unbeliefe, from an unsavory heart, from worldlinesse, from the error of the wicked and this sinfull World, and the like. Oh! With humble confidence thou wilt make known thy request to God, and that in secret, such as none but thy selfe can be privy to: and wilt improove this liberty, when strangers and slaves shall not dare to come neere. Much more I might ad. By these few try thy selfe; and if thou finde the Spirit of Adoption to bee a stranger, lin not till the Lord have created it: if he have done it, stand fast in this priviledge and maintaine it by thy awe and feare of thy Father, not least he should cast thee off againe, but because being once a sonne thou shalt never be dispossessed, either of thy right heere, or thine inheritance hereafter. Rely upon thy Father, beare thy selfe upon him, not to presume to offend him, or to try conclusions, what a Father can beare, but to feare him, to keepe thine heart in awe, childlike, tender to prise thy priviledge, and wonder that thousands should be left as bastards, and others cast out as Ismaels, and thou taken in as a son, and kept in the house not to be cast out. Blesse the Lord for this: and seeke no other base proppes, as if they could better thy priviledge, or adde to it; honor nothing so farre as to come into competition with a Father: Abraham hath forgot thee, but thou art our Father O Lord. Esay 63. Hold thy son-ship by Faith, that so, thou mayst hold withall the love of thy Father, and compt it a secret blessing, which no servant or stranger can partake or understand. In all thy base revolts, rest not in any of thy false amends by duty, till the thought of thy Father have recovered thee to thy former condition. Use him as a Father, and thinke not thou canst come too oft unto him in Prayer: learne to acquaint with him, and Iob. 22. be no stranger, walke in and out with a mixture of feare and confidence: for as he is a consuming fire; so yet he rejoyceth to get his childrens hearts rest on him: Consider what an unspeakable depth of love is in a Fathers heart? Ioab told David, that so Absolon had lived, he would not have cared, if himselfe and his had dyed, why? he was his child, and all his treachery could not put out love from him. If once thou be a child of this Father, thou mayst go to him for rescue against all enemies, Esay 63. 15. thy Name may be Elimelech, or Abimelec, my God, my Father is a King, he will be even with them that touch his annointed: Read Eph. 1. 18, 19. See there the great hope, and the inheritance which a sonne of this Father hath title to: What endeavours are so potent, which a Father respects not in a child? who shall ever separate a son from his Father? Could Satan come betweene God and Job? cap. 1. Children, Wives, Servants, Friends, Brethren, all carnall relations may fayle: this is everlasting. See Esay 63. 16. And so much for Adoption.

Q. What is the seventh benefit?

A. Redemption opposite to two things: first Thraldome and slavery to sinne, and so to all enemies, who by sinne strive to hold the soule under feare and bondage. Secondly, to the sting and dint of all such crosses as sinne hath brought into the world, as the tokens of Gods displeasure for it. Touching the first, redemption sets the soule at liberty from all that servitude and tyranny: it buyes out and restores the soule to the liberty of released and ransomed ones: makes it free onely to righteousnesse, and that for ever, bores the eare for God, and yet not to make the soule slavish, but a servant (being delivered from all enemies, yea, death it selfe, the last enemy,) to serve the Lord in righteousnesse and holinesse all dayes. From hence issues an heart enlarged to God, so fearing him, as fearing nothing else; not serving in the oldnesse of the letter, but the newnesse of the spirit: delivered from the Ordinances of Moses, the Traditions of Pharisees and Papists, the bonds imposed unjustly by bad men upon conscience. Hence secondly, floweth a right to the Protection and providence of God, and to his holy Hand over us and ours against the violence of outward enemies, or those crosses which threaten our lives, health, liberty, and wel-fare, begun in this life, ending at the Resurrection: and lastly to these two may be added freedome to Gods service, to finde it an easie yoke, and a light burden; yea, to compt it our happinesse to deny our own wils, because bodies and soules are bought with a price, that we should not be at our own, but at his will who deerely bought us. Q. This Priviledge having a large roome in the Scriptures, and serving for the explication thereof, open the same more fully?

and

Opening of it. 1 What Adam had.

A. The Lord made Adam a free and absolute Creature in point of command, that all should be put under his Feete, and he needed feare neither Creatures in Heaven, nor yet in Earth: The Obedience to the Creator being his perfect freedome, both within by the freedome of his secure and quiet conscience; and without, fearing no hurt by any thing. Now, because Adam being set in this blessed and uncontrolled liberty, chose to violate that charge of God (the keeping whereof was the pledge of this freedome) and enclined his free-will to the voluntary breach of that Law; it was just with God to lay this burden upon his whole nature (wherein he sinned:) as to take away this liberty from him, being a jewell too good for one that knew not the price of it) and to give him over to bondage both unto sinne, to be ruled by it, and by sinne, to be afrayd of God and of any goodnesse; to lye open to all feares and punishment through a guilty Conscience, continually binding him over thereto. That so he who would not be free when he might should be a slave when he would not: and that to those two enemies, Satan and sinne, whom he first yeelded to, in the working of his Ruine. To Satan first, because he was given over as a slave, that he might rule in the hearts of children of Disobedience and hale them to all Misery: because he being of all others the baseſt of Gods Creatures, yet was preferred to God the best good. To sinne, because having had the experience of a blessed liberty of heart by obeying: yet at the first entising, (even because he was weary of wel-fare as soone as he had it) he resigned it up to a base lust and carnall appetite: therefore it was meete he should be left to serve his lust and be a vassall to his own corruption, to the cheine of Pride, Atheisme, rebellion, profaneneſſe, concupiscence, the lust of the heart, of the eye, and of life.

What he lost.

Bondage to sinne and by sinne, whence.

How it is made ours.

Under this base bondage, lies each sonne of Adam, till Christ fetch him out: both he and his: even as, both a slave himselfe, and all his are his Masters: The will hath lost her freedome to all truely good: and is tyed to evill only and continually: The Conscience hath lost hers by guilt, and accuseth in stead of excusing, or else excuseth deceitfully, or else is senceleſſe of either. Sorrow begins at home by sinne, but ends abroad, broad, for by this meanes whatsoever feare or evill sinne hath incurred, that the Devill abuses to hold under the soule by: as the wrath of God, the pureneſſe and terrors of the Law, the one to tempt, the other to terrifie: the day of accompt and last judgement: the time of death which is the sentence in this life: eternall misery hereafter, besides many calamities here either felt or feared, from which though a sinner be actually safe, yet not secure of, but all the life long subject to bondage. By these Satan enslaves the soule. Doe but consider this bondage in respect of two lawes contrary to each other: The one the Law of God most holy, in each point pressing the soule to that obedience, which it is impossible for it to performe, nay rather by which its the more provoked to rebellion: The other the Law of sinne, which hath Dominion over the soule, pressing her continually to evill with delight: betweene these two what bondage is she in? But if the Law of God once graple with the Law of sinne, then comes another bondage, that is, horror and unquietneſſe of conscience convinced of her guilt; till the Lord turnes it to liberty. So that either bondage to sin or by sin is the estate of every sonne of Adam: only bondage by sin is used by the Lord as a step to deliver from bondage to sinne, if the Lord Jesus his Redemption be added to perfect it. Briefly then thus; Sinne hath set up a Court in the conscience of man. In this Court, the debt or crime impleaded is sinne; the Pleader and Informer is Satan. The rule of proceeding is the Law of Justice. The evidence-giver or witneſſe is Conscience; the Judge, the Lord, the penalties, death, and destruction. During the subsisting of this Court, in what a pickle is man? The strong man Satan by this house of conscience, holds this sinner bound and shut up under brasen barres, and bolts not to bee broke open by a mortall oppoſite, but rules and keeps all at peace and at his own pleasure.

Now marke, as wee see in Courts of men, Take away all Coppyholds and buy all free, and then Courts are of small value. Remove debts and pleas, and what should the Kings Bench come to? If the Court be downe, what should become of Sergeants, Writs, Arrests, Executions, Outlawryes, or Fines, and Forfeits? So it is here. The Lord Jesus begins with sin and guilt; he removes them: payes the price and Ransome of his blood to make a satisfaction for them to justice; and by this meanes, delivers the soule from both the guilt and dominion of sin. The chiefe thing being being gone, the reſt fall of themſelves; there is no place for pleading, for ſentence, for evidence, for puniſhment; in the fall of the Court, all fals which appertaines to it, at once; and the ſoule freed from the one, is freed from the other together, and fears no Baile, no ill conſcience, no devill, but beholds all as things diſabled, and cannot hurt. For the proofe of which, conſider ſome texts. Firſt for ſlavery to ſinne, reade Tit. 3.4,5. Serving divers luſts. So *Rom.*6. As ye have given up your members as weapons of unrighteouſneſſe to ſerve ſinne. Hence the Apoſtle, Rom. 7.1. ſaith, ſin is a Law in the members, as an husband is a law to his wife. And againe, yee were the ſervants to ſinne. Secondly. for ſlavery by ſinne, reade, *Rom.*7. Where Paul tels us; we are ſold under ſinne, and therefore thereby feare that God will puniſh, the Law will accuſe, hell will execute; wee feare that wee ſhall not beleeve or repent, wee thinke God an enemy, feare his wrath, and tremble at both Law and Goſpell as things too pure and too ſweet, rebelling and diſtruſting both at one and other. Now Chriſt hath redeemed us from ſinne, and therefore from all bondage thereto, and thereby.

Texts for our bondage.

Texts for our Redemption.

1. From ſin.

Saint Peter cleeres the former: Wee are redeemed not by Pearles, or Gold, but by the blood of Chriſt; and Paul, Epheſ. 1.7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſſe of our ſinnes; and *Rom.*3.26. Juſtified by the Redemption that is by Chriſt Jeſus. Hence ſo oft in the Epiſtles, the ſatisfaction of Chriſt is called a price, a ranſome, to buy out a thing which was ſold, and redeeme that which was forfeited and taken away. And the like Texts doe alſo prove redemption from all enemies. As from Satan, Luke 11. The ſtronger man enters, and bindes the ſtrong, and ſpoyles him, and divides his goods. And againe, The Prince of this world is caſt out. Further, the Lord Jeſus ſpoyled Principalities and Powers, and nayled them to his Croſſe. So for the Law, *Gal.*4.4. Made under the Law, (that is, to obey it, and ſatisfie for the curſe) that wee might have the adoption of ſonnes, by being redeemed from the Law. So for other bondage by the Law of Ceremony, *Epheſ.*2.15. Having aboliſht in his fleſh the enmity, even the Law of Commandements, in Ordinances, &c. So for death, *Heb.*2.14,15. That he might deſtroy him by death, who had the power of death (mark the phraſe how ſin gives up the keyes of all miſery to Satan.) And deliver them, who through the feare of death were ſubject to bondage. And ſo for wrath and and hell. 2 Thess. 1. ult. Even Iesus who hath delivered us from the wrath to come. So he is said to destroy the second death. So a- Hell.

gaine, Gal. 3. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law: sundry Texts might bee added; if my scope were not rather to presse the priviledge, than to prove the merit of it. Therefore in a word, marke a Text or two for that, viz. That hereby wee obtaine freedome. So saith Paul, We have not the spirit of bondage to feare, but the spirit of freedome, and of a sound minde. 2 Vntofreedome
So Gal. 5. 1. Stand fast in that liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free. So Rom. 7. 24. 25. Who shall deliver me from this body of death? I thank God through Iesus Christ. And our Saviour himselfe, Iohn 8. 36. If then the Sonne hath made you free, ye are free indeed. So Rom. 6. 16 18. Know ye not that his servants ye are whom ye obey? &c. Being free from sin, ye are servants to righteousnesse, So Luke 1. 74. That being delivered from our enemies, we might serve him without feare. Other places I forbeare. The conclusion of the doctrine is, That Redemption is a peculiar benefit, wherewith Christ is offered to the soule. Adde hereto our redemption from all spirituall penalties; for redemption looks at the freedome of the soule from the enthralling effect of sinne, together with the snaring and defiling power thereof, also from that wrath of God which ceazes upon the spirit of a sinner, by darknesse of minde, delusions, deadnesse of heart, dedolency, security, impenitency, and the like judgements. Besides the continuall feares of affliction and death, Heb. 2. of righteousnesse. Vnto righteousnesse.

Q. Well: Now what use make you of this doctrine?

A. The uses are many. First it is terror to all that lye still in this their estate of unregeneracy, in what degree soever it bee more or lesse: I say to all Papists, freewill-mongers, profane persons and hypocrites: who either compt this slavery to bee freedome, or at least live in it as if they were free men, and feare nothing. Can yee feast it out merrily when the sword hangs over your head by a bristle, ready to dart into you? Do not sinne and curse put the spirit of thrals into you! Oh! of what hardy mettall are ye made? Consider then what I shall say, and tremble. It is not in this spirituall bondage, as in the bodily and carnall. In bodily captivity all sorts are taken prisoners, and made bondmen, but yet there is some oddes in their misery. For some are noble slaves, who can redeeme themselves by ransome, and so go free: while the poorer sort abide slaves still for want of price. But here Vse 1.

(alas!) it is not ſo. All Satans and ſinnes ſlaves are alike, and none can redeeme themſelves from their bondage. Not that there are not here alſo all ſorts of men chained up in miſery; for there are Princes, Nobles, and Rich ones, learned ſlaves, witty ſlaves, ſubtill, as well as poore and ſilly: but in point of ranſome, one hath as much as another to deliver him, that is, juſt nothing. The Devill bags up all in one pocket, as Counters in a Purſe. All are alike ignorant, rebellious, profane, and ungodly; led by their luſts, and at the will and pleaſure of the Devill. Golden fetters differ from Iron, but both are bonds alike to hold faſt a ſlave. Think of this and tremble, ye haughty and proud ſtomacks, who ſtand ſo much upon tearms of honour and birth! come downe and lick the duſt, ſhake hands with the baſeſt in this point. The Goaler of Hell is like Nebuchadnezzar, of whom the Prophet ſaith, that he would take no rewards. Other Goalers will knock off mens bolts and chaines for money. But this Goaler looks at nothing ſave the eternall thraldome of ſoules without bayle or maine prize.

Againe, conſider this: Wee pitty ſuch priſoners as lye chained by the neck, or wreſts, or feet. But alas! There may bee liberty of ſoule in all ſuch chaines: but Satans ſlaves lye under worſe chaines; upon their thoughts, wils, affections, and conſcience (not to be releaſed by Arminian or Popiſh freewill) ſo that if Heaven might be given them, they are ſo bound that not a good thought or deſire can come from them; thy are free to all baſe vile thoughts, and luſts, yea, to ſome naturall or civill good acts and employments; but unto good and holy ones, all freedome is loſt. They cannot ſhake off their chaine, their baſe, vaine, earthly, envious thoughts and paſſions. Thoſe Iſraelites had as much liſt to ſhake off their yoake (when they were gorged with their fleſhpots, Onions, and Garlick) as theſe have to renounce their luſts, feeling the falſe ſweetneſſe of them. If Heathens could conclude that all bad men are ſlaves, (though it ſeeme a Paradox) much more may truth it ſelfe affirme it. Perhaps Satan may ſuffer them to dreame of liberty, as Pharaohs Baker did, with his chaines upon him. But this dreame ends as his did, in utter miſery: yea, to conclude, if they do get out of his armes at a puſh, and ſometimes by a Sermon, or by feare of conſcience, or by croſſes, ſhould think of an eſcape: yet even then hee ſo amplifies their ſweet eaſe in this ſlavery, that he puls them back to a ſeven fold

ſtronger reſolution to revolt to their luſts, than before: enchanting them ſo, as no Croſſes or Threats can prevaile. I know where the Lord will defeat Satan, there men ſhall at one time or other, by the painfull and patient waiting of the Miniſter, get out of his ſnares and chaines. But if he may have his will, they ſhall never go further either in hearing Law or Goſpell, than hypocrites may go, that is, to have the liberty of their Priſon, and ſo as the Devill may pull them back by the cheine upon their heele to their wonted ſtate. Oh! then let this terror pierce all ſuch bondſlaves, from the moſt odious drunkard to the cloſeſt hypocrite! Know ye, that till the Law have left ye under the ſpirit of this bondage, to compt your ſelves as ye are, and lye under this eſtate, as ſenſible of it and in your ſelves paſt hope, Cains and Iudas his caſe is not more wofull than yours. God open your eyes.

Secondly, its inſtruction to all ſorts, to make them behold their naturall condition, as in a glaſſe. Sinne is no ſuch tame and harmeleſſe beaſt as ye imagine. Nothing ſave this redemption by the blood of God is able to ranſome you! For ſin hath ſet the doore open to Satan and all enemies, wrath, hell, law, conſcience and death to have their wils of us. So that an infinite ſtrength is needed to deliver us! When the Iſraelites would needs have a King, the Lord bids Samuel tell them the conditions of it. That he ſhould take their choice ſons and daughters to make them his Oſtlers and Kitchinmaids: yet ſtill they would have one: all the liberty of living under Gods immediate ſcepter by Judges could not ſo affect them as their wils to have a King, whatſoever it coſt them. So is it here. Tell a man of the infinite priviledge of redemption, and the Devill will more prevaile to keepe men in his baſe chaines, notwithſtanding his hard conditions, than the Lord can by all liberty and fruits of deliverance. Why, ſave that the heart is perverted, elſe nothing is ſo unwelcome as bondage. All men ſing as the Jewes, We are freemen, and children of the free-woman. But ſtill they abide thrals, as they then were to the Romans. Oh! that curſed impoſt of cruell bondage which Satan puts upon wicked men, ſhould teach them their nature. It was fearfull bondage which Pharaoh put upon Iſrael to broile in the Fornace, and toyle both to get ſtraw, and to make Brick. But they had good fare for their work. This Pharaoh after hee hath worried his ſlaves reqintes them with empty ſoules, and hell it ſelfe. All will grant thoſe gunpowder traytors were ill requited

1 Sam 8.10.

(and yet well enough for such work) when Gentlemen of hundreds by the yeere, were glad to digge in a vault and carry out earth by baskets upon their shoulders, farre off; and when all came to all, to betray their plot, and reward them with the Gallowes. But alas! what other meed doth he hire all other slaves with? Drunkards I meane, sweares, profaners of Sabbath, Epicures and time servers? how doth he rule them as he list? What base ones doth he make them? Be they honourable, or learned, or rich, what oddes betweene them and the vilest and basest varlets doth there appeare, in their lusts? Their time, their fresh youth, their precious name, health, credit, wealth, gifts and parts, what are they unto them, in comparison of serving their Master in their lusts? Will they stick to gage all to please him? Or will hee bee content with a bare title of servants, except he can debauch them with extreme slavery? No, let it cost them beggery, infamy, toyle, and diseasednesse, yea a cursed conscience and hell it selfe, they are so fast bound, that they will, for none of these give him over. Oh! if this were well weighed, what an entrance might it procure to true liberty?

Use 3. Thirdly, this should teach all who would not be such slaves, to prove their redemption by the markes of it. First, all truly redeemed ones of the Lord (as they are called, Esay 63.4.) see, sigh under and are weary of this their bondage, desirous to be freed from it. Oh! they are farre from the practise of that drunken Agag, who, when Samuel called him out to hew him in pieces before the Lord, came leaping, and laughing. Truly (saith hee) the bitternesse of death is passed. Oh! men make the hell of this their bondage, another heaven to them. But the spirit of Gods freemen is contrary: They sigh under cruell bondage, and never more than when God offers them freedome. They cry out of the depth of this prison, as David did *Psal.*116.6. They have small list to sing the Songs of the Temple in a strange land: no, they turne them to howlings and out-cryes. They shew their bondage is violent to them, not naturall. As the Church carryed to Babel hung their Harpes upon the Willowes, so do they: and lay to heart their sad estate. Secondly, the offer of this Redemption in Christ is precious to them: both the purchaser of it, the offer of it, and the purchase it selfe. They do as the Israelites in Egypt did: when they were in anguish for their bondage, they minded not Moses nor saw him to be their deliverer: But after, when the Lord did enlighten them with a cleere sight of Gods regard of them, they bowed themselves and worshipped. So do these; they wonder that ever the Lord should pitty so base slaves as themselves, and rather lose his Sonne, than lose them! Lord, was my liberty so precious unto thee? Wert thou afflicted in my affliction? Was thy soule grieved for my bondage? Art thou come downe from Heaven to see it, and to send, not Moses, but the Lord Jesus to redeeme us from our woe? yea to redeeme us to thee? Oh! it breaks our heart to think of it! Should it be said of such thrals, that ever we should be free men againe. Oh! the feet of them that bring this Gospell of gladnesse, are precious, and beautifull. Now wee have an inckling of hope, loe, our old chaines and dungeon wherein wee stuck fast are wearisome. Who shall deliver us? set open prison doores, that wee might escape. Oh, let us never come there againe (as Jeremy said) to dye there. If being offered free- Ier. 37. 20.

lastly by faith they cleave to the promise, that seeing the Lord will indeed have it so, they embrace and chuse it, and beleeve that if the Sonne free them, they are freed indeed, and who shall bee able to embondage them any more? Try thy selfe by these and the like marks that Christ hath delivered thee; and having once tasted it, stand fast in it; let not thy conscience any more be entangled with any base yoke, either of thy lusts, or the base ordinances of the Ceremoniall Law. Remember that Satan will strive to recover thee againe if possible, and make thee a slave to lust, to men, to feares, to unbeliefe; but beg of him strength to stand fast, who first redeemed thee, for why? Is there not cause? is not the price of it full? Or lookest thou ever to get by thy lusts under Christs yoke, when they were such bondage to thee be- Rom. 6. 21.

Fourthly, this should exhort all that are redeemed thus to true liberty, to understand wherein it consists, and apply themselves duly thereto. True it is, that wee are adopted sons to the freedome of children: but wee are redeemed also to the liberty of service. We are not made free from the Law in point of obedience, as our late Antinomian libertines pretend (whose spirit growes rife in these loose times, even to pretend Christ for their lusts:) but to serve in holinesse and feare, to delight in the law in the inner man. The Lord Jesus takes off one chaine to put on another. Take my yoke upon you, for it is easie; and my burden, for Use 4.

is is light: eaſie, yet a yoak; light, yet a burden. When as the Angell had left Peter, Acts 12. behold hee then conſidered why God had ſmitten the foure quaternions of ſouldiers with ſleepe, broken open the priſon doores and gates: ſurely that hee ſtill might ply his work. So ſay thou: Lord its that thy Commandements which have beene irkeſome, might now become ſweet; yea perfect freedome: Cruell and unreaſonable Lords have ruled over mee, but I am now reſtored to the liberty of a ſonne, not for my will and to pamper my fleſh, but to ſerve thee O Lord: I will returne to thee, for thou art the Lord my God: Gods ſpouſe, childe, and ſervant are all one. If Lord thou didſt redeeme mee by thy blood, to be a ſonne: yet thou didſt alſo redeeme mee by thy obedience, to make me a ſervant; let me not ſever the things which thou haſt put together. Let me not (like an hypocrite) ſeek thy redemption for my owne ends; but to bee at thy command who haſt redeemed my tongue, my thoughts, my will, affections, conſcience, and members to be thine. When I was under my ſlavery, I was his whom I ſerved, and all my members were weapons of unrighteouſneſſe, yea I my ſelfe was ſold under ſinne, a bored ſlave: now therefore oh Lord, being dead to my old Maſter, let new Lords ſet up new lawes, let mee now give up my whole man and all my weapons to be ſervants of righteouſneſſe. Thus much for the firſt branch of the priviledge of redemption.

Q. Doth this benefit containe any more in it?

2. Part of it temporall.

A. Yea, for it reaches to freedome and liberty in point of thoſe penalties and coſſes which either are incident to mortality, or ſuch as the Saints ſuffer for Gods cauſe; yea more, even ſuch as they ſuffer, through their own ſin and deſerving. Concerning which ſorts of croſſes the reader may turne to that which I ſpeak in the 3 Part and 2 Article of this Book, in the point of faith in Afflictions. Here I will only ſhew in what points this Redemption ſtands, and with a brieſe touch of them and their uſe, I ſhall conclude this priviledge.

Q. Doe ſo: wherein ſtands this ſecond part of Redemption?

A. In theſe three. Either in Gods ſaving his from afflictions: Or his ſuſteyning them in and under them: Or his delivering them out of them, and that either in part, or finally. All three are included in Chriſt our redemption: but they are all three expreſſed in the 63 of Eſay, verſe 9. by name. The firſt, The Angell of his preſence, Chriſt (as verſe 1.) ſaved them, and bare bare them on his wings continually: The second, In all their afflictions he was afflicted, (that is, succoured and upheld them) The third, in his pitty and mercy he redeemed them, (that is, delivered them:) for this third especially claymeth the name of redemption.

1 Cor. 1. 30.

Q. Three sweete branches: What is the first?

A. It is usually called the protection of God over his own in Christ their buckler and shield: In which sence it is sayd, the beloved of the Lord shall dwell under his protection all the day long. The Psalmist *Psal.*91. expresseth it by the falling of thousands at right, and ten thousands at left hand, and their safety in the middest. Sure it is, Gods people scape all such crosses as befall the wicked, as wicked: They know not what a rotten body by drunkennesse, or a worne body by uncleannesse, or a poore body by prodigality meanes. But besides, the Lord doth by his Angels keepe them, that they dash not their foote against a stone: So that, till their day and houre be come, no Creature can doe them harme: The fire shall not burne them, nor the water drown them: till God doe dissolve the league all shall be at peace. 1 *Pet.*1.3. Till it be meete they shall not be troubled: the floods of great waters shall not come neere them, *Psal.*32.6. He is the Saviour of all men, but especially of his own that believe. Briefly we may utter it thus; the Salvation of Gods Providence in this kind is, a [Nemo scit] an unknown thing. If men doe each other a pleasure, all must know it. But the Lord riddes us from infinite Troubles, sleeping and waking, which we know not of. What day passeth over us wherein the Tiles of our house, the horse we ride on, a twigge lashing our eye in the high way, might not wound, maime, deface us? and how should our little ones that are shiftlesse escape so many casualties of fire and water, and we dayly be free from so many crosses, as range in the World and meete with others, if their and our Angels beheld not the face of our Redeemer for us? What one vexation of a thousand, an ill wife, childe, enemy, might have been our end, had not God come betweene? Deut. 33.

Oh! How patient should we be in such crosses as befall us in all kinds, if we considered, that the greatest part of them which light upon us, is not the least of them that passe by us? Use 1.

2. What a ſpeech was that of Charles the fifth, who being warned of his bold attempts in battell, anſwered, Never was true Emperor ſhot through with a Canon. Gods people have a kind of right to be ſhot-free, for they are anoynted Princes and Kings to God.

3. The truth is (pardon my uncouth phraſe) Gods Saints ought to give thanks for they know not what, how many, how great ſorrowes?

4. Let all wicked Rebelles, whom God raines ſnares and fire upon, either ſet their teeth on edge with this priviledge, or fret in vaine, againſt them who enjoy the ſame by believing.

Q. Proceed to the ſuſteyning Redemption, what is that?

A. It is that act of Chriſt, in all their troubles he is troubled; firſt whereby he ſuccoureth and ſupporteth all his in trouble. For his ſympathy and compaſſion is not verball as theirs in Saint Iames, who bid, Be warme and fed, but neither give them cloathes nor meate. (of whom we have too many, as one not long ſince gave a broken halfe braſſe farthing at the Sacrament, moſt profanely) but reall and cordiall indeed. And this ſtandeth in the Communion of the ſufferings of CHRIST and his grace. 1. His ſweet peace which he gives us: My peace I give you, my peace I leave you. A great legacy? Peace of ſoule beares all trouble, and this Spirit ſuſteynes all infirmity. It rules the heart and apayes it well, ſaying, Seeing I know I ſhall not periſh in Hell, I will beare my Croſſe quietly. Lord I will bow, and thou ſhalt beate: For I ſhall never feele hell-heate, as the Martyr ſang in the flames. The fire and ſting being gone, the wound ſoone healed. Secondly, his meeke and patient ſelfe-deniall. So that the Saints doe as Chriſt, who was dumbe before the ſhearer: being reviled, anſwered not againe, as Peter ſaith. What mortall creature could indure thoſe tortures, paines, diſeaſes, ſcornes which they endure, if they borrowed not their patience of this Lambe? Elſe they would fret at the inſtrument, kind, meaſure, duration, circumſtances of a Croſſe, Any ſave this I could beare; But they know, whether their yoake be of wood or of yron, mercy made and put it on; and therefore meekeneſſe ſhall waite and endure, till it remoove, or moderate it. As the greateſt Croſſe of Chriſt had his moderation in ſecret, ſo ſhall theirs. Thirdly, the courage of Chriſt is imparted by Faith unto them, to beare and to endure: The blood of the Lyon of the Tribe

Acts 1. John 13. Phil. 4. The Second. The Third.

Tribe of Iuda, and his marrow runnes in their bones: his shoulders are theirs, at least as a dwarfe is somewhat upon a Giants shoulders, so are they mighty, being set upon their Redeemer. They are bred aswell of Christ a Lyon, as Christ a Lambe. Their courage is invincible.

Fourthly, they have his innocency, and his good cause to defend them. Looke what spirit of righteousnes, or of the truth, upheld him in his infirmities, or persecutions, the same upholds them. Their innocency is their buckler and brasen wall: the cause of Christ settles a Spirit of glory upon them, glorious Faith, selfe-deniall, hope of glory, wisedome to maintaine Gods quarrell; sometime also glorious issue with the triall, conquest over their enemies, and pleading of their cause, that they may get out with honour as Ioseph and Paul, See Acts 16.39. Thus a good conscience and a good cause are a double continuing feast to them. Fifthly, they have from their head the spirit of Prayer, cryes and grones to him that can ease them, and they are heard in that which they feare, whether it be spirituall desertion, bondage, or buffetting by Satan, or whether outward oppression: In him and his Prayer they find accesse, and the greater the affliction is, especially if it be for his Name, he heareth, pitieth and relieveth them, both for the measure, continuance and unwelcomenesse of it. In the World (saith Christ Iohn 16, ult) yee shall have straitnings, but be of good courage, I have overcome the World. And, Whatsoever yee aske of the Father in my name, he shall give it you. He shall susteine both their infirmity in praying by his spirit of Prayer, and shall susteine you in the infirmity which ye pray against. Hence are those Phrases of drawing neere to such as call upon him in trouble: of delivering them; of standing by them, and at their right hand, of being their support, their rock, defence, of being in the midst of them, all to shew that whatsoever counsell, wisedome, ayde and redresse he hath in himselfe, its theirs: yea affliction is so farre from dividing the Lord from his, that if it be their season to pray, Iames 5.13. it is his chiefe season to assist: as the day of affliction is the season to try a true friend. Such a one is the Lord especially, then, when all men are lyars, and as a broken tooth. See Habac. 3.18. And Micah. 7.5.7. Also Iohn 9.38,39. and weigh them diligently: and this is indeed to be afflicted in our afflictions, and to pitty us being tempted, as Heb. 2.18.

The Fourth. 1 Pet. 4. Mica. 7.9.

The Fifth. Heb. 5. Rom. 8. Acts 2.

The sixth. Sixthly, he conveyes to his believing ones, his purging power by afflictions, that as they prepared our head to glory, Heb. 2. 10. Phil. 2. 9. So they might make his members conformed to himselfe in the fellowshippe thereof, more clensed, more patient, more partakers of his righteousnesse, more precious than gold. That the more cost they have beene at with him, the deerer they might be to him, and he to them. That his graces might shine in them, others might be settled by their experience: their originall corruption might be wasted, and those evils which Satan waites to betray them by, might be prevented. Seventhly he affords them the like issue of the Crosse, with himselfe, even the quiet fruit of righteousnesse: That although for the present their troubles were grievous; yet after, they might be joyous. That they might be the better fitted by one for another, by the former and lesse for the latter and greater. That they might feele all turne to the best: and might say, It is good for me, Ps. 119. 71. that I was afflicted. Eightly, he vouchsafes them part in his victory before hand, even while they are under the Crosse. Mica. 7. 8. They see their rising in their fall: and in darkenesse they have light; in the meane time are upholden with consolation: so that they rejoyce thereby in the hope of God, enjoy complacency of heart (more or lesse) and count their crosses exceeding joy as Christ did, in this regard, Heb. 12. 2. This is a great benefit, to triumph over trouble. Rom. 8. ult. For it is a great thing even to beare them. Ninthly, to waite till the houre of darkenesse bee over, and till light come, and that quietly. Mica. 7. 9. I will beare the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned; till he plead my cause: He will bring me forth in his light, and I shall behold his righteousnesse. These may serve for a view of this sustaining grace.

Vse. Which point should exhort us to apply our selves to this priviledge, in each crosse that befals us; Is it not a mercy to be thus cared for and pittyed as children, when the Lord puts the wicked to their shifts? and regards not what betides them: Saul falling upon his Sword desperately, Abimelec thrust through, Achitophel and Iudas hanging themselves? And, if it be such an honour, is it not worth the improovement? (Not to speake of miracles, the three children walking in flames, the Martyrs in the fire feeling the burning reeds as beds of Roses:)

Is

Is it not worth the while to see a believing soule at his death lying as a Lambe, as a Preacher, as one burning but not consumed, above feares, above loves, hopes, wife, children, world, selfe? able to doe any thing through Christ that strengtheneth and susteineth? Oh then! Why doe most Christians deject themselves in their sufferings? Where is Pauls speech, We are more than conquerers through him that loved us? Rom. 8. Who shall separate us? is any thing stronger than his love? Thankes be to God through Jesus Christ! If it were not for him, what were we in a Crosse? And shall we fare in our sicknesse, in crosses by our children, losses, enmity of men, as if there were no Christ? Had we not need he should rouze us up as him, John 9.39. Dost thou believe in the Sonne of God? Oh! these doctrines are out of the World, whereas yet, crosses were never so sharpe; Let us be ware least we be not found naked; Davids comfort in his God is somewhat worth in a streight. And who knows when his day may come? It will not hurt us to belong to this priviledge, whether come or no: But if we want this when nothing else will helpe us, and looke upon the wals when we should see the Lord in the mount of his promise, what shall become of us? Oh, by Faith take we our part in this while we may have it, ere misery come upon us as the necessity of an armed man, and none can helpe!

Q. Well: Conclude with the third Branch: What is that?

A. Redemption or deliverance from crosses, either particular ones, or all. For there is a day of Gods redeemed ones in this life. The Lord hath his healing in his wings even heere for his people. Sometimes I grant there is a righteous Abel, who perisheth in his righteousnesse. But ordinarily when Gods Mastick patch hath dryed up the Rheume, it fals off of it selfe. David, Moses, had an end of their Crosses, and as Iames saith, Yee have heard of the afflictions of Job, and what end the Lord made. There is a night and a morning for them: Light is sowne for the righteous; seedes are long a comming up, but they appeare at last. Long sicknesse, long poverty, long persecutions, have had their end. The lot of the righteous shall not alway lie under the rod of the wicked. Blood-thirsty Gardiner at last had his belly full, and being laid in Gods barrell, was so gorged, that he dyed drunke of his cruelty, as joyelesse and weary weary of it. There is a day for us if we can waite. How many weake complexions in youth have enjoyed healthy age? How many prisoners have beene loosed? How many poore ones beene enriched? How many mens latter dales have prooved better than their first? Better marriage, better Children, better People (when they have left the Ministery of a bad) and what not better? So that God hath made some say it by experience, God hath rid them out of thrall after long unlikelihood. As our Lord Jesus having once suffered, suffered no more, so that no Pilate, Judas, Pharisee, or enemy could come neere him: So he had a time of freedome in this life, he knew no Ague, Goute, Pestilence, Dropsy; went through enemies without feare. Whereof although there was some other cause, because he was a nature of man, but no person, yet this freedome is verified even here of some of his members; such I meane as take thought how to believe and purge their sins, let them waite, and leave to him the dispensing of the season.

Esay 63,4.

Eccl. 7.

Finall and full redemption is best and surest.

But, because it may be objected (and it is true) that all Redemption goes not before hand, some must follow; for many of Gods Saints are quasht under some crosses in this life (in respect of any outward freedome) and that perhaps for want of Faith.) Therefore there is another redemption, farre more sure, and that is full and finall at their death and Resurrection, Then the conquest of Christ begins to be theirs. The truth is, Put case that in this life the Lord should quit any of his in all Trouble: Yet while he is a militant member he cannot be quite redeemed: because still he fellowfeeles the afflictions of others as if himselfe were in cheynes (if he be as he should be) Heb. 13.2. But there is a full redemption, Ephes. 4. 30. Wherein all teares shall be wiped away; first, and second death both removed, a better day than that which the Martyr told his fellow of, and a better Chirurgion to heale: Bower, (saith he) will heale thee and me, of our blindnesse, and lamenesse, to day.

Vse 1:

Oh! This is that which should make all afflictions seeme light in comparison, Rom. 8. and cause us to embrace it by hope saying, If our hope were only heere, of all others, we were most miserable. For what although heere bee some patience given us to beare? yet our successive troubles, (as we say of the tenth wave) would at last devoure us: therefore our greatest comfort is in our hope of knocking off from all, and being past gun-shot. This is best of all. And by this hope we may even heere lift up our head, because our Redemption drawes neere; crying, How long Lord, holy and true? How canst thou endure thy cause, thine honour, thy selfe to suffer so farre in thy members? Be avenged quickly, deliver Israel from all his troubles, and thy darlings from the Lyons. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. And bring healing in thy wings. See Act. 3. 26. Luke 18. Rev. 22.

1 Cor. 15. 19.

Secondly, let not thine heart mutter at the frequency of thy crosses, by divell, by men, or from the Lord: but blesse him for such partiall deliverances as he vouchsafeth thee in thy trials, and that thou art kept from utter streights under some tolerableneſſe, and when the Lord sees flesh would faile, he will hasten full redemption. So that thou shalt not neede to be weary, or put forth thy hand to evill and breake his Covenant; but rather sanctifie the Lord in thy heart, and let him be thy feare, who will not faile thee in one kind or other. What a shame were it for thee to runne from him to an ill conscience, and so dishonour his redemption? Use 2.

Thirdly, learne hence really to pick out the sappe of that truth of Paul, Phil. 2. to desire to be dissolved and to be with Christ, which is best of all. Is our full redemption best, and yet doe we shun it for the sake of death, without which we cannot have it? That is to give God the lye. Shall we chuse life with all sorrowes, rather than death without them? Shall we shun to be uncloathed, when as till then, we are still in the flesh and strangers from God? No surely, as loath as we are to dye, yet, the Lord hereby delivering us from all at once and making us happy, let it cause death to be welcome. Oh! how long it is, ere we digest this; Redemption is sweet, but we would still hanker below, as if death did marre it. Use 3.

Lastly, begge of God two things. 1. To give us his Spirit of Redemption to frame us for this very thing, (as Paul 2 Cor. 5. 4.) to prize our full Redemption upon any termes. Secondly, that he would seale us up thereby to an holy security; as the three Children, Dan. 3. 18. Its his promise, Ephes. 4. 30. Gal. 4. 6. Pray thus. Lord our enemies threaten, curse, write bitter things and seale the decree: but break it, and seale us by thy Spirit to redemption; and so much for this. Use 4.

Q. What is the eighth benefit?

A.

A. Regeneration (as it is taken for the begetting of God in the ſoule) and the effect thereof, Sanctification.

Q. Shew how they differ?

A. Regeneration (taken in this ſence) concernes the purifying of our nature from the image of old Adam, and a renewing of it according to the image of him who hath created us in light and holines. And in ſome ſort this is oppoſite to the former priviledges, all which conſiſt in the imputation of Faith, and are wholly from without us. But this is the worke of the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſecond Adam, within the ſoule inherently, wrought in all them whom he hath truely begotten to God, whereby he alſo puts into them, the nature and properties of God, and changes them from bad to good, in part throughout. This is called in Scripture, the new man, the new creature, The renewing of the holy Ghoſt, The workmanſhip of God, made to good works, The renewing of the ſpirit of the minde, Eph. 4. 24. Rom. 12. 2. The handling whereof I reſerve to his due place in Part 3. Article 1.

2 Pet 1, 2. Coloſ 3, 10. 1 Cor. 5, 17. Tit. 3, 5, 6, Epheſ. 2, 10.

Q. Now what is Sanctification?

A. The effect of the former (in an orderly conceiving) though not really differing from it, ſave only as the repleniſhing of a veſſell (made new and whole in each part) differs from the making and framing of it a new. In which we ſee it to be the worke of the holy Ghoſt in all believers, making them partakers in each part, minde, ſoule and body, of his holines. It conſiſts in 2 things: 1. The killing power of the Croſſe of Chriſt: 2. The quickning power of his reſurrection: both ſealed up in the baptiſme of the Spirit, whereby we are ingrafted and implanted into the ſimilitude of them both. The former is uſually called Mortification, which is the worke of the Spirit, applying the ſecond effect of the death of Chriſt, to the ſoule. For having in Juſtification applyed the condemning power of his death, and thereby taken away the guilt and accuſation of ſin: now it addeth the ſecond, which is the diſabling power thereof, and the vanquiſhing thereof: both theſe are the effects of his Croſſe, upon which he both tooke away the guilt, and dominion of ſin. We know that if the Law have once paſſed ſentence upon a malefactor, it will eaſily ſend him to execution. This killing power therefore is not only a turning of the heart from ſin, but a making ſure work with it, that it returne no more, than he whoſe head is cut off can do any more hurt. The latter, is called Vivification, or that power power of Christ that quickning spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 45. whereby the holy Ghost applyes the power of the Resurrection to the soule: not only giving it a bare life of grace, but a lively life thereof, quickning up the edge, the spirit of the inner man to the power of godlinesse, and to the life of God, in all the powers of the soule, in sincerity, according to her measure. See Texts for these. For the former, see Rom. 6 7,8. Gal. 5. 24. Gal. 6. 14. Col. 3. 5. For the latter, Rom. 6. 6. 7. Ephes. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 5, 6, 7. Of both these read at large, Part 3. Q. What is the last benefit?

A. Glorification of the whole man after the Resurrection, in Heaven. Which is that overplus of Christs purchase, and exceeds Adams happinesse, consisting in the partaking of that purchased possession of glory and immortality, not of Paradise upon earth, but in the presence of God. This is that benefit which answers the perfection of Adam, though farre above it: for it shall be a filling up of the soule with the perfect Image of God in light and holinesse: and that by sight of the glorified sense, beholding God as he is, and wholly transformed by the Mirror of his Majesty to glory, (so far as our soule and body are capable) to the uttermost. And this benefit is the fulnesse of the former: It is the execution of the election of God, for we were chosen to glory. Its the perfection of our imperfect union in this life. Its the end of our calling, for we are called to honour and immortality. Its the fulnesse of our Adoption: for we have here the right, but there the inheritance of sonnes. Its also our finall Redemption and Sanctification, because there all teares shall be wiped away, and death shall be no more; and wee shall doe the will of God as the Angels, and be sanctified throughout in body, soule, and spirit without spot or blemish, and so live eternally, see Scripture for it, Rom. 8. 30. Rom. 6. ult. 2 Thess. 1. 7 8. Matth. 25. ult. Col. 3 3,4.

Q. How useth the holy Ghost to describe the estate of the glorified?

A. By presenting to us a perfection of all soule-contentments for ever. So that looke what poore wanzing and fading contents, the carnall minde or sense of sinfull man would weakly please it selfe in here, (as wee see Heathens and Turks, promise carnall delights of pleasant fields, goodly gardens, rich apparell, royall fare, exquisite beauties and the like) those the Lord

How the Scripture laies it open.

Lord presents us withall in Heaven, fully, perfectly, eternally, for measure, kinde and continuance. Lovest thou ease? here is a Sabbath of spirituall, perfect ease for ever. Lovest thou marriage? Here is a Spouse trimmed for her Bridegroome, and decked with all costly furniture, to be knit to him without divorce and enjoy him for ever. Commonly looke what men come shortest of in their desires, they fancy the enjoying of it to be their happinesse: and hence came those manyfold felicities which we reade severall men to have framed to themselves. Poore men would have riches; rich men love pleasures, Epicures seek honours and dignities; honourable ones seeke transcendency and affect Crownes, victories, and grope after that which is not; for death comes and equals them with the basest, and most abject and unhappy. But Heaven affords wealth and a Treasure, which no Theefe can dig through or steale: Pleasures at the right hand of God for evermore: a Throne, and Majesty to sit and judge the world: Crownes of gold, victory and triumph, even laurell which will not wither, nor fade away: Heaven hath all these for ever; there is no sad thought of death, to make them wearysome.

Amplification of it.

Doe men set up their delight in this world and the things which it affordeth? Sunne and Moone, and Starres, and influence of Heaven, brave Cities, and dwellings, Musique, Feasting, yea the Ordinances of God, companions of choise parts, costly apparell, learning and knowledge, or to stand before Princes, or long life, or perfect strength and vigor of body, or sweet friends, inheritance, or liberty, or peace, or whatsoever? Loe, Heaven hath not one of these to fil her inhabitants with, but all in one, for each soule to enjoy. This other world hath the eternall Sonne of God to be the light thereof: every little Starre is as the Moone, the Moone as the Sunne, the Sunne seven times greater: the Heaven of this third Heaven is made of Cristall for purity: The influence thereof is the presence of God: There is a perpetuall Spring time, Summer, and the Autumne of delight and fruit farre exceeding the happy Ilands: The City thereof is Jerusalem above, built of all precious stones, pearls, and gold, both houses, walles, gates, and pavement: Their musique is the Song of Moses and the Lambe, such as Conquerors sing: Their feast is the eating and drinking of a Passeover in the Kingdome: Their Ordinances, are the perpetuall sacrifice of Prayers and Thanksgiving ving, Joy, and Hallelujа's; from Sabbath to Sabbath unceſſantly: the company there, is innumerable Angels, the ſoules of juſt and perfect men, the generall aſſembly and Church of the firſt borne, the God and judge of all, with Jeſus the Mediator of the Covenant. Their apparell is white pure linnen without ſpot, rich robes of Kings and Queenes: their knowledge ſhall be as the Angels of God, they ſtand before the face of God, their life is immortality world without end: their bodies, ſenſes, members, in the vigor of age (as ſome thinke like Chriſts middle age betweene thirty and forty) glorified and enabled to be incorruptible, and to ſee and enjoy God. Their friends, God, the Lambe, Angels and Saints: their inheritance both Manſion houſe and Territories not made with hands, but immortall, undefiled, eternall in the Heavens: the liberty of it is full redemption: the peace of it is the perfection of this peace here, which yet paſ- Phil. 4.

ſeth underſtanding: and the joy of it, is exultation, ſo great that it ſhall bee a perpetuall extaſie in reſpect of this, and yet able to containe it ſelfe. And yet which is more, that which eye hath not ſeene, or eare heard, nor hath it entred into the heart of man to conceive, hath God there prepared for thoſe that love him. As the uſuall expreſſion is, there is ſatiety without fulſomeneſſe, pleaſure without wearineſſe, eternity without interruption, quantity without dimenſion, quality without defect, and what not? Even above all that the moſt curious or craving man can ask or think.

And to paſſe by ſuch deſcriptions as are infinite, the holy Ghoſt teacheth us to confine this boundleſſe glory in thoſe two termes: either a negative or a poſitive happineſſe. The former whereof ſtands in the abſence and voidneſſe of all which comes ſhort of this, or oppoſeth it. A piece of this happineſſe ſtands in this, That Paradiſe upon earth is gone, a created thing is turned to an uncreated: that here the miſery of mortality is ſwallowed up and aboliſhed: Sorrowes, poverty, ſickneſſe, ſhame, bondage, infirmity, death, wrath, enmity, curſe are removed, and all teares wiped away: yea the graces of faith, hope, patience (here our excellency) having brought us to the door ſhall take leave: word, Prayer, Sacraments, Ordinances, (betokening weakneſſe) ſhall ceaſe, as needleſſe things: much more corruption, and imperfection of grace. Even as it was an addition of regrett to Dives, that hee being afarre off, ſaw Lazarus in Abrahams boſome: ſo

It ſtands in 2 things 1 Negative.

ſhall

ſhall it bee a piece of the Saints heaven, that they have paſſed the ſecond death, and vengeance of the wicked; as it was Noahs happineſſe, that he ſhunned the lot of the old world. Kiſſe the Sonne (ſaith David) Pſal.2. leaſt hee bee angry, and ye periſh in the way; if his anger bee once kindled, happy are they that truſt in him.

2 Poſitive. But that chiefe happineſſe of heaven is poſitive: when the perſons of the elect ſhall bee ſo enlarged in their ſoules and bodies, and in each faculty and member thereof, as to enjoy and comprehend and behold the Lord perfectly as they are comprehended. This is indeed the bleſſed union which Adam loſt, and yet never had in this perfection: for the minde to be filled with the fulneſſe, height and depth of Gods underſtanding, as the veſſell caſt into the Sea, (big or ſmall) is filled with the water of it, and can hold no more: and beholding in this Mirror of his, the naked truth of all Myſteries, and ſecret wayes and adminiſtrations of God, now dark and hidden: Election, Providence, Afflictions of the Church, patience over the enemies thereof, and the like. There ſhall be a perfect age of knowledge, here wee ſaw through a grate, weakly; but there perfectly. So, the ſoule ſhall enjoy the Image of Gods holineſſe, and be tranſformed into it, perfect love, obedience, righteouſneſſe: and in both theſe ſhall have perfect joy and contentment, as being ſatiſfied with this Image. This may ſerve for a ſhort gathering of Scriptures together, that the Reader may conceive them with ſome better light and ſavour.

Q. Conclude briefly this laſt benefit, with the uſe.

A. The rather I muſt be ſhort, becauſe by many occaſions I have touched it already, as in the point of Redemption, adoption, &c. Yet briefly, let it teach us to avoide curioſity about enquiry of this depth, and ſeeke humbly and wiſely to get our part in it here; ſo ſhall wee know it one day by experience indeed. Let us lay up treaſure there before hand for our ſelves; and look to it, that the Goſpell have beene the meanes to reveale this immortality and light unto us: that it hath made us partakers by hope of that inheritance of the Saints in light, and a part with all that are ſanctified by faith in Chriſt. Bee wee ſure that this hope hath cauſed all the fond and vaine bables of this world to ſtink as vile to us, in compariſon hereof: as ſerving for nothing but to be conſumed to droſſe, when this glory ſhall bee revealed. Then their use shall be base: now wee must use them, but let us use them and not enjoy them: use them as citizens of Heaven, where these shall beare no mastery, as Ioane Prest said ere she was burnt? Oh; that the Lord would give us one sparkle of this grace, the want of which makes us more like such as are for the dunghill than Heaven. Should the heire of a Crowne play at Put-pin, or Spancounter with every base boy? How should then the hope and honour of a Prince shine in him?

Secondly, what manner of persons should we be in spirituall respects also, if we look for such promises? How should we purge our selves in body and spirit from all uncleanesse? finishing our sanctification in Gods feare? If no Toad or venemous thing will live upon the Irish shore: shall wee thinke any uncleane thing can live there? Oh what manner of persons ought wee to bee the whilest, purging our selves even as he is pure?

Lastly, how should we long for this happinesse and full mar- 1 Iohn 3. 3.

through the hope revealed? But of this last benefit so much: for I shall touch it againe in Part 3. Article 6.

Q. You have satisfied mee touching the doctrine of all these benefits: now come to the use.

A. The uses of each severall benefit having been already ope- Vses of the offered thus together to the soule at once in all these, and not in a bare manner: it should be a marvellous encouragement to each poore soule to beleeve. Our hearts are (as the Disciples) slow to beleeve. We had need therefore to be spurred on to it by the extent of those good things which accompany Christ. And to beg of the Lord his Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. to declare to us the good things which he hath given us, that we slight not his offer, nor thinke the gift of faith meane, which possesseth the soule of all these. And to beware least wee judge of the spirituall condition of a beleever with a carnall eye: for if wee behold him so, wee shall judge of him as the poorest man living, who yet is the richest. As contrariwise if wee esteeme a wicked man by his glee, wee shall judge him an happy man, who is most miserable. Especially let beleevers beware least they account their lot to bee meane and base, being fallen into so good a ground.

Uſe 2. Secondly, let it be uſe of examination, whether Chriſt be ours or no. And firſt try it thus, whether this rich treaſure of Chriſt

But what came of it? did ſhe ſlight the offer? No, but went with the meſſenger immediately. If Gods ſpokeſmen, in the bringing forth theſe benefits

Secondly, ſeeing there is no man but will be ready to ſay, yea; try therefore againe thus: No man is married to Chriſt except hee have his dowry to ſhew. If we can ſhew our marriage Ring beſet with all theſe Jewels, we may be beleeved. Surely if ever God turned our face from Ægypt to Canaan, called us by his voice, out of the world to himſelfe; if ever he made us one with himſelfe, and our ſoules the Temples for himſelfe to dwell & delight in; the fruits of our vocation and union will diſ-

Triall 4. Againe, if thou bee reconciled; Where is joy and welfare then of heart? How ſhouldſt thou bee beloved of God, and yet bee ſuch a ſtranger to this joy? Why then are not thy garments white? And why are thy goings in and out, thy duties, thy prayers ſo few; thy beholding of his face ſo ſeldome, thy faith ſo little ſet on worke for daily pardon; thy hand ſo ſhrunke up in taking this golden Scepter by the end, when yet thou knoweſt the favour thou haſt, will beare thee out? Moreover thou ſayeſt,

Thou

Thou art an adopted ſonne of God in Chriſt. Why? Are all things thine as thou art Chriſts, and Chriſt Gods? Dareſt thou hope for Heaven as thine inheritance? Canſt thou pray with the ſpirit of a ſonne that looks to be ſupplyed, ſaying, I am thine, ſave me? Hath the Spirit of Chriſt made thee to call Abba, and to cry with grones not to be uttered? Then thy boaſting is not in vaine. 1 Cor. 3. ult.

Thou ſayeſt, thou art redeemed: but prove it alſo; for if it be ſo, then that bondage of thine to ſinne, and the luſt thereof, and that bondage by ſinne that keepes thee from beleeving is taken away in ſome meaſure. Thy tongue is none of thy own, thy eyes, eares, feet, members, are bought with a price, and the Lords yoak is ſweet to thee. And as thou art his redeemed one, ſo is he thy Redeemer, ſo that the floods of waters ſhall not come neere thy ſoule; he will deliver thee in ſix troubles, and in ſeven; and his love ſhall be thy banner, and his buckler thy covert, ſo that neither ſinne, devill, nor gates of hell ſhall prevaile againſt thee. The like I might ſay of the reſt. Except Chriſt with his benefits be thine, deceive not thy ſelfe, for he is not thine: he and the Spirit of theſe benefits go together, and he who hath not the Spirit of Chriſt, is none of his. Triall 5. Rom. 8.

Thirdly, inſtruction to all Chriſtians, to ponder wiſely this Article of the difference, order and nature of theſe benefits. It would helpe much to the underſtanding of the Scriptures with light and profit. But thoſe that thinke all time loſt which is thus beſtowed, muſt needs prove very confuſed in their judgements: reade the Word (eſpecially Pauls Epiſtles) heare Sermons very forgetfully and fruitleſſely; although I diſcourage none, yet I reprove thoſe who refuſe the helpe which God offers them. Uſe 3.

Fourthly, its for exhortation, that wee ceaſe not to adore that moſt Divine depth of Wiſdome and love in God, who when hee might have forſaken us, and caſt us of quite in our firſt fall, was not only contented to reſtore us to the ſame eſtate, and make us as good as we were: but alſo tooke occaſion (as I ſaid in the firſt Article) by this ruine to ſettle us in a better ſtate than ever Adam knew, not onely in the grace of perſeverance, but in the gift of eternall life in his heavenly preſence. This is one of the cauſes why the Cherubins pryed into the Mercy-ſeat in the Holy of Holies, as 1 Pet. 1. 12. opens it, of the deſire of the Uſe 4. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

Angels to see this mystery. Adams happinesse was as a perishing in comparison of Christ. Paul never speakes of it without wondring. Not as the gift of Creation was, so was the gift of Redemption: for the former was immortall life in the Garden. This is eternall life through Jesus Christ, as Rom. 6. ult. Therefore with Paul, let us wonder and magnifie the depth of this love, as 1 Tim. 1. 17. so let us say, Now to the King Immortall, Invisible, the only wise God, be praise for ever. And, Blessed be God for this unspeakable gift. When men take occasion by the ruine of an house to set up a better, its for their own ends: but this is for our happinesse, we fare the better for it; Oh Lord, what is man that thou so remembrest him, to unite thy Sonne to his flesh; that thou mightst lift him up with thy selfe, to glory? See Heb. 1. Thou hast made him little inferiour, (and in this above) the Angels.

Heb. 1. 5.

Use 5. Fifthly, it is exceeding consolation to all beleevers. For why? The benefits which they receive all at once by faith, are a Nemo scit, of price and plenty. All we have here said, doth argue that God in Christ is above all wee can aske or conceive. For who thinkes Christ to amount to such a summe at his first beleeving? Yet the Lord gives him all at once to a beleever. As he that buyes a rich Lordship at a low rate, doth not on the sudden equall his bargaine in his thoughts, till afterward hee come to retaile the parcels, buildings, lands, and royalties pertaining to it. But when he sees he hath bought the Lordship, and all belonging to it, hee rejoyces in his purchase. So should we little repent us of our bargaine, or think of selling it away, if wee could duly meditate of the ingredients: but we take small paines therein, and so it growes stale with us. To omit other points, by one enlarge all thus.

When the Lord cals a lost sinner by the trouble of his conscience to come to Christ, and in seeking hee findes him, doth it enter into him to consider what a Christ hee hath got? Alas no, hee aimes at this, that he may get forgivenesse of sinne, and peace with God onely. Hee considers not what enemies, what combats, dangers, and crosses hee may meet with, by Sathans malice, the crookednesse of his owne spirit, or the enmity of men. But when hee meets with these, and sees that all the promises of God in Christ are Yea and Amen; that Christ hath redeemed his soule out of all adversity, as well as out of the present horror of conscience; and that in troubles of ill marriage, sick-neſſe, poverty, impriſonment, purſuit of men, his Redeemer will ſave him, Oh! How precious is the Comfort of it unto his ſoule? How much more then is Chriſt ſweete in all his benefits? O! That our life might be taken up in the Meditation of all theſe particulars! Oh! That we could unfold this fardell and know our wealth; If that of the Heathen be true, that Husbandmen were the happieſt of all men, if they knew it: How much more is it of Chriſtians and believers? Bleſſe God that hath not only verified that promiſe in Chriſt we firſt ſought for, but more than even we deſired! As the Queene of Sheba told Salomon, the one halfe was not reported to me of that excellency which I find in thee, ſo may we much better ſay here, For a greater than Salomon is heere. Let our whole life be filled with the thoughts, thankes, and improvement of this our purchaſe. And ſo much ſhall ſerve for this fifth Article. 1 King. 10.

Article VI.

Queſtion.

NOw proceed to the ſixth Article of this ſecond Part: what is it?

A. This, that the ſubject containing all, or upon which as a Treaſury, the Lord beſtowes all theſe good things, Chriſt and all his benefits, is the Church of God: I ſay, the true Church of Chriſt is the equall and only object of them all. The Church of God is the true and onely object of all the former good things.

Q. How many things are conſiderable in this Article?

A. Two things, firſt the ſubject of it, The Church her ſelfe: ſecondly, the proper adjunct of it, Communion: firſt for the firſt.

Q. Before we proceed further, open ſome termes which will occurre in the diſcourſe following, viz. What is a Church conſtituted or unconſtituted? What is the Church Viſible or Inviſible? What is a malignant, corrupt and falſe Church, and not a true? What is a Church Militant or Triumphant.

A. First, we call that a Church conſtituted, which is ſo gathered together by the Word and profeſſing of the ſame truth, Diſtinction of Names opened truth, that it doth further enjoy the free, peaceable and ſettled uſe, and adminiſtration of all eſſentials to ſalvation, the Word, Sacraments, and outward aſſemblies, eſtabliſhed by Chriſtian authority: And contrary to this is that Church, which conſiſts only in toleration and connivance, doubtfull and unſettled.

1 Church conſtituted what?

2 A Church viſible what?

A Church Viſible, is an aſſembly of ſuch worſhippers of God, as enjoying the liberty of the ordinances, doe partake them, viſibly, audibly, and ſenſibly to the eye and obſervation of man: ſo that viſibleneſſe doth not looke ſo much at conſtitution, as at externalneſſe of worſhip: a conſtituted Church muſt needs be viſible, but not contra.

And this viſibleneſſe of a Church is, either compleat, when both the ordinances which concerne the being and welbeing of viſibleneſſe, I meane Doctrine and Diſcipline, do concurre: or defective, when although the eſſentials be preſent, yet the things which ſhould perfect the conſtitution thereof, are wanting, and many corruptions ſtill retayned.

A point which if it had been well obſerved, might have ſettled and calmed the ſpirits of many in our Church, who maintaine that pure conſtitution and viſibleneſſe of a Church are ſo inſeparable, that without the former, the latter cannot be. Which is falſe. For although we cannot deny but that defect of apoſtolicall conſtitution of particular Churches, in order and diſcipline makes to the beauty and conſummation of viſibleneſſe, yet to affirme hence that the abſence of ſuch conſtitution, doth inferre a nullity of viſibleneſſe wholy, is very audacious. The abſence of that firſt native and lovely hiew of a yong Virgin (being now grown to be a woman of yeares) to a more ſad gravity, diſanuls not her ſex, no nor virginity, but only the beauty of it. We muſt diſtinguiſh here between the Totum generis, and the Totum integri. The leaſt loſſe of a thumb, or toe makes a mans body maymed and imperfect; but yet that defect doth not take away the totality of kind (for that is, a reaſonable man conſiſting of body and ſoule) which he may as truly be, who is a maimed man, as if he were complete in his limbs. So may a Church be called truly (though weakly) viſible, though maimed of her conſtitution, becauſe ſhee holds in kind, that is hath the eſſentials of word, Sacraments, outward profeſſion, yea perhaps alſo an implicite faithfull covenant of the members members of Chriſt in ſuch or ſuch an aſſembly, I know, that I have ſaid will be much cavilled at. But God knowes as I am farre from ſlighting the beſt Churches, which I honour, ſo I would be further off from nullifying the worſer: which they who have done, have pierced themſelves through with ſnares, with aſtoniſhment in their death: and all, to conſider that ſince their firſt calling her harlot which bare and nurſed them, God plagued their impiety, and ſuffered them not to proſper in their ſeparations, but vexed them with contentions among themſelves, in ſo much that Separatiſts have ſeparated from themſelves to new Congregations, Miniſters renouncing their Miniſtry, and taking a new ordination, nay playing the Anabaptiſts, renouncing their Baptiſme, and rebaptizing themſelves. Yea, in ſo curſed a baſe ſort, that one of their ring-leaders, wanting another to do it, baptized himſelfe. And yet this is not all: for ſome of them grew to renounce ſome Articles of the Faith, and by name the ſoveraignty of the decree, with other points, God plaguing their ſchiſme, by leaving them to hereſy. Who trembles not at ſuch examples? let us keepe our bounds, leaſt being once out we be able to find no hope of returning, through giddineſſe and frenzy.

3 A Church Inviſible what?

The Church Inviſible, is that Communalty or fellowſhippe of the Eleƈt of God, (when or whereſoever throughout the World, in all ages and times,) as, being called to God, and given to CHRIST, become his myſticall body, and are built up into one habitation by the Spirit. Shee is called inviſible, not as if ſhe conſiſted of ſuch members as may not be ſeene and bodily converſed with: ſeeing that they doe (uſually) reſide in the Church Viſible, worſhipping God with others externally: but becauſe that by which ſhe ſubſiſts, is an Inviſible grace of the Spirit, not ſenſible to the eye of man, but knowne to God alone, and to others only by the judgement of Charity, more or leſſe. So that the next two termes of Militant and Triumphant, are only ſpecialls of this generall head Inviſible.

4 Church Militant what?

The Militant Church being that part of the Inviſible, which heere upon Earth walketh and warreth with, and for God, againſt all his and her enemies, according to that vow and oath ſhee tooke in her baptiſme, or preſt money, wherein ſhe covenanted to be Gods faithfull Souldier againſt the World, Pſal. 84. Pſal. 24.

Divell, or fleſh, and therefore ſhe is that Brood of Travellers mentioned in Pſal. 84. and Pſal. 24. that through Baca goe to Jeruſalem.

5 Church Triumphant what?

The Church Triumphant is that Inviſible, which having caſt off her harneis after the victory obtained, abides in ſoule with God, and triumphs there over all conquered enemies. Both theſe (although in divers ſtate) are the ſame Church, as ſhall appeare, when both ſhall receive their bodies after the Reſurrection, and make one ſpouſe of Chriſt, wherein is neither ſpot nor wrinkle.

6 Church Malignant, what.

Now laſtly, the Church corrupt or malignant, is that ſpeciall kinde of a Church Viſible, which, although it retaines Baptiſme and ſome ſuch truths as are of the eſſence, yet hath degenerated in the moſt of her tenets from the truth of the Goſpell; and therefore howſoever her Baptiſme cannot ſimply be denied, yet for her eſſentiall corruptions in moſt points of the foundation: eſpecially her malignity againſt the true Church, is to be for ever ſeparated from by that Church, which ſtill retaineth the purity of doctrine, and integrity of life. And what this Church is, all may conceive, to wit, That under the Papacy.

Q. I underſtand you: Now ſay which of theſe is that which is the equall and only ſubject of Chriſt and his Benefits?

The Church inviſible is the Object wee ſpeake of.

A. The Church inviſible, of which we ſay in the Creede, I believe the Holy Catholique Church. Only with this difference, that although the whole Church enjoy all: yet becauſe the Triumphant differs from the Militant in the fulneſſe, and poſſeſſion, the one by ſence, the other under the aſſurance of Faith and Hope; therefore heere we eſpecially ayme at the Militant, as it containes the whole army of the Souldiers, the body of his members.

For as particular Souldiers make a rank, and many rankes or companies a legion, and many legions an army: ſo heere. And as many particular viſible congregations, make up the body of the whole viſible: ſo many particular inviſible members and companies make the whole inviſible body of the Church Militant. Yet note, the ſoule of this body ſo imparteth it ſelfe to all, that yet each member partakes his part in theſe benefits. See texts, Heb. 12, 16. Eph. 4 15. 1 Cor. 1, 30.

Q. Explaine your ſelfe more fully. For ye ſeeme hereby to prejudice the the viſible Church. What? Hath not ſhe then any prerogative in this behalfe?

A. Yes, every way; farre be it from us to conceive ſuch a groſſe error. I may ſay as Paul, Rom.9 4. Here is the Law, the Adoption, the Glory, the Commandements, the Worſhippe, the Promiſes. Nay, from her wombe came this inviſible company, and at her breſts they ſucked: and beſides ſecretly in her boſome ſtill doe lye the reſt of the elect, as yet ungathered, yet in due time to be brought to this fold. We aſcribe as much honour to a Church conſtituted, as can be, and in ſome ſort ſay of her, She is the Pillar of truth, in point of holding forth all the named priviledges: howbeit in this reſpect of the ſpirituall participation of the benefits of Chriſt, we may not ſay that as ſhe is only viſible, ſhe can be called the ſubject hereof.

Rom.9, 4. Viſible Church wants not her excellent priviledges.

1 Tit.3. ult.

We grant, its one of the greateſt bleſſings in the World, to be partakers of ſuch a bleſſing, as a Viſible Church, and Bleſſed is that people whoſe God is the Lord. Howbeit, to ſay that the Scriptures which ſpeake of theſe benefits, doe directly ayme at the viſible Church, as when he ſaith, The gates of Hell ſhall not prevaile againſt her. That ſhe is the pillar of truth: That Chriſt is made to her Righteouſneſſe, Sanctification, &c. is very dangerous. For neither to her properly, nor neceſſarily doe ſuch promiſes belong.

First, not properly; becauſe ſpirituall things cannot be partaken, but by ſpirituall receiving and inſtruments; but that which giveth the name to viſible, is only externall adminiſtration: the ſpirituall efficacy of Word and Sacraments concerneth the elect only. The viſible Church (be it never ſo perfect) being that of which thoſe parables doe ſpeake: When the Kingdome of Heaven (not the VVorld) is compared to a field of graine, and of tares or weeds: to the net that had good fiſh, or the elects and hypocrites, that is, reffuſe traſh: that heape which had good wheate, and yet more chaffe. It is true, that in the Lords accompt the ordinances are given to the elect primarily, and to the reſt for their ſake: but in reſpect of the outward Policy of a viſible Church, the diſpenſation concernes both equally.

Yet thoſe 9. are not hers, Neither properly,

Secondly, I ad, not neceſſarily; for the Church Militant had lyen hid for a long time together, as in the times of perſecution, and confuſion, when ſhe was purſued ſo hard either by

by Pagans or the malignant Church, that ſhe could not enjoy ſo much as the Scriptures in their own tongue, much leſſe the ordinances, ſave by ſtealth. As the Lord tels Elia, 1 King. 19.18. I have reſerved 7000. to my ſelfe, that have not bowed the knee to Baal: and Obadia hid the prophets from Ahab and Iezabel, by fifties in a cave.

The Church when not viſible, yet the Church.

All ſtories record what a Catalogue of witneſſes the Lord hath had by thoſe Martyres, confeſſors and believers, ſince the primitive times, till now: and how God not only ſtill had this number (when viſibility fayled) but uſed them to ſupport the truth by blood or baniſhment, as by thoſe Worthies in the dayes of Queene Mary. Was not that the Church of God, of

Heb. 11. 35. which we reade, Heb. 11,35,36,37? Yet not viſible: for they were tortured, had triall of cruell mockings, ſcourgings, bands and impriſonment, ſawne, ſlaine with the Sword, wandred in ſheepes skins, and Goates skins, deſtitute and afflicted. Of whom the World was not worthy. And the Apoſtle, Rom. 9,27. ſaith, Though Iſrael were as

Rom. 9. 27. the ſand of the Sea, yet a remnant only ſhall be ſaved. Not all of Iſrael are Gods Iſrael. He is not a Iew, who is of the letter, but of Concluſion. the Spirit, whoſe prayſe is of God, not of man. I conclude: Although it be the greateſt bleſſing heere to the Church of Chriſt, that ſhee enjoy her viſible ordinances with peace and conſtitution: yet in this reſpect ſhee is not the Depoſitary of theſe ſpirituall benefits, but in reſpect of her unviſible frame by vocation and union.

Q. I conceive well what Church you meane: now proove that this Church is the ſubject of theſe benefits.

Proofes of the Article.

A. The Scriptures doe proove it, in all theſe Titles, prayſes and promiſes belonging to her. lick the dust of her feete, and come and worship before her; thee shall inherite the Earth, prevaile against the gates of her enemies, so farre is it off, that the gates of Hell can prevaile against her, with a 1000 more. All which shew the truth of this, that as Christ was the Fathers treasure of wisedome and grace, so the Church in him her head: for looke what is his, is hers, as in 1 Cor. 3. 22. All things are yours, and ye Christs, and Christ Gods. Yea the promises made to Christ himselfe, are applyed to her. Compare Esay 49. 8 with that in 2 Cor. 6. 2. 1 Cor. 3. 22. Esay 49. 8. 2 Cor. 6, 2.

Q. Now it is time to proceed to the use: what is it?

A. Very plentifull.

First, it is confutation of the usurped and pretended title of the Pseudocatholique Popish Church, who claime to themselves this priviledge to bee the Treasury of all the benefits of Christ. Theirs (they say) are the Scriptures, the Word, the Sacraments, the ordination of Ministers; all the glory is theirs: they are the Ancient, Generall, Apostolicall Church: all succession of Bishops, all miracles, Councels theirs: the world is beholding to them for the truths custody, and they have prospered when all other Churches have perished. But O ye usurpers, stay a while, and consider whether it be granted ye to be a Church at all! If it be, yet sure a corrupt, malignant one. For what common visible administrations do abide with you? what truth have ye not defiled? especially the maine one, of the Satisfaction of Christ, and free justification of a sinner? The Scriptures ye have locked up in a strange tongue. The doctrine ye have marr'd by your traditions: the Ministry of Reconciliation ye turne into preaching of fables, or railing against Protestations: the Sacraments ye have partly corrupted, as Baptisme; partly abandoned, as the Supper (by your Masse Sacrifice) and partly oppressed with an heape of your own. If any visibleness be among you, its visible worship of bread, of a Rood, or a Virgin above God himselfe, of God in the shape of an old man, of Saints more than God himselfe. Your visible Idolatries, cruelties and blood-shed of Saints, your visible Stewes, your visible adulteries, blasphemies, and vices, argue ye the successors rather of those Priests, Pharises, and Sadduces in Christs time, than of Christ and his Apostle. Therefore as Peter (whose chaire ye claime falsely) sayd to Simon Magus, so we to you in point of the treasury of Christs benefits. Ye have no part or fellowship in these things; And that treasury of Saints merits Use 1. Acts 8, 35.

merits ye dream of, the Church of God knowes not, but ſaith, We have not enough to ſell, leaſt we ſhould have too little for our ſelves; Gods treaſure is not wanting in neceſſaries, yet not ſuperfluous. Therefore ye are a malignant Church, and that whereof the Scripture ſpeakes, Come out of her, my people, and her ſinnes, leaſt ye taſte of her plagues.

Revel. 18.

Yee are the ſubject of the Plagues of God, not the benefits of Chriſt, and the Lord will ſhortly powre out his laſt viall upon your Throne, till yee periſh by the breath of his mouth: till both the branch and ruſh, head and tayle of ye be deſtroyed.

Secondly, terror to all the malignant enemies of this Church of Chriſt: If all his ſtore be layd in her lap, Righteouſneſſe, Redemption and the reſt; be afrayd to purſue and oppoſe her. A ſpeech of one of theſe Popiſh companions was once this, That when he came to talke with one of our Engliſh Divines, and did but name the ſolemne word, Church, his face waxed pale. But O ye enemies, waxe ye pale at the name of this Church of Chriſt, tremble, I ſay, and vaniſh: for this Name ſhall one day make ye to be, as Mica 7, 17. Ye ſhall licke the duſt like a Serpent, and moove out of your holes like Wormes of the Earth, they ſhall be afraid becauſe of thee. And 10. She ſhall ſee it, and ſhame ſhall cover her which ſayd, Where is your God? ſhe ſhall be trod under feete, as myre in the ſtreetes. Little cauſe have ye to rejoyce over her, for when ſhe is fallen ſhe ſhall riſe, and her riſing ſhall be your deſtruction.

Mica 7, 17. and ver. 10.

Thirdly, its admonition to all Gods people, to honour even the Church viſible. Although ſhe containes within her boſome many profane ones; ſome Heretiques, ſome ſchiſmatiques, ſome Libertines, Epicures, ſome morally wicked wretches, ſome ſpiritually rotten hypocrites, ſecret vipers and enemies: yet for the ſake of thoſe that lye in the wombe of the Church militant, for the ſake of thoſe true members of Chriſt which live in her, let us honour her. Let us know its an high precious dignity to be a member of a Church viſible: Becauſe not only ſhe enjoyes that liberty, peace and wel-fare, which enables her Children to worſhip God without let and diſturbance, (eſpecially if ſhee be conſtituted aright:) but becauſe ſhee is the Pillar of truth, the Iachin and Boaz of Word, and Sacraments, Prayer, and diſcipline, order and adminiſtrations: By whoſe whoſe government the true miniſters of Chriſt haue their Election, calling and ſtabliſhing in their places; the pure word is preached, the ſeales are diſpenſed: faith and effectuall calling engendred, grace of ſanctification wrought, ſalvation obteined. It is for her ſake (I ſay, even for the Viſible Churches ſake) that ſo many bleſſings are enjoyed, as the houſe of Obed-edom was bleſſed for the Arke. She is the heape in which the corne lyes: The net wherein the good fiſh are: The Militant often lyes in the boſome of the Viſible. Diſdeine not her Aſſemblies: Separate not from her members: renounce not her fellowſhippe: prize the field highly in which the pearle is hidde. Bleſſe God that makes her a ſanctuary for the diſtreſſed, a mother of Orphans and deſolate ones, an Arke for periſhing ones. Let her welfare be one maine marke of our prayers. Davids prayers were not onely for inviſible members, but the Viſible Church, in which they were: Ieruſalem, as having the right to the Adoption, priviledges, Covenant, ſeales, and the Lord Ieſus himſelfe. Oh! how amiable ſhould her Tabernacles be! How beautifull are the feete of them that bring glad tidings? How joyfully ſhould our feete ſtand in her Courts! There are the Thrones for judgement! If I forget thee O Ieruſalem, let my fingers forget to play! Oh her very ſtones and duſt ſhould bee favoured and honoured by us! Not as if we would put religion in walls: But for the reverence of her publique meetings! How ſhould we beg of God the ſupport and protection of true viſibility of a Church, conſiſting of her entire parts, members, adminiſtrings and priviledges? That the banner of Gods preſence may never bee taken from her. That all her ordinances may bee bleſſed, for breeding and begetting the youth of her wombe? How carefully ſhould all Gods doves flocke to her windowes? How ſhould we pray that her prieſts might be cloathed with ſalvation, and her Saints rejoyce in goodneſſe? How ſhould we cleave to her even in the midſt of her defects & burdens? Beſeeching God to ſet her up as the prayſe of the earth, abandon from her all ſpots of Aſſemblies, curbe and curſe her enemies, ſupply her wants, and reſtore her to her integrity? And the more neere to true viſibility and the lawes therof any Church comes, the more precious.

Secondly, admonitiõ to all that live in the boſome of the viſible Church, not to reſt there, nor give their eyelids ſleep, till thereby Branch 2.

the Lord hath drawn them to the inviſible. For, out of this Ark is no ſalvation. Strive to be of that number of which ye heard, & doe not reſt till ye be come to that Church, which conſiſts of the Heb. 12. ſpirites of juſt men, Ieſus the mediator of the covenant, & the blood of ſprinkling, that ſpeakes better things than that of Abel. Bleſſe God for thoſe viſible helpes the word and Sacraments: but remember that in theſe, the Lord conveyeth the benefits of Chriſt, Rev. 2. 17. which none knoweth, but the ſoule that hath them; Revel. 2, 17. Beware leſt the contempt of theſe viſible and audible ordinances one day ſo vexe ye, that ye wiſh yee had neither ſeene, nor heard them. Your condition is beſt or worſt: beſt, if yee beleeve theſe promiſes, and cleave to theſe prerogatives. If they bring ye to the hope of Chriſt for a better life: but elſe moſt miſerable. See and apply that 1 Cor. 15. 19. I ſay, take heede leaſt 1 Cor. 15. 19. even that ye have be not quite removed, light and candleſticke, Goſpell and all, for your Laodicean fulneſſe. Empty your ſoules of their guilt, leſt the Lord ſtreiten his Spirit and take away the power of his truths. Remember theſe outward priviledges ſerve to ſettle the inviſible upon ye. Boaſt not of the Temple, the Temple: that is holy; but ſee that it hallow you alſo: and that the word preached, and the ſeales of grace added to it, doe imprint upon you the benefits of union with Chriſt: juſtification from ſinne, adoption of ſonnes, redemption from ſlavery to Satan, your luſts and the errour of the wicked. Theſe benefits none ſave the elect can partake. And conſider, ye may be long under the one, and yet be led away from the other by the corrupt manners of the time, the errour of the wicked, and cuſtome of ſinne, and ſlights of the Divell. Yea though ye live in the moſt exact Churches and moſt pure for ordinances and conſtitution: yet yee may bee Iudaſſes, Ananiaſſes, Demaſſes, &c.

A caveat. Take heed that the coldneſſe of the age, and abundance of iniquity, cauſe yee not to faile of that inviſible grace, which the Goſpell offers yee: but know that one priviledge conveyes another. Stop not the wels of ſalvation, play not the hypocrites, to whom theſe ſtreames of the oyle and butter of the ordinances of Chriſt never flow unto, through your unbeliefe. But if yee obtaine vocation and union by them, then Bleſſed are your eyes, for they have ſeene; and eares, for they have heard, the things which concerne your peace, which others never ſaw: and yet are happier in not ſeeing, than yee ſhould bee in onely ſeeing and not beleeving them.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, consolation to the true Church of Christ, for her portion of these benefits given her in Christ. Wonder that the Lord should so looke upon the lowlinesse of thy poore, despised state in the world, as to make thee his Jewell-house of these treasures. If but of one of them, much more of all. Let this doctrine urge that in the former Article. Let each member of this Church, praise God for so good a portion fallen into so good a ground. Wish not that it had fallen otherwise any way, no not to be a Treasurer of a Prince without it. Let those precious names, praises and promises uphold thee in all times of reproach and disdain by such as know thee not. If they knew thy treasure, ten men would take thee by the skirt, Zach. 8. ult. and ten women would come to thee, to beare their name. Although thou art blacke, and hast lien among the pots, yet thou art comly in Gods eye, his dove, sister, darling: and although thy jewels are sullyed a little with the aspersions of enemies, yet when God shall make them up, Mal. 3. they shall cast their lustre, and then shall it appeare who are precious, when they are separated from the vile. Hold therefore thy right, and birthright, for whatsoever the Devill would offer thee to cosen thee of it: Redemption is thine, therefore liberty; stand fast in it: Reconciliation thine, therefore amity and favour: justification thine, therefore peace: Adoption thine, therefore accesse to God in prayer: and so of the rest. Hold these as thy life, and part with none of them, except Christ himselfe the purchaser of them by his blood, bee of no price with thee: nor let time cause them to waxe stale, but each day let these bee more precious, as being effects and proofes of thy calling and union. Use 4. Zach. 8. ult.

Fifthly and lastly, let it bee exhortation to all lively members of this body of Christ. If the body of the Church bee this Magazine and Storehouse of all his graces: learne that of Paul, Rom. 10. 18. That the root holds thee, not thou it. The body holdes the members; the vine, the branches, not they them. Be not high-minded, but humble thy selfe, and be lesser than the meanest of the members. Let the Spirit of the Prophets, be subject to the Prophets, and not swell above them: and the like I say of the other members. The Lord hath bestowed life and blessing upon his Church, for ever. Psal. 133. ult. not upon thee in severall: thy grace is a members grace, as the blood of a finger and the sence thereof, and the spirit thereof is from the heart Use 5. Rom. 10. 18. heart, liver, and braine, carryed to the body, and thence derived to each part. Reade that Eph. 4. 16. its from the whole body fitly joyned by that which every joynt ſupplyeth, according to the effectuall working in the meaſure of every part. Humbly therefore be glad to receive thy part, ſee thy wants, ſupply them by the body, and diſdaine not the grace of the meaneſt: for if thou abide in the body, its thine, and thy ſupply. As no member hath all the gifts of the reſt: ſo it hath the ſupply of all, if it abide in the body. Let it cauſe thy ſoule to be knit to the leaſt members for the grace of it; let the whole body (compounded of all) be glorious in thine eye, and ſay as Huſhai once did. 2 Sam. 16. 18. He whom the King and his people ſhall chuſe, ſhall be my delight alſo.

2 Sam. 16. 18.

Behold the graces of God in her: get diſcerning of them, for ſhee is all glorious within, and her outſide may deceive thee. Where faith, hope, holineſſe, the ſpirit of union, adoption are, let the perſons of ſuch be precious, and their name as an oyntment powred out. Looke not at their Wealth. Gold, Rings, and Inheritances: but let him that is a Saint, and beloved of God, excelling in vertue, be to thee as to David Pſal. 16. 2. Let our prayers be for her, and her protection: let us be joyfull in her welfare, and ſad for her ſorrow: and let us caſt our lot into her lap, to fare as ſhee fares. Yea let her outward peace and proſperity be deare to us. Conſider, it is not for nothing, that ſo many promiſes are made to her, even for outward beauty, and bleſſings. See Eſay 55. 12. and 43, 10. and 35. 7 and many more; therefore let us not reſt till the day of her proſperity come. Yea let us bleſſe the daies which we now ſee, wherein the Lord begins to turne the wheeles of his enemies, and to pleade his Churches cauſe againſt them in many other Countries who have long lyen under popiſh yoake and tyranny. Say we of our private grietes, in compariſon and reſpect heereof, as that good Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. 19. 30. ſaid to David, touching the diviſion of his lands, (which yet he had loſt by that Ziba treacherouſly) Nay, let him take all, ſince my Lord the King is returned in peace.

was in her wombe, or if nourished, it was at her breasts: Let us not now call her harlot (for her love) nor her children the generation of her wombe, the sonnes of the rebellious woman: but, even in our farre distance from her, (as some have by their late godly protestation professed) let us say, and let them say (as I noted before) If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my finger forget to play. And thus much for the first branch of this Article. Now to the second, that is, the adjunct of the Church of Christ. Psal. 137.

Q. What is that? The 2 part of the Article the Adjunct viz. Communion.

A. Communion of Saints or members of this mysticall body of Christ, which is nothing else, but the due entercourse and holy fellowship, reciprocally between member and member, for the good of the whole. Reade Ephe. 4, 12, 13. Psal. 133. 1, 2, 3. Ephe. 4, 12.

Q. How many things are we to consider in this Communion of members in the Church?

A. Two things: first, due qualifying of the persons that are to communicate. Secondly, due exercise of Communion among them that are so qualified. Both intimated in that text, Psal. 133. 1. They must be brethren: And these brethren must dwell even together? Two generals in Communion. Psal 133, 1.

Q. Wherein stands this Qualification?

A. Generally in this, that they bee brethren. No sooner is a man a believer and a new Creature, borne to God, but he is also a brother, or shee a sister of those that are bredde, both relations goe together. So then, first thou must bee a member of this body, a Citizen of this Ierusalem, a sonne and daughter of the Almighty, and a sister of the Church, a free Denizon of this Corporation: or else thou art not so much as generally qualified. Touching the grounds of this, I will not heere prevent my selfe, for I shall handle the point of Faith and the new Creature in their places: only heere I say, in these this qualification consists: No bastard, no Gibeonite, no stranger, no blemisht one, may enter the Temple of this Communion. 1 Qualification of Persons.

Secondly, and more specially, they have the true spirit of brethren, of members: by which the former is manifested to be true. For all that are truely borne children, and legitimate, have the true spirit of such: and also of brethren. This Spirit 1 Spirit of Communion.

of Communion therefore is the tryall of found ones from Counterfeites.

Q. Shew then some markes of this spirit of Communion?

A. As the Philosophers say, There is a soule of the World which holds together the parts: so much more, there is a Spirit of Communion which unites the members of it. As the parts of the body of man would loosen and fall asunder, if there were not instruments of sinewes, of muscles, of ligaments aptly joyning them: so here. This spirit of Communion then is the same with the spirit of union: though in a severall consideration, he that is one with God that begat, is one with them that are begotten: and the one issuing from the other. 1 Ioh. 5, 1.

We must know that this spirit of Communion is the privilege of the whole invisible Church, before it be the spirit of any particular member: for, the members draw spirit from the body, as the body from the head. Now this spirit is flowing from Christ, who hath therefore shed his blood for his Church, not only that he might unite it to himselfe, but also to knit it together with it selfe, that it might edifie it selfe in love. Eph. 4, 13, 14. And the Lord Jesus hath obteyn'd this spirit from his Father, by his prayers, (which he still continueth in Heaven) as appeares Iohn 17. 11, 21, 22, 23. Iohn 17, 11. Keepe them O Father, that they may be one, as we are one.

But to the point; this spirit of Communion may be discovered in these two particulars. First, in the spirit of preserving her selfe in her estate and integrity. Secondly, in the spirit of Furniture for the severall operations, whereby Communion may be supported. Wherein it appeares.

Q. What is the former of these, viz. Preserving of Communion?

1. In preserving Communion.

A. Its a qualification, whereby it is with the members of this mysticall body, as it is with all other bodies, either Naturall, or politique; it hath an instinct given unto it to preserve her selfe in her estate, from dissolution and ruine. No body hath so close and neere a Sympathy to it selfe as this: nothing needs teach any living member in the body, to preserve it selfe and the body in which it subsists: instinct doth it alone. So here: for the opening whereof, consider these few things. First, This spirit of selfe-preservation in the Church is the spirit of separation of different or contrary parts which threaten ruine to her. Metals melted will goe together and unite their their ſubſtance, but ſeaver the droſſe, which is of another nature from incorporating with them. *Pſal.*15. The Citizen of the heavenly Ieruſalem is brought in by his loathing quality: he loathes ſwearers, lyers, forſwearers, uſurers, and ſo of the reſt: the ſcope is, a true member of Communion, diſcernes a non-member, a Neuter, and loathes to intermixe or unite with them: As Peter told Simon Magus, Thou haſt neither part nor fellowſhip in this body. They may thruſt in themſelves into fellowſhip undiſcerned, but ſo farre as they are known, the ſpirit of Communion ſeuers them from her ſelfe. No Colliers trade is ſo noyſome to a Fullers, as the malignant properties of non-members, is yrkeſome to this body of Communion. Yea the Lord hath appointed it to be ſo in the very externall Communion of his Church; in the ordinance of it: that ſpots of Aſſemblyes, Goates, and Swine, be avoyded: much more then in ſpirituall Communion. No Communion between Chriſt and Belial, light and darkeneſſe. If thou ſee a man in whom the ſpirit of wiſedome dwels not, one of another corporation, of a dead, rotten, falſe, carnall, ſenſuall ſpirit; Lo, hee is not for thee. See 2 *Tim.*3,5,6. There muſt be no Marriage between Iſrael and Aſhdod: no inwardneſſe betweene them and thoſe that abhorre Sacraments, Goſpel, Miniſtry and ordinances. As the North wind is to the Raine, and the face of the Prince to a flattering Ziba, ſo is the ſpirit of this Communion to all her oppoſites: I ſay not to their perſons, but their properties, while abiding ſuch.

Pſal.15. Acts 8,21. Jud.12. 2 Cor.6,14,15. 2 Tim.3,5. Pro.25,23.

Secondly, this preſerving ſpirit is alſo a Drawer of like parts to her ſelfe, for the filling up and ſtrengthening of Communion; ſhee is ſtill ayming at the bodies increaſe: and therefore as the waters of the ſea winne upon the bankes, ſo doth this ſpirit of Communion ſeeke out and enlarge her borders. Shee is like to Dan, whoſe border was too narrow: ſhee gaines ſtill, as a conquering Army hath towne after towne falling to it; ſo this ſpirit both in the Miniſtery of it, and in the other members, endeavours after the winning of more, and more to become her Brethren, her Citizens, her friends; no body hath ſuch a faculty for the ſtrengthening of her ſelfe, for number, for aſſiſtance, both in gifts and graces, as this hath. Our Lord Jeſus the head of this Communion, ſpent his life in gathering members to this body. Peter gathered 3000. at once: and each member of it doth, or ought to become all in all to gaine come. The Angels rejoyce in it: The blessed Saints doe long for the perfect collection of all the members into one: and there is no truely borne sonne of God, but seekes to get as many as he can out of the World into this fellowship, mourning to see what an huge body the malignant Church is to the militant.

3. Preventing of anything hurtful to her selfe.

Thirdly, this spirit is a Preventing, and wary spirit, to defeate whatsoever attempts may bee made against her Communion, either by opposite persons or properties: for persons: First, she doth with very quick sight espy, and jealously avoyd such affronts as threaten her ruine, and by the spirit of Prayer, drawes God into a league and combination against them. The eye lid is not so tender over the eye, least any hurt should befall it, as this spirit is of them that plot against the wel-fare of her Communion. See Esay 63, 18, 19. and 64, 11, 12. where the Prophet in the name of the Church presses the Lord against them long before. Secondly, of all contrary properties which doe resist Communion: as Harshnesse, Suspition, Jealousy, Pride, Wrath, Selfe-love, Uncharitablenesse, &c.

1 Contrary attempts.

Esay 63, 18, 19 & 64, 11, 12.

2. Contrary properties.

Q. What is the second, to wit, the Furniture of Communion?

A. It is that spirit which furnishes the Church with all such gifts as serve to maintaine Communion.

The Furniture of Communion.

Q. What are they?

A. Many; The first, and mother grace of all, is Love: and all the graces besides this, draw their originall from her, thee being given for the mince to nourish the rest and to sustaine communion. Its nothing else save a beame of that love of God to the soule, which doth reflect it selfe backe to the Lord himselfe, and being unable to reach him, lighteth upon his Saints that excell in vertue, Psal. 16, 2. Its that which Saint John so magnifies, telling us, 1 Joh. 5, 1. He that loveth him that begat, loves him that is begotten. Its that band of perfection, Col. 3, 14. that holdes in all the duties of Communion, as the corner stone doth the sides of the wall. And it arises from the sight of that Image of Gods grace, which shines in his people: which ravisheth each other to behold, and knitteth each to other in the sence thereof, as betokening the excellency of that Fountaine whence it comes, 1 Sam. 18, 1. Jonathans heart was not more knit to David, than the Saints each to other. It is the ſoule and life of Communion: it is given for the uſe of the Saints: who could never endure al things, ſuffer, doe, and turne their hand to the workes of this fellowſhip, except this inſtinct of love cauſed them to goe to worke. But love makes all ſweet. See more in my Treatiſe of the Supper.

Q. What is the ſecond?

A. Sociableneſſe, a compound of three cordes not eaſily broken. viz. Amiableneſſe, Humbleneſſe, and Selfe-deniall. Amiableneſſe, is that holy ſuavity of ſpirit, which oppoſes tartneſſe, auſterity, ſowreneſſe and ſullenneſſe: whereby men are like ragged unhewn ſtones, unmeete to couch in this holy building. Contrariwiſe, amiableneſſe is a gentle and alluring facility of ſpirit, which both puts forth it ſelfe to all courteous and gentle behaviour, and alſo draws affection and delight from others. Many are ſo hatefull, and hating, ſo dogged, churliſh and harſh in their temper, that they are indiſpoſed for ſociety: more fit to be Monks or Anchorites than Chriſtians, through their Timon-like diſpoſition. But amiableneſſe is that grace that both acts and provokes all loving offices of Communion.

2 Sociableneſs in 3 things.
1 Amiableneſs Col. 3, 15.
Tit. 3, 3.

Humbleneſſe is a grace which oppoſes pride, a vice excommunicate from true fellowſhip of Saints: cauſing men to thinke themſelves, their parts, their perſons too good for Communion. Humility thinkes ſo meanely of it ſelfe, that it rejoyces, it may be compted worthy to bee a doore keeper in this houſe of Communion: and is glad it may be admitted unto it. Its diſcerned by theſe two markes, Peaceableneſſe and Equalneſſe: both principall pillars in this frame. The former reſiſting contentiouſneſſe, ſingularity of opinion, ſchiſme and faction, prejudice, ſurmiſings, cenſoriouſneſſe, uncharitableneſſe and the like. The latter abhorreth all diſdaine, partiality, and want of indifferency in this Communion. We ſay of friendſhip, Either it meetes with like, or makes like. Thoſe unequalneſſes of wealth, age, education, and birth, learning, wit, experience, ſuperiority, greatneſſe, doe vaniſh in this Communion: for it makes all alike, (not in civill reſpect) but in point of membership. If it finde equality, it ſanctifies it: as betweene Husband and Wife, Children, Friends, Men of like quality, Calling, State, Gifts, Magiſtrates, Miniſters, Tradeſmen; cutting the ſinewes of envy, and planting a moſt even likeneſſe of mind, of ſpirit, and harmony betwixt them. But if not, yet as the roundneſſe of the earth reduces all uneven parts to one figure, so this, all incongruities, dislikes, partialities, if not to an exact, yet to a competent equalnesse and proportion.

3 Selfedeniall Phil. 2, 5. 1 Cor. 10. 33. Phil. 2, 4. 1 Cor. 10, ult.

The third grace of sociableneſse is selfedeniall: which Paul cals a minding and seeking for the things of others, as well as our own. See these texts, Phil. 2, 5. 1 Cor. 10. 33. Phil. 2, 4. Let (saith he) the same mind be in you that was in Christ: who if he had sought himselfe, he had left us in our ruine and misery; but he pleased not himselfe, but as it is written, &c. The contrary to this, is selfe and selfelove, the bane of Communion, when men seeke their own esteeme, their own credit, ends, profit and prayse: and if they fayle hereof, they little looke how the publike wel-fare goes forward. We know a private Wealth is contrary to a Common-wealth; so is selfelove to Communion. So that where this three-fold cord is knit, there is a great qualification of the soule to Communion.

Q. What is the third grace?

Col. 3, 12, 13. The 3 grace, Tenderneſse. Gal. 6, 1.

A. Tenderneſse and compassion. A grace very essentiall to this Communion of Saints. And it concerneth the stronger members toward the weaker. Gal. 6, 1. If any be prevented by errour, ignorance, Satan, sudden temptation, let him that is stronger set him in joynt againe, (so the Word is) and restore him in the spirit of meekeneſse. It cannot be, but offences, pritches, tetches, distastes, will fall out among Christians: but tenderneſse will handle these matters, as the Chirurgians hand will handle the broken or spreynt joynt, til it have settled it. This is contrary to that rough and stiffe spirit, which cannot interpret, forbeare or long suffer; but would have all brought to their own levell and scantling: and rather than they will yeeld to the infirmities, errors, and mistakes of others, they will overthrow Communion. Who (saith Paul, 2 Cor. 11, 29.) is weake, and I burne not? I am all in all to winne some. If I cannot eate flesh but I must offend my brother, I will not eate it while I live. This is a rare grace in our age wherein each one is a man of his own bottome, and condemnes all who be not of his own frame. Tender conscience is now called Singularity; as if it ever had been so in the Church, that in all cases of difference, there could be established one consent: Nay, its strange to see how custome and prejudice have hardened men from all tenderneſse and compassion.

2 Cor. 11, 29.

Q. Are there any more graces of Communion?

A. There is no one grace of the Spirit, but makes much for Communion; as judicious wisedome, to discerne things that differ; stayednesse, to ponder things without rashnesse and precipice; sincerity and singlenesse of heart, against all false brotherhood; like-mindednesse, order, and constancy, in holding out in a good cause: candor and ingenuity of heart; fidelity, and trustinesse: teacheablenesse, thankfulnesse, cheerefulnesse, and the rest of this kind: providence also and forecast. But these I leave to the discretion of the Reader, to conceave of by those three maine graces before named. Phil. 1, 2, 3, 4. Col. 3, 12. Rom. 12, 9. Other graces furnishing Communion. 2 Cor. 1, 12.

Q. I partly see what you meane by this first Generall, viz. qualification: proceed now to the second. Wherein stands the Exercise of Communion?

A. In three chiefe things. First, Graces. Secondly, Meanes or Ordinances. Thirdly, Services or duties: of all which I will ad a word or two, and so come to the use. The 2 Generall Exercise of Communion. In 3 things.

Q. What is the exercise of Communion in Graces? I In graces.

A. As the commodity to be sold is, so is the market. Looke of what account wares are, in the traffique of men, such are the graces of the spirit in the Communion of Saints. See 1 Cor. 1, 4, 6, 7; and 2 Cor. 2, 14, 15. They are the chiefe commodity that the members of this body trade for. As earthly men are, some Merchants of Pearles, or of Gold, or of Silkes and velvets, or of spices, &c. so these are Marchants of Graces: and if they raise to themselves an estate in these, in Precious Faith, in Lively Hope, in Patience, Thankefulnesse, &c. they count themselves to have made the best of all markets. And as the greater the trading is among men, and the more they returne, the richer is the Merchant: so heere, the more plentifull the Marchants, and the commodities to be sold are, the richer are the traders therein. 1 Cor. 1, 4. 2 Cor. 2, 14.

Q. How may the soule trade for grace? What are the Rules to be observed therein?

A. First, each member in this staple of Communion, must get the gift of exchange. Hee must not beare the mind to be for himselfe onely, but must maintaine a due entercourse, and exchange of Grace for grace. Looke what the Lord Jesus our head is to all the body, that the Members by derivation are to bee to each other. Reade John 1, 17. Bee sure then first, that thou bring in thy stock into this banke; remembring that all the Rules of Trading in Communion of Saints for grace. Note well. John 1, 17. Rule. 1.

members of communion have the ſame ſtocke of ſanctification, given them to trade withall: they are furniſht with Talents more or leſſe for this encreaſe, and advantage by other. Luc. 19, 13. Mat. 25, 15. 1 John 3, 3. Reade Luke 19. 13. and Matth. 25, 15. Alſo Eph. 4, 13. Hence it is that they are all ſayd to partake of one ſpirit: and 1 John 3, 3. Every believer hath this hope: As if no grace ought to bee a ſtranger to any member in this body, for the kinde thereof. Now then having this ſtocke, each muſt afford grace to other (ſo Paul ſpeakes Eph. 4, 29.) as one doth preſent his ware in the market to another. And this is to be free of Gods Market: to be holy chap-men and cuſtomers therein. As in the Proverbs Chap. 1, 14. thoſe lewd ones ſay, Come, caſt in thy lot among us, let us have one purſe: ſo is it here. And this Peter calleth the Diſpenſation of the manifold graces of God. See his 1 Epiſt. 4, 10. Paul to Philemon, verſe 20, cals it, the having joy of him, and refreſhing his bowels in the Lord. Get then this treaſure into thee firſt; (as the trader gets himſelfe ſilver, which anſwers all things) and then, bury not thy talent, but exchange, and trade, buy and ſell, afford good penny worths, live by the gaine of all gracious examples, ſpeeches, behaviours, converſing in this Communion. Eph. 4, 29. Prov. 1, 14. 1 Pet. 4, 10. Acts 20. Our Lord Jeſus his ſpeech was, It is better to give than receive. Grace was put into thee for uſe, even the good of the body; therefore conceale it not, ſhare with the Grace of Communion, and out of the treaſure of thy good heart, bring forth good things.

Q. What other Rule doe you give for this?

Rule 2. Humility. Rom. 12, 10. 2 Cor 12, 5. Rom. 12, 16. A. Secondly, humility is another excellent meane to exerciſe Communion in graces. See Rom. 12, 10. 2 Cor. 12, 5, 6. Rom. 12, 16. Which is, To preferre others graces before our owne: and to thinke no otherwiſe, nor deſire, others ſhould thinke of us otherwiſe, than as wee are: condeſcending to them of meane degree. Proud ones get little, and doe little in the Communion of Saints. They get little. Firſt, becauſe every one thinkes them to bee ſuch as neede not Prayer, neede not counſell, example: their great ſhew makes men leſſe tender of them; but a good man deſires, his wants ſhould rather draw forth the helpe of others, than his gifts ſeeme to neede none. Secondly, the Proud man diſdaines to ſpy grace in any, ſave in ſome eminent paternes and men of note, for learning, wit or parts. But humbleneſſe ſpyes grace even thorow the Cloud

The proud get little.

Note theſe two well. And do leſſe in Communion.

of meane eſtate, learning, parts: it lookes narrowly, and ſpies oftentimes great grace in a meane man, for attire, for carriage and faſhion. But the Spirit of Grace carries the eye of the humble to the treaſure where it lies, lye it never ſo cloſe and low. The humble is for both.

Againe, humble ones are both fitter to communicate and to receive. The former, becauſe they thinke they can fall no lower nor loſe any great credit, for they have no great thing to loſe. Hence it is that when ſelfe love will chuſe to have no prayer at all, rather than to forfeit her repute: humbleneſſe will truſt God with her ſelfe, and pray. The latter, becauſe being empty, they are hungry: and the hungry are glad of any thing. Eagles catch no Flyes: but meane ones ſtoope to meane things. They are truely ſervants of the Servants of God. Not that an humble man denies the Grace of God: but becauſe he conceives, that either he is indeed the meaneſt of others in grace, or elſe that his better graces dwell not ſo well as other mens: becauſe darkned with more corruptions than other mens ſmaller graces be. The humble Chriſtian is in love with the Graces of others, and out of love with himſelfe. He envies not, ſlights not others: he ſees the uncomely parts often more graced than the comely: and beholds a pearle, (as of patience, wiſe ſpeech, cheerefulneſſe, mercy, love,) even in the dunghill of the meaneſt outſide. She knowes her owne vileneſſe, and wonders if any thing can come from ſuch an one: but others ſhe knowes not, and therefore what ſhe ſees uncomely, ſhe hides, but beleeves that excellencie in them which ſhe ſees not.

Q. What elſe is required?

Rule 3. Coveting of grace.

A. Thirdly, coveting of each others graces. 1 Cor. 12, 31. Covet the things that are moſt excellent. Eſpecially thoſe wherein others excell us moſt. 1 Cor. 12. 31. Appetite after the graces of communion, is the inſtinct of Gods Spirit, for the growth of graces. Many dwell much upon any gift they have to improove it: but they ſee not where the hedge is loweſt, to amend it. Coveting then is, to eſteeme the good for that which is precious in them, and to ſeeke it earneſtly. Pro. 19, 22. That which is deſireable in a man, Prov. 19. 22. is his goodneſſe. As Abraham ſaid to the King of Sodom, Gen. 14 21. Give me the ſoules, take thou the prey: ſo the hungry heart Geneſ. 14. 21. covets communion for graces: other things ſhee ſeekes in other places, riches and pleaſure, and the like: but grace ſhee ſeekes where the Spirit of grace lyes. Men that hunt the Bezard, ſeeke not her flesh, but that which is precious in her, the stone which is so cordiall. Base respects are nothing to the Saints, in comparison of this Iewell. And this they seeke covetously, as Paul, Philip 3. Phil. 3. If by any meanes I might attaine, &c. And indeed its the onely meane to procure it; for who, knowing the price of grace, will helpe them to it, who are indifferent whether they have it or not? The Lord Iesus, when he saw the poore woman would not give him over, till she had her desire, powred out all Math. 15. 28. his treasure upon her, Math. 15, 28. And so, importunity is a maine helpe to communion in graces.

not

Rule 4. An extracting gift. Q. What is the last meane to attaine grace?

Prov. 20. 6. A. A gift to extract it out of such as have it in them. Salomon saith, Pro. 20, 6. There is wisedome in the heart of the Wise; and a man of understanding will get it out. There must be a deep bucket to dive into a deep well, to fetch out the water of it. The skilfull Chymist or Apothecary knowes what Oyle, what Salt, what Quintessence lyes in the Mineralls, Spices or Herbes: and applyes his Art to extract and purchase them. That Shunamite rested not in the staffe which Gehazi had: she would have the skill of the prophet. So doth each Christian: applyes himselfe to 2 King. 4. 30. extract the gift of another; as Elisha, 2 King. 4. 30, 34, layed eyes to eyes, and face to face, of the child whom he restored. Some excell Helpes to extract grace from others. in this more than others: Delila lay at Sampson, till he had told his whole heart. So wouldst thou that seekest the grace of others.

1. First, by putting thy case in their persons whom thou tradest with. As, If thou wouldst learne what patience in sicknesse and paine is, or how thou mightest dye well, aske others, How should

2. ye doe in this case, make mine your owne? Secondly, observe wisely what falles from the godly in their communion and converse: oversee not their words, behaviours, affections, zeale scopes. 1 King 20 33. Watch them narrowly, as Benhadads men did Ahab. Yea, observe the speciall seasons wherein such grace may be gayned, and redeeme them either in publike, or private, ordinarily or extraordinarily; Speciall opportunities affoord speciall enlargements.

3. Thirdly, let faith bee the cheese extractor. Beleeve the graces of the body to be given for thy use, not onely in the ordinances, but 1 Cor. 3. 21. even in private converse. All things are yours, saith Paul: meaning all graces in all the members: its a great helpe of profitting, when as we beleeve all the graces of others are ours, allotted us by priviledge from Christ whose we are.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, rest not only in the outward object, but pierce into the inward. There is more in a Saint then a bare sentence or carriage will expresse. Looke into the bottome, as the Cherub into the Mercy-seat. The spirit of faith, humblenesse, hope in a Christian, is a differing thing from prayer or speech: in the family the wisdome, meeknesse of a woman appeares rather in the frame and spirit of her course and constant walking, than in her words or outside, *Prov.*18.4. The treasure of the wise is in their hearts. Beg of the Lord skill in this mystery: till thou canst say, I thank God, I discerne in such a sick man the spirit of patience sustaining him: in another that prayeth, the spirit of humblenesse and feeling; in a third of Sobriety, love, compassion, an heart above the Earth, &c. Fifthly, be wise to chuse thy object. Each man excels not in each grace or gift. And when wee meet not with that wee looke for, wee thinke meanly of men, as Naaman did, being crossed by Elisha. But the graces of God are to bee marked as they bee most eminent: as in Moses his meeknesse: in Phinees zeale: in Abraham faith. The eye looks not at the foot to reach a thing, but at the hand: nor at the hand to go, but at the foot. Acknowledge this peculiarnesse, and profit by it. Sixthly, although thou extract not at the first, what thou desirest, yet wait still to see more: But if thou get that thou seekest, blesse God and be satisfied and thankfull: as Paul, I have enough, I am full, I have received the fruit of your love, a sweet savour, *Phil.*4. And looke what wee freely beteame to others, that the graces of the Spirit may never lye dead in the bank of Communion: but still runne fresh, and bee of use for the good of the body. Yea use thy meanest gifts to do good, and thy loaves shall encrease in the breaking, and thy small beginnings shall prove great. By these and the like directions, conceive of this first point.

4 1 Pet.1.12. 2 Prov.18.4. 5 2 Kings 5.12. Rom.12.4. 6 Mat.10. Matth.15.37. Job 8.7.

Q. Proceed to the second Communion in meanes. What is that?

A. It is such an exercise of communion, as whereby the Church of Christ doth edifie her selfe in and by the Ordinances of God, *Ephes.*4.13. The 2. Exercise of Communion. Meanes. Ephes.4.13.

Q. How do these Ordinances of God edifie the Church?

A. Two wayes; first, as they are tyes and bands of Communion: secondly as they are active instruments and helps to beget and nourish it. Meanes edifie two wayes.

Q. How are the Ordinances of God tyes and bands?

A.

As tyes and bands.

A. In that they are appointed of God to be the ſinewes and cords of union (not only of the Church to God himſelfe but) of the members each to other. Without the which the members would ſcatter, and be diſſolved. Hence Pſ. 122. Jeruſalem is called a compacted City knit together by the Aſſemblies, by the ſacrifices, by the Thrones of judgement. Reade it. So Paul Epheſ. 4.5. One God, one Baptiſme, one Faith: noting that the Churches mutuall intereſt in the Doctrine and Sacraments, doth knit her in one Communion. Thus its ſaid that the Church continued and clave together (after the Aſcenſion) in the uſe of the Ordinances, the Sacrament eſpecially of the Supper. Experience teacheth, that the fellowſhip of the word, prayer, and the like, is the life, ſtrength, blood and marrow of Communion. Hence it is that they are called the Banners, Enſignes, Standards of Chriſt, and the Miniſters the bearers thereof. For as Souldiers flock to the Standard and Enſigne; ſo do theſe Doves of Chriſt flie to theſe windowes, and the youth of his wombe, to theſe aſſemblies, Pſal. 110 2. Hence Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 10. 16. The bread wee break, and the wine wee drink, are they not our Communion with the body of Chriſt? meaning, that as they knit us to him, ſo do they knit us each to other. S. Peter ſaith, 2 Pet. 1. 2. The Saints partake like precious Faith. We are ſaid, Heb. 12. 22. to be come to Mount Zion, and the Aſſemblies of juſt men. Why? Save that hereby we might be ſtrengthned in the ſame Communion?

2 Pet. 1, 2, Heb. 12, 22,

Yea, ſo ſtrong is this Cement to hold together parts of like quality: That it reacheth oftimes to the uniting of parts of different kind, while the word is preached in a Congregation with any evidence of the Spirit, how doth it bring in the contrary mind, humbling, breaking and changing their natures, till it have brought the Lambe and the Lyon to feede together? But, put caſe it prevailes not ſo farre, yet even hypocrites and time-ſervers, out of a convincement of the amiableneſſe of Communion, will joyne as brethren: and who but they? They will thinke it their ſhame not to be as eager in faſting, prayer, maintaining of the Miniſter as any. So that he who openly rebells, is counted a monſter. And yet alas! how unſound are the moſt of theſe? for, if trouble or perſecution ariſe to try theſe, how a ſquint looke they at one another, yea at the Miniſter himſelfe, for his very ſuffering for a good cauſe? And it hath beene noted of ſome Congregations, that while the meanes laſt and prosper, they Cry Hosanna: but if they cease once, they scarse will visite that preacher once in two yeere, whom they received all they have by.

We see that the Common tyes of nature, education, and place, doe much tye men together: To have had one father, to have lyen in one wombe, to have dwelt in one towne, to have fed at one boord, to have beene brought up in one family, or Nursery, are bands of fellowship; how much more all these Spirituall tyes in one? In particular, how dare we come to the Supper of Christ without love? why, because it is (as it is called) a Sacrament of Communion: a tye and band of Gods people, into a more close and firme league of amity, than else they could enjoy. So also the decency, order, beauty, of the ordinances of hearing, of prayer, of fasting (especially in the purity thereof) what singular helps are they to Communion? Yea, the members of the Triumphant Church, the Angels themselves are tyed to the Militant by the Ordinances, 1 Pet. 1. 12. When the faithfull members of Christ behold with what holy Clasps and Tachet, (not of silver or brasse) the Lord hath fastned the parts of the Tabernacle together: when they behold each in other, the Reverence, the Zeale, the Feare, the Joy, and all the gracious dispositions with which they meet God in hearing, praying, receiving: how must they needs be united in neere affection, and love? Not to speak of the holy Censures, which God hath ordained to curbe the untruly, and to confirme the godly in their station, to make the one to feare, and the other to obey; so that there is no Jesuite or profane person doth more abuse, and defile the ordinances to treason and lewd ends, then the Saints do embrace them, to strengthen themselves in this Communion. As Nehemiah once said, Shall such an one as I flee? Nehem. 6. 11. So do the faithfull, Shall such as we, who enjoy such Ordinances, and have such a Charter of priviledges, quarrell, contend, go to Law, jangle and live at variance? Shall we that are to heare one truth of God, and receive one Sacrament, lye, cog, wrong, hurt each other? Or dare we come into the presence of God in these Ordinances, if we walk inordinately in our course?

1 Pet. 1. 12.

Nehem. 6. 11.

Q. How are these Ordinances begetters and nourishers of Communion?

2 Meanes for begetters and nourishers of Communion.

A. There is none of them but concurres hereto in a speciall manner.

First,

Instances. 1 First, as for the Word preached, how many thousands did one Sermon of Saint Peters gaine to this Communion? And it no lesse preserveth and holdeth the faithfull therein. For either it findes them staggering in this Communion, and then it restores them; or weake, and then it strengthens them; or sad and heavie, and then it encourages and comforts them: or ignorant, and then it enlightens them: or unruly, and then it admonishes them; or standing, and then it stablishes them. So that it doth 2. all offices of Communion. Secondly, so the Censures duly administred, 3. and the like. Thirdly, so the Sacrament of the Supper, How active an instrument is it, to reconcile them that are at ods, and to unite them more who are brethren? It makes them 4. dwell together more sweetly and lovingly. Fourthly, Prayer is another; what office is there which it hath not done in the Church? What was the meane of converting Saul? What delivered Peter out of Herods prison? Acts 12.6. Fifthly, Fasting, Acts 12.6. 5 joyned with it, what good thing hath it not done? a Key to open the Treasure of Heaven, and to bring upon the bodies and soules of the faithfull, plenty in famine, Victory in warre, protection in dangers, ease in distresse. Witnesse the examples of Ezra, Ester, Ezra 8.23. Ester 4.16. and others, Ezra 8.23. Ester 4.16. And to end, The conversing of 6 the people of God in holy conference, how doth it revive and cheere their soules, when they are filled with heavinesse and sorrow, and to seeke of instruction and strength in the wayes of God? Heb. Heb. 10.25. 10. 25.

Q. I see your meaning in both these, viz. Graces and Ordinances: conclude now, and shew what is the third, viz. Communion in Service.

3. Exercise of Communion in Services. A. Its such an exercise of Communion, as wherein the members of the Church, by mutuall duties, and services, performed, doe edify themselves in the body.

Q. Of how many sorts are these?

of 2 sorts. A. Some concerne the bodies of men, other their soules.

Q. what duty concernes the bodyes of men? Are bodyes also the objects of Communion?

1 Concerning the bodies. Acts 14.19. Acts 8.2. A. Yea doubtlesse, if the dying bodyes, yea dead carcasses of Paul (supposed to be so) Act. 14. 19, and Stephen, Act. 8.2. were assisted and enterred with solemne lamentation: much more the living are objects of it. Besides, wee communicate not one with other, as the Angels by Communion of Spirits, but but by the mediations of our bodies. Besides, the Bodies, as well as the Soules of the faithfull, are redeemed to the liberty of this Communion.

Q. Are only the bodies of the faithfull, the objects of Communion?

A. No. There is an holy overflow of Communion of Saints, not only extending to themselves, but even reaching beyond the Sphere of Spirituall Communion, to those that be without: and that both strangers and home-dwellers, yet with caution. For as for strangers, except the occasion be extraordinary, and such as ordinarily relieve cannot redresse: are to be neglected in comparison of our own poore among us: save for present necessity. There be many who have charity for strangers whom they never saw, double to that which they will allow to knowne poore. And this is the disease of wretched people, not only in point of mercy to poore, but even respect and reverence to others. A stranger unknowne shall finde double respect above them wee know. For why, as they saide of our Saviour, Wee know him whence he is. So that it is a great argument with base people for honour, that they know not him whom they esteeme. A signe of an Idol-like, not religious regard. No doubt, that good Samaritane who tooke out two pence for the releefe of a Iew, would have given six for one of his owne poore, Luk. 10.35. Buteſpecially our owne poore are to be releeved by us, yea although they be graceleſſe. I know indeede few in townes put any difference betwixt good and bad poore, But the Apostle doth, saying, Doe good to all: especially to the household of faith. Nay many will sooner releeve the lewd than the godly poore in respect of their goodnesse. Perhaps because they finde the bad poore readier to filch from them, and breake their hedges or damnifie them in their estates: But otherwise neither do they lesse affect the bad for their sin, nor more affect the good for their grace: But comply rather with the bad, and maligne the good poore. Nevertheleſſe, the truth is, That the charge of God to give a portion to sixe and seaven, all sorts: to cast our bread upon the waters (where it seemes to be lost) and, the poore wee shall alway have with us; And moreover the common bands of nature and creation, must move pity to the miserable. The waters of communion must overflow their own banks, and we must heape hot coales of fire, to see if we can break their hearts.

Even to them without.

Iohn 7. 17.

Gal. 6.

Q. But

Q. But what service of Communion concernes the bodies of the poore members of Christ?

Service to the bodies in what it ſtands.

A. The ſervice of mercy and compaſſion. Sometime in the infancy of the Church, it hath beene above ability, Acts 4.34, 35,36,37. when the goods of ſome were ſold, and the Church had all things in common: And afterward we ſee the Church had very ſpeciall care of her poore, appointing Officers for the purpoſe, that is, Deacons, Acts 6. yea Paul made it one of his peculiar ſervices, that the poore might be relieved, both at home and abroad, eſpecially at Jeruſalem. See 1 *Cor.*16.2. *Ro.*15.25. Not to cite thoſe infinite Scriptures which preſſe this duty, and that not by law and compulſion, but voluntarily; and that not in a ſlight meaſure, but according to each givers ability, and receivers neceſſity, 2 *Cor.*8.12,13,14. It was one of Davids prayers, That there might be no complaining in our ſtreets, Pſalme 144.14. The ſtreets of the Church ſhould not ſwarme with beggers: but proviſion ſhould be made for a ſupply; and ſuch an enormity muſt be duly prevented in the Church; Not only when the ſtates of Chriſtians are ſunk, but even before when they are in ſinking; in which ſeaſon one ſhilling will go further then ten after. Thus Dorcas not in one kinde, but in many was helpfull to the bodies of the Saints; of cloathing their nakedneſſe, feeding their hunger, &c. So Matth. 25. Our Saviour reaches it to viſiting them in priſon, relieving them in their ſufferings, eſpecially for Chriſt. Infinite it were to name the particulars.

Q. And is there no other ſervice of Communion, to the bodies of theſe members, ſave only in caſe of poverty?

Petty ſervices not to be omitted.

A. Yes verily: even to the bodies and outward man of all ſorts in this Communion, for the attaining of the chiefe ends of Spirituall fellowſhip the more eaſily. Of this nature, are frequent converſings of the Saints together, the more liberall uſe of the Creatures, and the like. Thoſe Nutmegs and Raſes of Ginger, and bowed Groats, and guilt Pence, which the impriſoned Martyrs ſent out of priſon here and there, ſhall riſe up in judgement againſt the unkinde degenerate age we live in, in this behalfe.

Q. What ſervices concerne the Soules of the faithfull?

The ſervices to the ſoule.

A. Briefly (beſides all that I have ſaid before) the ſpirituall ſervices of holy example, ſavory inſtruction, admonition, reproofe, correction of errors, exhortation and quickning to holineſſe lineſſe, comfort in heavineſſe, ſickneſſe and diſtreſſe, and in each Spirituall reſpect, wherein member may be uſefull to member Ieh 4, 2, 3, 4. Iob 20. 2, 3. Of which ſeeing I ſpake before in the point of ordinances, I repeate nothing. Onely know that, Serviceableneſſe in this kinde is not onely to be exerciſed in the ordinances, but apart, even in a private Communion. Iob 4. 2. Iob 20. 2.

First then, warpe from the Communion of all popiſh, prophane and excommunicate ones from this fellowship: comply not with them, turne from all inordinate, malicious, ſcandalous, revolting and prophane ones. True communion abhorres ſuch. Not that they may bee excluded from the publike ordinances of preaching and admonition; but not admitted to the Communion of Sacraments, to the fellowship of a body, or to cloſe familiarity of converſe. For what Communion is there betweene Chriſt and Belial: As for hypocrites, they ſtand to Gods barre: But theſe open ſinners, depart from them come out from them, let not thy ſoule nor body come into their counſell or company willingly, leaſt thou weaken the right of a child; for thou canſt not be a ſonne or daughter of the Lord Almighty upon ſuch conditions. True it is, that our ſeparation from ſinne is counted ſingularity and pride; But why? Becauſe the Ordinances which concerne reformation of ſuch, are not executed. If God hath ſpit in their faces, how ſhould we comply with them, till they repent? The ignorance of this hath beene the occaſion of hardening many in their lewdneſſe, when they ſee that, let their courſes be never ſo vile, yet they can enjoy the communion of the beſt at their pleaſure, to give them ſome hope and comfort: and ſo they harden themſelves, in their ſinne. But let Gods Ordinance and not our owne affections ſway us in this: God hath ordained not our Communion, but ſeparation from ſuch, 1 Theſſ. 5. 2 Tim. 3. 5. to bee the meane of breaking their hearts: or elſe our way will not do it. Uſe 1.

Secondly, its admonition to all of Gods houſhold, to beware leaſt any bitter root riſe up in them to defile this Communion. When there were not above 4 or 5 in the Church, how did Satan pollute them, as Cain againſt Abel; Iſmael, againſt Iſaac, Eſau againſt Iacob? to overthrow Communion. So doth hee ſtill. Not onely in the nouriſhing of men in the Church of ſingular, ambitious, and factious ſpirits, to maintaine dangerous Uſe 2. Branch 1.

tenets, and falſe opinions: But even among the religious ſowing the ſeeds of pride, conceitedneſſe, error, diſcontent, jealouſie, and the like, to overthrow Communion. As the dwelling of brethren together is amiable to behold: ſo the diviſions of brethren are as the barres of a Pallace. Beware we therefore of ſuch ſcurfe: Nouriſh thoſe graces of Communion before-named, amiableneſſe, love, forbearance, wiſdome and other graces, whereby Communion may bee nouriſhed. One dead flye will cauſe an whole box of dyntment to ſtink: one falſe brother, proud, factious ſpirit, one ungrounded judgement, one idle, curious, and fantaſticall perſon, may betray communion. Let us bee wiſe to judge whom wee communicate with: for all may not bee
2 Theſſ. 3. 2. truſted: ſuch as are, let them bee ſo much themore honoured: and the hollow and unſound abandoned. This would ſtop the many breaches that daily befall Communion, both in point of opinion and affection: if, I ſay, ſelfe-love, private reſpects, worldly aimes, and miniſterneſſe, were baniſht out of Communion, as Vipers.

Branch 2. Secondly, let it admoniſh Gods people alſo, that if by any occaſion Satan hath caſt in any bone to divide them, and provoke them to heart-burning, wrath, diſtemper: That they preſently caſt it out, and repent, leaſt the breach grow greater. And let the falling out of ſuch bee the renewing of love. Let them ſo much the more narrowly look to themſelves after, to prevent the like: That ſo they may nouriſh the Communion of Saints in the band of peace. Conſider, the feare of Lyons and Wolves is enough to ſhake our Communion: The ſecret propenſeneſſe of our ſpirits, to pritches, tetches and conceits, are enough to marre communion: wee ſhall not need caſt on water to quench that, which for want of laying on fewell, is ready enough to dye alone. Do what we can, if not what wee would.

Uſe 3. Exhortation, to couch in this building of Communion, to practiſe it, to impart each one his gift to the uſe of edifying of the body: let not this dead world coole this grace in us.

Object. Objections I know, there are many, which a ſelfe-loving heart may alledge againſt theſe; Firſt, That this worke is meeter for the Miniſter, than the people. Secondly, That knowledge is now rife among men, what need therefore ſuch adoe? Thirdly, men care not for our reproofes, admonitions, they will not heare us. Fourthly, wee have no leasure for such service, from our own businesse. Fifthly, we must not be busie-bodies. Sixthly, wee are not gifted for it. I answer to the first. All the Lords people are a royall Priesthood. To the second, knowledge puffeth up, love edifies. To the third, Let us not kill our brother, because he is wilfull: if we do our duty, wee have saved our own soule: it is the little practice of Reproofe and admonition, which makes them so unwelcome. To the fourth, wee have leasure enough to buy and sell our neighbour; but not to serve him in love. To the fifth, hee that forbids busiebodinesse, commands us not to be slothfull in Gods businesse, Rom. 12. 11. To the sixth, I say, He that is willing and loving, hath commonly skill enough; and yet is no plea to excuse one fault by a worse: For God requires that all this be qualified with wisdome & skill to speak, and to know their places, observe the best opportunities for his ends, as well as for our own matters.

1 Pet. 2. 9.

Rom. 12. 11.

And thus I have shaddowed out this doctrine of Communion. And (to make an end of the whole Article) this I would say. Oh! How is it to be lamented now adaies, that (as he said Rome could scarce be found in Rome) so scarce a shadow of communion is to be seene among professors. As for communion in graces, it is gone and not mist: no more appearing among common Christians, then an Acre or two of land in a Map of a Countrey. As for the tyes of ordinances, how few are there whom the sacred band thereof tyes to the Services of Communion? And, as for duties, let us but mark what the love of the people and Congregations is toward the chiefe members of Communion: I meane such Ministers as have spent themselves for their soules whom they forsake, both in their countenance and maintenance when they are disabled, and by that judge of their communion together. And thus much of the sixth Article.

Briefe use of mourning.

Article VII.

Question.

WHat is the seventh and last Article?

A. The use of the whole part (the maine point of all:) viz. That we beleeve this Deliverance to belong to our selves. Whosoever by the former part hath beene convinced by that of his sinne, and beene kindely pinched and pricked thereby by each of those Articles: if every such soule be now also convinced of Righteousnesse, and beleeve himselfe to be the party to whom this deliverance of Christ belongs, by each of these five Articles premised.

This Article urgeth the use of the whole, viz. That every soule make this Deliverance his own in speciall.

Q. What is it to beleeve this?

What faith is.

A. It is the worke of the Spirit of God, by vertue of which a soule under the condition of faith, doth cast it selfe and rely upon the offer of God, for pardon of sinne, and for eternall life.

Q. I see some things in your answer to be difficult: as especially the two latter for us, I freely grant, faith to be the gift God wrought by his Spirit, so I would faine know what you meane by these two latter, viz. The condition of faith, and the relying of the Soule upon the offer of God. Explane these.

Againe, of the condition of faith.

A. I will endeavour it. And for the former (as before in the point of Vocation, I shewed what I meant by the condition of faith,) so breefly I answere, it is such a Qualification as God requires of one who may beleeve the promise of reconciliation to belong to him. True it is, if we looke at the power of God, he could in a moment set a man in state of grace out of the state of corruption; but in this we must looke at his will revealed, and what is most agreeable to the spirit of Bondage. The Lord knowes, it is no easie thing to beate a man out of himselfe, when the sence of his burden lyes upon him: therefore he so prepares him, that he shall not deny but that he meanes him well, even when he deserves least. And surely it ought not to seeme so strange a point, if we weigh the Scriptures, which never spake in any other language. We reade in Zech. 12. 10. and 13. 1. that when when the Lord would set open a fountaine to his Church for sinne and transgression, he first put into them the Spirit of grace, and compassions or Supplications, causing them to see him whom they had pierced, and mourne bitterly. If we see the fulfilling heereof in the Gospell, we shall finde that this Spirit of mourning went before faith as a preparative: Reade Act. 2. 37. when those murtherers of Christ heard that he was the Lord of life, who offered life unto them by Peter; they were pricked in their hearts, saying, Men and Brethren, &c. now the Apostle answers; Repent and beleeve. Reade those severall conditions of faith. Mat. 5. Blessed are they who thirst: they who are poore in spirit, they that mourne: for theirs is the kingdome, they shall be satisfied, and Mat. 11. 30. Come to me all that are laden, and I will ease you. What thinke we are not these conditions of a thing as yet wanting? to wit, of being comforted, eased, and satisfied? The like I may say of that, Ezech. 36. touching Seeking God. I will doe this for them, (pardon them) yet I will be sought for by them. So that its plaine, that the Lord meaning to bring the soule to beleeve, prepares it first.

Math. 11. 30.

Ezek. 36. 37.

Q. What is it which workes these preparations? is it any other thing than that which worketh faith?

A. No, doubtlesse. The Spirit of grace accompanying the offer of God in the Gospell, doth worke both in the soule; howbeit by degrees, the former at the first, and the latter after: and that according to the measures of enlightning and perswasion which the soule is capable of. As wee see in deepe Melancholy and Sorrow, that which at the first seemes harsh and cannot be endured: yet by degrees the Spirit is glad to embrace. In the morning we see there is light comming from the Sunne, ere the rising of it, as well as after the rising. So heere. The offer of Christ to the soule, and the goodnesse of the offerer, doth imprint in the soule some steps and prints of it, in a more remote degree: as to see a possibility of mercy to stay the soule fainting: when yet it is farre from resting in it. And as the Spirit addes more light and savour of it, so it workes the heart to the making more toward it, (if some bar of Satan, or corruption let not) as by mourning for that sinne which offended such a good God, although yet I apply not this goodnesse: and so by desiring it to be my portion, and seeing all other things to be drosse to it, and so of the rest. The sum is, the Lord by these meanes enlarges the heart more and more to thinke, that mercy to belong to her, which ſhe feeles to be dayly preſented in more orient colors, and to be the offer of him, that needed not to offer it, and whereof ſhe feeles more and more neede; ſo that as the purpoſe of God appeares more cleerely to it, ſo the timorous ſoule makes neerer & neerer to it, till it come to rely it ſelfe at laſt upon it. And who feeles not the experience of this in himſelfe, that as light increaſes, ſo the ſoule is bolder to venture, and feeles eſt one ſtep, eſt another to be wrought, of hope, ſtay, good affections of ſorrow, of deſire: when yet ſhe dares not judge ſuch a Iewell as mercy to be her portion. And to end this, what our ſence may conclude in the ſcattering of darkeneſſe, by degrees in the aire upon the approach of light, although till the Sunne riſe, the day is not perfect: the like may be ſaid heere in the wanzing of feares, more and more, by the approch of the promiſe, when yet the day ſtarre of righteouſneſſe is not riſen.

Q. But I obſerve, that many doubt of this for ſundry cauſes: firſt they object, nothing can pleaſe God without faith: now its ſure Godly ſorrow and deſire pleaſe God: and therefore what neede we ſeeke a further way, when faith may be ſaid to containe them all? How anſwer you this?

Further cleaſing of this truth againſt cavils. The firſt.

A. I ſay this, It pleaſeth God that theſe ſteps toward Faith, be wrought in the ſoule, though I deny that they (formally) pleaſe God as acts proceeding therefrom. For there are three acts of the Spirit in them that heare. The firſt, a meere common worke which hypocrites may have. The ſecond a gracious ſaving worke, as faith proper to the Elect. The third, I take to be a middle worke, which as it is not grace formally, ſo neither it is a common worke, but ſuch a worke of the Spirit, as ſtands in order to faith, certainely following; and this is good, in reſpect of that it produceth, to wit, Grace it ſelfe, which ſhall not be hindred, but perfitted in due time. And of this ſort are theſe preparations. Now to make theſe the worke of Faith, is inconvenient: for although a ſoule to be converted, hath a ſeed of Grace remotely caſt in by the Spirit, which ſhall be perfected; yet how abſurd were it to ſay, that a man hath that which he mournes for the want of, or which hee deſires to have, I ſay in that reſpect, in which he mournes and deſires it? otherwiſe I doe not doubt, but where there is true Faith, there may be a mourning after more. It is objected, Faith may be, and not discerned. I answer, for a time it may, and in some degree of temptation holding under, but not in an habited and settled manner of absence. Answer.

Q. What say you to the second doubt? This opinion seemes to crosse a truth, That conversion is wrought in an instant?

A. I deny it not by this assertion: for as it is in the wom be, that there are some preparations naturall in the fruite to make it meete for the soule to enter with the quickning power of it, and yet that onely is the being of the reasonable Creature: so these steps wrought in the soule before Faith, are not Faith, but the conversion of the soule to God, is in the onely act of Faith, in which the worke of calling is perfected, and not afore. Answer to the second.

Q. Dispatch the rest: The third doubt is, that the worke of the Law, is preparative enough for the Gospell.

A. So it is, enough for the doctrine of the Gospell to be offered to it. [Note by the way how this objection grants a legall preparation: Why not others also?] But the Law cannot goe beyond her selfe, the Law cannot breake the heart, or open and melt it, although it doe batter and subdue the fiercenesse of it in generall: now the Scripture urgeth other preparation, and humiliation unto Faith. For it is as impossible to mould the broken gobbets of a vessell into a new one without melting, as the heart under legall terror into a believing one, without some dispositions of the Gospel. To the third

Q. But the last doubt is greatest: That this Doctrine favoureth Popish preparation, to our own conversion: teaching to attaine to grace by somewhat within our selves.

A. This hath a colour in it, and nothing else. For who ever ascribed these to any thing in us? Doe we not acknowledge that the free offer of grace doth make the heart sensible, tender and capable of grace, as well as stampe the heart with it by Faith? Both come from the Gospell, and so doth all belonging to reconciliation: the warp and the woof of the cloath, the Alpha and Omega: the beginning to prevent and hold on, and the finishing of it, come from thence. Onely one thing I adde. It is true, that many hearers do make it a tedious way to themselves, through their own error. For they thinke that the Gospell urgeth these Conditions of Faith, as workes of our own pre- To the fourth.

disposing our selves, and so ayme at them, that they bringing them to God, might take the ware for laying down the price. And so, when they feele their Selfe-loving affections moove them to mourne, to desire, to pray, to deny some sinnes, and occasions, they thinke Faith is not farre off: and thereupon (for the time) none are so hopefull as they. But when they feele their hearts never the freer or quieter hereby, but old slavery to abide still, they are at a plunge, and so wanze away like shadowes. But these men must consider, the Lord offers not grace upon such carnall tearmes. That which the soule should looke at in her preparation, is not any of her own wel-fare and ends by believing, as thinking thereby to stop many feares, or to get some advantage to an easie Religion; but the glory of God simply; in the entertayning of his rich grace: which she ought to set up above her own Salvation.

The Conclusion.

I say then, that which God aymes at in offering mercy, is the magnifying of his attributes of Mercy, Justice, Wisedome and the rest, which he will have more to appeare in mans Redemption, than they could in Adams integrity. He will have the eternall doores open themselves, as he saith, Psal. 24. ult. not that our own ends, forgivenesse, and happinesse, but the King of glory might enter in. Even as he ordained our Lord Jesus not to obey and suffer for any ends of his own: but merely the Fathers, to whom he was subject: as we see in Romans 15, verse 3. And therefore he would have him lose all glory, and empty himselfe, that he might fulfill the ends of him that sent him, Phil. 2, 4, 5. If the Lord required this of his own Sonne, what shall he doe to us, who stand bound to it? And the Apostle never speakes of the mystery of the Gospel in any of his Epistles, as in that of Eph.

Eph. 2, 7. 1 Tim. 1, 11. Coloss. 1, 5.

2, 7. 1 Tim. 1, 11. Coloss. 1, 5 and others: but he presseth this, that the Lord aymed at the magnifying of the riches of his glorious grace, and of all his attributes, in the saving of a sinner. So that when this end of God (as much beyond our ends, as the Sunne is above the Earth) is once seene into, it carryes the heart more from it owne, than Sauls Father, when hee turned the care for the Asses into the care for his sonne. And as Mariners take all the thought how they may row their maine Shippe, but as for the small boates they tye them to that, to follow the motion thereof alone: so, if wee could see what the streame of God were in CHRIST, and the offer of Salvation, it would quite drive us out of our ſelves, and ſelfe-loves, and tye them to his ſhip to follow it: that if the Lord having his glory from us, we may alſo under him obtaine Salvation, we may be glad: and aſcribe the glory of his holy way and device of Chriſts pardon and Salvation to him alone, as 1 Cor. 1.30. that he who boaſteth, might boaſt of the Lord. Oh, how would this drown all ſelfe-love in his ſtreame? and howſhould our mourning be after him, and our deſires for him, and our affections toward him, preferring him to our own ſalvation, as Paul did Iſraels? The ignorance of this hath brought in a baſe and degenerate endevour in moſt men, to ſeeke Faith, and ſo keepes them alway in their extremities. But I forbeare. 1 Cor. 1, 30. Rom. 10, 1.

Q. Can you ſay any more to proove this, that ſo yee may ad a little touching the things wherein this preparation ſtands?

A. It is ſaid by Eſay 40, 3, 4. and Luke 4, 3. that John Baptiſt was ſent in all auſterity to prepare the people to humiliation, ſorrow, and ſelfe-deniall: as that charge implyeth, Repent, for the Kingdome of Heaven (meaning forgiveneſſe) is at hand. Which repenting was not a converſion to God before remiſſion came: but a preparing of the ſoule by godly ſorrow and ſenſibleneſſe of ſin, to prize mercy approaching. As thoſe words following doe witneſſe, Every valley ſhall bee filled, and each hill caſt down, every crooked thing made ſtraight, and ſo forth; which ſignifies nothing elſe but a preparing of an untoward heart by humiliation to believe the Goſpell. Like to which is that, Plow up your fallow grounds, and ſow not among thornes. But to leave prooſes, that I ayme at in a few words, is to bring to my Auditors view the manner of Evangelicall preparation. You that have attended my labours may remember how long I dwelt upon theſe in particular. For the firſt, of a broken heart, and reſtleſſe uſe of the meanes, I preſſed at large that text Zach. 12. 10. For that of deſire and longing, I dwelt upon that noted Scripture, Eſay 55, 1. and ſince that, upon Matth. 5. Bleſſed are they that hunger, &c. Touching that of eſteeming this Pearle, I ſpent many Sermons upon Matth. 13, 44. Touching that of Renouncing our ſelves, I partly handled it in the point of ſelling all: as alſo more largely upon Mat. 16, 24. and ſince in Naamans ſtory, which I purpoſe (if God give life) to publiſh; Many other texts alſo, eſpecially that of the bruiſed reed, Matth. 12, 20. them in your memory and affections : All I can now doe is, to ſumme them up briefely.

The ſteps of uſuall proceeding.

1 Steppe.

Therefore thus conceive it : that where the Lord will worke kindly, hee will ſo preſent the glory of his grace to the ſoule in diſtreſſe, that whereas before it was under confuſed deſpaire: Firſt it ſhall ſee a crevis of light, and an hope (a farre off) of a poſſible deliverance, as I ſpake in the end of the former Part. Which hope ſhall melt and diſſolve the heart into a ſpirit of mourning and breaking, not ſo much for feare of Hell, as for the Lord himſelfe. See it in Iona 3. Compare ver. 9. with ver. 6, 7, 8. when hope once began to ſpring upſecretly, Who can tell whether God will repent him of his fierce anger, that we periſh not ? Lo, they melt into teares, they faſt, put on ſackcloth on themſelves and their beaſts, and make a ruefull ſpectacle. So doth the ſoule here leave taking thought for it ſelfe, and take thought for the Lord, ſaying, Oh, wofull man that I am, whom the Lord ſhould be found of, when I ſought him not ? who had care of my happineſſe, when I cared neither for him nor my ſelfe : Oh, now the ſoule ſees ſtrange ſights, which was blind before ! Now it ſees patience in the Lords offer, and ſaith, Rom. 2, 3. If thou hadſt taken me in my riot, uncleanneſſe, raking up heapes to my ſelfe, hypocriſie, ſecurity, civility, and pitcht me into Hell in my impenitency, thou hadſt been juſt, and I had my mends in my own hands.

Iona 3, 6, 8.

Beſides this, it ſees bounty in God all the long time of ignorance, and wonders that the Lord ſhould endure ſuch a wretch (ſo ſtale in ſinne old and new) to treade upon his Earth, breathe in his Ayre, feede upon his Creatures, enjoy marriage, protection, health, credit, ſucceſſe and the like, being bleſſings only for them who have Chriſt the Lord of all, whom I have not : But that to all theſe, he ſhould ad the chiefe mercy, Chriſt and his good things (which the world lying in evill knowes not) yea pin them upon her ſleeve, heaping offer upon offer, ſeconding one with another, and waiting till the dew of the night had wet his lockes : Oh, it makes him aſtoniſht ; Whence came thoſe clockings of thine, Lord thoſe knockes at the doore of my conſcience ? thoſe ſuites of thine to be let in ? thoſe importunities, allurements, perſwaſions and cords to draw me out of my old courſe ? Nay more, that ſpirit of thy grace to drive them home, to preſent them really to me, and convince me of thy faithfulneſſe ! Oh, theſe doe even powre out the heart into ſorrow, which was dead and ſhut up before; When the Lord is inſtant, and deales as if the ſoule ſhould be the gainer! Oh it makes it confeſſe, that the violation of ſuch grace by contempt, is the moſt feareful wickednesſe in the world. This is to lament after the Lord, and to ſee him whom hee hath pierced. This is an handfull of the firſt. Zach. 12, 10.

Q. Proceede to another: what is the ſecond?

A. The ſoule reſts not heere; but breakes out into deſire that it might live to glorifie this grace, and partake of it, that it might magnifie it before all the World, and give witneſſe to it againſt all deſpiſers of it. Oh, this way of God in Chriſt is amiable to the ſoule, and it wiſhes that not onely her head were a Fountaine of teares, but the heart alſo of zeale, love, and deſire after it, and the prayſing of God for it, 1 Tim. 16, 17. Oh happy man, if I might ever taſte ſo much of it as might make ſongs of this deliverance; And this deſire breakes out into longing, and hungring after this righteouſneſſe: no hunted Hart ſo braying after waters, as this after Salvation, and to ſee into the riches of this myſtery; And as the hungry belly ſits not ſtill, but deviſes all Art and wayes, yea breakes ſtone wals to fill it ſelfe: ſo this ſoule fainting after a deferred mercy, is reſtleſſe; neglects no meanes, hearing, Sacraments, conference, queſtions, meditation, and ruſheth through Armies of diſcouragements, reproaches, wrongs and loſſes, for the getting of theſe waters of Bethleem, that it might powre them out in ſacrifice of thankes to the glory of Gods Grace. Eſpecially it utters it ſelfe in ſupplications and requeſts to God, that he would accompliſh her war-fare, and put all her teares in his bottell againſt the day of Salvation come, and till he heare and anſwer in his accepted time. Thus wee ſee it dallyes not; but plyes Gods ſeaſon: and ſuch a deſire as this, is truely ſet on fire by the Spirit of grace, not decaying till it obtaine. 2 Steppe. 1 Tim. 1, 16, 17. Zach. 12, 10. Eſay 63, 4.

Q. Adde one or two more?

A. The ſoule ſets an high price upon this Salvation, and recompts the ſeveralls of it, that it may ſee the unvaluableneſſe of this Pearle, Matth. 12, 44. Having ſpyed the Pearle, withdrawes it ſelfe, hides it, ponders the worth of it, viewes the particulars of it, as one would doe of a purchaſe, and by ſo muſing of it, ſets the whole man a fire with it in the eſteeme and value thereof, ſaying, Oh! that the Lord of grace ſhould impart The third Steppe. part himselfe in his secret of mercy to such a one as I? that hee might glorifie this worke above all the Creation; I see, it is his chiefe object, that out of a ruine he might set up the Throne of his glory in the soules of his Elect, and be magnified for it by them and in their salvation! Oh, shall not this rayse up my affections, I say not above my money, Pleasures, Marriage, Ease, Hopes, and Paradise below, but even my own private salvation; Poore soule, if God had not sought himselfe in thee, what had become of thee? He saved thee for his Name, and shall not that name of his be set up and shrined in thine heart (above all Idols) which brought and layd such a treasure in thy lap, and would chuse thy salvation to bee his Master-peece, in which hee would make himselfe admired in those that believe both here
2 Thes. 1, 10. and at his comming, 2 Thess. 1, 10. refusing to bee glorified in his owne wisedome, except thou also mightst bee saved? Oh! the sence of this, and the benefits which the soule enjoyes in Christ the meanes thereof, ravisheth the heart with the price Phil. 3. of it, and causes it to compt of all things heere as drosse, that one day it may partake the happinesse of it, when all hypocrites shall gnash their teeth, for forsaking such an offer.

Q. Conclude with the last: for these may serve to give a taste of the rest.

The fourth steppe. A. It lastly empties the soule of her selfe. Even as the Queene of Sheba beholding the glory and wisedome of Salomon, had no spirit left in her, but was ashamed of her own fillinesse: and as 2 Kings 10. Peter, Luke 5. beholding the glorious power of Christ, in bringing so many fishes into the Net, when he could catch nothing, was amazed. So doth the Lord in this case. Hee causes that loathnes and resistance of that proud heart that savors no grace of Faith, to quaile and faile utterly, takes away that corrupt selfe and selfe-love which is offended at his grace. And as the word of the Prophet bidding Naaman wash and be cleane, being once digested, drave him out of his humors and distempers: so the brightnesse of this grace offered to the soule, doth devoure the opposition thereof. Especially it turnes away the soule from her owne ends in seeking salvation: shee dares not now ascribe to her own duties, hearings, prayers, affections, preparations, but casts them into the Sea, that life may bee preserved. Shee feeles the great ends of Gods Glory to worke all these in her:

her: but no way as workes commending her to God; but as ſparkles of the Spirit of grace, which by theſe ſteps drawes her home to God, becauſe he will ſave her. And therefore in all theſe, ſhe is humbled in her ſelfe and naked, as one that is no better than ſhe was in point of deſart; though in the way of ſalvation much neerer. And therefore ſhee ſaith with the Church. Hoſ. 14. 3. Aſſhur ſhall not ſave me: I will not ride upon Horſes, but with thee the fatherleſſe ſhall find mercy. And heerein ſhee differs from all proud hypocrites, who wanting this fire upon their herth, are faine to compaſſe themſelves with their owne ſparkles; though they lye downe in ſorrow, Eſay 50, 11. Nay its certaine, a prepared heart is ſo farre from the boaſting of a Phariſee, in his attempts, that rather he is as Peter, toyled and wearied of himſelfe; ſo farre from ſacrificing to his Nets, that he lookes upon them with abhorring, and ſaith, Lord, depart from me a ſinfull man. Hoſ. 14, 3. Eſay 50. 11.

Q. What is the meaning of that condition: That the ſoule be at Gods diſpoſe to open it a little.

A. The meaning thereof is this, That the ſoule acknowledging that God hath drawne it towards Chriſt, and therefore will not leave his worke by halfes: doe, humbly deny it ſelfe in her own haſte and deſires, and content to be as God will have her, and to lye low at his feete, to be put off and delayed from that meaſure of revealing, from that evidence of the promiſe, and that reſting upon it which ſhee would gladly partake. And that in the conſtant uſe of meanes, ſhee be willing to ſtay Gods leaſure with meekeneſſe and patience, till the Lord pleaſe to enlarge her. For, what doth ſhe know whether he hold her ſo low, becauſe ſhee is not yet fit to have her deſire granted? As it was with Paul, The Lord kept him under a pricke in the fleſh, and the buffeting of Satan, leaſt he ſhould be puffed up by his revelations: yea, though he prayed oft to be eaſed of it, yet God told him, He would uphold him with grace ſufficient, till he ſaw him fitter for that he asked: And Paul ſeeing Gods will, was content to be at his diſpoſe, and would very gladly be under infirmity, that his power might be magnified in upholding him. So ought the ſoule, even to quiet it ſelfe under her deadneſſe, and weakeneſſe: not giving place to eaſe and looſeneſſe, but walking in her innocency, till the Lord ſhall enlarge her to further ſtrength and ability: and ſo, counting it her ſtrength and beſt course to sit still, Esay 30. in respect of distemper or impatience. As touching that opinion, That the soule must be content to perish or to be saved as God shall dispose of her: I say this, that the Lord hath more adoe with some of his, than others, in the taming of their stout hearts: and he is faine so to yoake them, till he bring them fully to the bent of his bow, even to be weary with their struglings with God, and (seeing no remedy) to honour his free grace with a stooping of heart unto his will: to doe with them as he shall please, and for their parts, they will fight against him no longer. But to speake properly, to be content to perish that God might have glory is rather the grace of some great proficient in godlinesse, as Paul was, Rom. 10. 1. than of a poore novice, who seekes ease of his lode from a cleere promise. I say no more.

And by this little I desire my Auditors to thinke of the rest: I doe not affirme that God doth alway proceede alike with all for matter of order, sensiblenesse, manner, or measure. In some he workes more at the first than in others; some he sooner cals than others, in some one of these is more cleere than in others: as in Lydia and Zacheus: and commonly as the degrees of corruption have been, so are the degrees of humbling; and as the obedience to meanes hath been longer (without breaking out) so the measure of Terror is lesser: the Lord is a most free agent, and tyed to none: we speake only of such preparations as experience sheweth to be most ordinary among hearers. If God please I shall hereafter ad more in another treatise.

Gods manner of proceeding not alike in all.

Q. Ad somewhat briefely for use hereof, ere wee come to the latter Branch of Faith, that so confusion of uses may bee avoyded.

Use 1. Branch 1.

A. The uses are these. First, this is terror to all that dreame their estate to be good, when yet they lye in their sinnes as whole men: they thinke Christ is offered them barely. Bee reconciled to God: bee they what they will bee. And in this they are the more strengthened by the opinion of such Divines as dislike these preparations. The which opinion as it takes away the benefit of triall and comfort from many poore soules, who would faine finde the least seed of Faith to bee begun in them; and keeps them long at a dead point with themselves for lack of Faith it selfe: so it nouzles many hypocrites in a conceite of themselves, that be they what they will, yet they they may be reconciled at their pleasure. And truly this fruit of it, is the best that I have found to come from it. But to passe by them: to these I say, beware lest yee play despisers of grace so long (by turning it to wantonnesse) while the Lord leaves ye to vanish and perish in your owne error and evils.

Secondly, to all such as remaine blinde and dead-hearted blocks in the midst of this grace of the Gospell: They see no light, nor feele any warmth therefrom; but still are cold snakes, and are neither affected with good nor evill: neither hope, sorrow, desire or estimation of this pearle will fasten on them. At the heare-say of a bargaine, at the noise of their pleasures, and at their jigs, and tales they can laugh: but here, neither will good day mend, nor bad paire them. Where is the hope of your faith, where no dram of the condition of it is wrought? Consider, at death, yee shall heare God saying thus, Loe, the things which your hearts loved, ye have: and if my grace and offer had beene as precious as a base pot of Beere, as a game at Cards, as a long lock at your eares, ye had also had that. But now your knocking at my doore is too late, who heard not my knockings at yours. Branch 2.

Thirdly, all dallyers with the season of this grace, and putters off this rich offer of God, pind on their sleeve: thinking that they might have God tyed to them, and because they have tasted of his grace, with the tip of their tongue, therefore they may have it at their command: whereas having once despised it, they grow further and further from it daily. They should have learned that the condition of faith is the preparation to faith; dally with the one, and forgoe the other. Branch 3.

Also all hypocrites that rest in some appeatance of these preparations, not wrought in them by the Spirit of grace, but from their own principles; which appeares in this, that if they be reproved, they cannot endure it, dare not enter into the triall of their mournings, desires, and prove them to come from the Spirit of grace; but love their own ease, better than the rules of God, and while their owne pangs last, who but they? but when their own sparkles be out, then full of sorrow. No constancy, plainnesse, selfedeniall can be found in them; grace is nothing worth of it selfe, except some mixture of their own concurre with it. A signe that they have felt little sweetnesse in it, and therefore are farre from beleeving it. Oh, lose not your labour, lay not out your money for no bread; chuse not to goa mile with God for nothing, rather than two for salvation; Branch 4.

let Gods glory be above your ſelves, and loſe not all for a falſe
2 Iohn 8. heart, but take his counſell, that ſaid, 2 John 8. Loſe not the things ye have wrought for, till ye have got a full reward, even faith to ſave your ſoule.

Vſe 2. Secondly, let this doctrine remove thoſe feares and objections which ariſe in weake conſciences, as touching the greatneſſe and meaſure of preparations. By the way perhaps ſome might aske the reaſon, why the moſt people make more queſtions and doubts about the Meaſures of theſe preparings, than about faith it ſelfe. Oh (ſaith one) if I could finde in my ſpirit ſuch brokenneſſe, ſuch mourning, ſuch ſtruglings and pangs of the new birth, ſuch hungring deſires, and appetite after mercy, ſuch paines and diligence, and ſuch reſtleſſe endeavours to heare, pray, conferre, as I ſee bred in others, it were ſomewhat indeed. Then I could beleeve. Firſt, I ſay, the true cauſe of this in ſome poore ſoules may bee the ſweet working of the Spirit of grace, which hath ſhewed them ſomewhat in the precious promiſe, which makes them impatient and unſatisfied till they obtaine it: and ſo it is well: for in this their ſeeking they ſhall finde. But ſurely in the greater ſort, wee may perceive this their whining comes from hence, that the works of preparation are more palpable and ſenſible to the ſoule, than the work of faith, which is then ſtrongeſt when perhaps feeling is leaſt. Now it is ſtrange to ſee how earneſt our nature is after ſuch graces, as we can feele moſt in our ſelves, and which have a kinde of concurrence with ſomewhat of our own, as affections of zeale, humbleneſſe, deſire, feare, diligence, and the like: whereas faith which hath her worke about another object without her ſelfe, is more ſpirituall and heavenly. And therefore wee muſt plod about the former that ſtill our feelings might ſatisfie us: and we think we cannot have mournings enough, hopes, comforts, and joyes enough, becauſe ſelfelove is more prone to ſnatch to it ſelf ſome of theſe, as planted in nature. But to come to the point I intend: let not this diſquiet any poore ſoule under the condition of faith, preparations are weaker in them than others (ſo be it that their ſloth and eaſe bee not the cauſe:) neither let them greedily hunt after theſe, ſo as to darken faith in the promiſe in their eye, or to reſt in theſe: But let them know firſt that in theſe ſtands not their happineſſe, but in Chriſt beleeved in. Secondly, if they had theſe in the meaſure they would, they would be ready to reſt too much in them, as Peter in his his Tabernacles. Thirdly, that the truth of these, not the greatnesse hath the promise; even the smoking flax and the bruised reed: yea, commonly such honour God soonest by beleeving. And with these cautions, let them go on and prosper.

Thirdly, exhortation to poore soules, whom God hath truly brought under the condition of faith to blesse him for that handsell, I say, first to acknowledge it great mercy, although they have many doubts and feares, and distempers to hinder them, and the Devill to come betweene cup and lip, that they might not drink of that cup of salvation. Oh remember, its mercy to be brought within these Suburbs of Heaven; if ye desire, say not its nothing. It was wont to be the answer of a discontented woman, who had enough; when she was asked how she fared, to answer, We have nothing, &c. This whining heart is in us, and hinders us from much good. Be thankfull for any thing, especially a pledge of faith: nay, be humble and say, Lord what ever is not hell, is from mercy. I will rather comfort my selfe, that the Lord meanes me the fulnesse of this earnest: rather than grudge that presently I have not my will, and so wax weary of waiting. And secondly, should expell slavish feares from them, because the Lord hath given them a condition of faith. Beware ye doe not abuse it. Pledges are well kept by honest men, not spoyled. Doe not tempt God by your distrust: nor suffer the good preparations of the Spirit to dye or wanze, through boldnesse, loosenesse, worldlinesse, pleasures; lest God make them as bitter to ye, as Sampsons dallyings with his harlot. If ye belong to God, he will save ye: but it shall be thorow the fire, and with some smart, ere the Devill and your conscience have done with ye. It is in this case as with them that play at Slide-groat: the silver at first may be easily discerned by the stampe, but by that time they have used it at their pleasure a while, is so defaced, that ye know not what to make of it. Make conscience of keeping Gods pledges, safe and entire. And to conclude, let these conditions already wrought be encouragements to attend the Lord for Faith it selfe. Use 3. 1 2

When Manoa told his Wife, they must dye, because they had seene God: shee rather argued contrarily, That if God would slay them, hee would never have told them of a sonne: for how could this and that stand together? Nay wait upon God, and presse upon him by prayer to performe his promise upon this condition. Elisha being to forgoe his Master, asked ked him that his ſpirit might be doubled upon him: Elia told him it was hard to grant: howbeit if he ſaw him at their parting, he ſhould. Now what did Eliſha? did he ſtart from him? Could any thing divide him? No, he would be ſure to keepe the condition of the grant: and ſo did. For ſeeing Elia to aſcend, he cryed, My Father, my Father, the Horſeman of Iſrael and the Chariots thereof: and ſo in taking up the Cloak of his Maſter, he received his ſpirit doubled. Oh, that this wiſdome were in us! Rather the ſinne of our hearers is, after they have ſpent a great part of their life, in getting the condition, they are ſo farre from heartning themſelves to beleeve that God will perfect the work of faith with power, that they are ready to ſtand betweene theſe two, the Condition, and the performance. If they bee urged to beleeve, they flye to the condition, ſaying, yea, if I had the condition, but I am farre from mourning, &c. If they be urged to the condition, then they anſwer, yea, if I could beleeve: as if theſe were works of our own, not the Lords, rather the one contrary to the other, than agreeable. I end therefore with this caveat, Let not the Devill deceive thee about thy condition, and then hold what thou haſt, and let nothing ſo beguile thee as to deny Gods grace: and ſo doing, pleade with the Lord humbly, that he would not fruſtrate thy hope, of which he hath given thee ſuch a pledge, and in his beſt ſeaſon he will aſſuredly anſwer thee.

2 Kings 2.

Q. Conclude with the laſt uſe.

A. It is very weighty; and diſcovers the ignorance and vanity of ſuch Miniſters and people, who though they be not leavened with Popery, yet partly from confounding mourning or ſorrow with repentance, and partly from blindneſſe and error of the common ſort, teach and think that repentance muſt go before faith. And here they flouriſh exceedingly; for (ſay they) What? Doth not Peter ſay, Repent and beleeve? Think ye that Chriſt will dwell where corruption is? Muſt we not repent, becauſe the Kingdome of Heaven is neere? Will God meddle with ſuch as live in their ſinne? Hence they mightily urge mortification of luſts, before wee dare apply Chriſt, &c. But oh yee blind guides of the blinde! ſee you not how under colour of your devotion, ye overthrow Chriſt? What uſe is there of Chriſt, if our ſinnes (before wee beleeve) muſt firſt be mortified? Shall Chriſt dye for ſinne already mortified? Can wee diſpoſe our ſelves ſelves to grace, when as all that is in us is graceleſſe? No: Chriſt must be, not only before our mortification, but alſo before our beleeving, yea before our preparation to beleeve. Oh! But Iohn the Baptiſt, bids the people to repent, becauſe the Kingdome was at hand. I anſwer, This objection comes from meere ignorance of the Text. For that Repentance there, ſignifieth only a penitency of heart, yrking the ſoule for ſinne. And yet Chriſt only is the worker of it, and its a preparing grace of the Kingdome (as I noted) raiſed in the hearts of all that God will ſave. Againe, it confounds the order of ſanctification with the order of Regeneration; for although Mortification go before Vivification, yet repentance never goes before faith. Obiect. Anſw.

Q. Now come to the latter branch, What is it, to caſt the ſoule upon a promiſe, or to believe?

A. It is the laſt work of the Calling Spirit of God, whereby an humbled ſinner doth caſt himſelfe upon this word of God, Be reconciled, come & drinke, come and I will eaſe you, (or the like offer, will, charge, or promiſe of God) for pardon and life. This point is of all others the chiefe, and therefore I chuſe to referre it to this place, as the uſe of all that hath beene ſpoken joyntly conſidered; for we know, a fivefold cord is not eaſily broken, and yet no one twiſt thereof might well be ſpared. The maine point. What it is to caſt our ſelves upon the promiſe.

Five divers grounds have beene handled in this ſecond part. First. God the Father our enemy, hath cut off his plea, and found out our deliverance. Secondly, the Lord Jeſus accordingly hath ſatisfied the juſtice of God; that mercy might have free courſe by the procuring of a righteouſneſſe. Thirdly, God the Father accepts this for a poore ſinner as if he in perſon had ſatisfied, and therefore offers it to the ſoule moſt unfeignedly, without hook or crook. Fourthly, He offers him not nakedly, but with all his rich furniture, to draw the ſoule to faſten upon him. Fifthly, Hee offers him to each poore member of his Church, there to dwell for ever both in grace and glory. Now to conclude; I demand what one linke of this chaine were not ſtrong enough to draw the heart to ſettle it ſelfe upon it? And yet I muſt ſay this, That the word and promiſe of God is the immediate thing which Faith relyes upon: although ſtrengthened with all the reſt. A little therefore of the nature of this promiſe. How Faith preſuppoſes all the Articles ſpoken of. 3. 4. 5.

Q. How many things are required to this conſideration?

Of the nature of the promise, which faith looks at.

A. Two in generall. The one to gage the promise and offer of God, as a Marriner would sound the depth of the Sea, least his ship should be on ground; so see whether it be able to beare the weight of the soule or no, and answer all her distempers and feares fully. The second if it appeare that it is able to sustaine it, then to rely and cast it selfe upon it confidently, for her own pardon and salvation.

Q. How shall the soule rightly gage the depth and strength of the offer and promise, which it cannot reach?

How to gage the depth of a Promise.

A. Although the Marriner cannot himselfe by his owne fadome touch the bottome of the Sea, yet by his line and plummet he can sound it as well, as if he could reach it with his hand, and so fasten his Ancor upon it: so here the plummet and cable of the Word, wherein this strength and depth lyes, will helpe us to finde it out so farre as may serve our turne. The hand of faith touches the depth of mercy contained in the offer, by the direction of the Spirit in the Word, which tels us what is contained therein.

Q. How many things are contained in it?

Look back to Article 3.

A. Many things of which by the way I gave a touch in Article the third, but here I will open further. Look thither and see what I said of the freedome and simplicity of the offer. Now adde more touching the nature of the Word of promise, which is Gods expression of the offer at the full. Three things then the soule must look at, to bottome it selfe upon the promise of Reconciliation and deliverance. First, the wisdome of the Lord. Secondly, the strength. Thirdly, the faithfulnesse: all which are sure grounds the Lord hath hidden in the promise of mercy to a poor sinner, that is under the condition. Reade more in my Sacraments Treatise 2. in point of Faith.

Three things to bottome the soule upon a promise or word.

Q. What is the first, the wisdome of God in the promise?

The 1. Wisdome of the Promiser. 2 Kings 3. ult.

A. I may say of it, as the holy Ghost said of Solomon, when hee called for a Sword to cut the childe: All Israel saw that God had put the spirit of wisdome into him to doe justice. So, God hath shewed all wisdome in the promise, to settle the soule. And that in two respects: first, of himselfe: secondly, of us: in respect of himselfe, because in revealing his heart of love to the soule only hereby, and no other way, he teacheth us, that hee who is God only wise, 1 Tim. 1.17. could in the depth of his counsell finde out no other way so wise and sufficient cient as this, to ground the ſoule in ſure peace towards him: Chriſt and the promiſe in him, was that which ſeemed the wiſeſt of all wayes, in the thought of God, eſpecially to us under the Goſpell. See Heb. 1.1. After ſundry wayes the Lord ſpake to our Fathers in dark times, as dreames, Urim, viſions: but now by his Sonne and Word, the engraven forme, &c. Note how this courſe is called the beſt, and wiſeſt, and holdingeſt of all, as having more in it than all the reſt. Oh! we would think in our ſhallowneſſe, that one from the dead, Angels or revelations were better. But wiſdome it ſelfe hath pitcht upon this way (all things conſidered) as the wiſeſt of all. Heb. 1.1.

Both in himselfe.

Secondly, in reſpect of us. For it is ſuch a way as calles us to faith, a promiſe having relation to beleeving it, without which it cannot profit us. Now if it be without us, how wiſe a way is it to quaſh and dampe our baſe ſpirit of ſelfe-conceit and ſelfe endeavour, and to abaſe our pride, that he who boaſteth, might boaſt in the Lord? So that the promiſe is like the Map which a wiſe man ſhewed once to a foole that boaſted of his Lands, bidding him to point out his Lands in the Map: which being narrow, he could not do, And ſo went away aſhamed. Note then for this, firſt, we all would be counted wiſe: many in theſe dayes chuſe to bee counted rather diſhoneſt than unwiſe: Well, let us then be wiſe for our ſelves, and wiſe to ſalvation, in chuſing this way of a promiſe to ground our ſelves upon. We ſee not the Lord: but if this be a wiſer way then that, think there is ſomewhat in it more than at firſt might ſeeme and faſten upon it. And for us.

Q. What is the ſecond bottome in a promiſe?

A. The ſtrength of God: Reade 1 Sam. 15. The ſtrength of Iſrael cannot lye; meaning, in his Word. So then in the Word of God is his ſtrength alſo, enough to bear up the poor ſoule in beleeving. Heb. 1.3. He beares up all (the weight of the world) by the word of his power: how much more the weight of a weake ſoule? See Eſay 27.5. Anger is not in me, there is a word. What followes? Or take hold of my ſtrength and make peace, q.d. If I be reconciled, there is ſtrength enough, and that for a ſinner to take hold of: either this or nothing, Reade 2 Cor. 1.20. for all the promiſes of God in him are Yea and Amen: that is, ſure and ſtrong, but mark how? In him: the words that I ſpeake, are Spirit and life: But wherein is this ſtrength? Surely in the forenamed grounds of this ſecond part: Chriſts ſatisfaction, the Fathers acceptation, are thoſe pillars of The ſecond ſtrength of the Promiſe. 1 Sam. 1.3. Eſay 27.5. 2 Cor. 1.20.

ſtrength to a promiſe. Without which it would not availe to go to a promiſe. Weigh ſeriouſly that noted Text, 2 Cor. 5. 20, 21.

2 Cor. 5. 20. The Miniſters of God in his Name offer and ſeale up in the Word and Sacraments that word, Be reconciled to God. What ſaith the ſoule to this? I dare not, God is a conſuming fire. True, ſaith Paul, but anger is not in him. Why, becauſe he hath made (and accepted) him that knew no ſin, to be ſin, that we might be the righteouſneſſe of God in him: he that ſaid, In him he is well pleaſed. Shal a poore ſoule be then as Noahs Dove upon the waters? Why ſay ye to my ſoule, Fly to the Hils, if God be his ſtrong hold? If thou be under the condition of the promiſe, he is no leſſe in his promiſe. Take a ſimilitude. A man lies in priſon for debt of an hundred pound. A friend comes to him, and bids him come out; he anſwers, I cannot, I lye here for debt: but being urged, he conſiders that its not for nothing he is ſo preſſed by his friend, there is ſome Surety hath paid the debt; and then there appeares a ſtrength unto him, and laying hold of it, he comes out. Reade that in Rom. 3. 25. God hath ſet him forth to be a propitiation: that he might be juſt in juſtifying him who is of the faith of Jeſus. What ſaith the poore ſinner to this? Oh! but it is juſt with God to puniſh ſin whereſoever? Nay, having made and accepted him the propitiation for a broken ſoule, it is even juſt to pardon him. It was mercy to grant ſuch propitiation: but having ſo done, it is alſo juſtice to pardon; even as it is not juſt to take one debt twice. Therefore David pleades, Pardon me according to thy Righteouſneſſe: Chriſt having turned juſt wrath into juſt mercy. To conclude this, note yet a ſecond ſtrength in the promiſe: for the poore ſoule ſtill cavils. But this is to a Beleever, I beleeve not. I anſwer, but the promiſe (by the power of the Spirit of our Advocate) is able to do that which it requireth: its not a killing letter as the Law, Doe this and live: but a quickning one, Believe and live: it gives that it commands; the ſoule being under a promiſe, is under the Authority of him that bids her be reconciled. It is as with Naaman, 2 Kings 5. 15. Waſh and bee cleane: So hee waſhed, and loe, his fleſh came as a childes. Acts 3. that Cripple that beheld John and Peter, being bidden to ariſe, felt ſtrength and ſtreightneſſe to come into his limbes; how? in the Name of Jeſus, Verſe 12. This Name of Jeſus is much more in the promiſe of Reconciliation. Marke then: If the ſtrength of the promiſe be ſuch, ſay not, It is nothing, but take hold of it.

The Miniſtry is a ſtrong pledge of Gods faithfulneſſe.

Q. What

Q. What is the third bottome in the promise?

A. The faithfulneſſe and undeceiveable unchangeableneſſe of it? this is a ſtrong bottome, 1 Tim. 1.25. This is a faithfull ſpeech, and worthy all acceptance, Chriſt came, &c. Reade that ſweet place Eſay 55. 3. The ſure mercies of David and the opening of it, Hebr. 6.18. Surely bleſſing, I will bleſſe thee. Wherein God willing more abundantly to ſhew to the heires of his promiſe the immutability of his Counſell, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, (Covenant and oath, in which it was impoſſible for God to lye,) wee might have ſtrong conſolation. Why? Becauſe they are as two Cities of Refuge to a poore diſtreſſed fearefull ſoule (in the purſuit of Sathan and conſcience thoſe two avengers) to lay hold upon. Marke then, if the Lord deſcend ſo low to a poore ſinner, as to anſwer all doubts, by adding an Oath and a ſeale of his Sacraments, and a pledge of his Miniſters faithfulneſſe, to aſſure the ſimplicity of his meaning: then doubtleſſe, it muſt be his honour to performe it, and hee that beleeves it not, muſt needs make him a lyar, John 3. 33. as hee that beleeves, ſets his ſeale to the Word, that it is true. Numbers 22.19. It came from a wretch, yet by Gods Spirit. God is not a man, that hee ſhould lye. Oh! then bottome thy ſoule upon this faithfulneſſe. Reade Eſay 54.9. Having made this covenant of mercy with the Church he addes, This is as the waters of Noah unto mee: for as I have ſworne that they ſhall no more deſtroy: ſo, I will be wroth no more with thee: with everlaſting kindneſſe I will ſhew mercy upon thee. And againe, if my Covenant with the Sunne, and Moone, and Starres, ſhall faile, then ſhall my Covenant faile with thee. We reſt upon the promiſe of a man that never failed us; much more his oath. Heb. 6.16. An oath is among men a confirmation and end of all ſtrife. Oh! beware then of ſtrugling againſt Gods promiſe, becauſe it carries the force of an oath with it. Let me exemplifie it by a Text, 1 Kings 1. 22. the Prophet Nathan and Bathſheba go to David and preſſe him; Did not my Lord the King ſay, Solomon ſhall ſurely reigne after me? How is it then, that Adonijah reignes? What did David? He rowſing his weak body up, ſweares, As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered my ſoul out of all adverſity, as I have ſaid, ſo I will performe it this day: Solomon my ſon ſhall reign: was not David as good as his word, and durſt any hinder or croſſe it? No, it ended the ſtrife, and ſcared away all the Traytors. Oh! beware then, that thou croſſe not the Lord in his promise, to make him a lyer; And I may say the like of all other attributes of God; for the promise is, that by which God seekes himselfe and his own glory infinitely: and therefore he hath put himselfe wholly into it.

How the soule should apply these grounds?

Q. These are strong grounds, how should the soule rely upon them? Are there any directions for this?

A. Faith should in these respects doe these things.

1. First, shee ought to ponder well, and muse upon the promise.
2. Secondly, bee throughly convinced thereby in her heart, of
3. all these grounds. Thirdly, shee should cleave close to the
4. promise against all objections. Fourthly, shee should humbly
5. and wholly obey and consent to the promise. And lastly, shee ought to pleade the promise, and improve it to her owne peace.

Q. These are sweete duties, What is the first of them?

1 Pondering a promise, What?

A. To ponder a promise. Pondering is, when a man lifts any thing to esteeme what weight it beares: so ought Faith to doe with the promise: And that in these three kinds.

Partly to marke it.

First, to marke it. Men give no heede to Gods Promises: they lye hid in the Word, and are made no otherwise of than as other common passages. It is long before an hearer remember one of forty, till some crosse drive them in as with an Hammer: and then perhaps hee remembers some one. A fearefull sinne: Reade Esay 8. verse 8. Ahaz slighted the promise of God: the Prophet tells him, Is it not enough for yee to slight a Prophet, but God in a Prophet, not marking what he promises? Loe, I will therefore make a promise to my Church, and it shall be marked, A Virgin shall conceive a Sonne, &c. Loe the cause of unbeliefe in many, is their giddinesse, they are so full of froth, that holy promises are as a vaine thing to them, as the Law was a vaine thing in Hosea 8. 12. And the Word to them in James: Doe the Scriptures speake in vaine? noting the wildnesse of the heart, and now the foole having seene this glasse, forgets the Lords face? Oh; the giddinesse of minde, even the wild-Goose chase of the most of us, in hearing promises. But beware, Heb. 2, 1. that yee set such a marke upon a promise and offer of God, that it may be the fayrest flower in the Garden of God, in your eyes. The eye of the soule must guide the heart in believing, Set a starre upon the margin of a speciall promise. Buy that booke that calls out promises of note in this kinde. Even as every spoon

Esay 8, 8.

Iam. 4, 5.

full put into a full vessell runnes over, though the vessell bee sound: so heere, looke therefore that your vessels be empty also, if yee would marke the promise: least God bespeaking in your cast, and yee be not aware. I speake to you of my owne Congregation, not without cause: least the precious promises yee have heard, leake out, and this of Reconciliation in Christ, and the offer of it.

The second is, Musing of a promise: chewing upon the cud of it as the cleane beast: having observed some of the choyce texts of Gods offer or promise annexed, dwell upon it: the heart is the arme which must weigh a promise duely. Therefore its styd of Mary, Shee pondred the Angels words in her heart. So did they, Iona 3,9. Oh! if God turne from his anger, wee shall not perish, but live in his sight. This is the taking of Gods perswasions, and allurements and benefits offered us in the promise, into our consideration, as the Merchant, Matth. 13,44. hee went aside and hid the Pearle: nourishing the gaine of mercy, pardon, Heaven, as a child would hold a sweete thing under the palate. It is the putting of Gods Cords and Rags under our arme-holes, that the spirit may draw us out of our dungeon, with ease. Oh! this is a riddle to men. Many will marke for the time present, who cannot bee brought further: but stick at the birth, and have no strength to bring forth. The common answer is, Oh! we cannot meditate. No, for the Divell knowes, if yee could doe so, yee might meete the Lord, to settle you upon the promise. Let them whom this concernes, weigh it well: least they lay heapes upon heapes, and dye of thirst. Rid your soules of other scurff: get matter of promises about ye, separate your selves, Prov. 18.2. for this is a part of Gods worship, and cannot be done in the workes of our calling, the throng of other businesse. The Lord blesse this to us!

2 Partly to muse upon it.

Iona 3,9.

Mat. 13,44.

Pro. 18,24.

And lastly, make the Word of the promise, familiar by frequency, get it by heart, till it be easie. As a man having many friends, yet hath some one hee makes his bosome friend, to whom he powrs out his whole heart, as Ionathan and David did, 1 Sam. 20,41. So did David make the promise his Counseller, and companion, Psal. 119,24. And so should we do. As if a man that hath a sick, or a crasy body, will powre out all into the bosome of a Chirurgion, or Doctor of Phisick: hee will hide nothing, but tell them his whole heart, Oh! we boast that the Minister

And lastly to familiarize with it.

Minister of God knowes least of our minde. But if we deale so with Gods promises, we are like to fare worse. Oh! how seldom are our doubts and feares powred into the bosome of this companion; How would it stay us, and speake to our hearts? In the feare of God, let not the offer and promise of God be strangers to us.

Q. What is the second worke of the soule?

The 2. worke of applying the grounds.

Ioh 16. 9. To be convinced of Righteousnesse.

A. To be convinced of whatsoever hath beene said of the wisedome, strength, and truth of God in offering and promising pardon to a sinner. See Ioh. 16, 9. The Gospell shall convince the heart of righteousnesse. This followeth the former. Due weighing, will cause the soule to see the whole heart and meaning of God in a promise, and to be under the authority and evidence thereof. Else no believing. Heb. 11. 1. Faith is called an evidence and demonstration: as light at midday convinces the eye of it selfe. So here: the soule must see God nakedly in his promise: as in a mirror. See 2 Cor. 3. last Vers. As the Virgin is convinced, that her husband is the man above all other, laid out for her. As it is said of Laban, Gen. 24. 57. when hee saw how matters stood between the servants message and Rebeccas affection, said, We can say neither more nor lesse against it: for this thing is of the Lord. This grace is the worke of the Spirit, making the soule to begin to thinke, Surely I am the party whom God meanes; for I have the condition wrought, and I see he is plaine, and hath no subtilty, but is as he seemes: hence a secret insinuation of heart arises, I may be the soule whom God will pardon: for whom should he meane, but such an one as I? Open it a little by the like. At the Assises when prisoners are examined by the judge, the evidences are called forth to declare against them for theft or murther; now when they are sworne and witnessed, the Judge tels them, they are but dead men. Why? The Judge saw them not rob or kill? No, but he lyes under the conviction of the evidence, saying, If these men will sweare thus, I believe it. So when the soule sees the bottomes of the promise of God to be sound, it waxes convinced of the truth, and answers, Lord, I cannot see why thou shouldst travaile with me thus, to bring me under the condition, and reveale thy promise with such evidence, but I must needs bee convinced. Surely thou hast done thus, because thou meanest to pardon and save me, I am (Lord) unable to gainsay, thou hast perswaded me to believe.

Heb. 11. 1.

2 Cor. 3, ult.

Gen. 24, 57.

Q. What

Q. What is the third worke?

A. It is the cleaving of the soule to the promise, against all her feares, doubts, cavils. For marke, when it is convinced of cleere truth, the scales of darkenesse fall from her eyes. When Naaman had weighed the prophets promise of clensing, his cavils vanished: no more speech of Abana and Pharfar. So Thomas being convinced by Christs hands and sides. The soule is set betweene vanity and mercy, Iona 2, 8. if mercy prevaile, then lying vanities cease. Then the soule lookes off from her former doubts, and beholdes the Temple out of the belly of the Whale: It then beginnes to set close to the promise: As if a man that grafts a sien in a stocke, should finde some clay stone to get betweene the one and the other, to keepe the sappe away, and make it warpe from the stocke, and pulling it out, lets the sien come close home to it. Hence it is that a convinced heart comes forth and saith, I cut off my carnall reason, I see no savor in it, I cut off my bold presumption, I renounce my slavish feare, I abhorre my base mixtures of selfe and duties, vertues and preparatives of my owne: I abandon all my former proppes of nature, Art, experience, Religion which kept me from mercy; and I cut all Knots in sunder which I cannot unloose, and let all my tackling fall into the Sea, and commit my soule to thy promise, through rocks, waves and shelves, and if I perish, I perish: onely I will for ever cling to thy promise, doe with me as thou wilt; If I be deceived, thou hast deceived me. Thus the soule being convinced, claspes to God, and affiances it selfe to him, as the Ivy to the Oake, so that breake the one and breake the other. As the wife forsakes all, and cleaves to her husband. And this affiance causeth that sweet consent and naked obedience to the Word, according to the Word and the extent thereof: whereof reade Esay 1, 19. If yee consent and obey, yee shall eate of the good things, &c. Consent looking at a promise, and and closing with it as the seale with the waxe, and it with the seale, concurring therewit, hand being carried in the streame of it, against the motion of her own rebelling heart, as being overcome and yeelding up her weapons: As Rebecca convinced that the marriage was from God, being called to speake, answered, I will goe to Isaac.

The 3. worke of Application: Cleaving to the promise.

Iona 2. 8.

1. By consent.

Esay 1, 19.

2. By Obedience.

And so followes obedience, which hath a respect to a command of God, nakedly considered in the promise of God. As

Abraham

Abraham ſimply looked at the charge of Killing Iſaac, in the meere Power of God: and ſo in the promiſe alſo of Iſaac, not beholding Saras wombe. See theſe two examples Luke 5. of Peter, and Luke 7. of the Centurion: I have fiſhed all night, yet at thy Word, Lord, I will let downe. And, Say the Word, Lord, and I believe. So the poore ſoule ſaith, Lord, in my ſelfe I ſee little why I ſhould thinke thy Word to concerne me: but ſeeing thou wilt have it ſo, I come in, and kiſſe the Sonne, ſubmit to believe, and put my ſelfe under the authority of thy promiſe.

Heb. 11, 17, 18, 19.

Luc. 5, and 6.

Luc. 7, 7.

Q. What is the laſt act of the Soule about a Promiſe?

A. The laſt differs not from the former, ſave in degree, and it is the pleading of a promiſe, when there is ſtrong unlikely-hood preſented to the ſoule: either from the Lords leaving it to her ſelfe, or in temptation, or in deepe ſence of unworthineſſe, feare, &c. Then ſhee labours to cling to the promiſe by pleading it ſecretly: as wee ſee in that rare example of the woman of Canaan; who was content to bee put off by ſilence, denyall, yea taunts: and although ſhee was called a Dogge, yet ſhee held cloſe to the Word, that Chriſt was the Sonne of David: A true Dogge, and happy in this, that ſhee would not bee beaten off. Therefore our Saviour ſayd, She was of great Faith. Like to which was that of Iehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. 20, 9. when thoſe enemies beſet him and the City: hee gat unto God in the promiſe made to Salomon in 1 King. 8, 17. Oh Lord, Thou ſayd'ſt, If when our enemies beſiege us round about, wee come and pray in this place, thou wilt looke downe and have mercy: Oh Lord, looke now, heere they are: our eyes are upon thee. By which plea of an old promiſe, (yet as freſh as at firſt) hee prevailed. Let us doe ſo in our ſtreights, with the promiſe of free reconciliation.

The laſt worke of the Application.

Mat. 15.

2 Chron. 20. 9

1 King. 8, 17.

Q. Well, what uſe make ye of this Doctrine?

A. Manifold. Firſt, confutation of thoſe deſperate enemies of a promiſe, the Papiſts. They ſay, to cleave to a promiſe by Faith with cleaving to it for ſalvation, is a Doctrine of preſumption. But wee anſwer, that as their Doctrine of juſtification is the true Doctrine of preſumption of their owne workes: ſo their Doctrine of Faith, is a meere Idoll, and fancy. They adde, we muſt have revelations, before wee come to Aſſurance. Wee anſwer it is true, for although we abhorre their fantaſticall ones, yet yet wee grant, Revelation of a promise is the true object of Faith. And because (as in all other so in this point, they crosse themselves) I will convince them by their owne words. In the point of Transubstantiation they being put hard to it, answer thus (I will translate their words) In the adored Sacrament of the Altar, it is meete that the edge of all carnall reason be blunted, and that the wisedome of the flesh being banished, we hold our selves close to the Word. Their meaning is, To Hoc est corpus meum. But Oh yee hypocrites! Is the word so precious unto yee (yea a word which no body grants yee to be Gods, but by imposture it becomes your owne) that yee bid us loose all reason in the Word: and when we teach, the word must be of like use in all doubts of conscience and religion, doe yee then eate your own speeches? What Knot can hold a Proteus? Or who shall catch you in your own snare?

Secondly, instruction to all that have believed the promise of Grace once, and seene cause to cleave to it nakedly: to use the same method in recovery out of their particular falls. Men seeme heere to forget themselves, They confesse in their conversion, they must come empty-handed to God: But in their recovery out of their sinnes they thinke they must first repent, and then believe. But if ye will be wise, as yee use the Lord at first, so use him after: and having sinned, let mercy first breake your hearts, and remember that Jesus Christ, Heb. 13.8. is yesterday and to day, and the same in the order of his grace for ever. Otherwise the sodering with the Lord shall cause yee much sorrow; and yet you must come back this way when all is done. Use 2.

Thirdly, let this be admonition to all poore soules or others (who would obtaine this grace, to rely upon the promise of the Gospell) to pardon and peace, both abhorre all lets of this grace, and use all meanes to get it. Among other lets, let these be avoyded; first, take heede of resting in devout complaints of the want of Faith. For although there is an holy complayning of Gods people, as we see Esay 63,15. where the Church laments her hard heart in the Lords bosome, asking Where are thy bowels, &c? yet, sure it is; the common trade of complaints come from a corrupt heart, of ease, loth to be informed and searched to the quicke, Good complaints made in season, to such as can ease us, from the depth of a broken heart; is Use 3. Admonition to avoyd lets.

Let 1. Resting in our complaints. Esay 63. 15.

a great friend to Faith: but counterfeit complaints are the greatest lets thereof. Therefore in steed of our complaints let us doe as Ester did at Mordecai his request. Mourne and spare not, but rest not there, in any conditions of Faith. Rest not in the handmayd, but goe to the Lord and his promise to end the question. And so did Ester, she complained of her weakenesse, but rested not in that, but went to the King, saying, If I perish, I perish; and so found the golden Scepter held out to her.

Ester 4. 16. & 5. 1.

Let 2. Sloth.

The second let is, Take heed of sloath and ease: when the Lord hath brought thee within sight of his promise, consult not with sloth which slayes the soule: but looke up to the Lord for assisting grace to hold on the use of meanes, and so to finish his worke. Thus Gedeon, having begun to pursue Zeba and Zalmunna, would not stoppe his course, nor the Worke of God by revenging them of Succoth and Pennuel, but first dispatcht one thing, and then returned to the other. Most wise in this was Eliezer, when the question was about his stay for Rebecca ten dayes. No (saith he) seeing the Lord hath prospered mee, hinder me not. And so preventing danger of delay, carried her away with him instantly. So the merchant in purchase of the pearle. If in any good thing, then above all, in this, dallying is dangerous. The Apostle, 2 Cor. 6, 2. having pressed the receiving of the offer, dwels upon this: for hee saith, This is the accepted time, and day of Salvation. It is the divels May-game, to see men make ship-wrack in the Haven. Doe not by a lazy heart with the Lord, as Felix did with Paul speaking of the judgement day, put him to another time which never came. Few there bee, but have their season from God: take heede of dallying with it; least God deny it, for an heart, when thou perhaps wouldst have thy heart never so open. Our nature is to seeke grace most, when its most out of season: But that is Gods season to deny.

Q. Are there any more lets in this use of admonition?

Let 3. Worldlinesse.

A. Yea, the third is overmuch filling of our hands with the delights of this Earth, as lawfull liberties, pleasures, wealth, credit, Farmes, Oxen, Wife, posterity. These are as the Sea-eating of the bankes downe and destroying all. See Luke 14, 18. It is as if a man a drowning should hold his gold so fast, that hee cannot take hold of a pole to save his life: or as if ones hand could not receive a Pearle, being full of nut-shels, Come to to fasten upon the promise empty headed, hearted, and handed. Oh that the Divell did not bleare mens eyes with this, under the colour of lawfulnesse! What although yee might winne the World, if yee lose your soules? They may be lost as well by winning it in an excesse of liberty, as against conscience. If yee have shot the gulfe, take heede yee be not drowned in a shallow; Observe thy selfe, and thou shalt finde, that when thou goest from an eager pursuite of thy beloved vanities (for so are liberties, if abused) as all the word is unsavory, so especially the promise of Reconciliation. If thou wilt savour that well, let all other, even the best blessings, be as drosse to it. Phil. 3. 18.

Q. What else?

A. Especially take heede lest a worse thing, even a roote of bitternesse spring not up to defile thee. Goe not to the doctrine of Reconciliation with a surfeit of any privy lust, which thou wouldst not gladly know and forgoe for the promise. For this will so defile thee, that whatsoever commeth in the way thereof will bee defiled. Reade Ioh. 3. 19. in the end, They hated light, because their workes were evill: they would not be rid of them; Nothing marres Gods bargaine so much, as the presage that it will cut off our lusts. You that reade this, in Gods feare weigh it. In my poore experience I have seene this evill, that many professors, some by a peevish spitefull prejudicate heart (to be won by no meanes:) others by pride in their gifts, selfe-love: others their uncleane dallyings, loosenesse in company: others, and the most, by the thorne of covetousnesse have choked most fayre hopes of Faith: but these have kept the heart in warping. One such gourd to the pottage, one such dead fly in the oyntment, marres all. The Divell can with one lust chase away ten graces. So it is when the heart is enclined to be vaine in talke, curious in toyes and fashions: but above all, when it is surfeited with hollownesse, and uses it selfe to speake and doe as Balaam did, Num. 23. who would beare himselfe out to make conscience, but in all, a rotten heart followes him to his ruine. This bitter roote is discerned two wayes. First, it is naturallest of all vices; as wee know Twich-grasse and May-weede will overgrow the soyle that is given to it. Secondly, the oft returne of the same sinne after the seeming departure of it. Reade and ponder that of the end of him, whom the unclean spirit cast out once, returned to, with seaven times more strength; and looke up to God against it. Heb 12, 15. Let 4. Roote of bitternesse. Iohn 3, 19. Num. 23. How discerned.

Q. What

Q. What is the fifth?

A. A let or cord to pull away from the Promise, made of many twists; and it is carnall reason, or else rooted cavils arising from an unbelieving heart, disputing against the Promise. It is strange how perverse the spirit of man is in this kinde; when unbeliefe hath poysoned the spirits, and Satan mixing himselfe therewith and with Melancholy, doth assault the soule, which is yet under the condition of a promise. Great had needs be the wisedome of the Minister of God in this case to see into a soules want, and wherein the temptation of it chiefly lyes. Hee hath needs wisely to consider when a soule is under the promise and when not, and what those severall trickes of Satan are, to come between the bark and tree, that is the condition of Faith and Faith it selfe. And accordingly with the tongue of the learned, and much tenderness of heart and compassion, to helpe to stablish them, and not like Ionah to keepe away their due from them. This by the way. Yet I say, when all is said by the Minister of God that can be, the strength of sence, and the sence of corruption doth so obfirme and stiffen the spirit of some poore soules with resolution and wilfulnesse, that no counsell, encouragement or consolations can be so choyse as to pierce or perswade them. Notwithstanding which, although the Minister of God, ought not to bee impatient, but to overcome their waywardnesse, or rather Satans yrkesome temptations, and the tenaciousnesse of Melancholy and sadnesse: yet the whilest the soule layeth blocke after blocke in her owne way, against whatsoever either the freedome, or the fulnesse of the promise can alledge. All (I grant) are not alike in the wearisomnesse of their Exceptions in this kinde: and the Lord perhaps tyres some upon the hooke of their consciences, (defiled of old with corruption,) that afterward their Faith may be the more durable. But Oh! In Gods feare, consider how Thomas his conceit might have snared him, if Christ had not pitied and borne down his carnall selfe will. Oh! say they, My sins are not ordinary, for length of continuing, or for greatnes, or for oppositon to light. God indeede hath promised great things, but I want Faith to believe them, and without Faith none can receive them. Now God is tyed to none: his grace is free, and he may forsake me for all this. And yet my mends is in mine owne hands. I feele my heart more and more hardned by the offer of mercy: therefore say what what ye will, I must perish when all is done, and there is no hope for mee! I have taken as much paines as any; and yet remaine unanswered: therefore either a promise is not such a thing as you make it, or else surely I am none of them whom it concernes. Oh poore soule! I doubt not but so long as thy selfe and Satan may buz what they list into thine eares, such as these objections by swarmes will overflow thy heart, and double thy feare and despaire! But why is this? Is not thine eye more upon these, poaring and plodding, than upon the promise nakedly considered? Yes, doubtlesse. Thou wouldest work thy selfe out of thy dungeon by thine owne wrastlings, and when that will not bee, selfe waxes distempered: but Oh! If the Lord would bow thy spirit to deny thy selfe a little, and to change thy tedious tongue into an humble hearkning eare to the promise, that alone would stop thy running and weary thoughts, and settle thee upon another bottome, which thou haste not yet thought of. Take heed thou give not way too far to these distempers, lest despaire, growing upon thee, Satan pull thee also to some grosse evils and to sinnes against Conscience, and so thou shalt kick against God to purpose indeed. But hitherto God hath kept thee, that thou darest not in the midst of thy feares (of not being elected or belonging to God, or that mercy is not for thee) revolt to thy old vomit: but still thou cleavest to God in thy innocency, even in the midst of thy staggering and hardnesse of heart; which is a signe the Lord hath not quite given thee over, but hath his seede in measure within thee. Drive him not from thee by yeelding to thy feares: but still fix thine eye upon the promise.

Q. Is there any more?

A. The last (at the least which I will touch) is unwillingnesse to submit to Gods way of beleeving. I discourage none, but warne only. Men looke, God should wait upon us, and fill us with goodnesse, while we are idle: if our hearts can be in frame and as we would, God shall have our good word, but wee are loath to bee too farre downe. But learne to know the Lords way, and yeeld humbly to it, in use of meanes; and be not our owne carvers. Those that saile upon the Sea, are up in the clouds, and downe in the depths ſuddenly. Get an heart to trade with the Lord according to his way. And as it is fearfull to bee alway dead and not care, ſo to bee alway up in our zeale and ſpirit, is no marke of goodneſſe. Submit (with an innosent heart) to be led as the Lord will have thee, coveting the beſt meaſure, but reſting in Gods meaſure. Ionathan and his Armour-bearer 1 Sam. 14. 13. in that, 1 Sam. 14. 13. crept up the Hill to the Philiſtines againſt the Rock, and yet becauſe hee had a watchword from God, was cheerefull. And as Peter was ready to be at Chriſts command, Luke 5. To let downe his net againſt his owne experience: ſo let us be in God his worke and way, although tedionſly, rather than in our way of affections, not knowing our own ſpirit. It is a bleſſed thing to trade for faith, although with ſmall ſucceſſe: yea when wee cannot compaſſe a promiſe, yet ſet our mark upon it, and ſay, It is precious, it ſhall have my weake heart and endeavour, till God give mee my deſire. Yea, although thy meaſure prove ſmall, and thou prayeſt and heareſt and getteſt little, yet make much of that little and be thankfull. The Lord deales out to the poore ſoule, as once a wiſe friend dealt with an acquaintance of his: he ſent her three tokens, a braſſe farthing, a mill-ſixpence, and a piece of gold; bidding the Meſſenger firſt to give her the farthing; if ſhee tooke it thankfully, then the other. Alas! Poore wretch, who art thou to carve to thy ſelfe? Art thou not well, that thou haſt any thing? nay that thou art not in Hell? Doeſt thou deſerve thy breathing in the aire, or looking up to Heaven? or treading on the earth? Paul 2 Cor. 12. was content to pray for any grace; and the Woman of Canaan was glad ſhe might be as a Dog to picke up crumbs. Thus much for the third uſe of admonition.

Uſe 4. The laſt is, Exhortation to all under the condition of Branches 3. a promiſe. And here, that I may the better come to that I deſire, let me for order ſake divide my ſelfe into three branches. Firſt, Exhortation to ſelfedeniall, and renouncing of all other wayes of cleaving to a deliverance, ſave this of faith; counting them all, even ſelfe and ſelfelove, as dung and droſſe unto it. The Lord in and by his Chriſt, overfrom us. Hee would make grace every way gracious, and set aprice upon Christ, as better than all. No relique in our nature can comprehend a way of recovery: it must be only naked faith given for the nonce to embrace the Lord Jesus by a promise. That rebellion of sinne hath quite disabled our nature, both in act and in power from all helping of our selves, either by concurring with Law or Gospell. Not only to strip us of anycondignity and equall worth: but of any congruity of proportion from ought in us, or from us to procure such a thing. Nay further, to disable us of all mixture of our free will, with the enlightning of the Gospell. For its granted, That we must be saved by grace; but what grace must that bee? A generall grace of light belonging unto all, by which wee receive a power to apply it to our selves, or reject it if we will. For (say our adversaries) wee are not so disabled from procuring our owne salvation, but that, if light appeare, and a way bee set before us, we have eyes to see, and will to admit and apply it of our selves. All wee have lost, is the knowledge of the way, not ability to affect and receive it, when we know it. Yes. Wee want both light and eyes to see it: both the way and heart to chuse and embrace it: Wee have no preparation of our selves, neither preventing, nor assisting, nor perfecting. Carnall cavils.

Wee cannot cooperate with any grace of God, and although wee could, yet the common grace of the Spirit is not able to reach the worke of conversion: it comes short infinitely of it. There must be a speciall Spirit infused, to apprehend it, not only by supernaturall, but by spirituall and peculiar grace. That which is from flesh, is but fleshly; that which is spirituall, must bee from above: and this spirit blowes not in every ones heart; it is free and blowes where it listeth, and fastens upon some, and not upon others. Our owne free will and choice is in meere bondage to such worke: neither can any naturall or artificiall endowments of learning, wit, reading, memory, judgement, strength of parts, compasse this object: no education, no morall civilities, vertues: No improvement of Pharisaicall righteousnesse, of the morall Law: No devotions or religious performances of hearing, prayer, conference, can affect it. No condition Grace excludes all else. 1. Common gifes 2. Naturall or Arts endowments. 3. Religious performances.

wrought out of our owne selves, to mourne, to complaine, to plod and take thought; no struglings, or strifes of our owne spirit, no nor selfedenials of our own devising can attaine it. Selfe may force a deniall of her selfe in some particular passages, yea difficult ones and of great consequence, and all to strengthen it selfe in another kinde for her owne contents and ends. More then this, no true formed grace of God being inherent in our spirit and the faculties of our nature, can deserve more grace. Paul in Phil. 3. cals all dung and drosse to Christ, as well received after grace, as before it: hee disclaimes his owne priviledges, yea graces of humility, meeknesse, painfull travels in the conversion of thousands, his chastity, honesty, from any sharing with grace.

4 No selfe in any kinde.

5 No priviledges.

Only, the Lord Jesus in the merit of his satisfaction, of his offer and promise assisted by his Advocateship for the breeding of faith, can bring this worke to passe. Christ by his Spirit takes upon him the effecting and perfecting of this worke, as well as the meriting thereof by his death. Selfe cannot give glory to God; nor further the soule to beleeve: if selfe at the best, religious, devout, morall cannot, then much lesse base selfe bred by terror, or raysed by bondage: least of all selfe-sloth and ease; selfewill, selfewit, and conceit; selfewisdome of carnall reason, selfewealth, credit, and honour in the world, high thoughts, brave stomacke, (which yet the world magnifies against true selfedeniall;) I adde this, selfe establishes a principle against Christ, sets up an Altar against an Altar, and is a signe of contradiction to Christ, as much as a Sacrifice against a Sacrament. I deny not but all acts of moralnesse and devotion may serve under Christ for good ends, when once their property is altered that they may runne in his streame: But as they are of themselves, their Root is bitter, they cannot wash or save from sinne or uncleanesse. There is no blood of satisfaction in them, they have no promise of blessing, nor prayer of Christ to enable them, and are asmuch under the line of grace as an Elephant is under reason: they differ in the very kinde from one another: nature reacheth not sense, nor sense reason, nor reason faith or Religion. Oh! That all I have said could disable us and make us stand dumbe, deafe and dead dead, miserable and empty before God. Oh! That the onely sufficiency of Christ, could empty and strip us of our selves; even as Christ emptied himselfe of grace and glory, and became sin and shame to satisfie for us: That as hee could not subsist in his flesh without God, so, neither our flesh and spirit can subsist out of him?

Oh! That this could cause us to rest in God offering Christ meriting, the Spirit perswading by a promise, which hath all the fulnesse of God in it. Let us cast our bread upon the waters, & forsake our own abilities, beleeving that God can create in us of nothing, or worse than nothing, the grace of faith, the priviledge of sonneship and adoption; that all our happinesse may stand in beleeving, as the Sea is all made of water. That as the whole strength of sinne is Law working guilt, so all the strength of grace may be Christ received by faith; oh! That wee could cast off all selfe, and cast it as those did their tackling of the ship, their wares and come into the Sea to purchase their lives! Oh, that we could renounce vanities, and embrace mercy, quench our sparkles and imbrace the fire, leave our dry pits, and chuse the fountaine of living waters. So should the Lord Jesus become that really and solidly, which once selfe falsly pretended to be unto us.

Secondly, this is exhortation unto us, to esteeme and embrace Christ as this all-sufficient storehouse of mercy and grace. Oh! that the Lord would set it home, 2 Cor. 6. 1. Receive not this offer in vaine. Let all that hath beene laid of the ground of a Word from God, and the duties of cleaving to it, bee laid to heart. Let us not use a Word of God as a vaine thing. The Word is a precious treasure of Christ, and hath all his strength and authority in it: accoumpt it so then; resigne up thy Crowne, and cast it at the feet of the promise. Popish Emperors have left all their glory, and laid their Scepters downe at the feet of an Idoll, as weary of the world. Oh! that God would tye us, and urge us to resigne up all our soules to his promise. Wee see not the Lord indeed, nor heare him not speake; but we have a sure word of promise, in which we shall be wise, if we attend to it, as a light in a darke place. It hath all Gods power in it, it is as gold purged, it hath all authority, and resembleth his person. As a grave Preacher once said, Thy Word, O Lord, is holy and pure as thine owne Majestie! Oh, yeeld our impure hearts to it. If a man come into the presence Chamber of a King, and see him not there, what will hee do? Surely hee will bow to the Chaire of Estate. Why? Because it represents the King. Thinkest thou that any chaire of Estate can so hold out the glory of a King, as doth the promise shew forth the grace of God in Christ? Kisse the Sonne in his promise then. But thou wilt say, Oh, it is hard to honour a promise and God therein. Well then, go to God in prayer, and bow thy knees, and beg of him to reveale this mystery of godlinesse and Christ unto thee, Ephes. 1.17,18. as the Disciples, Lord increase our faith. It is the gift of God; hee creates it, as the fruit of the lips. Most Heavenly is that phrase of David, Psal. 119.49. Thy promise, in which thou hast caused mee to put my trust. It is the Lord that must cause the heart to put her trust in the promise. I know (Lord) the condition of Faith, the excellency of thy Word, and all those bottomes of it, I am urged to ponder thy Word, to cleave to it, to consent and obey. But (Lord) I am still the same, it will never bee done for mee, except thou draw me: (Lord) I shall bee as Agrippa (almost perswaded) and thy cords will breake in drawing: therefore fulfill thy promise thou that offerest the promise, cause mee to do all these, and cause mee to enter Covenant with thee for pardon and life. Oh looke to this; Moralize not with the Lord in other things: this is the one thing necessary: If this bee, the rest will follow. Faith will purge the Conscience, change the heart, order the conversation. Else the further the worse: ill digestion is not mended by the concoction of the veines; rotten Faith cannot bee mended by a shew of duties. Remember, the issue of Christs enquiry will bee for Faith, Luke 18, 8. Those that have it, the Lord will bee admired in them, in that day, 2 Thess. 1,7. and woe bee to them that want it. Better to bee a drunkard, a thiefe, (though very damnable) than to want Faith, to give God the lye, and to sinne against the Remedy. Muse upon the first words of Ioh. 3. 19, and upon Ioh. 3. ult. and Mark. ult. Nothing but condemnation is to such: and that the worst. So in 2 Cor. 4,4. If our Gospell pell be hid; its to them that perish. And as thou wouldst stand unconvinced, not only before the woman of Canaan, and the Centurion, Matth. 15, Luke 7. (who being but strangers, yet are wondred at for Faith) but even before Turkes and Pagans, who never had the meanes, so tremble at it, that such should condemne thee: and above all things, labour to rely upon the promise for pardon and life, ere thou goe from hence and be seene no more. The Lord perswade us all to it, Gen. 9, 26. Gen. 9. 26.

Another exhortation may be; to be earnest with God, never to lin perswading the soule by the promise and the good things of Christ, till his perswasion become forcible and unresistible by an holy necessity with us. Necessity wee say hath no Law. The overruled lover, will have his love, though shee begge with him. Give mee her, for shee pleaseth mee well. Consent comes from fulnesse of perswasion: else there will bee a staggering, and yeelding rather to doubt, to feare, to bondage. If perswasion bee full, it will worke rather a yeelding to the better side, and such an yeelding as encreaseth in resolution rather than decayes or declines. There is no power in thy soule to fasten upon this promise, except God draw it, and make thee perswasive of it, irresistibly, and by overpowring it, I meane not by overpowring, an abolishing of disswasives: but an overcomming of them, at least in the last judgement and resolution of the soule. The weights of the promise will bee heavier to overweigh, than the counterpoyse of unbeliefe: till at last a prevayling sweetnesse will ensue in the soule, so farre from thinking her case to bee repented of, that she is tickled with the same as a bargaine of unvaluable gaine. Beseech the Lord not to bee deeply offended with thy long dallyances, halfe perswasion, as not to strive with thee any longer: But to draw thee still with uncontrolled power, making way in thy spirit, and as Jeremy speakes 31, 31. causing thee by an inward motive (unspeakable) to bee unable to resist. When thou findest this worke, then Faith must follow, for it is the worke which the compelling Spirit leaves behind it, causing it in the middest of all her contrarieties of Disswasion, yet upon due consultation, to obey and yeeld. I see heere I perish but there I may bee happy. I will venture therefore, if I perish, I perish. More of this in the use of the offer, Article third.

A motive added to this Branch.

Now for the better drawing of us to so difficult and maine a duty, let me use one motive, which I am perswaded will prevaile with the most, if God vouch safe to be with it, to set it home: That is, that our free, naked cleaving to a promise shall carry downe all thy distempers at once, and drowne them in it as in a Sea. For whereas thou feareſt perhaps thou shalt dye ere ever thou believe, the promise will tell thee, If the Lord may be trusted for the grace it selfe, much more may he be so for the time: a thousand yeares with him, being as one day. Thou alleadgest, there is nothing at all wrought in thee towards believing. But why then dareſt thou not turne thy backe upon God, and returne to folly? Because thou hast not what thou wouldst, all is nothing unto thee: But from what (save from free mercy) is this, that (I say not) thou still mayst heare the word, (which is a favour for an Angell) but that thou breatheſt in the ayre, or treadeſt upon the earth? Thou objecteſt, if thy hard heart were not so hideous upon thee, thou couldst hope: But I answer, What hath caused it save selfe (that wofull hardner) which would get out of her feares by her owne way, and so hath dallied out the time, and hardened thee. But the promise tels thee, if thou wouldst trade with it, thou shouldeſt finde a contrary effect. Thou wilt say, true, if I were elected I might, but I feele that I am not: The Promise will shew thee Gods cords in thy dungeon, and the robes which he offers thee, and will aske thee, Dost thou not see mercy at the bottome? At which end of the ladder wouldst thou go up? What hast thou to do with Election, when the cords are so neere thee; or why wouldst thou go up to Heaven, when the word is in thine heart? Thou wilt say, thou art most unworthy, sinfull and curſed, and thy sinne is ever before thee: But the Promise will say, Yea, it is so. But why else should mercy offer it selfe, save to the miſerable? Yea, but thou hast long continued a wretch, and saped thy selfe in sinne; the Promise will tell thee, this objection comes from selfe deceit; as if thou mightst plead mercy if thy sinnes were smaller, or thy selfe better: whereas thy plea must be, the greatneſſe of grace, not the smalneſſe of sinne.

Common objections of unbeliefe.

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Oh!

Oh! but thou ſtill cavilleſt, But my heart hath beene hardned againſt mercy it ſelfe, and dallied with it; the Promiſe will tell thee, The Lord Jeſus died for them that ſlew the Lord of life; and for ſinnes againſt the Goſpell alſo. Yea, but thou ſayſt, Many have beene converted ſince I began; the word will reply, God hath all the houres in the day to worke in, if thou wilt attend him; the eleaventh as well as the ſeventh. Thou wilt object, If God had meant mee good, I ſhould have felt it long ſince. The Lord will tell thee, ſo thou haſt, if thou wert not unthankfull for it, and rather delighteſt in deſcanting than believing. In a word, Be encouraged to hearken to the Promiſe, if thou wouldſt ſee all diſtempers drowned in the Sea. 8 9. 10.

A ſecond motive to believe may bee, the heavy doome of all unbelievers, their condemnation is of all others deſervedly the fearefulleſt; worſe than the furnace of Nebuchadnezzar, heat thrice hotter: they had the Sonne of God in the midſt of it with them, therefore felt it not; theſe contemne the Sonne of God, they tread the blood of the Covenant under foot, and compt it a vaine thing, compt eternall life unworthy of them; therefore it ſhall conſume them without conſumption for ever. If our Goſpell bee hid, it is ſo to them that periſh. The condemnation of the World is, that they hated light; that is, not the light of a Law, but of the Goſpell, the promiſe. Hee that hath ſurfeited his body by intemperancy may dye, but he that throwes the potion ſent him (the onely one which can cure him) againſt the wals, muſt needs dye. If they who deſpiſed Moſes Law dyed; how farre greater judgment are theſe worthy of who ſinne (and that finally) againſt this Remedy? Can they reſiſt the force of this Rock falling upon them, and grinding them to powder? I deny not but even mortall ſinnes ſtanding in relation to infidelity either as cauſes Ioh. 3. 19. or as effects, 1 Tim. 1. 13. are in themſelves damnable: How much more unbelieving it ſelfe which makes them ſo? Do not thinke this ſtill ſtreame is ſafe: its the moſt deepe and deadly gulfe. It oppoſes the wiſedome, the Counſell of God, the depth of his riches of love, the ſecond love of mercy (above the firſt of creation) the providence of Gods diſpenſation appointing this as the beſt way for redemption, the direct way for Motive. 2.

the magnifying of his bottomeleſſe grace, who could finde in his heart to love enmity it ſelfe, and hate holines (in a ſort) that he might love ſinfull enemies: it reſiſts the omnipotent power of God in creating man the ſecond time of worſe than nothing, it diſanuls all his attributes; his offer, truth and faithfulneſſe: makes God a lyer: Chuſes a worſe choyce than Eve and Adam did: Hell before Heaven: and therefore deſervethto dye that death which it hath choſen: Oh therefore judge of this ſin by the ſpiritualneſſe of it: and prevent a treble hell by humble accepting and believing the promiſe.

Branch 3. Labour for more aſſurance.

Laſtly, (to conclude) this doctrine ſhould teach all Gods people to keepe their eyes upon this Mirror of the Promiſe ſo cloſely, till it transforme them from glory to glory. The leaſt glimpſe of mercy in the promiſe is glorious: yet the Lord is not idle in his peoples hearts, but that hee can reveale himſelfe more clearly and gloriouſly to them day by day, if they bee not in the fault, and lay barres in his way. For as the day from the dawning to noone-tide, ſo the promiſe encreaſeth in light, where once the day ſtar is riſen. The righteouſnes of God is revealed from Faith to Faith, there is a ſpirit of the promiſe whereby God ſealeth his people, after they have once believed: ſo that as Rom. 8. the ſpirit fellow-witneſſeth with us about our adoption, our redemption, our reconciliation, all are ours, we are the Lords. Many having got ſome flaſhes of hope by the Word, reſt there, go no further; wax wayly, wanton, frothy, thinking nay of their owne humours may well comply with the glad tydings of Heaven: and ſo ſhake off their feares, and turne grace into wantonneſſe. But if the true Spirit of the promiſe were in them, their Covenant would draw them to ſeeke more aſſurance, evidence and hold than before. Therefore let us looke to this worke of the Spirit. And to this end try it by theſe few marks: firſt, ſuch an heart growes lower and lower in it ſelfe dayly, by how much grace growes higher, and the approches of God in his fulneſſe, cauſes the heart to bee deeplier vile in it ſelfe. Gods preſence alway cauſes the ſoule to cry, Depart from me a ſinfull wretch. It workes not lightneſſe. Secondly, Such an heart, hath much buſied it ſelfe in and about the the faithfulnes of the promiſes, that ſo the Lord may as by an earneſt, 2 Cor. 1.22. give her his ſeale to aſſure her. Thirdly, She feeles the priviledges accompanying Pardon to bee hers, and out-growes her feares, bondage, doubts, aſſaults; temptations by the ſpirit of liberty, peace, joy, thankes, admiration, &c. Fourthly, Shee growes in the ſeale of holines as well as of aſſurance, being more zealous, fruitfull, upright, hereby. Fifthly, Shee covets the uſe of Baptiſme, appointed to ſeale her. Sixthly, Shee growes more reall, ſavory, ſetled, more confident in prayer and more lively in hope, more ready to dye, more mortified in luſts; more cheerefull and fruitfull in Communion of Saints. And ſo much of this uſe, and alſo of this ſecond part.

Question.

WHat is the Connexion of this Text?

A. From the 17. verse the Apostle enters into this point, viz. to urge the Ephesians to a renewed course, according to the grace they had received from GOD. The argument stands in a comparison betweene their carriage in their former ignorance, and that which the grace of God in Christ had taught them since, ſince, that is, that converſation which yee walked in before your calling, was very ſutable to the eſtate yee lived in: for, as then yee were vaine, blind, darkned, hardned in heart, and paſt feeling in conſcience; ſo your courſe was prophane, eſtranged from the life of God, and given over to all laciviouſneſſe and uncleanneſſe, even with greedineſſe, as they who never had enough of their luſts. But ſince yee came to the knowledge of God in Chriſt, yee have heard and learned a new leſſon, ſince the truth of Gods love and mercy ſhined in yee, yee came to beleeve your ſelves pardoned, reconciled and reſtored to the favour of God againe. Walke therefore as forgiven ones, and let this grace renue and reforme your lives.

But yee will object (ſaith Paul) what is pardon of ſinnes, to a changed and renewed courſe? Surely (ſaith hee) they are very agreeable each to other, If yee have beene taught the truth as it is in Ieſus. If yee have beene janglers onely of faith, and deceived your ſelves with a bare ſhadow of Ieſus, I wonder not if yee aske this queſtion: But if yee have ſate at Ieſus his feete as true diſciples of his, then yee cannot but know, that pardon and reconciliation in Ieſus, is renovation of heart and change of converſation for Ieſus ſake: Even that yee put off the old man, and put on the new, is the truth of Ieſus; and when he forgave yee, his true and plaine meaning was that you ſhould change your manners and walke in another frame than yee did before yee knew Ieſus.

Q. I well conceive yee. Now what doth the Text it ſelfe containe, and what are the parts thereof?

A. Generally it deſcribes the ſtate of new obedience which one that is in Chriſt ought to walke in Particularly, it expreſſeth three things: Firſt, The implication in the generall thereof, and that in verſ. 23. That yee bee renued in the ſpirit of your minde; that is, the truth of Grace in Ieſus hath this implication in it, that every one that is in him, be renued and changed. The ſecond thing in the deſcription is the diſtribution of this generall into his parts: where firſt note the order, hee begins with the Negative part, and then addes the Affirmative: Then the ſubſtance, firſt, That yee put off concerning, &c. There is the purging out of the old man: Secondly, That yee put on the new the former in verſ. 22. the latter in 24. The third is in the 25 verſe: and that containes the effect of this renuing within, within, to wit, the change of the converſation without, that it be as free from open evils as the heart from ſecret; and that it be as full of outward fruits as it's of inward graces, and he expreſſes two contraries of lying and ſpeaking truth as a taſte of the reſt.

Q. Open now the phraſes of the Apoſtle in order.

A. In the generall implication wee have firſt, the neceſſitie of it urged in verſ. 23. thus; whereas perhaps yee Epheſians are of mind, that it's ſufficient for yee to have beleeved in Ieſus to ſalvation, and as for other fruits ye need take no thought how your life be ordered: I tell yee no, the Lord lookes that yee be alſo renued: and ſay not, that it will come of it ſelfe: no, let it be your care: Be yee renewed, looke yee to it, its weightie, it will coſt much paines, for although it's Gods worke in you, yet you may ſhrewdly reſiſt it by an idle looſe heart: but doe you yeeld up your ſelves in all meekeneſſe of ſpirit to this creating worke of the Spirit; be you moulded to it and faſhioned, not to old luſts, or this preſent world, but to the renuing of the holy Spirit: yee have the Spirit of God in yee, but ſtirre up that grace of it which yee have received, let it not lye dead, but accommodate your ſelves in all ſelfe-deniall to this worke that faith may breake out in renuing.

Secondly, Wee have the worke it ſelfe, Renovation: that is the ſame thing which hee doth in the end of the 24. verſe repeat againe, and cals it the creation of the Image of God in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe: if wee put theſe together, they amount to this: Firſt, that a beleever in Chriſt muſt be no patcht, peeced, and broken ſtuffe, halfe old and halfe new, but an whole caſt molten new peece or veſſell: all new, puld down to the ground quite and cleane, and built up all new, ſticke and ſtone, ſo that no man can gueſſe what manner of frame the old was, no more than a Barn can be ſeene when a Lordſhip is ſet up in the ſtead of it. This is to be a renued workmanſhip. Patcht things muſt retaine the old frame of neceſſitie though halfe new; but a meere Renuing changes frame and all. Then Secondly, this renued worke is a new creation. Its Gods worke, its after God, none but hee can create: for creation is a producing of ſomething out of nothing: God creates this new man out of nothing, The new creature conſiſts of no power out of his owne matter, but is meerly made of nothing, out of Gods matter and stuffe. Ioh. 3.6. That which is borne of the Flesh is Flesh, that which is borne of the Spirit is Spirit. Ioh. 1.13. This creature is not of bloud, or the will of flesh, nor of the will of man; but of God. Thirdly, It is created according to Gods Image: marke this, a beleever in Christ, must not onely be begotten to God by reconciliation, but must have also his Image stamped upon him, and be like him; as he hath borne the image of the old man, so he must also of the new: as hee beleeves for his owne salvation, so hee must be conformed to Christ for the honour and glory of him that hath forgiven him. As the waxe takes the print of the seale, so doth the beleever the stampe of God. Fourthly, This image is no new outside of face or members; a Christian hath the same members and body, and shape, and soule he had before for substance: but hee hath new qualities and gifts put into him, as true light of truth into his minde, true warmth of holinesse to God, righteousnesse to man, and pureness to himselfe put into him, even Gods Image in his divine nature and properties. This is the third.

The last is, the Subject wherein these are: That is, the Spirit of the minde. It is not denied by Paul, but the body and the soule, and all the powers thereof are sanctified and renued also, as 1 Thes. 5.18. but by this phrase hee imports, That the true seate of renovation is the inner man, or the spirit of the minde; that is, the best and chiefe part of the soule, the best part of the mind, that which is the eye and guide of the soule, and the best of the will, the bent and purpose of the heart: This Spirit is as the Prince in his Privy Chamber: if he command, all obey; if the Spirit once be renued, all the inferiors bow. This is the sence of the generall implication.

Q. Proceede to the order, and to the parts.

A. The order is, that first the Apostle urges the negative of putting off. To shew that the Spirit of God never planteth holinesse till he have purged out uncleanness, for who commits sweet liquor to a foule vessell? and what communion is there betweene corruption and pureness? Secondly, hee addes, And put on, &c. noting that the Lord accepts not of a naked absence of evill, except there be also the presence of gracious properties.

Q. What meanes he by the putting off the old man?

A. By putting off, laying aside, purging, casting out, hee meanes forsaking, hating, renouncing and bidding farewell to lusts. Not much differing from the former part of Sanctification; standing in mortifying and crucifying of sinne. By the old man, hee meanes old Adams corrupt properties, as blindnesse, vanitie, (which here is named in stead of all the rest) profanenesse, unrighteousnesse, &c. These he would not have put off as we doe our apparell over night to be put on againe in the morning, but as our old rotten ragges wee cast upon the dunghill.

to

Q. And what meanes he by putting on the new?

A. The same which else-where Rom. 13. ult. and in other places, hee calles * putting on of the Lord Iesus, that as we are clad, adorned and warmed with our apparell, so Christ should be our clothing, not of body but of spirit, dayes and nights, and continually. Putting on, here signifying application in the closest manner of Christ to the soule, in his renuing power. By the New man, he meanes the Lord Iesus in his nature and qualities, of all grace and goodnesse as before I named. So that this is a putting on of a better apparrell than cloth of gold, and therefore admitting a better putting on, that is never to be put off againe.

* Reade that Verse.

Q. What is the third part of the Text?

A. The fruit of both: For these are within, this dresse and attire is spirituall: but the Lord will have his new Creature not onely all glorious within, but also without: All outward clouts and rags cast off; hee names lying, as one that is as manifest and common a worke of the flesh as any, but meanes all: and he will have the outward attire of vertue also to be put upon the conversation, hee names truth (which as it is a Girdle to gird all other garments close to us, so its one outward badge of goodnesse, Psal. 15.) but by this grace of the tongue hee meanes all other; of the body, sences, life and conversation. Sundry expressions of this point in Scripture.

A. In sundry: all tending to the same end, which are well to be noted for better conceiving of the Scripture: For as wee see sundry Writers use diverse termes, and call this third part of the Catechisme, The doctrine of thankfulnesse, or of Obedience to the Commandements, or the like; so the holy Ghost uses divers termes: And all may be referred to these heads; for either they looke at the maine Principle of the Spirit of Sanctification; as when the termes of Renovation, New man, New Creature, Regeneration, New birth, are used: or at the operation of this principle; as when the termes of repenting, casting off the old man, putting on the new, purging, forsaking, denying unrighteousnesse or lusts, are used; and so of mortifying our lusts, or rising up to holinesse, &c. or else at some actuall inward vertues, as love, feare, obedience, subjection, and the like: or at some outward performances, as walking with God in all his Commandements, or departing from iniquitie, or abhorring evill, or cleaving to good, ceasing to sinne, learning to doe well, or the like: these all, although in phrase differing, yet in sence are all one; and they import this, That the Lord requires of all beleevers in Christ, that their hearts be renued, that they purge themselves, finish their Sanctification, feare him for his mercy, walke with God, order their conversation aright; all is one thing, get one and get all: but the holy Ghost Ghoſt doth include all in that golden ſentence, He that is in Chriſt, is a new creature.

Q. How many things are to be conſidered for the better conceiving of this maine point?

A. It is indeede the maine of this whole part; and the things are eſpecially theſe foure; firſt, the Author of this Regeneration or new Creature, the holy Ghoſt: ſecondly, the inward inſtrument of this Author, and that is Faith: thirdly, the ſubject in which this regeneration is wrought, the whole man. Fourthly, the parts; theſe foure will prove the chiefe: For as for the other which are taken for granted, wee needе not dwell much upon them, to wit, the ſeede whereof we are begotten, which is the Lord Ieſus: the immediate inſtrument uſed to beget, the word of God: the ſeale by which the Spirit aſſures and conveyes this Regeneration, Baptiſme. Onely let us take a Scripture for each: for the firſt, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Of him are we who is made, &c. that is of Chriſt, Chriſt in his holy nature, holy obedience, and ſufferings and reſurrection, is the matter of our ſanctification. For the ſecond, ſee Iam. 1. 16. Of the word of truth he begate us, &c. that is, by the Goſpell preached, the eare receives the ſeed of the word to beget us. For the third, See Math. 3. 11. Where our Saviour is ſaid, to baptize with the holy Ghoſt and fire: noting that Baptiſme is the ſeale of this worke: And Rom. 6. The Apoſtle tels us that by Baptiſme we are ingrafted into the ſimilitude of his death and reſurrection, which is nothing elſe but our ſanctification, Foure points here conſiderable.

Q. Well then, let the former foure heads be a little opened: yet before thoſe, anſwer one objection that troubles me: you ſeeme to imply that a believer and a new Creature are two things? I had thought that ſeeing faith begets us to God by reconciliation, therefore it and a new Creature did not differ?

A. Briefly I anſwer, that i'ts true, beliefe of the promiſe is Gods, creation likewiſe. Eſay 57. 18. But this prooves not that this Article is needeleſſe. For (as ſhall appeare in the ſecond of theſe points) regeneration is either a begetting us to God, and making us his, or elſe a begetting God in us, and theſe two differ, as life differs from the exerciſe of it. To uſe a ſimilitude, the childe truely quickned in the wombe hath the life of a reaſonable creature, becauſe he hath the ſoule put into him yet he is not ſaid to be borne as ſoone as hee liveth; for hee muſt be perfected in the wombe, and brought forth, and so is a childe of the world; he lived before the life of the wombe, but now he lives another life, in the light, feedeth, sleepeth, cryeth, suckes the breastes: So it is here; Faith giveth the generation and life to the soule, at the first quickning; but the birth is not obtained fully, till it be brought forth as a new Creature by Renovation: then it is declared to have the true life of God when his image of holinesse declares it.

Q. Well: let us now come to the foure heads, and first what is the Author of this creation?

I. Generall. The Spirit of God is the Author of the new creature. Col.2.12. 1 Cor.6.11. Tit.3.5.6.

A. The holy Ghost. As almost all the Scripture prooveth: Two places may serve: 1 Cor.6.11. But yee are washed, purged, and sanctified by the spirit of our God. So Titus 3.5.6. Hee saved us by the washing of Regeneration, and the renuing of the holy Ghost. And the reason is plaine. For even as it was in the union of Christ our head, with our flesh, the holy Ghost most miraculously did concurre with the matter of conception, and did unite it to God, so that one person was made of two natures, and by this meanes the Deitie infused into the humanitie, the most excellent pureneſse of God, and the qualities of light and holinesse: so, this serving for us, loe, the same spirit takes the same matter of the Lord Iesus his nature and properties, and unites the one and infuses the other into the soules of his people by the worke of the Gospell. Not that wee are made Christ (as some dreame) but united wholly to his person, and thence partake the influences of his graces, wisedome and righteousnesse, &c. both in the habit of renovation, and in all the holy properties of humblenesse, patience, love, feare, zeale, &c. As 2 Pet.1.3. most sweetly saith, His divine power ministring all things fit for life and godlinesse, and making us partakers of the divine nature and gifts of the Spirit. And looke how it was in the old Law, that the next kinsman to the deceased was both to redeeme his lost inheritance (if embezeled) and then to raise up seed to him, as unto the first borne: even so in the Gospell, the Spirit of God doth not onely recover unto us our lost title and inheritance of Gods favour by forgivenesse of our sinnes: but also raise up an holy seed unto God, by begetting in us his Image againe: so that not onely he becomes our righteousnesse of justification, but sanctification also.

Moreover, it's cleare by this, that the Spirit of God concurres curres with the offer of Christ unto the soule, according as it lyes, and never seperates the things which God puts together. Now (as I noted in Part 2. Article 4.) the Lord offers his Christ wholly and at once: not onely adoption and reconciliation, to bring us into favour, but also sanctification, to make us the workemanship of God: Yea, and in truth, the Spirit lookes at this chiefly. For although in this life faith to justifie a sinner, is the maine gift because it gives us the right of grace and heaven, and holdes it for us: yet that which faith aymes lastly at, is the renuing of that Image of God in us. Onely because we lost it by sinne, therefore faith in the first place brings and knits us to God in pardon: but the perfection of it, is, that our lost image in Adam might be restored. Now therefore the Spirit doth come and unite them both together in the soule at once, because Christ is not, nor cannot be divided, either we have him not all, or else wee enjoy him wholly and at once as hee is offered in the Word. 1 Cor. 1. 13.

Q. I would faine know what workes the Spirit doth for the soule in this new creation of nature, and infusion of qualities?

A. Hee doth three things. First, perswadeth. Secondly, worketh: and thirdly, sealeth. For the first, he draweth the soule to be willing to take all Christ as he is offred, and to reject no part of him: and succoureth the poore soule in her application of the offer and covenant of grace. He presenteth to the soules view the meaning of God, to keepe backe nothing of his Christ: but hee will have him wholly eaten as a Passeover, no bone broken, no part left. Though perhaps the soule see not the extent of Christ at one view, yet the Spirit attends the offer of God in the Word, and seazeth the soule with that gift which God giveth. As if a man being to give his servant a boone, doth not onely reach him a ring (which the servant thinkes enough) but a ring with a rich pearle of price set in it: The pearle is above the hope of the receiver, yet because it's not above the Givers love, both are taken at once. So here the Spirit shewes the soule what God beteomes, wholly: tels it there is nothing too much, shee shall have use of all for one end or other, and therefore let none be refused. And this it doth by the tenor of Gods Charter and covenant in the Word. See that noted place; Who is made of the Father all the foure: Wisdome Sanctification, &c. Marke, the Lord offers not onely righte-ouſneſſe to acceptation, but ſanctification for image. Take all therefore.

2 working. Secondly, The Spirit is the reall immediate inſtrument of God to bring home the ſoule to God, to unite it to himſelfe, ſo that now thee is capable of whatſoever hee ſhall pleaſe to put into her: even his owne image, and creation of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. And this the holy Ghoſt cannot poſſibly deny to worke in her: except hee ſhould deny himſelfe a meet harbour and habitation to dwell in. For what is the ſoule (deſtitute of the Spirit of the new Creature) ſave a meere emptineſſe and voydneſſe of all good, if not a ſtie of all uncleanneſſe? In both reſpects a moſt undue place for the Spirit to dwell it. Therefore the Spirit puts the promiſe of ſanctification into the hand of the ſoule, and the Lord Ieſus himſelfe as her garment to put on upon her; hee effects that in her which the promiſe imports, infuſing into the ſoule an habit of cleanneſſe, and taking away all her owne filthy rags. He waſheth her with cleane water, hee burneth up her corruption with fire, hee taketh away the old inmate which cumbred the ſoule; though not from being, yet from poyſoning, from deceiving, from hardning, from over-ruling the ſpirit and ſwaying her to the obedience of old luſtes: And he writes the Covenant of God, and the Law (in the effectuall power thereof) in the ſoule and inner man with delight, that it may have a principle of willing, doing and ſuffring, according to whatſoever God commands: and that neceſſarily and chearefully; ſo that God and the ſoule may have complacence in each other. And although this principle is not at the ſoules command, to act at her pleaſure: but ſtill God keepes the reyne in his owne hand and power: yet the Spirit drawes the heart to improove this promiſe once received, and to jog (as it were) the hand of the Spirit, that it lye not idle and unprofitable in the ſoule, but worke it daily and hourely, both to the ſubduing of ſinne and the quickning of Grace. It faſtens the hand of faith upon the two Pillars of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt, the two fountaines of grace, that out of his fulneſſe the ſoule may receive grace for grace: as in the fourth branch ſhall appeare.

Mat. 3. 11.

What

What is that? The very divine gifts of Chriſt, which as fire doe purge and cleanſe our droſſe, and bring forth our mettall as pure and cleane. So in Rom 6. 4. 5. he tels us wee put on Chriſt in Baptiſme, and that not onely to cover our nakedneſſe, but to warme us with holineſſe. Weare not onely partakers of the ſatisfaction of Chriſt to forgive us: but of his death to mortifie us, and of his life to quicken us, in both to give us his image. And by Baptiſme we are ſaid to be ingrafted into the ſimilitude of his death and Reſurrection. This Baptiſme of the Spirit ſeales up the ſubſtance of the Covenant to all purpoſes, as a ſeale to a writing confirmes the writing in all points. Now marke the tenor of the Covenant: not onely to pardon our ſinnes, and to remember our ſinnes no more: but alſo, to put his feare into our hearts, that wee never forſake him any more.

Q. I conceive that the Spirit is the true inſtrument of Regeneration: But what effect followeth the worke of the Spirit?

A. A double effect: The one ſtanding in the habits of grace, generally qualifying the ſoule to all goodneſſe: The other, ſpeciall operations of the Spirit in the graces of ſanctification. Touching the which the Reader ſhall ſee more in the ſecond Article, in the graces of Converſation. Here onely I point at them in the roote and principle which createth them. Of the firſt ſort are the habits of Vprightneſſe, Soundneſſe, Integritie, Chearefulneſſe, Rootedneſſe, Conſtancy: contrary to the curſed habits of Hypocriſie, Vnſoundneſſe, Partialitie, Deadneſſe, Vngroundedneſſe, Tickleneſſe, Revolt: Of the ſecond ſort are all thoſe Vertues of the ſanctified ſoule both Theologicall or Divine (as they are called, becauſe of the ſpirituall nature of them and the peculiar object of them) as Faith to live by in the Promiſes and Providence of God: Hope of eternall life: Love to God for his love to us, &c. As alſo morall Vertues, properly concerning man or our ſelves, as juſtice, wiſedome, courage and patience, temperance, and ſoberneſſe, which are well called the Hinges upon which the Dore of vertuous life, is turned to and fro: and, which include all particular moralities in them, as innocency, meekeneſſe, humilitie, ſelfe-deniall, curteſie, thankfulneſſe, love, mercy, charitableneſſe, and the like, contrary to thoſe vices which may eaſily be conceived by their oppoſite verthes.

Q. I.

Q. I rest in your answer touching the first of these three: now proceed to the second, what is the inward instrument on the soules part to apprehend this creation?

The instrument on our part is faith. Act. 26. 8.

A. Faith saving and effectuall, As appeares in those texts, Act. 26. 8. To give them an inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith in me. Note the phrase. Iustification is much ascribed to faith, As Act. 13. 38. Rom. 5. 1. Rom. 3. 25. but here sanctification also. So Act. 15. Having purified their hearts by faith. And Saint Peter, Having purified your hearts by faith to the obedience of the Gospell. Yea, the Apostle Paul, Ephes. 1. 13. seemes to make faith to be the instrument of the spirit, sealing the soule. After yee had beleeved yee were sealed by the spirit of promise: faith attending the Spirit in beleeving the promise it selfe, doth further attend also the seale of it, and applies both to the soule. The reason is because although the seale is above a word, yet it's by a word, and with it, and not else.

1 Pet. 1. 22.

Ephes. 1. 13.

Quest. Q. But here is a great scruple, how faith should bee the apprehender of both these at once, viz. forgivenesse of sinne, and renuing of the soule. For who sees not how wide a difference there is betweene receiving a thing without us, as imputation of righteousnesse; and a thing really inherent in our natures, as the image of God and renovation?

Answ. Faith both apprehends Christ without to justification, and within to sanctification

A. I grant the point needeth due consideration: yet as the Lord shall guide me, I will endeavour to answer it. And seeing the truth hereof is as cleere in the Scripture as any one, therfore the manner thereof will be the better found out. To this end, note that faith being the instrument of the spirit, in both the acts of regeneration (I meane reconciling and renuing) doth of necessity attend the worke of the Spirit in both. If then it bee true which I said, that the Spirit reades a Lecture of the Covenant to the soule, according to the whole purpose thereof; then needes must faith doe likewise, even follow the direction of the Spirit in applying them equally to her selfe; for faith is as the eye of the handmaid to the Mistresse; that is, doth that which the Spirit suggesteth, and takes all which the Lord offers her: even the Lord Iesus at once, and wholly. If the spirit say: take Christ both for pardon and sanctification: loe it takes him for both together; of the former there is no doubt: Let us see for the latter. Ephes. 1. 18. the Apostle prayes that the eyes of their minds being enlightned (by faith) they might (ver. 19.)

Psal. 123. 2.

see the exceeding powerfull and mighty worke of the Lord Iesus in them that beleeve; that is, what he can doe by the power of his death and resurrection. So in Ephes. 3. end: he prayes that they might have Christ dwell in their hearts by faith, that so they might comprehend his length and depth: that is, take him as he is to the soule, and have the knowledge of him that passeth all knowledg, being filled with his fulnes.

So that faith takes the Lord Iesus in his fulnesse, that shee might be compleate in him, both for mercy and sanctification. So if we looke Iohn 17. ult. As thou O Father art in me, and I in thee: so thy love may be in them, and I in them. Marke, Christ is not onely offred to the elect to be for them in pardon, but to be in them to dwell, to rule to command, to exercise power over corruption, and for government, to be as a soule in the body to act, guide and beare sway in them, as the branches in the Vine, out of which they wither: so that the promise offers Christ both for union of reconciliation, and also Communion and influence of grace. In both which shee takes him, for he is not devided, a pearle is little worth being broken. Now then looke how the hand of the Prophet was upon the Kings in shooting, so is the hand of the Spirit upon the soule in beleeving; & as the hand of the writer upon the learner to frame it his way, so is the Spirit upon faiths hand. And as the waxe takes all the whole print of the seale, so doth faith of the promise by the hand of the Spirit. So that although its certaine that nothing is more unlike than the things themselves which faith applies, in the manner of application) the one taking a grace onely imputed, and resting onely in the act of God, casting forgivenes upon the soule without any addition of inherent goodnesse to it: the other, taking Christ as infused and dwelling in the powers of the soule, yet this puts no difference upon the apprehension of faith: seeing with one hand and one act, both the Lord offers them, the Spirit joyns them, the soule beleeves them. The Spirit is that which doth order these two benefits, and settles them upon the soule and in the soule: but faith with one hand and act doth receive them, according to the severall use and service, as the Spirit pleases to apply them. It pleases the Law to conveigh a Copy-hold by Court roll, and a free hold by other conveyance of writing, seale, delivery, and possession: but the same hand takes the copy, and receives the livery and seasin. So here.

Q. What

Q. What doth faith in the application of this Gift of Renovation, or the new creature.

Faith doth two things in the renewing of the ſoule. 2 Cor. 5. 14.

A. Two things: Firſt, It workes the heart to be renued by an argumentation. See 2 Cor. 5. 14. For the love of Chriſt conſtraineth us becauſe we thus judge, &c. Marke, faith judges the matter aright, and paſſes a ſound verdict upon it. If Chriſt have ſo loved us, how ſhould our ſoules earne toward him in all conformity to his bleſſed nature? Faith is in this as in all other reſpects, a deepe Logician, ſhee argues for God ſtrongly, ſhe brings evidence unanſwerable for him: that as ſhee carries about her the marke of a divine cauſe, beeing the moſt divine worke of God, that ever he did ſince the Creation, above all the gifts of Adam, and ayming at a better end: ſo ſhee carries alſo ſtrong reaſon to mooue the ſoule to be like to her workeman, and to reſemble his holy nature. For the ſoule is raviſht to conſider that love of God, which turned the deſerved death of the ſinner, into the death of ſinne; Either ſinne, or the ſinner muſt die: What mercy was it then in God to give Chriſt himſelfe to death, to ſave the ſoule, and lay that death which ſhould have beene laid upon us, upon ſinne it ſelfe? This meditation workes the heart to a gladneſſe to part with ſinne, becauſe thereby ſhe lives.

1 Argueth for it,

The word (conſtraines us) ſignifies ſuch an hemming in, as of the beaſt in a Pound or Pinfold, that is put into it, and cannot get out by any evaſion; ſo doth faith controll the heart, that it cannot winde out; muſt needs yeeld to be as he who hath imputed his righteouſneſſe to forgive her, that is, righteous and holy. Faith is that which brings us to God, and unites us to himſelfe; makes us partaker of the chiefe good, and to cleave to him; how ſhould it then chuſe, but rivet us ſo into his goodneſſe, as wee might never depart therefrom? The very ſavour and inſtinct of faith tends to holineſſe: ſhe ſerves to abandon nature, and to ſet up holineſſe in the ſoule. As ſhe ſettles an imputed holines to juſtifie, from Chriſt; ſo ſhe cannot reſt, till ſhee her ſelfe partake it within. Such things as are alway lying among ſweets, cannot chuſe but reſemble and ſavour thereof: Faith comes from the divine breath of God, and is his gift; therefore cannot degenerate: but as Rivers flow from the Sea, and runne thither, ſo doth Faith come from God, and returns to him ſhe leaves not, till ſhee have ſo pleaded for God, that ſhee have drawne the heart to favour him in his holineſſe.

for

And ſecondly, by infuſion. Shee is the Tunnell of the Spirit to convey the renuing of the holy Ghoſt into the ſoule. As the hand of the workeman is that lively cauſe of cutting the timber, but yet the Saw or Axe is the toole which this hand works by: So here. Take a ſimilitude. A man buyes a precious roote of a rare flower (that growes in few gardens) and gives it into the hand of the Gardner, to ſet it in his garden. The Gardner thruſts the roote and pitches it into the earth, gives it good mouldes, waters and keepes it charily. Even ſo here, The Spirit of ſanctification is the purchaſer of this roote, but it plants and pitches it into the ſoile of the ſoule by this hand of Faith: and there it nouriſhes it and cheriſheth it till the roote bring forth a flower ſutable to the nature of it. Faith, I ſay, ingrafts this precious ſience of the righteous holy nature, life, death and reſurrection into the ſoule, or rather (if yee will) the twig of the ſoule into the ſtock or ſoile of the Lord Ieſus his holineſſe: and there it gathers ſtrength till it produce fruit ſutable. Such corne as wee ſow we reape: if wee ſet a carnation, wee looke the flowers ſhall be ſutable, if we ſet an Apple into a ſtocke, we looke for no crab; even ſo, this plant of love brings forth love againe, and this roote of holineſſe, a fruit like it ſelfe. That of Epheſ. 3. 16. is for this point. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by faith. Faith is the entertainer of Chriſt in this his holines. So then as in the former point, faith favours the truth in Ieſus, and tels the ſoule that Ieſus comes in thither to ſanctifie it for God, as well as to ſave it from hell: ſo here its the inſtrument of the ſpirit of Ieſus to apply and to implant this roote of his in the ſoule: it applyes the Covenant as well in the promiſe of renewing it, as of forgiving it; and it embraces and claſpes hold upon the Lord her righteouſneſſe: and till ſhee have done both, ſhee dares not ſay, Thou art my God and I am thy childe: yea, as the holy Ghoſt is that fire wherwith the new Creature is baptized, when it comes to beleeve the Covenant) ſo faith is that hand which applies the ſoule to this fire, to be purged thereby, and that inſtrument of the Spirit, whereby he refines the ſons of Levi in the Miniſtery of the Word as Malachi ſpeakes.

2 Inſuſeth it.

Eph. 3. 16.

Mal. 3. 23.

Q. What is the third thing to be noted?

A. The

The subject of the new Creature the Soule and body. 1 Thes. 5. 23.

A. The subject wherein this new Creature is planted: and that is the whole man. Reade for this, 1 Thes. 5. 23. In body, soule, spirit, meaning what ever is in man. Wee meane not a renewing of the substance of either, as if a renued soule should be another soule or body, but in point of the qualities, or service of both. Its corruption which is purged out, and its grace is planted in, The scurffe and poyson of each facultie is cast out, mortified and consumed; its a new propertie is put in: ignorance, rebellion, pride, impatience is taken away; and knowledge, subjection, humility, and long-suffering put in: And this subject is the whole man. Each part and power of body and soule is renued, and if not all, none at all. The Spirit of renovation is an entire workman, and purgeth all, graceth all, the minde with light, the heart with heate, the conscience with sound reflection and witnesse, the will with free choice and consent to holinesse, the members with serviceablenes to the soule in all her designes.

Q. Speake a little of the particulars: What is renuing of the understanding, and the powers thereof?

The Powers of both mentioned. 1. Minde.

A. Vnderstanding not onely is corrupted in the light thereof, but also in the prerogative of it. It was set up as a rule and directive of the inferiour soule, will, affections; but it hath lost this birth-right now, and is become the vassall of the will, and concupiscence: therefore the renuing of it is, partly a purging of it from the corruption and penalties therof; and chiefly a restitution of it to her integrity of light and soveraigntie. See Ephes. 5. 8. Light in the Lord.

Ephes. 5. 8.

Q. What is the renuing of the Will?

2. Will.

A. The Will being depraved in point of her loyaltie and obedience to the mind, and now having cast of the yoake, and become rebellious; the renuing of it is, both the purging of it from the sin, and penalties of it, and a restoring of it to her integrity of subjection, to the verdict of the understanding; chusing, refusing or suspending accordingly.

Q. What is the renuing of Conscience

See 1 Pet. 1. 22.

3. Conscience

A. Sinne hath depraved the Conscience in point of reflexion, so that it cannot present any goodnesse of being or action to the soule with delight and contentment; but is waxen defiled, and either accusing, or erroneous and perverted: therfore the renuing of it is, both a cleansing of it from her contagion, gion, and a restoring of her to her integritie of faithfull record, accusing for evill, and excusing for good: See Tit. 1. 15. by contraries. Tit. 1. 15.

Q. What is the renuing of the body?

A. The senses and members having lost their serviceablenesse, to present objects duly to the soule, and to execute faithfully the purposes thereof: the renuing of both is, a restoring them to such integritie, as that the senses doe duly offer to the soule, the objects of sense; and the members become faithfull weapons of righteousnesse: See Rom. 6. 12. Let not sinne raigne in your mortall bodies, &c. 4. The body and members. Rom. 6. 12.

Q. But what part is especially the Subject of Renuing?

A. Howsoever the holy Ghost doth renue all, yet the immediate and chiefe subject of his residence is the Spirit of man. There are (as I said) sundry faculties in the soule, but the spirit is the most inward, and immediate activitie of it, and it stands in the directive gift of the understanding, by which it fore-sees and devises for the whole man: as also in the free choise, bent, savor and delight of the heart. So then, the frame, streame and bent of the soule is the spirit of it and that wherein this renuing or new creature stands. As it is in the old man, so in the new: it is not a few thoughts or affections which make a man bad: but the very frame and bent of all the thoughts and affections, whereupon as upon wheeles the whole man is carried. And as a sonne having the lively picture of his father to behold, would not set it up in a stable or out-house, but in his best roome; So the Spirit of Christ sets up the Image of God, not in the eyes, or eares, or tongue, which have no power to worke upon the soule, but in the Privy Chamber of the Spirit where the King lodgeth. The bent and spirit of the Soule is the chiefe object. See Ephes. 4. 23. Rom. 12. 2. Rom. 7. ult.

Q. And what is the fourth thing in this Renuing?

A. The parts of it be and negative and affirmative: the former a destroying of the old frame, the latter a setting up of the new; which are the exercises of the inward graces of renovation. Both of them issuing from the Crosse and Death, Resurrection and Ascension of Christ: And thence it is that in the named place, Paul ascribes mortification to the death, Vivification to the resurrection of Christ. Not that they are to be sundred, for both serve for each, and each for both: but as both cannot stand together, but one in the destruction of The fourth point in this worke of Renovation, The parts.

the other: ſo, he would teach us, that the death and riſing of Chriſt are no fables, nor ſtories, but things of exceeding merit. Both for ſatisfaction and for efficacy or power. When the Lord Ieſus ſuffered his precious ſoule to part with his body, he gave that death a power to divide ſinne and the life thereof: and when by his God-head he reſumed his body, he gave it alſo a power to put life of grace into the ſoule. The death and life of Chriſt are a myſtery of godlineſſe, as Paul in the 1 Tim. 3. end, tels us; when Chriſt layd downe his life for the expiation of ſinne, with-all hee entred into a moſt deadly feud with ſinne, which would have robbed him of his life for ever: and when hee tooke his life againe by his God-head, hee alſo conveyed an efficacy of a quickning Spirit to raiſe up all beleevers to a renued life of holineſſe, and by his Spirit, beſtowes both upon them. So that he who can bring ſinne to the Croſſe and grave of Chriſt by faith, ſhall kill the life of it: and hee that can apply his ſoule to the Lord Ieſus riſen, ſhall finde it no empty, but an effectuall meane to quicken him to holineſſe. And theſe both all true beleevers doe: as they have borne the image of the firſt, ſo muſt they doe of the ſecond Adam: The firſt was a living ſoule, but the ſecond a quickning Spirit.

Q. Seeing that Sanctification ſtands upon theſe two Pillars, Mortification and Vivification: deſcribe the former of them, by the which ſcantling it will be eaſie to underſtand the latter.

Of Mortification. Illuſtration of it.

A. The Spirit of Chriſt in the new Creature cauſeth the old man to cry as Iohn Baptiſt did of Chriſt: I muſt decay and be diminiſhed, but hee muſt riſe and be encreaſed: As the houſe of David grew like the Sunne in the morning, but the houſe of Saul decayed as the Sunne in his ſetting: ſo doth corruption in the people of GOD goe downe, and grace grow up. I ſay, ſo it doth according to the worke of Chriſt in the Soule, except unbeleefe croſſe it. As wee ſee in houſes that conſiſt both of old folkes readie to goe out of the world, and of young heyres that are newly entring upon the world: we ſee the younger encroach upon the elder, and thruſt them out, ſo that they grow to have ſmall joy to abide in the world: ſo is it in the old and the new man of the Regenerate, the New treades upon the heele, and breakes the head and heart of the old, till he be compelled to reſigne up all to the New. And although the old live ſtill (as old folkes oft doe under their young young heyers) yet it is onely as an eye-sore and a clog to the New, disquieting them with their treasnesse and tediousnesse: But the birth-right and dominion is gone.

Q. How may those Degrees be conceived by which it proceeds?

A. Thus: First in generall, conceive; That there is no Principle (nor yet seed of any) in us to oppose corruption: Flesh loves it selfe: Satan doth not oppose himselfe (for how then should his Kingdome endure?) It is (as I noted) the Lord Iesus who is this New man in the soule, and who expelleth the Old, and his Dominion; even as old Adam was the killer of grace, and destroyer of the Image of God: so the second Adam is the mortifier of corruption, and the destroyer of the image of it in us: and of Satan who imbarked himselfe thereby in us, with all his power and weapons: I say, this New stronger man casts out that strong and spoyleth him, and divides the bootie: that is, he resignes up possession and rule to the New creature. The Lord Iesus doth this both by that death of his satisfaction, making attonement for us: and by the same death of his effectuall participation, or fellowship (as Paul cals it Phil. 3.) by which the killing Qualitie of it is conveyed to us.

The worke, 1 Generally opened. Matth. 12. Luk. 11. 21.

Secondly, In particular, this Spirit of Christ mortifying worketh by steps in the soule. And first hee puts into the soule a saving light, to know what sinne is in her deadly nature: This light comes from the Crosse of Christ. Vpon which the Lord Iesus entred into a deadly feud with sinne, threatning her thus, Oh sinne I will be thy bane, Oh death I will be thy death. That Speare which drew forth the life bloud of Christ, was thrust into his sides by sin and Satan: and in the powring forth of his life, the Lord Iesus sayd as Sampson (his type) once did, Let me loose my life withall mine enemies: Let me slay more at my death, than all my life time. And in this prayer hee was heard. From this ground the Spirit of Christ conveyes into the soule this Power, that it may bee such to the soule as Christ meant it, who dyed not to sinne for himselfe, nor lived to God for himselfe, but for them. So that the first impression which Christs death workes in them, is the true light and knowledge of sinne. Oh! the soule concludes it to bee a fearefull thing which could rob the Lord Iesus of his life bloud: What then would it have done to me, if hee had not latcht the blow in his owne sides?

2 Particularly. And that 1 By knowledge of sin. 1 Cor. 15. Luk. 2. 35. Iudg. 16. 30. Rom. 6. 10.

2 By power against it.

1. By the Law,

Secondly, This death of Christ by the ordinances of Christ do settle this power and make it the soules owne, the foundation of which (a farre off) is layd by the Law, and spirit of bondage, (see Part 1. Art. 6.) which terrifies the heart in respect of that boldnesse and stoutnesse of sinne in her nature, and takes off the edge and jollitie of it, and throwes the Crowne of it to the ground. By Christ onely the Law can effect this casting downe of sinne, from her pride and state. Then secondly, the Gospell doth more fully settle the merit of this death of Christ upon the soule, removing that from us whereby sinne reigned, and the Law ruled in us, I meane the guilt of conscience: That so, sinne being destroyed in her condemning power, (which was her uttermost mischiefe) shee might prevaile lesse by the ruling and exercise of it; and we be lesse in feare of her poysoning, deluding, and domineering power in us. As when Gedeon had given Zeba and Zalmunna their deadly blow, they were farre enough from a new battell.

2 By the Gospell. Rom. 8. 3.

3 The third step, is the Pursuing of the scattered Troopes of sinne: I meane letting out the strength of Christ against the remainder of corruption. This the Spirit conveyes by a Promise through Faith: Sinne shall not reigne in your more tall bodies: Yee are no more servants of sinne. Romanes 6. 6. Knowing this, That our old man is Crucified with him, that the body of sinne might bee destroyed, that henceforth wee should not serve sinne: For hee that is dead is freed from sinne. So the Prophet, Micah. 7. 20. Who is a God like unto ours, that subdueth our iniquities, as well as passeth by the sinnes of the remnant of his heritage? By these and the like promises, faith puts on the Lord Iesus his death upon the soule, that as a dead man would kill a living one, if bound to him with cordes, so might dead Christ kill living Corruption, being bound and united to the soule by a Promise. And the Crosse of Christ, is made Sinnes Terror and death, and the Old man-queller; onely by the word of God, into which all the Power of the Crosse is put: that faith might take it and put it on, and make it sit upon the shoulders, as the Armour and strength of Christ, and as his Sword to stabbe sinne at the heart. Faith in a promise carrieth the Soule to Mount Calvary, and sheweth corruption, that dismall sight of the Crosse, and Christ thereon hanging, and nayling sinne to the same, that that it may never recover and get loose againe. This sight carrieth the very hatred and indignation of Christ into the heart of sinne: that as verily as Christ hated it for shedding of his precious bloud, so verily he meant to give it her bane and deaths-wound for ever, in the behalfe of his members. That as his flesh was dead, so might theirs be: And as hee died but once by sinne, so they by vertue of his eternall Spirit might dye for ever to sinne: It is not the power of a Pope hallowing false Crosses, but the Power of Christ by a Promise, which blesseth this Crosse and death of Christ to the worke of mortification And there is no sight in the world so terrible to sinne as this: all other are but fraybugs to it.

4 The Seale.

Fourthly, the Spirit of Christ crucified, makes this promise of mortification, more reall to the soule by adding the Seale of Baptisme to it. Rom. 6. 3. Know yee not that as many as are baptized into Christ, were baptized into his Death? Vers. 4. For wee are buryed by Baptisme into his death: that (Vers. 4.) wee might be implanted with him into the likenesse thereof; Vers. 5. That our old man might be crucified with him. Seales (wee know) ratifie Promises, so doth Baptisme make good the Word and stablish our faith therein, for the soules securitie in this behalfe. And, as they in Noahs Arke, and the Israelites in the red Sea, layd hold upon the Promise for the killing of the old world, and of the Egyptians, by the same waters, which preserved their owne lives: so doth faith beleeve, that Baptisme (even the same water which saveth their soules) shall mortifie their corruptions. Sinne shall lose her life even in the pursuit, as those did: and at last shall be quite destroyed, never to annoy them more.

5 By other Ordinances;

Fifthly, The Spirit of Christs death conveyes it selfe by all other ordinances into the soule of a beleever, to mortifie their sinnes. Hearing, prayer, watchfulnesse, renning of covenant, and especially fasting, are sanctified, thereby to cast out such sinnes and lusts as otherwise will not be cast out. The Word is poyson to a corruption, it peirceth and divideth betweene the joynts and the marrow; causing the soule to tremble at sinne, and start at corruption, by presenting God to it in the vengeance and justice of his threats and commands: yea, all the Administrations of God; in patience, blessings and streights, doe worke with the Word, to the damping and weakning of the moſt hidden and cloſe corruptions: as Phyſicke which piercing betweene the diſeaſed part and the humour looſens the one from the other, Yea, as the Sword of Paradiſe ſcared Adam out of it: ſo doth the ſhaken ſword of the Word and the other Ordinances drive luſt out of the ſoule. And ſo doe they finde it, who in ſimple ſelfe-deniall and faith cleave unto it.

Mat. 17. 21.

Heb. 4. 12.

6 By the ſweetneſſes of Chriſt.

Sixthly, This ſame Spirit, doth kill ſinne another ſtrange way; even by preſenting the ſweetneſſe of Chriſt to the ſoule; the ſweetneſſe, I ſay, of living by faith, and walking in uprightneſſe. This is a ſtrange ſacrificing knife. It cauſeth that former baſe pleaſure and ſweet of ſinne, to become irkeſome. Since the Soule taſted Chriſt, loe, all other ſinfull pleaſures become (like the Booke in the Prophets belly) as Wormwood. By ſweetneſſe of ſinne, I meane that former joy, tickling, and gainfull content of ſinne, which ſet the Soule on worke with edge, appetite, skill, coſt, diligence, ſubtiltie, nimbleneſſe and defences. Oh! the Soule kils all theſe by her new trade of Chriſts obedience, which makes the Devils yoke moſt heavy: ſaying; What fruit had I in thoſe things whereof I am now aſhamed? Rom. 6. 21.

7. Applying of Chriſt to all ſinne.

Seventhly, The Lord Ieſus applyes his peculiar Power againſt ſinne in both parts of her, both roote and branches. Hee directs his ſtrength againſt originall ſinne and this body of death, to the end that it may die and decay daylie, though it abide till death. So that ſhe looſeth her ſtrength, though not her being: ſhe brings not forth ſo many fruits to death, ſhe doth not ſo much clog, defile, and diſtemper the Soule by her deadneſſe, pollutedneſſe weariſomeneſſe, and unſavorineſſe; nor is ſo out of meaſuee ſinfull as before. Nothing but a body of death in Chriſt, can mortifie a body of ſin in the ſoule. Next it proceeds to the branches: even as death at the heart is preſently death in the fingers, the armes, the feet, legs: ſo doth this Spirit of Chriſt, worke death wholly, and death in every member. So that he who ſaith, Mortifie your earthly members, effecteth alſo what hee commandeth, and beginning at the roote, killeth the branches. To begin to mortifie luſt in the branches (the roote being alive) is vaine and bootleſſe, like Adonibezeks cutting off the thumbes and toes: But when the Dam is dead, the breaſts can give no ſucke to the young ones. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Rom. 6. 12. 13 Iudges. 1.

Eightly,

Eightly, The Spirit of Christ intercepts the succors, and provisions wherewith sinne fulfilled her owne appetite. Therefore Paul Rom. 13. ult: oppoſes theſe two, putting on of Christ: and taking thought to make proviſion for our luſts, becauſe the Spirit of Christ deales with the ſuccors of ſinne, as the Surgeon doth with a leg which he mortifies and cuts off: he kills it by intercepting the courſe of former ſpirits. As an enemie beſieging a City, that hee might ſoone ſurprize it: cuts off all the ſtore and food which either by land or Sea is ſent in to ſupport it, and ſo it yeelds by famine: This it applieth to every luſt in her kinde, pride, envy, hypocriſie, unthankefulneſſe, uncleaneneſſe, unprofitableneſſe, and others. All luſts have their fewell, objects, temptations, occaſions, and ſupports: which when they faile, ſinne looſeth her oyle and nouriſhment, and ſo is ſtarved. 8. By intercepting ſinnes proviſion.

Ninthly, Christ takes away that ſtrength of ſinne which ſtood in the Law. The Law is called the ſtrength of ſinne becauſe of that itching and coveting propertie in ſinne, to doe that which is forbidden. The pureneſſe of the Law is an occaſion to an impure heart to tranſgreſſe, and to enterfeere againſt it. But the Law in this point is made to a beleever, ſweet, and eaſie: and therefore the heart is alſo thereby made pure, and is farre from ſtumbling at it. As Paul ſaith, The Law is holy and juſt; but I am ſold under ſinne, and my edge is turned from the Law, againſt my ſelfe, to delight in the Law, and abhorre my ſelfe. 9 Removing the ſtrength of the Law.

Tenthly, The principle of enmitie being put into the heart by Christ, the heart nouriſheth this hatred more and more even to the death, and maintaines the quarrell, till an irreconciliableneſſe be bred betweene ſinne and it: And this makes a daily fight and combat betweene the mortifying power of Christ, and the unmortified part: the ſoule alway reſiſting, and not willingly yeelding, but as a foiled captive againſt her will: and from this deadly enmitie, ſeeking ayde from heaven and Christ againſt corruption; rejoycing to ſee it foiled as Gods enemy, mourning to ſee it prevaile: crying, mourning, yea, groning under it: uſing all opportunities to roote it out: not linning till it be divorced; forſaking it as a wofull cut-throte of her peace, and when ſhee hath it under, purſuing her vantage, that ſinne may not get head againe; not dallying with her, but handling her roughly, and never thinking her dead till her head be cut off. 10 By combat, Gal. 5. 17.

Rom.7.24. And therefore longing for the day of departure, which is ſanctified to be the finall overthrow of ſinne, and a full Redemption from all Dominion under her. Theſe Obſervations, inſtead of other, I commend to the Reader touching this point.

Q. What ſay you of Vivification, being the ſecond part?

Of Vivification. A. I leave it to be conceived by the Law of proportion: That as the Death of Chriſt is the death of corruption in theſe ſeverall kindes: So the life of Chriſt, or (as Paul ſpeakes, Rom. 8. 3.) The Law of the Spirit of life which is in Chriſt Ieſus, doth ſettle the power of the ſecond Adam, (a quickning ſpirit) upon the ſoule, to be like a well-ſpring in her, of grace unto eternall life. Touching the which ſee the ſame place in Rom. 6. and apply all I have ſayd, to this ſecond in the kinde thereof, as well as to the former. In a word thus: The ſame power of God, Ephe. 1.20. by which hee raiſed Chriſt from the dead, even that exceeding effectuall power of God doth diſcover it ſelfe in a mortified ſoule to frame it to the life of Chriſts holineſſe: and that not with an indifferency, but with activity, reſoluteneſſe and earneſtneſſe of heart: I ſay, to a lively, chearefull, ſtirring life, to a ſpirit of life, which (as a contrary principle) alway workes the heart to Gods ends. It is ſuch a Spirit and principle, as drawes, bowes, moulds, and faſhions the inner man, as well as the outward, to delight in the Law of God, and to give God the heart, *Pro.*23.26. Making the ſoule a partaker of a divine nature, as farre as it is capable; that thence may flow the operations of life, in all the faculties of the minde, will, conſcience, and members of the body: Both inward, as feare, love, joy, innocency, zeale, thankes, humility, heavenly-mindednesſe; And outward in the practiſe of the life, according to the converſation ſpoken of in the next Article. Touching that queſtion, why theſe two are imperfectly wrought in us during this life, ſee the fift Article of the third part, in the Letts.

Q. Now at length proceed to the uſe: and becauſe the opening of the Article is practicall of it ſelfe, be the briefer.

Vſe of the Branches. 1 Terror. A. Firſt, If all beleevers be new creatures, ſuch as never were ſeene to be ſo before, new men: what are they who are ſtill old creatures, and will take no other die? Such as boaſt they are no changelings, are the ſame men. I ſay they are unbeleevers, unbeleevers, upon whom (as yet) the wrath of God abides, and besides, such as shall be damned. Dogs who shall be without. See 2 Cor. 4. 4. Marke 16. 16. Rev. 21. 8. therefore small cause have yee to boast. If all that be happy by beleeving must be holy by renning, how unhappy ones are all unholy ones? Therefore let it be terror to all such as carry the old man written in their foreheads with great letters, so that all that runne may reade it; they proclaime the sinne of Sodome in open prophanenesse, or in secret unreformednesse: they have beene drunken, breakers of Sabbaths, Atheists in their families, and so they will be still: Oh wofull wretch! wilt thou be as thou hast beene? Thou hast beene an old wretch, an old fornicator, wrathfull wretch, subtill, contentious, worldly, made the Gospell a cover of thy rotten heart: wilt thou be so still? Then I know thou art cursed, for thou wert cursed, and thou wilt be as thou hast beene. Therefore heare what the truth saith; if thou be no other than ever thou wert, thou wert never good: and if thou wilt be so still, be so, thy penalty shall be as thou chusest: Let him that is filthy be so still, he that is prophane, let him be so still, and hee that will not come out of hell, let him keepe there still: No wrong is done to him that is willing to be so. But know this, that if God have sealed thee up to an hard heart, it is one step further off from God, than before; it will be hard for an heart that cannot repent, to be better than it will be. Ere God create the new man in thee, thou shalt not onely not nill, but both will and covet it, and yet thou maist will it too late when it shall be denied.

Branch 1. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Mark. 16. 16. Rev. 21. 8. Rev. 22.

Secondly, All revolters to the old man, and returners to their owne vomit and mire, when they seemed to have the uncleane spirit cast out, and to escape the pollution of the world through lust, but still they carry about them the old man, still that lies downe, and rises up, and walkes with them although long hidden, and at length (as a crusted sore) breakes out odiously: Oh be feared by this! If old men (be never so much in shew renewed) are cursed, what are they who having taken the livery of the new man, are now the second time waxen worse than ever: and the old man hath watcht his time to recover his possession and waxes seven times stronger than before? Oh the latter end of such is farre worse than the beginning.

Branch 2.

Thirdly

Branch 3. Thirdly, Terror to all hypocrites who ſtill maske over the old man with a new cover of Chriſt, but put not off the old. The 1 Cor. 15. 19. Apoſtle ſpeakes of men, 1 Cor. 15. 19. whoſo hope in Chriſt is here: not hope onely here in their wealth and luſts, but in Chriſt: and hee tels them of all other they are moſt miſerable. They are willing to have Chriſt to ſave them, and to varniſh over their rotten poſt, to keepe them from the note of baſe and prophane ones: but if they be pinched with this, that beleevers muſt be new men: the old cheating, and cunning deceit, wrath, revenge, worldlineſſe, muſt alſo be caſt off: oh then they winch as a galled jade, and it ſeemes as an uncouth thought. Lately I knew a man who upon the change of his eſtate by marriage, was ſo penſive, that no man could heale his melancholy: ſo it is with theſe, to heare of ſuch a new creature and change as ſhould turne all inſide outward, and rid them of their old Adam all at once, they are ſullen and ſicke upon it, it is as the going of a Cammell through the eye of a needle. Ieſus they know, and the Doctrine of Ieſus, but not as the truth is in Ieſus: they will take no notice of ſuch an inſtinct as to be new ones, becauſe beleeving ones. But oh yee wretches, even this truth of Ieſus which your hollow hearts cannot brooke, ſhall judge yee and ſentence yee; ſuch new Creatures, ſuch Ieſus; your Ieſus is an Idoll, becauſe hee is no truth in Ieſus, no new creature in Ieſus to put off the old man, and put on the new.

Branch 4. Laſtly, all prophane ones who thinke themſelves in very good caſe, if they can carry their luſts and beloved corruptions cloſely, and bleare the eye of the world, thinking they have forſaken them. Sleidan reports of a Duke in Germany, who lived in an uncleane courſe with one of his wives Gentle-woman: which the Dutcheſſe perceiving and oppoſing, hee deviſes this ſhift, to ſend her to a Caſtle, and there to give it out after a while, that ſhee was ſicke, hiring ſome to viſit her, and at length that ſhee was dead: a painted Image is laid forth, entombed, carried to Church, the bell rung, funerall Sermon made, dole given to the poore, the Image buried, but the harlot ſtill living, and the luſt of the Duke unmortified brake out worſe than ever. This is the new creature of the prophane ſort, ſtrongly to conceale the old. Like whereto is this, to thinke our luſts are mortified becauſe by ſome violent cauſe, feare, penalty, or inward terrors, they are reſtrained, as Sauls rage, Eſaus malice.

Secondly,

Secondly, it's use of instruction to all new Creatures to wonder that the Lord will accept them to bee so, and take them after all their refuse stuffe and service to old lusts, to be new men; who would thinke it that the Lord should chuse such defiled Temples of Idols, lusts, and lewdnesse to dwell in? who would thinke hee would admit of those nasty sties of uncleane thoughts, those cages of pride, uncleanneſſe, and selfe-love, those powers and members of body and soule that have beene so defiled, to be weapons of righteousnesse? Oh what encouragement is it to old creatures to become new? The Lord will melt and alter the propertie of your old Idols and hee will prepare himselfe even of such mettall, vessels of price, for every good worke, and not knocke them in peeces: He will admit the captive woman, when shee is pared, washt and shaven, to be a wife for an Israelite: Hee will admit Mary Magdalen, *Luk.*7. her eyes, teares, hayre, lippes and oyntments, even so neere as his owne sacred body, and become one with her that was an harlot, and abused all these to abomination. Oh! how justly might he have for ever left us to our selves, and sworne that no sacrifice should blot out our sinne, nor would hee ever take the service of a persecutor to be a preacher? Oh! those very powers of wit and those affections of love and joy which we have so abused, we should wonder that God will purge the fretting leprosie out of them so farre as to be honored by them: which yet wee cannot deny but he hath, except we should lye against the grace of the new Creature. Vse.2. Reade Ierem. 3. 2.

Thirdly, It should admonish all to take heed how they meddle with any true beleevers in Christ, to hurt, discourage, reproach or pursue them. Let us know they are new creatures, and the workmanship of God: him that defaceth Gods image, will God destroy. Beware, touch not the annoynted of God, doe not his image any wrong. If a King will leave him to the punishment of a Traytor, who shall race out and deface his image upon a peece of silver: what shall hee doe to them that deface the lively image of his holinesse stamped upon his new creature? doe not descant here and say, yee doe not deface them as such, but in other respects: Well, but in as much as hee honoured them, yee shall pay for it, that yee have not counted them precious and delighted Vse 3.

lighted in them: that honour yee doe not to them as well as that diſgrace yee offer them, is not done to him, is offered to him, and if you dare venture to hurt them with a diſtinction, he will puniſh you without diſtinction.

Vſe 4. If the Lord will have others beware how they deface Gods creatures, how much more ſhould his new creatures beware of defiling themſelves? Oh! if God have made yee ſo, beware yee caſt not dung in his face, and pollute not his Image? The vileſt wretch that lives when he playes his parts, yet if he were the ſonne of an holy father, he will draw the curtaine over his fathers picture, as aſhamed of himſelfe. And ſhall not wee tremble to diſguiſe our ſelves with any dreg of earthlineſſe, envie, pride, and vanity, love of our ſelues, knowing whoſe creatures we are? Take but the Creatures of ſome proud ambitious ones! will they doe any thing diſtaſtfull to their Makers? Are they not in all points like them? How then dare we to tempt him after whoſe image we are created? Oh! what a check ſhould it be, that any leaven in ſo much as a mouſe-hole (to allude to that Iewiſh curioſitie) ſhould bee found in us? Remember that charge of Paul, Purge out therefore the old leaven: and let us ſerve the Lord in the ſinceritie of a new Creature: old things are paſſed away, all things become new: new Adam, new Covenant, new Paradiſe, new Miniſtery, new Creation: new Lord, new Law, and all new. Shall they who are thus renewed, ſuffer that unrenued part to get head and to darken and defile the new, that even in them old baſe dregs ſhould be obſerved to deface the Image of God? But more of this in the latter Article.

1 Cor. 5.

Q. Proceed to the uſe of the ſecond Branch.

The uſes of the ſecond Branch.

1 A. If faith be the inſtrument of this Creation, wee here doe confute the conceit of them that imagine faith to be a branch of Sanctification. Sanctification is ſo farre from being the genus, or totum of faith, that it differs from it the wide skie. Faith is a grace that addes no inherency to the ſoule, but onely ſerves to receive a forraigne imputed righteouſneſſe of another: ſanctification receives an infuſed righteouſneſſe into the ſoule, faith receives a righteouſneſſe of perfection to ſtand in the ſight of God: ſanctification, a righteouſneſſe in part and imperfect. Can then an inherent holineſſe bee the cauſe of an imputed? Or can

can an imperfect holineſſe be the cauſe or genus of a perfect? But I muſt not dwell; and I ſee this error is lately at large confuted. Onely this, faith and a new Creature being parts of Regeneration, and of the Totum of a converted one: ſo long as they bee dividing members they are rather things of a contrary nature, than effects and cauſes of each other. See what I ſaid of their difference in the beginning of this Article.

Secondly, Wee learne here what courſe Gods people muſt take to repaire the ruines of their holineſſe, when it is decayed in them by their fals, Satans prevention or the like. Runne to their faith, fetch fire from the hearth of the Lord Ieſus his Spirit: we are preſerved by that of which wee conſiſt; if the Lord Ieſus be our principle of Regeneration by Faith, he by faith muſt be our ſuſtentation. Goe to the Promiſe in thy fals take hold of the ſtrength of Chriſt in them, and compaſſe not thy ſelfe with thy owne ſparkles, thinking to recover thy ſelf by thy owne heate, but abhorring thy ſelfe, goe to a promiſe and there behold and apply Chriſt thy righteouſneſſe to pardon thy fals, to accept thee in weakeneſſe, to repaire thy ſtrength, and then he will be thy righteouſneſſe; alſo of holineſſe, to enlarge thy grace, and (by the addition of ſweetneſſe and love) to uphold thee in thy courſe more and more. Thou haſt not received Chriſt thy new Creature to create ſomewhat in thy ielfe, but to fetch from his fountaine, grace for grace daily: Ieſus Chriſt yeſterday, to day, and the ſame for ever. Vſe 5.

Q. What uſe doe you make of the third this branch?

A. Very ſpeciall: And it ſhould firſt teach us a diſcerning uſe, betweene all hypocrites and truely renewed ones. The one may ſet up the Image of Chriſt in ſome of the powers of his ſoule; as in his underſtanding, wit, memory, in his tongue, eares, ſences, and outward members: but the renued creature ſets him up in his ſpirit. This of all other things ſearches a falſe heart; whatſoever part of him, ſeemes to have ſome Image of God, ſure it is not in his ſpirit. In ſpite of him, his thoughts, purpoſes and affections, are void of him. The ſtreame the frame, the bent of his ſoule warps from him, and goes ather way. The moſt ſubtile hypocrite can but come to this to delude himſelfe by the ſtrength of knowledge, and ſome dammings of the ſtreame of his corruption: but as for the turning of it by a ſtronger to a contrary motion, that can he not attaine. Vſe 6.

attaine to: there is no dissembling of a new Creature. Once a Philosopher in thirtie yeares made a brazen frame of a man to speake: but as one said of him, Oh fine scull without braines! so here may be said, Oh! faire outside without a principle of life and spirit! Let us consider this: although an hypocrite may grow to this, to delude himselfe, and make himselfe not to see his defiled principle, yet hee can never purge it out, while he is so. For the Image of God is set up onely in some out-roome, and when his lust comes in place, there is no rouming for this; this must yeeld to his base ease, pride, lust, which are set up in his inner man, and beare sway. And secondly, the hypocrites image of God is onely a counterfeit of it: its no free principle acting him from within; so long as some torrents and violent pangs are up in his passions, so long as he is under some streame of powerfull preaching, or deepe feares, or sudden humors of affection hee seemes some body: but when these are past, he is like himselfe, as dead as ever. I may compare him to Davids old body, in which there was no heat left; they sought out Abishag to keepe heat on him, but more then hee had from her, hee had not, and therefore hee died instantly notwithstanding her: So it is here. So long as the five is within the water it holds it; but no sooner out, but all is empty: when the Word is gone, and violent causes, he wanteth, and discovers those corrupt evils of uncleanesse and prophanenesse, which is the word supressed. But with the new Creature its otherwise: he is borne of God, and sins not with consent: when outward props faile, loe all failes not, he mourns for the want of old helpes, but in this want he abounds with the comfort of the inner man, and the principle of grace which is immortall, and whose being is of God.

Vse.7. Secondly, Its use of consolation to a beleever: the Lord esteemes him by his best part, his bent and streame, and not by his defects. The Apostle, Rom.7. Not I, but sin in me. I serve God in my spirit, ver, ult. As a man cals a dunghill precious, for a pearle in it: and as a man would call wine mixt with water, Wine; and corne full of weeds, corne, because of the better part. So here the spirit and bent of the heart denominates a Christian with God. Looke more in point of denomination.

Rom.7.ult.

Vse 8. Thirdly, Its use of examination for all that would be sure to know the new Creature to be formed in them, Try it by the roome

roome wherein yee place it: the best things require the best place. The image of God in Christ, drawne by the Spirit, will endure no roome but the most inward spirit of the soule. If the enemy besiege a King, hee must breake through many doores and locks ere he come at him; because he is in his privy chamber. Try thy selfe then by two or three markes. If the new Creature bee set up in thy spirit, then will the streame of thy soule goe with him, and to him as the Rivers to the Sea. Thy plotting, thy devising, sore casting and whole wisedome shall serve for him, how his honour, service, Sabbaths, and himselfe may be set up where thou hast to doe. The Spirit of a drunkard or mizer will not so plod about the pots or money as thine for God. Thy tongue, cares, and all will bee for him. Thou maist step out of the way, but still thy bent will bee to serve him and speake for him in thy spirit. If memory or great words faile, thy spirit will be for him as that poore man was for Christ Ioh 9. reade the allusion. Againe, the savour of thy heart will be in and for him. The bent of the soule commonly goes where it delights, and to that which is precious to it; try thy selfe by this. What hath got thy heart? Where is thy treasure? If Christ in a new creature be it, lo, the very instinct and joy of thy heart will be to him; other things shall be unsavory, thou shalt stinke in the nostrils of the old man, and he in thine. And secondly, try thy selfe by this. The spirit of the soule is the chiefe part of it, there is the whole streame. If the new Creature be set up there, God is served with all the might, the male, not the female, all the courage and strength; no cost is too great: The whole cost of all thy powers, members, gifts, authority, credit, wealth, experience shall runne in the streame of holinesse. No unbeteeming one can be a new Creature, for he is free borne. The minde, we say, is the man. If that be for God, all the inferiour faculties will side with him, as Iezabels Eunuches with Iehu: as the lesser wheeles of the perpetuall motion did the first mooving Master-wheele. That Engine when it was first seene in the Court, was not so admirable as this. Prov. 23. 26.

Q. Conclude the fourth Branch, and the Use thereof. Vse. 9.

A. It is plentifull: a little of each may serve. 1. Terror and conviction of all other mortifiers and mortification: all other counterfeit quicknings of a false heart, by Popish or carnall Devotions, all which which threaten the destruction of the flesh, but in truth doe establish it, Popish Penances, emptie Fasts, starvings of the body, Rules of abstinence from marriage, meats, money, trades and conversation of life, vowes and prayers: they are from flesh, and to it they returne; violent remedies encreasing the disease, having no bloud, no power in them: and therefore not blessed to kill sinne: Sin and Satan feare no such holy water. Onely Christ, onely Christ.

Vse 10. Secondly, Its use of Examining to all sound Christians, to try whether Sanctification be planted in them? Hath the Spirit of the new Creature, discovered sinne in her colours unto you? Hath it by the word and Seales setled the power of the Crosse and grave upon you? Can you say, it hath dregged your lusts up the hill to Golgotha, and bound them with the Cords of your Priest and Sacrifice to the Altar, and let out your bloud there? Is that jollity and pride of corruption cast downe? Is the heart able to say (in the power of Christ) to her lusts, world, selfe, ease, uncleanesse; I behold yee as stript of your condemning power, and I feare not your prevailing? Since you killed the Lord Iesus, he hath nayled you to his Crosse, and robbed you and your Captaine of your strength and venom: So that in his Death and in the Name of Christ my Conquerour, I doe come out against you, and pursue the victory. Thinke you ever to get head any more? Darest thou O proud, worldly heart so much as rout or stirre, while thou seest the Chariot upon which my Christ and head triumphed over thee? Oh, as thou slewest Christ, so thou wouldst have slaine me! But thou art prevented! By his Death thou art slaine, I am saved! I say, canst thou put on (not Sauls harnesse against Goliah, but) Christs Armour against sinne, and say, This day God shall enclose thee in mine hand! Canst thou feele thy fingers apt to fight this combate, as taught by the Spirit? Then it is well with thee, the fruit will shew it, The old man will vanish, the New will grow: New Lords will have new Lawes. It will be with thee as with an Ale-house, which (during a drunken Tenants occupying it) was wont to be never empty of Drunkards, Theeves, and Queanes: but is now in the tenure of an honest man, who hath pulld downe signe and all: When old guests call there for their old well-come, loe the answere is, Heere is a new Lord and new Law: This man keepes no Drinke or Tobacco bacco to sell, no Sacke and Sugar, no Revelling here, the Buttry is turn'd to a Shoppe, idle companionship to good husbandry: There is hope the house may recover her lost credit againe. If thou canst finde this, and thy heartie mortification appearing in a mortified carriage, thine eyes, senses, tongue mortified, humblenesse in thy behaviour, feare of the least sinne, watching the least occasions and temptations offered, starting at old company and sinfull objects; I say, its a good signe. A mortified heart will soone be a quickned Spirit: the understanding will project, purpose for God: The will and choise of the heart will be for him: Sloth, ease, unwillingnesse will cease: List, love, delight, unweariednesse will succeed: And in a word, the streame of the soule will runne to obedience (when God hath turned it) and the yoke of Christ will become easie.

Q. What other use floweth from hence?

A. I will adde this onely one; That wee learne to esteeme the Sacrament of Baptisme otherwise than most of us doe. Did wee know and beleeve it to be that Laver of Regeneration, and Channell of Christs divine nature, and properties which are conveyed to the soule by it; as Peter cals it, The washing not of water, but the Answer of the soule by the resurrection of Christ, telling us, wee are washed by the Spirit of our God, and ingrafted into the likenesse of his death and Resurrection by it, surely wee should make other use of it than we doe. And the doctrine of the Covenant would sinke the deeplier into us by it; if wee could use it as the instrument to put on the Lord, the holy Ghost and fire. But touching the Sacraments, I shall elsewhere treate, if God will. Thus much for this first Article. Vse 11. 1 Pet. 3. 10.

The ſecond Article.

Qu. Proceed now to the ſecond Article?

The whole Converſation of the beleever muſt be renewed.

Gen. 5.24. Pſal. 50.8. Gen. 17.1. Luk. 1.6. Iam. 3.13. Act. 25.1. Matth. 5.16.

A. THe ſecond is, That the LORD requires that this new Creature thus framed in the ſoule, breake forth into the whole courſe and converſation. That is, that holineſſe be exerciſed and ſet on worke in the courſe of our life, which ſometimes in the Scripture is called the ordering of our converſation aright. See Pſal. 50. ult. Some times our walking with God, Gen. 17.1. Luk. 1.6. So alſo our living righteouſly, holily and ſoberly in this preſent life: Sometime, our ſerving him in feare all our dayes: ſometimes, the having of a good conſcience, Act. 25.1. And laſtly, the holding out of a good converſation. See Matth 5.16. So 1 Pet. 3.2. Reade alſo Epheſ. 5.8. 2 Pet. 3.11.

Q. What meane you by this word, onely? our open carriage in the view of the world?

What the courſe or Converſation is.

A. No: but the round or wheele of our whole life within or without towards God or man. As appeares by that in Heb. 13.5. Let the courſe be without covetouſneſſe: by which hee doth not onely condemne open oppreſſion, or uſury, but the wheele of the thoughts, affections, and endevours of covetouſneſſe: for in them is our Converſation.

Two things here. 1. Circumſtances. 2. About the Perſons.

Q. How many things are to be conſidered in the opening thereof?

A. Two things, firſt, the Circumſtances; ſecondly, the Subſtance of this converſation.

Q. How many circumſtances belong to it?

A. One concernes the perſons who muſt leade this converſation: others the converſation it ſelfe.

All ſorts bound to this Rule. 1. Eſtates.

Q. What is the former?

A. That this converſation bindes all ſorts equally to the good behaviour without preſcription, or exception, and that in mens ſeverall eſtates, conditions, relations. Eſtates, as in proſperitie or adverſitie: Iob 2. Thou ſpeakeſt like a fooliſh woman! Shall wee ſerve God for good and not for evill?

Conditions,

Conditions, as in each trade or calling, each common reſpect of ſex, age; each condition of degree, inferior, ſuperiour; each ſexe, whereto adde all other regards, as time, place, publike or private occaſions and accidents befalling, as either alone, or with others, at home, abroad, and the like. Thirdly, relations, as Maſters ſervants, parents, children, husbands, wives, Magiſtrates, Subjects, our ſelves, or ſtrangers within our rooфes, and ſo of the like. A maine and great encloſure, at once cutting off the infinite objections and cavills ariſing from ſuch perſonall reſpects. Some would exempt themſelves by their greatneſſe, as our common ſpeech imports; they are very good folkes, for ſo noble or ſo rich, or in ſuch place. Why? thy place puts upon thee ſo much the greater ſervice. Others pretend their meanneſſe, as if the Lord over-ſaw them, as motes in the Sunne: ſo many poore ſervants in great houſes thinke that the Sabbath and Religion is for their Maſters, as for them they ſhall be paſſed by. So ſome ignorant people alledge this new learning is for Scholers: and ſo young ones excuſe themſelves by their greeneneſſe, old ones by their feebleneſſe, &c. But as this Net of obedience is ſtrong enough for Lyons: ſo the maſhes of it are ſmall enough for flyes.

1. Conditions.

3. Relations.

4. Degrees.

Q. What are the latter Circumſtances of Converſation in ſelfe?

A. Three: Order, Proportion, and Beautie.

Three properties of a good converſation.

Q. What is the order of good converſation?

A. The chiefe and maine ſervice of God bee prefered before the meaner in time, and in priviledge. In time thus, that firſt religious comſe be attended, then worldly. If a man ſhould paint the body of a man and ſet his heeles upward, how diſguiſed were it? So for us to goe and moile our ſelves all day long, and then at night with a dead heart, and a drouſie ſpirit to fall to prayer; oh how wofull! This is out of order, and a ſetting cart before the horſe: ſince that ſhould have beene firſt done, and the belly attended after Mat. 6. 33. firſt ſeeke the Kingdome. Secondly, order of honour. That is, when two ſervices meet which cannot both be done at once, that the leſſer give place to the greater. (Except neceſſitie or mercy doe hinder) which is no breach of dutie, but an omiſſion onely for the time, and a returne unto it in ſeaſon; And in this point a good conſcience is the beſt interpreter.

1. Order.

Q. What is proportion?

2 Proportion.

A. When there is a ſutableneſſe betweene dutie and dutie. In the members of the body, when ſome one for the part exceeds the proportion of that part, or of the other parts, there is a diſguiſement: As when the head is bigger than an head ſhould be, or bigger than other parts which ſhould exceed it: for example, when men in their zeale exceed the rules of wiſedome, and are too hot and eager; or when they are exceeding zealous for Religion and the Sabbath, but extreme cold and remiſſe in point of juſtice and righteouſneſſe, and keeping touch with men. Secondly, when there is no ſutableneſſe of harmony: as in the body, if one member be comely, another deformed; the face comely, the backe crooked, it's a blemiſh. So here: when there is good behaviour betweene couples abroad, but great oddes at home: when men have very good gifts to ſpeake, but very bad to practiſe, none better in compaſſion to the poore, none worſe in matters of conſcience toward God in their calling, marriage, or uſe of liberties. Abner was a very good Captaine to Saul, but an adulterer: Ioab to David, but a murtherer. So the Proverb runneth, Hee is no mans foe ſave his owne; but love muſt begin at home, and iſſue to others.

Q. What is Beautie of converſation?

3 Beautie.

A. As in the body beautie and amiableneſſe ariſeth from the good temper and fit coherence of parts: ſo in converſation, beauty is that grace, which ariſeth from the giving to each dutie, her due reſpect; not onely doing it, but looking how, as Rom. 12. the Apoſtle tels us, Let him that giveth, doe it in ſimplicitie, hee that ruleth with diligence, hee that ſheweth mercy, with chearefulneſſe; Wiſedome makes the face to ſhine. It is not the bare doing, but the due tempering of it with the right qualitie, that ſweetens it. And where this due manner is generally obſerved, it makes the whole converſation, beautifull and ſavoury: yea, ſets a luſtre upon it. Theſe three may ſerve for a taſte of the reſt.

Eccleſ. 8. 1.

Q. Now come to the ſubſtance of Converſation: To what heads may they be referred?

The ſecond generall. The ſubſtance of it.

A. To theſe three, eſpecially: Either thoſe graces which doe qualifie a good converſation. Or thoſe ſubject things wherein converſation conſiſts; or the object which converſation lookes at.

Q. What are theſe graces of converſation?

A. Some

A. Some are generall qualifications of grace, concerning every part of converſation one and another: others are ſpeciall gifts of the Spirit, ſeverally belonging thereto: as the actions of life requires

1. In the graces of it.

Q. What are the Generall?

A. To give a taſte of all by ſome of the chiefe; they are either graces of quality or quantity: the former, ſerving to the due manner, the latter the due meaſure of holy converſation. And of the former ſort are theſe (I ſpeake of ſome of the chiefe:) Firſt, Wiſedome: Secondly, Simplicity: Thirdly, Sincerity: Fourthly, Integrity: Fiftly, Faithfulnes.

Generall graces. 1. Of Qualitie. 5.

Q. What is wiſedome?

A. A grace of the ſoule, whereby it draweth the ſanctified knowledge of the minde, to the particular uſe of her converſation, as occaſion is offered, Col. 3. 16. And it is a determining of generals to ſpecials, both of actions, and circumſtances according to Chriſtian rules, of which ſee Phil. 4. 6. Finally, brethren, whatſoever is pure, good, of good report, &c. Alſo it is a grace teaching him that hath it to keepe a decorum in religious and outward converſation, as knowing what his perſon and condition will beare or refuſe. Laſtly, how to carry himſelfe in the uſe of things indifferent without exceſſe or defect: and how to uſe Chriſtian policy with ſimplicity and pureneſſe of conſcience.

The firſt, Wiſedome.

Q. What is ſimplicity?

A. It is a grace of a renued ſoule, looking at truths in the naked nature, apprehending and judging of them without all mixture or corruption of fleſhly conceit and wiſedome: and accordingly deſirous to be informed of them as they are, and to love, embrace and enſue them accordingly, neither looking at the right hand or left: I feare that as Satan tempted Eve, ſo he will tempt and leade you from the ſimplicity of the Goſpell. 2 Cor. 11. 3.

The ſecond Simplicity.

Q. What is ſincerity or Uprightneſſe?

A. It is a grace of the ſoule looking at the actions of converſation, in reſpect of their right and true ends: and therefore as it oppoſeth all hipocriſie, which is to doe good with a ſquint looke and mixture of our own ends of credit, gaine, eaſe, or content: ſo it doth good with a pure ayme at Gods glory, the honeſt diſcharge of duty, and the good of others: ſo as a man may have good conſcience in all things, See 1 Cor. 1, 12. and Act. 26. Job 2. Act. 26. 1. 1 Cor. 1. 12. he abhorred to be an hireling.

The 3. grace, Sincerity.

This is called perfection, viz. of parts not degrees.

Q. What is faithfulneſſe?

The 4 grace, Faithfulneſſe

A. It reſpects the due manner of converſation, that it be holy and approoving what is accepted, howbeit properly it hath a reſpect to oppoſition: For as wee ſay of a good and faithfull ſervant, we dare truſt him with untold gold, meaning, although we ſee him not: ſo this grace is ſuch an honeſty, as puts God in ſecurity, not to revolt from him or warpe notwithſtanding baits to allure, or terrors to diſcourage, or dangers to deterre, either by threats, error of the wicked, collapſed times, or provocations from our owne falſe hearts, Rev. 2. 13. and Rev. 3. 8. Thou haſt kept my word and not denied my Name. Mat. 25. Well done good and faithfull ſervant. It's alſo taken for ſincerity. Act. 16. 15.

Rev. 2. 13. Rev. 3. 8. Act. 16. 15.

Q. What is integrity?

The 5. grace, Integritie. Pſal. 119. 6.

A. An equall and whole uprightneſſe of it towards all the Commandements of God, without partiality or taking exception, Pſal. 119. 6. When I have reſpect unto all thy Commandements. It is contrary to that halting of ſpirit with God, and patchery of a falſe heart, whereby it affords God a maymed ſacrifice: in ſome duties forward that come on the right ſide, but ſuch as finde not favour in our eyes, rejecting them.

Q. What are the Graces of quantity or meaſure?

Second head, Graces of Quantitie, two.

A. They may be referred to two: Proſperity and Conſtancy.

Q. What is proſperity?

I Proſperitie. Three Branches.

A. A grace of the ſoule compounded of many; in a word, the wel-fare of a ſoule in reſpect of degrees and meaſures of grace. And it hath three parts: Firſt, Rootedneſſe: Secondly, Fruitfulneſſe: Thirdly, Growth. Rootedneſſe of the ſoule, is a grace contrary to ſlightneſſe; whereby it is both grounded well in knowledge for direction of life, and ſetled in grace for full purpoſe and reſolution of obedience. See that

1. Rootednes

Act. 11. 23. 1 Cor. 15. ult.

of 1 Cor. 15. ult. unmoveable. So elſe-where, the word of ſtabliſhing and ſtedfaſtneſſe in the grace of the Goſpell is uſed. And that with full purpoſe of heart they would cleave to the Lord. Secondly, Fruitfulneſſe is a grace iſſuing from rootedneſſe; whereby the ſoule is abundant in the worke of God, and full of the fruits of weldoing. The contrary is barenneſſe and emptineſſe, when the ſoule ſcants the Lord in his due, as if hee were an hard Maſter. The effect of it is to avoid unprofitableneſſe profitableneſſe in the knowledge of our Lord Ieſus, 2 Pet. 1. 8. Reade for this grace 1 Cor. 15. ult. The third is, the fruit of both, to wit, Growth and increaſe: For as wee ſee it to bee in trees, when they are once well faſtned in the earth and rooted, wee looke they ſhould beare fruit; and then that in ſo bearing, they waxe and grow, in heigth and breadth and fruit, ſo is it heere. Growth is a grace of the ſoule, by which it encreaſes by due ſteps and degrees, to that fulneſſe of the meaſure of Chriſt, according to the proportion of the part, Ephe. 4. 15. 2 Pet. ult. Luke 8. 8. And it commonly is the effect of the meanes of grace, bleſſed to the beleeving ſoule, as 1 Pet. 2. 2. Now then of theſe three ſtands Proſperitie: which is the ſpirituall gladneſſe and laughter of the thriving ſoule, 3 Ioh. 2. Thy ſoule proſpereth; that is, apparantly is fat and well liking in goodneſſe (as thoſe three children, Dan. 1. and as wee ſay, the corne and hops laugh upon the ground and poles that beare them.) And it is a grace of the ſoule rooted, fruitfull and growing, whereby it beareth marke in the ſight of all, that it goes well with it to God-ward, and is cheerefull, full of health, vigor, and contentment, ſaying thus, What I am, I would be, and wiſh to be no other, 3. Growth. Ephe. 4. 15. 2 Pet. ult. 1 Pet. 2. 2. 3 Ioh. 2. Act. 15. 23.

2. Fruitfulnes

Q. What is Continuance?

A. A grace of meaſure in the ſoule, whereby it gives not in, nor is faint or weary in well-doing: and it's contrary to ſtaggering, ſloth and eaſe. It reſpects the courſe or wheele of converſation: and it is either a going on and on from dutie to dutie with ſtrength and purpoſe, Pſal. 119. 57. and long-breathedneſſe (Pſal. 84. 7. and Heb. 12. 1.) Runne the race with patience ſet before thee, taking alwayes in good part both thicke and thin, and not fainting in affliction and troubles. Or elſe it is finall Perſeverance, the fruit of the former: for by a continuing in well-doing, Romans 2. 7. and accounting each day a peece of our journey home; at length wee attaine the end of our hope, and the iſſue of our Faith and combat. This grace hath the honour of all the reſt; not becauſe the reſt are inferiour to it, but becauſe it hath the lot above all the reſt, to ſtand next to the doore of ſalvation, and to let in the ſoule thither: See Mat 24. 13. 14. Rev. 2. 10. And thus much of the Graces qualifying good converſation generally.

The 2grace. Continuance Pſal. 84. 7. Rom. 2. 7. Mat. 24. 13.

Q. What are the particulars that immediatly help converſation?

2. Sort of ſpeciall gifts of ſanctification. Their names and uſe.

A. The vertues of the Soule: Righteouſneſſe is one, which gives every one his due. Prudence is another, which wiſely accommodates it ſelfe to the occaſions of actions, as it judgeth moſt expedient. Courage is a third, which goeth through all dangers and ſtreights (falling out by Providence) patiently; and waiteth by faith and hope for a good iſſue. A fourth is Soberneſſe, which ordereth a man in the uſe of his lawfull liberties aright, and keepes a man from exceſſe therein: and from all extremities of paſſions and affections. Humilitie is another, which teacheth a man to thinke meanely of himſelfe, as knowing his owne wants and ſhame: whatſoever his graces and gifts may ſeeme to others. Chaſtitie is another, whereby a man poſſeſſeth his veſſell in holineſſe and honor. Thankfulneſſe, whereby the receiver is duly affected and carried toward the author of any good. Sundry other vertues there are, uſefulneſſe, mercy, gentleneſſe and amiableneſſe, fidelitie, love, forbearance, ſociableneſſe, tenderneſſe, truth, and ſuch like, of which in the Article of Communion, Part 2. I have ſpoken. Yet, a true Chriſtian muſt looke to nouriſh morall vertues in the ordinary converſation, as well as religious, in the fellowſhip of Saints: That ſo, no dutie may be ſtrange to him. And (in a word) all the ſanctifying graces of the Spirit of God, have their peculiar uſe in converſation; ſome are more proper for one uſe, ſome for another, and all for ſome or other. Thus faith is a grace for the juſt to live by to God in the world; hope is a grace to beare up in ſtreights; patience, in an affliction; thankfulneſſe, in bleſſings; moderation, in lawfull liberties; innocency and righteouſneſſe in the common life of men; love generally helpes all: and in a word, each grace doth more or leſſe ſerve for the enabling of the ſoule to a well abearing of it ſelfe towards God, man, or ſelfe. Of theſe I ſpeake no more; onely I would adde one thing, That the graces of the Spirit ſerve not onely to take up the reſidence within, and no more, but mightily to ſtrengthen the ſoule to all ſpirituall or externall converſation: See that Col. 1. 11. Strengthned by the might of his power unto all long-ſuffring with joyfulneſſe, and well pleaſing, &c. Hence it is, that Eph. 6. Paul reckons up ſpeciall graces of the Spirit, as the compleat harneſſe of a Chriſtian. I will open this by a ſimilitude: I told ye, that that Converſation is like a wheele. Note then; as in a wheele there be 3 parts, the nave, the ſpokes, and the round: ſo here; the nave is compared to the ſpirit of regeneration, or the new creature (of which in Article 1.) the ſpokes are theſe graces I have named, iſſuing from the nave, and faſtned to the round: for as theſe ſtaves doe unite the ſtrength of the nave to the round, and carry the ſtrength thereof to each part of the wheele, which elſe would breake and ſplit in ſunder: ſo theſe graces of the Spirit of Chriſt are the ſtaffe of our life, and the very ſupport of our converſation, and wheele of our courſe. As for example; Take away knowledge from the uſe of our liberties; faith, from the Sacraments or Word; love, from viſiting of the ſicke; mercy, from almes, where ſhall theſe parts of converſation become?

Col. 1. 11.

Q. What is the ſecond part of the ſubſtance hereof?

A. It is the conſideration of the Subject who is to leade this converſation; that is, the regenerate perſon. Now looke what the ſeverall inſtruments are by which a Chriſtian doth and muſt ordinarily converſe, thoſe are the ſubject in which it ſtands, and therefore had neede to be accordingly qualified. The ſecond generall head. The ſubject three-fold.

Q. What are they, and how many?

A. Three: Thoughts, Affections, and Actions.

Q. What are the Thoughts, and what rules are there for the frame of their converſation? First, For the frame of the Thoughts.

A. Thoughts are the firſt movers in the ſoule, and from them iſſueth either good or bad life: See Prov. 4. 23. ſo our Saviour, That which defiles a man comes from within, as evill thoughts, Math. 15. 19. They are the maſter-wheele. If a man be envious and malicious, his thoughts deviſe miſchiefe upon his bed; if the courſe bee covetous, the thoughts firſt ſet them on fire; they peirce them through with cares, 1 Tim. 6. 10. So the reſt. Therefore (it being granted that we ſpeake of the new Creature, who hath purified already his ſoule to obedience) let theſe rules ſerve to frame this common-wealth of thoughts aright. Firſt, let our continuall care be to keepe the through-fare of the ſoule free from the evill of them, as by pardon of them, Act. 8. 22. ſo by purging of them daily from that vanitie, prophaneneſſe, diſorder, endleſneſſe, and other ſinnes thereof, which makes the converſation vaine; 1 Pet. 1. 18. Epheſ. 4. 24. put off the old man of deceitfull luſts. Q. How is the wheele of Affections to be guided?

2 For our Affections. Their miſcarriage is cauſe.

A. The Affections are the wheeles of the ſoule indeede, and upon them the ſoule is either hurried to evill, or led to good. Little do moſt men thinke how they are carried in theſe their paſſions, by each object: Sometime by love, by joy, by hope on the right hand; otherwhiles by feare, by ſorrow, by anger, pittie, or the like: rare is that man who ventures not upon the ſea of converſation with the broken barke of Affections; It may be ſaid of them as of that ancient, Where they do well, none better; where ill, none worſe. Heathens were faine to abandon them quite (the Stoicks I meane) for the pudder they found by them, and to deny all affection; and ſo erroneouſly put out their eyes, and cut off their hands and feete for feare of offending them. But the Scriptures afford more grace than ſo, therefore firſt weigh well, how hardly the beſt eſcape the violence of them. Note how David diſguiſeth himſelfe ſuddenly in ſwearing Nabals death upon his defeate, Job 18. 10. 1 Sam. 25. 13. how ſoone Malchus his eare is ſmitten off by Peter in his paſſion: how ſoone fire from heaven is ſent for by the diſ-

2 Sam. 12. 5. Nathan, 2 Sam. 12. 5. which hee muſt needes bluſh for. So by the beholding of Bathſheba, how ſoone was a fire kindled,

but

but long in quenching? How ſuddenly, Ioſh. 7. did the Babyloniſh garment fire the heart of Achan? The newes of Abſolons death, pierce and diſguiſe David? Not to ſpeake of Gehazi his ſudden following Naaman, Felix his hope of a bribe from Paul, the Diſciples exceſſe of ſorrow upon a word ſpeaking by Chriſt, that fooliſh pitty of Ahab upon the men of Benhadads errand, the extreame feare of the women upon the Angels words. All theſe clouds of witneſſes, ſhew the unbridledneſſe of the paſſions: and therefore ſhould prepare us with earneſtneſſe to prevent them. 2 King. 5. 20.

Secondly, Yet note, how good affections are as ſoone up in armes, if the heart be well ſeaſoned and ſtabliſhed with grace. How ſoone was Peter mooved with holy feare upon the draught of fiſhes? Luk. 5. 8. How eaſily was the poore blind man raiſed up in the depth of love to the Lord Ieſus? How ſoone was ſorrow wrought in the hearts of three thouſand murtherers at once by Peters preaching? how preſently was compaſſion mooved in Peter and Iohn toward the cripple, Act. 3. 4. how quickly was zeale ſtirred up in Phineas againſt Zimri and Cosbi? Numb. 25. 11. and ſo may be ſaid of the reſt. Till grace rule them. Iohn. 9. 38. Act. 3. 4. Numb. 25. 11.

Thirdly, Therefore, let us nouriſh the fire of the holy Ghoſt kindled in us in our firſt regeneration, and apply it daily to the ſhaming, purging out, and conſuming of theſe luſts, Gal. 5. 24. Bring them (as the heifer in ſacrifice) to the hornes of the Altar, and binde them thereto, that they breake not looſe. And call upon the Lord for his Spirit, that the arrowes of the Almighty may bee in us, and the power of Chriſts death might bee as venom to give theſe luſts the deadly blow and bane, and to drinke up the ſinne of theſe affections in us! Let it ſeriouſly ſmite our hearts, and let our affections take revenge upon us, for the corruption of our affections. Let us not excuſe our ſelves for our nature, for that defends a leſſer ſinne by a greater: for what can be more woefull, than when ſinne by cuſtome hath hardned us to a nature? Remember wee how hideous effects theſe wilde beaſts have wrought in our lives? I ſay, our wealth our inordinate love, our mirth, our ſorrow, feare, and indignation? How might David with ſorrow have recorded his diſtemper againſt innocent Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. 19. 29. Hezekiah his great joy and jollity in the comming of thoſe Embaſſadors, Eſay 39. 2. And the truth is, the greateſt woe and repentance which Helpes for ordering them. I Gal. 5. 24. 2 Sam. 19. 29. Eſay 39. 2.

which ever betided us in our life, may well bee fathered upon our paſſions: Some bringing themſelves by them to needleſſe ſuits of Law, purſuits of enemies, loſſe of their eſtates, fines, impriſonments, a brand of reproach among men as not to be lived with: and if not ſo, yet a continuall bondage of ſpirit, and unfitneſſe to any good, either to calling, prayer, bearing of our croſſes, or family and marriage duties, and all by our inordinate paſſions?

2. Helpe. Fourthly, Let us apply the merit, and looke at the example of the Lord Ieſus in all the whole converſation of his affections. How holy was his zeale againſt thoſe defilers of the Temple? Mat. 21. 12. his love to that yong mans forwardneſſe? hatred of thoſe hypocrites the Scribes and Phariſes? Mat. 23. 13. ſorrow for our ſinnes in the garden? cheerefulneſſe in converſe with all ſorts to win them? weeping for Lazarus? pitty to the poore widdowes dead onely ſonne? Luke 7. 13. Luk. 7. 13. Oh! the ſavour of his example, and merit of his affections, who as he abhorred all ſtupor of heart, ſo never faulted in the evenneſſe, temper, meaſure, of them, either in the defect or exceſſe, ſhould raviſh us, and excite us (if true members) to purchaſe the like; we ſhould even conceive holy heate of the Spirit before theſe rods.

3. Helpe. Fifthly, When we have got theſe good affections, learne we to take a due marke of the right objects of our affections, and that will ſhame us, when by looſing or miſtaking our right marke, we doe faſten them baſely and indirectly. Our anger is too good to be ſet upon carnall revenge, it will ſerve to be employed about Gods diſhonour, Eph 4. 26. Our love is too good for baſe luſts, money, and pleaſures, it is made for the Lord and for his Saints, Pſal. 16. 2. Our hope of a vaine Paradiſe here, is better ſet up in heaven, 1 Cor. 15. 19. and ſo might I ſay of our ſorrow, that it beſt befits ſinne, our owne, and the times. If wee would thus direct our affections, they would ſtart backe when other objects lay claime to them. 1 Cor. 15. 19.

4. Helpe. Laſtly, Let our maine direction bee to get our ſoules ſetled in peace, in the ſweet aſſurance of reconciliation with God, and that we know the worſt that can befall us, that no ſinne, ſorrow, or enemy can deprive us of that crowne: and this peace will calme us and rule our ſpirits, that neither feare, nor hope,

ſhall much unſettle us, but we ſhall poſſeſſe our ſoules in pati- Eſay 57.
ence, in the midſt of all diſtempers: As a wicked heart caſts up mire and dirt like the Sea: ſo the affections of the godly are calme and quiet, and the wheele of the Converſation goes on in a moſt well ordered manner. And ſo much for theſe.

Q. What Rules give you for the third, of Actions?

A. Herein wee can give no particular rules: becauſe they are infinite: but bring the generall rules to particular and incident occaſions. Therfore, for the ordering of this converſation, let thoſe foure uſuall golden rules direct us, that we (as neere as wo can) looke to firſt, our grounds; ſecondly, to the due manner: Thirdly, the true meaſure: fourthly, the right ends of our actions. Touching which the leſſe may ſerve, becauſe they trench upon ſome former rules. The third for the frame of our Actions, Foure rules.

Q. Touching the firſt, what is it to be grounded?

A. To be ſure, we have a word to ſhew for our warrant, eyther in doing, or not doing, or ſuſpending: for although the action may prove bad in the forme, which is good in the nature of it, yet that which is bad in the ground and nature, cannot bee poſſibly well done. For, without knowledge the heart is naught: Now the Word will paſſe cenſure upon it, either directly or by conſequent: and therefore we muſt attend to this light, eſpecially in darke places. And if wee cannot informe our ſelves alone through ignorance, we muſt make it a booke caſe, and adviſe by all meanes with others, for truth lyes deepe ſometimes. This is a maine ground, and is exceedingly tranſgreſſed. I will not here inſiſt upon them that goe againſt light (becauſe the godly abhorre it, while they are themſelves) but even of them, many ſorts faile. 1. Some will doe many things upon cuſtome, and taking their grounds for granted, when yet they have none. Theſe are to be informed, that they may know themſelves to doe well, as well as doe that which is good, without thanke. 2. Others doe many things in the twilight, hit they miſſe they: not upon aſſured ground, not conſidering, that as well that which is done without faith is ſinne, as that which is againſt it. 3. Many take up grounds onely in their generality, and faile in the particular determining of the generall to their occaſion, and ſo ſometime exceed, ſometime limit the Word, whereas they ſhould goe according to the Word cloſely in the extent of it. Thus many limit the ſecond Commandement, 1. To be well grounded. Prov. 19. 3. 2 Pet. 1. 19. How men corrupt themſelves in their grounds. 1. 2. 3.

to groſſe Idolatry of Pagans, and ſecurely goe on in their own owne prejudice, devotion, good meanings to be good grounds, 5 as blind people. And laſtly, others corrupt the ground by falſe gloſſes and that ſundry wayes, 1. By adulterating the word both of rule and example in Scripture, and making it ſound as they liſt. This is to crooke the rule and then worke by it, thus ges the conſcience from a Law, there is no tranſgreſſion; as in doubtfull, generall, erroneous ones: take paines to diſcerne betweene the colours of good and evill, and beware wee be not lead by the errour of the wicked, 2 Pet. 3. end, and Epheſ.

4 14.

Q. What is the right manner of actions?

The ſecond Right manner. A. So neceſſary is this rule that it reaches to all our actions:
yea, the moſt indifferent in her nature, and ſuch as we are not tied to, but are arbitrary, yet when they are done, are to be done in a right manner, or elſe wee ſinne. And this manner of doing, requires two things: Firſt, that they be done in the eſtate of well pleaſing. Secondly, well pleaſingly: For the Heb. 11 4. former, it is an aſſurance that the perſon pleaſes God, Heb.
11. 4. For the latter, it is a cleaving to the quality of performance

formance that it be pure. To the pure all things are pure in their lawfulnesse, yet even pure things must be done purely also, as I noted before in the beautie of Conversation: each action having in it a peculiar quality to commend it, as there I noted in divers instances. And therefore next to knowledge, the eye of the soule must call for this true manner, and that withall closenesse, entirenesse, humblenesse, faith, wisedome, love, cheerefulnesse, resolution, it may performe that which is good. But I repeate nothing.

Q. What is the measure of due actions?

A. That the Lord be served with the best of us; within, by the best bent of our soules; without, by the best extent of our abilities; and that we keepe no false measure within us. Our course is to deale with God, as buyers and sellers doe each with other; buy by one measure, and sell by another. So we, when we trade with God, are content he should sell to us by the largest bushell, heaped, thrust, and running over; but we pay to him by a curt, scanty one. But as we doe, or would fare at Gods hand, so should we measure out unto him and in all that we do to him, or for him, call forth the best of our spirit, and bent of heart, all our courage and might; and also enlarge our actions to the greatest extent we can in number, and in degree; that our goodnesse may be as diffusive and exemplary as (without hypocrisie and) within our compasse may be. But I have spoken of these two before: of the one in the Subject of Regeneration; of the other in the graces of Measure: Looke backe to them. The third, Right measure.

Q. What is the true end of all good actions?

A. It is one of the maine of all the rest. For as the end, and scope of a thing gives it the being: so a childe of God, is more properly obedient in his end, than in any: he may faile through ignorance, or weake carriage, or measure, but in this is his glory; That the desire of his soule is towards the Lord: and that hee may approove himselfe to have had an upright ayme at the Lords ends: the glory of his name, good of his brethren, and peace of his owne heart; whatsoever else hee failes in, in preaching, in prayer, in mercy and compassion, in Sabbaths, in example, yet that in this hee is voyde of guile. See Pauls boasting, 2 Cor. 1. 12, wee have had our Conversation in sincerisie, &c. This was Abimelecks prayse (for the morall of it) that hee had done it with a pure intent. It is that God lookes at, Psal. 51, 6. It was Davids rejoycing that he walked in the perfect way, Psal. 101. 2. and 4 Right end. Esay 26. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Psal. 51. 6. Psal. 101. 2.

and Aſa his prayſe, that in all his diſtempers, he ſtill held upright in heart. Oh, this a difficult worke! As huckſters deale with their milke, honey, wares, they mixe them with waxe, water, and traſh, for the vantage, ſo doth our heart ſeldome any action, but ſome dreg and dead flye of our owne aymes and ends is ready to defile it. Beware therefore, and let a true end ſteere all the actions of our life. But of this before in the grace of uprightneſſe.

Third Generall Head. The Obiect two-fold.

Q. Proceed to the third branch of the ſubſtance of converſation, concerning the obiect thereof: what is it?

A. Two-fold: either Gods Communion with us: or ours with him. For the former of theſe, it is the Lords inward and gracious conveying himſelfe into that ſoule wherein hee delights as in his Temple. For certaine it is, that as the poore ſoule ſuppes the Lord, ſo the Lord comes in and ſuppes with it, Revel. 3. 20. The Lord is ſayd to be as the welbeloved is, to his ſpouſe, he joyes in her company, loves to bee where ſhee is, even where two or three are together in his Name, he is in the middeſt of them. Wiſedome delights to converſe with her children: delights in the graces which himſelfe hath adorned them with, a broken, humble, upright, holy, pure, meeke ſober heart. As an owner of ſome great Farme, delights to taſte of ſuch dainties as his tenant brings him forth: ſo doth the Lord in the fruites, which his owne hands and planting have brought forth, of which the whole booke of Canticles ſpeaketh: To wit, how the ſtuell and ſavour of the Churches graces, delight the noſtrils of God: where the carkaſſe is, the Eagle will reſort. And in like ſort, doth the Lord communicate himſelfe with his beloved: even as a man that ſuppes with his boſome friend and ſecond ſelfe, whom he dare truſt, will poure out himſelfe into his boſome: ſo doth the Lord convey himſelfe into the ſoules of his beleeving and beloved ones. Nothing is too deere for them: he will tell them the very ſecrets of his heart, hide nothing from them. They ſhall know a reaſon of thoſe his dealings, whereof he will give no account to others: in their ignorances, errors, doubts and feares, hee will reveale himſelfe by his ſpirit unto them to ſtabliſh their hearts: Hee will hold them cloſe to himſelfe from warping in obedience, or withdrawing in their faith: hee will comfort them in their ſtreights as John 9. he will give them

ſecret meate which no man knowes of: a ſecret name, and white ſtone, that is, ſuch a pledge that they are his, as ſhall not ſuffer them to ſtagger. Many an intimation he will vouchſafe unto them through their daily courſe, which ſhall miniſter comfort unto them, againſt the difficulty of their journey, the poyſon of their corruptions; the error of the wicked, and the badneſſe of ſinne, and ſadneſſe of ſorrow, in evill times: ſo that they ſhall ſee cauſe rather to mend their pace then to give in, and forſake the Lord. Looke how it was betweene the Lord Ieſus and his Diſciples both before, and eſpecially after his aſcenſion, and the deſcent of the ſpirit, that he was preſent with them in all dangers, duties and occaſions, to inſtruct, leade, ſtrengthen and aſſiſt them: ſo is it ſtill, in meaſure: And no leſſe then this, doth each beleeving heart finde: even as the travailer findes his bayting places, ſo doth the ſoule theſe repaſts. The Canticles and Pſalmes are plentifull for this, how the Lord leads his ſheepe into the paſtures, and to the waters? how he is as a ſtrong hold to them, comforts them in heavineſſe: and this, both in the ordinances, or out of them by his promiſes.

Q. What is our converſation with God?

A. Godly converſation (as Peter calles it) is that communion which a renued ſoule hath with God: or in a word, it is the ſoules enjoying of God (ſo farre as here may be) and it is either inward or outward. 1. God himſelfe

Q. What is inward converſation? How manifold?

A. It is two-fold; either the life of faith, or the exerciſe of the Graces of the Spirit within the ſoule. Either inward.

Q. What is the life of faith?

A. The ſoules enjoying of God, Chriſt our Sanctification, by all his promiſes concerning life and godlineſſe. And as faith at the firſt drawing neere to God, did cleave to him in Chriſt, by a promiſe for reconciliation, (as in Artic. 6. of the ſecond part) ſo it proceeds, and improoves Chriſt her ſanctification for all needs and uſes of this preſent life. For (as Paul ſaith) If being enemies we were reconciled to him by his death: much more by his reſurrection we ſhall partake of his life. And againe, If hee ſpared not his owne Sonne, how much more ſhall he not with him, denie us any thing? Now faith underſtanding whole Chriſt in ſanctification to be made hers, 1 Cor. 1.30. doth draw (as a man would draw lines from a Center to the circumference on each ſide) ſo particular In the life of faith. 1 Cor. 1.30.

promises of upholding the weake soule in each condition: that so she might say in all, Now live I, yet not I but Christ in me; And the life I live, I live by faith in the Sonne of God: And againe, The just man lives by faith: not (as some invert it) The just by faith shall live.

Gal. 2.

The particular objects of the life of faith foure.

Q. What promises doth faith live by in Christ?

A. To speake of all were endlesse: for a draughts sake, I referre them to foure heads. First estates, Secondly, meanes. Thirdly, duties. Fourthly, graces: which may serve for the rest. The summe is, Iesus Christ is the life of the soule throughout; and as before and without Christ, the soule lived a naturall, and common life, of selfe, world, pleasures, vanities, so she now lives the life of Christ in all those foure. And shee is thus said to put on Christ: that as a man in his apparell doth all the workes of this daily life, so doth the soule all her workes in Christ: Christ in her, prayes, preaches, prospers, suffers, and in a word doth all her workes in her, as Esay 26.

1 Faith in all estates.

Q. What is the life of faith in estates, and first in Prosperitie?

1 Prosperitie.

A. The cleaving of the soule to God in the promise of his All-sufficiency, Gen. 17. 1. and 1 Cor. 3. end, All things are yours, and yee Christs. Its the Lord Iesus our head, who being Lord of all, made himselfe no body, that we might have right to all promises. Faith then cleaves to this promise. First, That if God hath made us a feast in the mountaines, much more he will in the valleyes, Esay 25. And looke what blessings so ever he see good, its mine, life, good dayes, good marriage, children, family, health, successe, recovery, credit, wealth, its mine. A childe of God beleeves no temporall promise otherwise than a spirituall: both purchased by Christ alike, although if hee see them unfit, I am to beleeve a supply other wise as good or better: but else faith cleaves to a temporall in the full right to Christ without ifs or ands, as well as the other. And not onely so, but serves Gods providence for them with holy confidence, setting the Lord above his owne labours, in the secret blessing of a promise: going to worke without indirect courses, without sinne or sorrow: beleeving that whatsoever his portion be, more or lesse, its his, given him by his Father, and therefore best, and any other should be worse: and to conclude, accounting the commonest blessing to be no common love to him, but vouchsafed in kindnes to his servant; and therefore not snared there-

by

by and nailed to the earth, but raised up rather as by wings to the giver, to serve the Lord with a good and chearefull heart for all his blessings, All things (saith Paul) are yours, and you are Christs, and Christ is Gods. And the same Apostle, to Titus, To the pure all things are so. This is a great portion to enjoy (as Ecclesiastes saith) the blessing of God, as the fruit of our labour, and to use these commodities of health, long life, marriage, children, learning, gifts, the love of friends and neighbours, wel-fare and peace, libertie and protection, as things given us in favour. Whereas the wicked have toile and sorrow, vanitie and vexation of spirit with them; and finde their Tables, their wives, their wealth and commodities, a very clogge and snare unto them: For they doubt whether they have right to them, and get them sinfully, use them defiledly, loose them sorrowfully: and so were as good not to have had them: to say nothing of the sad account they must give of them. But the Righteous use them (while they last) as sweet encouragements: and forgoe them without distemper, because they used them as if they used them not. They use them freely, as knowing them to be their servants, not their Masters; and therefore (so long) very profitable, as fire and water for use. They say of them as Iphta to the King of Ammon: That which Chemosh thy god giveth thee, wilt not thou possesse it? So, that which the Lord our God gives us wee will possesse, why should we not? It is ours. And they forgoe them as things of a vanishing nature, serving the fraile life of man, and therefore like it: They know they loose neither faith, nor grace, the love of God or heaven, in the loosing thereof: oft they finde these by the losse of the other, but loose them not thereby. And in these respects their little portion is better than great treasures of the ungodly without it. Thus by faith they walke safely and securely under the protection of God, under which they are, and (while God sees good) shall meete which no changes, but be saved from them: If hee please to alter their course, they know its his Disposition and Providence, who will not alway be tyed to blesse: yet alway will abide the same God in weale and woe.

Q. What is the life of faith in the estate of adversitie? 2. In adversitie.

A. It is the cleaving of the soule to God in the promise

1 Cor. 1. 30. of his protection and redemption: 1 Cor. 1. 30. The poore ſoule ſaith with David on his death-bed, The Lord liveth, who hath delivered my ſoule out of all adverſitie; 1word of Saul, purſuit, enemies in battell, and now will deliver me in death. And how? firſt, as it was with Chriſt, that no trouble, nor yet one houre ſooner befell him than God preordained: ſo ſhall a poore ſoule beleeve, that no enemy ſhall hurt or afflict in any kinde, than, or untill the Lord ſee meet; but as he, ſo thou ſhalt paſſe through all. So alſo, 2. If any doe aſſault thee, ſickneſſe, povertie, ſuits, priſon, malicious enemies, thou ſhalt ſay with Chriſt, This is their

When they doe lye upon thee, yet the Lord ſhall be thy light in darkneſſe and ſhall be thy defence, and cover thy head in the day of battell: See Micah 2. 7. Pſal. 84. end: hee ſhall make thy bed in ſickneſſe, and walke with thee in the Fornace: hee ſhall bee thy peace of heart; thy ſtrength to endure; hee ſhall purge thee by them, and bring thee out as gold out of the Fornace. So that thou ſhalt ſay, Perhaps the Lord ſhall doe mee good for this croſſe this day, make mee better than if I had not had it: It is good for

Jere. 29. 6. mee that I was afflicted. And after a tolerable paſſage (reade Jer. 29. 6. 7.) hee ſhall deliver mee out of all, one way or other: ſo that the Spirit of glory, and the Conqueſt of Chriſt

I have overcome the world.* I ſhall take good courage and ſay. Micah 7. 8. I ſhall riſe when I am fallen: and afterward I ſhall with the Lord Ieſus be out of the gun-ſhot of all afflictions, yea as the eſtate of a beleever is through his whole life, ſo ſhall it be comfortableſt at death, and the laſt day ſhall be his beſt; a reſt from all labours.

Q. What Promiſes may faith live by in Afflictions?

A. Many, according as the Affliction is, which lyeth upon us; Sometime God afflicts his for ſinne, greater or ſmaller, as David for his murther, Vzza for his raſhneſſe, Moſes for his wrath at the waters of Meribah. Sometimes hee afflicts them of his owne good pleaſure, either in their innocency, as Naomi by the famine, death of husband, loſſe of children and ſubſtance: Iob by botches and ruine of eſtate: or elſe for their innocency, as the Apoſtles for preaching Chriſt, Chriſt, Paul for his good Conſcience. Faithfull men firſt wiſely diſcerne in what caſe Afflictions finde them, that ſo they miſ-apply not the Promiſe: and ſecondly, faſtens upon the peculiar promiſe concerning their condition. In the firſt caſe, although they ſuffer for ſinne, yet they are not caſt off and cut from God, but are ſtayd from deſpaire; looke backe to former mercies, breake their hearts, lye under their croſſe as juſt, and as Gods medicine to purge and cleanſe them: beleeve that GOD will receive them to ſervice againe, (though they have revolted) after repentance, Ier. 3. 1. 2. and ſo claſpe upon the Promiſe firſt ere they repent, and ſo they finde God gracious to reſtore and deliver them, Iob 33. 22. or elſe to pittie and ſuſtaine them, Eſay 63. 9. Secondly if they ſuffer in their innocency, (which they may doe, notwithſtanding their errors and many failings) they doe by faith relie upon the Promiſe with ſo much the more eaſe and ſweetneſſe, than if they ſuffred for their ſinne: and therefore reſolving that the Lord aymes at the preventing of ſinnes to come, or the tryall of their precious faith and patience, or elſe the drawing on of others to a willingneſſe to ſuffer, to dye, to be abaſed; or elſe to purge their originall filth, and the venom thereof, as Iob 42. 3. 4. or the like ends: They confidently in all ſuch troubles as befall them, looke at the promiſe, that how bitter ſo ever they may ſeeme for a time, yet the end ſhall be joyfull through the quet fruit of Righteouſneſſe: They ſhall make them partakers of Gods holineſſe: yea all, as ſickneſſe, loſſes, reproach in name, povertie, ill marriage, bad neighbours, evill times, error of the wicked, lewd examples, unprofitable Miniſtery, and want of means: (as unlike a thing as it ſeemes,) yet all ſhall turne to the beſt to them t'at love God: and they ſhall ſay of every one, It is beſt to be ſo: and afterward ſhall ſay, It was good for me I was afflicted: I could not have wanted it, it hath tryed what patience and ſelf-denialll was in mee, the Lord hath his ends, and all is ended. Thirdly, if they ſuffer for their innocency and righteouſneſſe: then they doe yet with much more ſweetneſſe apply the promiſe, as moſt of all concerning them: They beleeve that they ſuffer the remnant of thoſe Croſſes which Chriſt had ſuffred, if hee had lived to this day: The reproaches of them that reproach the Lord, fall upon them: The Lord therefore fellow-feeles with them, counts them his Confeſſors, Martyrs and witneſſes: The Spirit of glory reſts upon them: glorious grace, glorious meekeneſſe, ſelfe-denniall, patience, wiſedome to carry their croſſe with honour to their Maſter: Alſo, glorious peace and joy is their portion, by their Cauſe and their good Conſcience, which are a continually double feaſt: The Lord eſteemes their Troubles his owne, ſuſtaines them with mercy, and will redeeme them from all, either outwardly, or eternally, and by hope cheare them the while. Hee will ſo provide that the Teeth of Lyons ſhall be broken, and themſelves looſe their malice: They ſhall riſe up in the midſt of their fall: and their enemies ſhall come into their place: The Lord will not ſuffer the Rod of the wicked to lye alway upon the lot of the Righteous, and the like.

Heb. 12.

Rom. 8.

Q. What meane you by the life of faith in Adminiſtrations?

A. When the Soule by faith recognizing the perſonall wayes of God towards her ſelfe, through her whole life paſt, doth (as it were) enjoy time paſt as if it were preſent, and doth acknowledge God to have beene mercifull to her in them all, and hereby nouriſh in her ſelfe lively thankes, experience, ſence and favour of providence and care in God towards her in all her courſe. The common ſort know not what this duty meanes: But lives an empty life, and onely for the preſent. Very Heathens may condemne us in it: of whom one of the prophaneſt tells us, That to enjoy our life paſt, is to live twice. David (much better) may reach us: who made it one peece of his meditation, to thinke of times paſt, and ſo was comforted. In this kind, it is a ſweet communion with God, to muſe of the mercies of our happy nativity (borne of beleeving parents) our pious education, plantings under good governours, preſervation from corrupt and tainting errors, cuſtomes, and examples: protection from dangers, of minde and body, diſtractions, diſtempers diſeaſes: or elſe Gods ſuſtayning us in them, that they were not our utter ruine: and eſpecially his bringing us out of them, that wee know not what they meane. That thouſands have fallen on our right ſides and ten thouſands on our left; yet wee preſerved: not onely, from the grave, but from hell: So that wee ſee it was mercy that reſerved us for better uſe and purpoſe. As namely that in the latter part of our life wee might be prevented with more grace, wiſdome and experience then in our youth: that we might happily pily come into the fuller evidence of our converſion, and live under a powerfull Miniſtry, bleſſed company, ſweet Loadſtones and Attractives to God and repentance! Oh how ſhould we oft think of that happy hand which when we were blinde and like to ſplit upon every rocke, yet led us with ſingular patience, and long ſuffering, winked at our rebellions of youth, ſpared us with an eye of pitty, planted us under choice means, (as put caſe) in the vniverſity as Students: or in the City as Apprentices: or in the Country as ſervants: placed us in ſuch Marriages, dwellings farmes, townes and Neighborhoods, as where not our bodies only but our ſoules much more might proſper! It's good to thinke how many wayes we might have beene undone for ever, in every one of theſe reſpects: how by debts, ſuretiſhips, raſh adventures, looſe companies, wee might have loſt and ſpilt our precious time, thrift, and honeſty, hopes, and conſcience: which being once debauch't, by the error and taint of the wicked, would hardly ever have beene recovered. Alſo to thinke in what ſeaſons the Lord diſpoſed of us, even ſuch as wherein the light of his Goſpell ſhined brightly, without eclipſes, and dampes: if the worke were now to be wrought, who knowes what would be done? Oh! it's a peece of a mans life to muſe of theſe! and ſince, what markes of mercy the Lord hath ſet us! how kept us, our families and poſterities by peculiar providence from ſuch diſaſters, as light upon others: and cauſed ſuch croſſes as have lighted on us, to be bleſſed to us and ſo removed; This practiſe would indeere our hearts to God exceedingly.

Q. What is the life of faith in Deſertions?

A. Deſertions, may be two wayes conceived: One way, when the courſe of holineſſe is interrupted violently by wilfull ſinning againſt knowledge. In ſuch a caſe, its no wonder, if the Spirit of grace withdraw it ſelfe from the ſoule, and leave it to it ſelfe. Thus its ſaid, That the Lord was departed from Samſon, after hee had defiled himſelfe, and ſlaviſhly cut off his lockes, at Dalila's inſtance. Thus likewiſe David after his revolt, felt the Spirit of grace, ſunke and dead in him, ſo long as hee nouſled hi ſelfe in the ſweet contents of his fleſh; ſo that hee is faine, Pſal. 51. to crave the repayring of it. In this caſe, a Chriſtian muſt know, That the way to recover the preſence, favour and comfort of the Spirit, muſt be the ſame with the recovery out of his revolt: For as grace firſt departed (I meane for the feeling thereof) with the revolt: ſo it vſually returnes with the reſtitution of the Soule by Repentance: Of which more at large let the Reader ſee in my booke of Sacraments, part 2. in the Tryall of Repentance.

But in a more proper ſenſe, Deſertion, is taken for the act of God, uſing his prerogative, and deſerting the ſoule of his owne accorde for ſpeciall ends (beſt knowne to himſelfe) changing the vſuall courſe of ſpirituall influence towards the ſoules of his people, when as on their part, there appeares no evident cauſe: whereupon, they finding it otherwiſe then ordinarily with them, are ſadded & become as a bone out of ſocket unable to ſubſiſt: and thus it was with our Lord Ieſus himſelfe, whom the Deity had for the preſent forſaken: Thus with David in Pſalme 43. where hee doth heavily cry out, Why art thou heavy O my ſoule! and in many Pſalmes complaines that the Lord was a ſtranger and had withdrawne himſelfe. And Paul, 2 Cor. 12. was under ſuch deſertion, when a pricke in his fleſh was given him to buffet him. And this is incident moſtly even to Gods cloſeſt and beſt ſervants, that by it, the Lord might prevent dangerous revolts, and crucifie in them that irkeſome body of death; as alſo humble them in the ſenſe of their baſeneſſe, ſet an higher price upon the preſence of grace, and that they might not waxe wanton, and common: That he might try all that is in their heart; excite that ſeed of his in them, to ſeeke earneſtly for a ſupply, and to loath, that falling ſickneſs of the Common ſort, who doe nothing but riſe and fall, dally with God, or elſe walke on in a flat and fulſome courſe, without life and ſavour. Now in ſuch kinde of deſertion, although faith muſt needs be at the ebbe and low water: yet that ſeed of it within muſt be ſtired up and the ſoule muſt be upholden by conſidering: That as the Sun in the eclipſe ſeemes to be darkened, but indeed is the ſame it was: ſo is the Lord ſtill the ſame to the Soule which he was, and ſo is the ſoule to him: Heb. 13.5. Alſo, that this diſaſter ſhall not be long, but (in compariſon of Gods returne) momentary: Eſay 54. 7.8. and 57.20. Againe, we muſt ſet downe our ſpirit to waite upon the Lord, for the diſcovery of his face and the clearing of the Pipes of conveyance of old refreſhings: beleeving, that when the ebbe is loweſt, the flood will returne: That this is as the Covenant with Noah, unchangeable: though his ſeaſon be not alway alike. Laſtly, hold our concluſion in the greateſt darkeneſſe as Paul did, and glorifie God, being under infirmity firmity willingly, and praying the more.

Q. What is the life of faith in meanes using?

A. It is the cleaving unto God by the promise, for the power and blessing of and upon all his ordinances; which point seeing it will fall into Article 4. use 3. therefore thence fetch direction. The second, In meanes.

Q. What is the use of faith in duties?

A. Its the cleaving of the soule to God by a promise for strength to give us the grace to doe what he commandeth: of which also seeing I treate, in Article. 3 use 4. there looke. The third, In Duties.

Q. What is the life of faith in Graces?

A. It's the soules cleaving to GOD in the promise, and the grace of the Lord Iesus, for a supplie of grace convenient for it selfe, both for number and measure. Ioh. 1. 17. From his fountaine wee receive grace for grace, like for like, so many for so many. In strength of this promise, a poore barren soule comes to the LORD, and hearing what treasure is in Christ, and for whom, comes with confidence and pleades for it selfe; Oh LORD, as empty a wretch as I am of mercy, of Compassion, of righteousnesse, of love, of patience, thou hast put all into the nature of Christ Emanuel; though I am pestred with a peevish, froward, proud, worldly spirit, yet thou hast sayd, Where sinne hath abounded, grace abounded much more: thou delightest to honour thy Sonnes grace in purging such sinfull ones from their cursed qualities: thou wilt have thy grace pointed at. Oh! who would ever have looked to see such a proud wretch, humble, so worldly an one, heavenly minded? Nay; the Lord can use those weapons of sinne, to bee weapons of righteousnesse, choller to turne zeale for God, prodigality to turne bounty to the poore members of Christ. I see where the Lord creates the new creature, hee also creates the graces thereof: where hee marryes, he gives the marriage-Ring, beset with all Iewels of faithfulnesse, humblenesse; and the like. Why then should a poore member pine away for want, when the head is full? and full for his members? Oh! I see all things are mine in Christ, all meanes, duties, yea, and graces mine! Didst thou not say so Lord? and causedst mee to trust thee for it? that out of thy Fountaine I should have for both number, those that are most wanting, and for measure that The fourth, In Graces. Ioh. 1. 17.

which may ſtrengthen a feeble heart? Even as Haman hearing, what ſhould be done to a favorite, anſwered, hee meanes mee, whom elſe? ſo the poore ſoule here: The Lord hath reuied mee, and whom ſhould hee beſtow graces upon to beautifie ſooner?

Q. Doth faith live in all theſe foure, onely beleeving that God can enable her to goe through them?

2. worke of the life of faith.

A. No, for there are promiſes alſo made to the duties themſelves thus performed, and all for double encouragement, both to them, and upon them. For the Lord hath promiſed ſundry good things to all that ſuffer, and all that uſe the meanes aright: To all that obey him in duties, and that walke in the practiſe of any grace. Not any thing, be it never ſo little which any ſhall looſe for his ſake, but he will requite it an hundred fold: Not a cup of cold water given to any of his, not ſo much as a Sabbath kept with delight; not any feeding, viſiting, or cloathing of his poore members: not the pooreſt prayer or faſt, or Sacrament, or peece of worſhip is performed to him; not any grace of his (if we improove it) as to feare him, love and delight in him, to beare our Croſſe meekely: None of theſe but have their ſpeciall and many promiſes both of this life and a better. Yea ſuch duties as doe directly touch man, as to obey our Parents; and much more then to an univerſall obedience, there is great reward, Pſal. 19. All which Faith lives and thrives by.

Q. Goe forward to the ſecond branch of our Communion with God, wherein doth it conſiſt?

2. Branch of Communion with God. Exerciſe of the graces of the Spirit. Phil 3. 19.

A. In the exerciſe of the graces of his Spirit. For looke how Merchants and Chapmen have the policy and trafficke for wares and money, ſo the godly have their commerce with the Lord for grace. Reade Phil. 3. 19. But our converſation is in heaven. And this ſtands in theſe three things: Firſt, in the encreaſe of their graces: for, the experince of the ſweet gaine and price of grace which they have oft gotten from God, doth whet their deſire to covet more of them, and to be better acquainted with the Lord in them. As Moſes could not be content till hee had ſeene God in his glory. This is one effect of our Saviours prayer, that they may be one with us, and that thou wouldſt keepe them from evill, and from the world: So the faithfull trade with God for more faith, union, hope, love, patience; and when they can get get in with the Lord for any addition of these, they thinke themselves in the suburbes of heaven. Secondly, In the rejoycing in the growth and encrease they have had. No miser doth so oft visit his bagges, as these joy in their treasure.

The lesse they see of these Iewels in the world, the more they prize them and flesh their hearts with them, as the Apostle saith, The God of peace fill yee with all joy by believing. And againe, Wee rejoyce with joy unspeakeable and glorious. Thirdly, and especially their trading is in heaven by that precious hope, which is an earnest-penny of their inheritance: and therefore they never thinke of it, but it glads their hearts. This is that heaven upon earth, and the treasure which their hearts were set upon, which in a sort makes them also to be heavenly minded: makes them use these things as if not; and despise the image of these vanities: yea makes their crosses slight in comparison, while they looke not upon things temporall, but eternall. And by this their trading, although they bee absent from the Lord, yet are they in a sort present, and lay hold of immortall life, to make their condition below the more tolerable. And so much of the inward conversation with God.

Externall Communion with God in Services.

Q. What is the outward conversation of the Soule with God?

A. It is that holy correspondency which it holds with God, in outward services,

Q. What are those?

I. Ordinary.

A. Some are ordinary, some are occasionall. The ordinary are many: I will give a taste of a few: and they are, an ordinary and daily walking with God in religious duties, for the encrease of Communion. It is not the wheele of duties doing which can support the soule, it must be a due keeping of quarter with the Lord, and a survey of her estate towards God, which must doe that. Of this sort are these. First, a satisfying of the soule with the Lords Image at our awaking, with a saluting of his promise for renewed pardon and grace: Psal. 17. ult. for Iesus Christ is yesterday, and to day, and the same for ever, Heb. 13, 8. not changing. Secondly, a seeking of his face as oft in the day as may bee for renued humiliation, and for keeping the heart open daily, for pardon of renewed sinnes, grace to purge and season the soule: thankes for renewed compassions. Thirdly, a reviving of covenant with him for Branches of it.

Act. 11. 23. for closer purpose, and bent of heart towards him, Act. 11.23. Fourthly, a daily recording of Gods peculiar administrations and providence to us, in patience, blessings, deliverances, speciall redresses of our decaies in soule and body, and what use wee have made of them. Fifthly, a finishing of each day so, as we viewing it over, may be humbled or comforted, and so lie downe in peace.

Q. What is the occasionall?

3 Occasionall. Act. 13.36. Service of our time.

A. The service of the time, Act 13.36. by which we rest not onely in our ordinary serving God: but reach our soules to the condition of the times wee live in, accordingly carrying our selves, either in affliction of soule, or thanksgiving, as occasion requires.

Q. What warrant have we for this?

Ground of it.

A. The word of God expressly, and the charges of the holy Ghost, and patternes of holy men in Scripture. For the first, The holy Ghost doth not onely presse us to dwell at home and watch to our owne Christianity, in marriage duties, in family government, matters of piety and love: not onely, I say to stand girt in our loines with our Lamps burning for the comming of our Master: But especially to traine our faith and grace, in the marking of the estate of the Church and times both generally: And where wee live, to get a publike spirit (though within our private calllings) to honour God in the service of our generation. Why else doth the Holy Ghost give us in scripture a modell of the Church in all ages? how the times degenerated? how God punished? how they repented and revolted, till God forsooke them? Why doth the Word set downe such markes of Gods dwelling with his Church? And againe of forsaking a Church and withdrawing his presence? Why else doe wee reade of greatest vastations, when yet outward blessings seemed to bee most plentifull? Why doth the Scripture from Adam to the captivity and thence to the time of the Apostles, discourse of little else save Gods government in the Church, both under the Patriarchs, and in Egypt? Why is there such a Map of fortie yeares in the Wildernesse? Such a storie of the conquest of Canaan, fulfilling the promise? Such strange sinnes committed under Iudges? such strange deliverances; and so of the rest? Whence is it that the Prophet Daniel and St. John spend their Prophesies in the description of the Ages of the Church? more plainly yet: Why doth our Saviour Mat 24. bid the Iewes to obserue the propheſie of Daniel, in ſetting up the abomination of deſolation, meaning the Image of Caligula to defile the Holy of Holies? Why doth Saint Iohn ſay, *Chap.*1.3. Bleſſed is he that readeth this booke and conſidereth? Or what meant Paul in two places to propheſie both of the ſpirituall and morall degenerating of the Church? as in 1 *Tim.*4.1. and 2 *Tim.*3.1. 2. 3. 4. 5. Our Saviour alſo ſpends two Chapters in markes of the Time, both till the deſtruction of the Temple and end of the world. Why did the Diſciples deſire to know (though erroneouſly) the reuealing of the Kingdome of Chriſt, and reſtoring of Iſrael? Why doth our Saviour warne us to take heed leaſt wee be ſurfeited with drunkenneſſe and cares? Luk. 21. 34. and why doth Peter will them to ſaue themſelues from that wicked and froward generation? Saue to teach us, that although the world is headleſſe and heartles in marking how it fares with others, (being wholly buried in their owne eaſe) yet the people of God haue their eyes in their heads, to obſerue all the Adminiſtrations of God, and the wayes of Men, and the ſtate of the Church, and to make uſe thereof.

Q. What duties concerne the ſeruice of the time?

A. Theſe two: Firſt to bee grounded well in it; ſecondly, to practiſe it. For the firſt, we are to know that the diſpenſations of times are from God, Act. 1. All the accidents of times are from him, either permitting or working: The ſinnes, the miſeries, the remedies are all from him: It is he alſo that appoints men to their ſpeciall times by prouidence; Moſes to conduct Iſrael, Ioſhua to conquer, David to fight his battels, Salomon to build a Temple, Ioſia to his time, the Lord Ieſus to his: Men fall not upon their age raſhly, but are by God aſſigned thereto. Beſides, the Lord fits men with graces meet for their times, ſo that a man may ſeeme made for the nonce, and for no other uſe. Who was ſo fitted for his owne time as Elija and Eliſha? As David and Salomon?

The duty in two things. 1 Knowledge.

Q. What is the other duty?

A. To practiſe the ſerving of our time. And that partly in obſeruation, partly in performances. 1. We muſt ſtand upon our watch-tower, to marke the times. Art thou alone a ſtranger in Iſrael (ſay the Diſciples) who knoweſt not theſe things? Curioſity.

2 Practice. 1. Obſeruation. Luk. ult.

ositty, Newes and Intelligence of accidents is so rife among us through Athenian vanitie, that wee marke and ponder little. Whereas our Lord Iesus bids us marke and observe them, even as one would marke the Almond tree to blossome at the Spring.

Both generall

The object of our observation should be first generall, to note how the kingdome of Christ prevailes (though insensibly) and how Antichrist decayes (though with some stops and recovering of his wounds:) by what meanes and instruments the Gospell hath and doth grow, in spite of Satan and his Agents: in token that it shall goe through the world: how the Lord still is at the worke, and liveth when men die: To marke how one Viall is powred out after another, till that fifth and great one come upon the Throne and Governement of the Papacy, and till the Lord destroy him with the breath of his mouth.

And particular,

So also in our owne particular Church, to observe both the mercies of successiue Governement of Princes, with peace in the Land from forraine enemies, Popery, and Toleration kept from us: Also how Popery doth shroud it selfe, and lurkes in our entrailes? How God hath resisted it, and all that have sought our subversion and slavery? How the Lord hath manifested himselfe in Blessings, Crosses and deliverances? What sinnes doe reigne and rule in each condition? what open, and what secret enemies the Churchhath? and what punishments are inflicted upon us both temporall and spirituall? and how the body of people doe carry themselves in them? What signes are there of Gods sparing us, or of decreeing vengeance.

2 Performances. 1. Living by Faith.

Q. What are the performances of Service in our time?

A. Sundry; and they consist, 1. In the life of Faith. 2. In such affections as concerne us. 3. In some meanes using. 4. In some endevours. For the 1. By faith we are to be upholden in our times; yea in the most apparent incongruities therof, when things seeme to bee most miscarried; Not then to fret and murmure at God, to quarrell with the times, as if there never were such; but to consider, There is a God sits at the Sterne to administer his Church, to quash all opposites, to plead their owne cause; Though wee should see a righteous man perish in his righteousnesse, and the wicked to prolong his malice, yet to wait, and so wee shall come out of all: To thrust our eye blind-fold into Gods bosome, to acknowledge his justice and wisedome, and that it is our part to submit our owne ends to the Lords ends, seeing his are generall, and ours particular; and so to beleeve, that How ever it be, God is good to Israel, and to the upright in heart, whatsoever temptations they suffer. Psal. 73. 1.

Secondly, For affections; Wee must learne to goe out of our selves, and to extend our care, thoughts, sorrowes, feares, hopes, joyes, pitty and compassion, desires, zeale, indignations, towards the Church of God, as the state and necessities thereof require: not wholly living to our selves, and looking to our owne welfares; but extending our love to the Saints, mourning with them that mourne, and reioycing with them that rejoyce, counting the wel-fare or ill-fare of the people of God, more to concerne us than our owne, as Mordecai, Ester, Ezra, Nehemiah, and others did. Thirdly, applying our selves to such ordinances and helpes, both extraordinary and ordinary, as the particular case of any Church requires. As, who was not moved with the state of the Protestant Church in France, some yeares since, in the civill Warres? Whom should not that Confusion of Religions in the Low-Countreys affect? Who should not now blesse God for some ease of Germany from Spanish and Popish yoke? And who should not grieve to see how few congregations in our owne Land are truly enlightned with the Gospell? How many thousand open scandalls of all sorts are unpunished? And how fearefull the declensions of the time are to Popery, to faction, novelties in doctrine, Apostacy and worshipping God for fashion? Not to speake of many other offences: If these deserve not constant, fervent and close seeking of God both in publike and apart, as Zachary speakes, what can? Oh! how should the Priests and Ministers of God, howle and cry betweene Porch and Altar, Spare Lord thy people! What wofull spirituall wickednesses, contempt of the Ministery, of manifold watch-words and warnings, both of Blessings and Calamities, and hatred of the Power of Godlinesse, doe still continue? And how justly might our fears seaze upon us, and a Decree come forth to sweepe us away? How had we need to seeke God for a generall Reformation of the sins of high and low? Lastly, what preparation should all make to the Crosse? Hath not a dumb dead fish taught us this lesson of late?

2. Good Affections.

Let

Let us then looke to it: Let us beware of the leaven of formalitie; leaſt the Divell cut our veines in hot water, and kill us inſenſibly: Let us keepe our ſpirit, love, courage to ſinceritie, and not ſuffer it to coole, and our ſelves to bee pulled from our ſtedfaſtneſſe, by the error of the wicked. Let us be ſure we trade with our owne Stock, leaſt wee proove bankerupts: Let us carry our lives, liberties and contents more looſe in our boſomes, and be ready to let them out whenſoever the cauſe of God requires it; Truſting God for the recompence of a thouſand-fold, for whatſoever wee looſe for him. Let us learne to prize the leaſt Truth above our ſelves: and not ſuffer that pretious Treaſure which we have received from our worthy Predeceſſors, to paſſe to our Poſteritie, more defiled than we found it. And if wee cannot reforme the errors and prophaneneſſe of others, let us at leaſt looke every man to ſave one: and ſo in our well-doing, let us waite and commend our ſelves to the Lord, as our faithfull keeper.

Q. Conclude the Article with the latter branch: which is our converſation with men in common life.

Latter branch. Converſation with men in common life. Pſal. 50. ult.

A. The ſame which the Pſalmiſt 50. ult. cals, the ordering of Converſation aright. And it is a wiſe accomodation of a Chriſtian to the ſeverall paſſages that befall us unavoydably in this our common courſe of life. In the which although there bee a world of evill committed, this being the element of worldlings and the ſtage whereon the Devill acteth his parts: yet even in theſe common matters the Lord teacheth his people to carry themſelves, as men of another world.

Q. But how ſhall Rules be given touching this part of Converſation, it being ſo infinite?

Chiefe paſſages of common life.

A. By culling out ſome of the chiefe paſſages of the reſt, and giving a briefe view of their due ordering: wee ſhall the eaſilier gueſſe at the reſt.

Q. Name ſome of them, ſhew of what nature they are, and what ordering they muſt have?

A. Such as theſe, Marriage, Company, or Solitarineſſe, Liberties, Earthly-buſineſſe, Calling, Family, Governement, and the tongue, or common talke. Which although they bee out of the bounds of Gods worſhip, yet are ſo to bee converſed in, as remembring the name of God may be blaſphemed therein without eſpeciall caution, even as in the uſe of oaths and vowes.

Q. Seeing

Q. Seeing divers Treatiſes are extant about them, and they have beene handled in the Miniſtery by ſundry occaſions, give onely a briefe view of the ordering thereof.

A. Generally touching all, note this, that God abhorres all common prophane uſages of the world in theſe things: and will have his people carry about them the cognizance of new Creatures, and holy ones, that they may not make Religion odious by their corrupt behaviour, and making uſe each of other therein for their owne ends: but that the graces of God may breake out and ſhine in the order of their converſation, to the glory of our profeſſion. Then particularly, there is required a ſtayed, ſetled ſpirit, not vaine, light, frothy and inconſtant; ſo that each occaſion accidentally offering it ſelfe ſhould unſettle us, and put us out of our courſe of life: as ſometimes ſudden ill newes drive us into melancholy and frowardneſſe: ſucceſſe in our affaires carry us into endleſſe lightneſſe and jollitie: ſhrewd turnes in family worke us to diſguiſement and impatience. We ſee how it is with ſome diſordered men, that for a weeke or fortnight together they will ply their callings, but if company draw them to the Ale-houſe, they will ſpend whole dayes and nights in a quite contrary courſe. Such baſeneſſe the Lord abhorres: and will have all to ſet their ſoules in order to an holy ſoberneſſe and equalneſſe of heart, wiſely framed to entertaine the changeable paſſages of life; with a well-ordered Spirit, neither in the exceſſe or defect, but as the object requires. Generall Rules for all

Q. And what ſpeciall directions are there? and firſt for the married condition? Speciall rules I For the married life.

A. That being married firſt in and to the Lord, they loath to make it a common thing for the uſe each of other, and prophaning the Ordinance: but firſt, improoving it chiefly for God, and the mutuall good of their ſoules. Worſhipping God together, making him umpire of all their differences; powring out their hearts into his boſome by himiliation, prayer, and thankeſgiving: Nouriſhing matrimoniall love as a ſacred knot; and to that end, obſerving each others graces for the ſtrengthening thereof. Cutting off all jarres in the beginning, and yet not agreeing together for baſe ends, but for holy. Tendering the weakneſſes of the weaker ſexe, concealing her defects, and yeelding ſubjection to the head for conſcience. If theſe rules and the like were obſerved, how might the order of this one part ſet an order in all other parts of our courſe? Whereas the diſorder of this wheele, cauſes all other to be diſtempered; children unruly, ſervants ungoverned, and all out of frame? And when once things are growne to extremitie, then they wiſh they had never met; as indeede the truth is, miſerable is that marriage which the bond of neceſſitie holds together onely. Of which more in a Treatiſe by it ſelfe, God willing.

Q. What Rules are there for mens Calling?

2 Rules for Calling.

A. The Calling being ſo great a wheele of Converſation, (for where wee worſhip God one houre, wee ply our Callings a great many,) had need to be well ordered: Firſt, Beware of an unlawfull Calling: then of picking quarrels with your Callings; change not Callings at your pleaſure, (though I deny not, ſome caſes may fall out to compell a change,) but cling to thy Calling to keepe thee from noyſome luſts, eaſe, ſloath, and lewd company; which nothing but a Calling will prevent: As that Martyr bleſſed God for honeſt wedlocke, ſo doe thou for an honeſt Calling. Secondly, Vſe it not for the baſe ends of gaine, money, and the like, (for Gentlemen have as much need of Callings as poore men,) but to ſerve providence, to mortifie thy luſts, and prepare thee for the duties of worſhip; knowing that elſe thou wouldeſt vaniſh in religious duties, and be wearieſome to thy ſelfe. Thirdly, Let an order be ſet in thy Calling, that it hinder not Religion in Family: neither let Religion hinder thy Calling; but both know and keepe their bounds. Fourthly, Neglect not thy Calling ſuddenly, to attend upon needleſſe pleaſures, travells, companies, drinkings, to leave thy family in a diſtempery, without either proviſion or government: but inſtead of theſe, abide diligently in the Calling, in which God hath ſet thee, without wearineſſe. Looking at him, who hath ſet thee in it, under promiſe of Bleſſing, and protection, while thou walkeſt in thy ſimplicitie. That is, neither on the left hand, neglecting to ſerve providence, by idleneſſe, eaſe, and needleſſe expences: nor on the other, by running out into exceſſive laborioufneſſe and toile. For he hath ſaid, Heb. 13.5. He will neither faile, nor forſake thee. The diligent hand (not the ſtagent and buſie) makes rich. Of the fruit of thy labours, thou ſhalt eate. The ungodlineſſe of men, after great riches, cauſes them not to have the patience to goe even pace with God in a leiſurly calling. But as the Heathen man told his brother, Halfe is better than the whole: Thoſe who will have all or nothing, commonly come to nought. They borrow great ſummes of money, compaſſe many mens farmes and occupyings, or fall a projecting ſundry plots, and rearing up manufactures and trades wherein they have no skill or experience: promiſing mountaines of gaine to themſelves and their Creditors; defeating them and their owne hopes with diſcontent and ill report. Loſſes in a mans owne Calling are ſmaller and ſooner redreſſed, than in unknowne ones: which if they bring not exceeding gaines, breed exceſſive loſſe.

Now yet I deny not, there is danger even in following our owne Calling, except Traders wiſely obſerve (ſo farre as wiſedome, experience, enquiry and ſearch of them whom they truſt will reach) whom they trafficke with. The world is growne to ſuch a paſſe in this kinde, that many preferre ſafe ſitting ſtill for nought, before ſtirring for nought. And, except other courſe be taken againſt this Nation of Bankerupts, no wiſedome will prevent their devouring. But the raſhneſſe of ſellers of all to one or a few unknowne ones, doth encreaſe the diſeaſe: the covetouſneſſe of the one, ſerving the profuſion of the other by Gods juſt providence. To theſe I might adde the raſh attempts of many upon forraine Plantations (I ſpeake not of all) without abilitie to manage the worke; or foreſight of the charge, change of callings, unfitneſſe to conflict with difficulties, aymeing onely at great things, leaving their wives and orphans, borrowing and leaving men in the lurch, and repenting themſelves as faſt afterwards. Let men alſo ſeeke the good of a Common-wealth, not a private. The proverb is, Every one for himſelfe: and in this age, ſelfe-love hath corrupted mutuall commerce exceedingly; ſo that if men may gaine, they care not how, by what ſhifts, deceits, breaches of promiſes, running away with other mens goods; borrowing much, paying nothing, trading with other mens ſtocks and ſo prooving bankrupts, to rayſe ſome eſtate to themſelves by other mens detriment. And this is ſo generall a ſore, that no man knowes how to remedy it, though few are free from the preſſure of it.

Q. What is the rule of converſation in common life?

A. The anſwer of that good woman to the Prophet, is excellent, 3. Entercourſe of actions in common life.

excellent; 2 King. 4. 13. I live amonge my people: meaning humbly, courteously, loving and beloved, usefull and peaceably. First, in our neighbourhood we are to practise innocency and harmelesse: as Pro. 3. 29. meaning that a neighbour lookes for good measure, and to live without annoyance. Also to maintaine civill offices of lending and borrowing necessaries; yea, money to the poore, except they be unfaithfull (in which case they must be urged to pledges) to shew mutuall entercourse of love in meetings, moderate feasting and rejoycing in the welfare of each other, to avoyde strangenesse, and encrease amitie: avoyding statelinesse, lowring, discurtesies; and also wrongs to each other in common cases of each others grounds, fences, cattell, and commodities. Againe, usefulnesse in counselling, visiting, relieving such as are in danger of over-dripping enemies, especially comforting them in spirituall complaints. Secondly, In Towne-matters, not ayming at over-ruling others, treading our inferiours under-feete, saving our owne purses, and overburdening others, but carrying equal minds, and doing as we would be done to: not pragmaticall and busie-bodies in matters not concerning us; but attending our own, and keeping our bounds. Not praters and janglers of needlesse affaires, not curious, inquisitive, censorious, and the like. Thirdly, In Arbitratorships, not stickling for parties, but for a peaceable agreement upon equall condition betweene them, and setling firme agreement upon the wisest and safest termes, and so of the rest.

Q. Now come to the third, what is the due manner of conversation?

A. Touching the manner of our conversation, the Lord requires [Coloss. 1. 10.] that wee walke worthy of God in all wel-pleasing. Looke how he is in whole presence wee walke, so must we order the frame of our walking: even according to his nature, attributes, honor, worthinesse and rewards; God is an immutable God: walke in a constant equallnes of obedience without inconstancy. He is every where, walke holily in one duty and part of life as in another, secretly as openly. His attributes: is he wise? walke circumspectly before a wise God: is he strong to punish, to helpe? Walke with feare. Is he patient? walke mercifully towards offendors. Is he bountifull? Beare his corrections patiently, and be willing to receive evill as well as good from him. Is hee Righteous? defraud no man. Is he a glorious God? doe nothing unseemely, base, roote not in the earth. Is hee All-sufficient?

ſufficient? Diſtruſt him not. Hath hee called vs to vertue and glory? walke not according to former luſts and vanities of our Ignorance. Walke as Chriſt would walke if hee were upon earth: Let his example be the Rule of our converſation. Whatſoever is holy, juſt, of good report, pure and unblameable, enſue it. It is not worthy of God, of his grace, calling, and covenant, to take the uttermoſt of each libertie, to follow every faſhion, to frequent each company, to give our ſelves content in whatſoever our heart wiſhes: its not according to God, to uſe our tongues intemperately, to plunge our ſelves into the world, to neglect our time, to live to our ſelves, and doe no good to any. In all theſe there is an apparant ſwerving from God, and unworthy walking. They that ſee ſuch walking, may ſay, it pleaſes not God. We ſhould walke before God, as before a choice friend, whom wee entertaine into our dwellings familiarly: Oh how ſtudious are we to pleaſe ſuch an one? All our houſhould is too little to attend him, no dreſſings too neate, no fare too coſtly, no charge too great, no paines too much: Our deſire is alway to be with him to converſe familiarly, to be cheerefull in our converſe and communion, his diet, lodging, chamber, ſavory, ſoft, and handſome We will be ſtudious to be wel pleaſing in all things, no attendance, honor, awe and due reſpect ſhall be wanting. This we accompt the way to pleaſe, and we would be loth to diſpleaſe, leaſt wee ſhould forgoe him. So here, we are loth to grieve his good Spirit, wee will not ſuffer any ſights, ſmells, ſavors, no indecency to be committed before him in heart, in word, in behaviour which ſhould annoy his preſence. It was ſhaddowed out in the covering of the Iſraelites excrements, for the Lord ſaith Moſes walkes in the middeſt of thee.

To conclude then, this walking worthy of the Lord, though it be no demeriting of him, (for how can a conſequence of grace, merit antecedent mercy?) yet it is an endeavour of a beleeving heart to equall God, and to be ſtable and according to his heart, in the whole courſe. For a Chriſtian doth ſo know the Lord, and hath ſo ballanced his love in his ſoule, that it breedes an inſtinct in him, to walke worthy of him, to pleaſe him in one thing and other, great and ſmall, not for eye-ſervice, but in faithfulneſſe. If he be a Miniſter, hee knowes its not worthy of God to walke in idleneſſe and ſelfe-love, but in all diligent painfull feeding the flocke, both by the eare, and eye. If a Magiſtrate, hee knowes its unworthy of God to be afraid of too much zeale, and ſeverity in puniſhing ſinne. Shall ſuch a man as I flee? If a maſter of a family, hee knowes its not worthy of God, to preferre his owne endes before the worſhip of God, and the ſanctified reſt of his day. And briefly, it is unworthy of God to pleaſe our ſelves, and to neglect others, for Chriſt pleaſed not himſelfe, but his father, for the good of ranke enemies. Its worthy of God to uſe his long-ſuffering as an hand to draw us to repentance, not to goe on, under mercies and patience, with fruitleſſe, and impenitent hearts: thats againſt the edge with God. It becomes us not, after wee have ſpent the Lords day in publique to goe home to our houſes jangling and prating of our owne baſe matters: its not ſutable to his pure ordinances. Its unworthy of God, that his people, ſhould diſtruſt his providence, for bee who cloathes the Lillies and graſſe, can much more provide for us his people, if we truſt him. Its worthie of God to cleave to him in affliction as Iob ſayd, Shall wee receive good things of God, and not evill? Its worthy of God to doe good to our uttermoſt, for ſo did our Lord Ieſus, even to all: and our father lets his Sunne ſhine upon the corne of the bad, and the good. Theſe may ſerve for a taſt of the reſt: The Summe is, That the Lord will have all his conſider, whom and what God they ſerve, and to accomodate their ſpirits to a decent and comely walking worthy of himſelfe in all their converſation: asking this queſtion, will this grace my profeſſion? Is it according to the honor of my God? Or may I not be juſtly caſt in teeth with it, as unworthy of him? Eſpecially in doubtfull caſes, this muſt caſt the skoale, if it be worthy or unworthy of God.

Q. What direction is there for Solitarineſſe and Company?

Rule 4. for 1. Solitarineſſe.

A. Touching ſolitarineſſe, Heathens may teach us: who were never leſſe alone nor idle, than when private and ſolitary. That may be much better attained by a Chriſtian, than by a Moraliſt. And it requires a well ſtayde and ballanced minde, to dwell with a mans ſelfe alone; For ſolitarineſſe cauſes a man to vaniſh, if hee be not ſeaſoned well, and able to poſſeſſe himſelfe. Some mens whole life is outward, and rare is he who deſcends into himſelfe! To ſpend the time in the Ale-houſe, jangling, drinking, buying and ſelling others, hanging upon Shop-windowes, telling of tales and newes, &c. is counted a fine life by fooles: But a wiſe man, had rather be alone (although in priſon) than at ſuch libertie: That ſo hee may enjoy himſelfe, in the morning to forecaſt the duties and occaſions thereof, and to be armed by prayer for them: at night when hee lyes downe, to view the ſinnes and duties of the day paſt, with humiliation and thankes. So at other times (when calling hath wearied the body:) then to get within the Cloſet of our ſelves, calling in our roving thoughts and affections, to be ſerious: And, being private, to hide our ſelves till the evill be over-paſt, Eſay 26. To mourne apart, Zach. 12. To call to minde the government of God toward us in patience, proviſion, deliverance from dangers, loading us with benefits, paſſing by our tranſgreſſions; to binde our ſelves to the oath and covenant, to the good behaviour, to ſoberneſſe, meekeneſſe, innocency: to prevent the temptations to which wee uſually lie open by company, or occaſions of family, and ſo whet up his heart againe to more outwardneſſe of actions. If men could thus doe, what a threſhold ſhould they finde ſolitarineſſe to be, for meditation?

ther

Q. Adde ſomewhat alſo about Company, and the order thereof.

A. It's that by which (as Wine by the Buſh) it's knowne, what is within. No man is ſooner bewrayed by any thing, than by Company, and by the Tongue. Wherefore ſeeing it's a great peece of the wheele of our life: let us firſt beware of a looſe heart ready for all commers, none amiſſe, a ſigne of exceeding emptineſſe. Then, diſcerne of our Company wiſely: The wiſedome of a man will diſcover his companion, as the Fornace divides the droſſe: If thou ſeeſt not in a man, the lips of wiſedome, except thou ſee hope of doing good, or taking it, withdraw thy ſelfe. If ſinfull men or women entiſe thee, to dalliance, drinking, ill houres, pleaſure, or riot: conſent not. Though their lips drop honey, and their words are like butter; yet deliver thy ſelfe as the Roe, and eſcape. Such as thinke themſelves ſhot free, ſo that they can keepe any company without hurt, are often catcht in the ſnare, as the gnat in the Candle. Count it ſecondly a ſingular favour to be rid of bad or doubtfull company: which ſome enjoy: and yet (ordinarily) a man muſt goe out of the world, as Monkes or Anchorets, if they would be free. But when God doth not free us, then thirdly, be armed in bad Company: Reproove not ſcorners: caſt not pearles before Swine: be dumbe before ſuch wicked ones. Among the formall ſort, 3 Company.

(who may sooner be swayed than seasoned:) be sure to cut off evill speech and carriage; propound some riddle or other, some hard question to busie the minde, or speake of some accident of Gods judgement, or providence, of the death of some or other, taking occasion thereby of religious talke, to banish worse. And rest not onely, in not leaving bad savour behinde thee, except thou leave good. A speciall gift is required to such a purpose; as, to breake through the solemne silence of some, to cut off the prattling of others, yea, our owne bashfulnesse; to take an hint in the best season: to shake off our carnall appetite, our sensualitie, our barrennesse, and superfluitie of vaine and earthly thoughts and affections: to draw on the company by amiable behaviour and curtesie: and then apply our selves to doe them good. To which end: first, be well seasoned with good matter: secondly, bring it forth seasonably: thirdly, have a set ayme and bent to some speciall object: fourthly, seeke truely the good of such as thou conversest with, and Gods glory, not the hearing of thy selfe talke well: Lastly, let not thy minde be fickle and easily puft off from good speech, (for the Devill or thine owne vaine heart, will cast in some bone or other) but hold thy selfe and others (if possible) to the occasion, till somewhat enter. This is very hard in mixt companies, and strangers! But yet ayme at the best. Remember how oft thou hast beene snared with barrennesse in company, and stung afterward: Also how sweet a service it is to be truely sociable. Inure thy selfe to it at home, where thou mayst be bold, and it shall be easier abroad.

Q. What Rules give yee for Liberties?

6. Rule For Liberties

A. There are many sorts of liberties, as travellings from our owne homes, companionship with such as please us, recreations and pastimes, feastings, and the like: all which are lawfull in their kinde: yet must be watched unto, least too much precious time, cost, and heart be spent upon them: alwayes keeping from the uttermost of our libertie, and putting knife to our throat, Pro 23. 2. if wee be given to our appetite: not powring our our spirit into them, and loosing our selues in them, but gathering up our soules to a more chearefull returne to intermitted duties. Remembring that Satan will the rather seeke to circumvent us in the use of lawfull, because wee dare not rush into unlawfull liberties.

Pro. 23. 2.

For

For why? How many Christians (whom wee must not offer to censure, for all that) are there, who herein disguise themselves? loosing both their estate, thrift, and credit thereby among the godly, neglecting also their callings and families, and rather loosing their hearts in their pleasures, than refreshing their spirits! What slaves will not men be to their lusts? Chusing the company of such as are not meet to eate with the Dogges of their flocke, base, theeviſh, defamed persons (becmie they be necessary evills) rather than to be temperate and forbeare such sports? Thus they snare their hearts with the love of sinfull follies for a season, more than of God; let it be but granted, there is a lawfulnesse in Bowling, they will lye in common Alleyes (of which too many are set up) spending their time and money in play, or abetting the gamesters, and so plying the Ale-house (if it be rainy) and falling to bad games within doores: to the encrease of sloath, disorder, swearing, drunkennesse and profanesse, and all under colour of lawfulnesse. Even Gentlemen themselves of place, should rather deny themselves that libertie that is lawfull, than occasion to others so much sinne: and to God so much dishonour: and scandalle to Papists, (who call us Epicures) and destruction to the Gospell, and the power of Religion: (which seldome thrives under such courses) and detriment to the poore: for while sports are rife, the charitie of men is cold. Not to speake of civill wrongs accrewing to men, in their fences and commodities.

Q. Draw to an end of the rest.

A. Touching the family, we are to set it in order, not when we die onely, but much more in our life. And for mixt families, first, this I say, that they cannot chuse but finde much pudder and confusion, both in matters of God, and their owne: God is the God of order, not confusion: if therefore it can be, let mixtures of families be avoyded, as prejudiciall to peace, thrift, accord, and especially goodnesse: For if single families are so hardly ordered, how shall mixt, whose heades or members differ, and are loath each to stoope to one government? Such shall be sure to finde trouble in the flesh: therefore where weightie cause requires it, let the best order be settled by consent to avoyde confusion, as it shall be better, if all will stand to one barre, and be ruled by one head, guiding the rest according to God.

7. Rule. For Family.

Next

Governours. Next, for the Governours of families (eſpecially greater) let them not thinke it enough to ſet up a ſcroll upon their ſcreene, touching the Lawes of their houſes, and ſo paſſe on:
Pro. 27. 23. but withall, let them be the life of order themſelves, Pro. 27.
Pro. 31. 27. 23. and Pro. 31. 27. looking over their flockes within doores, and not onely for proviſion of body, but ſurvey of the ſeverall wayes of Children and ſervants. God himſelfe is the Epheſ. 3. 14. Father from whom, Epheſ. 3. 14. all families are called: and hee will take account of our Baylywicke in this kinde. If Miniſters cannot guide their owne families, how much leſſe Gods Church? Let order of family flow from well ordered
1 Sam. 2. 23, hearts of our owne: neither too remiſſe, as Eli, 1 Sam. 2 Epheſ. 6. 9. 23. 24. nor yet harſh, imperious and tyrannous, Eph. 6. 9. but 2 Cor. 5. 5. even framed for this very thing, as Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 5 with temper of gifts to governe, ſoberneſſe, gravitie, pureneſſe and tenderneſſe. Be not as Tygres in the hot purſuit of your owne earthly buſineſſe, letting Gods goe at large, both on Sabbaths and otherwiſe: nouriſh no evill in your hearts that might breake out in example: for what childe or inferiour can honour them that carry looſe hearts to God, and ſet him not up in the Family? Let God rule your children and ſervants, and wives, and ſet up his Throne in their Conſcience, and then a twyned thred will draw more than a Cable. Above all,
.101. with David, purge out all the bane of drunkenneſſe, lying, unfaithfulneſſe, unſeaſonable riot, and the like: and let thy eye be fixed chiefly upon the righteous, and encourage them that they may be the guides to the reſt. Vſe not to dally out the ſeaſon of dutie in families, which procures commonneſſe and formalitie. Catechiſe, admoniſh, reward, and cenſure, and hold up order by theſe meanes.

Inferiours. Touching inferiours, be wholly for the good of the whole familie, not your owne ends: Children downe right in ſubjection, and not inſolent, ſpenders and claymers of their parents wealth as theirs, for the ſupport of their vices and luſts: but under authority with all love and well deſerving, ſeeing they can have but all, after the deceaſe of Parents, and the whileſt their due education. And as for ſuch Children as neceſſary convenience requires to be planted abroad for training in the trade of their youth: Let ſuch Governours and Maſters be choſen, as, not onely are indulgent, kinde, deepe good houſe, allow wages: But such as are wise, conscionable and circumspect (instead of Parents) to watch over their wayes: the want whereof, hath caused loosenesses in the inferiours, corrupted by lewd companions, and base matches, to the sorrow of Parents and their whole families. Children also being well planted under Superiours, must be awefull, diligent, not learners of proud fashions, but getting that selfe-deniall, soberneſſe and grace which perhaps under their Parents wings they would have neglected. The miscarriage of many Children under government, hinders many sober and good ones, from the benefit of that Ordinance.

Servants also must be chosen by advice, and not ventured upon by Masters to serve their turne: whereof if care were had, great families would not be so poysoned with drunkenneſſe, uncleanneſſe, filching, swearing, and all sinne, as they are; till they be faine to purge out all the Servants at once, least the new be tainted. But bad Masters love bad servants: no chip, but hath his cover. Servants themselves also first seeke to serve the Lord Christ: That neither yee may obey men against Christ, nor yet neglect due obedience to men for Christs sake: who will pay you your wages. Beware of the usuall sinnes of mixture of sexes in families: either combining together against governours, by filching to maintaine their lusts, meetings and stollen liberties: or else living in envy and heart-burning each against other for their faithfulneſſe. Instead of these, be earnest in businesse, yet redeeming time to serve the Lord in secret: to be sure, not unsetling the seasons of family worship: (for such places good servants should resort to, as the Eagle, to the carcasse.) Pleade not for more liberty, in gadding, (no not under colour of Religion,) than is meet. To conclude, let both Parents beware of stoutneſſe of stomacke and partiality towards their Children, loving them according to that good they see in them: and not implacable (if their hearts relent for their errors) nor give occasion to their Children to humour them in combining and treachery each against other, whom rather they should reverence: which hath overthrowne the peace of many families long after. I have else-where spoken at large, let this suffice that they shew all good faithfulneſſe and respect, as those upon whom the well or ill-fare of the family dependeth, dependeth, and the more they are betruſted, the more truſty: for few families doe ruinate, wherein bad ſervants have not one principall hand.

Q. One word more of the tongue and ſo end?

Rule 8. For the tongue. Iam. 3. 6. Iam. 1. 26.

A. Its a great wheel alſo of Converſation. As great wheels in fire-works ſet the leſſer on fire, ſo doth the tongue the whole courſe of mortalitie, Iam. 3. 6. and it's ſet on fire by hell without grace. But even where there is grace, how little is ſeene in this kind? and yet our Religion is in vaine without it, as Iam. 1. 26. Its the chiefe Agent and Chapman of Converſation, and by it Converſation utters it ſelfe. But how? what ſcoldings and brawlings in family? what multitude of them in buying and ſelling? what jangling up and downe the ſtreets by gadding goſſips of unſtayed mindes? What poyſon foames from the heart by the vent of a lying, cruell, malicious, taunting, backbiting, prating vaine and unruly tongue? And while the eare of others is the receiver, this theefe will never change his trade. Truly, as once at Sea when an owner of a ſhip cryed out, (his Ship being toſſed and in danger) Oh, ſave my Ship! one anſwered if it bee yours, why doe yee not rule it? So we may ſay, Our tongues are ours for title,, but their owne for governement, we have no keepe of them. All other things (ſaith S. Iames) are ruled by the art of man, whether living or dead, be they never ſo rude, as Horſes and Cattell; or boyſterous, as Ships upon the Sea. But no Art of man, (onely the Lords) can rule the tongue. Its one of the laſt members tamed, and where wee ſee that wee count him a perfect man. The wiſeſt way for this, is Solomons counſell, Prov. 23. 26. My ſonne give me thine heart: and thine eyes (all thy members) ſhall delight in my wayes. The remedies of Morall Teachers are not a plaiſter broad enough for the ſore, for except the principle within bee framed, this inſtrument will ever be out of tune: no rules will reach it. Onely the law of grace in the heart will ſet it upon the lips: and make them a well-ſpring of life. A good mans lips out of the Treaſury of his heart will bring forth good things. Either make the tree good, or the fruit muſt bee evill. Nothing ſooner bewrayes the heart, either good or bad: it being the glaſſe of the ſame, as one ſayd, Speake that I may ſee thee: and another prettily ſaith: If thou be a foole and holdeſt thy tongue, thou art wiſe: but if a wiſe man, thou doeſt fooliſhly in thy ſilence.

Either

Either the multitude of words in the tongue or the deepe ſilence of it: The giddineſſe, falſhood, vanity, baſeneſſe, or prophaneneſſe of it, will ſoone diſcover what is within. Wherefore take wee notice of our ſelves; If occaſion bee given to ſpeake of Gods matters, none are ſo mute as we: But if of our owne, wee never have done: as the Poet ſpake of thoſe Fidlers that either could not be got to it, or could make no end. Let this ſhame us Chriſtians, that not onely natures fences of teeth and lips, but the Lord Ieſus his bloud, and his word ſhould not be able to rule this little, but unruly member. Get us a well ſtayed heart and ballanced with grace, and this will firſt keepe in our tongues from exceſſe; and then good matter, good heart, and good occaſions will ſet them on worke for good, for God, for our brethren: As the tongue hath ſet all on fire oft-times and made all men beſhrow us; ſo the ſame being ſeaſoned by the grace of Chriſt, may create the fruit of the lips which is peace: and both glorifie God, and edifie man: all converſion of the ſoule, and all building up in Grace, being the effect of this member ſanctified. Thus much for the opening of this ſecond Article.

Q. But what is the worke of a converted ſoule in caſe of Revolts, and interruptions of of this holy Converſation?

A. Concerning this we muſt know, that moſt true it is, although God hath deviſed this happy condition for his people to walke in, making the converſation of a new creature, a ſweet yoke, and eaſie burden: yet, that rebellious inmate of old Adam, and corruption of fleſh, incenſed by Satan, and error of men, hath found out many inventions, to thwart this way of God: Sometime it caſts off this yoke, by the decay of the inner-man, and of that ſpiritualneſſe of faith, weary of welfare, (for even Adam was ſo in his perfection) wanzing from that firſt love, that cloſeneſſe, that delight and complacence in God, and (in ſhort) from that bent and ſtreame of ſoule to walke with God, with all courage, well-pleaſing, and long-ſuffering of ſpirit, upon this, breake in actuall baſe habits; declining to hipocriſie, infidelity, time-ſerving, formality, ſecurity and the like. Sometimes the ſoule withdrawes from God in the uſe of the Meanes, as being preſumptuous of her owne ſafety, and thinking that the Altar and lampes will alway burne and ſhine without fewell, or oile, at at leaſt, that the worke wrought will ſerve turne, and the keeping, ping of quarter with God, in duties alone, will goe for pay, although the due temper of heart and worſhip, zeale and humblenes under wants, faith, hunger, and ſincerity be abſent: otherwhiles, the ſoule is prevented by ſtrong luſts, both of the heart and of the eye, with pride of life, to take her ſwinge in liberties, and ſo to ruſh vpon denyed and ſtollen waters, ingorging her ſelfe with pleaſures, Companies, worldlineſſe, uncleannes, and the like, farre vnbeſeeming ſuch as they goe for, and pretend themſelves to bee.

This ought not to be, but when it is, what muſt be done? Surely the Lord would not that we be angry, but when we have beene ſo, he will not have the Sunne to goe downe upon it: but hath provided a redreſſe; for ſhall a man fall, and not riſe? Ier. 8.4. The Lord being mercifull the ſpirit of beleevers is not left ſo to it ſelfe as to waſt the ſtocke, though it ſpend the revenew too laviſhly: And although Satan having them at this bay, provoke them to deſpaire, through an ill conſcience, and vnbeleefe, yet by a ſecret ſuſtaining, God keepes his ſeed alive, and the ſoule from Apoſtacy, nay, lins not till he have reſtored them. 1. By ſtopping them from headlong ruine, Ionah 2. 5 2. Lam. 3. 19. and that by a glimpſe of hope. 2. Hee revives them out of their ſwoune, by experience of former mercy when they were in their ſins: Pſal. 119. 5. Thirdly, hee freeth them from that confuſion and aſtoniſhment of Conſcience which might ariſe from deſpiſed mercy, remooves that ſlavery and feare, and preſents a view of their ſin in ſuch order of revolt, as rather cleeres up their ſpirit, then overwhelmes it: as Iona felt, in the Whales belly: elſe they would be ſwallowed up as Iudas. 4. The Lord thawes their heart, by putting them into bitternes, and holding them under from giddines and hardneſſe: ſo that they can relent and repent, 1 Sam. 12. 4. Mark, 14. 72. becauſe the life of Repentance lay at the roote. Fifthly by this meanes, God ſokes their ſpirits, and makes grace enter as deepe as former treachery did: and ſo their ſinne is cleanſed. Sixthly, The Lord begins to cleere his face to them, and ſets the glaſſe of a promiſe before them, Eſay 57. 17. 18. even that hee will ſee and heale them; yea though ſtubborne, under his ſtrokes and Deſertions: ſo Ier. 3. 1. 2. and ſhewes them that Chriſt muſt come betweene their ſin and repentance: elſe they doe but ſoder and daube with untempered mortar: Seventhly, They embrace it by by faith and returne to their converſation againe with more feare by their experience.

Q. Now briefly adde ſome generall uſe: becauſe the opening of this Converſation is uſe of it ſelfe.

Vſe. 1. A. Firſt, Let it warne all weake and fearefull ones, who being under the condition of grace, yet through melancholly, the Devils deteyning of you, and diſtruſt, dare not, or will not apply the promiſe to ſhake off your diſtempers, but ſtill wrap your ſelves into Satans chaines, and chuſe to make your Hell another Heaven by your bondage. Oh, come out of the thraldom betimes! For loe the very hear-ſay of theſe two Articles ſhould gaſter yee; the Lord hath a great deale of worke for yee to do both to make yee new creatures, and to order all your converſation aright: Oh, here is a full worke of a mans life! Doe yee conſider what this converſation is? how large, how deepe, how broad? do yee wiſely waigh the dimenſions of it? If yee did, you would be afraid leſt death ſhould ſurpriſe yee ere yee have ſtrucke one ſtroke of this ſervice of God. Till yee have faith what can come from yee to pleaſe God? Oh! to you, to you onely belongs the promiſe: it muſt be God indeed who muſt worke it; but why do yee deny that it is yours? how deeply doe ye diſhonour God, and deprive him of his glory? Oh! remember there is a great converſation of ſervice required of yee: the art of obedience is long: the life is ſhort! Beg of God that yee may be rouzed out of the den of eaſe, or ſullenneſſe, or feare, and ſay, Lord haſten and finiſh the worke of Faith with power! I ſhall bee ſhent elſe, and benighted, the day will faile me, and I ſhall be dead, before I come to any proofe of grace and the new creature. This I urge the rather, becauſe I ſee how many pleaſe themſelves in this eſtate of the ſuburbes, and ſhame not to ſay, If I might ever have learned to beleeve, I would care for no more! Would yee not? me thinkes you ſhould tremble to ſee ſuch a world of worke, a whole Converſation to walke in, and yet you ſtill to beginne, who ſhall doe Gods worke if you ſit ſtill; Yee will ſay, perhaps, if wee could beleeve, wee ſhould not periſh. Is that all? Is Gods glory leſſe to you, than your owne ſalvation? Caſt off your eaſe! And take heed leſt ye be faine to crowd in at heaven-gate with much adoe, when others goe in at a wide doore! when your hearts ſhall tell you faith was wanting to purge your heart, your tongues, lives: ſtill you walked in many unreformed courſes for lacke of the power of Faith; will this be a welcome thought on the death-bed? I remember what the Lord ſaid to Elia, when he was fled from Iezabel? What doſt thou here Eliah in this Cave? Up and eate for thou haſt a long journey? So I ſay to thee. Vp and eate, take and beleeve the promiſe: Purge thy heart, renew thy ſoule, enter into an holy converſation; begin quickly, be thankefull for thy deliverance, and conſider here is plenty of worke for thee, here is a courſe of ſervice towards God, toward man: here be affections, thoughts, and actions, to bee governed, the very view of this journey might diſmay one that wants feet and hands. Oh! that this among other motives might rouze thee up. I tell thee, were thy faith like Abrahams: here were worke enough to doe for thee: how ſtands thy heart to it? If there be any deſire of Gods honour in thee, to leave ſome marke of faith behind thee, and to die with peace in the conſcience of thy holy endeavour of well-pleaſing, beſtir thy ſelfe and ſet on, up, and be doing, and the Lord ſhall be with the willing.

in

Vſe. 2. Terror.

Secondly, This is Terror to all prophane ones, and all hypocrites: to the prophane firſt, who croſſe with God, and turne day into night, a converſation of the new creature, into a converſation of wickednes. See Heb. 13. 5. Let not your converſation be in covetouſneſſe. So I ſay: The round of the wicked is in prophanenes: from morning to night, firſt to the Ale-houſe they have their round in drinking, in oathes, in ſcoffing, in blaſphemies: Thence perhaps to their quarrelling, and together by the eares: then to abuſe their lawfull liberties, as money, marriage: Then to the world: Some have their round in luſt, ſome in vanitie, ſome in covetouſneſſe, as Eſay deſcribes a mizer, that his tongue will talke of niggardize: ſo his thoughts plod, affections ſtirre, outward man plyes this trafficke. So for pride, luſt, envy: a wretch hath a converſation in them, his whole wheele is in them: If out of them, then out of his Element. Oh, wofull catiff! How ſhall Conſcience one day rend thee in peeces, when it ſhewes thee in a glaſſe the round thou haſt walked in? Or elſe thou ſhalt die like a beaſt in thy filth!

Branch 1.

Branch 2. Secondly, It ſhould be terror to all hypocrites and time-ſervers, who make religion and profeſſion a cover for their hollownes, & bearing the world in hand; that they beleeve, love God, feare him, are very renewed ones and new Creatures; yet caſt dung in the

the face of God and Religion, living still unreformed in their conversation. What? thinke yee to bleare the eyes of men, because they cannot gage your hearts? hath not the Lord once for all said it, By their fruits yee shall know them? Doe men gather Grapes of thornes, or Figs of thistles? can a rush grow without mire? Can a man unrenued in his course, still an old man, walke with God in an holy conversation? And who so walkes in a rotten one, can he be a new creature? Oh! if yee be such new creatures, if yee have slaine the Agag of old Adam, What meane the bleating of the sheepe, and lowing of the oxen? how is it that your tongues, your marriages, families, liberties, companies have shaken off Gods yoke? where is your inward or outward conversation with God? either in the life of faith, or of communion and dutie? where is your integritie and sinceritie? Oh! that yee would no longer cast dung into the face of God, and cease to blaspheme him before prophane ones! Why take yee the Word of God into your mouthes and eares, hating to be reformed? Why doth this generation swarme so in these dayes of powerlesse profession? having a forme of godlinesse, but hating to be reformed? This easie Religion of yours shall one day scare yee, yee shall wish your portion might fall into the lot of Sodom and Gomorrha, and such as never knew God! Hell shall be seven times more hot for yee than others, and when yee shall cry, Have not we preached and professed thy Name? The Lord shall answer, Depart from mee yee workers of iniquitie, Consider this yee that forget God! thinke that yee see the Lyon of the tribe of Iuda rending hypocrites in peeces with more fiercenes than Publicans, and then conclude with David, He that prayseth me glorifies me. To him that orders his Conversation aright, thou wilt shew the salvation of God. Who would not then see this salvation? then in the meane season walke in this Conversation. Psal. 50. 20. Psal. 50. 23.

Thirdly, It should be use of Instruction to all Gods new creatures, to bethinke them of their worke, and to stirre up the grace of God bestowed upon them in their renewing. Oh! the dayes we live in are not for such a conversation as is here laid out! Since the Scriptures taught this, the world hath found out a breadth in Gods narrow; scarce is the image of it to be seene any where in the world. At Church men seeme to give way to heare it, and will not deny it, but still they hold their owne course: the Minister cannot follow them up and downe their houses, their markets and Vse 3.

buſineſſe, to ſee what converſation they leade: and being left to themſelves, the law of a new creature is forgotten, they know a farre eaſier way to walke: this is an hard way, beſet with thornes, they have no joy in it. Oh! haſt thou received the Spirit of renewing into thee? Then the yoke of God is eaſie, and his burthen light. Caſt off thine owne mixtures, doe not pull backe thy ſhoulder, deſire no more eaſe than others of Gods people have felt. Its Gods way, the way that Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, David, Peter, Paul, walked; the way which Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe hath chalked out: if it be tedious, it is ſo to thy old man, to whom thou art no debtor: thou art redeem'd from him, and his old converſation; thy thoughts, affections, members, tongue, feet, ſenſes are not thine owne (except thou be the old mans ſtill) but his: that thou mighteſt now ſerve in the newneſſe of the ſpirit, not the oldneſſe of the letter. Therefore, be not thine owne: take ſome time, goe into thy cloſet and parley with thy ſoule, whoſe am I? if old Adams ſtill, the Lord requires no ſuch coſt at my hands as this: no man can yeeld to this converſation that is not required: I were a foole to bereave my ſelfe of my luſts and liberties, if I be no new creature. But am I one? truely, then I muſt walke in all this converſation, uprightly and entirely, though never ſo weakely: Lord, let it finde favour in mine eyes; let it not ſeeme tedious; thou canſt make it eaſie and ſweet: let me truſt thee. But to divide the things, and remoove thoſe bounds which thou haſt joyned and pitched, and no good man, none but an hypocrite durſt ever ſeparate; Lord let me not doe it!

Iam 3. 13. reade it.

Vſe. 4. Laſtly, Let it provoke each good heart to ſeeke to excell in this fruit of a new creature. Now in this dead time, in which it is out of date, wherein rather its a reproach and burthen to walke thus, than otherwiſe, yet let us labour to excell: when even wiſe Virgins, ſome of them nod, and men remoove this image of God into the backe-roomes of their heart, and ſuffer it not to rule their ſpirit, as formerly; but ſerve the Lord as the time will ſuffer, not as the rule of converſation teaches: Oh! now beare witneſſe to the Lord, and dance before the Arke of this his truth; and if this be to be vile, be more vile; truſt God for credit, and parts, and employments, and content of life, and cleave to the conſcience of converſation. And if it be hard in ſuch a world to hold out this power of Religion: beg first of the Lord, that hee would direct thee; diminish not, nor adde to his rule; but deny thy selfe, say, Lord, the worke is great, it is not in man to order his way: doe thou, O Lord, order it for me. All thy Disciples are regulars and no seculars (although no Papists) and therefore let not me walke as a Masterlesse person, but by rule. Shall Iesuites teach their novices such exact obedience, and cannot the Lord teach it thee? Yes, if thou wilt sit at his feet and learne. Iere. 10. 23. Psal. 119. 133.

Oh! that all that I have said might ravish thy heart with this frame of God, and make thee cry out with the Queene of Sheba, beholding the order of Solomons household and conversation; Oh? how happy are those servants who dayly stand before thy face to heare thy wisedome? Oh! but a greater than Solomon is here, and an order of far greater beautie. Oh! that it could beate thee out of conceit with the disorder of thy old course, in which thou never foundest peace, but confused; and let it urge thee in thy utter inabilitie hereunto, to goe to God with David, and pray, Direct me, Oh Lord, in the paths of thy Testimonies! Leade me into the good way, and let thy good Spirit conduct me into the land of righteousnesse, send forth thy light and truth: shew mee the view and order of this conversation, make it sweet to my mouth as honey, and let thy Angel of the Covenant goe before and guide me by the Pillar of fire and Cloud to the 42. pitching places of this way to Canaan! Leave me not to my owne wisedome, but guide mee by thy counsell, till thou receive mee to glory! Lord enable mee to doe what thou biddest, and bid mee doe what thou wilt! Give mee to draw from thy fountaine for all these uses of conversation. The Well is deepe, but thy Bucket is able to fetch out this water: Let mee derive it from the Lord Iesus his example, and draw grace for grace from thence. And not onely set mee in this Conversation, but hold mee in it: and let experience make me say, it is best, and I am never happie when I am out. Till it become my meate and drinke on earth to doe thy will as in heaven. 1 King. 10. 6. 7. 8. Psal. 119. Psal. 143. 5. Ioh. 1. 32. Ioh. 4.

Oh, how farre off should it be from Gods people, once to shrugge at the conversation which hee hath chalked out unto them! Seeke to make that yoke easie, and that service perfect freedome which hee hath imposed; not to shake it off! Curbe that base spirit that would faine ease it selfe of this rule of Conversation; and patch not off the Lord with here one du-tie, there another, off and on, by ſtarts and pangs: This is to turne Converſation to a running pull of (now and then) a few ſhreds of devotion: Or elſe a weighing good againſt evill, and ſtopping Gods mouth, or rather fawning upon him with ſhewes. No: curſed is he who turnes Converſation into a moode of good affections, and having playd his parts with God through the day, offers him the ſcraps of an evening prayer, or ſinging a Pſalme, or thruſting himſelfe into a faſt once in a Quarter, with ſuch as feare God. Looke to it, the Lord will abate no price of this Converſation. Such as will be ruled, ſhall finde it ſweet to walke with him. One day in his Courts is better than a thouſand; one day ſpent in watching, and prayer, and living by faith, better than all ſurfeiting, wantonneſſe, and liberties. But elſe, know it and ſurvey this round which I have deſcribed, ſhew me one inch of this wheele to be larger than it ſhould be, and abridge it, if thou wilt. If thou canſt not, then buckle thy ſoule to it, cavill not, but take this yoke upon thee, in ſtead of that wofull one which God hath rid thee of. Let thy Round be comely, beautifull, and proportionable, (though weake) walke with God in the ſecret life of faith and Communion of his Spirit: Serve the time alſo in ſuch duties as touch it: proceed on to the uſe of all meanes, practiſe of all duties, exerciſe of all graces; adde vertue to vertue; be upright in manner, large in meaſure: Remember, mercy hath length, height, depth and bredth in it, that Obedience might have her dimenſions alſo: Ioyne to pietie, love: in Converſation toward men, in common life, liberties, dutie of marriage, the tongue, ſolitarineſſe, company, and the like: Let it ſhine out both to the world, and eſpecially within thine owne Sphere, among thine owne.

Pſal. 84.

See 2 Cor. 1. 12

Vſe 5. Admonition Branch 1.

Thinke not that converſation will be ſupported with nothing, but firſt looke back to that which I have largely ſpoken touching thoſe Graces which ſerve to prop up and to ſtrengthen the wheele of converſation: here one grace is requiſite, there another; in a croſſe, ſelf-deniall & meekneſſe, in a bleſſing chearfulnes and fruitfulnes: in each part of life, faith: ſometimes the armour, ſometimes wiſedome & diſcerning. But let no naked man come into this field, nor any barefoote to this walke: for they will never hold out. Secondly, Looke to thy Conſcience, and keep it ſound and tender, if thou wouldſt hold a good Converſation, or order it well. As it muſt be ſound Conſcience that muſt order it, ſo it muſt be that which muſt repreſent it to thy ſoule with comfort, where thou haſt gone to worke aright, or elſe with grieſe and ſmitting where its otherwiſe. If Conſcience were not, to what end were converſation? What were it elſe but to ile and confuſion? Therefore Paul joynes them ſo oft together. Reade Act. 23. 1. and 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our joy, even our Conſcience of Converſation. Conſcience will be as the Spirit of God, going out with us into all parts of our life; And Conſcience will reflect and remember each paſſage of it, being paſt. No hiding of any thing from it: It will marke not onely open, but the cloſeſt carriages of the ſoule: If ſhe ſpy out our ſecret fulſomneſſe of heart, and wearineſſe of dutie, our deadneſſe, and ſlackneſſe of ſpirit, our pride in good duties, or our gifts, our cenſoriouſneſſe, our eaſie pardoning our ſelves for any of our corruptions: ſhe will ſpeake and ſmite, (if ſhe be let alone) ſhe will ſting ſo, that no muſicke ſhall eaſe us, but pardon and returning home: Alſo if ſhe ſearch us, and find truth, meekneſſe, love and feare in us; ſhee will be a thouſand witneſſes, yea, a feaſt within us, againſt all Reproachers. She guides all, and therefore knowes all. As nothing is hid from the Sunnes beames, no not the golden and ſilver Mines in the bowels of the earth: ſo neither from this candle of the Lord, ſearching the bowells of the belly. Therefore attend Conſcience, as thou wouldeſt keepe thy peace: and let Conſcience redreſſe thy errors, and mend the flawes and cracks of the wheele, as thou ſpyeſt them: for God hath put it into the Soule for the ſupport of good converſation. Beware leaſt thou ſmite out the eye of it, dim it not, diſable it not, defile it not, ſuffer it not to grow ſeared and ſenſleſſe, for then will it not doe her office, but leave thee to error, to hollowneſſe, to prophaneneſſe: neither being able to accuſe nor excuſe aright: without which it is impoſſible that a good Converſation ſhould ſubſiſt. And of this Article ſo much.

The third Article.

Qu. What is the third Article?

The platform of holy Conversation is the Morall Law.

[2 *Tim.*1.5.

A. THat the eternall plat-forme after which this Conversation of the new Creature is to be framed, is onely the Law of God in the ten Commandements. See 1 *Tim.*1.5. The end of the Law is love. What end meanes hee? surely not the end of the Lawes begetting power (for Christ doth that) but of the directing power of it. Thus S. Iames cals it a Royall Law, *Iam.*2.8. as being the Scepter whereby Christ our King rules us. And hee termes it a Glasse of libertie: meaning to all beleevers, in that it shewes forth the will of God fully in the point of morall obedience, as a glasse represents the face. So the Psalmist, Psal. 19. Thy Law is perfect, giveth light to blind eyes; by it thy servant is forewarned, &c. And Psal. 119. Thy Word is a light and lanterne to my feet and steps. And thy Commandements are to me in stead of Councellors. And of this part of the Word is that of Peter meant, The sure Word of the Prophets, shining in a darke place.

*Iam.*2.8.

[2 *Pet.*1.

Q. How comes this direction to be put into the Word? and how comes it to be conveyed unto the soule?

God hath put direction in it.

*Deut.*10.4. *Exod.*20. Gal 3.19.

A. To the former I answer, the Lord God hath breathed into it this light and direction: himselfe put it into it, no creature being able in so few words as ten, Deut. 10. 4. to contrive so perfect a view of all dutie: and having out of the depth of his wisedome so done, God spake these words, although delivered by the Ministery of Angels in point of attendance and terror, Heb 1.7. Hee maketh his Ministers a flame of fire: Hee himselfe, as the Lord of the Creature, uttered them. And hee both devised and uttered this Law; for this especiall and last end, to bee a direction unto his Church.

*Heb.*1.7.

The Law preached is the direction.

For the latter, I say, That as in the Law hee tooke order, that not onely the Priests and Levites at Ierusalem in the Temple, but in the Tribes should reade it each Sabbath,

All,

Act. 13. 27. and expound it, Ezra 8. 4. so still hee requites that the Ministers of the Gospell doe dispense and open it to the people in the speciall parts and scopes thereof, for a patterne of life. For although such common notions of dimme light remaine in a corrupt nature, as may serve to condemne the contemners, yet, no such as might leade on to godlinesse and salvation cleerely that is a mystery and must be unfolded. And further, the Lord hath added the ministery of the Spirit to the voyce of man, to write this Law in the soules, hee hath promised it, Ier. 31. 33. and doth daily performe it: so that to the beleever, his Law is not a commanded one, (as to all) but a commanding one, in their spirit and conscience.

Act. 13. 27. Ezra 8. 4. Iere. 31. 33.

Q. But this seemes contrary to the Apostle, 1 Tim. 1. for hee affirmes the Law was not given to the righteous, but to the disobedient, &c.

Object.

A. This is answered by the same place, vers. 5. as in the first question I said: the summe is, It is not given to the righteous, as to the ungodly: for the righteous neede it not so; howbeit, it's given to the godly also for another end, even to direct them. For the Law in Gods purpose served for two ends: One for transgressions: to convince the wicked, to feare them out of their selfe-conceit, and to drive them to Christ: The other, to guide such as are come to Christ, how to lye under his Government: This latter, the Lord looked at more mainely, for his Elects sake, that they should not be left to themselves. But the former also, hee intended to the drawing of them out of their ignorance. For as we see, that the Law was given in all terror, and not as a messenger of good things: so the Lord taught thereby that it ought to speake sadly as a minister of death to the ungodly; and so it did in some sort with such as were saved among the Iewes: the Ministery of it convinced them of an impossibilitie of performance of it, and sent them to the blessed seed who should bring in righteousnesse, and breake the Serpents head: and to such, this Law ceased to be a killing letter, and began to be a direction to life. In which sense wee here treate of it, as in the first part of the Catechisme of the former: in that as a Schoolemaster of feare, in this of order.

1 Tim. 1. 5. Answ. Gal. 3. 19. The Law hath 2. ends, Humiliation, and Direction.

Q. But what needes this Law-direction? Doe wee not by this, teach people to serve in the old letter, and destroy that Law of.

Object.

of libertie in Christ, which ought to be set up; and restore the Covenant which ought to be abolished?

Answ. A. To answer both: First, the Lord hath not given his Church to Christ, nor given them any such liberty in Christ, as to devise a way to themselves, severall (either for measure or number, or matter of obedience) from his owne way: neither will trust man with any such, no nor give the least hint to mans corrupt inventions. But that Law of obedience which he first himselfe devised, hee meant it for those that should beleeve, both before, at, and after the comming of Christ: and meant not to alter it. How Christ rules by it wee shall heare anon: but hee rules by no other. And its worth our noting, that the first Sermons he ever preached, Mat. 5. and 6. and 7. he urgeth nothing more than this. Thinke yee I am come to destroy the Law? No, but to fulfill it, and to settle it. For the second point, I say, that it must be explained; what it is to serve in the letter: and secondly, what it is to restore that which is worne out. To serve in the letter then, is to be mistaken in the scope of the Law, Doe this and live: to thinke that the Law gives life to the obeyers of the letter of it, and to thinke a man may of himselfe obey it, and be saved by it, whereas the Law imports no such thing, but urges an obedience exactly, which is impossible: now to serve thus, is to serve like a slave, without reward. Thus doe not we affirme the Law to be served. Secondly, to restore a Law to be abolished, is to maintaine this error, that by the Law of Moses a man may be justified, and needes no other: and to oppose it to Christ in the point of being so justified. This doe not wee in affirming the Law to be our direction; for we affirme, that a man is first justified by Christ onely, abolishing the Law in that point wholly. Therefore this cavill is falsely cast upon us.

Gal. 3. 21. latter part.

Further Object. Q. Explaine this better: for you seeme herein to confound the two Covenants, Doe this, and live: and, Beleeve this, and live: doe you not so?

Answ. Wherein the old and new Covenant agree and differ.

A. God forbid: for the opening of which, it will be fit in a word, to shew in what respect these two Covenants are opposite, and in what not: The old Covenant is contrary to the new, onely in the point of living, by doing or beleeving, and being justified by doing or beleeving. Whosoever will be justified by doing, destroyes justification by beleeving, as both both thoſe old hereticall Phariſees, and now Papiſts doe. As the Apoſtle in Rom. 11.6. urgeth; If of workes, no more of grace, for ſo workes were no more workes: If of grace, not of workes, for then grace were no more grace. In this reſpect then the Law of doing, and the Law of faith are irreconcilable, and as contrary as to be ſaved by ones ſelfe, is contrary to being ſaved by another: and in this reſpect doth Paul ſo oppoſe thoſe vilifying the Law, and exalting the Goſpell: calling the one, an old letter, the other the Spirit, the one wanting and to be aboliſhed; the other to be ſetled by the others ruine. Elſe the Apoſtles phraſes cannot be approoved: for hee onely confutes the error of the Iew that tooke that Covenant of workes to import a poſſibilitie for nature to doe it. But the old Covenant is not contrary to the new in point of direction to obedience; neither is the Law contrary to the promiſes, but ſubordinate rather, for as the Law firſt ſerved to prepare a way to Chriſt, ſo having once trodden the Law under Chriſts feete, (in that ſuppoſed ſtrength thereof to juſtifie a ſinner) it's ſafe to affirme, doe this under the Lord Ieſus, doe this in faith, and live: not that workes are cauſes of, but the way unto life, even that life which faith hath procured and Chriſt purchaſed: as one well ſaid, No cauſes of a kingdome, but the way of reigning. And thus the Law falling into the ſtreame of Chriſt, is not oppoſite unto him, but in order of direction to a beleever, how hee may walke unto ſalvation.

Gal. 5.4.

Gal. 3.21. former part. Gal. 3.24.

Q. Yet one doubt more appeares, for by this opinion Chriſt is made a Law-giver.

How Chriſt may be ſayd to be a Law-giver?

A. True, but with a diſtinction. Not as if hee by dying ſhould merit to us a way of juſtifying our ſelves by the forme of the old Covenant, Doe this and live: (which ſome Divines have affirmed, and they are lately well confuted) for this were but a nice tricke to eſtabliſh Iewiſh and Popiſh juſtification: but he is our Law-giver by directing us to life by this Law, having firſt juſtified us by his grace.

Q. Is then God tyed to his owne Law?

A. No, But hee tyeth us thereby rather, as by a tedder, to obey. Hee hath power to diſcharge us when he will from this Law: which diſpenſation although hee doth not reveale himſelfe in, to us in theſe dayes, as formerly he did, both in generall, (as to the Iſraelites in allowing them to rob the Egyptians Egyptians) or in speciall, (as to allow to Samson a marriage with a Philistine, or to Ruth to breake modestie and uncover a mans feet being alone in bed, which might else have snared him and her) yet still it is in the power of him that makes a Law, to disanull it. And all to teach us, That then we obey God when wee doe as hee bids us. And when hee forbids us, then our disobedience is obedience. Woe is mee (saith Paul) if I preach not the Gospell: and yet such a necessitie may lye upon us, that our preaching the Gospell may be a woe to us. To wit, when wee will preach that we might preach, our Conscience repugning to the conditions of preaching honestly. In such a case to desert it honestly is better, and not to be diligenter than God bids us. For so we shall have as small thanke from him, as Uzzah had, who having nothing to doe to stay the Arke, yet would needes doe it. As if the Arke must needes have broken save for him: as if God could not have sustained it, except hee had upheld it. Thus no doubt many would keepe their Ministeries in Gardiners time, under colour of expecting better times: till their words came out at their nostrills: and by that resolution, they both snared themselves in preaching of base points, and biting in of the pith and marrow of truthes, occasioned the Lord to forsake them: grieved the soules of the godly by their equivocations, and betraying the truth: encouraged their raging enemies to devise straighter Lawes against them; made themselves more odious than they that suffred: bewrayed themselves to be Time-servers, and added heavier chaines to their brethren.

Object. Q. But seeing the Law was a yoke not to be borne, and an impossible Master to obey, as Act. 15. 10. is spoken: how can it be made a direction for us?

Answ. A. Iesus Christ hath taken away that yoke, and so put it upon us: the same Law, yet altered much in the propertie thereof, and that sundry wayes: and so made it no yoke of the Law, but a yoke of his own, sweete, and easie, and light; and which he tels us we may well beare, being rid of the other, as Mat. 11. 29. 30.

Mat. 11. 29. 30.

Q. Shew that wherein stands this ease and libertie?

A. Hee hath purchased it for us, as our Priest, King, and Prophet.

Q. How as our Priest?

A. Sundry wayes. First, by discharging us from that old

fence of the Law, the yoke of superstitious ceremonies of the old ceremoniall and judiciall Law. Col. 2. 14. Blotting out the hand-writing of ordinances, which was contrary to us. In this we got a great quittance of the Law. The more wrong doe they unto us who restore this burthen (as the Papists) and thinke they doe us a good turne, destroying Christs ease: who hath rid us of all beggerly Rudiments, Gal. 4. 9. and Col. 2. 17. so that wee are dead with Christ from them, Col. 2. 20. Secondly, Hee hath freed us from the rigor of morall Lawes, as that one of the Sabbaths excessive observation; but especially the whole burthen of the morall Law, Gal. 3. 13. that immoderate impost of doing all according to the full matter, manner, and measure; so that now the Law is qualified, and is onely required of us as the obedience of faith, and accounted unto us as full as if wee could wholly fulfill it. By which meanes these commandements are not burthensome, 1 Ioh. 5. 3. But thirdly and especially, hee hath rid us from that woefull penalty of curse (more heavie than all, Gal 3. 13.) even eternall death of soule and body, which throughout our life enthralled us, Heb. 2. 15. and that by his bloud, Gal. 4. 5. Further, hee hath taken away that strength of sinne, whereby the Law did excite and provoke sinne and rebellion in us, Rom. 7. 10. 11. so that now it provokes to righteousnesse. Rebellion is now turned to selfe-deniall and sweetnesse. Fourthly, Hee hath removed that unwelcomenesse of our persons, whereby all that came from us was irkesome to God, and made both us and our service accepted, Ephes. 1. 6. yea, and that even in our wants and infirmities. Revel. 1. 6. even Priests to offer up acceptable sacrifices. Lastly, He doth by his intercession procure acceptance still for us, that no time or age may make the Father weary of us in our poore service.

A maine head to be noted. How Christ hath made the Law easie 1. As our Priest five wayes. Gal. 4. 9. Col. 2. 17. Col. 2. 20. Gal. 3. 13. 1 Ioh. 5. 3. Gal. 4. 5. Ephes. 1. 6. Rev. 1. 6.

Q. What hath he done for us as a King?

A. First, Hee strengthens and stablisheth all those tyes and bands of obedience due to himselfe from us: that the more freed wee are from bondage, the more wee may be tyed to the liberty of this royall Law of his: setting up his throne in the soule more fully thereby, upon better prerogative: before it was justly urged, but weakely, because the strength of Creation was lost and gone: as, Rom. 8. 3. That which by the Law was impossible through weakenesse of flesh, &c.

2. As a King two wayes. 1. Rom. 8. 3.

But

But now being recovered upon termes of easinesse and delight, he may more equally and duely require it, without excuse. And by this the Law is the more established in us, Rom. 3. 31. Do wee then by faith frustrate the Law? nay, rather we establish it. For as the Lord requires obedience of his Creature, upon the planting of his image in it: so by this restoring it from her ruine and curse, he much more settles the same upon the beleever; Faith (to say the truth) being the grace that conformes the soule to this image in the utmost intent of God: which when shee hath perfectly done, shee shall bee of no more use. To this end pertaines that, Rom. 10. 4. Christ is the end of the Law, for righteousnesse, to all that beleeve. Meaning that the Law is fully satisfied in her scope of perfect obedience by Christ: seeing faith in him hath obteyned a full acceptance of obedience, as if it were legally perfect.

Rom. 3. 31.

Note.

Rom. 10. 4.

2 Secondly, He doth by his Kingdome infuse strength into us to obey the Law: enclines our wits thereunto, and makes it to us actually as Christ found it to himselfe, and hath made it to us even perfect freedome: yea meat and drinke: according to that, Jere. 31. I will write my Law in their hearts, and cause them to walke in my Statutes: that is, put strength of mine owne into them to agree with my Rule, and stoope to my Scepter. Kings command their people, but serve themselves upon their strength; cannot put any into them: but Christ is served by his own. He causeth it.

Jere. 31. 33. Ezek. 36. 27.

Q. What hath he done for us as our Prophet?

3 How is our Prophet? two wayes. 1

A. His Propheſie commeth yet neerer to the matter in hand; for although all that I have said be to be supposed, ere the Law can direct us; yet the actuall worke of direction issueth from his Propheſie: and first by a declaring, and secondly, by a Revealing Worke. The Declaring worke is a witnessing to the soule that he is true Lord and commander of his people, Esay 55. 4. that he rules by his Law as by his Scepter, that all his Priesthood and merit ends in his Kingdome and obedience, that it is his honour that all knees bow to him, and that they kisse the Sonne; that he is the object of it through whom the Father is honoured: that true Libertie stands not in having our will, but in putting on this yoke; and who so doth otherwise deceives himselfe.

Esay 55. 4.

Psal. 2. ult.

2 But secondly, By his revealing worke: by this he directs the ſoule, and ſets the ſteps of it in peace: by this he uſes his Law to be a lively finger to point out dutie for every occaſion, and to frame the ſoule to draw his Law to every need and uſe in the life; according to that, 1 Iob. 2. 20. 27. Yee have an unction from the Holy One, who telleth you all things: And in Eſay 30. 21 Their eares ſhall heare a voice behinde them, ſaying; This is the way walke, in it. This is a Revealing with direction; by which the ſoule ſees the uſe of Chriſt in every Commandement, and is led on by him as her Guide thereby, as if an Oracle ſhould ſpeake from heaven; Eſa. 55. A Leader and Commander to his people, verſ. 4. And thus a Chriſtian may ſee how the Commandements of the Morall Law are the directions of Chriſt, and how he is the Law-giver of the ſoule in them all, and till this bee conceived, it is no wonder if we account them as a ſtrange thing, Heſ. 8. 12. Q. I conceive now, how Chriſt hath made his Law a direction to godly life; now come to the directions themſelves, what are they?

The Directions themſelves. 1

A. They concerne either God himſelfe in the firſt Table; as his inward worſhip of feare, confidence, and ſetting him up to be our God alone in the firſt: Or, our outward reaſonable ſervice, and worſhip of him in pure manner, in the ſecond. Or our faithfull abearing our ſelves in all holineſſe, in ſuch actions of common life as are not immediate worſhip in the third: (for I referre oathes and vowes to the ſecond, which I deſire wiſe readers to thinke of,) or the ſet day of our worſhip, upon one day of ſeven (ſince the eight day was turned into Gods day, or the Chriſtian Sabbath) and that in the fourth. Or elſe our neigbbour and our ſelves in the other ſix; Subjection to all Superioritie in the fifth: Maintaining his precious life (as being better than all that follow) in the ſixth: Of his Chaſtity in the ſeventh: His Eſtate in the eight: His Name in the ninth: The tenth, forbidding not onely that concupiſcence which reaches to the detriment of our neighbour, but under that (as moſt ſenſible to us) all that wicked propenſion and bent of nature (before actuall ſinne) whereby originally we are prone to all unjuſtice, and impiety, and intemperance. Concerning which, as having ſaid enough in the ſecond Article of Converſation, and it being no part of my purpoſe to repeat what hath beene written by ſo many learned and faithfull writers: I omit to ſay any more, onely contenting my selfe to lay downe some briefe rules how the Law is to be conceived, the Minister of Christ for righteousnesse; and so to conclude the Article with briefe uses.

Q. Mention then some of those Rules.

2 Rules of Direction. The first.

A. First, that all the Lawes of Christ must be understood to be of another manner of force and authority than the lawes of men, even the greatest: for they are limited with exceptions in all kindes, and doe but reach to the outward man, and penalties thereof. But these doe reach to the conscience, and they bind the inner-man: God, whom we have to doe with, seeing the soule (in her utmost retirednesse) as a thing naked, Heb. 4. 12. and his word being pure as himselfe, and piercing betweene the joynts and marrow, Heb. 4. 12. and therefore there hee sets up his Throne, and there is no evasion from him.

Heb. 4. 13.

The second.

Secondly, Let us know that his Commands are not idle things and arbitrary, which we may obey at our curtesie; or if not, yet God is as a weake King for whom his Subjects are too strong, Ioab and Abishai for David; but reall Lawes from an authority that both knowes offenders, and can punish them; yea which accurseth all transgressours, and will not hold them guiltlesse: Heb. 12. ult, a consuming fire, as the manner of his uttering them Exod. 20. in earthquakes and thunder shewed; and therefore bee wee afraid to provoke him: and yet he is a God able to gratifie his obedient ones in ample manner, even to a thousand generations: and its not to bee neglected that both kind of sanctions are expressed in so short a view: viz. in the second third, and fifth Commands.

Heb. 12. ult. Exodus 20.

The third. Iam. 12, 11.

Thirdly, Observe, that the Commands of the second Table, are the Edicts of the same God whose the first are, Iam. 12. 11. and therefore in which the Lord takes himselfe as truely either honoured or not, as the first: which I speake least any should cavill and thinke, 1 Sam. 2. 25. (If man sinne against man, a man may judge: but if against the Lord, who shall entreat?) to be meant of morall offences. No, but onely of common discourtesies or breaches, which are in mens power to release. For even those sinnes of Elies sonnes were against women: and yet hee tels them, the Lord tooke them as against himselfe. So that although men bee the object of the second Table, yet not the last object into which the morall offence is carried; and therefore it is not in mans power to release any more of it it than his owne dammage, the reſt the Lord onely can remit: as the ſinne is of equall guilt, ſo the forgiver muſt bee of equall power.

Fourthly, The Law muſt be alwayes underſtood according to the ſcope, even as every other part of the Word, as promiſes and threats. Wee muſt not reſt in the bare letter, and ſo deſtroy the life and ſpirit of the Law. How ſhould ten words include all our converſation, except the letter of the Law be enlarged to the meaning of the Law-giver? The Law then reſts in the true intent of it: Therefore, as for all, Phariſaicall, licentious, or prophane wretches: who doe limit this Law, and acknowledge no more than ſerves for their purpoſes, chopping and changing (as Papiſts, who leave out the ſecond Commandement quite, and make up ten by making two of the laſt) let us abhorre it. Let us abhorre both their enlarging of duties beyond the Law, and where God hath made no ſinnes, there making ſinnes, and where he makes no Lawes, making them to binde the Conſcience, urging them more ſeverely than faith and repentance. Oh! it is moſt intollerable! And ſo their ſhortning of them, and cutting them off by the middle, making them reach no further than the notorious evils of them: But let this bee our rule, that looke what God aymes at under the groſſeſt, let us alſo ayme at, and both abhorre each appearance of evill as well as the moſt odious, and cleaving to good in the leaſt as well as the greateſt. Hee that breakes the leaſt, Mat. 5. 19. ſhall be the leaſt in heaven; and is guiltie of the greateſt. If the ſcope of the ſecond Commandement be (next to the worſhip it ſelfe) to provide for the puritie of it, any will-worſhip ſhould be to us as an Idoll: and all rebellion, as witch-craft. 1 Sam. 15. 23. The fourth. Mat. 5. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 23.

Fiftly, Wee muſt conceive the Commandements as importing no patcht or peeced obedience to one or a few charges, but an entire and whole one: as the coagmentation of the Lawes of both Tables doth import. Let us alway conceive the ſcope of the Law to require integrity; and all partiall ſervice to be a forfeit to the whole Law: and bee farre from ſuch hypocrites and Civilians, of whom the one colours his unrighteouſneſſe by his pretenſed devotion (which men cannot controll) the other, their impiety and prophanenes of their hearts, by the outward civility in ſome of the Commandements of the ſecond Table: both in truth breaking both. The fifth.

Sixtly,

The sixth. Sixtly, The Lawes of the former Table are generally to bee preferred to the duties of the second: yet with an exception, that we conceive the rule upon equall tearmes: thus, that the commands of the first ranke in the former table have precedency over the second, not each branch of the former above the second in their first ranke. It is generally more excellent that GOD have his due than man: but not particularly, for the neglect or contempt of a Sermon are not fouler sins than the murther of a man.

The seventh. Seventhly, Vnderstand the Commandements to require at our hands the utmost of our wit, device and courage to serve God, that if wee bee beaten off in one kind, yet we desist not, till we see that we bee denied altogether. Else, to take any occasion of perill, (perhaps supposed onely) to neglect dutie, is, to discharge our selves of service, ere God doth.

The eigth. Eightly, let us observe, the Commandements of God never crosse each other: if any such case occurre as wherein one cannot stand with the other, let us know the one must alway yeeld to the other, as if the child bee set about his Fathers lawfull businesse, he may not at the same time neglect his Calling, though to a religious end, as to heare the Word &c. except the parent release him: the prerogative of the first Table above the second, notwithstanding. It is wisedome to discerne it.

The ninth. Lastly, Let us note this, that duties of necessitie and mercy, which cannot bee otherwise done, are to be preferred to duties of piety, at that season: as that the Physitian doe attend the patient, that wee help the Oxe out of the ditch, rather than worship God first, and suffer these to despaire the whilest: Obedience in such cases is better than sacrifice: and the omission of a dutie is no contempt with God. But I cease to mention any more.

Q. Conclude then the Article with some Uses.

Vse. 1. A. First, this Doctrine teacheth us to abhorre the audaciousnesse of Popish and hereticall or schismaticall ones, as, forgetting this scope of God in establishing one eternall, immutable, and pure Rule of righteousnesse dare take upon them to curtoll this Law of God, and to diminish it, cutting off the second and tenth Commands: Also (like the Pharisees) by their Corban of their Catholike cause, or their Popes transcendency, or for their pompe and kitchin, to disanull the Lawes of God at their pleasure, pleasure, as in point of Divorce; dispensing with the Censure of Christ: making Lawes and unmaking them, Crowning & Dethroning them at their pleasure: and finally, for gaine and bribes, prostituting the sacred Ordinances of Baptisme, Preaching, the Supper: making marriage degrees reach as farre as they please; and in a thousand other things, sitting as God in the midst of his Temple, and appointing Lawes, or cancelling them, as they make for or against their owne ends. So that if they may prevaile, not the Morall Law, but their Commands must be our Rules. Also, It strongly confutes all enemies to the Law of God, either old Atheisticall Antinomists, or late Libertines and carnall hypocrites. Its no wonder, that they are so rife in these dayes of loosenesse; for even our Saviour did touch upon such, Mat. 5. 17. and the Apostle writes few Epistles, but hee meetes with such turners of the grace of God into wantonnesse; men of corrupt mindes: and Peter writes that many abused the Epistles of Paul to their owne destruction, 2. Epist. 3. 16. It is no wonder; if theeves might have their will, they would suffer no watches to be kept: or that deformed women lothe or breake all true Glasses. Let us so much the rather abhorre them, as odious enemies to God, and under pretext of the Law of liberty walke as lawlesse libertines, and overthrow the Law of Conversation.

Mat. 5. 17.

2 Pet. 3. 16.

Secondly, Let us consider how dangerous a thing it is to worship God according to our owne fancies and inventions: The Lord, we see, will not trust his owne Family of Beleevers with prescribing of Lawes to themselves, under colour of their faithfulnesse, It was a good speech of old, They are the best Lawes which give least power to the Iudge. God will have no Iudge to be his Chancellor, to make or interpret, or change Lawes; he knowes our boldnesse and Sacriledge in this kind. Nay, he knowes that curiosity of our braines, which being weary of his Lawes, devise new, and love their owne better than his: and so in time justle out the Lords with our owne. And as wee can open our mouthes against Papists in this kind, so let us hate them in the roote, and cast out of our selves all such selfe and selfe-love as under a colour of reteyning Gods Lawes, yet seeke a breadth of our owne in his narrow, and make his Lawes our owne, through our bad mixtures. This is the sinne of hypocrites and time-servers; let us (if we be ignorant) study this Law of God duely, and when we see his will (which is as the decree of Medes and Persians) let us not descant upon it, and nibble at it as a fish at the bayte being fearefull of the hooke: striving by the rottennesse of our deceived heart to bring Gods Lawes to the bent of our owne bowes, and corrupt them in the simplicity of them.

There is little oddes betweene the carnall wil-worship of them that thrust upon the Lord, their owne: and the spirituall wil-worship of them that take away from him, his. Thus did Balaam, Num. 22:12. whom the Lord at first told plainely he should not goe with Balacks servants: but that answer not pleasing him, loe, how hee goes betweene barke and tree: causing them to stay a night longer, vers. 19. What was this but to make the Lords charge a nose of waxe? Was it possible the Law of righteousnesse could stoope to a Law of covetousnesse? Beware we of this hypocrisie, least while we dally with God, when we know it, the Lord suffer us to dash out our owne light, and lay offences in our way, and leave us to our selves, that as he when he would needes goe with them, and fetch inchantments from place to place, yet being dazeled and besotted with his owne lust, should not know himselfe to be an hypocrite, nor be capable of conviction; what is more terrible than to heare such an hypocrite make himselfe beleeve, that if Baluck would give him an house full of gold, hee would not goe one inch from this charge? or when he smote, and answered his dumbe Asse (in the depth of his lethargie) yet to say, If thou be displeased I will returne? See vers. 29.34. As wee would avoyde such a plague, so let us beware of such hypocrisie.

Num. 23. 12. Vers. 19. Vers. 29.34.

Vse 3. Thirdly, If the Law be the director of our Conversation: let it be use of exhortation to all Gods people to embrance it, and to submit to this scepter of Christ, to establish his law in our soules and to lift up him in the honour of our hearts, who hath honoured us with this royall Law to be our direction. Let us desire information in it: let us beware least we shrugge at the naked, inward, and spirituall truths of it, as afraid to know that which wee are lother to obey: but let us concurre with him, and say, Lord, thy Scepter is a Scepter of righteousnesse, Heb. 1.8. I desire no obedience over or under, against or beside thy Lawes; I count that no sinne which thou never forbaddest, nor dutie which thou never requiredst: but esteeme thy sacred will my rule of righteousnesse. It is one maine peece of the trade of an honest heart to search out the Lawes of the Lord Iesus, that it might obey bey. Many teachable hearts who would faine obey, yet faile in knowledge; and many that have knowledge, faile in a good heart: the latter is worst, yet makes not the former excusable. The Iewes in the point of the Law were so curious that they knew how many words were in Moses his bookes. They wrote these ten words upon parchment phylacteries (that is, preservatives) and pind them to their sleeves, fringes and frontlets, in reverence. If they did so (who for the most part little gained thereby, but sinned, with their parchments about them) what should we, doe whom the Lord Iesus hath made them easie yokes unto, and a light burthen? If they did so, who yet in their so doing, looked for an erroneous justification by them, and were but meere slaves, loosing their rewards, what should our zeale be, who know our selves to be free from this bondage, and to obey with assurance of heaven?

Heb. 1.8.

Oh! let us not be worse than good common-wealth-men! Wee shall see (perhaps) in a great Towne, some one among fortie households buy the Statutes of the Land, and verse them well over, and be able to tell their neighbours what is Law and what not; and these are counted men of good use among ignorant ones. But how would God esteeme us for good subjects, if these Lawes of his Kingdome were well conned? If (as we teach our children to say them, so) we our selves understood them. If the Lord would so honour his royall law, that he would have the King himselfe who made lawes to their subjects, yet to be learners of his Lawes: and not to suffer his to depart from them in the government of others: how farre greater cause have meane persons to carry it with them into each part of their owne conversation, and to rise up, walke into the trade of their life, lye downe with it? It is reported by Master Fox of one Grew, a Sea-man, that being in ship-wracke, and having cast all his tacklings and wares, and five pounds of money into the Sea, hee kept his New Testament about his necke, so swimming upon his broken Mast, and after foure dayes (all his company being drowned) yet hee was at length by passengers discovered and taken up, all frozen, numb'd and starv'd; but yet his Booke he held close to him. If we in the ship-wrackes of this world, would keepe our soules from wracke, what course should wee take? Surely keepe this Law to us close, and not suffer it to depart from us: loose money, wares, ship and all, ere we forgoe, that, least we loose our conscience, and disorder our conversation. And in all our doubtfull cases, whether vowes, oaths, marriages, dealings with men, entercourse with God, or any difficulty, goe to the Law and testimony, Esay 8.20. for resolution. If our owne skill serve not to finde out the will of God, then let us goe to the Priest, whose lips should preserve knowledge and by that rule proceed? Many will doe so, but either they desire to mis-informe the Minister, that they may pervert the judgement; or else first vow, and then enquire, Pro. 20.25. both which are odious. But let us for ever count the Law as an Oracle from heaven, being glad that the Lord hath found out a way to cast the wavering scale, and to direct our conversation.

Pro. 20.25.

Use 4. Fourthly, And lastly (becaus before in the second Article, in the life of faith in duties, I promised here to insert it) let all that finde themselves to come short of this platforme, I say, let them live the life of faith in duties: And to this end and purpose, let us first apprehend and digest well, what the soveraignitie of a Law, and the tye of obedience from God to the Creature meanes. They that know a Command shall feare it. Wee carry about us the wofull scarre of Adams breaking onely a Positive Command: we thinke the penaltie was hard; but we consider not what an insolency it is for dust and wormes meat to dare venture upon so sovereigne a barre as a Command of God, or to despise a threat of his mouth. Feare not him who when he hath kild the body, can goe no further: But him feare, whose will is righteousnesse, and whose power is revenge: yea, who can cast both body and soule into hell: I say unto you, him feare. It is not amisse that our base hearts be taught by presidents of others, how to feare a Command. The Lord would needes try Saul by two Commands, neither of them of the most morall nature. One was, to stay for Samuel ere he durst venture to sacrifice before the battell. There were great colours for his transgression, for Samuel kept not his day, the Philistimes were readie to cut his throate, his Souldiers went all away from him, and they were unarmed: He also was a King; But what came of his disobedience? He lost his Kingdome for it without excuse. So againe, The Lord tryes him with another Command, Goe, slay Amaleck, all, man & beast. There wanted not colors of disobeying, even from pittie and spoyle of the fat creatures which might serve for use. So Achans sinne against the Charge of Iericho. But the

the one was stript of his Crowne, the other of the life of him and his, Vzza's example is also notable: But O man, stop thy mouth with the sovereigntie of a Command: Looke not at the smallnesse of the Charge, but the sovereigntie, the greatnesse, the righteousnesse of the Commander.

Gods people are taught obedience from their youth up, both to doe and suffer, without cavils, distinctions, or exceptions. The first lesson they learned in the Schoole of Christ, was selfe-denialls, and taked obeying the Promise. That obedience to Christ hath taught them obedience to God the Father; Christ hath made their yoke easie, and burthen light: So that now they delight in the Law, being made Christs Law. There is a carnall vertue in Popish government, that the Iesuites by the Authoritie of their Iesus, will obtaine of their novices any obedience, even to murthering of Princes, and the losse of their owne lives. And thinke wee that the Truth it selfe as it is according to Iesus, cannot effect it much more? Can any thing seeme hard to that soule to doe, or suffer for Christ, who hath received salvation from him? Will any streight or difficultie seeme tedious to him? Therefore let all who have broken through the bryers of the main Command and Promise, (Believe, and thou shalt be saved: Come and I will ease you:) learne to proceed to all Commands of obedience also; and beware of Cavilling. That yong man who went away so heavily from Christ, had never overcome himselfe. But who so hath kissed the Sonne, and sworn allegeance to him, hath set him up as Lord and King in his soule, to beare sway at his will: That as before his lustes, so now his Lord Iesus may sway him. And this sweetnesse allayes all the harshnesse, difficultie, and burthen of his Commands. Now the Commands of God, are the Commands of a Father, and of a friend, not a Iudge and enemy. Now the soule studies his Commands: desires to be informed in all of them, the hardest as the easiest: the more it knowes, the more it may: would have no Command of God hidden from it selfe: seekes knowledge with an heart to obey: looses all cavils of reason, and lying vanities of the flesh, in the Command: If God have a tongue, he hath an eare, yea, a bored eare, Speake Lord, for thy servant heareth. Yea, the voyce of God in the poorest Creature is forcible, (not only in an Angell) much more the meanest Minister, Christian, inferiour, be hee never so poore, yea my wife, childe, servant, and all inferi-tie is cast (now) upon the promise: The Lord can make good all losse, trouble, an hundred-fold. Abraham having beleeved the promise, could not onely change his Country, but kill his sonne at a Command: And Calebs faith could turne the feares of his fellow Spyes into an encouragement. Yea a childe of God, where hee meets with a Command which concurres with his owne streame, as to follow his calling, to preach, &c. (whereto he findes gaine and credit annexed) rests not till he can say, This Command I obey, not for outward respects but for conscience: I would chuse a Calling, I would preach, though neither gaine nor credit were present. This is a sweet signe.

Use.5. Fifthly, This convinces all hypocrites obedience to the Law. Alas! Its no Direction for their lives, they looke at the Law still as a whip and bondage. They dare not suffer themselves to be informed of the Law: when they cannot resist it, yet they are not convinced in Conscience: They thinke it bootlesse to obey, Esay 58. *Mal.*3. They wish the Law were according to their owne scantling, or else were not at all. Hence all their life is nothing but a study to interpret the Lawes of God with favour to their owne corruptions; They fret at all such as obey better than themselves, hating them deadly for their precisenesse: because they reproove their course. They consult with their owne Oracle, selfe, ease, wit, will, credit, lusts, formall Religion: if there be ought in Gods Commands which crosseth these, they beare it downe. If they yeeld in generall, yet when the occasion is offered in speciall, they rebell. Their trade is a nibling from one Command or other, till they have overthrowne the very power and authoritie of the Commander, & put him under the foot-stoole of their lusts: And when all their trickes and colours are washt off, yet with Saul, they returne to their principle, and conclude themselves hypocrites, Honour me before the people. Yea, when they are put to it closely, if lyes will not serve, is to say, We know not this to be Gods will, if we did we would do it: yet if there be no remedie, they professe themselves openly, The Jere.44.16. Word of the Lord spoken by thee, wee will not doe it, as they in Jeremy tolde him. In all these, they shew apparantly, that they are not freed from the guilt and condemnation of the Law, but lye still under it: for else, they would count it as a Law sweetned, qualified, and framed according to their inner man. Alas! he that lookes at the Law as commanded with terror and tyranny, flyes from it in much the more. Onely hee that beholds it as a Law of Grace, a

Testimony

Testimony of love for love, under hope of acceptance & covering of all faylings: he will venture himselfe, and put forth all his courage and strength to give the Lord content. It is no motive to any, save them that know God a tender Father, to consider, That God is a consuming fire. The sence of mercy only causes the sence of Power in God, to be effectuall. Else, it workes a desperatenesse in the soule, to take it owne ease for a while, and have a Paradise here at least, though hell after.

Lastly, Let this teach us to live by faith, for Abilitie in Christ to all performances: trust we God upon a promise for each part of this course, to God, men, our selves; in solitarinesse, company, calling, in Sabbaths, subjection to superiours, and common life. Say thus, Lord, these duties are above me, I can doe nothing to purpose; Enable me to doe as thou biddest, and bid what thou wilt: else the number and weight of them will tyre and clog me. Thou hast eased me, oh Lord, of the burthen of Moses; but still (even in my liberty from Christ) I carry old Adams burthen about me: therefore write these thy Lawes in my heart, I beseech thee. If all that thus speake at Church when the Law is read, prayed in faith, how happy were they? Say thus, and plead, Is it not thy promise Lord? where is it then? where is the Lord God of Elia? where is an humble heart? where is meeknesse, love to the distressed, service of the time, providence without covetousnesse, bountie without wasting, wisedome without subtiltie, simplicitie without foolishnesse, vertue without extremities? Lord fetch life for me from the fountaine of duties; from him who never failed in duties, never did any without knowledge, never faulted either in over-doing or under-doing, neither in the pureness of manner, nor fulness of measure, nor uprightnesse of ayme; who fulfilled all righteousnesse and obeyed upon earth better than Angels or Saints in heaven: looke upon me in my loggish unchearefull spirit, in my crazie limbs, lame joynts, feet le hands, nay rustie tooles: and revive my heart within, and scoure up my weapons without, That I may delight in the Law in my inner man; and that I may run thy Commandements with chearefulnesse. And this also for this third Article may be sufficient. Vse.6.

The fourth Article.

Qu. What is the fourth Article of this third part?

The Lord hath given helpes to his Church, to uphold her in obedience.

A. THat the most wise and loving God, foreseeing how manifold and large a Conversation of duties his Church is to walke in, hath sutably ordained helpes and meanes for her better upholding and growth therein, till she be perfect in her measure. Reade 2 Pet. 1. 3. Ephes. 4. 11. Mat. ult. ult. Joh. 14. 26. 1 Cor. 12. 4. 5. 6. 7. In which Scriptures we have all the order of this provision of God, and that in foure degrees. First, In our outward ordinances themselves, as preaching, receiving Sacraments, &c. Secondly, The instruments or lively Organes serving to minister therin, as Pastors, Teachers, Ministers of the Gospell. Thirdly Gifts and Administrations vouchsafed unto them for the better dispensing and officiating those services. Fourthly, The Spirit of God to assist and enable them to all these performances. So that the Lord is no hard Master to his people and Church, but tendereth it most fatherly, and is not wanting thereto in any furniture, which any one member thereof needeth for the building of her up in grace.

In 4. things

The Lord is no hard Task-Master

The Lord is not as Pharaoh, who tyrannously exacted the same tale of his Bricke when the Israelites wanted Straw, as when they had. But rather deales with us with his people in their passage from Egypt to Canaan: as he would bring them by the way of the Wildernesse farre about and difficult; so hee stucke close to them in their travell. He brought them by his Angell of the Covenant both into that desart through the Red-Sea, as it were their baptisme of initiation: thence hee led them as sheepe, Esa. 63. 11. by Moses and Aaron his guides: hee went with his two Pillars (as it were Law and Gospell) before them day and night; he prepared each place of their pitching a new upon their former remove, in 42. of their periods (which resembles the going out and in by his Spirit with his Church:) he gave them his Manna from Heaven, and the rocke gushing forth miraculously with waters (as his two Sacraments now to us, for so Paul expounds them) he did in a word spread them a Table (in the wildernesse) of Quailes a great depth about the Hoſt (noting the choiſe dainties of his Table) and by ſundry miraculous courſes annexed to his other directions, as deliverances, croſſes, patience (ſuitable to his wayes of government to us) hee did convey them at length into the land of promiſe. So doth he now in ſpirituall manner: ſo that it is not for nothing that Paul doth ſo punctually apply them, and our Saviour toucheth upon them; See 1 Cor. 10. 1. 2. 3. Ioh. 6. 31. And great cauſe, for he is the Alpha, and Omega, the beginner and perfecter of our Sanctification. Heb. 12. 2. Phil. 2. 13. 2 Cor. 6. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2. Ioh. 6. 31. Heb. 12. 2. Phil. 2. 13.

Q. Is God tyed to theſe abſolutely?

A. It is not for us to meddle with his ſecrets, Deut. 29. 29. Revealed things are for us: what hee can doe by an extraordinary power, where theſe helpes are denied, we leave to himſelfe, but in ordinary courſe we ſay, that the Lord doth tye himſelfe to his owne way of working, that ſo we may know where to have him: and hee doth in like ſort tye us (in the matter of our calling and building up) to theſe meanes, that we might not vaniſh in other wayes or deviſes of our owne. And we ſhall note it, that in ſome texts the holy Ghoſt doth purpoſely joyne theſe with the Spirit it ſelfe, when he ſpeakes of the neceſſity of ſalvation. As in Iohn 3. Except a man be borne againe of water, and the Spirit, he cannot enter. And Marke 16. Hee that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved: not excluding all unbaptized ones, nor including water equally with the Spirit, but to awe our ſpirits to an holy ſeeking God in and by them, and deterring of us from contempt, when they may be had. God is not tyed to his Law. Deut. 29. 29.

Q. Doth he exclude all other wayes to walke by?

A. Not all other wayes of profiting; but all other wayes of revealing himſelfe.

Q. What other wayes doth he exclude?

A. All wayes of mans deviſing, whereof Popery is full at this day, by Maſſes, Images, Crucifixes, other baſe and carnall devotions of our owne fancy and ſpirit, and Anabaptiſts as ſectaries doe invent, both Miniſters, doctrines, dreames and Revelations of their owne.

Q. What other wayes of profitting doth he admit?

A. Any ſecret adminiſtrations by his workes of providence may be bleſſed to the elect, as Gods patience, benefits, croſſes, examples, preventions and intimations to our conſcience: Difference betweene the way of Ordinances, and of Adminiſtrations.

conſcience; but how? with, and under the word, not elſe: except they attend and follow the ordinances, there is no wiſedome in them, Eſay 8. becauſe he hath made no promiſe unto them. They are but as Witches whiſperings under the earth, and have no lively voyce without the Word; they are ſanctified by a word, or no way, and ſo they may be coadjutors to the word, and help forward the worke: we ſee little good done till God afflict; yet nevertheleſſe croſſes are not cauſes but effects of working.

Q. But of what nature are they now; are they as thoſe ancient revealings of God were to his Church in the manner thereof? Or if not, then why doe they differ?

Difference betweene Gods old manner of Revealing and his New

A. They doe wholly differ from them: I meane from thoſe immediate revealings of God to the old Fathers and Church, as by the Prieſts Vrim or Ephod, Prophets, dreames, viſions, fire from heaven, Cloud filling Temple, ſacrifices, or the like miraculous courſes, Heb. 1.1.2. Now the Lord onely ſpeakes by his ſonne; and that by no ſuch immediate way, but mediate onely. He avoideth any courſes which tend to any viſible, audible, or ſenſible preſence, ſight, or voice of God himſelfe; nay abhorres ſo much as reſemblances of ſhapes, which now are common in Popery, as by the ſhape of an old man, a Rood, or a Dove: and now hee onely treates with his Church at a diſtance and abſence, even as if a Prince ſhould make love to a Lady, not by any preſence or going to her (face to face) but by ſpokeſmen or Embaſſadours: and ſo winne her love, or by love-letters, tokens, and his picture ſent to her.

Queſt. Anſw.

Q. But is not this courſe to our Detriment:

A. No: for as the way is more obſcure to the eye, ſo it is more open to the ſoule by the miniſtry of the Spirit of God. For as thoſe former dealings of God, although they were fit to convince the ſences of ignorant and blind ones, yet were but weake in the concurrence of the Spirit (as appeares by that infinite ſottiſhneſſe and infidelity of ſuch as had them) ſo now the Lord doth ſupply the darkeneſſe of theſe by the powerfull preſence of his grace; as the phraſe imports, Heb 1.2. But now by his Sonne, that is, there is more of the Lords revealing in theſe, than was in all theirs at the beſt.

The number of Ordinances.

Q. What ſore hath he given us of theſe.

A. Hee is neither abounding in ſuperfluous ones for a pompe and Popiſh ſtate, nor yet wanting in neceſſary ones, as appears by this; hee hath not given us any more wayes than Covenant and ſeale: and no more of the former than which might call us to Chriſt (as the Law and Goſpell) and hold us in him; nor more ſeales than two, one Chriſt to be ſeed and food: none but ordinary for common, and extraordinary for ſpeciall uſe: and in a word, as he is ſparie in clogging, ſo yet plentifull in providing varietie for us, becauſe he knowes we need as well in private as in publike: and being ſoone weary of either, we had need of varietie to keepe us occupied with delight, without wearineſſe.

as

Q. Are all theſe equall in excellency? The Meanes differ in their excellency.

A. No: as the Lord hath planted ſuch a light in the Sunne, as gives light to all inferiour Planets: ſo hath he given to the Miniſtry of the Word an eminency above the reſt; ſo that therefrom (as the begetter of faith and grace) doth iſſue all ability and ſtrength to other ordinances. The Moone may helpe a traveller when the Sunne is abſent, yet ſhee hath but a borrowed light therefrom. So have other ordinances of the Sacraments, prayer, conference, and the like, their foyſon from the Word preached, which I ſpeake not to diminiſh the reſt: for all have their ſpeciall uſe, and each of them with the Word are above it onely: the Sacraments in their ſealing propertie, and private duties in their peculiar familiaritie; although if compariſon be made, the Word preached hath the preheminence, Rom. 10.14.

Q. What uſes ſerve theſe for?

A. As I ſaid, for the building up and preparing the ſoule for every good worke, and the perfecting of Sanctification in the feare of the Lord, 2 Cor 6.1. 2 *Cor.*6.1.

Q. I would heare them named and diſtinguiſhed.

A. It is not the purpoſe of this view to make common places of any thing: which as many others have excellently performed, (the ſeven Treatiſes eſpecially:) ſo to omit them, I deſire my reading Auditors to review thoſe ſeverall Scriptures, upon which all theſe have beene at large handled: as the Doctrine of Faſting, upon *Mat.*6.6. of publike thankeſgiving, upon *Lam.*3.23. of hearing aright, upon Eſay 55.3. of the Sacraments, upon 1 *Pet.*3.21. (by the way) and large upon 1 *Cor.*11.28. of experience upon Lam. 3.27. of watchfulneſſe, *Matth.*24.42. And ſo of Communion and Aſſembling, Pſal. 133. and *Heb.*10.25. To give even a little little taste of those Sermons would fill the booke, (which is now much fuller than I meant, yet for the desire of your good, somewhat of five or sixe of the chiefe I will say, of their nature and use in helping to godlinesse. And first to distinguish them: They are either private or publike, and both these sorts are equally, either ordinary or extraordinary: Begin wee with the latter, and they are: either fasting or thankesgiving.

Q. What is Fasting?

The briefe names and definings of them.

1. Fasting what?

A. A solemne ordinance of God, attended with rest and abstinence, wherein the Church lawfully assembled to heare and pray, doth powre out her soule in selfe-affliction and supplication with importunity for the turning away of some great present or imminent sin and danger.

Q. And what is Thankesgiving?

2. Thankesgiving, what?

A. A solemne ordinance of God, wherein the Church lawfully assembled, powres out her selfe in prayses and thankes for some rare blessings and deliverances. And let this also bee understood of private in both extraordinary kindes, termes being observed.

Q. And what are the publike ordinary?

A. The Word read and preached, with prayer, and the administration of Baptisme and the Supper.

Q. What are the private ordinary?

A. Prayer, family duties, reading the Word, meditation, conference and the like.

Q. What is the word preached?

3. The Word preached.

A. It is a publike eminent ordinance, wherein the Minister lawfully deputed, doth distinctly and soundly read the Word, give the sence, ground the Doctrine, and convincingly apply it by instruction, reproofe, confutation, exhortation, and admonition.

Q. What is the Sacrament of Baptisme?

4. Baptisme.

A. The former Sacrament of the New Testament, wherein by due application of water to the infant all Christ is sealed up to the soule for regeneration.

Q. What is the Sacrament of the Supper?

5. The Supper.

A. The second in order, in which by due giving and receiving of bread and wine, the Lord Iesus is wholly given and taken by the beleeving soule, to be nourished to eternall life.

Q. What is private Prayer?

A. A

A. A lifting up of the heart to God in the name of Ieſus Chriſt, in confeſſion and ſupplication for the pardon of ſinne, the granting of all good things, and acknowledging of mercies already received with thankfulnes. 6. Prayer.

Q. What is Meditation?

A. A ſerious reviving of thoſe truths we have heard, or the adminiſtrations of God towards us or others, that both mind and heart being ſeaſoned with the ſavour thereof, we may bee furthered thereby to duty. 7. Meditation

Q. What is Conference?

A. A wiſe and loving laying together (by two or more) of ſuch things as concerne the glory of God and our ſpirituall edifying for mutuall information and quickning: I ayme in theſe deſcriptions rather at the good than the humor and conceit of my Reader, and that by way of digreſſion: and by theſe let the reſt be aymed at. 8 Conference

Q. Now that which you muſt ayme at, being to ſhew how all theſe make for the growth of the ſoule in godlineſſe: let me heare you treat of it in particular, How may they be thus uſed?

A. I will give a view of ſome of the chiefe, and ſo haſten to end with uſe. Firſt, For that of hearing the Word, bee ſure thou haſt true right to the bleſſing of it: This Article of the meanes belongs onely to the new creature, to further him in his courſe: elſe the Word cannot build thee, except firſt it have begot thee. See 1 Pet. 2. 3. If yee have taſted how gracious the Lord is, then come to the word to grow by it: Elſe it will poyſon thee, if thou be impure, nothing is pure. Epheſ. 4. 22. 23. If yee have knowne the truth, as it is in Ieſus Chriſt, then come and put off, &c. A taſte of all theſe in particular and of their uſe for the helping of a godly courſe.

1 The Word preached. Sundry rules.

Rule 1.

Rule 2. Rules of hearing.

Secondly, Prize and covet it. Prize it, as that Word which hath beene the ſeed of immortalitie and glory unto thee. It will bee no hard worke to prize it, if thou have found it ſo (in the former) unto thee. For this experience will ſend thee to the Word with all reverence and eſteeme, ſaying, Where ſhall I find ſuch treaſure as here? It is my life and the food thereof: no Market can afford that ware that the Word offereth: if thy heart be not loſt in profits and pleaſures, froth and eaſe, but prizeth above all things the grace of an holy converſation, ſurely that word will be precious that directs to it. This made David thinke himſelfe in a ſtore-houſe and treaſury, when hee came to the word, becauſe cauſe it ſerved to order all his matters. Now if it be precious it will be coveted, hungred after, attended with all heed, yea

1 Pet. 2. 2. fnacht with violence, as precious things are, 1 Pet. 2. 2. Covet and eagerly tugge at the Word, as the child at the breſt. Sleepe not, wander not, gaze not, but attend the Gates and Poſtes of Wiſedome and Vnderſtanding, if thou lookeſt they ſhould preſerve thee.

3. Rule Thirdly, Come from an holy courſe and practiſe when thou commeſt to heare: Come not from thine owne courſe of wrath,
1 Pet. 2. 1. world, ſelfe: purge theſe firſt, 1 Pet. 2. 1. and ſo come. Repent of all old ſinnes, of hearing: thy triflings and dallyings with the word, thy baſe mixtures, and come from a good courſe, and ſo the Word ſhall ſend thee backe to it with more ſtrength and grace than thou cameſt. Who is he that eates the ſavorieſt meale? The idle and ſluggiſh one? No, the ſtrong labourer, toyled and worne with worke: he feeds hard, and goes to his worke better than he came from it. To him that hath ſhall be given.

Rule 4. Fourthly, Deny thy ſelfe, and thy owne wiſedome, partialities, prejudices of man, of gifts, of ordinances; if the Lord will have the Miniſter forget all his owne for Gods ends, and for evidence of conviction: how much more thou? Oh! come without thy ſelfe, and ſay, Speake LORD for thy ſervant heareth; Incline mine eare to heare and to bee meeke, teachable, ſimple, (as the Eſay 55 4. babe) Eſay 55. 4. and remember if the Lord have given thee all to be thine, Cephas, Paul, Apollos, doe not thou ſay only one is thine: Set the Lord above man, gifts, and thy owne depth: Bee a foole that thou mayeſt be wiſe.

Rule 5. Fiftly, Beleeve God: 1. That in his word this direction to ſee See and ponder Mic. 2. 7. the end. life is to be found, ſearch the Scriptures, Joh. 5. for therein yee looke to have eternall life: let nothing come betweene thee and it: and lot upon it as thy portion, for thy uſe, againſt thy lets. Secondly, That he can guide his Word peculiarly to doe thee good, and ſpeake to thy ſoule, though thou bee but one of many hearers. The Lord Ieſus that great Steward of Gods proviſions hath given in charge to his ſteward, Luk. 12. 42. to give thee thy portion, whether weake or ſtrong, milke or meate, correction and inſtruction, for croſſes or bleſſings: be thy need what it will, hee will find out for every member of his houſhold. Thirdly, mixe the word with faith, beleeve it, obey it, feare it, ſee God true in it in all his promiſes, charges and threats: and ſtand readily to catch that part of it which is thine as the tradeſman ſtands ready with his mould to catch the molten mettall to frame his veſſell: looke not at other mens wants, but bring thy owne, that when any thing falls from God, thou maiſt catch it up for thy uſe. Be humble and tremble at it, Eſay 28. 7. and 66. 5. weaned from the breſts. Strive not ſo to catch at ſhaddowes, to bring away all, each pretty ſpeech, that thou forget to carry away thy owne due, which is ever the beſt part of the Sermon for thee. As he ſaid to his ſonnes, I leave you my Kingdom, but looke to find it to you as you are to it; ſo I ſay, come to the word with your wants, and mixe it with faith, and it ſhall bee ſo unto you. Eſay 28 7.

Laſtly, Depart from hearing as well apaid, well fed: keepe your charge, looſe it not in the ayre of the world, carry it with you into each part of the world, but let nothing rob yee of it: and ſo, (muſing of it after, applying it to occaſions which are many) and going to it againe, with reviewing that is paſt, wait ſtill for more, take forth a new leſſon daily, have an eare to heare where God hath a tongue to ſpeake, looſe not one under another, 2 Ioh. 8. and ſo ſanctifie all with prayer; and I ſee not, but (in ſpite of Satan) the hearing of the Word may eſpecially helpe thee on to an holy courſe. The 6. Rule.

Give alſo ſome directions about the Sacraments.

A. The former of them is Baptiſme. To omit all other, take theſe few notes about it. The ſecond Ordinance, Baptiſme.

Firſt, As it ſhould teach all that bring their infants to Baptiſme, to dedicate their children to God by prayer; ſo eſpecially, let all others (that ſolemnely attend the Sacrament there) recall to minde, how the Lord hath beene aforehand with them in like ſort, even hanging his badge upon them when they were cut off and knew it not; let them now being hearers of the Covenant, fetch from it the ſealing power of it, to aſſure their ſouls that the Lord meanes them well: beleeving that in this Laver the Lord Ieſus was conveyed to them, not onely for a matriculation into viſible Communion, but for effectuall calling them to bee the ſonnes and daughters of the Almightie: Let it by faith carry their fearefull weake hearts into the aſſurance of Gods Covenant, (that pardon and adoption is theirs, union and ingrafting is theirs) and that into the Baptiſme of the holy 1. Rule.

ly Ghoſt and fire, which is the new Creature, and the grace thereof.

Rule 2. And ſecondly, Let them hold the Lord ſure to them in this Covenant, by this ſeale, as a Corporation would hold their liberties by the Kings Broad Seale. And when the Devill fils thee with doubts about thy Converſion, the condition of faith, the beleeving in the promiſe, ſtrength to a godly life; flye to thy Baptiſme, as thy uttermoſt aſſurance; and ſay, If the Lord were found of an Infant that could not ſeeke him, and gave me his ſeale that he would ſave me, what will he doe now I ſeeke him faithfully? Can he now turne from me, who firſt ſought me? No except I deſpiſe his cognizance, and runne from him. When thou lookeſt upon his Raine-bow in the Clouds, thou feareſt no floud any more, but Baptiſme is better, 1 *Pet.*3.18. its Gods Arke, which by water, ſaves thee from periſhing by the waters of Gods wrath: reſt thy ſoule in an holy quiet and ſecure right and title to all which the Lord gives his Church in Chriſt, (of which Part 2. Artic. 5.) Remember that the Spirit by faith, doth as really dip and drench thy ſoule with his pure water, Eze. 36.25. to rinſe away thy guilt, blemiſh and curſe of ſin, and to quicken thee up to the life of the new Creature in righteouſneſſe: as by his Miniſters hand he dips thee into, and takes thee out of the water. Know that Gods Ordinances are no vain things: as Saint Iames of the Word, ſo I ſay of this Seale, Doth the ſcripture ſpeake in vaine? So, doth Baptiſme ſeale in vaine? No they are Tunnels (by faith) to powre into the ſoule regeneration.

1 *Pet.*3.18.

Iam.4.5.

Touching Infants, what God is able to bleſſe Baptiſme unto, in them, I ſay not: this I ſay, that as Baptiſme doth them no good by faith, ſo yet it ſettles upon the elect ones, the reals of Chriſt, Adoption and holineſſe, and the fruit of Election, though neither onely (ſeeing they may dye before it; nor neceſſarily, for they may enjoy it after,) but yet really, to ſo many as, or when as it ſeemes good to the Lord of it, to uſe it to that end: And let us beleeve that the poorer this Iordan is, in reſpect of that Popiſh Abana and Pharfar; the ſtronger ſhall bee the Spirit of GOD in it, to cauſe thy fleſh to returne as a little childes, that thou maiſt bee cleane. Marke then, if one great ſtop in a Chriſtians Converſation ſtands in diſtruſt about the truth truth of his eſtate in both parts of Gods Covenant, how can that which ſecureth the heart of it chooſe, but be a ſingular helpe to faith and godlineſſe?

Q. How is the Supper ſuch an helpe?

A. Thus; Firſt, The Soule knowing that God doth ſuſtaine her by the ſame whereby he begat her, doth, upon this Baptiſme received, with holy confidence goe to the Lord for her due nouriſhment by, and in him: Saying thus, Oh Lord, I am thine, ſave mee, Pſal. 119.94. Of thee I am, who art made unto me, not onely Righteouſneſſe, but ſanctification, with growth and encreaſe in it: I come therefore to pleade my right in all humilitie: If I had never come to birth, or to the light, I had ſo beene at an end; but ſeeing thou haſt not denied me the life of a child of thine, do not leave me to ſhift, but Lord bring me up at thy coſt, and let me have my portion from thy Table, and my daily bread from thy hand. And as a good Parent thinkes it little to keepe the life of his childe, that it ſterve not; but hee allowes all things for comfort, as well as neede, (if hee be able) that it may live, and proſper, and grow up, and be like in him, and enjoy what hee hath to give it when the due time is come; ſo, O Lord, deale thou, (much more) with thy ſervant in Grace, till Glory. My Baptiſme I already enjoy in the death and life of Chriſt, to make me thine; O Lord, let alſo his Bloud, Grace, and Spirit, runne in the veines of my Soule, to ſtrengthen me in the inner man with all long-ſuffering, and well-pleaſing, and joyfulneſſe; all grace of thy new Creature, let it be mine. As thou art in the Father, ſo let me be thine; as thou art Gods, let me be Chriſts; dwell thou in me, and let me dwell in thee by thy Spirit, and, grow uprighter, ſtronger, and holier while I have a day to live. Let thy Sacrament of the Supper nouriſh me alſo to eternall life.

The third ordinance. The Supper. Rule 1. Pſal. 119.94.

Secondly, Prepare thy ſoule to this feaſt of the mountaines Eſay 25. as oft as thou commeſt, (which muſt be oft, 1 Cor. 11. 29. 30.) and come not without thy feaſt Apparell. And let this be one Rule unto thee, Doe not catch up this Robe on the ſudden; but weare it daily betweene Sacrament and Sacrament. Thy Father is a King, who can beteeme and maintaine thee to weare thy beſt clothes each day of the weeke, and make thy Friday better than the poore mans Holiday. That faith in the Lord Ieſus thou walkeſt or wouldeſt come with to the Supper, live by it daily: Chriſt is the ſame in the promiſe, and the Seale. That Repentance thou walkeſt with to the Sacrament, practiſe it daily: better is a Souldier taken out of a Garriſon, than new preſt. That broken heart thou wouldeſt faine have in the ſearching and lamenting of thy ſinnes, nourish daily: hee that in a great froſt would keepe the yee thin, muſt keepe it broken every day: So thou, thy ſoule-iſſues, leſt thine heart harden. That deſire thou haſt after Chriſt Sacramentall, or wouldeſt nourish in the promiſe daily, nourish daily and each houre after him; elſe it will not be with thy ſoule as with thy body, that many hungry meales will make the next a glutton; but rather thy emptineſſe will make thee ſenſeleſſe of it. If thou wouldeſt not thinke it a burthen to doe thus, Oh how ſweet ſhould preparation to the Supper be to thee, which now is tedious!

Rule 3. Thirdly, Being thus come to the Supper, ſet thy faith on worke; ſay thus, I know no Devill in hell can ſever Ieſus Emmanuel, my meat and drinke, from the Elements; but his Word hath united them for ever. Why, oh my Soule, hath the Lord care of Bread and Wine? Or is it, that by Sacramentall union with them (as ſenſible) he might unite himſelfe with me ſpiritually and really in this Seale of his; that my impatient, worldly, dead, diſtruſt full heart, might be purged, and I filled with the Lord Ieſus my Food and Reſtaurative in all graces of Regeneration, and that in a full feſtivall manner. Lord, if I by unbeleefe doe not, no Devill can divorce thy Chriſt Sacramentall from me.

Rule 4. Fourthly, Seeing him there thine, take him, eat and drinke him, and enjoy him; let thy ſoule apply him to thee for that thou lackeſt, and he ſerveth; that is, to ſupply thy wants where the hedge is loweſt with thee, to pare off thy ſuperfluous part, to fill up and ſupply thy decayes and voydneſſe; I meane ſuch gifts or graces as concerne thee either in thy particular Calling, or in thy generall: beware thou doe not ſtreighten this feaſt, bring not thy own browne bread in thy pocket, ſcant not his bountie, but take it as he offers it; by ſo much the more meet for him to give, by how much more thou unworthy. Bring thy biggeſt pitcher, and upon thy lap in the largeſt manner, to equall his bountie with thy faith, and let not a little ſatisfie thee when aboundance is offered thee. And how much this feaſt ſeemes in thy eye to come ſhort of Popiſh Maſſe-Chriſt, (for they give him to God, and take none of him from God,)

God,) by so much the more let it be to thee a spirituall Banquet of all refined Wines, and fat things; and if thou canst feed with the Saints, thou needst not care for Papists, whom if thou didst sup with, they would robbe thee of thy drinke, which were to choake thee with thy meate.

Fifthly, Least thou shouldst stagger about thy right and part herein, remember the end of the Sacrament is to rid thee of this feare. For why? it is Gods seale to the Covenant of his Grace, to make thee his Sonne and Daughter, and to sanctifie thee: its his uttermost securitie for any outward one; nay, its his Instrument of conveying the greatest measure of his Spirit unto thee: Distrust him not in his chiefe evidence. As a man when he hath sealed up, delivered his Writings, and given up the possession of all to thee, can doe no more; so, this is GODS uttermost evidence, whereby he hath made Iesus thy Sanctification, and growth in it, as sure as heaven can make it. Rule 5.

Sixthly, Having so received it, live by him, depart as one well satisfied, enlarge him both for number and measure of growth to all parts of thy life, all estates, graces, duties: And in the strength of this Cake and Water, 1 King. 19.6.7. goe to thy journey, even fortie dayes, till thou come to the Horeb of heaven; hold this thy comfort by prayer and watching, and till thou come to a new bait, live upon this; and from one to another, till thou grow to thy measure. And so doing, who can deny the Supper to be a chiefe helpe to goodnesse? Rule 6.

Q. May the like be said of the rest, either publike or private; as, reading, singing of Psalmes, conference, prayer, meditation? If yea, then shew how, and first of Prayer?

A. For Prayer, (in a word to touch it, and gather one or two eares out of an harvest of matter) let me be conceived to speak of it in each kinde, (saving due respects) for brevitie sake. First then, Retaine this heavenly ordinance of God in that due esteeme which the Lord hath graced it with; for all ends both of humiliation and supplication. The Lord and thy soule (by experience) doe know it to be the key of the all coffers of God, & that High Priests living way, made by the bloud of Christ, whereby thou hast accesse daily, yesterday, to day, and ever, (the oftner the welcomer) to the Holy of Holies, to the seat of Mercy. Maintaine and hold this right and title of thine. Thinke not that this Spirit of Grace and Supplication cation is ſpent, though thou ſee not God ſo clearely in it for all ends, as thou deſireſt; yet give it not over: thy ſinne hath bound thee in chaines, but prayer is not bound; rather it bindeth the Lord by promiſe to thee. The eare of God is not heavie, that he ſhould not heare: He is not as a man, that he ſhould be diſtracted by multitude of praying Suppliants at once: a thouſand to him are as one, and one as a thouſand. Beware of Atheiſme in this kinde.

The third Ordinance, Prayer. Rule 1. Heb. 13.8.

Rule 2. Secondly, Goe in the Lord Ieſus by a promiſe, having thy wants in a readineſſe, and thy faith on wing: let not thy courſe in praying iſſue from a formall plat-forme (though I judge not any man for reading a prayer) but a lively feeling, and humble pinching of ſoule for thy neceſſities.

Rule 3. Thirdly, Shake off all extremities of a corrupt heart, by faith, which muſt hold thine eye fixed upon thy Mediator (by his Spirit upholding thy faintneſſe, and groning within thee) againſt all thy preſumption, commonneſſe, dulneſſe, deadneſſe, coldneſſe; and beſeech the Lord to ſtir thee up to pray as hee ſhall ſuggeſt unto thee, by the preſent occaſion (well digeſted) either for the Church, others, or thy ſelfe. Tye thy ſelfe to no punctualneſſe; but (as the holy men in Scriptures have done) ſo let confeſſion ſometimes goe before, or follow prayer; and either of both, thankeſgiving. Come not to the Lord with either an heart moyling and lowring with diſcontent, without faith; or bold and ventrous without humiliation; but let both have their due weight. If thou wouldeſt be heavenly in prayer, firſt abaſe thy ſelfe as a worme, duſt and aſhes, yea (as Maſter Bradford) hell and the ſinke-hole, before the Lord who is heaven and holineſſe: if the Lord have any ſpeciall draught for thy net, he will put thee out of conceit with thy owne Art, and thy ſelfe, as Peter was when he had toyled all night, and catcht nothing. Emptineſſe is the onely raiſer of our mindes in prayer: Oh! how hard is it to get? and then ſecondly, by faith, be quickned to wait for an anſwer; theſe two will fill thee with heavenly affections, and rid thee of thine owne inventions, manner, and ends.

Rule 4. Fourthly, Adde theſe meete qualities of Prayer; viz. fervent importunitie, as one whom God cannot be rid of, till thou ſpeed: and frequency, as having ſped well already. If in prayer thou finde little ſtirring, know it is not becauſe

Prayer

Prayer is not Gods Ordinance, but he would try whether forme, and the worke done, be not above ſpirit and faith in thee: if they be not, perſiſt and goe againſt the edge of thy owne deadneſſe, reſting in that meaſure gladly which the Lord ſees beſt; for in this caſe thou wilt pray oftneſt, as 2 Cor. 12.10. 2 Cor. 12.10.

Fiftly, (and above all) come not to pray with any tainted knowne ſinne: I ſay not onely groſſe, but even ſecret and cloſe, through a laſie heart loath to caſt them off; or a looſe heart, loving them better than the things thou prayeſt for; leſt the Lord juſtly leave thee to be wearisome to him and thy ſelfe. Caſt out thy wrath, and earth, and diſdaine, and cenſures, and uncharitableneſſe; yea, let thy praying awe thee againſt them ere thou pray, that it may arme thee when thou haſt done. Till prayer become thy familiar friend, and bring thee into acquaintance with God, for a ſupply of wants, pardon of daily ſinnes, helpe for all duties of converſation. And ſo looking up to thine Advocate for a covering of thy weakeneſſe, this dutie ſhall be a ſpeciall helpe to godlineſſe unto thee. Touching the Lords Prayer, I ſend my Reader to the ſpeciall Treatiſes thereof. Rule 5.

A ſhort digreſſion about prayer; with directions how to ſerve God with an holy and ſpirituall heart, very neceſſary for theſe times and for theſe formall-ſpirits of ours.

First labour, as well when thou art out of the worſhip of God, as when thou art occupied therein, to walke with God. Wee ſerve God alway, we worſhip him but ſometimes. We beleeve in God, love him and ſerve him through the whole day and in all our Converſation, (Wee doe or wee ought to doe ſo) But, we worſhip him onely at ſet times of the day, or when the ſpirit of God mooves us by occaſion, Marke then; Strive for ſuch a frame of ſpirit that thou mayſt be in caſe and readineſſe of heart to go to God upon all occaſions. Keepe thy ſelfe free and emptie of diſtractions, cares, cloggs of ſpirit, keepe off the world, mixing thy ſelf, thy earthly buſineſſes from taking poſſeſſion of thy deepeſt affections. Hold thine heart cloſe to God in love, zeale, meekneſſe, patience, and in ſuch like temper through the day, and keepe holy quarter, with him alway; So ſhalt thou ſtep the eaſiler out of God his chamber of preſence into his privy chamber: out of his Sanctuary into his holy of holies. That is, out of thy courſe of ſervice into the way of worſhip. Not as hypocrites do who will have their houres to pray, but when they have done, they run to Rule 1.

their old pranks, and so returne to prayer, even while their old scurff is upon them; Such worship is odious; That rule which Peter ep.1. cap. 1. verſ. 1. gives for preparation to our publike hearing, we must observe for private duties of worship in generall: even to cast off all our superfluities; so, as wee may hold up pure hands to God without wrath or doubting. So shall wee not rush suddenly and unreverently upon God, with slavish feare, but with a well seasoned and prepared heart. And as hee who would worship God in secret, had neede to looke to his publike Lords day worship (for bad Lords dayes will easily choake private duties) and as he who would now and then worship God extraordinarily, must be sure to looke well to his private ordinary worship; So he, who would obtaine a meete heart to worship God by himselfe in his Chamber or family, must looke to the order of his Conversation aright ere he attempt it, least hee defile that.

Rule 2. Secondly, Separate thy selfe for the time of worship or prayer from all other ordinary occasions of this life, as family and calling employments. Make the worke of God a set worke by it selfe, (for that admitts not other matters to come in place the whilst) that so thou mayst be private with God. It is our Saviours counsell, Shut thy doore, and Solomons proverbe. Cap. 18. 1. For a mans desire he will seperate himselfe; All the whole man, the heart and mind, is little enough for God. So pray, and worship God, as a man set apart and having nothing to doe: for thou attendest a great God, and great things, even the seeking of reconciliation, pardon of sinne, acceptance of thy unworthy selfe in Christ, sanctification of soule and body, grace to guide the tongue well, thy life and thy selfe. Thou art well, if this one thing necessary, may be well done alone, although nothing else be thought of besides; for so a vaine and wandering heart it shut out. Lay all by the Altars side for the time being, else the cumber and pudder of other occasions will blunt thy edge.

Rule 3. Thirdly, Ere thou go to pray, spend a little time in secret musing, what thou art going about; This is a seasoning and replenishing the minde, with matter, when we seriously consider what our cheife wants, lets, temptations, enemies and corruptions are, and duly affected with them: also, when we weigh the promises before hand, reaching out a supply, its a great quickner of the soule to pray. And lastly, when we weigh the mercies which of old or of late, wee have received of God; adde also those crosses which are upon us, or are feared to come; These Meditations will stirre up Thanksgiving for what already we have receaved; humblenesse in the confession of sinne, brokenesse of heart, hunger and faith after pardon and grace, and in a word will prepare us to carry our selves aright in the whole duty.

Fourthly, Go not to any Ordinance as to a worke to be wrought by us, our owne strength, But behold it as it is appointed by God for the better guiding of us to himselfe. Also remember that Christ and his Spirit are in every Ordinance, and there is a promise annexed to each ordinance in speciall. God will be in the midst of us, being in his name; Call upon me, in the the day of trouble, and I will heare thee and thou shalt glorifie me; Fasten thine heart upon an Ordinance, by beholding of Christ and the promise therein, and these will carry thy heart to the Ordinance, not deepely and barrenly for forme and custome, but lively and savorily; so that thou shalt in the smoke of the sacrifice, as the Angell Judg. 13. 20. ascend up to heaven: whereas else thy prayers will fall downe at thy feet. Rule 4.

Fifthly, Consider God in all his Attributes, not as an empty Idoll, nor as a terrible Iudge, but as hee hath made himselfe knowne in his word through Christ; Fasten upon the eternall God, in and through the flesh of Emanuell who is God with us, and neere us. Else God cannot be comprehended by our slightnesse. Now, as hee is thy God in Christ, so is hee to thee, and for thy good, of excellent wisedome, infinite justice, power and mercie, goodnesse, long-suffring and patience, truth, faithfulnesse and the like. All these he is in himselfe, and also in speciall he is these for mee and my releefe, though I am but one poore toe or joynt of the whole body of his Church. He is present in all places to heare prayer, he is omniscient, knowing all our wants, hee is all-sufficient to supply us. He is all eye, all eare, all heart of pittie, all strength, love & good will to help all and every one; Number doth not distract him, space and distance doth not devide him, nor yet can all the abundance of grace which he bestowes upon any, exhaust him. His candle suffers no defect, how many so ever he enlightens, nor his fountaine any decay, though multitudes draw from it. Rule 5.

Sixtly, Be humble before God, in thine owne eyes; As Abraham said, so doe thou, I am dust and ashes: and holy Iob, I abhorre my selfe; The lower the soule is in respect of Gods Rule 6.

greatneſſe, and her owne baſeneſſe, the more heavenly and ſpirituall it is; It is then moſt above with God, Col.3.1. When its moſt low, and poore in ſpirit; God lookes not as man; for man lookes onely at our externals as honor and riches: but God looks at the heart. He accepts not the perſon of any, Act. 10, Its nothing to God what we are: If we be juſt what can we adde to him? if unrighteous, what can we hurt him? And ſo it is with our outwards: All ſorts are of Gods creation; earth and duſt; Looke what the earth one day will make us, that labour we to be the whileſt, even as baſe as the vileſt. God loaths all bad hearts, the ignorant, coveteous, angry; but none ſo much as a proud heart. Come then to the Lord with a low and a meeke ſpirit in the Confuſion of our owne faces, and in the ſence of all our ſins, eſpecially, ſpirituall, as our greeving his ſpirit by our unbeleefe, contempt, hypocriſie, ſecurity, unthankfullneſſe. Beg that grace, Zach.12.10. Powre out O Lord, the ſpirit of ſupplication and mourning (marke how theſe two goe, together) for my peircing the Lord Ieſus, and dallying with mercy. Say thus, Lord here comes a poore, barren, empty ſoule, leſſe then the leaſt mercy, deſerving to be ſtript of all good, a fatherleſſe creature, which might wonder that I live, and have not beene ſwept away in wrath long agoe, deſerving ſtill to be left by thee for ever, to a dead, blockiſh, impenitent ſpirit. Thus lie before the Lord, and licke the duſt of his feet.

Rule 7. Seventhly, Confeſſe the Soveraignty of God, viz. that hee hath us at the advantage, and might deſtroy us. If hee ſhew us never ſo little favour, it is his free grace, and more then he oweth, us; But, if he ſhould caſt us off, it is but our due. Tremble therefore before him in this reſpect, & ſeeke his face; As a man who having his enemie under an execution, lookes to be ſought unto, with great and humble requeſt, that he would releaſe his right; ſo come thou to the Lord, confeſſe that thou ſtandeſt at his meere courteſie, and mercy; If he do ſhew us any; its not for our owne ſake, but for his Name ſake: he can ſave or ſpill, all is at his pleaſure. It is not in him that willeth or runneth, but in him that ſheweth mercy: that he might magnifie mercy and get himſelfe a name of us. This ſoveraigne power of God, being well weighed by us, would take off our owne edge, cauſing us to come before our God with merveilous abaſement, glad to finde favour upon any termes whatſoever.

Eightly,

Eightly, Deny thy selfe. The worship of God stands not so much in bringing our cost to God, as in bringing nothing and comming with empty hands: Renounce therefore all that is our owne, our feelings, hopes, affections, zeale and confidence. Also all our best prayers and performances. As they are the ordinance of God established in a promise so sticke to them tooth and naile: but as they are acts passing through thy defiled selfe let them all stinke in thy nostrils, that they may smell the sweeter in Gods. Onely bring the blood of the Mediator with us, to make way for us, and so we shall be accepted. Remember that of Paul 2 Cor. 12. 8. 9. My power is perfected in my infirmity, very gladly then will I be under infirmity, that his power may be magnified in mee. Although wee have no sparkles of our owne to compasse us withall, yet the Lords fire shall heate us, Esay 50. Therefore when thou art dead to thy selfe, cold in spirit, and feelest little, yet goe to a promise, trust to the name of the Lord and give glory to God. Though we come in much weakenesse, yet he will not reject us, for it is not our strength but Christs, which must make us welcome. Rule 8.

Ninthly, Above all, come to worship God in faith, That is the most spirituall grace to come to God with above all other. No other save this can fasten upon a promise. Both our selves and all other graces of the spirit are accepted through this. Whatsoever we aske whither pardon of sinne or strength against it, supply of any grace, power over any temptation, by Satan or the world, whatsoever crosse or discouragement, labour to beleeve that promise, whatsoeuer you aske the Father in my name, you shall receive. And although it seeme never so unlikely, yet doe as Abraham did, beleeve against hope, trust to a promise; strive to honor Gods faithfulnesse, and waver not; For hee that wavers, receives nothing. Yet there may be true faith, when yet it is at the weakest; but yet, in such a condition, yeeld not to unbeleefe, nor stagger about the truth of God Esay 26. 4. Rule 9.

Tenthly, Temporall blessings, as health contentation of mind, turning the hearts of enemies, blessing upon marriage, posterity, wealth, welfare, remooving of crosses, and the like, are all purchased which the same price which the spirituall are. Howbeit we must so aske them in faith, as yet beleeving that the want of them may sometimes proove better for us, then the having of. Rule 10.

of them. For, ſuch things are ſo farre good to us as wee uſe them: elſe they may hurt. Therefore as for theſe, be we at Gods diſpoſe, and wait with meekeneſſe, patience and wel-doing, till God heare us. If hee ſhould not heare us in the very kind, let us know that hee intends us a better thing in ſtead thereof, that is, grace to purge our corruption, love of our ſelves and the creature: and to make us yet further partakers of his holineſſe. He that beleeves makes not haſt, but waites upon God.

Rule 11. Eleventh, Come to worſhip God in our innocency, and with the Breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe upon us. The former in reſpect of God, (for hee heareth not ſinners) the latter in regard of men, (for it affords holy boldneſſe, when our conſcience is not guilty of any offence or wrong:) Touching God, true it is, who can ſay, I am innocent? But yet wee muſt not come in our ſinnes, for (as David ſaith) If I favour wickedneſſe in my heart, the Lord will not heare my prayers. Let us therefore waſh our handes in innocency, ere we compaſſe Gods Altar, and lift up pure handes and if we have fallen, let us leave our ſacrifice by the Altar, till we be reconciled; if wee looke for healing, or for hearing: elſe wee offer a fooles ſacrifice. Touching men, beware leaſt any uncharitableneſſe, rancor, heart-burning, injury, oppreſſion be found in us by him, who knowes our heart, for ſuch ſtuffe will choake the conſcience, and weaken our liberty toward God.

Rule 12. Twelfth, Come in love to the members of Chriſt, and in compaſſion to the diſtreſſed: Let us not onely reſt in this, that wee can forgive our enemies, but alſo pray with a fellow-feeling ſpirit of the neceſſities of the bodie and each member. Mercy toward them that ſuffer for Chriſt, or other of his poore members, is a great helpe to raiſe up the heart to ſpiritualneſſe, and argues it to be ſenſible of it owne ſinnes and ſorrowes, becauſe the ſinnes of the times and the afflictions of the Church doe ſo peirce us.

Rule 13. Thirteenth, Bring with thee to prayer and the worſhip of God, an heart ſeaſoned with the graces of the Spirit as uprightneſſe and pureneſſe in ſeeking the glory and endes of God more then our owne, alſo cheerefulneſſe, reverence, and awe of the Majeſty of God, thankefulneſſe, integrity, ſoundneſſe of heart, and the like: Theſe graces are (as it were) a ſweet incenſe, making prayer lavory in the noſtrils of God.

Foureteenth

Fourteenth. Pray more for heavenly graces, then for outward blessings, or deliverances, and before all other graces, first pray for mercy to forgive thee, then for Sanctification; Among the graces whereof especially pray for the Negative graces which most crosse thy spirit, as selfe-deniall, faith, humilitie, patience under the crosse, and the like. And pray not onely for graces, serving for thy present vse, but such as concerne thee for the time to come, as an happy end of thy daies, wisedome seriously to meditate of and to profit by all the dealings of God with thee, and how he hath guided all thy former waies, also for willingnesse to die, to give up thy account, to waite for the comming of Christ, and for our full union with him our head in glory. Rule 14.

Fifteenth. Strive for the best affections thou canst in prayer, and those raviſhings which may carry thee furthest off thy selfe and neerest to Communion with God; yet with this proviso, not alway to esteeme thy prayer by the height of thine affections, but thy affections themselves by the bottome whereon they stand, selfe-deniall and cleaving to the promise, for else it may possibly fall out that at some time when thou art rayſed up in thy spirit, by some pangs of zeale and devotion, or some carnall content in blessings, or when gifts of prayer answer thy desire, thy affections may be earnest in thee, when as yet thou feelest small inward grace to abhorre thy selfe or to trust God. The poorest measure of soundnesse is better then such a prayer, Many a poore soule that takes thought how to speake his words through infirmity, and sence of unworthinesse, may make a more spirituall prayer then such an one. And many an humble soule comes short of such affections as hee felt (when yet perhaps he was farre from such humbling) through the sence of wants, which hee meets withall. But so long as the soule fixeth her eye vpon the promise, vnder a deepe sence of her baseneſſe its a sweet thing to expresse affections; then the deeper, the better, because then they are right bred: A few teares falling from the eyes of a naturall mourner, exceed all the outeries and passions of one that is hyred onely to act a mourners part, yet let not this quash affections in thee, nor cause thee to censure such as utter them, but let it teach thee to goe into thine owne heart to find both good mettall, and good edge. Rule 15.

Sixteenth. Come to God with a large cheerefull heart, as truly. Rule 16.

ly thankefull for old mercies as new: and as forward to give thanks, yea ſtriving to be as much, and as large in it, as in prayer. Be as willing to rip up your corruptions, and to renounce them, as to ſeeke pardon. Give God all thy heart in prayer, and keepe not a part to thy ſelfe, ſerve him with all thy might, courage and ſtrength, with all frequency, fervency, for time, for continuance, for zeale and intention. Obſerve houres and times to prevent a ſlothfull, ſubtill heart, but yet withall abhorre form and faſhion as a deadly enemie to ſpiritualneſſe; Preferre that ſeaſon wherein God and thine owne heart ſend thee to prayer, before a ſet time, and embrace it gladly, quenching no ſuch motion of the ſpirit, nor putting it off to thine owne time. Seeke to pray, rather from thine inward feeling, then by any ſet formes of prayer; yet, if it bee neceſſary for thy ignorance to vſe a patterne, yet vſe it onely as a crutch for a while till thou canſt goe alone. If thou put thy ſelfe upon it, as an ordinary ſtay, thou mayſt proove ſtarke lame; yet I adde, if in thy endeavours to conceive prayer, God ſtill deny thee it chuſe the other rather then none.

Rule 17. Seventeenth. In each part of prayer, ſtirre up thy dead heart to aggravate the matter to God: In thy confeſſions enlarge thy ſins by all the moſt odious circumſtances, which poſsibly thou canſt. In ſupplication, whether of prayer for good and the Church. or deprecation againſt evills and enemies, beg that ſpirit of Adoption and prayer, by which as a child thou mayſt boldly urge thy Father by thoſe Arguments, which may beſt prevaile in wraſtling as Iacob did. In thankeſgiving, force thy cold heart to enlarge it ſelfe to God, by all ſorts of mercies ſpirituall, earthly, paſt, preſent, upon thee and thine in private and publike, and recount all the dealings and Adminiſtrations of God, perſonally towards thee, as his long-ſuffering and patience in all thy provokings of him, his deliverances alſo, and his providences for thee. By this meanes thou ſhalt not bee barren, for either matter or manner. If (notwithſtanding thy importunity) God ſtill hold backe his anſwer from thee in any kind, either by ſuffering thy corruptions to beare ſway ſtill, or thy croſſes, or the miſeries of the Church to continue, or Satans malice to abide or the graces of the ſpirit to be ſhortned: yet neither repine at him nor give him over, for there is more in importunity of prayer, then in bare praying. God tries thee

as hee did Paul 2 Cor. 12. whether thou wilt pray against appetite, or no. And thy constancy therein, will approove the spirit of Christ vpholding thee, and thy obedience to a word, and cleaving to a promise, God will in due time heare and come with healing in his wings Esay 26. 26. 27. Mal. 3.

They who endeavour to pray thus, although in weakenesse, have a promise to be heard, because they pray in the name of Christ, and his Spirit shall susteine their infirmity.

Looke which of these Directions savors best with thy spirit, that apply thy selfe most unto, till God give thee wisedome to make use of the rest.

Q. Let somewhat be added for Meditation.

A. There is cause so to doe: although it bee to bee lamented, that men (for the most part) find it such a yoke (whatsoever can bee said to commend it) that they seeme to crave pardon, though they cannot meditate. Who, if once they knew the worth of it, would count it the sweetest burthen that ever they bare. For why? the Holy Ghost cals it a sinking downe into the heart, as Luke 2, 51. a pondering in the heart: a considering, a weighing with our selves and the like. Even as the Spunge sucketh up the water and holds it till it be squeezed out for use: As the Still full of sweet flowers by vertue of the fire put under draweth up and sends out the water for use: As the skilfull digger for mettals lights upon a veine of gold or silver to enrich him: As the cleane beast chewing the cud, makes the nourishment the sweeter: and as the thred which binds the stalks of flowers from scattering: yea, as an hundred other sweet things are, even the best sweetes among linnen, so is this grace of Meditation, kindly improoved. Yea I may call it the high-way to all good conversation: yea, I may say, its as the smoke of the sacrifice, in which the Angell, Iudges 13. 20. went up to heaven: I set it not above prayer, but magnifie it, to set an edge upon people, who will not know it. And surely if that be an helpe to God, which both takes away lets, and both in the act and effects of it, is so admirable, judge what an helpe meditation is. Tell me then, first, what are the chiefe lets to grace (in them who otherwise want not knowledg;) Surely, either giddines of mind, or unsavorinesse of spirit: The former like a sieve out of the water, looseth all it gets, suffers nothing either truths heard, or workes seene, to abide long in the heart. But Meditation settles them in the Spirit, that they leake not out, Heb. 2. 1.

Touching meditation the fourth Ordinance.

How is it an helpe.

Heb. 2. 1.

Thus

Thus the life of a thousand Sermons, yea of mercies and occasi-ons is preserved. In stead of the latter it seasons the heart with the sap, the life, the savour of good things. They are not heaps upon heaps, leaving us athirst, but wee drinke of them, digest them, and make our soules merry with them: Even as an envi-ous man so long chewes the cud of his malice in his bed, till he have heat his heart, and devised revenge; so is meditation a reall grace (on the contrary) and whets upon the promises and works of God, till it be fired with the love of them. Againe it makes 2 the meaning, view, scope, and order, both of particular doctrine and the whole frame of Religion to become our owne. And 3 lastly, we come hereby to the ease of practice; the fruit hereof, Experience; so that if once wee have found crosses to doe us good: we feare not when new ones approach: if we have felt the gaine of a Sabbath, wee get a delight therein: in a word, whatsoever is easie, it becomes sweete: and therefoore if this be worth somewhat to find the yoke of God easie, and his bur-then light, (as to say the truth it is the upshot of goodnesse) well may we then say, Meditation is a divine helpe to a good course. Oh how its to be lamented that men know it not! they get no matter to chew upon: they separate not themselves to it (thinking they may meditate while they bee at worke) they Psa. 18. 2. doe not curbe their wilde and wandring hearts from other obiects, and so this piece of Gods Worship is irkesome unto them.

Q. You whet an edge upon us, by your commendation of it, can you adde a little direction for the attaining of so rare a Jewell?

A. Meditation is no formall worke, but occasionall and spi-rituall. As then thy spirit desires to bee seasoned with promi-ses, commands, threats, or the word preached, or the crosse, or arming the soule to suffer in evill times, or to be fit to die, or any the like; so first be sure thou hast fit Texts or occasions of matter fore-layd: Bee not barren, for then meditation dies in the very porch, be a Scribe taught to the Kingdome, get a trea-sure and out of that bring forth good things. 2. Having got that, rest not there (for a Toade may have a pearle in her brain and yet spit poyson) but looke up to God, mourning for thy estrangement of spirit from holy things, which should bee fa-miliar. And by faith bend thy selfe, (after separation of thy thoughts from frothy fancies) to consider seriously of the truths truths set before thee. Put case it bee some speciall promise of forgivenesse of sinne: worke it thus into thine heart: How cursed am I in life and death without it! How happy, if I could enjoy it, and the favour of God, which is better then life! What bables heere below, (which fooles make their paradise) are like it? Having thus entred with some sweetnes proceed on, bring out all thy Objections and Temptations against it, lay them in the ballance of the promise, to a soule that is fatherlesse, weigh the one against the other, how the promise is the word of an eternall God, sin the act onely of a finite creature. Adde hereto the root of a Promise, the blood of the Son of God, beyond all sinne or guilt: Muse of the conients of a promise, the free love of an offended God, (who counts it his honour to forgive) his love, mercy, placablenes, and that there is no anger in him, Esay 27.4.5. his faithfulnes, vnchangeablenes. By such meanes, bathe in this oile into thy broken bones, till (as butter by churning) so faith and comfort may issue in thy soule, that now thou canst twyne about the promise as Ivy about the bough, and sucke a sweet out of it, as marrow out of a bone. And resist an hard, wandring, dead, defiled heart, which will make thee as one tyred at plough ten times in one halfe houre. If thou meet the Lord in this way, as Isaac did, frequent it, make it a great part of thy Communion with God, and be joyfull as one that hath found an hoord of gold. According to this instance judge of others.

Q. What other meanes of godlinesse are there?

A. I adde now three other, (all graces of the Spirit) to wit, Resolvednesse, Watchfulnesse, and Experience. Resolvednesse is a grace of the Spirit, standing in an holy firmenesse of minde and heart, to keepe fast the Truth of God, both in judgement, and the power of practise. For the first: Truth if it be once lost in the judgement, will not long hold in the practise: therefore we must be well principled and grounded in the Truth; love it for it selfe, and embraced it with our best affections: Not being wheeled and hurried about with the new trickes & devises of men of unsound judgement: Nor yet put on some truthes, for a time, with great zeale & heate, and suddenly when a greater heate of opposition arises, out of a giddy minde and fearefull heart, recant as fast and betray the Truth of God to Time-servers and Enemies. It had beene better we had never knowne it, than so

to ſtart from it. If Peters feare were ſo dangerous, what was Demas his hollowneſſe? Therfore we are bidden, Buy the truth, (whatſoever wee give for it) but ſell it not, (whatſoever wee might have for it:) Contend wee for the Faith, Iude 2. yea, unto blood: and ſuffer we not that pure truth which we have received from God, to paſſe through our fingers more defiled.

To this end, Let us wiſely and ſtrongly obſerve, reſiſt, and reject all novelties and ſchiſmes ſtarting up among us, and abhorre them; bearing witneſſe to the Truth of God to our uttermoſt, ſo farre as it imports our calling. Thinke we the leaſt Truth worth the lives of ten thouſand of us: renounce we our ſelves in our owne ends, profits, and pleaſures, for the Patronage of truth: (which elſe will betray us to be hypocrites) and by faith be we armed to beleeve, we cannot ſuffer ſo juſtly for any thing as for Truth: which ſhall ſtand and prevaile, when all her enemies ſhall periſh: & that whatſoever we looſe in the defence of Truth, we ſhall gain it another way an hundred fold. Whereas by forſaking the truth, we ſhal cauſe many to fall (as little ſtones rattle down if great ones fal) God ſhall deny us before men & Angels: and we ſhall get nothing by our treachery, ſave the loſſe of our ſoules in finding our lives.

Branch 2. The ſecond part is, Reſolvedneſſe to cleave to God in the power of Practiſe. A ſolemne courſe uſed by all the Saints both in ordinary, and by occaſion. Ioſhua (Cap. ult.) tells Iſrael, That he and his houſe would ſerve the Lord: David did not onely reſolve, Pſal. 119. 57. and vow, Pſal. 116. to keepe the word of God, but alſo ſware to keepe his righteous judgements. It was the ſumme of Barnabas his Sermon, Act. 11. That they of Antioch would with full purpoſe cleave to the Lord. And ſo by occaſion we ſee both how the whole Church, and particular perſons, practiſed this by occaſion: all to take order againſt their fickleneſſe, and inconſtancy in a good courſe. The people in Ezra came to the oath and Covenant, ſealing thereto; to bind themſelves to God the more ſtrongly for ſtarting. And Iabez is ſaid to vow to God, 1 Chro. 4. 10. So Iacob at Luz, So ſometime upon a riddance out of a croſſe, as Hezekia, Eſay 38. and Ionah cap. 2. when the one was healed, the other caſt up, make their ſongs and vowes: that is, were mightily raiſed in their reſolutions to a better meaſure of zeale. And the like wee ſee by the recovery of the Saints out of their plunges and falls: See for the one Pſal. 73. 24. It is good for me to draw neere to God. And for the other other, Pſal. 51. Then ſhall I ſing joyfully of thy righteouſneſſe, and ſinners by me ſhall be converted to thee. Oh that in theſe ſtaggering, degenerate times, wherein daily ſo many fall at our right hand, and ſo many at our left, we might be ſuſtein'd with this Reſolution of heart, to be the Lords for ever! Oh that we could endure the Croſſe, deſpiſe the ſhame that followes it, and ſay, If this be to be vile, I will be more vile! Sure it is; Then is our beſt ſeaſon to honor God with Reſolution of heart, when the whole world is ſicke, not of a Palſey, but a generall falling ſickneſſe! Deny we therefore our owne ſtrength, and give up our ſelves to God, and pray for ſtrengthning by the might of his power, to be ſtabliſhed and rooted in faith and grace, unto all long-ſuffering and joyfulneſſe, Coloſſ. 1.

Q. And what is the next?

A. Watchfulneſſe: which is not onely given to the Saints to awake out of their dead ſleepe: but when the Lord hath given them light of grace (in ſtead thereof) and purged them from their filthineſſe; Then doth this Grace preſerve them cleane, and keepe them from defiling againe. It is like both to the eye and the eyelid: The one is the Spy of the body to looke before, and to marke the occaſions and opportunities offred by God of all dutie and ſervice, that we may doe it: The other is, The keeper of the eye from the leaſt duſt or mote which might fall into the ſame to annoy it. Concerning the former, the Chriſtian ſoule muſt keepe the watch of God, Num 9. 18. They muſt obſerve the Cloud and the Pillar of fire conſtantly, to pitch or remoove according to the mooving or reſting thereof. That is, looke what worke the Lord hath for us to doe, whether in the round and courſe of our life, or in our particular Calling, in which God hath ſet us: that muſt we watch unto: yea, wee muſt watch againſt all enemies and annoyances from without or within us: And this worke we muſt doe with the beſt ſpirit we are able. Watchfulnes what?

The Word firſt muſt be the light by which wee muſt watch in a world of ſuch darkeneſſe as we live in: There muſt be a voyce behind us ſaying, This is the way: even as watchers have their Torch-light or Candle ſet up to keepe them watchfull. Then ſecondly, There muſt be a marveilous active ſpirit in us, attent to the worke of God. As the phraſes of the holy Ghoſt doe ſhew: Watch (or attend) to reading, watch to prayer, watch to dutie: and there are few duties urged, but watching is added, Rules. 1. 2.

ded, as to the Armor, Eph.6. All to shew, that watching is rather an instinct of the Spirit of vivification in the soule, serving to qua-3 lifie all graces of it, than any speciall vertue. Thirdly, There must be a sensible tenderneſse and circumspection in the soule, not to suffer any such dutie or occasion of it to escape, as God affords, but to be awake and aware of it, to well-come and observe it.
4 Fourthly, There must be a speciall difference put between such occasions as are more safe, and such as are more dangerously beset,
5 as lawfull liberties are which lye open to much abuse. Fifthly, There must bee a very wakefull heart against the most secret affronts of a good course, not to stay till Satan appeare in his foulest hue, but even to watch the least Appearances of danger which requires a marveilous jealous & scrupulous heart (& yet ruled by knowledge) not to be a foole to beleeve every thing: But wise to discerne both of persons, things, and occasions: for a jealous heart makes way for a safe passage: as the poore Snaile
6 feeles, that is, shuns or chuses her way by her hornes. Sixthly, There must be an heart watchfull as well to the grounds, manner and measure, intent and meaning of our Actions, as to their na-
7 ture and lawfulneſse. Seventhly, There must be the Companions of watching, fruitfulneſse, unweariedneſse, chearefulneſse, and fulneſse in dutie, redeeming our season, and filling up the time
8 with plentie, abhorring emptineſse and barrenneſse. And lastly, such a watching heart to a constant course, will breed a watchfulneſse for the comming of Christ: a walking in the eye of God with holy Reverence and awe, which the Scripture alway perfixeth to watching: Be sober and watch, That is, be awfull as they who know what eyes of God and man are upon them: as they who often looke into and view their course; keepe God their friend, and returne apace when they have slipped; have their Account in their bosome, and are ready to yeeld it up in the bloud of Christ, sealed and assured: That so being thus found by him at his
Ver. Comming, (be it when he please) they may hold up their head with comfort. Oh! how few watch thus! Most watch to profaneſse! others to looſe liberties, taking the uttermost: others
2 are weary of watching; as its said of all the Virgins; They slept, while the Bridegroome tarried: To some duties they watch, to others they are careleſse: easily circumvented; and so I might be endleſse! But a stayd and steady eye and heart to marke and attend each beck of God (though with weakeneſſe,) yet uprightly, is a rare jewell, a blacke Swanne in this age, wherein every one turnes the libertie of Chriſt into looſeneſſe.

neſse

Q. What is Experience?

A. The life of a Chriſtians obſervation of the whole courſe of Gods goverment towards him, both in his patience, bleſſings, corrections: alſo examples of others good and bad, living and dying; together with all his threats and promiſes againſt evill, and to goodneſſe: with the Performances thereof: and eſpecially the Watch-words and warnings of Conſcience out of the word, teaching us what wayes to ſhun, and what to embrace. As it is in the bodies caſe, that a wiſe man will ſo marke his body, that he will quickly become a Phyſitian to himſelfe, knowing what will hurt or doe him good; So here. But the wicked are fooles in all their experience. They have no life of experience in them: They catch a fall, and yet ſtumble inſtantly at the ſame ſtone againe. They ruſh upon all occaſions, as the Horſe into the battell, and are wounded and puniſhed for their raſhneſſe. Their life is onely from hand to mouth: They live onely for the preſent: never enjoying the former life, that the latter part may learne of it, to be guided the ſafer and better: But the godly marke the goings of God, and their experience teacheth their reines in the night ſeaſon: and when others ſit in darkeneſſe they ſee light. When others are at their witts ends, they are upheld their experience being unto them like the Angell at midnight which appeared to Paul, telling him the ſucceſſe of his journey, Act. 27. Experience: what?

This experience teacheth the people of God to be every one an Eccleſiaſtes to another, a Preacher, telling others what they have obſerved in the courſe of things, teaching them what is vanitie and froth, and what is ſubſtance. The iſſue of which is this, That the whole dutie of man is this to feare God, and keepe his Commandements. By this they keepe their ſences, thoughts, affections and lives, from ranging, unſettledneſſe, buſie medling with worldly matters, leting looſe the raines of the tongue, drowning themſelves in pleaſures, profits, or liberties: mixing themſelves with all Companies: admitting of all occaſions of evill without ſuſpicion: And contrarily, they walke warily, humbly and circumſpectly, both againſt thoſe temptations which come from within themſelves, or from Satan and men without: being armed againſt credulitie and colours of evill, not easily to beleeve, nor hastily to venture upon it; It is a Stocke, as I may say, of wisedome, and the eye in the head of the wise, alway lively and active, to preserve them from the snares of death.

Examples of it.

Examples we have in Scripture of both the experience of the wise, and the folly of the wicked. For the latter, Moses speakes of the Israelites in the Wilderneſſe, thus, in Deuteronomy, The Lord hath not yet given thee an heart to obſerve and keepe the words of this Law, and to walke with thy God. All thoſe miracles and deliverances which God did among them, to traine them, humble and inure them to his hand and yoke, alas! passed away as water through a pipe, and left no print behinde. When all was done, they were ſtill ſo blinde and hard, that Deuter. 32. the Lord calles them, an unwiſe and ſtubborne people, who would not learne. They had both Word and workes of God to ripen and mould them in Gods way; but they would not learne. Such a foole was Balaam, whom the Lord both by voyce and by actuall courſes taught, what he would have him to doe: but an ill Conſcience did faſter blind-fold him, than thoſe could teach him experience. But Gods people are of a more docible heart, and tender eare; frequent inſtruction mixt with Gods reall government, ſoakes into them, and becomes an Art of direction (for Art is made of experience) to them in all their practiſe. The beſt of Gods people in a long way have ſtaggered and nodded ſometimes: as, Iehoſhaphat haunted Iehorams company, after experience of Ahabs dangerous league: But ordinarily tis not ſo: but their experience is as a well-ſpring of life unto them. David came no more into that ſnare of uncleanneſſe, nor Noah of drunkenneſſe, nor Peter of Apoſtacie: The Proverbe is verified of them onely, The burnt Childe dreads the fire; and that which they once ſurfet on, they dare no more meddle with. Bray a foole in the mortar of experience as with a peſtill, yet will not his folly depart from him: he is an invincible foole. But one word to the wiſe, prevailes more than a thouſand ſtripes to a foole.

It is an univerſall helpe.

This experience doth not onely helpe them in ſome one paſſage of their lives, but as the Soule through each limme, ſo this goeth through all their life. Both to preſent the madneſſe of exceſſive liberties, and vanitie of earthly contents: the vexation of luſts and evils: as Solomon brought in this verdict of both: And so Paul in Rom. 6. 21. What fruit have yee had of those things whereof yee are now ashamed? So in Crosses, Lam. 3. 27. & Psal. 119. 71. It is good for a man to beare the yoke from the youth. Before I was corrected, I went astray: but now I have learned thy Law. And Ephraim, Ier. 31. I was as an heifer unused to the yoke: but after I was chastised, I repented. So Iob, Cap. 41. Once have I spoken, [impatiently] but I will speake no more. So in all other kindes, as Blessings; O Lord my portion, Psal. 119. 57. I have determined to keepe thy Law. Oh! mercies of good marriage, children, successe, deliverance in their streights, never goe out of their mindes till death; as David upon his death-bed sware, As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered my Soule out of all adversitie, &c. And by this experience of theirs, they are able to tutor and teach others. As David could teach Solomon; My sonne, feare the Lord, and keepe his Statutes, for this shall establish thy Throne. And againe, I have beene young and am old, yet never saw I the righteous forsaken! And againe, Come hither my Children, and I will teach you the feare of the Lord.

in

Oh how is it to be lamented, that men so vanish in their course, and observe little in this kinde! All other Arts and wayes of men are brought to a ripenesse and perfection, but Religion is still a bare and barren Trade! And yet many have tongue-experience enough to talke of, but no heart-experience, to guide and sway them! Old men with one foot in the grave, and full of gray-haires, who can teach others the Law of buying & selling, and all worldly experiments: yet by all the Word and workes of God, have neither learned to know him nor themselves, much lesse to order their course and die well: least of all to direct others. Holy experience is out of the Element of a naturall man, he is hedged out from it. But it is the most blessed helpe to the godly to order their life; a true mistresse, not as to fooles. Vse.

Q. But are the extraordinary helpes so too?

A. There neede be the lesse question of that, because as their nature is more solemne, so is their use, if they be attended accordingly. And first that of Fasting. Of which I say this, that if we esteeme that receit above all which doth cure a disease, that no other medicine could, then surely Fasting deserves account. Our Saviour tels us, This kinde of Devils goeth not out, save by fasting and prayer; that is, all the ordinances of God are effectuall, but this Extraordinary meanes are great Helpes.

1. Of Fasting. Mark 9 29.

this above all, for this end. Wherefore (briefly) whether wee bring the Churches, or our owne cases, either sinnes or sorrowes before the Lord to be done away:

Rule 1. Let us first, Arme our selves to the chiefe worke, which is soule-affliction. Let us consider, if we were pined with necessitie of abstinence from meat and drinke for any time, what a fearefull anguish would it bring us unto? And is not (thinke we) sinne that deserves it, of more afflicting, vexing nature? Oh! if we could prevaile with God to feele this sting in kinde, how sweet should a fast be? and how sapleſse is it, when we can scarce in a whole day feele one dart of sinne or wrath to pierce us? Let us ayme at it then, and much more that sinne doe humble us than any sorrow whatsoever. Let us first, Mic. 7.9. beare the indignation of the Lord for our sinne; and for the rest, let God alone to plead our cause: for what should it helpe us to be rid of all other enemies, while our owne pride, selfe-love, hypocrisie, vaine-glory, worldlinesse, and hardnesse of heart stil glow at our hearts? Therefore as poore Vriah was faine to be set in the forefront before his fellowes: so let us set these before all enemies; that if any dart, any strength from heaven be sent us, these may have the first handsell thereof; for the strength of all our sorrowes and enemies lies in our weaknesse: therefore let us so lye under the affliction and confusion of these, that the Lord may bow his heart to be afflicted in all our sorrowes: and then he will soone bow the heavens, and melt our calamities away: although they seeme as mountaines, yet they shall flow downe at his presence, Esa. 64.1. yet let us not onely doe thus: remember that fasting is also a Sabbath of reconciliation: therefore let the Lord Iesus his Redemption be looked at by faith, and keepe us from base bondage and the feare of hypocrites. Let us beleeve that upon one crosse he both satisfied for our sinnes, and conquered all enemies: and therefore in his merit let us confidently approach to the throne of grace, for pardon of the one, and deliverance from the other.

Esay 64.1.

Rule 2. Secondly, Apply our selves to all the supports of a fast, which the Lord hath granted to keepe us from deadnesse and wearinesse; the Word I meane fitted to our occasions, and the like, yet as serving to the maine of humiliation and confidence. Adore we the Lord in his owne strong way, and our utter nothing. Let us blesse him, that we be freed from those Popish dumbe Pageants (who beside the outward abstinence) want all furniture of fasters.

Thirdly

Thirdly, Conſider that the Scripture in no one thing affords us greater conſolation and hope than in this: for there is ſcarce one example of a faſt, which wants the experience of good ſucceſſe, yea, extraordinary like it ſelfe, as in Eſters, Nehemiahs, and Ezraes Iſrael's againſt Benjamin; the Churches, Act. 12. doth appeare. Nay, let our owne experience hearten us; when ever did we meet a-new without proofe of ſome bleſſing upon the former publike humiliation? Rule 3.

Fourthly, Conſidering it muſt be no ſmall grace, either of mourning or faith, which muſt prevaile againſt thoſe holds either without or within which we pray againſt; let us know that our lockes had neede be well growne (with Samſons) for ſuch a purpoſe. Therefore let none dare to compaſſe this Altar with unpreparedneſſe of heart. And ſo, looking to the Lord Ieſus for covering us, and accepting us, let us deſire ſome ſigne of mercy, and conſuming of our Sacrifice, that we depart with comfort and hope to have God to ſet his fiat to our ſuites. And ſo ſhall wee finde faſting a ſpeciall helpe to grace. Rule 4.

Q. Conclude with Thankeſgiving: is that an Helpe alſo?

A. Yea verily, if firſt, wee come full of the matter of our thankes, (for ſo are all the thankeſgivings of this kinde, which the Holy Ghoſt recordeth) Moſes, and Miriams, Deborahs, Davids, and the reſt. And therefore to carry a living memoriall and Catalogue of the chiefe publike ones (of which a reverend Writer of our Church hath deſerved well) and ſo the like briefe of our owne, were moſt needfull. Remember the great providence of ſetling the Goſpell, and baniſhing Popery, and ſince that, the ſtrange miraculous deliverances not once or twice from forraine enemies, home judgements; In ſecret record our owne: our firſt calling, ſince that, our many ſtaggers and revolts: his renewed mercies by occaſion, in our changes of eſtate, in our ſtreights, in deepe deſertions, when wee could no more ſuſtaine our ſelves, than if wee had hung in the ayre; how hee hath ever beene our portion when friends have forſaken us unthankefully, and will be ſo ſtill: our bleſſings above many, in gifts of minde, condition, and calling, graces of ſoule, how God kept us from forſaking his Covenant in our deepeſt temptations of Satan and enemies. Secondly, Be enlarged accordingly with due ſimpathy both for the Church and thy ſelfe, rejoycing with her, with and for whom thou haſt oft mourned, and preferring her peace to thy 2. Of thankſgiving. Two Rules. Iud. 5. Exod. 15. The firſt. The ſecond, thy chiefe joy. Affection is the fire to the Sacrifice, and know that Psal. 50. ult. he that prayseth God honoreth him: and the ascent of prayses shall be the descent of blessings, and happie is he who may maintaine this entercourse with God for the enlarging of him to more grace. Oh! when the heart can close with God by all mercies and blessings bestowed, to make him our Rock, our strong Tower to fly unto for safety, when the soule can twyne about God, as the Ivy doth about the bough, to sucke sap and life from him, as the Church in her prayses, professeth, our hope standeth in the Name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth: finding a complacence and hearts ease in him, upon the experience of a benefit, this argues I say, that a man seekes not himselfe, but Gods glory in the blessing. And so much of the whole doctrine of the meanes.

Q. Is there any use to be made hereof?

Use 1. Branch 1. A. Yes, and first seeing the chaine of these holy helpes is so precious and profitable to a godly life; first, we confute all that breake the linkes thereof; and unsavorily make comparisons betweene one and other, to the overthrow of all. Some betweene preaching and prayer: some betweene Word and Sacraments, as the Papists doe. How is the Sacrament of the Altar magnified with them? and how are all other vilified thereby? Whereas we doe hold that they have a sweet harmony, and neither without other to be set up: yea, we are to confesse, that each of them with the other, is better than other; neither sundred from other, Covenant from Seale, Seale from it, private from publike, are profitable. Let each one have his precedency, and his prayse: How should any be wanted, when no one hath the peculiar use of the other, and yet all will supply each others defect? Let the solemnesse of the publike, the familiaritie of the private, and the neede of all, affect us with exceeding thankfulnesse; especially for our libertie in the use thereof, which Popery had debarred us of in each kind by a strange tongue of Scripture, a Sacrifice for a Sacrament; yea, a confusion of many for a few. And secondly, All

Branch 2. such as carry away the honour from the Ordainer, to the Ordinance, by fearefull sacriledge; ascribing to the bare words of Scriptures, (as the Gospell of Saint Iohn) a conjuring power to exorcise Devils, and to the meere opus operatum of Sacraments (the Masse especially) as great power as to Christ; putting the pix-bread into dead mens mouthes: thus falling in love with the meanes, meanes, and renouncing faith to ſet up God above them; whereby the true power of all Religion is turned into a meere Idoll; God juſtly blaſting that which oppoſes his glory.

Thirdly, It convinces all ſuch as live under the meanes of grace barrenly and unprofitably: eſpecially ſuch as lye under the juſt puniſhment of their ſinne, being ſtript and debarred from the Ordinances, for their contempt and fruitleſſe hearings, Such Gardens, Orchards and Grounds as having beene long planted, watered, and husbanded by the hand of God, yet affordе him no fruit ſcarce ſo much as an Apple, a Berry, a Flower, to taſte or ſmell of, for his content: Oh! what an heavie judgement may they expect? Let ſuch looke upon this, whoſe hedge God hath pulled downe and layd them waſte: and yet in the midſt of their affliction, cannot lay their ſinne to heart. Is it ſo? Are the meanes and Ordinances appointed by God for the growth of his People in grace and good Converſation? What a caſe then are ſuch in, as never were begotten to God at all by the Word, the ſeed of the new birth? God never created in them the firſt fruite of the lips, I meane peace through forgiveneſſe. What wonder that ſuch get no other fruite? That they out-grow not their ſwearing, covetouſneſſe, lying, hypocriſie, or grow not more chaſte, patient, upright? How ſhould they? The chiefe Ordinance of the Word never converted them from their Idols to God; nay, the Law never layd the firſt ſtone of ſenſibleneſſe of their ſinne, to ſtoppe their courſe, and cut their combe: much leſſe did the Goſpell ever beget them to a lively hope through grace. Now whom theſe two parts of the Word never beganne to worke upon ſeverally, by grounding them: thoſe, the whole Word joyntly conſidered, never built up in the true uſe of the Goſpell or Law, to the life of Faith and obedience in the courſe of their lives. And therfore how doe they carry the brand of their miſery in their foreheads?

Branch 3. To my owne flocke; and others like. Note well.

As Paul ſayth, 2 Cor. 4. 3. If our Goſpell be yet hidden, its hidden to ſuch as periſh? So, I ſay, If ſtill, yet, after thirtie, fortie, fiftie, ſixtie yeares (you know whom I meane) there be no fruit of our preaching to bee ſeene in hundreths of our hearers, in point of Converſion; who lookes for any fruite of Converſation, for more faith, more humilitie, or the like? And therefore oh woefull Creatures! Doe yee not ſee how one unfruitfulneſſe hath begat another? And, how your dallying with the Word in Aggravation of unprofitablenes under the meanes. 2 Cor. 4 3.

Word in one kinde, hath accurſed you with unfruitfulneſſe in another? So that yee are become a very lumpe of unprofitableneſſe, and it is come to paſſe, that now no meanes can profit you! In Gods feare looke about yee in both reſpects: God is guiltleſſe: If one day he ſhall juſtly condemne thoſe that never were under the Law, Pagans, Turkes, Iewes: what ſhall become of ſuch as have lived under the Law and Goſpell all their life, without the leaſt tincture of fruite therefrom? If this be done in the greene tree, what ſhall be done in the dry? How ſhall the wrath of God ſmoke againſt ſuch? and what corner in hell ſhall be hot enough to torment them? If an husbandman occupie ſuch ground as partakes both of the influence of Heaven, and the husbandry of his owne hand to the uttermoſt, and yet brings forth nothing but Eſay 55.8.9. bryars and brambles fit to be burnt, (but no fruite meete for the dreſſer, either ſeede to the ſower, or foode for the eater:) ſhall he not renounce his occupying thinke we, and forſweare medling with it any more? The very truth is, the ſoyle of many hearers under the meanes of grace, is, of the nature of ſuch ſoyles as will take no amendment by all the coſt that is layd upon them: neither doth coſt mend, nor neglect payre them. They are as Pharaohs evill favoured Kine which devoured the fat, but were as leane ſtill as ever.

Admonition to ſuch. And therefore, oh yee unfruitfull ones under the meanes, tremble at your condition! If your ſinne reached no further than your ſelves, yet it were too much: But yours makes others worſe: yee cumber the ground, yee take up the roome of bettet Plants; ſowre the ground, and cauſe all that growes neere yee to be little worth! Should it not affright a bad wife to thinke both that ſhee cumbers the family, by keeping out a better, and ſowreth both the fruit of husband, of children, and ſervants: that ſo long as ſhee abides, there is no hope of any good? Oh! ſhee ſhould thinke both ſleeping and waking, that God will come and rend her up by the rootes, and give her place to a better than her ſelfe! The like, I ſay, to an unfruitfull husband, childe, and ſervant; and to each hearer in that kinde; ſhould not the Lord take the Napkin and Talent that yee have digd out of the earth, and give it to your neighbour, that will husband it better, and turne you out of your Tenure into a place of horror, and woe: Should hee not pull up the fences, and lay all open to wilde beaſts to devoure yee? Do we wonder that God leaves ſuch wofull perſons,

Congregations

Congregations and Countries, to utter waſtneſſe and deſolation?

Let this humble you, (if any ſparke of grace be left in yee) and behold in what caſe yee are, how bereft of ſence, how forſaken of God, how left to your ſelves, to your luſts, pleaſures, vanities! and never lin till the Lord have rouſed yee out of your dead ſleep, and forgiven your ſinne that hee may reſtore you to your wonted liberties againe, with double appetite, and fruite in time to come! I ſpeake this, becauſe I note it, that when men have no liſt to confeſſe any other ſinne upon their death-bed, as their griping, deceit, lying, hypocriſie, uſury, or the like; yet they dare venture upon the ſinne of unprofitableneſſe, to confeſſe that! Surely, it is not, becauſe they count it the fouleſt of all, (like true Penitents) but the moſt veniall of all others, (like hypocrites) Whereas they ſhould know, that no ſinne either provokes God more to upbraid them, or makes him more at his wits end, how to doe them good: I adde, no ſinne there is, whereof there is more doubt to be made whether God will pardon it: or of the pardon whereof there be fewer examples in Scripture: or whereto are attending more fearefull Companions, as, hypocriſie, impenitency, hardneſſe of heart: or, whereupon are Conſequent more terrible judgements. Exhortation to ſuch.

And (for you of my owne flocke) conſider ſeriouſly, God will have his ſearching time for yee, and diſcover who have gotten a ſtocke of faith and humbleneſſe by all his coſt: hee will have Tryals for yee, and an houre of Temptation, to try who will keep the word of his patience; and who are dead-hearted hypocrites, & Time-ſervers. Hitherto, God hath let yee alone, and yee are ſtill ſenſleſſe of your ſinne, and his rod; but there ſhall come a ſtrong winde one day upon yee to ſhake your frame: if it ſtand, well: if not, that he may make yee know what yee are, and your ruine may be great. Truſt to it, ere yee dye, God will ſend ſome tryall or other to know all which is in your heart! Sticke to him then, and get ſome fruit into yee before that day, or elſe yee ſhall vaniſh and periſh in the tryall, and come to nought, and become an hiſſing to all that have knowne you. Concluſion of this uſe.

Secondly, How precious and adored ſhould the Wiſedome of our God be, in appointing ſo many, and neither more of theſe, nor leſſe than the need of his Church required; neither pampering nor ſterving them, but nouriſhing them: Oh I ſay, how ſhould theſe lift us up to God? As once an holy Vſe 2.

man riding by the Meddowes in the Spring, seeing and smelling such variety of flowers, said, Oh sweet Creatures; but how sweet then is your Creatour? If this foot-stoole bee so set forth, what is his Throne? So let us say, Oh sweet Ordinances, oh beautifull Assemblies, oh usefull varieties; but then how sweet is your Ordainer! Could wee thus meditate hereof (for even the workes of God deserue it, how much more his word) how should that harmony which riseth out of them ravish us? What compound of odours, what consort of Musicke should bee like them? Who should keepe us from them? or what lustre of a princes treasure and wardrobe, or sight of exquisite beauties should draw from us those words which David upon this Meditation uttered, Psal. 84. 1. Oh how amiable are thy Tabernacles? If we be held from them, how should our soule mourn for them, till the Lord gather us to them? Zephan. 3. 18. and how should our spirits and flesh both together, long for them, desiring the Lord to restore them to us with more power, and us to them with more thanks than ever?

Zeph. 3. 18.

Nay, How ought this wisedome of God to teach us holy wisedome to discerne and make use of each flower in this garden of ordinances? How lamentable is it that to this day most of us are so blind in this point? Who sees the use which the Law serves for apart from the Gospell, to be as a neeedle to draw the thread after it? Who blesseth God for the severall power of the Word, converting and building up the soule? Who perceives the difference of Baptisme the Seed, and the Supper the food of the Church; or maketh use of both in their divers temptations? Who knoweth (with the Bee) how to flee to each of these flowers for the vertue of every one? Who goeth to singing of Psalmes when he is merry; or to pray when afflicted; or to fasting in his streights, or against such Devils as no other will expell? Oh how were this wisedome to be desired, that seeing these manifold graces, we might in nothing be wanting? So wee sing or reade, we doe the worke, and all serve for one sore: we see not but reading may convert as well as preaching, and so any thing be walking, what care we? Not to speake of those phantasticke spirits, who forsaking Gods Ordinances, blessed by his mouth, runne into their owne corners to compasse themselves with the sparkes of their owne fancies and revelations: Let such know, there is no wisedome in them, Esay 8.

Esay 8.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Let this be exhortation to all beleevers: first to use; secondly, to live by faith in the use of the meanes. First to use them all, closely, constantly, wisely: despise not the sillinesse, simplicity of them: judge them not by man or out-sides of appearance; sever not the things which God hath united: he hath ordained both their coherence, and use: seeke him in all, if by any meanes, Phil. 3. 11. wee may attaine our desire. Forget we not the scope of the whole Article to be this, That in the use of the means under God, the whole body of godly life to be preserved: Marke then how each grace, libertie, fares the better for it. No small use of them will support so great a frame. Vse all: not knowing in what box our chiefe health consisteth, let not one eclipse and staine the other: affect not private to exclude publike; honour not publike to weaken the esteeme of private; extraordinary to despise ordinary: or ordinary to exclude them. These are the usuall humors of men: if they take a toy in their head, no other Ordinances shall be in price, save such as they list. Let not the difficulty of meditation, of fasting or the rest, dismay thee from them; but be afraid that any one of Gods Ordinances should be a stranger to thee. Reiect none, as thou wouldest be sorry to want the use of any, the contempt of any, will accurse all; because the charge equally concernes all. And for the neglect of the publike, (which is a common sin with most) to lurker at home, when the Word or Sacrament might be enjoyed: I say, it is no marke of a thriving Christian: Grace is as fire, it must have fuell, else it vanishes alone. No meanes, no grace, little use of them, little grace, great use of them (as before qualified) great grace. I will speake boldly, The Lord (in this case) sels grace for labour, to an honest heart. If thy conversation be so poore, and thou so barren in the use of all means, standing up the chin: what wouldst thou prove if thou shouldst quite neglect them? Even stinke where thou goest. Set not any Ordinance above God; but tempt not God in refusing or scant using of any: Looke not to grow alone without word and Sacraments. Vse 3. Phil. 3. 11.

And lastly, (to remember my promise in the point of the life of faith in the second Article,) let this teach us to live by faith in the use of Ordinances: I have already urged it in every of the particulars almost, Fasting, Hearing, Sacraments, &c. This in generall I adde, Therfore the Lord hath not trusted us with outward shews and glory of the world, but with meane and foolish Ordinances Vse 4.

to

to the eye of man; that our ſenſes might not pore upon the face of things, but dive into the ſubſtance, and flie above them, to him that made them, and filled them with Spirit and Life, that wee might ſucke it out by a promiſe. As once an old man being asked if he grew in goodneſſe, ſaid, Yea doubtleſſe I beleeve I do, for God hath ſaid it: ſo let the Ordinances be no object of our ſenſe, but of Faith: and let us ſay, Lord, I beleeve thy Word can helpe me to beare my croſſes, thy Sacraments will leave me better than I came to them; ſtrengthen mee in the inner man, not becauſe I feele it as I would, but becauſe thou haſt ſaid it. Therefore by faith, let us cry out as the Church in the Canticles, Ariſe, O North-winde, and blow upon theſe flowers and ſpices, that they may come into my noſtrils; Elſe thou maiſt be in the midſt of the Garden and ſavour nothing: onely that breath which put in this ſmell into them, can draw it forth againe, and let it in to thee, that ſo thou mayſt ſay, The Word which others heard as the ſound of many waters, hath beene the ſavour of life to mee, to breed me to a lively hope. Not the words uttered, not the bare Elements, but the promiſe belonging to both, is the object of my ſoule: He that ſaith, I will be in the midſt of two or three, Mat. 18.20. and My Spirit is not ſtreightned, but my Word is good to them that walke uprightly. The Word is pure as the Lord himſelfe, yea, piercing the ſoule, &c. is ſtill able to make good his promiſe. And ſo I may ſay of all promiſes made to the Sacraments, My fleſh is meat indeed, and my Blood is drinke indeed, and ſo of the reſt. Therfore I conclude the whole Article thus; All theſe publike and private helpes ſerve to further and ripen a beleever in an holy converſation; all and every one of them. But if I be asked, Doſt thou find each part of thy Converſation to be holpen, and thy ſelfe bettered by each of them? Anſwer thus, I am poore in grace, and dead hearted, but yet for all that, I beleeve it to be ſo, for God hath ſaid it. And this for the fourth Article, and his branches be ſpoken.

The

The fifth Article.

Qu. What is the fifth Article of this third part?

A. THat the New Creatures whole life within and without, is beſet with manifold lets and encumbrances which doe threaten to ſet him backe and hinder him in the courſe of Chriſtianitie. See Texts, Heb. 12. 1. Caſt off every weight and clog. 1. Pet. 5. 8. 1 Ioh. 2. 16. As it is with Chriſt, after his Baptiſme & anointing, inſtantly Satan ſet upon him, Mat. 4. 1. So here. Formerly wee have ſet forth the Church of Chriſt as his ſpouſe in all her abiliments and coſtly Bride-attire, that ſhee may be amiable in her Bridegroomes eye: wee have deſcribed her by all the Iewels which Chriſt hath ſent her as Love-tokens, by all her outward Ordinances, and all her inward priviledges on the right hand, and the left, within and without, to bring her to heaven: now we change her habit, and bring her in with the mourning weed of her Widdowhood, and in her Souldiers or Travellers habit, with her trewell in one hand, the Sword in her other; as the bed of ſweet violets beſet with nettles; the Lillies and Roſes, with thornes. The beſt part wee have ſeene (or ſhall in Article ſix) now wee muſt behold her at her worſt that we may know it before-hand: and if wee will be new Creatures, then reſolve upon it; the next newes will bee lets, enemies ſhrewd turnes, and yet the Roſe is the Roſe ſtill for all theſe. And as it was with the Iſraelites, the rebellion of their ſpirit made a journey of fortie daies, to be of forty years, The Lord would not carry them to that good land with eaſe, through the Philiſtims land, but the Wildernes, full of wilde beaſts, hunger, thirſt, toyle and travell: So is it here, our unrenued part cauſes much woe to us, and fils our life with ſorrow; which though our good God meanes to doe us good by at length, and to make us partakers of his righteouſneſſe, and more than Conquerours; yet the whileſt, a yoke will be a yoke and pinch, and lets will be lets, and the Devill like to himſelfe: there is no remedie of it; the remedy is in our being armed med againſt them, as the members of the Militant Church.

The Converſation of the New creature is beſet with many lets. Heb. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 8. 1 Ioh. 2. 16. Mat. 4. 1. The Illuſtration of the point.

Object. Q. But may not this ſeeme to trench upon the Providence of God, and the merit of Chriſt? Might not hee even here quite us of all theſe, and ſet us in a ſtate of freedome?

Anſw. A. We ſay not that in all theſe hee leaves us as orphans; no, he diets us, phyſickes us, and exerciſes his graces in us, and at length will deale by us as by Iob, whom indeed he was content Satan ſhould ſmite; but his ayme was to make his laſt dayes better than his beſt. This Sun-ſhine of croſſes, and army of lets, and enemies may tullie her face, and eclipſe her beauty, but never divorce her from her husband; temptations and afflictions are lets, but they are not the loſſe of Gods favour, grace, or heaven, but make for our victory and Gods glory, 2 Theſ. 1.6. Therefore as touching the Objection, I anſwer, The Lord cannot be diſhonoured in the way of his owne honour. As for us, we are not capable of any other ſtate here. For firſt, our abode here in an earthly Paradiſe, is turned by the bounty of God, to an heavenly abode with God: and therefore we are not to expect our journey ſhould be like our home: and our ſeafaring as our haven. Beſides, what derogation were this to our head? that hee, Act. 1. muſt ſuffer firſt and ſo enter into his glory, and we his members, put off our harneſſe? Surely, if hee (while he was here) was burthened with all our ſinnes and ſorrowes, enemies and oppoſition, till his death (onely by this way, Phil. 2. he was exalted farre above all Angels) why ſhould we here as pilgrims, looke for better meaſure? It ſufficeth that our full redemption in heaven ſhall pay for all.

Iob 42.12.

2 Theſ. 1.6.

Why the Lord ſets not his wholly at libertie from all lets in this life?

Act. 1.

Phil. 2.

Q. Are all theſe lets equally threatning hurt to us?

Lets are not all equally dangerous.

A. No; for the chiefe of all theſe are our owne lets within us: we carry about us our owne bane of ſoules, as in our bodies of death. The lets without us are nothing to thoſe within us: that corruption of our owne, is the fewell to all other fire, both the Devils and the Worlds: but for this, they could not come at us, as our Saviour ſaid, The Prince of this World commeth but hee hath found nothing in mee. We ſhall find them all to be lets, and that great: howbeit the chiefe enemy is from within us.

Three ſorts of them. 1 Sinne it ſelfe,

Q. Of how many ſorts are theſe lets?

A. Of three ſorts, and they are, ſinne, Satan, and the World.

Q. In how many reſpects is ſin a let unto us?

A.

A. Two wayes, either in respect of it selfe, or in respect of the penalties thereof.

Q. How in it selfe?

A. Either in respect of our native corruption, or of our actuall lusts within, and actuall evills without.

Q. How is our sin in it selfe a let?

A. First, In our corrupt unrenewed nature abiding still. That is a wofull clogge and back-byas, retarding our motion to heaven and flowing of our race, Heb. 12. 1. reade it. Also a most tedious contrarietie in us, and perpetuall enemy, Gal. 5. 17. lusts against the spirit, as a continuall dropping. In the former respect I might liken it to that unnaturall setting of the Sunne ten degrees backe: in the second, to that Peninna, 1 Sam. 1. 7. which vexed Hanna day by day, and upbrayded her as her enemy; or those daughters of Heth, to Rebecca, that were eye-sores, that shee could neuer be quiet for them, her life was made wearisome to her. Moreover, this causes a most bitter mixture, with the good graces of the Spirit, darkening, blemishing them, yea, defiling them as Solomon, Eccles. 10. 1. Dead flyes cause the oyntment of the Apothecary to stinke: so this causes grace to be unsavory. One pang of pride how doth it distaste much grace, how much more then that spirit in us which lusts to no other? Iam. 4. 3. 4 And to conclude, as the furnace sends out infinite sparkles: so doth this corruption minister fewell to all our course? what wofull deadnesse, distemper, distaste, wearinesse, loggishnesse, doth it bring upon our course? how doth it cast wild-fire into the thoughts and affections, and the spirit of a man? so that this sinne is not onely a let and away, but a let in the nature of a principle.

1. In our unrenewed nature. Heb. 12. 1. Gal. 5. 17. 1 Sam. 1. 7. Eccles. 10. 1. Iam. 4. 3.

Q. How else?

A. In respect of our inward actuall lusts and passions; which as Saint Iames saith, fight in our members, Iam 4. but as Peter addeth, fight against our soules: These, whether ye looke upon Saint Iohns description, 1 Epist. 2. 16. The lust of the heart, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, (meaning the world of lust within us, concupiscence after profit, intemperance by pleasures, by sensualitie by glory of the world) or whether our Saviours, Matth. 15. 19. or Pauls Gal. 5. 19. making an induction of particulars, pride, ease, covetousnesse, an evill eye, malice and revenge, uncleannesse, &c. I say these lusts do snib and kill the growth of goodneſſe in the ſoule, and over drip the grace of God as a fowre ſhaddow and the bowes of a Walnut tree doe keepe under ſome tender plant: or as the blaſting of the East winde, the bloſſomes.

Q. How thirdly?

3 Of outward breaches and offences.

A. In the actuall breakings out in open offences and exceſſes, as oaths, blaſphemies, impiety to God, and open contempt of his Word, Sabbaths, patience, croſſes, bleſſings: open cooſenage, uncleanneſſe, intemperance, idleneſſe, wrath, rage, unmercifulneſſe, revenge, worldlineſſe, and the like. If theſe waſte families, and ſtates of men, then how doe they much more waſte and devour the conſcience? how doe they defile the ſoule as naſty creatures doe their litter? what horror, what woe, repentance, complaints doe they cauſe? yea vexations and troubles here; what ſtreights doe they bring a man unto, by ſnaring him, that being once deluded, a man is as Samſon hampered with his Miſtris, unable to get out of her fingers?

Q. How doth ſinne let and annoy by her penalties?

2 way. Of ſinnes letting us: By the Penalties of it.

A. Sinne at the firſt did, and ſtill doth ſcourge her ſelfe: She brings God againſt her both by ſpirituall deſertions, and outward croſſes: both, being ſtinging things to grace and to our nature. For the firſt, when our will hath driven God away from us (as from Samſon) or covered his face from us, that we walke not with that peace, joy and cheere we did before; are as a bone out of joynt, or as a man loſt in a wood, all woe and wan in our ſpirit, yea, perhaps beſotted all the while, as David was a whole yeares ſpace; what a let is this? And ſo when this alſo changes all our courſe of comfort into heavineſſe, brings God againſt us in our bodies, eſtates, poſterity, ſucceſſes, as David after his adultery: or takes away ſpirit from our ſelves that our counſell is turned into fooliſhneſſe, and we bring ſorrow upon our ſelves; or juſtly arme men and enemies to make our lives weariſome to us; how juſt is it that God ſhould encomber us thus, to ſhew what an heavie burden it is to his Majeſty? Nay, how wilfull, impenitent, deſperate, rebellious doth it leave us? Alas! how unſavory doth a luſt make our hearts? how dead, defiled? how doth the heart wax polluted thereby as a ſinkhole? how is it firſt deceaved, then defiled, then habited to ill Cuſtome, then growing to a nature, rivetted and confirmed? then how ſullen, dead and darke doe we grow by it, how endleſſe an appetite of adding drunkenneſſe to thirſt doth it procure? How averſe doth it make us to cloſe with hearing, Sacraments, or to performe duty, prayer to God, mercy, love to men! Patience under the Croſſe?

Q. And what is the ſecond let of a Believer from godlineſſe?

Second generall Let, Satan.

A. That arch old enemy Satan: who although he could not doe us hurt but by our ſin, yet by that tunnell lets in a wofull deale of his owne into us, worſe than our owne, enflaming and exaſperating ſin in us by the adding of his own malice to our ſin, as more waters make the flood greater.

Q. Many thinke we do Satan wrong herein, and thinke all our hurt is from our ſelves: what thinke you of it?

Satan is not unjuſtly accuſed. Iam. 1.4.

A. I ſay they are very charitable and equall toward him that will not be ſo harmeleſſe to them: they alledge Iam. 1. Let no man ſay when he is tempted, &c. but there, tempting is not ſo aſcribed to our concupiſcence that it is denied of Satan, but onely removed from God. I grant indeed we are Divels to our ſelves: but to deny alſo Satan to be one too, were pride and ſecurity, yea a ſpirit of Satan in us, to lye againſt the Scriptures which tell us, he was a lyar from the beginning, and ſo abides; and it's his element to be ſo, can be no other wiſe, yea, ſhould not be, except he could ceaſe to be malicious: beſides thoſe texts; 2 Cor. 11. 3. Leaſt as he beguiled Eve, &c. and 1 Pet. 5. 8. Your adverſary the Devill as a roaring Lyon, &c. and Iob 1. 7. From compaſſing the earth and walking in it: with an hundred more. 2 Cor. 11. 3. Iob 1. 7.

Q. But this may ſeeme to diſhonour God?

This is not diſhonorable to God.

A. No; neither in point of juſtice, nor providence. Not the firſt, for it's juſt with God that ſinne ſhould practiſe it ſelfe till it be out of meaſure ſinfull, and ſo Satan deceive, and ſinners be deceived, for the mutuall miſery of each other. Nor the latter, for the moſt holy God well knowes out of this deadly poyſon of the bad wyles of Satan and men, to work forth his owne will to his glory. But without leave, he can doe nothing: Satan I meane, he is as a dog in Gods chaine.

Q. But how ſhould Satan tempt us?

How Satan tempts.

A. Either by an externall way of perſwading by the object of evill very aptly fitted and ſuted to our ſpirit (the frame whereof he knowes by our carriage) or elſe by an inſinuation of his ſubtile and ſpirituall wicked ſelfe into the ſpirits of man, either the ſpirits of ſences, or fancies (as the temptations lye) and ſo to the reaſonable part. Even as the plague ſavor enters into the naturall and vitall ſpirits to deſtroy nature. How ſoever it be, ſo it is: let us rather learne to reſiſt him, than to queſtion a thing out of queſtion, becauſe difficult.

Q. But if the Devill tempt, and ſinne tempt too, how ſhall we know a difference?

A differencing of our owne tempting our ſelves from Satans temptations. Five differences.

A. There is uſe I grant of this for ſome cauſes, eſpecially for ſtay to the mindes of ſuch as are fouly tempted, yet I could deſire that many who aske this queſtion, would rather ſtrive againſt the thing it ſelfe, than deſcant about the cauſe. And firſt, I ſay, temptation may well (and commonly is) mixed of both Satan and corruption. But for anſwer briefly thus. In five different properties I would diſcerne theſe two. Firſt, by the groſſeneſſe. Secondly, the irkeſomeneſſe. Thirdly, the pertinacy and length. Fourthly, the impetuouſneſſe and violence of them. Fifthly, the inſultation. The temptations from our ſelves doe not commonly reſemble theſe.

The firſt. By their groſſeneſſe.

Firſt, By groſſeneſſe, I meane, fouleneſſe and odious meaſure of ſinfulneſſe in the temptation. Corrupt nature is not ſo foully wicked as Satan; therefore temptations of this ranke, as to Atheiſme, to deny the Scriptures, not to reſt in luſts naturall, but to proceed to foule, unnaturall, and outragious; hath more of Satan than corruption.

The ſecond, By their irkeſomneſſe.

Secondly, By the irkeſomeneſſe, I meane when temptations lye quite out of the tract and courſe of our ordinary inclinations and bents; as when a man exceedingly addicted to be chaſte, or liberall, or confident in God ſhall be buffeted with irkeſom obiects of uncleanneſſe, or of baſeneſſe, or of diſtruſt of providence, whereof no reaſon appeares out of particular nature. Theſe favour of Satan; as when Paul 2 Cor. 12. alway well occupied, findes an irkeſome pricke in the fleſh, to be unapt to any good, praying or preaching; (for ſo I thinke, God cured and prevented pride by eclipſing gifts and Spirit.)

The third, By their pertinacy and cleaving.

The third is pertinacy and length. Corruption is more finite, and ſooner weary, than Satan who is more boundleſſe and full: therefore as the property of a Fly is to light upon a galled plat, as oft as it is beaten off; ſo the Devill (that god of Flyes) doth importunely, and unweariedly tire and dog the ſoule with his temptations, hoping to doe that by tediouſneſſe which hee cannot by malice: So that to be never rid of a temptation is a third marke of Satan.

Fourthly, the violence of them; that is, when hee ſo fires his darts, that they come impetuouſly as a whirle-wind, ſo ſudden and boiſterous, that there is no time to reſiſt; but they come as if they were unanſwerable, and the ſoule muſt yeeld, no remedy. Corruption, commonly, is more leiſurely, and more graduall, abhoring violence and hidiouſneſſe, as we ſee in ſome that have in their heat raviſhed Children, and others who devoure themſelves. The fourth, By their violence.

Fifthly, The inſulting and fury of temptation which followes the fourth, that it comes with a trampling of the ſoule under feete with a diſdaine, as paſt all reſiſtance. If theſe markes be in our temptations, we may by the meſſengers knocking, gheſſe the Maſters feet not to be farre behinde. Oh! what ſhould ſuch a point teach but this, what we are, if God leave us? how curſed a ſpirit and ſty of evill we carry within us? And therefore as to be comforted that they are not wholly our owne; ſo yet to beg of the Lord, mercy to ſtop the rage of our enemy, who if he be let alone, is cruelty it ſelfe: yea his mercies and allurements are greateſt cruelties. The fifth, Their inſulting and predominancy.

Q. Well, come to the temptations themſelves: how many things conſider we in them?

A. Theſe two: The properties of the Tempter, and the ſubſtance of the Temptations. Two things to be noted here.

Q. What are theſe properties?

A. Theſe; Firſt, Malice ever ſets him on worke againſt the body and ſoule of the Creature. Secondly, Vigilancy and attention alway doe aſſiſt his Temptations. Thirdly, Miſchiefe and woe is ever in the end thereof, to pull the ſoule from union and Communion with God. Fourthly, the Method and manner of his tempting, which is to be weighed according to the parties tempted. If weake and unable to reſiſt, he treads downe the low hedge, never troubling himſelfe further needleſly. And thus he is himſelf, a Lyon; as Act. 16.27. the Iaylor being under terror, eaſily ſurprized, and as if the priſoners fled (for ſo hee thought) would have deſperately ſtabd himſelfe. The Devill behinde him, tels him, As good ſo as be executed; but by this hee would have prevented his Converſion. But if he finde other objects, and ſtrength of grace to reſiſt ſinne as ſinne, he goes another way to worke. As, firſt, to anticipate the counſell of the heart in

The Method of his Tempting.
I
If weake, treads downe the low hedge, preventing ſin, by the ſuddenneſſe of injection. Thus, Mat. 4. in the twinkling of an eye he had darted in his glorious bait of honour into our Saviour. Secondly, to aſſault judgement and conſcience both at once, in blinding the one, and in binding the other: Thus he blinded Eve in that ſpeech, God knoweth that your eyes ſhall be open, and yee made as Gods. What was this, ſave to make obedience baſe, and ſinne ſweet? that is, In obeying, yee ſhall but ſerve the envie of an enemy. And your eating were to make yee better. So he did bleare Davids eye in Mephiboſhaths caſe, knowing that elſe he had never prevailed by Ziba, therefore, hee preſenting him as a Traytor, makes David ſay, Why telleſt thou me of thy matters? 2 Sam. 19.

1 By ſudden injections.

2 By blinding the mind.

2 Sam. 19.

And binding the will all at once.

Secondly, By his binding the will in point of her reſiſtance: and that by the exceſſive ſweet of the bait. Thus to David in Bathſheba: Oh! Who would thinke a woman ſo goodly, ſo alluring, to be dangerous? A companion ſo fine ſpoken and complemental, to be ſo ſinfull! This beares all downe. Samſon went to ſee her who was precious in his eyes; that bleared him. Thirdly, By putting on the perſon of one unſuſpected; as ſometime purſuers of a man will praiſe him to get others to betray him: and Iael to deceive Siſera, brought him Creame in a lordly diſh. And thus he becomes an Angell of light, as holy as a Preacher. Thus hee tempts Chriſt to leape downe, and to make ſtones bread, out of a godly end (forſooth) that Gods power might be glorified in a miracle. Thus hee tempts good men, you are well knowne to keepe good conſcience, to do ſuch or ſuch a thing for ſo good an end; oh, who will ſee it? Avoide Devill, God needes not my ſin to honour himſelfe; I ſin too much unavoydably, I need not adde ſin to ſin willingly!

3. By Deluding

Thirdly, By the deluſions and deceits which he beguiles ſilly ſoules by, that hee may circumvent them and bring them into his ſnare. Sin is a ſubject which admits infinite cunning, to deceive the ſoule, that it may be catcht ere it be aware. He hath fine names to ſet upon odious crimes: that with the names, the things might enter eaſily. Adultery or fornication are but trickes of youth: prodigalitie but good fellowſhip: faſhions, but handſomneſſe: mizerlineſſe but providence: pride of heart and life, but good courage, and living in good ſort: Theſe are his dice-play and cunning, Eph. 4. The Harlot entiſes the young man by her ſpices, Carpets, and perfumes; her husbands abſence:

Theſe

Theſe delude the heart and bleare the eye, till like a foole his heart be darted through. Such are the ſubtill promiſes and bayts which his hookes are covered with: As to Eve, Yon ſhall be as God knowing all things! Oh! thou ſhalt be rich, accounted of, great, and come to perferment, if thou wilt not be ſo preciſe: none are ſo ſingular as thou but fooles and beggars.

Q. But when he knowes he cannot finally prevaile, it ſeemes fooliſh for him to tempt?

A. Yea: If his wiſedome were from above; but it is earthly, ſenſuall and divilliſh: Therefore he goes againſt the edge of his wiſedome, even as his inſtruments doe, defiling themſelves in the things they know. If ever hee knew any, hee knew our Saviour to be out of gun-ſhot; yet out of his fulneſſe of malice, hee aſſaulted him bitterly. If hee cannot keepe the people of God from heaven, yet let it availe as it may, he will ſee if hee can make them halt to heaven. And yet I may adde, that hee hopes well to get many to himſelfe, who as yet ſeeme far enough off; his hopes are impudent, Mat. 12. 44. he ſaith, I will returne, and bring ſeven ſpirits worſe, &c. He knowes not but he may doe ſo with any; but to be ſure, he will not faile to try: and prevailes with too many.

Satan tempts againſt the edge, becauſe he is malicious.

Mat. 12. 44.

Q. Proceed to the temptations themſelves?

A. Theſe concerne the godly (for of the other I ſpeake not here, but in the firſt part,) ſince that theſe are Tempters both to themſelves and to others; and they are ruled by the Prince of the ayre, who rules in all the children of diſobedience, Eph. 2. 2. and leades them as the Oxe to the ſlaughter, out of their fat paſtures, and according to his will, 2 Tim. 2. 26. Therefore, (to returne) theſe concerne them either in the point of their calling to be the Lords; or in point of their eſtate being called.

The ungodly are Devils to themſelves.

Q. In how many reſpects about their firſt Calling?

A. Either in Gods preventing call, or his aſſiſting, or his perfecting. Touching his preventing, thus: No ſooner doth hee ſee any ſinner make toward the voyce of GOD, to looke into his old courſe, or hearken after a new; but preſently he ſets upon them even in their entrance. Firſt, By preſenting old ſinnes, with all their circumſtances, order of them, number, hainouſneſſe, continuance, long contempt, &c. to diſmay them from poſſibilitie of converſion. If they anſwer him, they had more neede to ſeeke mercy, he tells them, Its too late,

1. About calling. The Temptations of the godly are three-fold.

1. About Gods preventing grace: and how?

God will not take the leavings, they ſhould have given him their beſt ſtrength, courage, time, &c. Or, hee aſſaults them with their weakeneſſe of capacitie, or memory, gifts, or parts, that they ſhall never compaſſe ſuch great things; Learned wiſe men are too little for them. Or hee diſcourages them with their husbands ill will, the loſſe of fathers love, and land; the worlds diſdaine, the reproach of their old companions, yea, perhaps brethren and kindred: Or, that the things they muſt forgoe both in liberties and luſts, are more than they can beare: that they ſhall never endure the trouble of repentance, and change of heart, or at leaſt they will be of another minde when charge and trouble comes, and ſhall never perſevere to the end. But, O Satan, avaunt! The Lord hath prevented me, and drawne me out of darkeneſſe: ſhall he ſuffer me to periſh in light? No; as thy firſt aſſaults, ſo his grace will be moſt eager in my entrance to hold mee out of thy clawes, and from revolting.

Q. How tempts hee in the aſſiſting grace?

2 About his aſſiſting grace,

A. Eſpecially in the firſt workes of the Law, hee corrupts the minde and ſpirit, both in the enlighning part, and the terrifying. The former, hee abuſeth to multiply the feareſull view of ſinne: The latter, to make terror intolerable. He tempts to be weary of this Diſcipline; tels them, ſome good people never had terror; that it will ſpoyle their natures, (and ſo it will in a ſort) that they were beſt to put it by, for feare of melancholy, and theſe Preachers will kill them: let them be merry, and ſport themſelves with pleaſures, with eaſe and libertie, and then their ſenſes will be freſher, themſelves fitter for good. Now they are but dulled, and the Preacher will caſt downe ten, ere comfort one; and therefore leave off with ſmall trouble rather than great: and, terror is not converſion neither, it can doe no good, but kill. And when many are thus ſnared, they deſtroy themſelves by violence, deſpairing of any helpe. But if they grow to ſome hope by the Goſpell, (and not to make their hell another heaven,) then hee tempts them about the condition of the Promiſe, either for kinde or meaſure, that they never ſaw that ſweetneſſe in Chriſt which ſhould breake their hearts: they never mourned enough, nor hungred, nor tooke paines aright, nor prized the Promiſe; or if they did, yet for neceſſitie, or elſe out of ſelfe-love? Alas! they have deſpiſed the Goſpell it ſelfe, and can grace ſave them that have hardned themſelves as well againſt it, as the Law? Beſides, they ſee others called home long ſince, themſelves behinde; they are ſo vile, hardned, unworthy, cannot pray, meditate, and therefore, God may doe much, but they are daily worſe rather than better; and ſo in the reſt: it is not condition can ſave them, but faith: They ſeeke not Gods glory, but themſelves.

Goſpell,

Q. And how in the worke of Beleeving?

A. Here he labours to hold them under, eſpecially by their irkeſome bondage. Oh, ſaith hee, Faith is onely of the Elect, and thou art none: it's the free gift of God, and he may deny it as well as grant it: Many have come to the birth, and have dyed ſo; and to beleeve, is a greater thing than to talke of it. Sometimes he makes it leſſe than it is, to puffe up the heart with preſumption: Or, he hides the vertuous favour and ſtrength of the Promiſe, the ſimplicitie, the faithfulneſſe of the Promiſer, and the offer. He tells them, if they beleeve, they muſt be changed, (Which is hardeſt of all) The Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 4.4. ſummes up the whole matter briefly, He blindes the eyes of unbeleevers, that the light of the glorious Goſpell ſhould not ſhine unto them: and ſo holds them in feare and infidelitie: yea, rather than faile, he will ſeeke to pull downe the whole frame of God over their head: fill them with temptations about the truth of the Scriptures, as if they were but fables, as if Miniſters preacht their owne fancies: He poyſons them with melancholicke diſtempers and feares, askes them how they know whether this Word (which they ſo cleave to,) is the Word of God or not? Puts worſe temptations into them; namely, whether there be any God or no? And (moſt uſually) keepes them, betweene the doubt of the Condition, and the doubt of the Promiſe, to be alway at uncertainties. But, oh poore ſoule, how ſhalt thou know thy Election ſave by beleeving? or what is that freedome of God, ſave his bountie to the miſerable, and who are worthy (Rev. 3.4.) ſave thoſe who are made ſo? Looke backe to that I have written in Part 2. Article the laſt, and God ſtay thee by thoſe Anſwers!

The third, In the perfiting grace.

Rev. 3.4.

Q. Proceed to his temptations of them that are called?

A. Theſe concerne them either in point of their faith (and as touching the former, he tempteth two wayes: either about the being, or the life of faith;) or elſe, ſecondly, their obedience.

A ſecond ſort of Temptations concerning the already called.

Q. How

1 About their faith; either in her being.

Q. How about the being of faith, doth he tempt?

A. Thus: he takes advantage of the weake ſetling at the firſt, and by that unrenewedneſſe of nature, which oppoſes this ſpirituall grace, hee ſeekes to overthrow them in the holding of their confidence. He knows this is their onely prop, and therfore ſometime by ſhewing them how poore their fruits are, or how ſmall their humblings were, or what ſelfe-love is mixed with their faith, or how deadly and dully they walke, or that they cannot appropriate Chriſt in each part of his merit, or by the like: he concludes their faith is but temporary, and no faith of the Elect. And at ſuch a bay he holds ſome for lacke of knowledge, that they yeeld and are ready upon the leaſt Sermons touch, or obſerving of other mens confidence, (for many are too confident) or upon the occaſion of any meanes to bee uſed, or duty to be done, or croſſe ſuffered, or the urging of any priviledge of a beleever, to ſtart and ſay, yea, if I had faith! But I have none. Poore Creature, if ever thou hadſt it, thou yet haſt it: and therefore hold that thou haſt got, 2 Ioh. 8. And diſpute for grace and thy ſelfe, not againſt them.

Q. How about the life of faith?

Of her life.

A. Exceedingly. For in truth, this proves the other. He therfore knowing what advantages he hath in this by either that naturall eaſe, ſloth and awckneſſe to enlarge the truth of one promiſe to all: and partly that willing want of Chriſtians in this point who chuſe rather to ſoder with God in duties, than obey him in nouriſhing their faith daily: he doth very much prevaile: and by the ſmall life of faith, ſeekes to deſtroy the being of faith: If thou hadſt but faith as a graine of Muſtard-ſeed, thou mighteſt remoove mountaines: But alas, what faith haſt thou, who canſt not beare ſuch a ſlight croſſe, a petty fillip of the finger, an ill word for thy profeſſion, the loſſe of a little matter, Cow, or Horſe? Nay, many that want faith, can beare more than thou. If thou livedſt by faith, either in ſtates, meanes, graces, or duties, thou wouldeſt bee otherwiſe than thou art? not ſo ſoone unſetled: not ſo little growing, not ſo defective in the meaſure of grace, in uprightneſſe, in integritie, &c, But let the Reader read of this in the ſecond Article of the life of Faith. Take from Satan his chiefe weapon, thy careleſſe neglect, and the Lord ſhall ſticke to thee in point of weakneſſe.

Q. How

Q. How doth he aſſault in point of obedience?

A. Either he tempts them about it, or againſt it.

Q. How tempts he them about it?

A. Thus: he buffets them in their comfort therein. For whereas its Gods will that he that walkes uprightly, ſhould walke ſafely & ſweetly; loe, Satan ſeparates the end from the meanes. An hypocrite ſeparates the means from the end; looking for peace where there is no uprightneſſe. But here the ſtratagem of the Devill is contrary; and therefore, either he hides that from his eye, which ſhould be his maine comfort in all faylings: or elſe takes vantage by that which ſhould be his humiliation, to be his utter diſcouragement. And indeed; he is rightly himſelfe in this: for as in the former point he belyes God to the ſoule, as if he could not ſupport it for ever by his promiſe in the life of faith, as Heb. 13.8. ſo here he belyes the ſoule to it ſelfe, and holds it in bondage. And although he cannot rob it of the truth of grace, yet he robs it of the comfort thereof, chooſing to play at any game, rather than ſit out. For the former of theſe, what is the joy of a deare ſervant of God in his poore obedience, duties, Sabbaths, but that of Hezekiah, O Lord, thou knoweſt I have beene upright! This the Devill hides away from the ſoule in point of comfort by it, as if it were little worth for lacke of meaſure. And then, whereas the want of meaſure, integritie, fruitfulneſſe and conſtancy, ſhould onely humble them, loe, it dejects them: Oh (ſay they) what good doe I, what ſerve I for? a very clod of the earth; what wife, husband, friend, neighbour or ſtranger fares the better for me? None live ſo as I? ſo barren! Oh put caſe it be true, it ſhould abaſe thee, but ſeeing there is uprightneſſe, it ſhould not diſmay thee! And looke what the poore Chriſtian doth moſt note by himſelfe to be amiſſe, that Satan takes for granted, to doe the ſoule moſt hurt by; Loe, theſe ſinnes thou confeſſeſt, therefore of thy own mouth God may condemne thee. No, wofull enemy, for he that confeſſes and forſakes them all, and would be as fruitfull as he is honeſt, as wiſe as he is upright, ſhall not be caſt off. Oh! the wofull bondage that Satan holds many a ſad heart under, (though ſincere,) by melancholy and feare.

2 About their obedience.

Heb. 13.8.

Prov. 28. 13.

Q. And how doth he tempt againſt obedience?

A. Sundry wayes hee labours to bring the ſoule under ſinne, to renounce a good courſe, to be ſlacke, remiſſe, looſe, common, prophane, unprofitable, even by conſent. And this is his moſt naturall temptation. For, as he is exceedingly wicked; ſo, its little little to him that comfort be ſtopped, except the conſcience be waſted; now that he knowes ſinne againſt knowledge will doe; and hereby bring God againſt a man alſo. As Balaam *Num.*31. 16. ſeeing Sorcery could not curſe Iſrael, ſought to lay blocks of ſinne before them, that God might curſe them: Oh! what a May-game was it (thinke we) for him to ſee David foyled by Adultery, Noah by drunkenneſſe, Lot, by inceſt, Hezekia by pride, Peter by revolt? How doth ſuch ſucceſſe put hopes into him, to keepe and practiſe his Trade upon the beſt? Therefore here he uſes all meanes to bring his purpoſes to paſſe. He takes vantage of each thing. Firſt, Hee markes his ſeaſon and time, when the heart is moſt naked, unarmed, at eaſe, (as Abſalom noted Amnon) lying moſt open, and being ſwept and garniſht; which perhaps, another time would have beene armed, jealous, and fearefull. Thus David in Bathſheba: He concurres not onely with the corruption of the heart as before: but ſecondly, with the conſtitution and complexion of the ſpirit of nature in a man: Is hee propenſe to luſt, to uncleanneſſe, to jovialneſſe, to ambition. Oh, (ſaith he) he is mine! I will tempt him with meet baits. Thirdly, He watches the accomodation of occaſions; as when acceſſe of chearefulneſſe, or of ſadneſſe, of praiſes or diſgraces, of welfare and ſucceſſe, or defeat, or the like; and when the ſpirits are open, then is his opportunity to worke the heart to wanton ſpeech, to riot, to wrath, and diſcontent, to ſwelling pride, to oſtentation of gifts, to the making away of a mans ſelfe, and the like. Fourthly, Hee will make uſe of their beſt graces and Priviledges: all men know you well enough to be one that make conſcience, you may doe ſuch or ſuch a thing, and no man ſuſpect yee; therefore be not ſo nice in trifles, deſeat an Orphan, oppreſſe the fatherleſſe, falſifie the truſt repoſed in yee, &c. Fifthly, Sometime of ſecrecie of time and place: who ſhall ever find it out: who is here (twenty mile from neighbours) to diſcover thee? Sixthly, By fine colours of pretenſed meanings; as Ananias and Saphira meant well to the Church, why might they not meane well to themſelves? So by colour of Iuſtice, my paines have beene ſuch and ſuch in buſineſſe for others, why may not I pay my ſelfe ſo and ſo, they being never the wiſer; and perhaps never the worſe, as the caſe may ſtand? As once a wretch ſpake of money given him for the poore, who is poorer then my ſelfe? Seventhly, By their falls, to drive them to ſinne for ſomewhat, rather than to be puniſhed for little, over-ſhooes, over-knees: So, by comparing themſelves with worſe than themſelves, to bee bold and preſumptuous in liberty-taking: By the oft ſhunning of ſinfull occaſions, to venture beyond their calling, and ſo be ſnared. Nay, by truths of God, both in examples of the Saints fals, why maiſt not thou doe ſo and repent? And in rules that the beſt men have their infirmities, and therefore why ſhould I bee free? Infinite is this field, (let the reſt of the ſheaves bee brought to theſe bands:) but if he can ſo dazle the heart till he have ſnared us, he will be content we ſhall afterward ſee in what pickle wee are, get out how wee can? Theſe for a taſte, although I might ſay that his oppreſſing the ſoule being thus fallen, that it might not riſe againe; with-holding the ſight of mercy, encreaſing either ſtupor of conſcience, or ſlavery of diſtruſt, and ſo whirling off the ſoule till death, is worſe than the former. But I ceaſe.

Or againſt it. By bringing under the ſoule to ſinne.

Q. What is the third let? Can the world let us alſo?

A. Yea moſt dangerouſly; and that by defiling the mindes the wils, and courſes of men, both in doctrine and manners. See Epheſ 4. 14. Rom. 12. 2. 1 Ioh. 2. 16. And again, 1 Ioh. 5. 19. (Lyeth in evill) as in the ſequell ſhall appeare.

The third generall Let, The World. Epheſ. 4. 14. Rom. 12. 2. 1 Ioh. 2. 16. 1 Ioh. 5. 19.

Q. But how can this be? ſhew it plainly.

A. It both containeth in it all evill, and ſetteth it forth, and is it ſelfe ſet on fire by the Devill, who is the Chapman of it, to ſet the gloſſe upon them, and to vend the wares of it. For the firſt of which; ſee that in Iohn, All that is in the world, is the luſt of heart, luſt of the eye, pride of life. He ſpeakes of theſe not onely as the appetites of bad men, but as worldly objects This Ware then being the worlds Merchandize and Staple, no wonder if ſhee defile. For the ſecond, Shee is carefull not onely to keepe in her Ware-houſe, but to lay forth upon the open ſtall, and ſet out to ſale theſe Wares in the moſt buſie manner that can be: No Market, or Fayre, no company or meeting, no family, or place of reſort, but ſauoring theſe commodities; eyes gazing, feet walking, hands reaching after, tongues jangling, members of body, and powers of ſoule attending and acting this Merchandize: and therefore Saint Iohn ſaith, The world lyeth in evill: ſaped in the Converſation of it. For the third, The Devill, the God of this world, and Lord of this Staple, and Common-wealth, to whoſe banke and Exchequer all this this cuſtome and Tribute goes, (I meane hell) is not wanting both to ſuppreſſe all meanes which might marre this Market of Miſchiefe; and is at hand to unite, to acquaint, to accomodate theſe wares to all Cuſtomers (as their minde moſt ſtands to one more than other) that the buyers are as forward as ſellers, and ware as plentifull as either; and he wants no skill, nor policy, nor art to put off his wares, that they lye not upon his hand ſo, but he may live richly upon his revenue. Therefore no queſtion but the world is a wofull let.

How the world may be ſaid really to defile?

Q. Wherein ſtands this, and how manifold is it?

The world is either the dead world, defiling.

A. The whole world of evill may bee called either the dead world, or the living. I call it not dead, as if there were no perſwaſion in it, but to diſtinguiſh it in the manner of perſwading.

Q. What meane you by the former?

A. Not onely that the world is dead in ſinnes; but this, that the world, though ſhee doth not actually ſpeake out, yet her very guiſe doth defile and delude, and that in two particulars: firſt, Examples: ſecondly, Errors.

1 By examples. And that, 1. By imitating them.

Q. How by her Examples.

A. In theſe reſpects; 1. By imitation of them: 2. By exchanging them: 3. By the ſtreame of them. Touching the firſt; As in Droves the former Oxen or Sheepe lead all the reſt; ſo ſenſibleneſſe leades on ſinners by each others examples. No way to defile and ſcatter ſinne ſo eaſily as this; rules would not ſo ſoone do it. We are very apt by the eye or eare to follow bad, becauſe it goes with the haire. Inward luſt tickles; but examples doe much more perfect ſin: Exod. 22. 2. Follow not a multitude (or the great ones) to ſinne, When Miniſters, Magiſtrates, Learned ones, ancient ones, and the greater part of theſe be ring leaders, people, ſubjects, ſimple, young, eaſily follow. Hence that phraſe Rom. 12. 2. Be not faſhioned according to this world. The world hath a faſhioning qualitie in it, and one Ape will follow another: Man is ſociable: and as thoſe that live in Cities, learne more than poore people in a Village; ſo, ſinne committed in the view of many, taints more than concealed, or private. As wee know a thing conveyed by a Pageant, or a ſong, ſinkes deepeſt; ſo here. That which men catch up in Ale-houſes, Play-houſes, Fairs, meetings, hath a peculiar fitneſſe to enter. The parents example ſaith nothing, but ſpeakes moſt ſtrongly.

Q. How

Q. How doth the world defile by exchange?

A. When no sooner one hath lickt up a bad example, but presently hee retales it and gaines thereby. As it is in Fame it encreaseth by passage; so with the sinne of the world, Men thinke they must adde somewhat of their owne, to the ripening and making up of it. If the Father teach the child to sweare, he will teach his to forsweare: If one teach theft, another will teach sacriledge; So it comes to passe, that sin abounds, and is growne out of measure sinfull; each man putting in his owne art, skill and experience to the common stocke. Its our nature if we have a seed, to sow it, and see the proofe of it; and if a gift, to put it to use. Every one sowes this Darnell and Cockle; and sinne having had long time to practise, is grown rich, plentifull, selfe-supporting, able to defend her selfe by all trickes, invention, equivocation and devices. As hee said of a decaying world, wee are dwarfes, and our children will bee gnats; so I of the encreasing, We are strong men and the next will bee gyants; Wee commit it, they will bee hardned and naturalized into a custome of it; defend, extenuate, and maintaine it. 2. By exchanging them.

Q. How doth it hurt by the streame of it?

A. By the violence and irresistableneese thereof: For sinne in the two former, will soone amount or streame of universalitie; so that none almost will bee found to resist: and then as the necessitie of an armed theefe is upon a naked Traveller, so is the streame to particular persons. As the Sodomites said to Lot, Shall this man rule over us? so saith the streame of sinne, Who shall controll us? What are they wiser than the world? When that which is evill is done by priviledge, then it's come to a streame. As in Nationall vices; drunkennesse in Germany, pride and state in Spaine, uncleannes in Italy, &c. Thus we see this peece of the dead world hath yet an objective life in it selfe. 3. By the streame of bad example.

Q. What is the second part of this dead world, the error of the world?

A. It is that which in one word the Apostle elegantly and pithily, Ephes. 4. 14. cals the Dice-play of men, and cunning craftinesse, whereby they leade aside to deceive. Read it, and marke it. And it stands in the Art of the world in men-deceiving. And you may judge it by these five branches of it. Error, first 2. part. Of the dead world, error of the wicked. Five-fold.

of

of tradition: ſecondly, of ſcandall; thirdly, in baſe and blinde cuſtome; fourthly, conceit; fiftly, cooſenage.

Q. What are theſe? explaine them?

1. Tradition.

A. The firſt is of tradition, which is when ſin prevailes by ſucceſſion from man to man: Thus the errors of Popery: and old ones new minted, pleading antiquitie. Read 1 Pet. 1, 18. 1 Pet. 1, 18. hee tels them they lived in ſinnes taught, and obtaining by the tradition of their fathers, from age to age. As its reported of that heathen King when he was brought to Baptiſme, ſhrunke from it, asking, whether more of his predeceſſors or fewer had beene Baptized: and hearing that fewer had beene, refuſed it, ſaying, I will doe as moſt have done. Men rather love to erre with a current of interpreters, than to ſpeake true with one. So thoſe Samaritans: compare 2 King. 17. laſt, with Ioh. 4. and behold what error will doe!

Q. What is ſcandall?

2. Scandall, what?

A. When the world, glad to rivet her ſelfe in evill, deludes her ſelfe with the offences of hypocrites; and by their ſcandals layes blockes in mens way, that they might ſtumble at the truth. Mat. 18. 7. Woe to the world becauſe of offences: (both given and taken) God juſtly ſuffers damnable hypocrites to play their parts, both to detect them, and to ſnare the prophane: Thus Paul 2 Tim. 3. 13. The wicked ſhall waxe worſe and worſe, deceiving, and being deceived. Loe yee, (ſay men) what this great preacher, or profeſſor is become! and even of this ſtampe are they all: neither barrell better herring. By this error, thouſands are quite overthrowne.

Q. What is Cuſtome?

3. Cuſtome, what?

A. It is that error which deceives by preſcripton of long uſe. Thus divorces prevailed to bee lawes among the Iewes, being lawleſſe things, becauſe Moſes had permitted them: and ſo at this day, Cuſtomes of Games, Dancings, Faires upon the Sabbaths, Wakes, and drunken feaſts, with a hundred ſuch upon ſuch dayes are ſwallowed without any ſcruple. Cuſtome growing another nature: every Preacher, Magiſtrate, and Law pulling them up, ſaving thoſe that trie. That old Cannon of the Greek Councell ſtill being in force, Let old Cuſtomes prevaile. Good ones are puld up as a tender new-ſet plant; bad ones, as old Okes.

Q. What is conceit and opinion?

A. Error

A. Error against goodnesse, by prejudice: See Mat. ult. vers 4. Conceit & opinion, what? know that Scil is every where ill spoken of. This is the worlds leaven in the three pecks of meale of mens perswasion till all be leavened. Thus wicked men to confirme themselves in evill, take up base, trivial conceits and errors against the way, the servants and Ordinances of Christ, which being once given out, prove irrevocable: See Math. Cap. 28. 15. The Priests gave large money to the Souldiers to give it out that Christ was stollen away: and this prevailed long after against the resurrection. So men speake of the godly, Tush, doe yee beleeve them? I warrant yee they can breake their promises, bee as hard and covetous as others; this new learning never did good; wee lived better ere it came: there was better house-keeping, and love among neighbours: your greatest professors shutting up their doores, and living in some corner of London to spend all upon new fashions, or else to hoard up for their Children, (which is too true.) And so they speake of the good Ministry; they doe but drive men out of their wits: they are factious and turbulent. And in old times, the world reported of the faithfull, that they met in the night, and after their devotions, put out their lights, and fell to uncleannesse: with a thousand such.

Q. What is Coosenage?

A. That Trade, of which mainly the Text treats, Ephes. 4. 18. 5. Coosenage what? Ephes. 4. 18. whereby false Teachers, Schismatickes and Hereticks blanched their conceits: wresting their wits to abuse the Scriptures, to set false Colours upon their opinions. And so the subtill and cunning devices which drunkards, and the like, set upon their sinne. So, the cheating chapman hath his glosing protestations, colors, and trickes: that harlot Iezabel abused painting to cover her murther; the Strumpet in the Proverbs saith, She hath payed vowes: when that Woman came with her circumstances to David, hee asked, Is not the hand of Ioab here? So may we say, If the Father of lyes and trickes were not in this world of cogging and coosenage, how else could it deceive so as it doth?

Q. Proceed to the next Branch of the living worlds defilements: wherein doe they consist?

A. Partly in words, partly in deeds. The former are the 3 The living world. open corrupt Counsels of sinners, or their secret insinuations.

Prov. 7. 18. Of the former, see Prov. 7. 18. the harlot tempts her Paramour, Come let us take our fill: my husband is farre off. And the theefe, Prov. 1. 13. Prov. 1. 13. Cast thy lot in with us, we will have one purse. But more close ones are such whisperers as the Apostle cals, Private corrupters of minds whose words fret like a Canker, 2 Tim. 2. 17. Thus some doe whisper in secret against Magistracy, and good Ministers, and against many others, against governement of parents, entising their children, servants, yea, wives from their loyaltie. So doe wicked Preachers scatter their false tenents or principles of prophaneness to taint mens judgements or manners. Thus young novices are beaten off from their zeale and hearing: I would scorne (saith one) to be tyed to their girdles. Thus in Universities and Schooles, there are infinite corrupters of youth.

2 Tim. 2. 17.

Q. What are the deeds of the living world?

The deeds of the living world.

A. All their wicked malicious, cruell intents, threats and pursuits of the godly to quash them, and to uphold their owne Kingdome. As those Scribes and Pharisees had a Law to crucifie Christ, though they made it for the nonce: And Daniel 6. those enemies of his. This trade were infinite to rip up. As Popish machavillian plots and devises to dismay, to suppresse and destroy all puritie of Doctrine and power of Religion. Witnesse their inquisition, prisons, censures, and torments, both ying in waite for the precious soules and bodies of men: and sacrificing of them unto their God Maozzim, wherein they doe whatsoever the Devill their Father hath taught them, with absurd, unreasonable, and implacable hearts to the Truth. What doe not Papists at this day? Witnesse their costly, curious, unwearied vigilancy and enquiry after any such as have but once muted against them, either forcing them to abjure, or oppressing their liberties, states, and lives.

Witnesse that incredible insulting insolency, wherewith having gotten them, they crow over them, and crush them. Witnesse those politique devices they have, by their Promotions or feares, to separate even brethren themselves, that so the truth might bee traduced by their differences, that one might adde affliction to the others bands: and themselves, might reigne in their divisions, and crush them both in time. Witnesse those sufferings of schismes and novelties, which rend in two the truth, without any inquiry against them: that so they might might keepe their owne Kingdome quiet, while others are about thier private opinions. Witnesse their toyssing in by degrees here one, there another dangerous tenent, overthrowing the foundation, and so the power of Religion: their bolstering up such as serve this turne: crossing all both persons, causes, and occasions, which might impugne them: Their poysoning of their novices with Preferment at the first to drinke in their doctrine; Their abandoning of Preachers, except in their Lent fast; and setting up their Traditions farre above Christ and the Ministry of faith or repentance. And thus I have gone over this whole Doctrine of the Lets in the three parts thereof.

Q. What now is the use hereof?

A. Large and plentifull, I will but touch the heads; and first it should be usen of Instructiō to us, to be humbled, to be comforted, and to long after a full redemption. For the first, Its humiliation to the best of Gods children, for their selfe-love, and for this misery that lyes upon them. For marke it, what out-cryes doe we make if any man wrong us in our bodies, goods, or names, lives or liberties? (and indeed it is true, we have bitter enemies,) but oh poore soules! who is such an enemy, such a Traytor, such a Devill to us as our selves? At home begins our sorrow and our woe; in our bosomes are those evils of pride, prophaneness, hypocrisie, and selfe-love, which bane us; and what they cannot doe of themselues, they doe by others, setting doore open, and letting in Divell and world to rifle and rob us of all; without which, no enemy could hurt us. Learne wee truly and cordially to cry out upon our selues for all this misery which in this vale thereof, lyes upon us. As Paul, Rom. 7. O miserable man! Why? This body of death, and world of sinne creates a world of sorrow in us; of annoyances, feares, doubts, strength of lusts, little growth, errors of wicked, deadly feud of Satan, melancholly, crosses, bad times, poverty, bootlesse wrongs, hardnesse of heart, harshnesse to the yoke of Christ; an unbroken, carnall, pusillanimous, froward, impure heart: Are not these sorrow our belly full, to us, at the best? If God slayed them not with inward supports, who should endure them? Oh! so it must bee, yet let us mourne under our bondage, such as are led into captivity, are no merry folke; witnesse they who hung their harpes on the Willowes, and were so ful of anguish, that they could not sing: How shouldst thou, poore soule, in a strange Branch 2. Secondly, Yet let this comfort them for the present, that it is no other wise with them in this their sorrow, than that wise God, their good Father, hath allotted them, so that if they feele their burden they may cheere themselves with this, They are as God will have them, it's their pilgrimage, their way home, their Bacha, their warfare, the Lord will worke them triumph out of these battels and combats: he will purge them, and conforme them to his deare Sonne by them; and even the sume and penalties they here endure, yet are conforming and moulding things to make their victories sweeter. It is not well with them (they may say) but it shall bee; they see it a farre off: if this were a life of perfection, if any of the faithfull were exempt from the like, then this were cause of all, and onely mourning. But here the best of our perfection, is the sight of our imperfection: wee are as well on it, as our head: while he was here in this strange land, he could neither be rid of our sinnes, nor of infirmities, or enemies, but after ward he knew no more. Very gladly, therefore, will I be glad even of my desertions, and tentations: to me its a sure signe of consolation; to them, of confusion, and that of God; I onely waite my time to bee perfectly redeemed.

Branch 3. Thirdly, Waite for that with longing, as Paul did: Rom. 7. who shall deliver me? Bee not so well apaid in this smalnesse of thy grace and measure (because it must be so) that thou shouldst be willing to have it so: no, let it make thee long, and stretch out thy necke a farre off, after thy Redemption; and when thy knocking off drawes neere, lift up thine head. Here is my Pilgrimage: when shall I come to my Fathers house? How long, Lord, holy and true, how long? Lye under the Altar, and cry till God answer thee. Count them happiest that are gone before, and put off their harnesse. Oh when shall I follow well after, and overtake deare husband, wife, and friend that have got the start of mee? Lord, here is not the place I looke for; here is an handfell and earnest; but, Lord, even my very faith and hope (which are my best graces in travell,) are but releefes of misery for a season, even these should here cause me to cry out for the Christ of a better life; saying with Paul, If our hope were here to Christ only, of all other I were worst: Faith, and Hope, and Patience, and Hearings, and Sacraments shall cease; if then therewith sin and sorrow cease not, what is my best, but misery?

but

but as long as I have Chriſt for hereafter, I care not he will pay for all. If here to be a little eaſed of my feares bee ſuch a benefit, what is it to be quite rid of them? I here to be guided by faith, what there to need none? If here to hope for a good end what there to enjoy the thing hoped? If here to live a barren, poore, ſad life, patience mixt with impatience, knowledge with error, faith with infidelity; what there to have the uſe of them taken away, and Chriſt made mine wholly, fully, all love without defect, joy without mixture, peace without diſturbance, Chriſt in his kind, bleſſedneſſe and perfection? Hee was not given me to be ſome grace and more ſinne; but all grace, and no ſinne: then I ſhall not ſee him through this grate of my priſon but with open face, as he is, and as he ſees me. Oh Lord, this coaſt of the preſent world, ſo dimmeth and darkens that coaſt of heaven, that I cannot behold it! Turne thy love-tokens, oh Lord, once at length into preſence and fruition, and ſhew me thy glory!

Q. What other uſes are there?

A. Exhortation, and that in generall; firſt, to reſiſt all theſe woefull enemies of our peace. It is a word ſoone ſpoken, but of long and hard practice; to ſtand, I ſay, upon our guard, therefore a little I would direct about it: though I feele my ſelfe in a ſea of matter, yet I will ſend my Reader to large and godly Treatiſes of this vaſt argument, and my ſelfe cull out two or three directions beſt agreeing to my drift. Perſonall lets require ſpeciall conference. Vſe 2.

Q. Begin then firſt with the firſt annoyance or let, which is our owne corruption: how is that to bee reſiſted?

A. I will mention three wayes: 1. The ſpirituall combat ere ſin be brought into the act: 2. Watchfulneſſe againſt outward occaſions and temptations: 3. Wiſedome after we are fallen. Three wayes to reſiſt our owne corruption.

Q. What is the duty of the Combate? I

A. It is the exerciſe of that holy Principle of the Spirit of the new Creature, which perpetually fighteth againſt the fleſh in the regenerate, Let this bee perpetually maintained, and the hand of Faith, or of Chriſt, rather be continually jogged by us, for the lively quickning grace thereof, to reſiſt our inward ſelfe-temptations: Gal. 5.17. The Spirit luſteth againſt the Fleſh; and yee cannot bee as ye would. There is in the New Creature a renuing throughout in every part, yet not throughout in all. As in a dead The ſpirituall Combate, Gal. 5.17.

Palsey, all one side dead, yet the other wholly alive. How doth the living part fight against the dead? If a man should have a dead carkasse bound to his backe till he died, were it not an heavie plague? would it not be irkesome? So this body of death to the living part of the new Creature. Oh! mourn and grone it out: The Physitians say, Every deep sigh spends a drop of bloud, Oh! that thy grones might consume this bloud? I likened it before to Peninna 1 Sam. 1. Let Hanna then be to Peninna, as she to be sure will be to her: Shee will not see the least looke of Elkanna towards her, the least love-token, not one nights lodging, not one cast of favour, but shee will pine at it, upbraid her for it, vexe at, and grudge her the least drop. Oh! let Hanna doe so to her: Let her all that shee can, get into her husbands heart, and the more shee is envied, the more let her cling to him, that his love may support her against her enemy: let him bee to her above all her feares. Oh! if this were, how happy were we.

a Sam. 1.

Its said of Rebecca, that shee was weary of her life for Esaus wives (as I noted) and wisht them out of doores. Let us bee like her; and say, Oh Lord! these base dogging thoughts of sinne which breed ill affections, and threaten to breake forth daily into action, how noysome are they? When Rebecca felt a struggling, shee asked the cause of the Lord; and hee answered, Wonder not, there bee two Nations in thee, a cursed, and a blessed one; one whom I have hated, another loved: it must bee thus, wait thy time, pray for a good travell, the whilst thou must beare this strife within thee. So doe thou; doe not onely beare it, but maintaine it also. Say to the Lord I can never shun evill, but I am the more tempted to it: never ensue goodnesse, but I am driven from it: Lord why is it thus? Oh quicken up that love, that Image of thy righteousnesse, that seed of God, that inner man of the spirit, which may present thee so to my soule, that thy sweetnes and love may cause the Image of old lust to be despised, & decay daily more and more: Create in my soule that holy nature of thine which may for ever abhor, foile and conquer this flesh, and the opposition of it in me: Thou, oh Lord, art as holy as sinne is wicked. Oh Lord shew it, and the prevailing nature of it, let it burne upon the Altar of my soule, against the Altar of corruption: Oh that I could find but one day of many, that I were mine owne, and free to righteousnesse, rid of my cumber and clog!

clog! That I could feele those secret motions and instincts of sinne in me, rebelling against thee, tickling mee, snaring and leading me captive; being as sensible and awake to marke and discover them, and nip them in the necke, as they are to annoy me.

Q. What is the second dutie of watching? 2

A. Continually to obserue and prevent occasions offered, when we cannot foile inward motions. Cut off her prouision, and starue sinne. As men deale with fields of weeds which they cannot root up, they hooke them, and so kill them by oft cutting off their tops: so doe thou with occasions, obiects, counsell, prouocation to thy wrath, reuenge, couetousnesse: maintaine a sound desire to abhorre them, that they never enter thy trenches. The welcomming of obiects is as the casting of oyle into the fire. As Iob for his sonnes, so be thou for thy selfe, Sacrifice daily for mercy of prevention, remooving of vanities which might annoy thee, especially naturall ones; or if offered, yet for grace to defie them, and goe to worke by a promise. Iealousie and feare are blessed from heaven to preserve thee: as the eyelids are made moveable and winking, by nature, to keepe out any mote or annoyance. If this watching heart against obiects were kept, and no roguish straglers suffered to passe without stop and examination whence and whither how sweet should our course bee? Reade Article 4. in this point. Watching.

Q. What is the third dutie of Wisedome upon our falls? 3.

A. Not to be kept in bondage by Satan in point of our recouerie out of our falls, if we bee slipt into any; but speedily to gather up our selves, ere we be hardned; Ier. 8. 4. Shall a man fall and not arise? Be not fullen as the loaden jade in the slough that will not stirre to get out. If Satan get thee at this bay, hee hath his hearts wish. But rather goe backe, wound thy soule for thy revolt, seeke to the Lord for staying of thee; if thou have beene bold with the Lord, recall thy selfe, let thy heart smite thee, and say, I will doe so no more; Iob 40. 4. and so lay hold upon the Promise, repent and doe thy former works, bee zealous and amend. Doe not soder up thy breaches with a dead heart weighing good actions against bad, which will harden thee: but returne to him whom thou hast sinned against: Ephe. 5. 29 If thou have beene angry and sinned adde not drunkennesse to thirst; wrath and malice and revenge, to thy passion; but ere the Wisedome.

Sun goe downe, go to God for mercie, and put it to an end, that the next Sun-riſe finde thee not hardned.

Q. Proceed to the two next: what courſe is to bee taken againſt the other two enemies, Sathan, and the World?

Remedies againſt Sathan and the world.

A. I remember that twice alreadie I have ſpoken ſomewhat which might fit this argument: once in the point of Mortification; and againe, in the grace of Watchfulneſſe. Therefore, (beſides that hath beene ſayd) put on the compleate armour of proofe, appointed thee by the Lord in this caſe, and keepe it cloſe to thee, weare it, and walke in it as the Armour of a Childe of light, as the harneſſe of the Militant Church, and each member of Chriſt, bleſſed by him to that purpoſe. They be not as Pope holy ſwords, or Armour bleſſed by a ſinfull wretch to no purpoſe; but bleſſed by God, and they ſhall bee ſo. They bee not charmed weapons, but ſtrong in God to caſt downe Holds, and Forts of ſtrong enemies. Firſt, therefore let me give thee ſome generall counſell, and then a few particulars, about the peeces of the Armour. For the generall, theſe two: Firſt, get wiſedome to diſcover and diſcerne his temptations. Then ſecondly, bee armed againſt them. Firſt, I ſay, diſcover them: The Apoſtle thought hee ſpake a great word, when hee ſayd, 2 Cor. 2. 11. You know his devices; as if a man warned, were armed. To ſay the truth, it is a great thing to bee warned. Get wiſedome then; diſcerne him in his properties, diſcerne him in his firſt onſets in thy firſt calling, begin this act betimes, for it is long: and bee aſſured hee will not ſo let thee paſſe, but bee the more eager againſt thee in thy faith, thy comfort, thy obedience. Hee will ſet Wife, Husband, Children, thy betters, thy equalls in array againſt thee. Know him ere hee come himſelfe by his meſſenger, and thinke not it will bee anſwer ſufficient that thou kneweſt nothing. Aske poyſon if it will not hurt, becauſe unknowne? or an enemie, if hee will turne from thy Caſtle, becauſe hee hath ſurpriz'd it ere thou wert aware. Was it not ſuppoſed thou ſhouldſt have knowne? Let the Lord ſay of thee, Thou kneweſt his devices. And ſo know them, as being of a different kinde and nature, not all alike. Some temptations are not like to bee durable, becauſe ſo hideous; as to Atheiſme, againſt the Scriptures, to blaſpheme and denie God, and Providence. Theſe will wanze. Here learne two things: Firſt, take heed leſt being rid of theſe, thou bee

ſecure

ſecure of the next; know theſe fore-runne others. And ſecondly, know, that ſeeing theſe being meerely, or moſtly Satans, and not thine, thou oughteſt to diſpatch them as faſt as they come, by abhorring them, and being abaſed by them, but not diſmayed by their hidiouſneſſe. Then againe, there are temptations on the left hand, and on the right hand; both may not be taken for alike. For temptations on the right hand to ſenſuall evills, admit not that parley, nor plodding upon in thy minde, which ſome others doe, the thought whereof is fearefull. But rather the more they are thought of, the more they ſnare a man. Doe as the Prophet to Iehoram, Anſwer roughly. Like to the breaches of two brethren; which the more ript up, the more they exulcerate: And ſo I might ſay of many more. Let the Concluſion bee, Learne wiſely to judge of temptations, Devils, or worlds; and let thy long acquaintance with his method, make thee skillfull; praying for the ſpirit of diſcerning, and confeſſing how much thou art miſmatched. Secondly, bee armed accordingly, and ſtand ſo againſt him daily and conſtantly; for this battell hath no truce. Solomon ſaith well, Pro. 1. 17. In vaine is the net laid for that which hath wing; for the Bird mounts up above the ſnare. Its ſaid of the ſonnes of Iehonadab, the ſonne of Rechab, Iere. 34. 7. 8. that when the Prophet ſet pots of wine before them, they were tyed by their fathers vow, upon his bleſſing, that they ſhould drinke none. This is the tye of God, even our Covenant and oth, in, and ſince Baptiſme, that wee would cleave to God as his faithfull Souldiers againſt all enemies. Shall a man ſo deepely ingage his children, and ſhall not our Covenant tie us? Shall we dare to bee looſe to God? or rather when the Devils cups are before us; ſhall we not ſay, I am tyed to God in Covenant? how dare I be looſe, and run away from my colours? Oh to be armed is all in all: David armed was able to bear down a Shimei; unarmed, not able to beare Mephiboſheth, much leſſe Nabal. Let us know, it is not the greatneſſe or ſmalneſſe of the temptation, but our Armour againſt it, which preſerves us? ſhall God give us armour, and we not uſe it? Shall it hang up a ruſting by us, and we pierced with darts to death for want of it? They ſay of great Souldiers, they are ſhot-free. The Lords armed ones are all ſo, while armed: elſe as other men. Therefore let this teach us, not to commit our ſelves to this world

2 King. 6. 32.

Branch 2.

naked and unarmed: under hope of ſhot freedome. Charles the fifth, taking his horſe to ruſh into the maine battell, was requeſted to forbeare: but he anſwered, An Emperour was never ſhot through with a Bullet. This confidence hath an armed Souldier of Chriſt, never was beleever ſhot to death by a Devill, or a wicked world. To diſcover theſe enemies is good, but to ſtand in our daily armour, and to be ſtrong in the Lord, to quite us like men, 1 *Cor.*16.13. is a better grace. It is not our vaine weapon of ſelfe-confidence, learning experience, wit, or parts: no not our great reſolutions, our deepe vowes againſt oaths, uncleanneſſe, or the like, will ſave us: or that we ſcorn the Devill as the ſlave of God. What ſhall it boote us to ſcorne him as a ſlave of God, when he is our tyrant? Therefore neither feare him ſlaviſhly, nor ſcorne him prophanely, but be armed wiſely and conſtantly, and watch to it with prayer, and the Lord ſhall be with thy endeavour, and teach thy hands to fight and prevaile.

Q. But in a word, how ſhould the parts of the Armour be uſed?

*Epheſ.*6. from 14. verſe to the 18.

A. If once truly put on, they ſhall be uſed the more eaſily: The moſt bleſſed part of thy Armour is faith, which puts on all the reſt: and doth (as the ſhield) not onely defend thee but all thy armour alſo. It is that grace which carries a poore ſoule into the field with like courage to David, when he ſaid, 1 Sam. 17. Who is this dog that defieth the hoſt of Iſrael? This day ſhall God encloſe thee in mine hand. It argueth thus: firſt, by experience if ever Satan or world could have foyled me, it had beene in my onſet, being a freſh-water ſouldier: but even then the Lord kept me againſt a Beare and a Lyon, and ſhall hee keepe mee, to deſtroy me? I have bin kept from him in my firſt call to God, and ſhall I not now much more being armed? I am the Lords: he will cover my head in the day of battell. Againe it diſputes for God againſt her owne weakeneſſe, by proofe of continuall aſſiſtance: I ſee indeede, ſtronger than I have beene foyled, but the Lord can bring a weake novice through as well as a ſtrong man; the battel is the Lords; Race is not with the ſwift, nor the Battell with the ſtrong: But he that fights as well with few and weake, as ſtrong and many, gives victory as he pleaſeth. And as when we ſee a weake weariſh old man of 80. yeares, we wonder ſo weake an one ſhould ſo hold out, when thouſands of ſtronger, die in their ſtrength: ſo here; yet beleeve that ſo it may be, and he that in all our brunts and ſtreights hath kept us and as the fiery dart hath beene cast at us, hath latcht it for us, and (to shew what hee can doe for a poore wretch) hath brought us through so many pikes of Devill or World alreadie, can hee not doe so still? Thus faith, in temptation by Devill, or malice of instruments, is more than a Conqueror: not to shun temptations, but not to bee consumed even in the burning. And faith claspes here to a merit of Christ her Captaine, by a word or promise: I have prayed for thee, that thy faith faile not: the gates of hell shall not prevaile against it: I have overcome the World, be of good courage, and the like. These faith cleaves to, and puts all her strength upon them. The Lord Iesus hath disarmed this strong Gyant, triumphed over him on the Crosse, and led him, and all his Captivitie captive; and they fight against mee but with the dregs of courage and policie, since he overcame them.

Secondly, They keepe on the helmet of hope on their head, as a woman would do her hat in a wet journey: They looke at that finall redemption and victorie which is set before them when their harnesse are off: and this holds up their faith, which else by one or other temptation would be foyled. Heb. 12. 2. as Christ, who for the hope set before him, endured the shame; so these endure the heate of this battell, knowing it shall one day joy them to have beene so occupied, and the end shall pay for all. As I have noted in the point of Redemption.

Thirdly, the peace of conscience treads downe all, as Samson trod downe his enemies, horse, and foot, Iudg. 15. 8. For why? this peace of God rules their hearts and mindes: they are tempted strongly, but they will not lose their peace, and buy repentance at so deare a rate. Their precious peace they will not change for any Devils or Worlds pleasure. If they should lose it to winne the world, what should it profit them? Shall I (Iudg.9.) forsake my fatnesse and sweetnesse, to exalt my selfe? God forbid. The false mother cared not for cutting the Child, but the true mother trembled at it: So, the true Child of God cries, Save my peace, whatsoever I forgoe.

Fourthly, The brest-plate of righteousnesse next their heart, as a Corslet of proofe preserves them: Lord, thou knowest righteousnesse and obedience, innocencie toward thee, and men hath alway beene dearer to mee then goods ill gotten, than all spoiles, all pleasures of sinne for a season, all baites of men, or terrours and threats: They have lighted upon my brest-plate, and beene dashed. And through thy mercie, by whatsoever darts Sathan beguile me, I hope these shall not, while I can keepe my integrity. As good Iob sayd to his enemies, My righteousnesse shall ye never take from me.

Iob. 27. 5.

Fifthly, Their girdle of truth, and sincerity; not of tongue onely, but of soule: not looking with Balaam, at base ends, but truly at the honour of God: whose love I can prove, because hee upholds me in my integrity.

Sixthly, The sword of the Spirit; the Armour of God his Word, that offensive weapon by which the soule is able not onely to save her selfe, but to crush and foyle her adversarie: the Lord having put into his Word, that authoritie which no Devill can resist; especially, when it is wisely, sparily, and seasonably used: not to dally with Sathan, but to brush him off, as the Butchers flap beats off, and crushes the flies. As we see in those apt Scriptures, which Mat. 4. our Saviour used; and by using, blessed to us: when we (shall according to our temptations) by faith, retort Sathan with them.

Q. But seeing our selves are our greatest enemies; and those lusts within us defile us most, conclude with some remedies against them.

Returne to the point of Lusts.

A. The speciall maladies and corruptions annoying each soule in particular, and transporting them from an holy course, and peace, are so many, that no counsell can bee given in generall against them. But they require the lively voice of Gods Ministers to discover their causes, and to apply remedies. Some are vexed with corruptions arising from their complexions, or bodily tempers; others from the contagion of old customs and examples: and as they are severall, so each Christian (ordinarily) is tempted in his owne kinde: as with uncharitablenesse, lowring and sullennesse, envie, indignation at such as offend them (indeed, or their owne conceit) selfe-love, slightnesse, inconstancie, pride deepe and privie; revenge, unthankfulnesse; or on the other side, with presumption, boldnesse, loosenesse, distrust, Atheisme, formalitie, wantonnesse, ease, and the lust after the world. Paul 1 Cor. 6. sayd well, These were some of you: (reade it) that is, some plagued with one, and some another lust, not all with the same. Therefore, leaving the particular letts to conference with the godly learned: I will conclude this Article with three or foure Counsells, as they come to minde.

First,

First, Marke well thine owne spirit, and those secret lusts which bubble up in thee, knowing that they tend to defile and harden thee, and to blindfold thy judgement; so that neither thou shouldst receive any true sight, much lesse, sence of the mischiefe of them: But walke as a man noteleſſe, and nouzled up in thine owne ease, peace, and safety, being yet in deepe danger. Sinne doggeth thee, to this end; that if it may finde accesse, it may make way for an habituall polluting thee at last: yea know, that even in the smallest appearances thereof, it hath a serious bad intent, when it seemes but to trifle. So that it shall goe hard, but every new yeelding and footing in thee, will cast out some degree or other of light, savour, humblenesse, liveliness, courage, uprightnesse, peace, and joy from thee, till it have robbed thee, and at last left thee emptie of conscience, and hardned. Weigh and beleeve this throughly: Rest not in this, that thou knowest this or that corruption by thy selfe, or canst complaine of it, or canst keepe thy selfe from the open outrage of it; except withall thou be quickned up in thy spirit, to abhorre such course as Hell, Rom. 12. and start at the motions thereof at the first assault. A dead, faint, and still giving way to any lust entring, is the next way to make the heart a through-fare for it. Neither onely be troubled at them, and plod upon them as one astonisht to see such guests; (I know, its no strange thing) but by a promise rouze up thy selfe in the sweetnesse of Christ, to cast them out in their entrance, which is more ease than when entred. Poare not upon them too much, for their sweetnesse will sooner snare thee, than thy strength will cast them out, except a great streame of sweetnesse beare them downe: As for example, that one Text, Micah 7. last, Who is a God like our God, pardoning and subduing the sinnes of his heritage? If thou canst make God sweet in both respects, it is enough: Else the bitternesse of sinne alone, will not beare downe the sweetnesse; for this is present, the other absent.

Counsels against them. 1

Secondly, If they be such as cleave to thy spirit, and doe smite thee againe, (after long intermission and seeming to be cast out) oppose strongly that mercy of God that hath forgiven them, even when thou delightest in them without checke; how much more when they returne as intruders? And, adde hereto the meditation of Gods peculiar mercies, and administrations toward thee since thy conversion; binding thy selfe strongly against lusts, by the

the recording thereof. For example; hath God beene thy portion in the greatest streights, and thy losses, the injury of men and times? Oh then, admit not of distrust, covetousnesse, and the like scurfie! Hath God gifted, graced, and honoured thee above ought thou couldst expect? Count it a base lust to envie others, yea though better. Hath he blessed thee with better health, longer life, ofter recoveries, greater deliverances than ever thou expectedst? Why shouldst thou then set them up as idols above that God, who gave them to a farre other end? And in a word; let those heart-breaking mercies of God, first and last, being added to his threats and afflictions, heape hot coales of fire upon thee, and melt thine heart to a jealous loathing of such lusts.

3 Counsell. Thirdly, consider, there is no sweet lust or strong object offered to thee, but the Lord is in it, to try the love, loyaltie, and power of grace which is in thee, that thou mayst know all which is in thy heart: Thus the Lord hath used his people, whose lot it hath beene to receive much from God. David was tryed by his lust of the eye, by the object of revenge to kill Saul in the Cave: Hezekiah by an object of pride of life, those Ambassadours of the Emperour. As the bad, Saul, Balaam, Judas; so the good must be tryed. Say then, now (my soule) the Lord is at worke, to try and refine thee, to make thee as gold; to humble thee deeply, if thou be foyled as Hezekiah; or to honour thee highly, as Abraham. Beware now that thou sticke to thy tacklings, and discover not thy selfe to be as drosse, of no worth; for what is a man till he be tryed? Here then distrust thine owne Armour (as David did Sauls) and cleave to the Lords: Be not unarmed as David was to Nabal; but armed as hee was to Shemei, and Saul. Say thus, If I now faile the Lord (as Adam) in the tryall; hee may justly suspect me henceforth, and let loose my lusts against mee: Often Lord thou hast saved me from being tempted; Thou canst also give me strength in the tryall: Leade me not into temptation, faile not thy servant, and I shall not faile thee in the tryall of these my sweet objects, and lusts.

Lastly, Get thee some sure bosome friend to impart thine estate unto, thy temptations and buffetings; such an one (minister or other) as may both keepe thy counsell, and give thee counsell. Deale with him openly, and having upon thy discovery received counsell; humble thy soule, seeke not applause, but feele his reproofe,

reproofe, and prayers unfeignedly to helpe thee, and his experience in the like assaults to succour thee. As it is some cheering, that others of Gods Saints as well as thy selfe have beene so tempted: so it will bee farre greater, if their remedies may become thine, that so thou mayst bee armed against all feares, and made more jealous against lust, if any truth bee in thee. And thus much of this last use of admonition bee said, and of the whole Article.

The Sixth Article.

Qu. What is the sixth Article of this third part?

A. That as the lets and discouragements of the Children of God in this their militant condition, are many on the left hand by their enemies: so on the right hand, on Gods part, there are many priviledges and favours allowed them, whereby their condition is made both comfortable, and honourable; and that both to draw on many to be of Gods household, when they see what gaines and vailes belong to his service, as also to encourage such as are already admitted members of it: and besides, to compell such as care not to joyne themselves to them (because of some hard conditions to the flesh) when they see their priviledges, to acknowledge their state to be above their owne, and to pine and consume for the wilfull debarring themselves of such happinesse. As then we see it to be in Companies of royall Cities, and their severall trades and mysteries; and in the Corporations of great Townes, they have certaine immunities, and royalties which others want in common Townes: yea, such as those want, who though they dwell by them, yet are no freemen: So here it fareth, The Company and great Family or Corporation of the Lord Iesus, his bodie; I meane the Church, once truely gathered into one mysticall fellowshippe by calling, and the worke of the Spirit; hath many honours and prerogatives annexed unto it, which not onely they want which are heathens, but even also they who are visible members of the Church in point of Ordinances, and outward worship:

Gods people have many blessed priviledges to encourage them against their letts.

Q. Why? these seeme no other than were spoken of in Part. 2. Article 4. in the benefits of Christ.

Difference of priviledges. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

A. Yes; For although both sorts are benefits from one fountaine, yet the difference is this; of those former we consist, and are. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Of him are we, who is made to us, &c. But by these we doe not properly consist, but wee are much the better for them, and the one concernes our being; as Reconciliation, Adoption: the other our wel-being; as, that Gods Angels are our Ministers and Guardians; all things befall us for the best, with a thousand such more. It is one thing to be a man; another, the Lord of Creatures, or the like.

Difference of priviledges from Means.

Q. But are they not the same with the meanes?

A. No doubtlesse; the meanes although they are rich bequests of the Church, and (in respect of strangers) priviledges also; yet they are no such prerogatives in themselves (save in their efficacie to the Elect) but are given to all as ordinances, either for begetting, or building up: and therefore concerne them who are yet uncalled by the right of Baptisme. But these belong to the Beleever onely.

Q. What differ they from Commandements? for many of them are things which God requires of us; as to grow in grace, to abstaine and keepe themselves from ungodlinesse, &c.

Difference of them from Commands.

A. True; yet the things being the same, the respect is divers, they are not priviledges properly, as commanded; but as they are allowances from God, to enable and qualifie the soule to performe the things which God commandeth; or else rewards of obeying.

Wherein the being of a priviledge consists: In 2 things. 1. Preciousnesse.

Q. In what doth their nature consist?

A. In these two; First, in their price and worth: Secondly, in their peculiarity; if we sever either from other, we destroy a priviledge. For the former:

First, Their price is in this: the least of them cost the blood of the

the Lord Iesus, and flowes from his side: their nature is excellent, gracious and glorious; their use is suteable, for they attend the welfare of the best creature in the world; and the instrument of obtaining them, is no lesse than that whereby Iustification is gotten: Lastly, they are the Legacies of the last Will and Testament of Christ, sealed with his death, and pledges of his presence, till we enjoy himselfe; serving to conduct us homeward in a tolerable manner, as many baying places to refresh us, till we come thither.

Secondly, They are peculiar things as well as precious: so, ours, that no others portion besides us; wee know peculiarnesse doth greatly beautifie a precious thing. As then these belong to the whole body of Christ, to one as another; and to each member from the whole body: so no other but these can enjoy it: A stranger shall not enter into her joy. For as the Lord doth at the first make his Church a peculiar garden, of a meere thicket and quoach of bushes, a dunghill, a wildernesse in which there is no delight: (as if a man should take such an unshapen place, and build himselfe a sumptuous Pallace with Gardens and Orchards and dwellings of pleasure and fruit:) so having once done so, and set his delight there on, he pitches there, and takes it up as his habitation, *Psal.*132.13. Hence those phrases which the holy Ghost useth, *Mar.*4.10. To you it is given, not to others. Ioh 17.9. I pray not for the world. 1*Pet.*2.7. *A peculiar people. Deut.*7.6. You shall be my peculiar ones, though all the world is mine. They are called his jewels and precious ones, *Mal.*3.17. 2. Peculiarnesse.

*Psal.*132.13. *Mark.*4.10. *Ioh.*17.9. *Exod.*19.5. *Mal.*3.17.

Q. In how many kinds doe these priviledges benefit the Church of Christ?

A. In two. For as all peculiars and liberties doe either concerne some indemnitie and freedome from annoyance, or some right and title to benefits: so doth the whole body of priviledges either concerne riddance from the burthens which lie upon the wicked, who find no blessing to bee theirs but to answer for them: or an enlargement to those good things which others cannot come by: as to be kept from evill in streights, to be kept by the power of faith, &c. Priviledges are either exemptions or enlargements.

Q. Distinguish them into their severall heads and sorts.

A. Generally they belong to the believer either here or hereafter. Here, either in life, or at death. In this life, wee enjoy Division of Priuiledges.

priviledges, either accompanying conversion or following it.
Rom. 14. 17. Those that accompany our conversion, are righteousnes, peace, and joy in the holy Ghost, Rom. 14. 17. Of which see the second part. Art. 4.

Q. What are the consequent priviledges hereupon?

Priviledges of our Persons. A. Either they concerne our persons, or our estates. Our persons (or the persons of ours, for God so esteemes them) thus. That God is ours and theirs in covenant and will bee so for ever,

Q. What Priviledges concerne our estates?

Priviledges concerning our Estates in common. A. They are temporall, or spirituall. To both in common this doth belong, that God will doe for us in both, aboue all that wee can aske or thinke, Eph. 3. and supply abundantly all our wants: he will supply our bodily wants, poverty, infirmities, wits and senses; as our sight and hearing, or such decayes: and our spirituall, as want of knowledge, faith, patience, much more of Sabbaths, Ordinances, good helpes of conference, &c. And besides in neither estate will he require any more of us than according to our abilities,

Q. What are the priviledges of our temporall estate?

A. Our

A. Our temporall reaches to our estate of the world, and it concernes either blessings or crosses: touching blessings, first, that whatsoever is meete for body, for meat, drinke, apparrell, health, life, good dayes, successe, welfare, good marriage, credit, and the like, shall be given us, Psal. 84.11. Psal. 37.4. We need not feare it. Luk. 12.22. Why take yee care what to put on? Secondly, that our labours shall be blessed, and we shall eate the fruit of them, Psal. 128.2. Thirdly, be it more or lesse it shall be enough, and we content with it as our portion best of all, Phil. 4.1 Tim. 6.6. with contentment & sufficiency (for so is the word.) Fourthly, a little of the righteous is better, and shall goe further than a great deale of the wicked, Prov. 15. 16. Fifthly, all they have they have it from a running fountaine, and with the good will of him that dwelt in the bush, Deut. 33. 16. Sixthly, that we have it without sin, (an ill conscience in getting, keeping, forgoing, or ill dependance) and without sorrow, that is carking, distrust, or baseneſſe. Prov. 10. that he will rather suffer the Lyons to want, than us or ours to beg our bread: he will neither faile nor forsake us, Psal. 37.35. Heb. 13.5.

Q. What are our priviledges in Afflictions?

2 Afflictions. Iob. 8.20. Iob. 8.59.

A. First, That no more, no other, no sooner can befall than the Lord hath cut out for us, Iob. 8.20. His houre was not come, Iob. 8.59. he passed through them all. Secondly, He fitteth our yokes for us as we for our cattell, great and small. Beare the yoke, take up our crosse, Lam. 3. Math. 16. Thirdly, the extremitie of a crosse shall never pinch us: the streight, shall not annoy us, Psal. 32 6. Flouds of great waters, &c. Fourthly, we shall escape many that the wicked pull upon themselves, Psal. 32. 8. Fifthly these that must be, we shall be upholden in them, Mica. 7. 8. Hee shall shew mee light in darkenesse, and he shall cover my head in battell, Psal. 140.7. Sixthly, they shall be sent in love, so that they shall not be the envenomed arrowes of the Almightie in our flesh, but the corrections of a Father, Heb. 12. 9. & 1 Chron. 22. 10. The seventh, when they have done their errand, they shall returne, and wee be delivered, Mica 7. 8. 9. 10. Q. What are our spirituall priviledges?

Spirituall Priviledges from Gods Government.

A. Some concerne God, some our selves. Touching God this: All his administrations shall profit us, he will discover himselfe in them to us; in the way of his government of the Age and times we live in: in his blessings upon his owne, and judgements upon his enemies: his patience and carriage towards our selves in our whole courses: the sundry changes of this world, the manners of men, the ends of men, the examples of men, good, bad; mortalitie and the vanitie of things; our owne experience: the administrations of God in all shall teach and profit us. See for this, Psal. 25. All the wayes of God to his, &c. See more of this in the second Article, in the life of faith.

Q. Touching our owne spirituall estate, what priviledges doe we enjoy?

Priviledges spirituall towards our selves in faith. Heb. 10.38. Rom. 1.17. Luk. 22.32.

A. They belong to our spirituall estate, either in point of our faith, or of our obedience. Touching our faith: First, That the just shall not onely be forgiven by faith; but also live by faith: as Hab. 2. Heb. 10.38. Secondly, They shall grow from faith to faith, Rom. 1.17. Thirdly, their faith shall never totally or finally faile them. Luk. 22.32. the gates of hell shall never prevaile against it. Lastly, The Lord will count their faith as righteousnesse unto them: impute Christs merit and holinesse unto them in all their weake services: not looking upon that which is theirs, but judging them according to the better part, that Grace which he hath given them. As their afflictions, streights, and difficulties encrease, so shall their faith: and many more.

Q. What priviledges concerne obedience?

Concerning obedience positive and privative. Phil. 1.6. Psal. 41.11.

A. Some negative, some positive. The negative, such as these; No lets, enemies, devill, sinne, or world, shall pull us from God; or plucke us from our stedfastnesse, 2 Pet. 3.17. The positive, are made to the whole course of it, or the particular parts. To the whole, such as these, God that begun his worke shall finish it for us, Phil. 1. 6. We shall be upholden in our whole course graciously, Psal. 41.11, 12. By this I know thou lovest me, that thou upholdest me in my integritie. And that he will guide us by grace till he receive us to glory. That we shall persevere to the end, Revel. 2.10. And such other.

Rev. 2.10.

Q. And what are the particular parts of our course, and what are their priviledges?

Priviledges concerning meanes, or duties.

A. Either the course of worship, or of conversation. Touching the former, either they may be referred to the meanes of obedience, or the duties of it. Concerning which I have spoken in the the second Article, (in the point of life of faith) and in a word this is all, that the meanes are theirs, all blessed to them for the helping of them home in peace; and the Lord who hath enjoyned them duties, will give them strength to performe them, and make them easie, Mat. 11. 30. Looke there. Mat. 11. 30.

Q. What are the priviledges of conversation?

A. Either they concerne common life, or conditions of men therein. Common life; as marriage, liberties, company, solitarinesse, or the like manifold entercourses. Conditions of men; as their callings in which God hath set them, their places of government or subjection; Magistracy, or Ministry: their relations in family, or otherwise. Parents, Masters, &c. To all which Gods people have peculiar promises, that God will furnish them with gifts, whom he cals to any function: That he will cause a voyce behinde them to say, This is the way, walke in it. And according to the changes and conditions of life which hereafter shall befall, the Lord will picke out meet grace, and be the same God to them all. Priviledges of conversation. Esay 30.

Q. How doth hee this?

A. He leaves not his like orphans to shift, sinke or swimme. But grants them the Spirit of Christ, to enlighten and conduct them. He gives them a Prophet, as Exod. 23. who searches all their goings and steps, their thoughts, words, affections, purposes actions: He swayes and bends them to his will and way: Its not in them to act themselves, or order their owne way: Hee must doe all in and for them. As Elisha's spirit went with Gehazi, so this Spirit attends all the wayes of the faithfull. Nothing is hidden from him: whether alone or with others, he is present, and from him we cannot goe. Oh! how should it affect us to consider this? If it were but an Angel which should bee granted to attend us, were it not an honour? But to have the Spirit of Christ our Prophet and holy lawyer to attend us, how honourable is it? Alas! there is no baffling of his eyes: if we walke with him, he will be comforted and be our Comforter; if we offend him, Exod. 23. he will not take it at our hands, but be grieved and punish us: Onely beware; its spirituall rebellion to grieve the Spirit of our guide, to rebell, to thwart, to goe out and in at our pleasure: we shall not carry it away guiltlesse. Therefore, attend we his voyce, walke narrowly, grieve him not, but learne we to please him, to joy him. For hee is in us, dwels in us, is a partie in all our actions & course, and accordingly as he shall find us carry our selves, so he will account us, either to honor him, and so he will rejoyce; or goe against his edge, and so he will be vexed. All redounds either to his content or discontent. If we beleeved this, how narrowly should we walke as in his presence continually?

See Esay 63. 11. Psal. 95. 10.

Q. And what other priviledge have we to order our Conversation?

A. Conscience rectified by the Word, and attending the Spirit of Christ our guide. An infinite honour to the Saints, and highly deserving their carefull watch to preserve it. For as the Spirit is grieved or joyed in us, so is conscience either wounded or comforted. Of this point reade more in Art. 2. the last use. This I adde here. To attend Conscience & keepe it in kilter, afraid to offend it, not onely in grosse evils, but in secret passages of the Spirit concerning the manner, season, & circumstances of action: I say, it is an art of Arts: and blessed is he who hath skill in it. None but a beleever hath any such Conscience; each beleever hath, lesse or more, according to his light. But few attend narrowly to the verduit of it, (being content not fouly to wound out) and so defile it: and see nothing amisse. But doubtlesse, these are great Priviledges.

Priviledge in death. Psal. 116. Rom. 8. ult. Psal. 37. 37. Eccles. 7. 1. 2. Cor. 15. Esay 57. 2.

Q. What are the Priviledges of the Saints in death?

A. That they are precious in death to the Lord Psal. 116. that nor death nor any thing shall separate them from Gods love. Rom. 8. ult. That a good life shall bring a good Death. That they shall dye in peace, Psal. 37. 37. That the day of death is better than the day of life, Eccles. 7. 1. That it is sanctified, (together with the grave) to be a step to glory, and the putting on of incorruption, 1. Cor. 15. & Esay. 57. 2.

Priviledge after death.

Q. What is the last Priviledge?

A. The greatest of all, that eternall fruition of God, and all that he hath prepared for his elect, in his owne presence: things which neither eye hath seene, eare heard, or ever entred into the heart of man to conceive. See Esa. 30. 26. For if they could, they could not be as they are. And to end: these all (from the first to the last) are the priviledges of Beleevers, not in their properties onely, but peculiar nesse also: for to speake of all at once, The wicked shall be nothing so, Psal. 1.

Q. This is a Priviledge indeed: but how can it be true? for wee see both good and bad prosper, live long; are crossed, and in straights, yea crossed crossed for their sinnes, yea spiritually tryed by God what is in their heart, yea further, deserted also by God, and left unto themselves: What difference is there?

A. Yet there is some singular thing and peculiar priviledge in every of these to a beleever, which another lacketh. To run over particulars. True it is, both prosper, Iob and Nabal. But the one hath that he hath from a fountaine not fayling, Lam. 3. 22. The other from a dry pit, Ier. 2. 13. The one hath the influence of the Moone, and the fat of the hilles and vallies; The other hath the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: The one hath the gift, the other the giver, which is worth all. The one makes common things of the best blessings, Word, Sacraments, Hos. 8. 12: the other makes even the most common ones peculiar, rest and sleepe, Psalm. 127. 2. health, recovery, wealth, friends. Secondly, both are crossed: But the one in wrath, the other in mercy: the one to prevent sinne, the other to pay for it: The one with either a dead or a rebelling spirit; the other hath a mixture of sensiblenesse and quietnesse of heart; The one when he is in his streights, is at his fingers ends, useth indirect shifts to get out, trusts God as farre as he sees him; The other is never in a streight, (to speake properly) but falls into the hands of a mercifull God. David in his streight is comforted in God, in the remembrance of former mercy. The three Children are in no streight, for at the hardest they know whom to cleave too; So was not Saul in his streight, nor Iudas in his. The one will forsake God his Covenant when he afflicts, saying, Shall I attend the Lord any longer? Is this a time to pray? The other clings to him the closer when he afflicts. Againe, both may be afflicted for sinne: But the Lord is afflicted with the one, and pitties him; but is not with the other, but lets him sinke or swimme. As it was with Pharaohs Butler and Baker, both in like trouble: but unlike in success. The Lord stuck to David in all his crosses; But he let Saul goe at random to kill himselfe, and cared not. Lastly, both are under Desertions: but the one for ever perpetually deadhearted, defiled, hardned, impenitent, presumptuous sometimes of mercy, even when they are deepest in sinne; left to themselves, their owne dedolent spirits, bold, impudent, desperate: But the other onely for a time as David; having still the seede of God in them; either to humble them that they might not sinne, or to abase them the more afterward: They cannot so boldly and Esay 63. 9.

fully forsake GOD as the other; The Lord comprehends them so, that they sin not to death; some sparkle of a broken, tender, penitent heart lies at the bottome, which by one or other meanes appeares.

Q. Conclude the Article with the use thereof.

A. First, It convinceth and reproveth many. Convinceth first Use 1. all such prophane ones, as cannot endure to heare there should be any admitting of difference betweene Professors of the Gospell, one or other. They are of Korahs minde, Numb. 16.3. All the Numb.16.3. Congregation of God is holy. What? are not all of us baptized, and beleevers? Hath not Christ broken downe the wall of Separation? These Preachers which tell men what evidences there are of true faith, and what markes of false faith, how a man may prove his calling, hope of Heaven, and the like (say they) take too much upon them! Beware, Oh yee cavillers, least yee perish in this Contradiction! Iude Vers. 11. if the Earth swal-Iude 11. low yee not, beware Hell doe not! Humble rather your selves, and confesse that you put downe Gods foundations! Yee destroy an whole Article of the Catechisme by this your Cavill. What place is there for priviledges, if all be alike? Indeed faith purifying the heart, takes away all difference, Act. 15. but till then Act. 15. what difference is greater than to have hope and none? 1 Thess. 5. to sweare and to feare an oath? when the Psalmist, Psal. 1. sayth, The wicked are not so, of whom speakes he? Onely of Pagans? And when our Saviour speakes of the fish and the trash, of the wheate and the tares, speakes he of the world, or the Kingdome? Secondly, This convinceth all hypocrites, who mutter that God puts no difference betweene good and bad in the matter of rewards. Esay. 58. Mal. 3. Mat. 25. they are brought in, taking God for an hard Master: they fasted, but God regarded not: they were zealous, but it was bootlesse. But, Oh yee hypocrites! Where is the fault? Are Gods wayes unequall, or yours? Hath he not shewed you his large Charter of Priviledges bestowed upon his Church? Beware: When God makes up his Iewels, it shall appeare whether he have a discerning eye, and to your cost yee shall then know it.

Use 2. Therefore secondly, all of yee in due time, get into this Corporation of God, and buy your freedome; not of London or of Westminster, or the like, (which shall perish) but of Heaven. Rest not in your outward priviledges of hearing, of common fayth, of the Sacraments: know it, herein God puts not the cheife difference. Get the priviledge of these priviledges, the marrow of this bone: The understanding of the mystery of Christ, and your part in that which the world knowes not, nor shall it ever be taken from you. What is it for a Country-man at London to heare the Charter of any Corporation read in his eares? Is he not deaf to it? Hath he any part in it? No, no, his hope is in his plow and toyling trade at home. Till the Son hath set you free, yee are not free indeed: yee have no part or fellowship in this businesse? Onely fayth and the New Creature, and none else can clayme it: neyther of which either the prophane or the hypocrite can approch unto: Turne your cavillings at those who put a difference: and your murmurings at God, for putting so little difference into an unfeigned desire of attayning this difference: forget your trade, and seeke such an estate of faith, as neither you (as yee are) nor the boldest caviller or hypocrite can ever reach unto. Ioh.8.36.

To this end (in Gods feare) let the view of this honor of all his Saints, Psal.149.9. set your teeth on edge after a part (a childes part, a free denizons part) in them: Doe but thinke of them what yee have bereft your selves of so long, and yet at length might enjoy, if yee would lay in cordially for them: as glorious things as are spoken of the Church, you may have a part in them cheaper than Lysias had of Roman liberty; it cost him a great summe, you need part with nothing, but that which is not worth the paring of your nailes, but yee might be so borne, Act.22.28. Behold and wonder! Is it nothing to be in Christ? To be free indeed? Tell me, can you (or ever durst you) come to the Throne of grace with boldnesse? are the blessings of wife, children, land or money your own? Do yee not feare least yee dye beggars in all your abundance? Is it not a dry ditch? Oh, come (for these and other reasons) and seeke this difference. Then shall yee turne your mutterings into marveylings at this rich Charter of the Saints, and say, yee never heard of the one halfe of that yee enjoy: and the Image of your old Paradise shall be despised. I assure you, else the day shall come, that in your sorrow yee shall worship at the feete of them whom yee despise, and beholding their priviledges yee shall bite your very tongues for anguish, that yee never regarded them till it was too late. Psal.149.9. Psal.73.

Let it thirdly be instruction to the Ministers of God, that they preach Gods Word and promise with wisedome and putting difference. God excludes none, I grant: yet he receiveth no such Vse 3.

such priviledges, without the condition of faith and the new creature. Open not the dore of Gods priviledges for dogs to enter in at. Be so farre from sowing of pillowes under peoples elbowes, and smoothing them in their sinne: that when any promise comes to hand, yee tremble to urge it in generall without putting difference. Affect not the applause of people, by plausible applying of promises: let none come and heare yee preach a promise, but they may have one touch given them or other, whether it belong to them or not. If they dare runne away with it smoothly, yet dare not you to suffer them: although your gift lye rather this way than in a searching kinde, yet put your selves out of it for Gods sake, and for the precious soules sake of them whom else ye shall destroy. Remember that sweet promise, If thou shalt separate to me the precious from the vile, then thou shalt be as my mouth, *Ier.*15.19. *Ezek.*22.26. and forfeit not such a blessing through ease, or flattery. I speake this, because I know, the people love to take all as spoken to them without question, to cover their sloth and sinfull course, and they will not willingly heare any that Preach otherwise.

*Vse.*4. Fourthly, Let it be an use of Exhortation to Gods people to a double dutie. The first is, consider seriously of these bequests and legacies of Christ unto thee, whereof any one might make thee faithfull. Remember, that Article of the lets is set betweene the meanes and priviledges, (as Moses betweene Aaron and Hur) that the poore soule might be propped upon both sides against the enemies of a good Conversation. Let no paines 2 *Cor.*1.7. seeme too great: 2 Cor. 1.7. Having such precious promises, let us purge our selves of all filthinesse. As Paul spake of one,
1 *Thess.*4.18. so I say of all these, 1 Thess. 4.18. Comfort your selves and one another by these priviledges. If the most common blessing become peculiar to you through Christ, what shall the best become? How should that hope of glory after your toyle and travaile ended, encourage you; when the glory of the Moone shall be as the glory of the Sunne, and the light of the Sunne ten times greater! and the Saints shall worship from Sabbath to Sabbath to all eternitie! Oh count all your troubles tolerable in the hope thereof, and deceive all the world in their opinion of your misery! Let this hope make yee as farre above the miseries of this life, as your treasure is above earth.

But

But especially let not death be unwelcome: as that old man said Thus long have I served God: and it irketh me not to dye: for I have a good Master. Secondly, let it hearten us to our worke, to see what good vayles wee have, better than all the wages of an hireling. Priviledges are commonly held by Service: and wee see how the guilt of foule Treasons, or riot and misdemeanour, doth forfeit the liberties of Cities and Companies. Honours are best maintained by loyaltie, by labour and diligence. Its hard to renue a Charter once lost by Rebellion. Therefore hold our selves close to our holy Conversation and walking with God, by such Priviledges. Its a great matter that wee have them under Gods seale: but when wee see, that they doe concerne us alone, how should this cheare us? Let all the brave spirits of the world, and all the favorites of Princes, at death hold up their heads, as a beleever may under one of all these promises, and wee will embrace his choice! But the spirit of this treasure and these priviledges, the joy, peace, and welfare of a Christian can hardly be counterfeited, a stranger shall not get into his joy.

And lastly, let all free of Gods Company, be well seen in the enfranchisments and honours conteined in this Charter of Promises and priviledges. Bee versed well in this argument. There is a season wherein every thing is precious: though it seeme to be out of date for a while. And surely the Troubles and outward afflictions into which Gods people are like to fall in these last days: (if ever any) should set a beauty upon their priviledges. Yea and should teach them to abhorre a fulsome life of outward priviledges, to heare, worship God, and pray onely (as the vilest may doe) which can stand them in no stead; and to seeke further for some peculiar priviledges which the world knowes not of, to support them and to doe some singular thing, which hypocrites reach not to, even to live the life of faith in priviledges. When the vilest ride on horseback, and Princes goe on foot as lackeyes, those that sweare and prophane the Sabbath, and maintaine mis-rule, rule the rost, and seeme to bee the onely men; when enemies to power and sincerity in all Townes and places beare sway: we had need be well assured of it, that our priviledges are peculiar to our selves, and wee would not change portions with them! When a poore Minister in a corner that will be zealous, one poore Christian in a Towne, a wife in family, which will hold any uprightneſſe; when a poore childe in his place, ſeeking to keepe good conſcience, muſt be ſure to pay for it, & be the uderling to all other Miniſters, people, children, yea perhaps looſe the place of a wife, and the portion of a child for religion ſake: Then this point of our priviledges had need to ſtep in (or never) to ſtop this breach: Then faith had need to fence ſtrongly and apply this Article to thy Soule, to keep thee from ſinking and to ſhew thee light in darkens, in ſome other kind. Then this thouſand-fold ſupply had need to help, when liberty, credit, and welfare begin to decay, when a man knowes not where to hide his head, when enemies prevaile, and are like to do ſo: Oh then! faith in theſe promiſes had need appeare, and keepe up the chin above water! When unfaithfull freinds forfeit their truſt, unnaturall People warpe from their Miniſters, who have ſpent themſelues in ſtudy & ſervice for them: when the godlieſt begin to be as off-ſcouring and ſpectacles to men & Angels, then (or never) had this doctrine need be ſett on worke. Elſe how ſhall we be conquerors? how ſhall we ſay, 2. Cor. 6. 8. Through honor and diſhonor, as deceivers & yet true, as dying and yet we live: Chaſtned not killed: ſorrowfull, yet rejoycing; as poore, yet making many rich: as miſerable, & yet loath to change ſtate with ſuch as thinke us ſo! Deceiving them as that Martyr deceived the wormes by his burning! Oh apply this! and ſo much for this ſixth Article.

The ſeventh and laſt Article.

Qu. What is the ſeventh Article of this third part?

Vſe of all. The Truth as it is in Ieſus requires all beleevers to be holy. Epheſ. 4. 23.

A.  He uſe of the whole part in general. Even the very text of the Apoſtle may comprehend it, Epheſ. 4. 23. If yee have learned the truth, as it is in Ieſus, put off the old man, and put on the new: As we have felt Ieſus in the truth of his Reconciliation, ſo let us put on the ſame Lord Ieſus in the truth of Renovation: for the one intimates the other. Shew thy ſelfe to underſtand how the Spirit, by faith, breeds Repentance in the heart and life. As the poore childe having the mothers coſt about about it, dainty fare, money in purse, fine cloathes, carries them to shew in every corner of the house: so let us being warmed and adorned with the Lord Iesus our righteousnesse, utter his love, and shew forth the savour of it in all our course. Let us abhor the thought of such a Iesus, as will keep within our bosomes and lye still: no; his love will burne within us, and wee shall not bee able to smother it: It will give us the spirit of David, who cryed, As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered my soule from all adversity, Solomon shall reigne: signifying, that this love of Gods redemption and deliverance was kept as the perpetual sacrifice burning upon the Altar of his heart, alway ready at his call, to set him about every good duty with resolution. He speakes as a Gyant refreshed with wine, as if this love of Christ compelled him, and was as strong as the spirits of wine, to encourage him to his service: when hee would do any thing to purpose he cals for this Spirit of Gods love that delivered him. Let this Spirit carry us to preach, to meditate, to deny our selves, to bee patient, to beare our crosses, to dye in peace.

2 Cor. 2. 14.

1 King. 1. 30.

2 Cor. 5. 4.

If any duty more than commō offer it selfe, let this maine motive be drawne forth, and bee as the necessity of an armed man, That the Lord hath delivered us from all adversitie. Thē we put on the Lord Iesus, when his love is put into and upon our soules, to enlarge and widen them to goe thorow our conversation with holy resolution: His length, and depth, and breadth and height, must enlarge us to the length or continuance of a sweet course, to the depth & hardnesse of the most difficult duties, to the height & pitch of the most heavenly affections, the bredth and measure of the most plentifull & fruitfull obedience, that is, to whatsoever is godlinesse: Not our pangs, not our good affections, not all encouragements, blessings, or examples, no not all meanes, ordinances, and performances (without this) will doe it. As that good Latimer, to some that asked him, why one that Preacht his Sermon, did not preach it so as he did: answered, He had his fiddle & stick, but wanted his rozen: so undoubtedly will it be here, whē we goe to worke without this love of the Lord Iesus warming us as an inward principle of life and motion, we may thinke wee have harped upon the right string, and admire our selves; but the true stroake of the musicke, the rellish and savour of the worke, will be to seeke, and all returne upon us with fulsome distaste, in respect either of Gods account, or our owne content. Still that of poore Isaac will be wanting, wanting, Loe, here my Father, is the Altar, and the wood ready: But where is the Sacrifice? Let all I have ſpoken, end in this, All true ſight of ſinne, ſenſe of mercy, ends in the life of faith in obedience.

Mercy should be the lodestone of obedience. Ephes. 3. 16.

Want of Chriſt marres the wheele of Converſation.

Go over the ſecond Article of converſation in thy thoughts: get a view of it, & conclude, It muſt be no ſmall love muſt drive ſuch a courſe, no little ſtock that will carry ſuch a trade currently: and the cauſe why the wheele of converſation cracks & breakes in ſo many parts, why it drives on ſo heavily, and is ſo unequall in her motion, is this: it wants her ſpokes to joyne her to the Nave: ſuch a wheele we know as wants her ſtaves, muſt needs ſplit: and the wheele of that converſation that is full of loding, and duties, being yet unſupported with theſe ſtaves of love from the Nave of the Lord Ieſus his deliverance & redemption, muſt of neceſſity cracke in ſunder. The Lord Ieſus (we reade) commended two perſons admirably, Luk. 7.9. & Luk. 7.47. the one, that Centurion, of whom he ſayd, I have not found ſuch faith in Iſrael. The other was Mary, out of whom he had caſt ſeven devils, and ſayd, She loved much, becauſe much was forgiven her. Let both be joyned together: if we get ſuch faith as is rare to find, let us bewray it by ſuch love as is ſo too: & both will carry us forth to this third part of the Catechiſme, ſuch a Converſation alſo which is rare to finde, ſuch as no Phariſee or hypocrite ſhall be ever able to reach, becauſe he never felt or taſted how good the Lord Ieſus is. How ſhould Simon kiſſe, annoynt, wipe the feete of Ieſus, without his forgiveneſſe? He had little to forgive, and therefore little love: he made a dinner to Chriſt in courteſie, but kiſſed him not nor annoynted him.

Luk. 7.9.
Luk. 7.47.

Weigh well the ſcope of this Treatiſe.

Looke up to God now, & ſee in what this whole view of the Catechiſme ſtands. Surely by the way of ſin, & the Law, to carry thee to faith in the Lord Ieſus, that the truth of Ieſus may leade thee to an holy converſation: this is Chriſt Ieſus, the myſtery of Godlineſſe: to feele ſuch perſwaſion of under caying ſweetneſſe, & ſuch preſence of this perſwaſion of love, as might tel thy deareſt luſts, Rom. 6.21. What fruit have I had of yee? Yea, make thee ſtinke before them, (as he ſayd of David) that thou mightſt be Chriſts ſervant for ever: & that he might doe all thy workes, pray, reade, meditate, heare, doe, ſuffer, obey in thee: in his ſtrength, walke in all holy converſation. Endeavour it then: & the more thou haſt toyled with thine own hands and skill, and catcht nothing; the more fall downe in the deepe experience of thy utter nothing: thoſe nets of thine owne which thou haſt ſacrificed ſo long unto, lay them by, & ſee the vanitie of them: ſaying, Lord, depart from me a ſinfull wretch. Caſt thou out (Lord) on the right side of the Shippe! Thou that hast all the Fish in the lake at command to bring them together: all duties, the whole work of Conversation, to go through with ease & delight, O Lord Iesus, do thou all my workes in me! Esay 26. 12.

Secondly, To this end, be admonished not to rest onely in this that thou hast faith (suppose it be true) except also thou hast learned the truth of faith as it is in Iesus. As thou hast received from the Lord Iesus, so walke. Remember to stirre up that Spirit of Christ in thee, which was once given thee, let it not lye dead in thee. I dispute no questions, how farre the abilities of the regenerate reach, in point of concurrence with the Grace of the Spirit: I dare not think that the Spirit puts the reine out of his owne hand, and sway into ours, or that he is ever tyed to worke in us (he may desert us for a time to abase us) much lesse that our principle is active from us, (as our selves.) Its enough that he, as our active principle, must worke the will and the deed in us, and doe all for us: and that he hath betrusted us with such an instrumentall abilitie and influence from himselfe, as is endued with fitnesse to this holy Conversation: and more than so, hath given us the hand of faith to jogge his arme continually to assist us: binding himselfe by promise, till we give him over, not to forsake us in his assistance: if we will plead our libertie, (Oh, hayple they that can!) he will not be wanting to us: If when wee sought him not, he found us: and finding, reconciled us to himselfe by his death, how much more shall he by his life save us, and give us the hand to helpe us over this great hill of Conversation, that so wee reape the fruit of holinesse, eternall life! Oh, let us put forth our soules to this worke: It is the workeman that must make the Sawe to cut, by framing it to such a power, and cut with it when he hath done. Both are his: yron cannot make it selfe sharpe alone, and being sharpe, cannot cut alone, nor apply it selfe to the wood or stone: so here: Yet remember, he that hath put an instrumentall power into our soule to obey, hath also created the life of faith in us to stirre this arme of the Spirit, to draw this Sawe over our wood and stone, that wee may cut, and performe obedience. Oh that any, who ever sought the Lord for faith, should hang it up till it rust, and never set it on worke by prayer, selfe-deniall, and diligence Let us not be of the minde of them, who thinke themselves safe if once they have faith: they doubt not but shee will set her selfe on worke, whether they be sleeping or waking. No, no: he that will not save thee for thy obedience, will yet save thee by it: and he that doth neither of both for thee, will, yet do neither without thee: but he will so bow thy soule to a sweet libertie of love and delight to obey; and to such a confidence in his promise, to be enabled: yea such a perswasion within thy selfe to encourage, that being mooved and acted, thou shalt act and worke together with his grace, thy owne salvation. Be not wanting then to such a principle of life and motion in thee.

Vse 3. Exhortation. Thirdly, let this Article enforce a duty upon us which is a rare dainty in these our times, to wit, to walke closely with the Lord in an holy course for that close love which we have found at his hands. Secret mercy, claimes secret and close walking. The age we live in requires it also; in which the most generall disease, is a compound of the maladies of the Churches of Ephesus, Sardis and Laodicea mentioned in the Revel. cap. 2. and 3. a decay of first love, watchfulnesse, and zeale; in a word, a warping, declining, and fulsome spirit: contrary to which, is this one grace, compounded of all three, closenesse and faithfulnesse of heart in our whole course. The meanes of an effectuall and powerfull Ministry decay: the Spirit of God in the ordinances is exceedingly streightned: the number and fellowship of close walkers is shrewdly diminished: we loose (dayly) ground, both in our Communion with the Saints and with the Lord himselfe: the Sabbaths and Sacraments loose their foizon: The powers of heaven are shaken: the Enemies of closenesse, power, and conscience, the friends of Apostacy, of formality, of liberty, and carnall serving God encrease dayly: The very wisest virgins nodd and slumber: paleness is upon each face, and every hand is upon her side; crying out a spirit of Giddinesse is come upon us; Close walking with God, is gone away: Woe unto us, we have added drunkennesse to our thirst: and we are drunken not with wine, but with the spirit of security, the love of the Creature, ease, pleasure, profits and liberty of the flesh: The yoke of God was never so irksome, nor his burden so tedious, as at this day: Men hate closenesse with God, as much, as a Toade or Serpent. All men now, are for liberty in their Profession: bid the lowest rate: enquire after their betters, and how great and rich and jolly ones walke with God: and the Religion which is in fashion, that shall be theirs: even such a one, as will streine no joint for God, such an one, as warpes and sits loose from all closenesse and faithfulnesse.

And others who are not of so base a mettall, yet cannot finde that sweet closenesse of consent in cleaving to God, as Bernard speakes speakes Act. 11. but will maintaine a breadth still in Gods narrow. The time hath bin when they made a Christian Course, to walke in and out with God, and to keepe his presence in their eye, a continuall feast: and no sooner did they feele any wearinesse or wanning of spirit in this worke, either wayfare or Warfare, but presently (as the tender eye at the least mote) they could complaine. The least jarre in this Musique, streightway offended. But now alas! They walke, dayes, yea weekes with a giddie braine, and a warping heart, and are never troubled: yea, such a spirit of slumber is upon them that all is as well as ever, they see nothing amisse. Its wearisome to walke closely betweene one Sacrament and another. Meditation is out of request: they will heare three or foure Sermons upon a Lords day, but the five holds no water longer then it is in it. The very hearts of men Esay 63. are hardned from the feare of God: joy not in his promises, close not with the sadnesse and authority of his Commands, feare not the severity of his threats: walke not with any sweetnesse in his wayes: the way of Communion with his Sects, of mercy to the distressed, tendernesse of the least occasions of evill, &c. And, although some make complaints hereof, yet their disease still remaynes. Their vowes (they say) vanish, they cannot for their hearts, get ground of this giddy spirit: It so dogges them, that they despare of overtaking it.

To whom let me say thus: Although your disease be of the hardest cure, and relapses (we say) are most dangerous: yet, shall a man fall and not a rise? As the Asse sinke under his burden, in the slough? Hath it not beene better with you then it is? Be zealous, then and repent. Remember the joy which your former closeneese procured: even such as no stranger shall ever enter into: Consider the sad woe which your warping, and base loosenesse hath wrought yee, (except your drunkennesse hath made you sensleese of it) And know, that as desperate as this world is, yet God wants not his witnesses. If you beare not witnesse to his way, the stones of the street shall cry. Precisenesse shall never be so strongly trod downe, nor the Caule of God, ever so deferred, and given up by a profane world of opposers, but the Truth and power of godlinesse shall survive and outgrow all their aspersions: it some God shall raise up, who walks so much the closer with him, by how much much more the formall professor warpe and staggers. If we honor God, so much the better for us: if not, never a whit the worse for God, who shall make us witnesses of his vengeance, and raise up better in our roomes, in a closer worship of his name. Therefore let us Consider by what secret, creeping degrees, this mischeefe hath insinuated us: whither by offences at the wayes of God: the want of meanes and examples, the error of libertines: the discontent with Gods darke government of his Church: the surfeit of an heart made heavie with worldly cares, or wanton with profits and pleasures: or drawne away by such as warp and revolt. However it be, the roote of all, is, an heart, both decaying in the grace of faith, and faintly apprehending the love of Christ by the promise: and so, declining from elosenesse and care, to slightnesse and security.

Therefore, returne not, by your owne strength: let the Lord come betweene your falles, and your repentings: your declining from God, hath brought yee into a dead, uncomfortable condition: Therefore first abase your giddy hearts with sorrow: and be sadder another while with stayd and humble thoughts: While your giddinesse lasts, there is no good to be hoped for: The first cure must be, in the settling of your spirits, to a more sober, wise, and setled frame: No man can see his face in water disquieted with waves: it must settle first. Then breake their hearts, and be ashamed as much of an unsettled heart in goodnesse, a warping, loose spirit, as if you had fallen into any odious sinne, and entreate God to establish you with his free spirit: If the Lords hands be against you, to plague you with all adversity, so long as you are out of course, cold, slacke, carnall, and sunke from God: let that be a watch-word unto you, of Gods meaning, and let him not speake in vaine: least he come upon you, at last with such terrible affronts, as you shall not be able to beare. Let the righteous smite you: yea, let the Lord rather set the Devill upon you, then suffer you to lye sunke under this condition. Behold the promise with hope & faith; to wit, that the seed of God shall not dye in his: when by pactices be cast downe, then shall there be a lifting up for the righteous: and the promise of God shall put life into them, and their hearts shall be lift up (with Iehoshaphats 2 Chron. 17. 6.) to God, after their falling downe, to behold his face and renue their covenant and race with joy. And if the Lord shall straighten the weary hands and joints of thy soule, and put new blood and marrow into thy rotten old bones:

Ier. 22. 29. Mica 7. 8.

Heb. 12.

bones: then returne with treble care and cloſeneſſe to walke with the Lord, confeſſing, that without his ſtrength, it is not in thy power to redreſſe thy decayes.

Laſtly, Watch to thy ſelfe duly and daily, and to this worke of Converſation, and way that God hath chalked out for thee. Doe as thoſe, Numb.9.19. who attended the watch of the Lord day and night: ready upon the leaſt warning of the Cloud or fire from the Tabernacle, to remoove: and upon the firſt reſt hereof, to ſtand ſtill. As the Apoſtle never thinkes himſelfe to have preſſed a duty well, when he urges to pray, or reade, or heare, or be armed, except he adde this too, Watch thereto, Ephe.6.18. 1 Pet.5.8. 1 Cor.16.13. So ſay I, Obey and watch to it, walke with God in this wheele of thy courſe, and watch to it: be aware of each turne of the wheele, each dutie, occaſion, libertie, ſervice: elſe it will be in vaine to know it, if thy loines be not girt, and thy lamp alway burning to it. If God have once purged thy foule heart, and ſeaſoned it for thee, keepe it ſo: he did it not without much adoe, that thou ſhouldſt undoe it all at once, by thy eaſe, and ſloth, world, pleaſures, wearineſſe, and the like. Let the wiſe Virgins take heed of nodding in this night of the age we live in. Let them watch to their worke: let them ſee how they grow downward in rooting & ſetledneſſe; upward in fruitfulneſſe, skill, eaſe, and experience, reſolution and full purpoſe of heart to cleave to God. Vſe 3. Numb.9.19. Ephe.6.18. 1 Pet.5.8. 1 Cor.16.13.

And by ſo doing, we ſhall watch to the comming alſo of our Lord Ieſus, to tranſlate us from this our poore walking with him, to be with him: and to be rid of all our clogs which hinder us from ſo doing: and goe from this our doing Gods will as it is in heaven, to doe it in Heaven. Never was there greater cauſe for us to long for this comming, than in theſe times, wherein not only we are letted by Satan, and the world, but even by men of our own profeſſion and Religion, from the ſervice of the time, and the grace of our Converſation! Oh how well ſhall it be, when not onely Goats and Sheepe ſhall for ever be parted, but the ſad carriage and ſtrangeneſſe of ſheepe to ſheepe, be both forgiven and remooved! where Luther and Zuinglius, (as one ſayd) where Cranmer and Hooper, where Ridley and Sanders ſhall accord for ever in perfect amitie? Come Lord Ieſus, come quickly. Amen. Concluſion of all.

Give God the Prayſe.

A PRACTICALL CATECHISME

Or,

A view of those principall truths of the word, which most directly tend to life and godlinesse.

Divided into three Parts.

The first, shewing the misery of all men by nature, both in respect of sinne and punishment; with the true use of the morrall Law in that behalfe.

The second, manifesting the remedy ordained by God to deliver them from this misery, together with the meanes of receiving it, viz. Faith, and how it may be attained.

The third, declaring how those who are delivered, ought to order their whole Conversation; with the meanes to procure it, the lets resisting, and the priviledges encouraging to it.

Serving for the use of those who first heard them taught, as also for all others who shall carefully peruse them.

The third Edition, corrected and much enlarged.

By D. Rogers B. in Divin. and Minister of the Gospell.

Rom. 7. 9. For I was once alive without the Law; but when the Law came, sinne revived, and I died.

Esay 12. 3. Therefore with joy draw yee waters out of the wels of salvation.

2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore these promises, let us clense our selves from all filthinesse of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holinesse in the feare of God.

Printed at London by I. D. for John Bellamie, and Ralph Smith, at the three golden Lyons in Cornehill, neere the Royall Exchange. 1640.

they make either worke for hell, or (if God recall them) for the Law: for their chaines must be hereby encreased, and they shall meete with a Iaylor that will handle them accordingly. Oh heare counsell betimes, the counsell of Minister, husband, wife, parent, Master, friend, yea childe, or servant, to yeeld to God at the first, that so thy yoke may bee the easier. Object. But perhaps I may escape it, for all are not so yoked. Answ. Such as subtilly seeke to scape this net, except God let them goe quite, shall be most hampered. And yet wee tye not the Lord to one measure of dealing; many under constant meanes have waded more easily through this gulfe, and Lydia and Zachee were not so deepely wounded: because the Lord ment to make shorter worke: but under ordinary meanes, the Lord more or lesse holds his course. Furthermore, let the Lord try us in this point of our selfe-deniall.

The Lord may bee said to try us, and wee also in a sort with reverence be it spoken may be sayd to try him: and both in one thing. Hee tries us whether wee are fit for mercy, and whether we bee vnder the condition or no: And that by our denying our selves. As Gideons souldiers were tried by their lapping water, as a dog lappeth, so doth the Lord try us by our selfe-deniall. If we love the ordinary course of the world, the easiest way, that which is most naturall, ready and pleasing to our flesh, the Lord hath enough of us. But if we love the way which most resists flesh, ease, and selfe denying our base hearts in all, not lusts and liberties onely, but performances, duties, devotions, affections, ascribing all to free, naked, pure mercy, we are they who are likest to obtaine it. So doe we also try the Lord, that is, whither hee bee that indeed, which his word would make him to be or no. And that is, when we are lost to God, to hope, to comfort, to heaven, and are brought to such a sad point, and deadly desolation, by our sinne guilt and the wrath of God seazing vpon our soules for it, that (with Christ) wee are in the garden before our passion, wishing the cup might passe from us, and crying, O Lord, why hast thou forsaken me? Oh, the losse of thy favour, is as the losse of my life, and I seeme to lacke a subsisting, as one ready to drop into hell! Backe againe I must not go, and if I go forward I goe into hell: What shall I doe? What shall become of mee? As one wildred or lost in a wildernes, or a child bereft of father, and mother friends and all, left to the desolate wide world, and to the mercy of strangers is glad to meete with a guide, with a friend, so must it be with us. Till wee be thus we seeke mercy to play with, to dally with for our owne ends, as one makes use of a bridge to keepe him from drowning, and there leaves it: But if thus forsaken and lost, the Lord is at hand to shew mercy. With thee the fatherlesse shall find mercy: Not those that have an hundred waies of evasion, and can subsist in any if mercy faile, in their witts, parts, learning, friends, wealth, hopes, devotions: but those who are lost to all, as Paul Phil. 3. who had made shipwracke and counted them all losse to him, in point of grace, knowing that none of them all could ease his sad and heavie heart, none of them all could helpe in the evill day, but leave him in the suddes. Such a man seemes to men and himselfe quite lost, but to God he is found. Such a one tries what is in the Lord and in mercy. He onely can put it to the venture as those Lepers did, because he cannot bee in worse case then he is, if he be in any better it is mercy, but hee is in hell already, lost and desolate and now he will try whether mercy be mercy or no: Truely this is the way, the narrow way, few finde it, but walke at a breadth; they will never venture upon a promise, so long as they can catch at any ragge to cover their shame withall. Onely Christ is precious to a lost soule, that can turne him no way. Pray therefore, Lord robbe mee of all my props, shew me what is in them, all or any: pull me off all my bottomes, and lay me upon the dunghill, with a potsherd to scrape me, if ever thou wilt do me good.

I end therfore thus with Exhortation. Bury not the worke of this Spirit nnder these clods of flesh: streighten not the Spirit of conviction. Beg of God, that by all these sixe staires thou mayst fall lower and lower, till thou art brought to the Earth. Here is no place for freewill, for civility, or the Religion of a Pharisee in almes, mercy to the poore, good nature, good duduties: all these lands vanish in Gods Map of misery, when God is pulling the conscience upon her knees. Happie thou, if when the Law seemes to have done working in the world, it beginnes to slay thee: so that by all these sixe steps, as Eutichus from the Left, thou mayst be taken up as dead. Aske of thy selfe, When Lord, shall my laughter, light, frothy, merry, quiet heart be met with throughly? Not to say onely, True it is there is ſmall cauſe any of us ſhould be proud (for ſo thou mayſt, and be as proud ſtill) but to meete with the Beare and Lyon indeed, and be afraid of devouring. There is difference betweene a face chalked over, and the palenes of one that hath lyen under a quartane a twelue-moneth. Lye under this worke, and ſuffer affliction: ſay, I ſee the Lord is in earneſt, Hell is no painted fire, the eaſe of a ſinfull courſe differs from that little eaſe of the Law: I am in a ſtreight, I know not whither to turne me! No wealth, friends credit, marriage, honour, eating, ſleepe, play or Muſicke, can helpe now. Away now all old companions: the Lord hath laid ſorrow upon my ſoule, ſuch as no tales or Iigs can put by: my meat is now mingled with gall: and God ſeemes to forſake me: wrath, Hell and horror are upon me, my nights are wearyſome, my dayes miſerable. As one in a Forreſt loſt, ſeeth twentie deaths before him, by wildring, by thirſt, by wild beaſts but no eſcape: ſo doe I fare, not knowing what weapon conſcience will uſe to devoure mee. Chuſe rather to be thus for the killing of thy fleſh, than at libertie to the death of thy ſoule. And wait in this eſtate upon God, till he cauſe light to breake out: which in a word, I will adde in the next queſtion, and ſo end this part. Thus much of the ſixt Article.

ARTICLE

ARTICLE. VII.

Qu. What is the ſeventh and laſt Article?

A. THat the Soule brought thus farre, reſt not here, but proceed on to a further ſtep of calling and converſion, by the hope of the Goſpell.

Q. What avayleth the doctrine of the Law to Converſion?

A. True: If God ſhould ſo leave the ſoule. But here marke the Connexion of this to the ſecond part following. The Lord, where he means to ſave, keeps not the ſoule alway in this anguiſh, but cauſes ſome upholding of his ſecret ſpirit to keepe up the ſoule of him whom hee will ſave, from utter extremitie. This hee doth, by ſhewing of them a doore of hope in the Wilderneſſe, as hee ſayth in Hoſea 2.15. cauſing ſome glimpſe a farre off to appeare to them, as a crevis of light in a priſon-wall: as to conſider that God hath had a gracious meaning to thouſands whom he hath thus humbled; that by Hell lyes the way to Heaven; that God delights not in this courſe, if the Rebellion of the heart did not require it: that God doth that which the ſoule ſhall not know till after, hee meanes to make Chriſt ſweet, precious, and welcome, not as Hony to a full Laodicean ſtomacke; hee begins to lay ſome ground of mortification, which in the due time the Goſpell ſhall perfect. See that in the 10. of Ezra, the ſecond verſe; There is hope concerning this thing: alſo Iona 3.9. Who can tell whether God will repent? So in Act. 2. How were thoſe murtherers of Chriſt ſtayd by that the Apoſtle told them? And yet they had not felt the promiſe: But by ſuch glimpſe of the Goſpell, which God requires to be joyned with the Law, the Lord keepes his from revolt to old baſe luſts (whatſoever come of them) from a deſpaire of mercy, and undoing themſelves, or from a careleſſe diſſoluteneſſe which end goeth forward. And having ſo upheld them by the chin from ſinking for a time, hee doth let in light by ſuch degrees as he ſees them meeteſt

The Lord leaves not the ſoules of his in thraldome, to beare, and to keepe them low from waxing bold and venturous: till at length he ſettle them upon his promiſe, as in the next part ſhall appeare.

Q. I partly conceive you: howbeit this cloſe of the firſt part, being weightie, open it a little; and firſt, what reaſons are there, why God uſeth this method?

Explication. Reaſons of this method of the Lord.

A. Firſt, To keepe the ſoule from extremities of preſuming or deſpairing (of which ſee in Article ſixt) both being dangerous rockes, the one ſeparating the meanes, from the end, running to their old liberties, and yet hoping to fare well: the other ſeparating the end from the meanes after all their humblings, yet thinking there is no mercy for them. See Ier. 2.25. The Lord by this light at a crevis holds up the ſoule from both.

2 Secondly, He encourages ſuch to beare the yoke of the Law, as otherwiſe for the tedioufneſſe of it would ſhake it off.

3 Thirdly, He deales according to the capacitie of their weakeneſſe: becauſe they cannot beare much terror, he eaſes them: and becauſe they dare not hearken to much comfort at once, he gives them a little at once: in the former ſhewing himſelfe a pittifull God, who delights not in the miſery of any poore ſoule, under his lode, or to adde ſorrow: In the latter, a wiſe GOD, to feede with a few crummes, when morſels will not goe downe, and to refreſh with drops, when draughts cannot be digeſted.

Iſa. 63.9.

4 Fourthly, He doth it for the honour of his owne worke of calling: hee hath promiſed to call thoſe whom hee hath choſen, which hee ſhould not doe if hee left them in theſe briars. Moſes tels the Lord, If hee ſhould leave his people in the Wilderneſſe, the Nations would ſay, Becauſe hee could not bring them into Canaan, hee left them there. So, this is a ſtrong cauſe.

Numb. 14.15

5 And laſtly, by this hope hee ſhewes them, that hee is as able to give them his full promiſe, and the effect thereof, ſound peace, as he can ſtay them up from ſinking, when they are at ſo low an ebbe of caſting downe. Not to ſpeake of the method that God takes with his, to begin early to reveale himſelfe to them, in his ſmaller providence and ſuſtainings, that they may learne to truſt in him the better, for ever after, even in the greateſt.

Q.

Q. By what meanes doth he worke it?

A. By presenting to them duly the sight of a possibilitie to get out of their terror. That hee deales not in afflicting his, as with the wicked. Esay 27.7,8. Did he afflict them, as those who afflicted them? He will doe it in measure. That he abhorres excesse in his terrors, Esay 64.12. Wilt thou refraine thy selfe, and hold thy peace still, and afflict us very sore? So Chap. 63.15. Where are thy rollings, are they quite restrained? Psal. 44.22.23. Wilt thou alway bee angry? Forget to shew mercy? No; hee answers himselfe, Esay 57.16. I will not contend for ever, nor be alwayes wroth: for the Spirit should fayle before mee, and the soules which I have made. That hee barres none from him, who barre not themselves, 2 Chron. 15.2. That there is a necessitie of afflicting them with such tedious terrors, or else hee delights not in it: Reade Esay 57.17.18. For the iniquitie of his covetousnesse, I smote him: he went on frowarly in the way of his heart, (viz. till then:) I have seene his wayes, and I will heale him, &c. That he hath not done this to destroy, but to humble: for alas! if hee meant so, What are the bushes to his consuming fire? And all these hee doth cause them to digest and stay themselves by, and fasten upon in more or lesse measure to keepe them from extremitie: causing terror to decrease, and hope to succeede, as wee see in his course with Iob, as tedious as it was, Iob 32.40. in sending Elihu, and Chap. 40. 1. 2. 3. in speaking himselfe: for the proportion, both doe agree.

Ezra 10.2. Reade the place. How the Lord workes this hope? Esay 27.7. Esay 64.12. & 63.15. Psal. 44.22. Esay 57.16. 2 Chron. 15.2. Esay 27.3.4. Iob 32.40. & 40.1.

Q. Is this hope, grace, or can any such be said to believe is?

A. No, hope is the fruit of faith: this hope goeth before faith. Yet it is such as the Lord enableth to uphold them betweene the horrours of the Law, and the grace of the Gospell: the LORD being as truly in his way with them, whom he will bring home, even in the first seede, and begining, as in the perfectings thereof, if wee knew assuredly who they were. See Acts 15. 18.

A doubt answered.

Q. What are the markes of this hope?

A. Such as these.

First, In the entrance it is very weake and staggering, betweene feare, and hope, very doubtfull, Ionas 3.9. Who can tell? Its a great hazard. Onely (as it is in Gold-weights, the least straw will cast them) so here it is, especially when the

The markes of this hope. 1. Ionah 3.9.

it

hand of God caſts it into the ballance of the thoughts.

2 Secondly, Yet this little hope keepes from the hardeſt and deſperateſt attempts. Who elſe ſhould have thought that thoſe Niniuites, being ſo put to for fortie dayes, would not have prevented ſo generall an horrour and calamitie, by deſtroying themſelves? But God ſupported them in ſecret.

3 Thirdly, It rather bends the eye to the end why GOD troubleth the ſoule, than at the trouble it ſelfe in a plodding manner; Who knoweth whether hee will aſſwage, and ſhew mercy for all this?

4 Fourthly, Its weary of trouble rather by that eaſe which God ſheweth, than by tediouſneſſe. See Hab. 3. 16. Rottenneſſe entred, Hab.3.16. that I might have peace: As Hagar, when ſhe ſaw the fountaine a farre off, ended her anguiſh. Every creature is naturally weary of trouble by meere time: but a ſoule under Gods hand, is not weary till God enclines it.

5 Fifthly, It weakely turnes the thoughts, to muſe, What would follow upon it, if GOD ſhould ſhew mercy? Oh, this is great newes to one that was ſo oppreſſed: As Iob ſaith, When I looke for eaſe, loe, trouble is preſent! And the Church, Lam. 3 17. Thou Ionah 3.9. Iob 3.26. Lam.3.17. haſt remooved mee farre from proſperitie: Oh, now therefore to ſwither up with thoughts of welfare, is a great change.

6 Sixthly, When trouble decayes, and hope encreaſes, as that little oyle and meale waſted not till plentie came. And the like.

Q. What uſes are to be made of this doctrine?

A. Firſt, this point ſhould ſtrengthen the former Article: and the more earneſtly preſſe the point of the Law convincing and holding downe the ſoule under the burden of ſinne and wrath. A thing which is rare to finde, in theſe dayes: wherein the power of all Truth is ſo reſtrayned. But yet ſo many as can approve themſelves in the former Article may take comfort to themſelves in this. There is no hope of the Goſpell, much leſſe comfort from a promiſe, belonging to any ſave to ſuch as are loden and tyred with the thoughts and horror of their curſed condition. Onely theſe may lay claime to it, and reſolve that to them the promiſe of eaſe belongs: Onely to them who are pinched in ſpirit, in a ſtreight, deſolate, loſt, forſaken, at a pludge, ſick at heart, and fatherleſſe; the promiſe belongs. Theſe phraſes the holy Ghoſt vſeth to expreſſe the eſtate of a man who is at laſt caſt, out of himſelfe, and

paſt hope, or remedy for ought he findes in himſelfe. Thoſe that have beene in ſuch a caſe can ſpeake by experience: others cannot: for it cannot be counterfeited. One who walkes light and eaſie, cannot conceive what it meanes to be loden with an intolerable burden, cruſhing him to the earth: a man going on in his way, cannot conceive, what it is to be loſt in a wilderneſſe or Forreſt, or Wood: in which he is like to periſh for lacke of a guide. A child having father and mother knowes not the preſſure of an Orphan. One that is at liberty, cannot tell what it is to be at the advantage, and courteſy of an adverſary, who hath got the day of him, and hath a power to ſtrip him of all he is worth. Therfore, deceive not thy ſelfe: diſſemble not with God, and thy ſoule: Hope and poſſiblity of pardon, cannot be the portion of any who cannot proove themſelves truly loden (by the ſix former Articles) with the burden of their eſtate. Therefore I ſay, let it be a ſpurre to the enforcing of the former point, proove thy ſelf truely loden, and I wil proove that the promiſe belongs to thee. Thou wilt aske how ſhould I proove that? I anſwer, Goe through the laſt Article, and try thy ſelfe thereby: for he who is truly convinced, is truly loaden. Yet for thy ſatisfaction I will branch out ſome markes of tryall. Examine thy ſelfe by them.

Firſt, A loaden ſoule looks back to her former liberty and eaſe in an evill courſe, with admiration and aſtoniſhment, how light and jolly ſhee was in her Element: how impudent, preſumptuous and ſenſleſſe ſhee was, and could be then; whereas now the ſence of one ſinne (being out of her place, and courſe) doth ſo extreamly annoy her! Oh! ſhee ſees and deteſts that infinite ſtupor and ſottiſhneſſe which lodges in a ſinfull ſoule, till the Lord ſettles her lode upon Conſcience.

Secondly, A loaden ſoule feeles her ſelf diſcharged from all thoſe falſe ſhoulders, which diſcharged Conſcience from feeling that to be any burden which yet was intolerable. As a ſtout fellow putting his ſtrength under a weight, which elſe would fall upon a weake body, keepes it off for a while: but if hee pull away his ſhoulders it muſt fall upon him that is weake and cruſh him. So it is here. The Law abandons all falſe ſupports of the ſoule, as eaſe, peace, ſecurity, pleaſures, profits, falſe opinions, worldly welfare, ſo that nothing can keepe the ſoule beſotted, when God will have it loaden: Then all contempt of Miniſter and reproofe, deadneſſe of heart, bad cuſtome, ill example, ſweetneſſe in evill, baſe base gaynes by sinning, and the like, must leave the soule to her selfe, and then shee must needs sinke, and lye under her burden: and when in stead of her merry veine of evill, a veine of vengeance is let in, how should the soule subsist (of her selfe) any longer?

Thirdly, A loden soule is appalled with a thing above it selfe, and feeles it so. We have a saying, That when a thing exceeds all naturall sence, either it weakens it, as the Sun-beames doe the eye; or destroyes it, as the fire doth the body. Such is this effect to the soule: it over-powres weakenes and kills it. And the closer it comes, the more it oppresses.

Fourthly, A loden soule is past modesty, or biting it in. If one can conceale a burden and not complaine, its no true lode because there is a shift. Men and brethren what shall wee doe? as Act. 19. Act. 2. They could not hold in.

Fiftly, A loden soule, covets ease, cryes out for it, cannot dislike it, nor reject it, finally. It cries out, who shall rid me! joyes when it meetes with any such helper, it cavills not with the instrument, is not coy, but glad of it.

Sixtly A loaden soule confesses, God hath cause sufficient in justice to lode her: and besides, that hereby, shee is made, for ever after, more tame, tender and wary of sinne, then those that never feele this burden kindly: who commonly waxe loose, before they come to enjoy the fruit of Christ, in a settled manner.

Seventhly, A loden soule, feeles not onely a burden above strength, but a lode so nayled to her bones through the flesh, that shee cannot disburden her selfe. It stickes as a venomed dart in the soule, the more she struggles, the more her load settles.

Eightly, Other mens loades trouble her not as her own: Shee hath neither leasure, nor Spirit to looke at others: shee hath so much upon her owne shoulders. And (for the time) shee feeles no other lode, but this: As one that is under deepe thirst, and famine, thinkes not of poverty, or debt, or losse of wife.

Ninthly, A loden soule, if eased, shall not readily returne to his old lusts, nor winde out of Gods fingers.

Tenthly, It shall not be a lode crushing a part, as a Legge, or Arme, but oppressing body and soule, even the whole man: a total burden.

These and the like markes may direct for triall, and teach men to come to a ſtrict ſurvey of themſelves. If they can find that the Law hath thus ſetled a loade vpon conſcience: then ſhee may conclude, that ſhe is vnder a condition of eaſe, and hope of pardon. If thou ſeele then that the Lord hath thee at this infinite advantage, thou mayeſt conceive ſome comfort, in the middeſt of thy ſtreight. And although thou mayeſt finde it hard (perhaps) to grapple with the Promiſe as thou wouldeſt: yet (as one who is under an execution) would chooſe to put himſelfe vpon the mercy of his Adverſary, rather then be quite vndone; (for why? If he will not ſhew him favour, yet hee is but as hee was, an undone man:) But perhaps his enemy may be mooved with compaſſion towards him: ſo here a poore ſoule may and ought to chooſe the hazard of a Promiſe (although hard to beleeve) rather then be deſperate, and diſdaine to come in to ſeeke reconciliation. Let all then who would be under hope, prove themſelves to be under a ſtreight. For no other are under any poſſibility of mercy: but lie under the abſolute condition of wrath.

Secondly, Inſtruction to Gods Miniſters to diſcerne wiſely of the ſeaſon of ſtaying the troubled heart. For elſe they may ſpend much labour in vaine. It fares with an heavie heart as with the bleeding wound, and the deepe humor of melancholy: while the dint is, they refuſe plaiſter and counſell. Iobs friends ſate ſeven dayes and ſeven nights by him, and ſaid nothing, becauſe they ſaw the griefe was great. And againe when they ſee the ſeaſon come, let them ply God his fitteſt Medicines, as Eſay 50.4. A word in ſeaſon is as apples of Gold. Sure it is that for lacke of counſell Gods people doe miſcarry oftentimes; as appeares in their agonies and feares, that when their ſpirit is unable to ſuſtaine it ſelfe, they are ready to faint and give over; yea ſome to lay violent hands upon themſelves. Oh! in ſuch a caſe, diſcerne of the ſtate of ſuch a poore ſoule, and pitty it! Bee yee O yee Prieſts of the Lord, cloathed with ſalvation, 2 Chron. 6.41. Doe not apply your ſelves harſhly to an heart overloden already; Rather give wine to ſuch, that they may forget their ſorrow, Prov. 31. 6. Bleſſed is hee that conſiders wiſely of ſuch a condition! Let terrors ſerve for the deſperate and refractory ſinners that they may come vnder Gods chain; But ſuch as are bound in it already, muſt not bee oppreſſed more, as if there were no ſuccour for them, no Balme in Gilead But let this doore of hope at leaſt ſtand upon the latch, ready to open unto them; For God will not be angry for ever, leſt fleſh ſhould faile,

Be wee wiſe then, to diſcerne; Both how farre its expedient ſtill to hold them upon the hooke, leaſt a giddy heart returne too ſoone, (to which corruption is moſt prone) and powre not out all Gods conſolations at once, till they runne over, and forget all heavineſſe at once; But put difference betweene ſome ſeeds of terror, and the ſpirit of bondage: yet on the other ſide, play not Ionas part, to bee more ſtreight toward the diſtreſſed ſoule than God himſelfe! But keepe a wiſe mediocrity. We are but ſervants for the good of the Elect: it is not in our power, to make Gods way a jot eaſier or harder than himſelf hath made it; Therefore according to the meaſure of his working, ſo apply wee our ſelves. The folly of Miniſters is great in this: Either they are too forward to thruſt this hope into the boſome of each Complainer; or elſe to hold it backe unmercifully from the truely loaden. The Lord who will have none to picke up their crummes too ſoone, yet will not have ſorrow unſeaſonably added to ſorrow.

Vſe 3. Thirdly; Let ſuch as are to receive their counſell, beware of being ſtout and obſtinate by melancholly and ſullenneſſe. Many people make their chaines heavier then God makes them, and will not ſuffer a thought of hope to enter through the anguiſh of bondage. So it is ſaid of the Iſraelites in Egypt. when God ſent them a delivery, they looked not after it, Exod. 6. 9. This is a ſullen heart, to make priſon to become libertie and our meat to bee as gall by ill cuſtome, or a melancholicke ſpirit: The Lord delights not in it. Theſe diſcourage Gods Miniſters from helping them.

Branch 1.

Exod. 6. 9.

Branch 2. Thirdly, All ſuch as, becauſe they cannot feele ſo ſtrong comforts as they fancy, therefore quarrell with God, and reject ſuch as he offers them. No, let not God be tempted by thy frowardneſſe, when he ſeekes to try thy humilitie. All Gods people are little ones, Zacheus: little things are welcome to them, till greater come, and every ſomewhat hath ſome ſavour with them. They who are leſſe than any the leaſt bleſſing, count each little great; as a pledge of better to come, they deſpiſe it not becauſe there is a bleſſing in it. And let them not grieve Gods Miniſters, in ſlighting of Counſell: but count it a great priviledge; for how many poore ſoules periſh for lacke of Counſell.

Hoſ. 4. 6,

*Hos.*4. 6. and lay violent hands upon themselves? which rarely fals out where any Counsellors be. Oh, be base, and vile in thy owne eyes, thinke it a mercy that thou mayest tread upon the earth, (so the Publican thought, Luk. 18. 13.) but the honour of an Angell (for so it is 1 Pet. 1. 12.) to heare one Sermon of Christ. *Hos.*4.6. Luk. 18.13. 1 Pet. 1.12.

Fourthly, Its exhortation to all poore troubled soules. First, To get and pray for ready and willing hearts to heare and see Gods voyce and steppes for ease: and doe not devoure their owne flesh, *Prov.*9.12. Get Abrahams wisedome, *Gen.*22.13. Who although Isaac had the knife at his throat, yet had an eare to heare the Angell, an eye to see the Ramme caught in the bush, in stead of his sonne. So bee you apprehensive of the least sound or syllable of hope: and dispute for God and thy owne soule, as the prisoner at the barre for his life. Seeke out and bee wise for thy selfe, that's true wisedome, Prov. 1. 32. Catch at a Word from God, for so doe Captives and fearfull ones, 1 King. 20. 32. Vse 4. Branch 1. *Pro.*9.12. *Gen.*22.13. *Prov.*1.32. 1 *King.*20.32.

Secondly although your hope bee small, yet because your streight is great, consider whether it be not better to venture upon uncertaine hope, than upon assured woe. Thy case is as the Lepers, 2 *King.*7.4. If wee sit here, wee dye: if we goe into the campe of Aram, we may dye, but perhaps we may live: Howsoever wee are but dead men; And so they ventured, and the Lord was with their resolution. Doe thou so in the strength of God and prosper. It is a sweet signe that the promise is digested by the soule, and not suffered to passe away as a sound of waters, when thou canst not chuse but fasten upon it in some confused measure, when yet thou seest not any certaine escape. As a man in the waters strugling for life, though he be not sure to avoid drowning: yet in his confusion is able to lay both his hazards in the ballance, and resolve upon the lesse: On the one side he knowes the mercy of the waters is cruell: drowne he must without helpe: on the other side he sees a reed put towards him, which hee cannot tell whether he shall bee able to reach, or whether that will save him. What doth he; he chuseth an uncertaine hope before a certaine death: here I die, there I may live: If I might escape, how happie were I? The reed is offered me to save mee: I can but perish; If I perish, I perish; But I will surely make toward it, I will not perish wilfully. Waite upon the Lord, and Branch 2. 2 *King.*7.4.

let there be no crevis of light, but thou mayst spie it. For as the Lord would have loose hearts to be beaten from their holds, so he studies how to speake to a fainting heart, lest it faile, as I noted out of Esay 57. 18. God hath comfort for thee and thy mourners: yea for them a farre off, as well as the neere, if thou seeke not thy owne ends.

Lastly, To include all in one, let the last use be to such, that they suffer not bondage to swallow them up in their legall sorrow: that they thinke not their Hell, an heaven by custome, but as speedily as they can get out at this privie doore, blessing God for such a mitigation of misery, that in the discharge of the duties of their places, they might attend upon the further worke of GOD, abhorring to thinke themselves well, because the Law hath them under bondage, till the Gospelt have comforted them.

A. A cleare view of the doctrine of the ſecond part of the Catechiſme, I meane, of the deliverance of a ſinner from this miſery, together with the uſe of it to all that want it.

Q. Open the parts thereof more fully.

A. Generally the ſcope is, to oppoſe deliverance to miſery, as appeares by the adverbe (but) q. d. Thus indeed it was with us by our own deſervings, and Gods Juſtice: but yet the Lord could not find in his heart to let us lye thus in our wofull ſhiftleſſe eſtate: but when he ſaw none to ſave, himſelfe ſaved us, Eſay. 63. as a man ſeeing a periſhing creature in a ditch, and ready to deſpaire for lack of preſent helpe, himſelfe ſtepped forth to helpe

World, Luſt, and all the infernall crue, Satan and his inſtruments. Do all in his ſtrength, and know thine own is as Samſons cords and withes, not worth the truſting to.

Thirdly, pray, wait, bee patient till the comming of this Kingdome: believe Eſay 26. 26. that thy prayers ſhall not die. He will come and bring healing in his Wings. Each day of delay haſtens his comming: And then all his proud enemies, perſecutors, blaſphemers of his Name, and ſtoppers of his Kingdome, ſhall be ſure to pay for it and licke the duſt of his feete. Rejoyce in all thou ſuffereſt for him; he that hath ledde captivity captive, wil redeeme thee fully, Mica. 7. 8. 9. and tread them down as myre in the ſtreets. Do not cry a league with his enemies, fear not their feares, but ſanctify the Lord in thine heart, and let him be thy feare. He ſhall one day equall all incongruities, reconcile all differences, and pull down the Babell of hypocrites over their heads with confuſion.

Q. More particularly, how doth this Kingdome of Chriſt aſſiſt his Prophecy?

How it aſſiſts the prophecy.

A. By fulfeyning and ſtrengthening the meanes of Salvation, that his Goſpell, Sacraments, Sabbaths and all his Ordinances, together with the Miniſtery thereof, not onely in being, but alſo in their full effectualneſſe of working in the hearts of his people, with conviction, and authority. It is no ſmall Power to preſerve theſe Pillers of his Throne from ruine. For, how many enemies are riſen up ſince his aſcenſion, openly or ſecretly to perſecute or undermine the truth? How hath Satan beſtirred himſelfe by thoſe Lyon-like Emperours in the firſt 300. yeares, and ſince by thoſe wolviſh Popes, and by heretikes and other inſtruments of the Divell, to raze the Scriptures, to deface the chiefe truth of God, the divinity, the humanity, the Union, the purity of Spirituall worſhip, the integrity of Sacraments, the Juſtification of a ſinner by only Faith, the workes of the Spirit, the Reſurrection of the body, and the whole power of godlineſſe? To this very houre he worketh againſt all theſe. But in vaine: for this our King looketh down from his Throne and laugheth them to ſcorne, and deſtroyeth their Policies. No deluge or flood of his malice could ever prevaile againſt theſe: but ſtill they continue as a brazen Pillar, and ſhall ſurvive them all, till his ſecond comming. And not only ſo, but ſtill he ſupports theſe in their Authority and ableneſſe to overrule rule the consciences of men (whom no other Lord can controll) to pierce, perswade, convince, convert, or condemne, whether they believe or despise them. And to settle upon the elect all the liberties of Redemption Adoption, Holinesse and Glory. In which respect he is called the Lord that Spirit of liberty or Prerogatives. See 1 Cor. 3. end. This for a taft may serve.

Q. And how doth he assist the Priest-hood by his Kingdome?

A. By susteyning and holding up his believing servants, in that estate of grace, both Faith and sanctification in which he hath set them. For it is the Kingdom of Christ which giveth efficacy both to his satisfaction and intercession, for the keeping of all such as are given him by the Father, in his truth and name. He enables his sacrifice to forgive them and reconcile their persons: his holinesse to sanctifie them, to change their natures, to subdue their iniquities, to set up his Kingdom in their hearts; to make them spirituall Kings and Priests to God, in the mortifying of their lusts, and their living to God in the power of Faith and godlinesse. He makes them, Eph. 1.20. to partake that exceeding mighty power of his, whereby he raised Christ from the dead. He forsakes them not, till he have brought them to finall perseverance: and in the meane time makes them partners of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 2. Which is more than a Creation: Also he infuseth into them the fellowship of his sufferings, enabling them to endure the uttermost bitternesse of them, and all the circumstances thereof, till they partake his holinesse, and become more than conquerors. How he assists the Kingdom. Rev. 1.

Q. What else doth Christ as our King?

A. He subjecteth all his people to himselfe by the Lawes of his Kingdome. For, he rules not by tyranny, but by Law, and Command. Although he be absolute, yet righteousnesse is the Scepter by which he rules. And therefore in Esay 55.4. he is called the commander of his people. These Lawes he settles upon his Church, both in respect of conversation, and administration. For the former, he is the Law-giver of his Church, propounding all rules for obedience to himselfe and to others: writing them in the soules of his people. For the latter, he is the Lord upon whose foot-stoole all inferiour Lords and Magistrates doe hold and depend, both civill, in all their Lawes and Penalties to keepe men under subjection: and spirituall, to execute his own censures, admonitions, suspensions and excommu- The Lawes of his Kingdome.

nications: and whatsoever Lawes he hath ordayned for the governing of his Church.

Q. Doth he any thing else?

His protection. A. Yea. He is the Lord of protection also, to cover the heads of all his in the day of battell: I meane to shield and shelter them against all enemies, ghostly and bodily: For he hath fought for his Kingdom valiantly, and got it as well by conquest as inheritance; having overcome Satan, death, hell, and nayled all against us, to his Grosse, triumphing upon it over them all. He sits at the right hand of Majesty, not still and idle, but active and watchfull, to manage his Churches affayres, peace, affliction, persecutions, temptations, and offences, so, that none of them all, nor the gates of Hell may prevayle against them. He will Psal. 25. ult. deliver his Israel out of all her troubles: and after long and tedious assaults by enemies, he will bring them to a Canaan of rest; as (God willing) in the point of redemption shall appeare in the next Article.

Q. Conclude all with short use.

Vse of the 3. offices and the Vnction. A. All that I have said, is use of it selfe: and may easily apply it selfe to such as it concerneth. For what an happy estate is it for all true believers, to be Kings, Priests, and Prophets to God through this unction of Christ? The Beard of Aaron, and the Psal. 133. skirt of his cloathing were not more fragrant with the over-flow of his oyle of Consecration: then the Persons and soules of the elect are precious and savory, and accepted of God in the Unction of Christ. Whither then shall we goe when we want Wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification, or redemption, save to this Fountaine which is made to us of the Father to convey them unto us? But (to hold my selfe close to my scope) how should this point teach us to acknowledge Christ as an eminent Mediator, as having a calling from God, according to those three sorts of persons whom he resembled all in one by his Unction! How questionlesse should all the Acts and sufferings which he performed, become in our perswasion? The Lord hath made him whatsoever his Church needs, to the end that together with our Union with him wee might partake his Unction, and be so furnisht with his graces (according to our capacity) that in nothing we might be wanting, for substance and soundnesse of the same. Above all uses, this one I especially ayme at. That the loden soule come to the throne of mercy, cy, for eaſe and pardon, as being confident thereof, from this welſpring of Unction? How can that ſatisfaction want fulneſſe which proceeded from this Annoynting, and for whom doth it ſerve but for the ſoule that needs it?

Q. Proceed to the fourth, the former part, to wit, the merit.

A. This is yet more eſſentiall than the former. 3. The fourth then I ſay, is Active obedience of Chriſt. I doe not ſeparate the active from the Paſſive, as if either alone could ſatisfie, or as if I aſcribed the effects of either to the one without the other: but yet diſtinctly I ſpeake of both for the uſe of each of them to the ſoule: Marke then what I have noted. The Lord Jeſus became piacular for us: not only by bearing our puniſhment, but by the tranſlating upon himſelfe the reall imputation of our guilt; without the leaſt meaſure of inherent guilt. This latter would have diſabled his perſon, (for he muſt be ſeparated from ſinners,) yet the want of the former would have made his merit none of ours, and his death unjuſtly inflicted. Therefore he was made ſinne originall and actuall: all the ſins of the elect were charged upon him: that he by his perfect obedience might diſanull them, and bring in & ſettle upon us perfect righteouſnes. And as the miſery of man ſtands in both ſin (and guilt and ſtaine,) aſwell as in curſe, ſo muſt our ſurety performe righteouſneſſe aſwell as beare the curſe. Now this righteouſnes of Chriſt is both his Naturall and his actuall, oppoſite to this naturall and actuall unrighteouſneſſe of Adam. I ſay, both the purity of his humane nature, infuſed by Union, and alſo the obedience to the whole Morall Law to the uttermoſt extent thereof. And this is as true a part of the materiall cauſe of our juſtification, as the other of the Paſſive, though not to be diſioyned.

The fourth. The Merit of Active obedience.

Heb. 7. 26.

Q. Whereof doth this Article of obedience conſiſt?

A. Of the whole converſation of our Lord Jeſus his life and death; but more ſpecially of his latter part, from his Baptiſme to his death: In both which (more or leſſe) hee performed the worke of his Father, and fulfilled all, both generall and perſonall righteouſneſſe. His whole converſation toward God and man was holy: towards God, frequent in his Temple, worſhipping, ſubmitting himſelfe to both Circumciſion and baptiſme, eating the Sacrament of his own body; oft in faſting, (yea whole nights) and prayer to God: moſt holy in his family government, moſt frequent in doing good. Acts 2. 22. Jeſus

Act. 22. 8.

22. Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved by God in many signes and wonders, &c. Preaching from City to City, yea praying for his enemies: so meeke, that he sets forth himselfe as an example, Matth. 11.29.30. he would not breake a bruised reede, nor quench the smoaking flaxe, Esay 42.2,3. He would not lift up his voyce, but as the sheepe which is dumb before the shearer, so opened hee not his mouth. In the judgment of the worst, he did all things well: He grew in grace and favour with God and men, as he grew in stature; his meditations were heavenly, his words gracious, even to admiration, Luke 4. The workes of mercy and compassion to the miserable, were infinite, towards all he was harmelesse, unblameable, confuting them who would gainsay, and stopping their mouths; In his out-side of carriage very humble, riding upon an Asse, farre from worldly pompe; and poore, without a pillar to leane his Head, yet very content; never ate meate but gave thankes: so good to the poore, that he taught his Disciples, It is better to give than to receive: conscionable of the Sabbath: obedience to parents, content to stoope to a meane trade, in likelihood to live upon: very kind to his friends living and dying: so lowly, that he taught his Disciples to be so, by washing and wiping their feete: and so of all the rest.

But especially for the manner, measure, end, and ground of all he did, most sincere and entire: adding thereto, perfection both of parts and degrees, so that there was nothing amisse, he was a righteous Servant, no guile found in him: and so at his death, Iohn 17. he professeth he had done all the worke of his Father: and till he had fulfilled all the Law, (for which he came, Matth. 5.17.) he could by no meanes be disswaded, but called him divell, who sought it: yea, and to the death and in the death of the Crosse he was most obedient, Phil. 2. 5. 6. (for his Active and Passive obedience were mixt inseparably:) but above all, in this was his excellency, that being both glory and holinesse, he was not onely content to empty himselfe into shame, but even into the aspersion of sin, that he might by obedience make a full expiation for it. In a word, Such an high Priest he was, as, not only for his Nature, but for his practise was undefiled and separate from sinners. And all these, he was not for himselfe, but for others, that nothing might be wanting to a full satisfaction: and that they who believe in him might fetch from each part of his life, and obedience, comfort and stay in the infirmity of their youth, age, crosses, duties, worship of God, graces, and in the wants of all their services, both ordinary and private, or publique and extraordinary.

Q. I would have you open this point more fully.

A. I will endeavour it. Consider then: Explication of the Active obedience.

First, Christ being under the Law, and becomming a servant unto it, was not for himselfe, but for us: except then his obedience be for our sakes, it serves for nothing. 1.

Secondly, if our Lord Jesus had suffered for us upon the Crosse, without any obedience to the Law, he might have been as harmelesse an high Priest, by the purity of his nature, as by obeying, so that if there be no other use of his obedience, than this, to qualifie the person of the Obeyer, it had been superfluous. 2.

Thirdly, some part of his actuall obedience was a direct part of his mediation, as his prayer, John 17. Why not all the rest as well? 3. John 17.

Fourthly, let it be supposed true, (which yet is not to be granted) that where sinne is pardoned by removall of curse, there of necessity, righteousnesse and life is restored: yet we must know that Christ restores not his elect, to the meere righteousnesse and life that Adam had, but to the righteousnesse which is of Faith, and unchangeable, and to a life in the presence of God, not of Paradise: therefore it requires a price of a suitable righteousnesse in Christ, more than a mere surety was bound to. But as I said, the former is doubtfull: although each defect of righteousnesse is a degree of sinne: yet there is more in the staine or pollution of sinne, than in the defect of righteousnesse. When a Traitor is pardoned, though he be in a possibility of restoring to favour and dignities by his Prince, yet they are two things, and are oft severed: and if both concurre, the benefit is double. 4.

And Fifthly, where it is objected, that if totall imputation of this righteousnes be granted, there were no use of the passion: I answer, its false: for we are to be considered as liable to the curse of death, for that which is already past: When thou eatest, thou shalt dye.

Q. Well, I am satisfied, proceede to the fifth Branch, the Passive Obedience: what is that?

A. The whole Humiliation of the Lord Jesus, both in the abasement and sufferings of his whole life, through the which he was as one smitten of God and humbled, yea a man of sorrows: The fifth. The Passive Obedience.

and especially that one maine suffering upon the Crosse, whereby he emptied himselfe most throughly, and yeelded himselfe a sacrifice most freely to the wrath of his Father by his death: in the one bearing the incomprehensible weight of his Fathers justice: in the other the exhaustion of his life, bloud, and separation of his soule from body: That thereby sinne with all her penalties, inward, outward, and eternall, with that power which the Law and all enemies, hell and death, had thereby over us, might be abolished, justice appeased, and righteousnesse and life obteined. Rom. 3. 25. Heb. 9. 13, 24. 1. Pet. 1. 19.

Iohn 1. 7. Heb. 12. 24.

Q. You heape up much matter together: divide this answer and unfold it?

A. This Passive Obedience will appeare, by distinguishing it into the preparation, and the passion it selfe.

Wherein it stands, in two,

Q. And wherein stood the Preparation?

1, Preparation in 2. things 1. Subjection, of a servant.

A. It partly stood in the condition he undertooke, partly the antecedent sufferings of his life. For the first, it was a willing putting of his neck into the collar of subjection, forgetting (yea emptying himselfe of) his glory so farre, as being Lord of all, to become in the fashion of a servant chiefly to his Father, also to men, yea the basest of his slaves upon earth, both for us, and our salvation, in which respect he refused no tearmes, but despised all shame, Phil. 2. 4. 5, 6. Heb. 12. 2. 3.

2. The sorrowes of his life.

Secondly, (having subjected himselfe to be a meete object of suffering and sorrow,) he became indeed a man of sorrowes through his life, inuring himselfe betime to the yoke which he yeelded to; as to be borne of meane parentage, to fall to handy-labour for his living, to lye in a cratch as unworthy or unable to hire roome in the Inne; to be persecuted and fly into Egypt even at a month old, to undergoe the reproach of the tongue, being called Demoniack, Wine-bibber, Deceiver, enemy to Cæsar, Traitor, friend of Publicanes; to be the object of tentation, to the vilest and basest creature the Divell himselfe; to crouch in soule and body under the sentence of wrath, ready to seaze upon him not only at the instant, but long before, which dryed up his moisture as a Withered branch, and made him be thought fifty yeares old, (or upon) being little above thirty: losing all his beauty, and being as a man ever under strokes, afflicted and humbled: carrying our common penalties (not personall of this or that disease) of hunger, thirst, faintnesse, wearinesse, harborlesse, and poverty, verty, &c. about him. To have the influence of his deity alway (in a manner) restrained, so that he appeared not to be that he was to his deareſt friends: And therefore he concealed his glory, further than it made for the discharge of his Office of Mediator as a Prophet or a King, (for then he stept out of his baseneſſe. See Mat. 21, 12. Luke, 13. 32.

Q. And what may be said touching the Passion it selfe?

A. Somewhat touching the parcells of it: yet somewhat also touching the necessity of moderation. The 2. part the Passion it selfe.

For the parts, first he endured the forsaking of his deareſt Disciples; to be taken by his own servant Judas, by his own speciall Officers, and at the hands of his own deputies, to suffer most intolerable indignities, to be accused, arraygned, endited, and sentenced, as the vileſt malefactor, and that at the Gaole delivery of felons and murtherers. The parts 1.

After that (besides their barbarous spitting upon, buffetting, mocking with a Robe Crowne of Thornes, and reeden Scepter,) to be put to that shamefull, accurſed death of the Crosse; a death for such as not only men compted villains, but God himselfe in a sort held accurſed. 2.

To which adde the greateſt of all, both in the Garden and upon the Crosse, that most bitter Cup of wrath, which he dranke from the Hand of his Father, which made him in an agony of Spirit, to sweat drops of blond; to pray, that the Cup might passe from him (from feare of drinking it) and to cry out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken mee? And so in that deepe anguish of his Spirit to give up the Ghost: all the divels in Hell banding themselves in that houre of darkneſſe, to pull him from his stedfast confidence. 3.

Q. What meane you by the moderation of it?

A. That in all this abasement, yet that measure was imposed and no more, which suted to the dignity of the person suffering, and to such a one as in suffering, merited, and could not be overcome by suffering. Hence was it, that he had intermissions of his agony and feares: so that he could go to and fro to his Disciples, to admonish them: was upholden in his sences, understanding, memory, affections, in the midſt of his dolours: shewed his power and God-head even then in the consternation of his enemies, conversion of the thiefe: his love and providence of his Mother and Disciple: received comfort by the Angels, in the want of selfe-support: Moderation of the Passion in what?

support: was dispensed with as touching the measure of torments, not being capable of those which reprobates in hell suffer because they can never satisfie: the Duration, the disorder and disguisement of these Hellish terrors, being accidentall to his Passion, and to dying the death only the infinite displeasure of God, and true separation of soule and body, which were essentialls, he endured. So also it was impossible the grave should hold him, Act. 2.24. Yea, and the period of three daies and nights, of 72. houres were abridged to 40.

Acts 2. 24.

Q. What did he effect hereby?

The effect of the obedience of Christ.

A. He being our Surety in all this, did for us purchase a full satisfaction (of which in the question after) and withall, first all those benefits, in Article the fourth. Then the ratification of his Legacies, and Testament, abolishing of enmity, by Law, Sinne, Satan, Wrath, Hell, and Death: As we know if a Court be quite put down, all the Officers belonging to it, are down also. So also, liberty to enter Heaven, by a living way, not the bloud of a beast: with sundry others.

Heb 9.16, 17. Col. 2. 14. Ephes. 2. 16. Heb. 10. 20.

Why the Passion onely is so much dwelt upon in Scripture?

Q. Why doth the Scripture so much dwell upon the passive, and so little upon the Active obedience, in point of our satisfaction?

A. As I intimated before, the Holy Ghost doth more usually (not alwaies, See Phil. 2.7.8. Esay 53.11. Mat. 20.28. Rom. 5.18.) expresse it this way.

Reason 1. First, because in this curse taken away, all the whole satisfaction began to take effect: as we say that the effect of a Prisoners release is delivery from prison: not as if that were all his release: yet thence its denominated: because though the debt be paid before, yet this must follow.

2. Secondly, because the end of a thing is better than the beginning, and the consummation of a thing is from the end. Perseverance hath (we know) the preheminence of all obedience, not as if it were any more than a part of it, but its the finishing and making all out of question. Each moment of a Glasses course is part of the houre, though the last dust of it be the houres end. But

3. Thirdly, and especially: because the Passion was the happiest, greatest, hardest, and fullest part of the whole satisfaction. As, Fortitude carrieth the name of Vertue, not excluding anie.

Q. Seeing all this is (doubtlesse) the maine Satisfaction, goe to the uses of both these in due order: and first tell me, why put you them together?

A. For the latter I answer, because this price is like the price of a Diamond payd for ten Malefactors, which is neither all payd for any one, nor any severall part thereof for one, and another for another: but generally the whole for them all, and each sharing in the whole. Therfore looke what is said distinctly of the benefit of this merit, must issue from both Active and Passive joyntly.

Q. What use is to be made hereof?

A. First, the doctrine hereof may affoord us a sweet meditation (which as there are few ancient or godly writers but have observed, so it is pitty we should neglect) viz. The excellency of the grace of the Gospell, purchased by this Satisfaction, which will appeare by a comparison of the worke of Creation, with this of Redemption. The former I grant was a solemne worke, when the Eternall Word made (of earth) the body of Adam, inspiring it with the breath of God, not onely to be a living Creature, but to beare the Image of God in holinesse. And the truth is, Moses describes even this worke more solemnely, than the Creation of any of the other, to shew the eminency thereof above them. But when the same eternall Word creates man the second time, Lo, not a breath, not a few words will serve; himselfe rather must be made a worme, and no man; God himselfe must empty himselfe of his fulnes & glory: his love, his teares, his miracles, his prayers, the baseneſſe of his condition will not all serve the turne: no other price will be accepted for this, save both the actuall fulfilling of all righteousnesse, and the shedding (not of drops or ounces of other bloud) but the last heart and life bloud that was in his holy body, the bloud of the Son of God. Here was a worke indeed of some difficulty! at which not only the deepest conceit of mortall man, but even the Angels themselves may stand and wonder and vanish. Oh! that the view of this might ravish our soules with the worth of grace, to say, The least dramme of grace is more worth than the whole worke of Nature! who is carried by this mediation above whatsoever this world is, in respect of the new Creature to compt the whole Creation as vanity! David, Psal. 8. admireth man in that first workemanship of his, as above all others in the world: what then may be sayd of man renued and restored to a second Image of God? if the breath of Creation were such a thing, what is Regeneration, that cost not a breath, but so great a workemanship of this Active and Passive satisfaction?

Vses of both parts of the Merit.

Secondly,

Use 2. Secondly, let us abhorre the conceite of such Sectaries, as imagine that there was no necessity at all of any such price paying to Justice: nor any barre in Gods Justice at all, why he might not have shewed mercy to sinners, without any such satisfaction made at all. Its an horrible derogation to the Scriptures, and to the Wisedome of God: and savoreth of a prophane audacious spirit, making sinne and grace of small esteeme.

Rather let it present to us the hideous nature of sin and justice. Salomon bids us behold the drunkard in his redneſſe of colour, blueneſſe of wounds, that we might loathe his sin. But rather behold it in this glasse of the Lord Jesus his satisfaction. Esay 63. 1. Who is he that commeth from Bozra, with his red garments? I have trod the wine-presse of the wrath of the Lord, &c. If the glasse of the Law have not done it, let this do it; yea behold the sins which we count most veniall in this object of Justice. Not the pettiest oath, or least of our vaine words could be payd for, with the price of a lesser thing than the bloud of Christ; Justice would admit of no other. And the Father spared not his onely Sonne in this point; but would have him drinke the dregs of his wrath, What shall become of such wretches then as despise this price? How shall they struggle with this infinite wrath of God, which the Lord Jesus had bin crusht under as unsupportable, if his God-head had not held him up? Now while sin is in her element, its counted as light as feathers; but being under the weight of justice, and the sence of wrath, it will proove intollerable. Let us count it so now, whiles we may, get it shrowded under the Lord Jesus: let us sweat water and bloud, and feele that in us which caused those outcries, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Not to become Mediators to our selves, but to drive us to him that overcame this anguish, and was heard, in that he feared.

Heb. 5. If sin in our selves will not breake our hearts, let it breake them in the view of Christ broken by them: let us, Zach. 12. 20. see him whom we have pierced, and mourne. Not as Papists who whip their bodyes, and cry out of them that betrayed, accused, scourged and crowned Christ, and crucified him: but as those who were the Actors of this Tragedy our selves: that (if by any meanes) our hearts may be pricked as theirs, who heard Acts 2. 38. Peter urge the killing of the Lord of Life. Oh, unspeakeable love, to be willing to be pierced for murtherers, that they might escape! To say, Oh, Father, heere is the surety, lay no debt or punishment upon theſe debtors! I have taken all upon me, if thou wilt needes have the uttermoſt, powre out thy wrath upon him that can ſatisfy, not upon them that cannot: Try whether there be any drop of mourning in thee, by this due ſight of ſinne and juſtice, and ſay, Oh, Lord, if I were left to be my own ſatisfier, if thou ſhouldſt have ſayd to CHRIST, as once to Moſes, Them that ſinne againſt mee, I will puniſh, of thee I will require nothing, Oh, how terrible had our condition been?

Fifthly, let this doctrine confute. Firſt, all Sectaries, who that they might be ſingular (to ſay no more) teach heere of late, among us, that Chriſt had no guilt of ſinne caſt upon him by juſtice, for then he could have been no ſatisfier (confounding ſinne imputed and ſin inherent) that Chriſt ſuffered nothing in his ſoule, from Gods Wrath, ſeaſing upon him, nor yet in either body or mind, but that which man could inflict by either paine or diſcontent. But God keepe them, that are the broachers of ſuch ſtuffe, from ſuch a ſatisfaction as this in the day of their diſtreſſe. And whereas they adde, Gods juſtice accepted this for an equall price of ſinne: I anſwer, who hath taught them to dreame of an acceptance, of that which is not equivalent to Juſtice? Might they not aſwell overthrow any neceſſity of a ſatisfying Juſtice, as teach Juſtice to accept that which is not Juſtice? Is it not well for us, that the Lord will accompt a truely juſt ſatisfaction of a ſurety to anſwer our debt, (which was more than he ought us), but we muſt goe about to corrupt the price it ſelfe, and dreame of an imputing of equall ſatisfaction to an unequall price? Let us abhorre ſuch novelties, and know if Chriſt ſuffered no more than the malice of man, there remaineth a neceſſity of a ſecond ſuffering for us, from juſtice. Let us beware, while we goe about to mince and leſſen the ſufferings of Chriſt; leaſt we deſtroy the truth of a Mediator, and bereave the ſoule of that which ſhould uphold her, in her conflict with Juſtice. Not to ſpeake of unſavory dalliance with thoſe Texts, which are brought to confute them, Eſay 53. 2 Cor. 5. 21. and others. For inſtance, When we urge that text Eſay 63. 1. they elude it thus: That it ſpeakes of the Lord Jeſus his cruſhing the enemies of his Church; as if it were not familiar to the Holy Ghoſt to expreſſe both Acts, I meane of ſatisfaction and conqueſt, in one familiar phraſe, meet meete to expresse: As here. To treade the wine-presse, may be referred either Actively to destroy all Rebells, or passively, to satisfie for the elect, by treading out all wrath; So, when we presse our Saviours bloudy sweat, paine of soule to the death, complaint of being forsaken of God: and so, of his being heard by his Father in that he feared, and cryed out with strong cryes to him that could help him, &c. They answer, All this must be understood of that babarous usage which Pilate and the Iewes shewed towards him: which is infinitely to the dishonor of him whom they pretend to honour, in making him more to take on for mans cruelty, than poore Martyres, sinfull men have done. But the truth is, God is not honoured by such curious distinctions, which neither any of the Fathers, nor late writers (one or other, except such as are taxed for Novelty) have ever dreamt of. But we may easily judge from whence such errors grow: if they were truthes, Satan and his instruments would more stirre against them: But they are quiet, using such trickes, as meanes to cover their own Projects, not caring how many of them are broached. And verily I doe not so much impute such Novelties to the Authors thereof, as to the just Hand of God, punishing the people for contempt of their grounds.

Branch 2. Secondly, Let it teach us to abhorre the opinion of those Lutherans, who teach that our Justification stands in the so applying of Christs righteousnesse to a sinner, that he may plead it from the Tenor of the Law; Doe this and live. Meaning that we must be possessed with the very selfe-same righteousnes wherewith Christ obeyed and suffered. And this they imagine to be the matter of our justification, and that else God cannot in Justice acquite us. They say, The elect doe sustaine one person with Christ, in all his acts and sufferings, and they are all made theirs: But thus they make Christ serve to no other ends, but to make us become our own Mediator, and to destroy his own. The error of this conceit arose from a confounding of the valour of worth of this righteousnesse, with the substance of righteousnesse it selfe. For although we cannot be justified without imputation of the fulnesse of the merit, yet we are not capable of that which merited, except we will become infinite.

Branch 3. Thirdly, it confutes those Sectaries, who affirme that God seeth seeth no sin in any of his, if he have once imputed Christs righteousnesse to them. This error arises from not distinguishing these two, imputation of perfect righteousnesse and perfect imputing or accepting of imputed righteousnesse. No man is justified without the former: but our Faith fayling in the acceptance, must needs be looked upon by God. I confesse he sees no sinne, but he pardons it to us in Christ, upon Faith and repentance; but he punishes it for their good in mercy. Againe, what if we grant, God sees no sinne in them in respect of their justification? Is therefore their Sanctification perfect? Why then did Davids adultery displease the Lord? Or why doe we pray, Forgive us our debts? or why saith our Saviour, Say when all is done, yee are unprofitable?

Fourthly, it confutes all such as cut off the Active obedience of Christ, from the satisfaction, as they cut the garments of Davids servants by the middle. I blame them not now as Papists, for denying Christ to be our price, but for their curious dividing of one member of it, from another. It may be granted them, that the Passive is the more immediate consummation of the satisfaction: but to exclude the Active, is most audacious. They say, Christ was bound to the obeying of the Law, as a man made under it. I answer, Yea, but except he had bin so made purposely for us, he needed never to be so at all: therefore his willing being so, made the merit the greater: and although being a man, he must obey; yet seeing his being a man, was that he might obey for us, it must be of greater desart. Againe, as the Passive is the neerer merit, in respect of the estate, in which we stood accursed; So the Active is as essentiall in respect of recovering that Image of righteousnes, which makes us like God, and in which we were created. Neither was it Hell could have hurt us without sin. Besides (to say truth) if Adam after his sin had not bin accursed, yet in sinning only he had bin miserable. It is therefore as essentiall to Justification, that he be made just as rid of guilt, and brought to Heaven as rid of Hell. But of this before. Branch 4. 2 Sam. 10. 4. Object. Answer.

Q. Be there any other uses besides confutation?

A. Yea. Sixthly, to teach all Gods people to abhorre the slavery of hypocrites, who if they could shun Hell, would never care for righteousnesse. Gods People, although they could sin unseene and unpunished, yet would loathe it. They take as deepe thought for God Use 6.

2 Sam. 14. 30. God as for their own wel-fare. When Absolon was pardoned, yet he sets Ioabs Corne on fire, because he might not be admitted to the Kings presence, chusing rather to dye, than to hang in such suspense. And shall a believer rest in his pardon more than in the righteousnes of God, which may make them accepted and beloved? No, the livery they weare is The Lord our righteousnesse.

Eph. 1. 6.

Oh, till I be restored to my dignities, to stand before the Lord, to please him, to feele his Spirit of peace, joy and righteousnesse, and my conscience purged to serve God in holinesse, I can feele no comfort.

Vse 7. Againe, let it raise the price of the Lord Jesus his love in the hearts of all his children. Should he that was glory, and holinesse, be content, not only to become a Worme, base and vile to his enemies, but to lose the repute of holinesse and become sinne, rather than sinne should not become righteousnesse and glory? How great is this love then? and how deare should he be for taking of our imputed sinne and blemish upon him? The more cost, the more love.

Vse 8. Eightly, (to touch his Passion a little) how should it teach us to abhorre all enemies of the Crosse, Atheists, Papists, Jewes, and Pagans, (to whom it is either a stumbling block or foolishnesse) yea all such as hold upon a Christ in profession, but are farre from an humbled suffering and crucified Christ, carrying themselves, rather so in their haire, fashions and oathes, the loftinesse of their stomackes, as if their Christ were rather some great Epicure, Libertine, or Champion of the world? not only in the twelve dayes, but all the yeare long?

Vse 9. Ninthly, if this death of the Lord Jesus be our satisfaction, and the freedome from sin and curse, our pardon, peace, and Heaven, where is the dwelling of our hearts upon it, the delight of our soules in it? Commonly we will weare our choise Jewell neerest our heart; and why is this Jewell which cost the bloud of the Son of God so far off it? Surely except this be our soules crowne more than the crowne of the aged are their children, or the Ministers crowne his people, or the husbands his deere wife, (not to speake of gold, pleasures, or outward wel-fare) how can it be well with us? If the perfection of love be joy, and the perfecter the object is, the greater the love: How is it, that each base shaddow of joy can affect us, when this can not?

1 Cor. 15. 19. If our hope were heere onely in Christ, of all others wee were

most

moſt miſerable. Nothing heere can keepe thee from miſery; what is then thy happineſſe? This ſatisfaction only. Let it be all in all to thee, the ſeaſoning of thy bleſſings, ſupply of all wants: if thou wert left as an Owle in the Deſart, if no Calfe were left in the ſtall, yet let God be thy Salvation. Let thy life be bound up in it, as Iacobs in Beniamin. Hab. 3. 17.

Tenthly, and eſpecially, let the chiefe ſtreame of this points uſe, bee this: Firſt, To all Miniſters to teach it, and the people to apply it to themſelves in all their feares, yea the greateſt agony, yea death it ſelfe; whatſoever thou forgoeſt, hold this. For Miniſters, let them remember their office (as hee to Archippus) and fulfill it. Paul preſſes it: compare 2 Cor. 5, 21. with 20. Him, that knew no ſinne hee made ſinne, that wee might bee his righteouſneſſe. And what of this? Wee being Embaſſadors of God, as if Chriſt by us did entreate you, ſo we urge, Be reconciled to God. Be no Idols, none Preachers, be no Preachers of any thing before this: Preach not with a veile as Moſes: ſtand with open face, and hold this mirror to poore ſinners, that they may behold The Lord their righteouſneſſe. If the worth of a ſoule were knowne by us, and the blood of ſoules prized and pitied, then the preaching and declaring of this righteouſneſſe, Iob 33. would be the ſcope of our labours. We are Miniſters of the Law, but not only ſo; but alſo ſerving the Miniſtery of reconciliation. Let us mainely looke to this, to ſave our ſelves, and them that heare us; if we have wrought the uſe of the laſt Article, of the former part upon them, learne the skill of this ſecond, and linne not with God, till he ſay to us, Deliver him, I have received a ranſome. If we could find this veine, and the treaſure hid in this field, all our work would be as Iacobs ſeaven yeares, for the love of Rachel, ſweete and eaſie. Uſe 10. Col. 3, end. 2 Cor. 5, 21. 2 Cor. 3, 14. Iob. 33. 24 Matth. 13, 44. Gen. 29, 20.

And for people alſo: Conſider yee who have truly felt that Serpent of the Law, ſting yee mortally in the other part; come, apply the remedy in this: looke upon this braſen Serpent and live, and firſt I ſay, feele the ſtrength; Secondly, take hold of it, and make peace for the former; know, without a promiſe from God, there is no peace unto you: and promiſe there can be none without this ſatisfaction. This is the ſtrength of an offer and a promiſe: its elſe (as he ſpake of the Serpent) Nehuſhtan, and a piece of braſſe. As ſinne is the ſtrength of the Law, ſo is this price of the blood of Chriſt, the ſtrength of the promiſe. Uſe 11. Note well the Merit is 1. ſufficient ſtrength.

miſe. Thou haſt to deale with the Father in the point of juſtifying thee: ponder well then this ſtrength, as thou wouldeſt the weight of gold in the ballance. If thou eanſt feele this 2 Cor. 1. 10. ſtrength ſo farre as to ſay, Eſay 27, 4. or to heare the Lord ſay, Anger is not in me, I am appeaſed, thon beginſt well. Anger abides in God, without this price, and thou art but as the buſh and dry ſtubble before it. Be aſſured then, that no promiſe ſpeakes to thy ſoule, and to thy heart, except it have this ſtrength of Chriſt, in whom each one is yea and Amen. Looke upon a promiſe if thou need it, as its furniſhed with this: for hence comes all wrath to be turned to love: and this will make God willing to offer, and faithfull to performe, elſe not. That bottomleſſe depth of mercy in thy Judge and enemy, cannot be gaged without this bucket: by this, thou mayſt reach it.

2 Only it is the ſtrength of the ſoule. Againe, as this is ſufficient ſtrength, ſo it is that only, which can redeeme thee. Let that Mountebanke of Rome who would bring thee to the treaſure of Saints merits, be odious to Mica. 6. thee: Say thus, Mich. 6. What ſhall I give the Lord for the ſinne of my ſoule; My Gold or Pearles, Oyle or Wine, or the firſt borne of my body? No, he hath ſhewed me the only way, to be 1 Pet. 1. his righteouſneſſe. He redeemed us (ſaith Peter) not with Pearles, but with the pretious bloud of his Lambe. Wilt thou goe to the holy ones in Earth? Alas, they were as vile as thou but for this, and they have no more of it than will ſerve their turnes. Wilt thou goe to Heaven to Saints and Angels? Alas, Math. 25. 6. Eſay 63. Eſay 63. Abraham knowes thee not. What then? wilt thou goe to thy duties, performances, grace? Alas, they had no bloud of expiation in them; all theſe will ſay, Satisfaction is not in us. Where then? Surely here only.

Uſe 12. Twelfthly, If ſo, abandon all, and cling to this only. Take hold of this ſufficient and only ſufficient ſtrength, as the Pro-Iob 9. 15. phet bids thee. Carry it with thee to thy Judge, and make ſup-
1 Pet. 3. 19. plication to him in this ſtrength. Peter calles it the anſwer of a conſcience, good in the Reſurrection of Chriſt. What ever enemy purſue thee at the heeles, this is thy refuge: that here thou mightſt have ſtrong conſolation in all feares, againſt all enemies. Feareſt thou the ſinnes of youth, or age? The Lord Jeſus was conceived in the wombe, that the infant (elect) which never ſaw light, might be ſaved by him: youth notwithſtanding her diſobedience, age for all her rebellion, might be forgiven. Doe thy morall sinnes, of murther, stealth, uncleanneſſe, ſwearing diſtreſſe thee? This Lord Jeſus fulfilled all righteouſneſſe for thee. Doe thy ſpirituall wickednesſes oppreſſe thee, and the penalties of them: an unbelieving, ſecure, hard-heart by the contempt of the Goſpell? The Lord Jeſus ſuffred the powring out of his bloud, to breake the heart of thoſe that pierced him upon the Croſſe. Art thou poore? Thy Satisfier was ſo. Rich? Hee was the Lord of all. Are thy ſinnes great? He dyed for Noahs drunkenneſſe, Lots inceſt, Davids adultery, Small? Loe, even thy leaſt vaine word, coſt him his life-bloud. But perhaps not ſome ſinnes, but ſinne it ſelfe and the body of death troubles thee: He was made ſinne that knew none. Oh then, whatſoever ſinne can ſay, yet goe on to the throne of grace, as Heb. 4. 16. and looke to finde mercy in time of neede. Doth the divell, the gates of Hell, conſcience, or the Juſtice of God threaten thee? They cannot, ſave for ſinne: if they doe, thy conſcience hath her anſwer to God againſt all. And ſo plead this thy pardon to the Lord. Say thus, Oh Father, even thou cutteſt off thy plea in giving this price, in accepting it, in offring of it to meet, I (Lord) am heere before thee, pinched and damned by my ſinne: if thou doe not, reckon it unto me. Oh Lord, I put this bleſſed price between me and wrath: Lord have no power to deny it me. Even I, if I were left with an orphans eſtate, could not keepe it from him: Lord, I am fatherleſſe, my orphans ſtock is in thy keeping: thou tookeſt it, to beſtow it. Lord, let my ſoule have ſtrong conſolation in her ſeeking refuge to thee, becauſe this price warrants me. If a debtor be in priſon, and be bid to come forth, he will anſwer, I am heere for debt, I cannot: but if urged, he will lay hold upon this Strength, Surely ſome Surety hath payd my debt: and then his heart anſwers, I will come out. Oh! So let this ſtrength be layd hold on by thee, if thou looke for deliverance. In the end of this ſecond part, I ſhall adde ſomewhat touching Faith. Meane time let this be as the river leading to the Sea. And thus much of the merit of obedience.

for

Application of the merit to al occaſions and conditions.

2 Cor. 5. 21.

Heb 4.16.

Q. What is the ſixth branch of this Article, and wherein ſtands it?

A. The conqueſt of Chriſt. For notwithſtanding all this ſatisfaction of Chriſt thus performed: yet, if it had been poſſible for any enemy, to have prevented him of the effect of it, that he could not have overcome all enemies, and death it ſelfe, his whole worke had been fruſtrate. But this could not be: for he roſe againe from the dead, and gave a full being to the merit of his ſatisfaction. Conceive the point in three eſtates of Chriſt, briefly. Firſt, Before: Secondly, At. Thirdly, After his death.

The ſixth welſpring. The conqueſt What it is? and the ground of it.

In 3 reſpects.

1. In the firſt reſpect, though the Lord Jeſus his fleſh was not exempt from mortality and infirmity, but ſubject to all through our ſinne: yet even under all theſe through his whole life, he conquered in ſuffering: for he endured no more than him pleaſed: before the time of his death, no enemy had power over him, to ſurpriſe him by any caſualty, by any other death, or at any other ſeaſon than himſelfe would. In Luke 4. we reade, that his own Citizens, Led him up to the brow of the Hill to have broke his necke. Oft were Officers ſent to take him: ſtones caſt at him: upon the Sea he was ſubject to the violence of the Waves: none of theſe had power to faſten upon him, hee went through the midſt of them, and through a thouſand deaths, without hurt. Eſay 43,2. It was prophecied of him, The fire ſhould not burne him, nor waters devoure him: till his houre was come to ſuffer that Death, and onely that which God had layd out for him, and then nothing could hinder.

2. Secondly, at death, although as our mediator he muſt needes drinke that Cup, which his Father gave him: yet he was a conqueror even then too, and above any enemy. Acts.2,24. Iudas, the Prieſts and Pilate could do no more, than himſelfe was willing to yeeld to his Father in. Iohn 10,18. No man takes away my life from mee, I lay it downe my ſelfe. Hee yeelded to thoſe that tooke him, even when he had caſt them to the ground as a conqueror. And therefore by the Union of his God-head, even in that houre and power of darkeneſſe, when his life was taken from him, and they looked to have had all their will on him: all the infernall powers aſſaulting him at once, by reaſon of the withdrawing of his Divine Nature, and the wrath of God, yet, even then he gave them the greateſt foyle of all, and in death overcame him who had the power of it, and all his inſtruments; made his Croſſe, his Trophee, and his Chariot of Triumph over them all: like Samſon who more hurt his enemies at death, than all his life.

3. So thirdly, after death, when they had got his dead Body into the grave, thinking that the ſealing of the ſtone could have made him theirs, never to riſe any more: Loe, by his power he he kept his union still, and after his forty houres sleepe was over, he resumed his body and soule againe, and gave them another blow worse than all: rose againe, conquered their malice; never more to be conquered, to die no more: All the enemies in hell, and upon earth; his triumph being begun, he was out of their reach. See for all, Act. 2, 24. Rom. 1. 3. Acts 2. 24. Eph 1, end. Phil. 2, 5, 6, 7.

Q. What use make you hereof?

A. It is a nice Schoole point, whether Christ by all his doings and sufferings, did merit any thing for himselfe: Somewhat like to that other question, Whether Christ as a man were subject to the Law? The answere which they make is, That Christ merited onely one thing for himselfe, That is, exaltation: of which I cease heere to speake much: not doubting but that bare Union with the God-head did necessarilie procure that, without satisfaction. Yet to yeeld somewhat to the words of Paul, Phil. 2. 5. 6. Wherefore GOD exalted him on high, and gave him a Name above all Names, &c. Yet doubtlesse both his obligation to the Law, and his whole conquest was especially for his Church, and for her sake hee both merited and conquered. Many things might consequently befall the Lord Jesus as Mediator: but the maine and first respect which hee had was our Salvation and benefit.

First, therefore the maine use (which is also the scope of this sixth Branch) is, the assurance which the poore soule under a condition of grace, may take to it selfe in pleading her part in this satisfaction. For, what gave a being and life to this suffering of Christ? Surely his conquest. If any enemy could have held him under chaines from his victorious Resurrection, all his satisfaction had bin frustrate. But that could not be. It was impossible, as we see Acts 2. 24. that death should hold him. Now then by his conquest, how lively, renowned, powerfull a merit gave hee to all his sufferings? Hee sent his Church into assured possession of all his merits. Oh, as the author to Heb. 10. 22, saith, Let us come with this assurance of Faith to the throne of grace, saying, Lord, give thy poore needing servant, the fruit of my Lord Jesus his obedience, the power of his Conquest, the full efficacy of his redemption: That as he Rom. 1, 3. Eph. 1. 21. by his God-head declared himselfe a Conquerer, and assured the truth of his merit and death, yea consummated it, (although he sayd upon the Vse 1. Heb. 10. 22. Rom. 1, 3. Eph. 1. 21.

Mat. 16. Croſſe, All was finiſhed) ſo my ſoule may take hold of this ſtrength, and claime the life and power of this ſatisfaction, with fuller aſſurance. Oh, let us not want the ſtrength of this perſwaſion, but preſſe it and ſay, Lord, I come to thee in the merit of a Chriſt not dead but alive, a Conquerer that made good to thee all his ſufferings by his victory, and gave all his enemies a deadly blow, when they looked to have overthrowne him. Let this be the firſt uſe: learne this as the maine, to drinke at this ciſterne, this well of Salvation, as the former, and then the other Comfortable Uſes will follow of themſelves.

Q. What other follow hereupon?

Uſe 2. A. Sundry conſolations to a believing ſoule, touching the Sundry conſolations. Aſſurance of Faith and Perſeverance, Victory in combats and all afflictions. The Lord Jeſus hath the Key of Death in his
1. Hand, and will make his, more than Conquerours in all: nothing ſhall ſeparate, Rom. 8. ult. any of his from him. Touching Faith, how many are the feares that a poore ſoule hath, that ſhee ſhall never bee able to believe? Within her ſelfe what weakeneſſe, forgetfulneſſe, melancholy, guilt of Conſcience through corruption, and dead heart, ſlaviſh and fearefull, preſumptuous, hardned by the deceit of ſinne, unworthineſſe, neglect of the ſeaſon of grace, this body of death oppoſing all favour of goodneſſe? And ſo even death of body makes them afraid, they may dye ere they believe. So without them, what temptations againſt God, and the Scriptures? what enemies have they to darken and dull them, their ſences, underſtandings and heart? what enemies of the wicked have they without them? Ill husbands, Wives, to diſmay them, telling them that they cannot be aſſured in this life of their ſalvation. How doe enemies affright them with malice, threats, bigge lookes, diſdaine and ſcorne, putting them in feare they ſhall never eſcape out of their clawes? In this variety of affliction, what is there to ſuſtaine them? What is it which teacheth them to kiſſe the rod, take up their croſſe, and beare the indignation of the Lord, till hee
Mica. 7, 9. pleade their cauſe, and bring forth their light? Surely the ſtrength of their Captaine, and Conqueror the Lord Jeſus, who Iohn 16, ult. hath told them, In the World they ſhall have affliction, but bee of good comfort, I have overcome the World. Yes he that tells them, till Gods ſeaſon of their ſuffering be come, ſo much, ſo long, and that very croſſe God hath ordeined for them, no enemie ſhall doe them hurt. And when they doe, hee will make it tollerable and easy unto them, doe them good for their sakes that hurt them. But above all, they are made Conquerors, and their chinne is kept above water, they fight under hope of victory, and say with the Church, Mica. 7. 8. Rejoyce not over mee, Oh my enemy, for when I am downe I shall rise; and when thou art fallen, Rom. 8. Mica 7. 8. thy wound shall bee incurable. There is a fable that when the Goate cropped the Vine branches, shee bids the Goate, bite and spare not, but shee should beare so much Wine as should serve to sacrifice the Goate. This Vine is the militant Body of Christ: so that as hee feared not his enemies, because hee subdued them in suffering, so should they. Reade the third Article, in the point of Redemption, more fully of this use.

doe

Q. What else?

A. Thirdly, it comforts them by Faith, in the Conquest of our Lord Jesus against the power of Death and the grave. For as it was with their Head, hee could not bee held in it: so with them, Acts 2. 24. their flesh rests in hope of that triumph: Oh Hell, where is thy sting, Oh grave where is thy victory? 1 Corinthians 15. The full 1 Cor. 15. redemption of their bodies, causes them to feare no Death, nor grave. Nay, their hope makes them say, If wee hoped onely in Christ heere, wee were of all other most miserable: but this conquest makes us happy in all our misery. For why? even by that very death which is the last enemy, and the gate of utter misery to the wicked, the Lord opens a doore of full and finall redemption to the faithfull. Their lowest ebbe is the next step to the highest tyde of their soules happinesse, and finall freedome from all sinne, sorrow, and enemies. As wee see our Lord Jesus his death and grave were the next steppe to his exaltation. True it is, the Saints have many petrit deliverances in this World. But they are not fully redeemed till death, from all enemies, nor from the dominion of death till the Resurrection; But then is their finall redemption. Therefore let not death, grave, nor the rottennesse thereof dismay us: for hee who brake the chaines thereof for himselfe, as Samson brake his cords, hee shall also breake them for us, that they shall not hold us. Wee shall bee more than conquerors by him that loved us: and by his power shall wee rise though not so quickly, yet as surely as hee did. Whom should not this conquest ſtrengthen againſt the unwillingneſſe to be unclothed? The rayſing of our head, puts us in hope, that we ſhall riſe and conquer finally: ſo that no enemy, no Divell, no perſecution ſhall ever come neere us! We ſhall be as much out of gun-ſhot of them, as the Lord Jeſus himſelfe was after his conqueſt. Were it not for this: long, many, and deepe troubles would diſmay us: but this hope helpes all. And not only outward croſſes, but alſo our poore graces of knowledge, Faith, patience is ſuſtained with this Spirit of the Lord Jeſus, that one day it ſhall be better, when all imperfect things ſhall be done away, the body ſhake off corruption, and they ſee him in whom now they believe: Their life is hid with Chriſt in God: and although it appeare not now what they are, yet when their Captaine comes, they ſhall be conquerours as he: therefore in the meane time, though they be baſely eſteemed of, and ſet at nought; yet their ſpirit of victory and hope props them up and makes them merry, becauſe a day is comming will pay for all.

1 Iohn 3. 2.

Uſe 4. This alſo is terror to all prophane ones, and ſuch as ſtill abide in the Gall of bitterneſſe: The conqueſt of the Lord Jeſus, is the cruſhing and treading of them as Grapes in the Wine-preſſe of wrath: Its the entry of Chriſt into his Kingdome, for the utter ſuppreſſion of all his enemies: whom Eſay 63. he will deſtroy in his fury. As he is mighty thereby, to ſave all his, ſo he is as potent to deſtroy all them that be his foes. Now he hath recovered power and ſtrength, victory and triumph: and now he turnes the wheele over their heads, and will cruſh both them and their Prince, the Devill. He will now cauſe all thoſe barres which he hath broken, of ſhame, feare, afflictions, horrors, death, the grave, to returne back upon them: And, as the ſame waters which were the ſafegard of Nöe, were the deſtruction of the old World: and the ſame Sea which was a double wall to the Iſraelites paſſing through the red Sea, yet was the overwhelming of their enemies, their Chariots, Horſes, Pharao himſelfe, his Princes and Souldiers: So, that croſſe which is the Pillar of Salvation to the Elect, ſhall bee the Chariot of Triumph to the wicked, and ſhall turne upon them whatſoever they impoſed upon Chriſt, to cruſh them, and to become their utter confuſion. He will cauſe a ſpirit of enmity to poſſeſſe them, they ſhall one deſtroy another: their Counſells againſt him, ſhall fall upon themſelves. His agony ſhall worke in their ſpirits

ſuch an unſpeakeable horror and anguiſh of conſcience, as cannot be pacified: Death ſhall ceaze upon them as a Vultur upon a Carcas: it ſhall be as a King of feares unto them: The face of it ſhall be terrible: the very thoughts of it a farre of ſhall be as a Sword hanging by a briſtle over their heads, and appall them as the hand-writing did Belſhazzar, in the midſt of his Cups: And when it comes, it ſhall cauſe their lips to quiver, and their bones to tremble: it ſhall be with them as with him, who cryed out, wretched man, muſt I die? What! All my bagges, my treaſures, my delicate fare, my pleaſures, my revenues, my ſumptuous apparrell and dwellings, my retinue, friends and flatterers, all pulled away! Oh! it ſhall open and preſent Hell, and the jawes of Satan and deſtruction, wrath and eternall fire, to ſwallow them! What ſhift now wilt thou make, O poore ſoule, which wert wont to ſport thy ſelfe, to ſolace thy heavy thoughts and ſpirits, with jeſts and gigges to go, to do, to talke, to lye down, to riſe up at thy pleaſure, and to gird thy ſelfe; but now, another ſhall gird thee, what wilt thou now doe? when all theſe ſhall leave thee drencht and drown'd in the pit of deſpaire, and finall deſtruction? Oh! betimes labour to get thy ſinne pardoned, the ſting of it removed, the power of it ſubdued, the Divell conquered, thy conſcience at peace, thy reckoning ready, and all the enemies of thy peace at league with thee not falſely but truly, that ſo the ſting of death being taken out, thy horrors and feares may alſo vaniſh. Except Chriſts Conqueſt be for thy Redemption, it ſerves for thy ſubverſion. Eſay 28.15.

Contrarywiſe, (as I ſayd before) this victory of Chriſt, ſerves for the infinite comfort of them that fight under his Banner, becauſe for them Chriſt hath conquered as for himſelfe: and (as meane as heere they ſeeme) he hath taken them up into his triumphant Chariot. None of the croſſes, enemies which he hath conquered, ſhall hurt them. Death it ſelfe (the laſt enemy) ſhall be made a friend as Haman (in ſpite of him) to honor Mordecai, ſo to cloath them with immortality. The Divell thinkes to wound them by it mortally: but he ſhall ſhedde their Impoſtume to the ground, never to trouble them any more. Death ſhall be their beſt Phyſitian. And in ſteed of a deadly poyſon, ſhall give them an Antidote, which ſhall for ever preſerve them againſt all their enemies: That ſhall ſet open to them a wide dore of entrance into glory. They ſhall feare nothing in death. For why? Do they feare it, because they have still much corruption to overcome me? Behold their war-fare is accomplished! Do they feare the guilt of it, Hell and wrath of God? The sting and fire of it, which is sinne, is gone. Do they mourne because they have done so little good and taken so little! Alas! in Christ, their accompt is made, their service is ended, their Marriage day is come, their complaints are at an end, their reward is at hand, their rags are cast off, their robes are put on. Or, do they mourne, because they are taken away in their middle age? So was Christ, but he prevented eternity, and his Crowne, thereby. Or are they afrayd of the separation of soule and body? But they are united already in their head, and their separation shall be a perfection at their returne. Or, shall they loose their friends? Nay their friends shall loose them, but their gaine shall be, not to need them. Or, shall they part with the Ordinances of Christ? They shall loose some love tokens, but enjoy their Bridegroome. Or, shall they be layd by the walls and in the moulds? That dishonor shall tend to purify, to beautify them, when their conquest shall appeare. Or, shall they not see the wel-fare of their children, but leave them to the wide World? They shut them up in the Arke of Christs Conquest, never to be hurt or wronged. Thus much of the conquest.

The 7 wel-spring. The Application of the merit. What it is?

Q. Having ended the Merit, proceed to the seventh and last Branch of this second Article: What is the applying worke of Christ, and wherein doth it stand?

A. It is that solemne part of his Mediation, for the sake whereof he forsooke the earth, and was exalted above all principalities, and sitteth at the right Hand of God, his Father, that by his intercession alwayes made for his Church, he might apply to all the members, the power of this satisfaction, that it might worke Faith in those that want it and confirme it in those that have it. Esay 53. ult.) The Prophet addeth this to the powring out of his soule, that he prayed for the transgressors. And S. John gives him the name of our Advocate with the Father: for this cause, that the Church may enjoy the fruit of his death continually. And the Author to the Hebrewes saith, That he ever liveth to make intercession for us. The High Priest, under the Law, appeared once a yeare with blood in the Holy of Holies, to bring forth a generall reconciliation, but the Lord Jesus, for ever. And as the ende heereof are many, to wit, to present the prayers of his people unto God,

to

to hold them close to his Father, and keepe them in his love, to cover their daily offences, and continue their justification and acceptance, to unite them one to another, and to protect them from enemies: so especially to blesse the Ministery of his Gospell, for the breeding Faith in the soules of the elect, by the preaching of this his blood and death. As wee may see cleerely in John 17. (that heavenly Chapter) where all these are described. John 17.

Marke then, it is not enough for the Lord Jesus, to procure the price of our peace, but he plyes the Father with it, and offers up by his eternall Spirit, the merit and valour of his satisfaction, for the effectuall drawing of the hearts of his people, to believe the Gospell. His bloud is the seede of the Church (for what were Word or Sacrament, but for him?) but that which doth cherish this seede, and give a body to it in the consciences of men, is the application of it by this intercession. More fully thus, As by fulfilling all righteousnesse, the Lord Jesus hath pleased the Father, and is so gracious to him, that he grants him whatsoever hee asketh: so doth Jesus to the uttermost improove this favour, and applyeth the comfort thereof to all his, that they may understand how powerfull and prevayling hee is to obtaine whatsoever hee desireth. And hence it is, that till his ascension, the Comforter could not bee sent: but after when he prayed, then came he, and brought to minde, and sealed to the hearts of his Disciples, whatsoever they had heard preached before. So that when wee see the prevailing power of the Word and Sacraments in the weake Ministery of flesh, what shall we ascribe it unto, but the power of this applying worke of our Advocate, who conveyes savor of life, of brokennesse of heart, Faith and regeneration thereby into the soules of his? And in this respect hee is the Key of his Fathers bosome and Fountaine, to unlock and set it open (being sealed before) for Judah and Jerusalem to wash in, as Zach. 13. Zach. 13, 1.

1. Let the Reader looke in the third Article in the priviledge of Adoption.

Q. What is the use thereof?

A. As it is singular for all uses to the Church in generall, and all the lively members thereof in all concernements of it whatsoever: as acceptance of their prayers, being perfumed with the sweete incense heereof; protection of their persons, safegard against enemies, sustentation of their soules in grace, perse- Use 2.

A TREATISE OF THE TWO SACRAMENTS OF THE GOSPELL: BAPTISME AND THE SVPPER OF THE LORD.

Divided into two Parts.

The first treating of the Doctrine and Nature of the Sacraments in generall, and of these two in speciall; together with the Circumstances attending them.

The second containing the manner of our due preparation to the Receiving of the Supper of the Lord; As also, of our behaviour in and after the same.

Whereunto is Annexed an Appendix, shewing; First, how a Christian may finde his Preparation to the Supper sweete and easie: Secondly, the causes why the Sacrament is so unworthily Received by the worst; and so fruitlesly by the better sort: with the Remedies to avoyd them both.

TO THE HONOVRABLE AND MY GOOD Lady, the old Lady Barington, Grace and Peace.

MADAM,

FOr ſundry cauſes this Treatiſe of mine ſeekes your Patronage. One is, That intereſt of love and reſpect, which along time (not my ſelfe alone) but ſundry of our name and Tribe have received from your Ladiſhip. Another is, your loving acceptance of ſuch former ſervice of mine to God and his Church in this kinde, as hath privately come to your hands: wherein you have ingenuouſly profeſſed your ſelfe to be a daily travailer with ſome fruit. Likewiſe that honorable eſteeme which I have ever borne, and beare to the memory of that noble and worthy Knight your deceaſed husband was not a little moment in my thoughts: Not to ſpeake of my acquaintance with ſome of your religious Race, of whom I ſay the leſſe, as perſwaded that they ſeeke the praiſe of God, and not of man. Beſides all theſe, I adde this: That my hope is, that from your patronage and protection, ſome of your owne ranke, and more of your inferiours, (who looke after bookes as much for the grace and allowancē of their betters, as for the worth of their matter) might by reading thereof, bee drawne to love them for the true good which they have gained thereby.

Yet I muſt not deny, but there is a greater motive than all theſe: ſeldome have I ſeriouſly converſed with your Ladyſhip at any time, but I have obſerved ſome carefulneſſe in you, to be ſetled upon ſome good evidences which might ſecure you of pardon, and favour with God. A ſolemne object! I confeſſe, the very thought whereof as you may bleſſe God for, ſo much more you ſhall have cauſe to praiſe him, in vouchſafing you! Which ſhall come to paſſe, if (as alway, ſo) eſpecially in this laſt act of your life, you ſhall give all diligence by reading, meditation, and prayer, to make it ſure to your owne ſoule. My deſire therefore being, that I might conferre ſomewhat hereto; and ſithence God hath caſt your eye and affection upon my labours, (which do chiefly aime at this marke) I beſeech the Lord ſo to guide your ſpirit in your peruſall thereof; That (whatſoever you paſſe over beſides) you may take ſpeciall marke of thoſe grounds of Humiliation, ſelfe-deniall, and faith, which moſt concerne the maine point of aſſurance. Neglecting no occaſion, if by any meanes you may attaine to the reſurrection of the dead, and the whileſt may bee ſatisfied with peace and joy through beleeving. That ſo, your heart dayly growing more tender, and confident upon the bare word of the promiſe (you neede no other ſupport) your whole heart and converſation may bee moulded into a new creature, according to the meaſure of mercy!

I will not delay you with diſcourſe about the contents of the enſuing Treatiſe; that were but to prevent both the Epiſtle following, and the Booke it ſelfe. As touching helpes for your comfortable receiving (which I have noted you to ſpeake ſeriouſly of) I cannot doubt but your Ladiſhip

Ladiſhip hath many, (though I know not any who have traviled in this kind with me, to unite the full doctrine and practiſe of the Supper in one.) But for as much as it is behoofefull upon ſuch occaſions, not onely to heare in publique, but alſo to have ſome reall ſubject at hand which may preſent the truth to a deſirous heart, and releeve memory; therefore I doubt not but this Treatiſe may adde a furtherance thereto. If, as the Lord hath with much labour and 6 or 7 yeares thoughts (at times) now brought this poore fruite to the light, ſo he pleaſe to adde a ſutable ſucceſſe unto it, in his peoples practiſe: I ſhall have no cauſe to repent me. It is the Lord, who as hee is tyed to none of our tongues or pens, ſo yet hath bound himſelfe to our faith, prayers and diligence. To whom therefore commending the iſſue of you Ladiſhips endeavours herein, together with the proſperity of your ſelfe and yours, an happy end of your long pilgrimage, and peace to Iſrael, I reſt

bounden D. R.

To the Iudicious and vvell affected Reader.

OOD Reader, I have ever esteemed the Lord Iesus, the new birth and nourishment of his Church, to be (of all other Arguments and Treatises of Divinity) the most eminent and essentiall, either for such as preach and write, to insist upon; or for those that heare and reade, to improve to themselves, by knowing and beleeving. And sithence our good God hath not contented himselfe to vouchsafe to his Church this great gift of Christ, onely by the word of promise: (which yet being grounded upon such unshaken Foundations, as his owne decree, the death of his Sonne, and the faithfulnesse of his dispensers, might well claime the obedience and consent of faith at our hands) But also hath added the Sacraments as seales of this his covenant, and as the utmost assurance of his good meaning; moreover annexing the spirit of promise and of seale, to them both, for the better applying to each soule in particular, his part in these good things which hee hath beteamed her: I have thought it fittest (having now leasure more then enough to chuse my argument) to light upon this, of Christ Sacramentall: as giving me hope of doing the most comprehensive good, and becomming most advantagious to the Church of God, both for the understanding and use of that doctrine.

Every man desires to have that which he buyeth or enjoyeth, when the commodity is at the best, when men would either shew or buy wares or cattle in the Market, they desire to set them forth at the best, and when they are in best case to attract buyers. Wee love to behold the faces of them wee love, when they are at the best, for health health of body and ſpirit: and if wee were as wiſe to improove every thing to the beſt, as wee are willing to get it at the beſt; ſure it is, wee love to get nothing at the worſt, which may be come by at the beſt. Now then the Sacraments exhibite Chriſt (as I may ſay) at his beſt: And as Pharaoh's daughter is invited to come and behold Solomon, when he was cloathed with all thoſe coſtly ornaments and glory, wherewith his mother made him glad on his crowning day; ſo doe the Sacraments offer Chriſt a greater object than Solomon even in his beſt Grace, in the richeſt and royalleſt robe of his righteouſneſſe, in the beſt of his Peace, joy, and contentation which God can beſtow him in. Whoſe heart ſhould not then eſteeme him at this beſt of his, with beſt judgement and affection? Not by fooliſh or Popiſh compariſon of one ordinance with another; but by conſidering that each ordinance with another is better than another alone, and ſo the Sacrament with a word, is above the word alone, becauſe it containes the word, and hath more beſides in it, even Chriſt at his beſt, in the fulneſſe, length, depth, and all treaſures of breeding and nouriſhing grace, not onely in himſelfe, but made over to my ſoule by the Father, grace for grace to me: my Wiſedome, Righteouſneſſe, Sanctification, and Redemption.

Alas! deare friends! what were the knowledge of this Lord Ieſus, as hee is onely the ſecond perſon in Trinity and the eternall Word of the Father? If the depth of that myſtery contained in Heb. 1. 3. (To wit, that Chriſt is the brightneſſe of the Fathers glory, and the ingraven forme of his perſon) were fully underſtood by a man; (as who doubts but ſuch knowledge were excellent? (yet alas! it falls ſhort of that excellent knowledge which Paul ſpeakes of, Phil. 3. 10. Of Chriſt Ieſus my Lord, who hath given himſelfe for me, loved mee, by which the world is crucified to mee, and I to it; this onely is that to which all other is dung and droſſe. Nay further, put caſe I know him, as the true Mediator, in all three offices, and namely the true onely Prieſt and ſatisfier for the ſinnes of the world: Were comm. that excellent knowledge of all other, except hee were crucified alſo in the eye and to the ſpirituall gaine of my ſoule, as my Lord and God, and as my ſatisfaction, and the treader of the wine-preſſe of the fierce wrath of God, Eſay 63. 1. that the anger of God might bee pacified to mee? No verily. Nay laſtly, put caſe this knowledge of Ieſus Chriſt my ſatisfier, could poſſibly bee ſevered from the knowledge of him my Sanctifier alſo: and that Chriſt my birth, could bee divided from Chriſt my Nouriſhment; my ſupport, health, growth, and fruitfulneſſe; could this knowledge bee counted the moſt excellent? Were it not a rending (rather) of one peece of Chriſts garment from another, yea a pulling of one eſpeciall part of him from my ſoule, and breaking of ſo precious a Diamond in peeces? What excellent things then muſt thoſe bee, which preſent the Lord Ieſus in all theſe three, the beauty of his perſon, the benefit of his ſatisfaction, and the grace of his Sanctification; and that to mee, with ſeazin and delivery? That offer him (as I ſaid) at his beſt? This doe the Sacraments, and therefore of how great eſteeme ſhould they bee in the Church of Chriſt?

I confeſſe, if I preſented Chriſt to thy view (good Reader) in thoſe darke Sacraments of the Old Teſtament, or no otherwiſe than Iohn Baptiſt could, I ſhould bring thee a bargaine at the worſt hand. For although Chriſt were in them alſo, yet with ſuch poore convincement, that I may ſafely ſay: The body of receivers, who beheld the covenant of the Law as a covenant of workes and Righteouſneſſe thereby; did receive the Sacraments as a curſe rather than a bleſſing upon themſelves: and bred worſe blood in themſelves thereby, than before they had. For why? They renouncing the right covenant of Righteouſnes whereof they were ſeales, (as it is ſayd, that Abraham received circumciſion as a ſeale of it) and miſtaking the law, as if it required a poſſible obedience from them, to merit life; what did they but curſe themſelves and ſay, Curſed be he who thinkes he can abide in all things written in the booke of the Law to doe them? And not being able to doe them, but deluding themſelves, and taking the Sacrament upon it; what did they in effect, but ſeale up that curſe to themſelves and their ſeede? But lo, in the Sacraments of the Goſpel, is offered thee a better miniſtration of the ſpirit of the Lord Ieſus, in the ſeales of that righteouſneſſe which comes by faith, and therefore a curſe is turned into a bleſſing. For as the covenant is, which thou commeſt in, ſo is the ſeale which thou receiveſt, both are bleſſed, and thou comming in faith vnto them, receiveſt from God a bleſſing under ſeale: ſo that he ſaid and bleſſed thee, and thou ſhalt be bleſſed. And is not this the Lord Ieſus at his beſt?

Moreover, if I preſent thee onely Iewiſh Sacraments, what great thing ſhould I offer thee? Surely Chriſt, in a darke corner, circumciſion in a private family, the Paſſeover in an houſhold by it ſelfe: But lo, I preſent Chriſt unto thee not with a veile before his face, which is obſcure: but in a mirror, with open face, transforming thee from glory to glory. I ſay a Chriſt Sacramentall, not offered by a Prieſt to God in a Maſſe, and in a corner of the Church, with a boy to mumble an anſwere, but in the open view of his Church and aſſemblies of his Saints. Looke not here for Popiſh, Anabaptiſticall, Browniſticall, or Schiſmaticall Sacraments, huddled up by a falſe Church in their houſes, barnes, or corners, (though I taxe not corners where the Church is preſent, as the Martyrs were in woods:) but in the midſt of his people, where Chriſt the Lord of Sacraments, is preſent with his owne, met in his name, even in the beauty of his holineſſe. So that as hee ſuffered not in a corner of heaven, or earth, but upon an hill before his Church, and refuſed not the world to bee witneſſes; and was lift up as the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, in the publike view of his people; ſo that thou profeſſeſt to bee a dove of his flocke, and one of the youth of his wombe, Pſal. 110. mayſt fly to his loover and windowes, and come into his Temple with frequency as the dew falls upon the graſſe, ſaying, How amiable are thy Tabernacles O Lord of hoſts! My fleſh longeth, and my feete deſire to ſee and ſtand in the courts of thine houſe. Even in the chambers of my Mother! and in the Garden of thy Spices, even there give mee thy love: There let thy Northwind of Prayer and bleſſing blow thy favour into my noſtrils, that after thine ointments powred out there, the Daughters may follow thee. And is not this, Chriſt at the beſt? Suffer to proceede a little in this argument (for I have locked my ſelfe the of the hall, and therefore muſt ſtand a while in my porch rather than no where) what better proofe of the Lord Ieſus at his beſt, than this, that hee is offered to thee in no leſſe myſticall union for the end of a more myſticall one? I meane as united to poore Bread and Wine, that he might alſo unite himſelfe in the whole grace of his Sacrifice to thy ſoule & body? What better & eaſier conveyance couldeſt thou wiſh than this, for ſo feeble and weake a ſpirit as thine is? When once that people which followed Chriſt ſitting upon an Aſſe-colt, and riding triumphing to Ieruſalem, cryed Hoſanna, and ſayd, Bleſſed be he that commeth in the name of the Lord: Thinke we not that they ſaw Chriſt at the beſt? Why did they elſe, (except they had beheld his ſpirituall Kingdome) cut downe Palmes and ſtrew them in the way, ſtripping themſelves of their garments, to ſet him thereon? Surely they were not ſo offended at the meannes of his palfrey and baſeneſſe of the outſide, that they ſaw in this riding, a cleere repreſentation of his glorious grace, and the Majeſty of his perſon. So ſhouldeſt thou, in this union of Chriſt with baſe crummes of bread or drops of wine, beholde more ſpirituall preſence of Chriſt, who careth not for ſuch creatures, but for thy ſoule; and being farre from ſtumbling at the baſeneſſe of the Aſſe, or Elements, raiſe up thy ſoule to a more heavenly ſenſe, of the Lord Ieſus comming into thy heart and ſpirit, bringing thee to God, and leading thee to the fountaine of thy bleſſedneſſe in a farre cloſer manner than ever Adam was. And is not this union, the Lord Ieſus at his beſt? yes verily.

From this Sacramentall union proceeds that exhibitive nature of Sacraments, carrying the Lord Ieſus into the ſoule of all the elect that communicate. For to what end is union Sacramentall, ſave that the Sacraments being thus poſſeſſed of the Lord Ieſus myſtically in them, might exhibite to all, and effectually carry into the boſſomes of the elect, the power of this Lord Ieſus, and convey as Veſſels, channels and Pipes, that grace which they containe? I doe not meane that by vertue of the worke wrought, or by the force of Divine inſtitution, there is any naturall holineſſe put into them, or magicall power of inchantment, to take holde of the ſoule. No, in no wiſe: for how many thouſands are there both young and old, who after the enjoying of the Sacraments, doe put moſt woefull barres in their owne way, that the power of Sacramentall union might never come at them? So that when the Covenant comes to bee diſpenced unto them, they fare as perſons utterly diſabled to receive it. Nay neither dare I thinke that by vertue hereof, it is of abſolute neceſſity that all elect Infants muſt receive converſion of grace, in the act of their Baptizing: for what were this but to aſcribe more to the Seale than to the Covenant, yea, to invert their order, and to aſcribe greater power to an ordinance, (under which they walke 20 30, 40. yeeres careleſly, without diſcovery of any grace at all) rather than to the lively power of the Covenant preached, and working from that time foorth an apparant change? So that although in charity I am bound to thinke no other, ſave that all ſuch as receive Sacraments duely, concurre with the grace of the Spirit for future improvement: Yet to tye the Lords hands behind him, and to make the Lord of Sacraments to become their underling, as if hee had put himſelfe out of Authority and office, wholly to be ſubject to his Sacrament, what indignity were it for the ordainer? No not ſo: But ſo farre, ſo often, and where it ſhall ſeeme good to himſelfe, to make uſe of his Sacrament for the good of his Elect (for whoſe good they ſerve) there doubtleſſe theſe Ordinances doe both preſent and conferre the grace which is put in them. Elſe to what end ſhould they have it, except they might convey it? Now ſumme up all, and anſwere: Is not the exhibitive power of the Sacrament, the Lord Jeſus at his beſt? Is not a reall tender better than a bare ſigne, or a promiſe onely without performance? Hee that promiſeth an hundred pounds to lend or give to his poore friend, and preſently tenders the money, that he might be before hand, doth hee not lend or give at the beſt?

Nay more than this, not the Sacraments onely are thus exhibitive of Chriſt to the ſoule: But by vertue of the union I have ſpoken of, the Lord Ieſus himſelfe is there preſent (where his inſtitution is duely obſerved) to bee the Baptizer of his members, and to bee the ſteward and nouriſher of his family: that is, to beſtow himſelfe upon the ſoule. Touching Baptiſme firſt, true it is, That our Lord Ieſus himſelfe never baptiſed any outwardly: howbeit as then, ſo much more now beeing aſcended, hee it is who in the outward Baptiſme of the Miniſter, doth give gifts unto men, and doth ſtill baptiſe all his, with the holy Ghoſt and fire. A poore ſinfull man doth what he can doe; but further hee cannot goe: He dives the infant into, holds it in, and receives it out againe from the water, baptizing it in the name of the ſacred Trinity. But this our great Baptiſt, hee is all in all for the doing of the worke. It is he who caſts in the ſalt of his divine healing power into corrupt and (of themſelves) accurſed creatures and Elements; it is hee that removes the curſe, death, and barrenneſſe of the waters utterly unable to engender; hee takes off their baſe uncomelineſſe, hee darts and plants in them the efficacy of his owne death and reſurrection both for merit of [illegible], and of holineſſe: hee ſanctifies and cleanſes them, that they the more become hallowed and purging inſtruments; And as a planter a full [illegible] be ſiene of the Apple-tree, and pitches it into a Crab-tree good, [illegible] ſo the Lord Ieſus takes the precious ſiene of his owne Righteouſneſſe, the power of his owne death and grave, the ſtrength of his reſurrection and exalting, and pitches both into water: ſo that water becomes Chriſt-water, Chriſts death and life, ſo that the ſoule is waſht with the one, as the body with the other; The ſoule (by faith in the covenant) feeles her deſcent into the water, to become a ſpirit of dividing her into the laver and bloud, and grave of the Lord Ieſus: her being under the water, to become the ſpirit brooding and fructifying the water, to become a ſeede of life abiding in the wombe of the ſoule, to regenerate it to the life of Chriſt; Her ariſing up from the water, to become a ſpirit of Reſurrection (as Peter excellently ſpeakes 1 Epiſt. cap. 3. verſe 21.) and a baptizing of the ſoule with the activity and raiſing of her up with Chriſt, from her death, grave, baſeneſſe and miſery, unto immortality and glory. Yea in all three the ſoule feeles the power of a new and omnipotent creation of her to God, ingrafting her in God, never to bee pulled from him any more as at firſt. And as the ſpirit whereby the Lord offered up himſelfe was, ſo is the power of the ſame Spirit to the ſoule, begetting and renewing it; Eternall alſo: ſo that the never dying power of Baptiſme keepes the branch of the vine thus once put in, to abide for ever ingrafted and planted in the perſon of Emanuell: ſo that himſelfe the ſtocke ſhall as ſoone wither, as the ſoule which by faith is in him ſhall periſh. No more baptiſings ſhal neede than one, becauſe Chriſt liveth in the ſoule, & recovereth her by his unreſtrained influence, from all her ſwowning, decayes and wantings, to her former integrity: No more Barkes are required after ſhipwracke ſave this one. Now, if Chriſt himſelfe in perſon (not the poore Miniſter with all his acts onely) bee the true Baptiſt: can it be otherwiſe, but Baptiſme muſt needes be the Lord Ieſus at the beſt?

Laſtly, to adde one word alſo of the Supper: The ſinfull tongue and hands (I ſay not of a wicked Maſſe-Prieſt) but even the beſt conſecrater of the Sacrament, that lives, cannot bleſſe ſufficiently: But the Lord Ieſus our ſteward, he is the Adminiſter of it compleately; he is the true conſecrater, yea the foode and feeder of the Soules of his owne, with his pretious body and blood unto eternity. None whom the Father hath given him to bee his living ones, can decay, pine, or wither under his hand while he lives to make them Proviſion. And as to his Diſciples, hee would eate and drinke no more of the fruite of the Vine, till hee dranke it in the kingdome: meaning, till he ſpiritually without mouth or hands, did preſent himſelfe with his Churches ſacramentally, there to feede them: But in that ſence hee proviſo'd to drinke it with them to the worlds end. He it is then who as the Maſter of the feaſt and the feaſt alſo, welcometh, provideth for, and encourageth his gueſts to eate good things, and to delight in fatneſſe: He it is who not onely in the Miniſters perſon ſtill conſecrateth, but by his might and ſtrength, drives all his blood, ſpirit, marrow and nouriſhment into the bones and veynes of his poore members, by this union with the elements; whereby he ſaveth and ſuſtaineth all his true borne ones that cry after his breſt and ſuccour, hee cannot ſuffer them to lacke. And as himſelfe in divers phraſes expreſſeth, hee feedes them in his Paſtures, leades them to the waters, hee cheriſheth them as his his ſpouſe, nouriſheth them as his branches, and by him as the doore, they goe in and out, finding paſture. For hee hath made himſelfe one with bread and wine, that man not living by bread onely, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God: may in and by theſe Elements, draw a ſecret foyſon and encreaſe to the ſoule, and bee therein ſuſtained with faith and the fruits, as after in the Treatiſe (God willing) I ſhall more fully declare. Hee whoſe fleſh once eaten is immorall, yet offers himſelfe often for the releefe of daily defects. And is not this the Lord Ieſus at his beſt in this Sacrament?

Endleſſe it were to recite all which might convince thee of this excellency of Chriſt Sacramentall. Who would not confeſſe that friend to ſhew his love at the beſt, who ſhould moſt draw neere to him in his greateſt trouble? And is not Chriſt Sacramentall for the nonce? To what end then doth hee offer thee his bloud, and bid thee drinke it, ſave to conforme thee to a ſweete meekeneſſe of ſpirit in ſuffring, and to a fellowſhip in all his afflictions, with confidence of overcomminge in his ſtrength? Againe, if a man ſhould promiſe to doe thee a kindneſſe, wouldſt thou not interpret his kindneſſe at the beſt, if it lay in ſuch a kinde, as ſhould ſupply thy peculiar want? What kindneſſe is counted of, like that which is moſt ſeaſonable? That which releeves not ſome defect, may bee thought ſuperfluous: Even ſo is Chriſt Sacramentall, a releefe of each ſoules perſonall, peculiar diſeaſes, wants, decayes, diſtempers. Like to the man of Baalſhaliſha, 2 King. 4. 42. who brought loaves of Corne and Preſents to the Prophet, when there was a neceſſity of famine, and a multitude to bee fed. But I end in a word: Wherein can it more cleerely appeare that the Lord Ieſus is offered thee in the Sacrament at his beſt, than in his bleſſed fulneſſe? If thou ſhouldeſt viſite thy friends houſe, tell me when ſhouldeſt thou moſt thinke thou cameſt at the beſt, than in the middeſt of a feaſt? So I ſay here, the Sacrament is the Kings feaſt at the marriage of his Sonne: The feaſt of the hills, the feaſt of God, and heaven, a full feaſt of all refined wines, fat and delicate things. If Gods ordinary be ſo good, is not his feaſt of Chriſt, Chriſt at his beſt? Wherein thy ſoule may fill it ſelfe for the preſent, and for afterwards with choice Dainties, as the Aramites Campe, and the fulneſſe thereof filled the leapers.

But now what is the upſhot of all? Oh! ſad mourning! That wee are at our worſt, when Chriſt is beſt! Oh mourne that after 70. yeares liberty of the word and Sacraments in the Church: yet by the ſinne of man, ſuch myſteries as theſe ſhould lie by, diſeſteemed, becauſe unacknowledged? True it is, as once it was a deepe conceit with the Iew, that his Meſſiah muſt needes bee ſome ſpeciall perſon: But when the true Meſſiah indeede came, they knew now what to make of him; he was a ſtrange wonder unto them. So now, it deepely dwelt in moſt men, that in the Sacrament ſome myſticall things lies hidden: But when they come to it, they receive they know not what: The cauſe is, their carnality and ſenſualneſſe, which is offered at the ſpiritualneſſe of them: which makes them alleadge, oh they are darke matters, and for great Divines, not for ſuch as they to meddle withall. And thus in time, corrupt eaſe breeding errour: that errour growes to prove Religion: and as at firſt men thought them difficult, ſo at length it is their beſt devotion, to reſt in blind and ſuperſtitious reverence of a thing unknowne. As thoſe Athenians, who ſet up an Altar to the unknowable God: blinde devotion being the meere falling ſhort of faith. If this diſeaſe had infected poverty onely, it had beene well: But this Popiſh leaven of carnall Sacraments which ſowred the firſt reformation with a conſubſtantiate Chriſt: hath tainted us with as dangerous an errour, even to reſt in a carnall devotion, and the opus operatum of a devout blind receiving, counting it the top of Religion.

Alas! poore ſoules. To what purpoſe doe we ſo crake and boaſt of our Sacraments of the Goſpel, that they are above thoſe of the old Teſtament in all reſpects (as indeede they are) when as it is cleare by good experience, that ſetting aſide ſome places enlightened by the Word, our Sacraments to the body of our people, are as dimme and dumbe repreſenters of a Chriſt already crucified, as to the Iew, they were darke pretendings of the Meſſiah to come. Oh! How woefull a fruit of darkeneſſe is this, that people now in this mid-day of light, are ſo baſled, that it fares with them as if it were twylight? Is it not fearefull, that when there is ſo great oddes in the ſeaſon, there ſhould be ſo little in the perſons living in them! becauſe blindneſſe makes all ſeaſons alike, both of darkeneſſe and light? How fearefull is it that our eye ſhould be ſo evill to our ſelves when God is ſo good? and that we ſhould bee ſuch Almners of Gods bounty to our ſelves as if wee ſtill ſerved an hard Maſter, what is this but to betray God to the blaſphemy of Hypocrites, profane ones, and ignorants?

This little underſtanding of theſe myſteries, among men in this age of ours (wherein mens frequency of receiving ſeemes to ſtrive with their unfruitfulneſſe) hath beene one occaſion of my publiſhing this Treatiſe. That (if poſſible) that exceſſive exalting of the Sacraments in Popery, above the word or any other peece of worſhip, through their Superſtition: might bee equalled among us Proteſtants in the Church of God, with as truely honorable an eſteeme thereof, and that from knowledge and experience of their worth. Conſidering partly the little care of teaching their doctrine in Congregations: and partly the cold preparation of ſuch as receive; and partly the reſting of men in their performances onely without power or fruit: I could not ſee wherein I ſhould doe greater honour to God than to enhanſe the knowledge of Chriſt Sacramentall, and to incite others to doe it, whoſe learned and habituous abilities can farre better performe it? And ſurely it ſtands us all in hand, (leſt ſignes of contradiction deface) to our uttermoſt, to vindicate the excellency of our Sacraments.

That

That thoſe rich legacies which the ſinne of man, or that man of ſinne, with his Complices have ſo long kept hid from the true heires and owners thereof, may bee cleared unto them, to bee their juſt portion and claime; beſeeching the Lord, that as hee ſhall vouchſafe us clearer light of knowledge, ſo (as our Church Liturgy commands us to pray) that ancient Diſcipline of Gods houſe might prevaile among us! I meane, that whereas the number of ignorant, ſcandalous, and unprepared ones, as much exceedes the number of prepared, penitent, and worthy Communicants, as the Army of the Aramites exceeded the Iſraelites two flockes of Kidds: by this meanes, it might pleaſe God, the number of the latter might as much exceede the former.

For my owne part, (to returne to my matter) I bleſſe God, that while it was my lot to have a nayle in the Prieſts Sanctuary; next to the preaching of Chriſt in the promiſe, it was my poore care and courſe both by Catechiſme and Sermons, to diſcover him in his Sacraments. Which labour (as weake as it was) I have ſo little cauſe to repent of: that now I am encouraged in my ſelfe to recollect and compile thoſe ſcattered meditations into ſome method and view for the benefit of others that heard them not. A great motive whereto was alſo this, that as while they were preached, they found full as much approbation, as any part elſe of my labours: ſo, ſince they have provoked the deſires of many more than I can mention, that they might not with my ſelfe lie by, and be buried in forgetfulnes, Adde hereto; that now in this vacancy of better ſervice, I could not eaſily quit my ſelfe of that idle unfruitfulneſſe, which too ſoone (as ruſt) is ready to grow upon us, without ſome ſervice done in this kinde.

To you then I addreſſe my ſpeech, in the concluſion, deare friends who have beene taught by, and now are made partakers of my labours: Beſeeching you, and the Lord for you, that by the lively reſemblance of theſe things which you have beene long moulded in, and ſhall be here preſented withall; you would give Teſtimony to this Truth, as the Truth is in Ieſus. That is, that by your ſpirituall proſpering in the grace of the Lord Ieſus Sacramentall, yee would commend this Doctrine of the Sacraments, eſpecially of the Supper. So ſhall I have cauſe to ſay, That you are my Epiſtle written in your hearts, knowne and read of all men, and manifeſted to be the Epiſtle of Chriſt, not written with Inke in paper, but with the Spirit of obedience and love, in the fleſhy Tables of your heart! Oh how ſhall you then ſafeguard me not from the evill tongues of men (which I feare not) but the contradiction of hypocrites, and the foule aſperſion of an unprofitable Miniſter of Chriſt? In which happy wiſh I ceaſe troubling you, and commend your reading hereof to the bleſſing of God. Farewell.

TO THE HONOVRABLE AND MY GOOD Lady, the old Lady Barington, Grace and Peace.

MADAM,

FOr ſundry cauſes this Treatiſe of mine ſeekes your Patronage. One is, That intereſt of love and reſpect, which along time (not my ſelfe alone) but ſundry of our name and Tribe have received from your Ladiſhip. Another is, your loving acceptance of ſuch former ſervice of mine to God and his Church in this kinde, as hath privately come to your hands: wherein you have ingenuouſly profeſſed your ſelfe to be a daily travailer with ſome fruit. Likewiſe that honorable eſteeme which I have ever borne, and beare to the memory of that noble and worthy Knight your deceaſed husband was not a little moment in my thoughts: Not to ſpeake of my acquaintance with ſome of your religious Race, of whom I ſay the leſſe, as perſwaded that they ſeeke the praiſe of God, and not of man. Beſides all theſe, I adde this: That my hope is, that from your patronage and protection, ſome of your owne ranke, and more of your inferiours, (who looke after bookes as much for the grace and allowance of their betters, as for the worth of their matter) might by reading thereof, bee drawne to love them for the true good which they have gained thereby.

Yet I muſt not deny, but there is a greater motive than all theſe: ſeldome have I ſeriouſly converſed with your Ladyſhip at any time, but I have obſerved ſome carefulneſſe in you, to be ſetled upon ſome good evidences which might ſecure you of pardon, and favour with God. A ſolemne object! I confeſſe, the very thought whereof as you may bleſſe God for, ſo much more you ſhall have cauſe to praiſe him, in vouchſafing you! Which ſhall come to paſſe, if (as alway, ſo) eſpecially in this laſt act of your life, you ſhall give all diligence by reading, meditation, and prayer, to make it ſure to your owne ſoule. My deſire therefore being, that I might conferre ſomewhat hereto; and ſithence God hath caſt your eye and affection upon my labours, (which do chiefly aime at this marke) I beſeech the Lord ſo to guide your ſpirit in your peruſall thereof; That (whatſoever you paſſe over beſides) you may take ſpeciall marke of thoſe grounds of Humiliation, ſelfe-deniall, and faith, which moſt concerne the maine point of aſſurance. Neglecting no occaſion, if by any meanes you may attaine to the reſurrection of the dead, and the whileſt may bee ſatisfied with peace and joy through beleeving. That ſo, your heart dayly growing more tender, and confident upon the bare word of the promiſe (you neede no other ſupport) your whole heart and converſation may bee moulded into a new creature, according to the meaſure of mercy!

I will not delay you with diſcourſe about the contents of the enſuing Treatiſe; that were but to prevent both the Epiſtle following, and the Booke it ſelfe. As touching helpes for your comfortable receiving (which I have noted you to ſpeake ſeriouſly of) I cannot doubt but your

Ladiſhip

Ladiſhip hath many, (though I know not any who have traviled in this kind with me, to unite the full doctrine and practiſe of the Supper in one.) But for as much as it is behoofefull upon ſuch occaſions, not onely to heare in publique, but alſo to have ſome reall ſubject at hand which may preſent the truth to a deſirous heart, and releeve memory; therefore I doubt not but this Treatiſe may adde a furtherance thereto. If, as the Lord hath with much labour and 6 or 7 yeares thoughts (at times) now brought this poore fruite to the light, ſo he pleaſe to adde a ſutable ſucceſſe unto it, in his peoples practiſe: I ſhall have no cauſe to repent me. It is the Lord, who as hee is tyed to none of our tongues or pens, ſo yet hath bound himſelfe to our faith, prayers and diligence. To whom therefore commending the iſſue of you Ladiſhips endeavours herein, together with the proſperity of your ſelfe and yours, an happy end of your long pilgrimage, and peace to Iſrael, I reſt

Your Lordſhips

bounden D. R.

To the Iudicious and vvell affected Reader.

GOOD Reader, I have ever esteemed the Lord Iesus, the new birth and nourishment of his Church, to be (of all other Arguments and Treatises of Divinity) the most eminent and essentiall, either for such as preach and write, to insist upon; or for those that heare and reade, to improve to themselves, by knowing and beleeving. And sithence our good God hath not contented himselfe to vouchsafe to his Church this great gift of Christ, onely by the word of promise: (which yet being grounded upon such unshaken Foundations, as his owne decree, the death of his Sonne, and the faithfulnesse of his dispensers, might well claime the obedience and consent of faith at our hands) But also hath added the Sacraments as seales of this his covenant, and as the utmost assurance of his good meaning; moreover annexing the spirit of promise and of seale, to them both, for the better applying to each soule in particular, his part in these good things which hee hath beteamed her: I have thought it fittest (having now leasure more then enough to chuse my argument) to light upon this, of Christ Sacramentall: as giving me hope of doing the most comprehensive good, and becomming most advantagious to the Church of God, both for the understanding and use of that doctrine.

Every man desires to have that which he buyeth or enjoyeth, when the commodity is at the best, when men would either shew or buy wares or cattle in the Market, they desire to set them forth at the best, and when they are in best case to attract buyers. Wee love to behold the faces of them wee love, when they are at the best, for health of body and ſpirit: and if wee were as wiſe to improove every thing to the beſt, as wee are willing to get it at the beſt; ſure it is, wee love to get nothing at the worſt, which may be come by at the beſt. Now then the Sacraments exhibite Chriſt (as I may ſay) at his beſt: And as Pharaoh's daughter is invited to come and behold Solomon, when he was cloathed with all thoſe coſtly ornaments and glory, wherewith his mother made him glad on his crowning day; ſo doe the Sacraments offer Chriſt a greater object than Solomon even in his beſt Grace, in the richeſt and royalleſt robe of his righteouſneſſe, in the beſt of his Peace, joy, and contentation which God can beſtow him in. Whoſe heart ſhould not then eſteeme him at this beſt of his, with beſt judgement and affection? Not by fooliſh or Popiſh compariſon of one ordinance with another; but by conſidering that each ordinance with another is better than another alone, and ſo the Sacrament with a word, is above the word alone, becauſe it containes the word, and hath more beſides in it, even Chriſt at his beſt, in the fulneſſe, length, depth, and all treaſures of breeding and nouriſhing grace, not onely in himſelfe, but made over to my ſoule by the Father, grace for grace to me: my Wiſedome, Righteouſneſſe, Sanctification, and Redemption.

Alas! deare friends! what were the knowledge of this Lord Ieſus, as hee is onely the ſecond perſon in Trinity and the eternall Word of the Father? If the depth of that myſtery contained in Heb. 1. 3. (To wit, that Chriſt is the brightneſſe of the Fathers glory, and the ingraven forme of his perſon) were fully underſtood by a man; (as who doubts but ſuch knowledge were excellent? (yet alas! it falls ſhort of that excellent knowledge which Paul ſpeakes of, Phil. 3. 10. Of Chriſt Ieſus my Lord, who hath given himſelfe for me, loved mee, by which the world is crucified to mee, and I to it; this onely is that to which all other is dung and droſſe. Nay further, put caſe I know him, as the true Mediator, in all three offices, and namely the true onely Prieſt and ſatisfier for the ſinnes of the world: Were this that excellent knowledge of all other, except hee were crucified alſo in the eye and to the ſpirituall gaine of my ſoule, as my Lord and God, and as my ſatisfaction, and the treader of the wine-preſſe of the fierce wrath of God, Eſay 63. 1. that the anger of God might bee pacified to mee? No verily. Nay laſtly, put caſe this knowledge of Ieſus Chriſt my ſatisfier, could poſſibly bee ſevered from the knowledge of him my Sanctifier alſo: and that Chriſt my birth, could bee divided from Chriſt my Nouriſhment; my ſupport, health, growth, and fruitfulneſſe; could this knowledge bee counted the moſt excellent? Were it not a rending (rather) of one peece of Chriſts garment from another, yea a pulling of one eſpeciall part of him from my ſoule, and breaking of ſo precious a Diamond in peeces? What excellent things then muſt thoſe bee, which preſent the Lord Ieſus in all theſe three, the beauty of his perſon, the benefit of his ſatisfaction, and the grace of his Sanctification; and that to mee, with ſeazin and delivery? That offer him (as I ſaid) at his beſt? This doe the Sacraments, and therefore of how great eſteeme ſhould they bee in the Church of Chriſt?

I confeſſe, if I preſented Chriſt to thy view (good Reader) in thoſe darke Sacraments of the Old Teſtament, or no otherwiſe than Iohn Baptiſt could, I ſhould bring thee a bargaine at the worſt hand. For although Chriſt were in them alſo, yet with ſuch poore convincement, that I may ſafely ſay: The body of receivers, who beheld the covenant of the Law as a covenant of workes and Righteouſneſſe thereby; did receive the Sacraments as a curſe rather than a bleſſing upon themſelves: and bred worſe blood in themſelves thereby, than before they had. For why? They renouncing the right covenant of Righteouſnes whereof they were ſeales, (as it is ſayd, that Abraham received circumciſion as a ſeale of it) and miſtaking the law, as if it required a poſſible obedience from them, to merit life; what did they but curſe themſelves and ſay, Curſed be he who thinkes he can abide in all things written in the booke of the Law to doe them? And not being able to doe them, but deluding themſelves, and taking the Sacrament upon it; what did they in effect, but ſeale up that curſe to themſelves and their ſeede? But lo, in the Sacraments of the Goſpel, is offered thee a better miniſtration of the ſpirit of the Lord Ieſus, in the ſeales of that righteouſneſſe which comes by faith, and therefore a curſe is turned into a bleſſing. For as the covenant is, which thou commeſt in, ſo is the ſeale which thou receiveſt, both are bleſſed, and thou comming in faith unto them, receiveſt from God a bleſſing under ſeale: ſo that hee hath bleſſed thee, and thou ſhalt be bleſſed. And is not this the Lord Ieſus at his beſt?

Moreover, if I preſent thee onely Iewiſh Sacraments, what great thing ſhould I offer thee? Surely Chriſt in a darke corner, circumciſion in a private family, the Paſſeover in an houſhold by it ſelfe: But lo, I preſent Chriſt unto thee not with a veile before his face, which is obſcure: but in a mirror, with open face, transforming thee from glory to glory. I ſay a Chriſt Sacramentall, not offered by a Prieſt to God in a Maſſe, and in a corner of the Church, with a boy to mumble an anſwere, but in the open view of his Church and aſſemblies of his Saints. Looke not here for Popiſh, Anabaptiſticall, Browniſticall, or Schiſmaticall Sacraments, huddled up by a falſe Church in their houſes, barnes, or corners, (though I taxe not corners where the Church is preſent, as the Martyrs were in woods:) but in the midſt of his people, where Chriſt the Lord of Sacraments, is preſent with his owne, met in his name, even in the beauty of his holineſſe. So that as hee ſuffered not in a corner of heaven, or earth, but upon an hill before his Church, and refuſed not the world to bee witneſſes; and was lift up as the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, in the publike view of his people; ſo that thou profeſſeſt to bee a dove of his flocke, and one of the youth of his wombe, Pſal. 110. mayſt fly to his toover and windowes, and come into his Temple with frequency as the dew falls upon the graſſe, ſaying, How amiable are thy Tabernacles O Lord of hoſts! My fleſh longeth, and my feete deſire to ſee and ſtand in the courts of thine houſe. Even in the chambers of my Mother! and in the Garden of thy Spices, even there give mee thy love: There let thy Northwind of Prayer and bleſſing blow thy favour into my noſtrils, that after thine ointments powred out there, the Daughters may follow thee. And is not this, Chriſt at the beſt?

But to proceede a little in this argument (for I have locked my ſelfe out of the hall, and therefore muſt ſtand a while in my porch rather than no where) what better proofe of the Lord Ieſus at his beſt, than this, that hee is offered to thee in no leſſe myſticall union for the end of a more myſticall one? I meane as united to poore Bread and Wine, that he might alſo unite himſelfe in the whole grace of his Sacrifice to thy ſoule & body? What better & eaſier conveyance couldeſt thou wiſh than this, for ſo feeble and weake a ſpirit as thine is? When once that people which followed Chriſt ſitting upon an Aſſe-colt, and riding as a King to Ieruſalem, cryed Hoſanna, and ſayd, Bleſſed be he that commeth in the name of the Lord: Thinke we not that they ſaw Chriſt at the beſt? Why did they elſe, (except they had beheld his ſpirituall Kingdome) cut downe Palmes and ſtrew them in the way, ſtripping themſelves of their garments, to ſet him thereon? Surely they were not ſo offended at the meannes of his palfrey and baſeneſſe of the outſide, that they ſaw in this riding, a cleere repreſentation of his glorious grace, and the Majeſty of his perſon. So ſhouldeſt thou, in this union of Chriſt with baſe crummes of bread or drops of wine, beholde a more ſpirituall preſence of Chriſt, who careth not for ſuch creatures, but for thy ſoule; and being farre from ſtumbling at the baſeneſſe of the Aſſe, or Elements, raiſe up thy ſoule to a more heavenly ſenſe, of the Lord Ieſus comming into thy heart and ſpirit, bringing thee to God, and leading thee to the fountaine of thy bleſſedneſſe in a farre cloſer manner than ever Adam was. And is not this union, the Lord Ieſus at his beſt? yes verily.

From this Sacramentall union proceeds that exhibitive nature of Sacraments, carrying the Lord Ieſus into the ſoule of all the elect that communicate. For to what end is union Sacramentall, ſave that the Sacraments being thus poſſeſſed of the Lord Ieſus myſtically in them, might exhibite to all, and effectually carry into the boſomes of the elect, the power of this Lord Ieſus, and convey as Veſſels, channels and Pipes, that grace which they containe? I doe not meane that by vertue of the worke wrought, or by the force of Divine inſtitution, there is any naturall holineſſe put into them, or magicall power of inchantment, to take holde of the ſoule. No, in no wiſe: for how many thouſands are there both young and old, who after the enjoying of the Sacraments, doe put moſt woefull barres in their owne way, that the power of Sacramentall union might never come at them? So that when the Covenant comes to bee diſpenced unto them, they fare as perſons utterly diſabled to receive it. Nay neither dare I thinke that by vertue hereof, it is of abſolute neceſſity that all elect Infants muſt receive converſion of grace, juſt in the act of their Baptizing: for what were this but to aſcribe more to the Seale than to the Covenant, yea, to invert their order, and to aſcribe greater power to an ordinance, (under which they walke 20 30, 40. yeeres careleſly, without diſcovery of any grace at all) rather than to the lively power of the Covenant preached, and working from that time foorth an apparant change? So that although in charity I am bound to thinke no other, ſave that all ſuch as receive Sacraments duely, concurre with the grace of the Spirit for future improvement: Yet to tye the Lords hands behind him, and to make the Lord of Sacraments to become their underling, as if hee had put himſelfe out of Authority and office, wholly to be ſubject to his Sacrament, what indignity were it for the ordainer? No not ſo: But ſo farre, ſo often, and where it ſhall ſeeme good to himſelfe, to make uſe of his Sacrament for the good of his Elect (for whoſe good they ſerve) there doubtleſſe theſe Ordinances doe both preſent and conferre the grace which is put in them. Elſe to what end ſhould they have it, except they might convey it? Now ſumme up all, and anſwere: Is not the exhibitive power of the Sacrament, the Lord Jeſus at his beſt? Is not a reall tender better than a bare ſigne, or a promiſe onely without performance? Hee that promiſeth an hundred pounds to lend or give to his poore friend, and preſently tenders the money, that he might be before hand, doth hee not lend or give at the beſt?

Nay more than this, not the Sacraments onely are thus exhibitive of Chriſt to the ſoule: But by vertue of the union I have ſpoken of, the Lord Ieſus himſelfe is there preſent (where his inſtitution is duely obſerved) to bee the Baptizer of his members, and to bee the ſteward and nouriſher of his family: that is, to beſtow himſelfe upon the ſoule. Touching Baptiſme firſt, true it is, That our Lord Ieſus himſelfe never baptiſed any outwardly: howbeit as then, ſo much more now beeing aſcended, hee it is who in the outward Baptiſme of the Miniſter, doth give gifts unto men, and doth ſtill baptiſe all his, with the holy Ghoſt and fire. A poore ſinfull man doth what he can doe; but further hee cannot goe: He dives the infant into, holds it in, and receives it ont againe from the water, baptizing it in the name of the ſacred Trinity. But this our great Baptiſt, hee is all in all for the doing of the worke. It is he who caſts in the ſalt of his divine healing power into corrupt and (of themſelves) accurſed creatures and Elements; it is hee that removes the curſe, death, and barrenneſſe of the waters utterly unable to engender; hee takes off their baſe uncomelineſſe, hee darts and plants in them the efficacy of his owne death and reſurrection both for merit of pardon, and of holineſſe: hee ſanctifies and cleanſes them, that they may become hallowed and purging inſtruments; And as a planter takes the ſiene of the Apple-tree, and pitches it into a Crab-tree ſtocke: ſo the Lord Ieſus takes the precious ſiene of his owne Righteouſneſſe, the power of his owne death and grave, the ſtrength of his reſurrection and exalting, and pitches both into water: ſo that water becomes Chriſt-water, Chriſts death and life, ſo that the ſoule is waſht with the one, as the body with the other; The ſoule (by faith in the covenant) feeles her deſcent into the water, to become a ſpirit of dividing her into the laver and blond, and grave of the Lord Ieſus: her being under the water, to become the ſpirit brooding and fructifying the water, to become a ſeede of life abiding in the wombe of the ſoule, to regenerate it to the life of Chriſt; Her ariſing up from the water, to become a ſpirit of Reſurrection (as Peter excellently ſpeakes 1 Epiſt. cap. 3. verſe 21.) and a baptizing of the ſoule with the actiuity and raiſing of her up with Chriſt, from her death, grave, baſeneſſe and miſery, unto immortality and glory. Yea in all three the ſoule feeles the power of a new and omnipotent creation of her to God, ingrafting her in God, never to bee pulled from him any more as at firſt. And as the ſpirit whereby the Lord offered up himſelfe was, ſo is the power of the ſame Spirit to the ſoule, begetting and renewing it; Eternall alſo; ſo that the never dying power of Baptiſme keepes the branch of the vine thus once put in, to abide for ever ingrafted and planted in the perſon of Emanuell: ſo that himſelfe the ſtocke ſhall as ſoone wither, as the ſoule which by faith is in him ſhall periſh. No more baptiſings ſhal neede than one, becauſe Chriſt liveth in the ſoule, & recovereth her by his unreſtrained influence, from all her ſwowning, decayes and wantings, to her former integrity: No more Barkes are required after ſhipwracke ſave this one. Now, if Chriſt himſelfe in perſon (not the poore Miniſter with all his acts onely) bee the true Baptiſt: can it be otherwiſe, but Baptiſme muſt needes be the Lord Ieſus at the beſt?

Laſtly, to adde one word alſo of the Supper: The ſinfull tongue and hands (I ſay not of a wicked Maſſe-Prieſt) but even the beſt conſecrater of the Sacrament, that lives, cannot bleſſe ſufficiently: But the Lord Ieſus our ſteward, he is the Adminiſter of it compleately; he is the true conſecrater, yea the foode and feeder of the Soules of his owne, with his pretious body and blood unto eternity. None whom the Father hath given him to bee his living ones, can decay, pine, or wither under his hand while he lives to make them Proviſion. Hee told his Diſciples, hee would eate and drinke no more of the fruite of the Vine, till hee dranke it in the kingdome: meaning, till he ſpiritually without mouth or hands, did preſent himſelfe with his Church Sacramentally, there to feede them: But in that ſence hee promiſed to drinke it with them to the worlds end. He it is then who as the Maſter of the feaſt and the feaſt alſo, welcometh, provideth for, and encourageth his gueſts to eate good things, and to delight in fatneſſe: He it is who not onely in the Miniſters perſon ſtill conſecrateth, but by his might and ſtrength, drives all his blood, ſpirit, marrow and nouriſhment into the bones and veynes of his poore members, by this union with the elements; whereby he ſaveth and ſuſtaineth all his true borne ones that cry after his breſt and ſuccour, hee cannot ſuffer them to lacke. And as himſelfe in divers phraſes expreſſeth, hee feedes them in his Paſtures, leades them to the waters, hee cheriſheth them as his ſpouſe, nouriſheth them as his branches, and by him as the doore, they get in and out, finding paſture. For hee hath made himſelfe one with bread and wine, that man not living by bread onely, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God: may in and by theſe Elements, draw a ſecret foyſon and encreaſe to the ſoule, and bee therein ſuſtained with faith and the fruits, as after in the Treatiſe (God willing) I ſhall more fully declare. Hee whoſe fleſh once eaten is immorall, yet offers himſelfe often for the releefe of daily defects. And is not this the Lord Ieſus at his beſt in this Sacrament?

Endleſſe it were to recite all which might convince thee of this excellency of Chriſt Sacramentall. Who would not confeſſe that friend to ſhew his love at the beſt, who ſhould moſt draw neere to him in his greateſt trouble? And is not Chriſt Sacramentall for the nonce? To what end then doth hee offer thee his bloud, and bid thee drinke it, ſave to conforme thee to a ſweete meekeneſſe of ſpirit in ſuffring, and to a fellowſhip in all his afflictions, with confidence of overcomminge in his ſtrength? Againe, if a man ſhould promiſe to doe thee a kindneſſe, wouldſt thou not interpret his kindneſſe at the beſt, if it lay in ſuch a kinde, as ſhould ſupply thy peculiar want? What kindneſſe is counted of, like that which is moſt ſeaſonable? That which releeves not ſome defect, may bee thought ſuperfluous: Even ſo is Chriſt Sacramentall, a releefe of each ſoules perſonall peculiar diſeaſes, wants, decayes, diſtempers. Like to the man of Baalſhaliſh: 2 King. 4. 42. who brought loaves of Corne and Preſents to the Prophet, when there was a neceſſity of famine, and a multitude to bee fed. But I end in a word Wherein can it more cleerely appeare that the Lord Ieſus is offered thee in Sacrament at his beſt, than in his bleſſed fulneſſe? If thou ſhouldeſt viſite thy friends houſe, tell me when ſhouldeſt thou moſt thinke thou cameſt at the beſt, than in the middeſt of a feaſt? So I ſay here, the Sacrament is the Kings feaſt at the marriage of his Sonne: The feaſt of the hills, the feaſt of God, and heaven, a full feaſt of all refined wines, fat and delicate things. If Gods ordinary be ſo good, is not his feaſt of Chriſt, Chriſt at his beſt? Wherein thy ſoule may fill it ſelfe for the preſent, and for afterwards with choice Dainties as the Aramites Campe, and the fulneſſe thereof filled the leapers.

But now what is the upſhot of all? Oh! ſad mourning: That wee are at our worſt, when Chriſt is beſt! Oh mourne that after 70 yeares liberty of the word and Sacraments in the Church: yet by the ſinne of man, ſuch myſteries as theſe ſhould lie by, diſeſteemed, becauſe unacknowledged? True it is, as once it was a deepe conceit with the Iew, that his Meſſiah muſt needes bee ſome ſpeciall perſon: But when the true Meſſiah indeede came, they knew now what to make of him; he was a ſtrange wonder unto them. So now, it deepely dwels in moſt men, that in the Sacrament ſome myſticall things lies hidden: But when they come to it, they receive they know not what: The cauſe is, their carnality

and ſenſualneſſe, which is offered at the ſpiritualneſſe of them: which makes them alleadge, oh they are darke matters, and for great Divines, not for ſuch as they to meddle withall. And thus in time, corrupt eaſe breeding errour: that errour growes to prove Religion: and as at firſt men thought them difficult, ſo at length it is their beſt devotion, to reſt in blind and ſuperſtitious reverence of a thing unknowne. As thoſe Athenians, who ſet up an Altar to the unknowable God: blinde devotion being the meere falling ſhort of faith. If this diſeaſe had infected poverty onely, it had beene well: But this Popiſh leaven of carnall Sacraments which ſowred the firſt reformation with a conſubſtantiate Chriſt: hath tainted us with as dangerous an errour, even to reſt in a carnall devotion, and the opus operatum of a devout blind receiving, counting it the top of Religion.

Alas! poore ſoules. To what purpoſe doe we ſo crake and boaſt of our Sacraments of the Goſpel, that they are above thoſe of the old Teſtament in all reſpects (as indeede they are) when as it is cleare by good experience, that ſetting aſide ſome places enlightened by the Word, our Sacraments to the body of our people, are as dimme and dumbe repreſenters of a Chriſt already crucified, as to the Iew, they were darke pretendings of the Meſſiah to come. Oh! How woefull a fruit of darkeneſſe is this, that people now in this mid-day of light, are ſo baſled, that it fares with them as if it were twylight? Is it not fearefull, that when there is ſo great oddes in the ſeaſon, there ſhould be ſo little in the perſons living in them! becauſe blindneſſe makes all ſeaſons alike, both of darkeneſſe and light? How fearefull is it that our eye ſhould be ſo evill to our ſelves when God is ſo good? and that we ſhould bee ſuch Almners of Gods bounty to our ſelves as if wee ſtill ſerued an hard Maſter, what is this but to betray God to the blaſphemy of Hypocrites, profane ones, and ignorants?

The little underſtanding of theſe myſteries, among men in this age of ours (wherein mens frequency of receiving ſeemes to ſtrive with their unfruitfulneſſe) hath beene one occaſion of my publiſhing this Treatiſe. That (if poſſible) that exceſſive exalting of the Sacraments in Popery, above the word or any other peece of worſhip, through their Superſtition: might bee equalled among us Proteſtants in the Church of God, with as truely honorable an eſteeme thereof, and that from knowledge and experience of their worth. Conſidering partly the little care of teaching their doctrine in Congregations: and partly the cold preparation of ſuch as receive; and partly the reſting of men in their performances onely without power or fruit: I could not ſee wherein I ſhould doe greater honour to God than to enhanſe the knowledge of Chriſt Sacramentall, and to incite others to doe it, whoſe learned and habituous abilities can farre better performe it? And ſurely it ſtands us all in hand, (leſt ſignes of contradiction deface) to our uttermoſt, to vindicate the excellency of our Sacraments.

That

That those rich legacies which the sinne of man, or that man of sinne, with his Complices have so long kept hid from the true heires and owners thereof, may bee cleared unto them, to bee their just portion and claime; beseeching the Lord, that as hee shall vouchsafe us clearer light of knowledge, so (as our Church Liturgy commands us to pray) that ancient Discipline of Gods house might prevaile among us: I meane, that whereas the number of ignorant, scandalous, and unprepared ones, as much exceedes the number of prepared, penitent, and worthy Communicants, as the Army of the Aramites exceeded the Israelites two flockes of Kiddes: by this meanes, it might please God, the number of the latter might as much exceede the former.

For my owne part, (to returne to my matter) I blesse God, that while it was my lot to have a nayle in the Priests Sanctuary; next to the preaching of Christ in the promise, it was my poore care and course both by Catechisme and Sermons, to discover him in his Sacraments. Which labour (as weake as it was) I have so little cause to repent of: that now I am encouraged in my selfe to recollect and compile those scattered meditations into some method and view for the benefit of others that heard them not. A great motive whereto was also this, that as while they were preached, they found full as much approbation, as any part else of my labours: so, since they have provoked the desires of many more than I can mention, that they might not with my selfe lie by, and be buried in forgetfulnes, Adde hereto; that now in this vacancy of better service, I could not easily quit my selfe of that idle unfruitfulnesse, which too soone (as rust) is ready to grow upon us, without some service done in this kinde.

To you then I addresse my speech, in the conclusion, deare friends who have and beene taught by, and now are made partakers of my labours: Beseeching you have the Lord for you, that by the lively resemblance of these things which beene long moulded in, and shall be here presented withall; you would give Testimony to this Truth, as the Truth is in Iesus. That is, that by your spirituall prospering in the grace of the Lord Iesus Sacrament all, yee would commend this Doctrine of the Sacraments, especially of the Supper. So shall have cause to say, That you are my Epistle written in your hearts, knowne and read of all men, and manifested to be the Epistle of Christ, not written with Inke in paper, but with the Spirit of obedience and love, in the fleshy Tables of your heart! Oh how shall you then safeguard me not from the evill tongues of men (which I feare not) but the contradiction of hypocrites, and the foule aspersion of an unprofitable Minister of Christ? In which happy wish I leave troubling you, and commend your reading hereof to the blessing of God. Farewell.

A TREATISE OF THE TVVO SACRAMENTS OF THE GOSPELL: BAPTISME, AND THE SVPPER OF THE LORD.

The first Part.

CHAP. I.

Of the generall Circumstances of Sacraments.

I Begin with these, because the doctrine thereof may afford light to the ensuing Discourse. And the Circumstances which I would touch upon are these six. 1. The Name [Sacrament] 2. The Antiquitie. 3. The Necessitie of their handling in the Ministry. 4. The Number. 5. The Publiqueneſſe. 6. The Time thereof. Circumstances 6.

Concerning the Name of a Sacrament, it is of ancient use in both Heathen and Christian Authors. The Heathens applied it to signifie a sacred & holy service about their Idoll worship, and Circum. 1. Name.

eſpecially to an oath, which they honoured as a ſacred & divine band: the Latine Fathers, eſpecially the eloquenteſt, Tertullian, Cyprian, Ambroſe, &c. uſe it in the ſame ſence for an holy religious complement or performance: in which ſence (although eſpecially they aime at our two Sacraments) yet they alſo called any other as well by this name, as if we would call the myſtery or doctrine of Chriſt, a Sacrament, or the Church liturgy a Sacrament, or any other publique or private ordinance, a Sermon, a Faſt, or the like. This we ſee was a very large & generall expreſſion, which ſome moderne Divines following without due judgment uſed, confounded divine myſteries and Sacraments, calling each ſigne or type a Sacrament, and conſequently grant that errour, which the Fathers upon due deliberation would have diſclaimed, viz. that the old Church had more Sacraments than we. Yea hereby the Latine vulgar Tranſlation of the Bible (falſely called Jeroms, and magnified by Papiſts) uſurpes liberty to abuſe the Text: & though not alwaies, yet for the moſt part the Tranſlator when he meetes with the word [Myſtery] there he thinkes he hath found a Sacrament, as in Ephe. 5. 29. Ephe. 3. 2. & 1. Tim. 3 the laſt verſe, in all which he tranſlates Myſtery by Sacrament. And that ſo corruptly, that even things not ſacred for ſpiritualneſſe, but onely for ordinance, are called by him Sacraments. By which reaſon the inveſtiture of a King and his annointing or coronation, might be a Sacrament: which yet in a civill performance, although ſacred for the ordeyning. For a thing may retaine his temporall nature ſtill, although it receive a marke of ſacredneſſe for prevention of corrupt abuſe and violation. And thus (in part) crept in that multitude of Popiſh Sacraments into the Church. Whereas if men had not been thus laſcivious & bold in uſing words of their owne invention, generall words for peculiar meanings, much corruption about Sacraments had beene prevented. Teaching us not to be bold in coyning words of our owne heads, to expreſſe divine things: But keeping our ſelves cloſe to the termes of the holy Ghoſt, who calls them Seales of the Covenant, to abandon from Sacraments whatſoever repugnes to the ſeale of the Covenant.

The abuſe of it.

Vſe.

The right uſe of this name.

Now although we ſtill retaine this ſo unavoydable & received terme of Sacrament: yet we muſt correct the abuſe, and uſe it properly. And whereas ſometimes (by uſe of ſpeech) we meane by this word, the Act of God and Chriſt in ordaining or concurring ring with it, or the act of a Minister or people, consecrating and offering it, or receiving it: and sometime the externall Symboles, or solemne action of the Sacrament: yet heare we do most truly apply this word to signifie the whole compleate performance of this holy institution, as it comprehends all these relations.

Touching the second, Antiquitie, this I say, no man can taxe the Lord that he ordeined them no sooner. For it is he onely in whose hands times and seasons are: he knowes when the Church is aptest and capeablest of the Sacraments, & therfore best knows when to appoint them. He could have given them first to the Church in Adams house, or Sheths: or after the flood to Noahs, or Shems. But his wisedome was to settle the first Sacrament of Circumcision in the family of Abraham. The Covenant of God was doubtlesse knowne to many families before: but more fully to Abraham, in whose seede all the Nations of the earth should be blessed. When therfore the season of revealing the Covenant more clearely was come, then was the season of reveling the Sacrament of Circumcision, of the fore-skin of the flesh to bee cut off, as a seale thereof. Abraham desired to see the day of Christ and saw it: therefore he was to see the seale also. Now why God kept it so long from other families, his wisedome is the chiefe reason: although this I may adde, that no family continued the constant memory of the covenant without interruption, either before or after the flood, till Abrahams: from whom (though with much eclipsing oftentimes) no doubt, the truth of God descended from age to age, lesse or more, without utter intercision; as it formerly had in the ages before. So then although we goe no further than Abrahams time (although some Heralds fetch the pedegree of Sacraments from Adams innocency, affirming that the Trees of life and of knowledge of good and evill were both positive or negative Sacraments, I leave to determine) yet surely the institution of the first Sacrament will be nere 4000 yeares old. Long after this even above 400. yeares, it pleased God to adde the latter Sacrament of the old Testament, to wit, the Passeover, even at (and by occasion of) the departure of the children of Israel out of Egypt. Why there should be such distance, & why one so long before the other, God knoweth; only this I say, There was greater necessitie of Circumcision than the other, to be so soone ordained, because that being the seale of the Covenant for the essence of it, it was weightier than the other which concerned onely the better being and confirmation of it yearely. But even this of latter inſtitution is now above 3000. yeeres old.

Age of two Sacraments, of Goſpel.

And touching the ancientneſſe of the two Sacraments of the Goſpel (whereof one exceeded the other little more than three yeeres) wee know that though their birth is not much above 1600. yeares ſince, yet ſince they were in the two former Sacraments of the old Church, as Paul calls the one Circumciſion, not of the fleſh but of the ſpirit, meaning Chriſt our Circumciſion; and the other of the Supper, hee calls Chriſt our Paſſeover; and therefore we eſteeme the antiquity of the one by the other. To be ſure the youngeſt of them all, farre exceedes the forced Sacraments and all other devices of Popery.

1 Cor. 5. 7.

Vſe 1. Teaching us both to rejoyce in the truth of that doctrine of the covenant, and ſeales which now by Gods mercy we enjoy. They are no new matters, nor our Religion new, which is as old as the Egyptians firſt borne deſtroyed, yea & Abrahams dayes; the one in the infancy, the other in the more manifeſt appeareance of a Church. We are not then ſo moderne as our adverſaries would make us, from Luther. Oh! how it ſhould confirme us, that Abraham, the Patriarkes, Prophets, and Apoſtles beleeved in the ſame covenant and ſeales which we doe?

Vſe 2. Secondly, what honour ſhould this procure from us to Gods Sacraments? Nothing was ever ſo deſpiſed as thoſe of circumciſion & the Paſſeover. And as the Papiſts doe now ouerprize their (ſo called) Sacraments, aſcribing unto them the conferring of grace by the worke wrought: ſo it is manifeſt, we Proteſtants through our ignorance of their ſealing nature, eſteeme of them too little. Whereas if ancientneſſe can make them honorable, we cannot thinke too highly (ſo we doe it not ſuperſtitiouſly) of the Sacraments. An old man wee behold with reverence; old coynes, bookes, (manuſcripts) monuments, bulidings, have a face of honour in our eyes; wee uſe to proove a man noble becauſe deſcended of an ancient houſe: How much more then the Sacraments? Our Lord Ieſus to ſmite reverence of his perſon into the Iewes, told them before Abraham was I am; ſo before Popery was, the Supper, Baptiſme were in their integrity: nay in the old circumciſion Baptiſme was; and in the old Paſſeover the Supper was: as Moſes is ſaid to ſpeake of Chriſt, and the legall covenant to include the Evangelicall; ſo did did thoſe Sacraments teach theſe; Oh how then ſhould wee eſteeme and honour them!

The third is, the Neceſſity of the due teaching and opening of the doctrine and uſe of Sacraments effectually in the Church: A thing very much neglected for the moſt part. The which needfulneſſe may appeare by this, that it ſerves to prevent a threefold inconvenience. Of their teaching in the Church. Circumſt. 3

The firſt is woefull ignorance. Scarſe any one point of Doctrine there is in all Religion in which people are blinder than in the true nature and vſe of the Sacraments. They thinke that becauſe Sacraments are given as glaſſes to behold Chriſt in, therefore they are cleare enough of themſelves. But as the cleareſt Criſtal glaſſe, can ſhew no face, while it is locked up in a cofer, or the backſide onely looked upon: So till the Sacraments are brought forth and opened, their light is ſmothered. Parables were uſed by our Saviour to cleare doctrine, howbeit they were riddles to the Diſciples themſelves, till expounded. And ſure its a queſtion, whether the want of inſtruction about the Sacraments, make the people ſo ignorant of them; or their ignorance cauſeth the Miniſters labours ſo unprofitable, by the confirmed cuſtome thereof in the people. Three cauſes of teaching the doctrine. Firſt, ignorance. Mat. 13.44.

Secondly, to prevent ſuperſtition in ſome Pope-holy perſons, who are ſo leavened with ſuperſtition, that they thinke the Sacraments are holy things even by the worke wrought, without any relation to the Covenant; Not knowing them to be the New Teſtament of Chriſt in his bloud. Alſo they thinke that the Eaſter Sacrament is holier than others; That it is too preſumptuous for them to come to them often, becauſe they are ſo holy: Such matters muſt be ſeldome uſed, leaſt they waxe common; and many ſuch Popiſh dregges abide in their hearts. Secondly, Superſtition. Luke 22.19.

Thirdly and eſpecially, to prevent unpreparedneſſe. Generally our nature is awke to this worke; even the better ſort neede a helpe and manuduction to it: and as for others, though well diſpoſed, yet for lacke of helpe in this kinde, they doe neceſſitate unto themſelves a great raſhneſſe, unreverence and unfitneſſe to this duty, growing to a cuſtome in doubtfull and unfruitfull receiving. Of the uſe hereof, more in the ſecond Treatiſe, in the point of knowledge Sacramentall. 3. Vnpreparedneſſe.

The fourth Circumſtance is their Number. There were never more than two in the Church of the old Teſtament, neither hath the New any further liberty: So many and no more the Lord Circum. 4. Number.

Onely 2. Sacraments.

hath bequeathed to his Church: And thoſe two are not Sacraments of ſome ſpeciall graces; but of whole Chriſt, Our wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and redemption: in one word, of the grace of God, either for the ſealing of the reall being of it, and the begetting of it in us, or the nouriſhing of it: One Chriſt is ſtill the body of the Sacraments. God hath not clogged his Church with multitude of Sacraments, leaſt he ſhould divert his people too much by outward objects from holy things. Scarce one of many is fit to profit by Sacraments, but to cleave to the barke of them, leaving the ſubſtance. Here therefore that is verified. God neither is wanting in neceſſaries nor exceedes in ſuperfluities: So much and no more as may ſerve for our good, he hath thought good to beſtow: chooſing rather to ſupply number by power, efficacie, and extention, than to clogge us with too many. It was that which the Lord ſhunned even while that world of Ceremonies laſted; much more now in theſe dayes, wherein he calles for ſpirituall worſhip; hee yeelds two for releefe of our infidelity, but no more, for prevention of our curioſity, will-worſhip, and ſenſuality.

1 Cor. 1. 30.

Why ſo few?

Againſt Popiſh Sacraments.

It came not from the Lord to ordaine one Sacrament for the Clergy, as Orders; a ſecond for the Laity alone, as Marriage; a third for Catechiſed ones, as Confirmation; a fourth for ſicke ones, as Vnction; a fift for lapſed ones, as Penance: theſe are no Scripture but tradition Sacraments: and by like reaſon, if once we tranſgreſſe Gods bounds, we might deviſe one Sacrament for the King and his Nobles, a ſecond for learned ones, a third for ancient ones, a fourth for younger ones, for ſtrong or for weake, &c. But the Lord hath allowed in theſe two, all Chriſt; either to breede grace in the ſoule, or to nouriſh it: He hath not given us Sacraments of humility, of patience, of ſelfe deniall, of mercy and the like: but in Baptiſme and the Supper he hath ordained one Chriſt to breede faith & to nouriſh it, to beget ſanctification, patience, love, and to confirme them, to ſeale up the Covenant of Grace in both, to all ſorts, Prince, people, rich, poore, old, young, learned, idiots, weake and ſtrong; ſo that as few as there are, yet the Lord inlarging them to ſo manifold ſupplies and uſes, we have more cauſe to bleſſe him for not oppreſſing us with a burden, than to accuſe him for defectiveneſſe towards us.

The Vſe.

To teach us, ſeeing we have ſo few, to improove them well, and cleave faſt to the fruit and the power thereof, and by faith to draw draw out the ſtrength thereof in both thoſe regards, for which God gave them. But to praiſe God eſpecially for ridding of us from that Popiſh yoke of Sacraments before named, as moſt repugnant to Gods ends and to Chriſtian liberty, yea, as bringing in a yoke upon the necke of the Church, moſt intollerable to beare. Many things breed diſtraction, few things cauſe more union. If a man have but one or two children, his love is more united. If a Citie have but one or two Bulwarkes, they will apply them throughly; So let us.

The fifth Circumſtance concernes the publiquenes of Sacraments. Sacraments are Legacies of Chriſt to his Church, and Pledges of Communion of Saints; therefore to be the acts of an aſſembly lawfully met. As Paul ſpeakes of the cenſures, When ye are therefore met together, 1 Cor. 5. 4. with my Spirit; Let ſuch a one be given to Satan; even ſo he ſpeakes of the Sacrament. 1 Cor. 11. 20. When ye are therefore come together, &c. Noting the ſolemne publiqueneſſe of them, when they may bee ſo enjoyed. Chriſt hath appointed them as markes of Communion: therefore the Church Acts 2. & 4. is ſaid, To abide together in mutuall fellowſhip of breaking bread and prayer. So that each member muſt fetch his or her ſpeciall portion of Chriſts Sacraments, from the communion of Saints. Therefore let us abhorre Popiſh Maſſe-Prieſts, who with their boyes or Clerkes, offer up three or foure private Maſſes, in three or foure corners of the Church at once; as we deny them the name of this Sacrament, ſo we ſay, like Sacrament like Celebration, both are abhominable.

Sacraments muſt be publique. 1 Cor. 5. 4. 1 Cor. 11. 20.

Acts 2. and 4.

Alſo let this keepe us in humility and love; both towards our ſelves and the Church. For, not we hold the roote, but the roote us: if the eye be bold and ſay, I neede not the body, it is not of the body? Be humble, for thou haſt nothing from thy ſelfe but from Chriſt by the channell of the Church. Cleave therefore to the Church (as members to the body) if thou deſire to get any bleſſing from her: nouriſh love to the body as thou tendereſt the good of thy ſelfe a member.

Vſe 2.

Laſtly, be as frequent as thou canſt in the Congregation. The Church is the Mother of us all; as the children flocke to the mother, ſo let the people of God to the Aſſembly, even as the youth of the wombe, and as the dew falls upon graſſe, Pſal. 110. 3.

in the doctrine of them. Onely thus much; As in the old Teſtament the Lord appointed a ſet day for Circumciſion, noting (as ſome of the Fathers ſay) the Reſurrection of Chriſt; ſo in the Goſpell, there ought to be a proportion. Not that we are ſo tied to a day as the Iewes were, but yet, to declare our reverend eſteeme of the ordinances. For, as we are not over-much to haſten Baptiſme, which ſome doe without juſt cauſe, ſo neither too much to protract it, in reſpect of honour to the Ordinance. The Lord eſteeming it one part of his honour, when his worſhip hath a predominant reſpect with vs, above our own affaires or ends. Touching the Supper, although the Lord Ieſus inſtituted it at night; yet that being for ſpeciall reaſon, becauſe the Paſſeover was then to be eaten, bindes not the Church, but may bee altered. Which I ſpeake to rectifie ſome mens conſciences in point of tenderneſſe. For, to the end they may diſproove ſome ſuppoſed abuſes in the Sacrament, they argue from the circumſtantiall practiſe of our Saviour; not ſeeing how many wayes crazie their argument is. For is it not a jarre with the nature of a Supper, to eate it in the morning? Yes, doubtleſſe, the Church hath her liberty in all ſuch Circumſtances as doe neceſſarily concerne worſhip: So that ſhe uſe it to edifie, & not to deſtroy. It is good to defend truths upon warrantable grounds, leſt when we reſt upon unwarranted ones, when they faile, we faile, and ſuffer the truth to periſh.

Baptiſme hath no rigid ſeaſon, yet a proportionable. Gen. 17. 12.

The ſeaſons of the Supper altered juſtly.

As touching the frequencie of the Supper (which borders upon this point) no doubt of it, the Lord would have his people not onely to have an eare to heare him where he hath a mouth to ſpeake; but alſo a mouth to eate where hee hath diet to impart. And how can a man comfort himſelfe in his hunger at any time, who, when God offers his dainties, turnes his backe upon him? I am not ſo punctuall as to condemne them, who upon any termes receive not: perhaps ſpeciall unpreparedneſſe in a journey, when it is ſuddaine: or after a journey, or when Sacraments hold a weeke together, or in ſome unavoideable perplexing occaſions, may fall out to excuſe: But the charge of God, is for frequency. He ſaith not, As ſeldome as you doe this, but as oft as ye doe it: ſpeaking to them who did it daily, Act. 2. and 4. Continued daily in breaking of bread and prayer.

The frequencie of the Lords Supper

Vſe 1. The formality of ſome in this kinde argueth a deepe leavening with Popiſh blindneſſe: who thinke that oft receiving, may derogate from the honour of the Sacrament. As thoſe that come to ſome

ſome great mens feaſts once in the yeare, muſt looke for no more welcome there till next: ſo heere; Once at Chriſtide a Landlords feaſt: and once at Eaſter, Chriſts feaſt: to come oftner, were ſawcie. No no, the ſeldomer thou commeſt, the more unwelcome thou art to this Maſter of the feaſt. If thou foundeſt it a feaſt, the Lord ſhould heare oftner of thee; thy bare and ſtarven ſoule is the cauſe why thou makeſt ſo poore haſte to recourſe thither. And it is to be feared, they who never receive (though they may) ſave at Eaſter, never faſt but in Lent, that they never repent till they die. Gods peoples wants pinch them ſo, that they can either faſt, repent, or receive too often. And when thou ſeeſt others of thy brethren to communicate oft, and thy ſelfe depart, doth not a voyce tell thee, that either thou thinkeſt it too hard to prepare much, or needeſt not ſo much as they? What is this ſave to condemne the generation of the righteous? or to juſtifie thy ſelfe above them?

Secondly, this ſerveth to teach us to enlarge our ſelves, not only in the ſubſtance of worſhip it ſelfe, with all our ſtrength and courage, but even in the circumſtances, our geſtures, our ſeaſons, and like behaviours: looke what time doth beſt ſuite with our ſpirits, for more cheerefull affection, for more zeale and intention: likewiſe what geſtures we finde to be apteſt to quicken us from dulnes and deadnes, wandring or wearines; that ought we to chuſe eſpecially, that the Lord may have the beſt of us: and herein the Apoſtles tooke liberty to change the Supper of the Lords ſeaſon from night to morning; not as if they did determine it as an indifferency: but for edification ſake, becauſe the more early ſuch ſolemne duties are performed, the better is it for ſoule and ſpirit; and we owe the Lord the firſt fruits of all, both of the day, of our ſtrength, of our bodies and ſpirits; if any ſeaſon be more golden, precious, ſtirring and provoking to goodneſſe, that we muſt chuſe to prevent corruption. The Lord deſerves at our hands to be ſerved with the beſt. Vſe 2.

The rigid ſeaſon of Baptiſme at the day of Iewiſh Circumciſion is removed; howbeit, either to over-haſten, or to prolong, or to neglect ſuch a ſeaſon of Baptiſme as the Church deemes in her judgement to teſtifie our reverence; and to preferre to it baſe ends of our owne, is a contempt of the Ordinances; which (though I am far from thinking any prejudice to the infant, yet) it is a groſſe blemiſh in the Parents. Concerning which I ſhall

ſay more in the particular diſcourſe upon that Sacrament. Let us ſo order our ſelves in the ſubſtance of worſhip, that we neglect not the very Circumſtances: for although the circumſtance be not worſhip in it ſelfe (becauſe undermined) yet when we tender any, we worſhip God in it, and therefore had neede to looke to our ſelves, that we be as ſpirituall and carefull in it as we can, that it may helpe the chiefe ſubſtance of the worſhip. And this may ſerve for the firſt Chapter.

Chap. II.

Of the Agreement and difference of Sacraments.

NExt wee are to treate of the conſent and diſſent of Sacraments, and firſt of the old and new. Touching the which: firſt of the conſent, then of the difference. In the former we have the Papiſts our maine oppoſites affirming that the old Sacraments were ſignes and Tipes onely, not conveyers of grace; and ſo in effect were no Sacraments: For that which ſealeth not up grace can bee no Sacrament; ſignes onely are no Sacraments. This error they runne into: partly from a profane undervaluing of the ordinance of preaching (which being the meane of conviction and converſion) they abhorre, as threatning ruine to their carnall kingdome: and ſo aſcribe all the honour to the Sacraments (eſpecially of the Altar) as conferring grace of it ſelfe to good and bad, and making for their owne ends: Partly by a willing miſtake of the Fathers writings, who vilifie the Iewiſh Sacrament, that they might magnifie the Evangelicall. And this they did in imitation, it may be, of Saint Paul, who ſometime, as 2 Cor. 3. doth abaſe the Legall Miniſtrie under the Evangelicall, yet he doth it not to diſgrace their Ordinances, but that he might confute the Iewes of his age, who by their overprizing the Legall, ſet Chriſt and his Miniſtery at nought. But ſuch feare the Fathers had none; for few ever dreamt that the old Sacraments excelled the new; and therefore their exceſſive hyperboles of the one, and the extenuations of the other, they proove an occaſion to our Adverſaries to juſtifie their errours by them. Sutable whereto is the conceit of ſuch as thinke that the old Sacraments did pardon ſinne, but not conferre grace, (meaning holineſſe) as who ſay that the grace of Pardon is leſſe than the grace of Holineſſe. This errour some of the Schoolemen were of. Others imagine that the Iewes had them for Characters, onely to enter them into the number of outward members, & to distinguish them from Heathens, as men would set their markes upon their cattell, to discerne them from other mens. But these conceits are contrary to the Scriptures.

True it is, the Papists have colours of Reason out of the word for themselves. For (say they) Christ tells the Iewes, that their Fathers had eaten Manna in the wildernesse and were dead, But he that eates my flesh, and drinkes my blood, shall live for ever. I answer, This shewes that the Sacraments of the Gospel have more efficacie than the other; or rather, that those Iewes abused those Sacraments, and therefore perished: but, not that those Sacraments were onely shadowes, and no substance; For, all their bodies fell not in the Wilderneſſe; and under the Gospel, Paul affirmeth the same of the bad Receivers, That they eate and drinke their owne damnation. Therefore our Saviour compares not the Sacraments, but the Receivers; and that in their likeneſſe one to another, urging the Iewes to a more spirituall receiving of Christ, than their Fathers received Manna. Againe, they say Paul calls the old Sacraments, beggerly and sterven Elements: But wee must know, he speakes of them as now abolished, not of themselves; or else, of their opposition to Christ, as they held the Embracers of them from the substance of the same, which is Christ. Nay moreover, Bellarmine so villifies the Baptisme of Iohn, that he saith it was no Sacrament, but onely a preparative to it. For (saith he) Iohn himselfe said, I Baptise you with water, but Christ shall Baptise you with the Holy Ghost. But that text compares not two Baptismes but two Baptizers with each other. He saith not that his Baptisme was none; but that the Baptisme of Christ should be attended with greater power than his, because it should attend a more powerfull preaching of the Mysteries of the Gospel. But yet the substance was one in the Baptisme of Iohn and Christ; Iohn Baptised to remission of sinne as well as Christ; else Christs Baptisme by Iohn was no Sacrament; and there must have beene another institution of it after, which was not; and the Baptisme of the Apostles in Christs life time was no Sacrament, because as yet the Holy Ghost and Fire was not falne upon them; all which are ridiculous. Yet I cannot forget one objection which is common to them with the Anabaptists, taken out of Acts 19.15. where it is said that those twelve disciples at Ephesus who who had beene Baptized into the Baptiſme of Iohn, were againe Baptized into the Name of Chriſt. Which I confeſſe in ſhew exceedeth all other Objections. Many anſwers are framed by ſundry men; ſome thinking their Baptiſme of Iohn to have beene conferred by ſome that had no calling to doe it; others ſay, That by Baptizing into Chriſt, is onely meant a receiving of the Holy Ghoſt: But the true anſwer is that which Beza confeſſeth himſelfe to have received from that noble and learned Marnixius: that is, that thoſe words in the fifth verſe are not the words of Luke, as if he related that Paul baptized them the ſecond time; but the continued words of Paul, ſaying, That foraſmuch as Iohn did not baptize, ſave onely into the Name of Chriſt, and ſuch as heard him, were really baptized already into Chriſt, therefore there ſhould be no neede of rebaptizing them. Onely he would lay hands upon them that they might receive the extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, which Iohns Baptiſme could not helpe them with. A moſt acute, and no leſſe true and full anſwer.

Concluſ. Rom. 4. 11. We therefore abhorre theſe errors; oppoſing to them the cleare Text of Scripture. Paul ſaith of circumciſion, it was the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith. Than which, what can be ſaid more effectuall of Baptiſme? And in 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 3, 4. he telles the Iewes that thoſe in the Wilderneſſe had the ſame Sacraments which they had. Which is plaine by the argument of the Apoſtle; which is to convince them of certaine groſſe ſinnes, as Rebellion, Vncleaneneſſe, Luſt. Now whereas they might have alledged, we are under greater priviledges than they: hee prevents them thus, Nay they had the ſame with you: The red ſea was their baptiſme, the like was the cloud which directed them; and their Manna and water out of the rocke was to them the ſame ſpirituall meate and drinke which you have. If then they eſcaped not puniſhment of ſuch enormities, looke not you to eſcape. Many other Texts might be urged, all to evince this truth, that the old and new Sacraments, for ſubſtance and ſignification are one; even as their ſacrifices were one in ſubſtance and ſenſe, with Chriſt crucified. The Lord being very carefull that as his Church ſhould never lacke the beſt helpes to heaven: ſo they ſhould not have new and divers in ſubſtance, but the ſelfe ſame, that they might know the way to God and heaven was ſtill one and the ſame; and ſo goe on in their courſe comfortably without feare or ſtaggering. I conclude then that for ſubſtance there is one Chriſt, one faith, reconciliation, redemption, ſanctification, and eternall life; the old and new Sacraments were one.

The ſecond their Differences in three things, First, Cleareneſſe.

But ſecondly, the old and new differ exceedingly, notwithſtanding this their ſameneſſe of ſubſtance. And that both in their cleareneſſe, number and efficacy. Touching the firſt, it will not be darke to conceive, if wee conſider that a Sacrament is a relation to a covenant. If then the Covenant of the old Church were darke, how much more the ſeale annexed? A ſeale (I grant) in her nature is a thing of great aſſurance and evidence: how be it, as wee ſee in mens ſealings, the ſeale can bee no more evident, than the covenant; if that be confuſed, partiall, and obſcure, the ſeale applyed to it, can but bee darke. Now the covenant was darke, becauſe the foundation of it, which was and is Chriſt, was darke. They had heard and knew that God had made a covenant, both with mankinde in Adam, and more nearely with the Iewes in Abraham, and had annexed Circumciſion to it. They knew that this Covenant was twice or thrice renewed by Moſes, and after by the Prophets: but the ground of it in Chriſt the Meſſia being a twilight, a myſt unto them, the covenant needs muſt be ſo, and the ſeale ſutable. Alas! how few that heard of the covenant in the bleſſed Seede, could conceive it to bee a ſpirituall one, and not rather a carnall? How few knew what the perſon of the Meſſia ſhould be? How did they abhor any thought of humility in him? As for his divinity and union, how could they dreame of it? much leſſe came they to ſee the atchieving of this redemption by his ſatisfaction, death, reſurrection; and leaſt of all did they ſee either the myſtery of election in Chriſt, or the Fathers wrath pacified in the offer of grace, and the gift of faith to embrace it. But their eyes were held, that (except ſome few choiſe ones) they neither ſaw the ſcope of Sacrifices, Sacraments, or other Ordinances.

Sacraments in the old Teſtament obſcured.

Luke 24.16. Becauſe the Covenant was ſo.

Now if the foundation of the Covenant were hidden, how could the Covenant bee cleare? If that were darke, how could their Sacraments be cleare? True it is, that as in a picture of a king rudely drawne in a ſhaddow, there is truly a King portrayed: yet till his lineaments bee fully expreſſed in colours, few can reach what it meanes. So here, when a man is a farre off, we ſee him to be a man: but till he draw neare our view, we cannot ſee, ſalute and agnize him ſuch a one. So it is here. Adde hereto, that the law moral (not to ſpeake of the other) was (as it were) a vaile to the eyes

The Law was as a vaile of darkeneſſe. 2 Cor. 3. 14.

the eyes of Iew, that he could not ſee what was within the vaile, as Paul ſaith, 2. Cor. 3. For although the Lord gave it as an help for the preſent, fitteſt to curbe & bridle the rebellion of fierce ſpirits, & hard hearts, who were not yet fit to have any more ſpirituall things put upon them. Yet alas! The very interpoſition of it between them & Chriſt, cauſed a wofull confuſion and darkeneſſe to come upon them. The law had in it enough to convince them of utter inability to performe it: but alas! which of them did ſo apprehend it, and not rather as a rule of ſuch obedience as they could performe themſelves? Now then what a confuſion did this cauſe in them, in the true coherence of Law and Chriſt? What a diſorder wrought it, and what a miſtake in their minds, imagining that the Law was indeede this Covenant of life, which they might obey, and ſo doing they ſhould fare well? Alas! what a poore preparative was this to Chriſt? How did it overthrow the Covenant of grace in him? without which the Covenant of workes or obedience is deadly and damnable? So that we ſee that the Covenant being ſo darke, hidden and perplexed, the ſcales muſt needes follow, and be darke alſo?

Clearer in the new.

But it is farre otherwiſe under the Goſpel: That doth with open face exhibite and repreſent the Covenant of grace in the diſcovery of Chriſt the Mediator; his annointing, his perſon, union, and ſatisfaction, the purpoſe of the Father, the free offer of grace in the word of reconciliation, the promiſes, & the meaner of applying them; Chriſt being already come, and having done all requiſite for us; loe, the Covenant ſtabliſhed in him by God with his Church is alſo manifeſt: The Law is clearely underſtood as a leader of all unregenerate ones to Chriſt: as a rule of direction to the regenerate, made eaſie and ſweete, the obſcurity and confuſion of Covenants is removed; the Covenant of obedience is ſubordained to the Covenant of grace; and the Covenant of grace is declared to be free, full, faithfull, and eternall to all the elect and beleevers. Hence then the Sacraments of the Goſpel become cleare, evident and manifeſt; not that thoſe other adde not an aſſurance to the covenant, but becauſe (they ſerving to no other end but to ratifie the Covenant) cannot ſeale any further than according to the extent of the Covenant.

Why God kept the old Church dark Eph. 3, 4, 5, 6.

Now why the Lord for ſo long a time, ſhould ſee it good to give to his Church of old, the ſame Sacraments with us; and yet to conceale the Covenant (to which they belonged) from the cleare cleare underſtanding of the moſt of thoſe times; partly it was ſecret to himſelfe and hidden, and partly is revealed. The hidden cauſe is his good pleaſure: The ſame which hid it from the world wholy, hid it thus in great meaſure even from his own for ſo many generations: as appeares by this, that when Chriſt indeede came, he was ſo little acknowledged by his owne. The other is more plaine: So was the Lord offended by that wilfull diſobedience of man which defaced the light of his image, that he juſtly ſuffered the moſt part of men to be quite bereft, and the greater part in this Church to be blindfolded in the matter of their redemption. To which I adde, That the wiſedome of God was ſuch, that he ſaw it meete to reveale Chriſt and his Covenant in him, and the ſeales thereof, not all at once but by degrees. This is called the diſpenſation of time which God onely reſerves to himſelf. Foure thouſand yeeres he withheld the Meſſia from the Church; and why? Becauſe the fulneſſe of time was not till then, in his wiſe diſpoſition. There was more light in Moſes time than in Abrahams, and in the Prophets than in Moſes; but the fruit of the Covenant was carried ſtill in the wombe of time, till the fulneſſe of time came, and then the birth of this fruit was fulfilled. Act. 1. 6.

The ſecond number. In old Teſtament more reſemblances.

Touching the ſecond, the number. The old Church and we differ in that alſo, yet here I muſt put a caveat. All the Fathers and other writers agree that the old Church had more Sacraments than the new hath. But how? Surely the Sacraments (for being) were no more than ours, than two I meane; but they had more Elements of reſemblance than we. And that in two reſpects. Firſt, there was a multitude of ſignes wherewith the old Church was clogged and burdened (to keepe them the better within the bounds of true worſhip, from Idolls and will-worſhip) which yet were ſo farre from helping, that they by account rather hindred the Sacrament. For indeed all the ceremonies, the ſacrifices, the Altar of incenſe, the law of the firſt borne, and almoſt what not, did more or leſſe concerne and typifie Chriſt as well as the Sacraments, although they were a little more reall, eſpecially circumciſion which was imprinted on their fleſh: yet I ſay (as one hath well expreſſed in the whole frame of ceremonies) al did relate in one reſpect or other, more or leſſe to Chriſt. How then could it be avoided, but ſuch a multitude of ſemblances muſt detract from the peculiarity of Sacraments, which the Lord authorized with farre more ſignification and efficacy than the reſt? The Col. 2. 14.

number therefore of ſhaddowes hindred the people from diſcerning Sacraments in their diſtinct and ſpeciall uſe, from other inferiour ones. But ſecondly and ſpecially, even the ſame Sacraments for realneſſe, yet held not countenance and colour, but admitted (according to ſucceſſion of time) divers elements. Which argued their impotency and changeableneſſe. Thus Circumciſion admitted two other compeers, viz. The paſſage of the red ſea, and the cloud over the Tabernacle in their travell, raining and wetting their bodies. The Paſſeover admitted two other, viz. Manna, and the water of the Rocke, which was (as Chriſt ſaith) the ſame ſpirituall drinke and foode that we have in our Supper. So then wee muſt not thinke they had more Sacraments for ſence, kinde and ſignification: But more Elements reiterated, and added (paſſage wiſe) tranſeunt ones added to the ſtanding, which (in the abſence of the others, intermitted in the wilderneſſe) might ſtand them in ſtead. Now marke, the fewer, more ſtanding, and leſſe mutable Sacraments are, the ſtronger they be, and contrariwiſe the weaker. Wee know if Phyſitians diſtruſt their receits, they preſcribe the more: if builders diſlike the ſlightneſſe of their Timber, they put the more peeces into the building. So here.

1 Cor. 10.

Fewer under the New.

But under the Goſpel it is otherwiſe. God hath delivered his Church under the New Teſtament, from ſuch multiplicity of Sacraments. Onely the Popiſh Church the mother of darkeneſſe, ignorance and confuſion, compaſſeth her ſelfe with her many ſparkles, and Sacraments, ſhewing thereby what an enemy ſhee is to the truth of God, and to the priviledge of Evangelicall Sacraments. For, as ſhe hath darkned the Doctrine of the Covenant, the freedome and onelineſſe of it, ſo its juſt ſhe be left to darken her Sacraments, to aboliſh the Supper, to defile Baptiſme, and to mixe a multitude of baſtard ones to pollute the legitimate. Now therefore the paucity of our Sacraments argueth their pith and comprehenſion: as wee ſay things united are the ſtronger. Our fewer, more durable and conſtant Sacraments, do more fully and exactly exhibite the Lord Ieſus than theirs ſo manifold and oft repeated could doe. And as theirs ſo changed, betokened their vaniſhing away (as in deede they did) ſo ours once and no more inſtituted argue that they are as durable as the Church, and of themſelves containe whatſoever Chriſt offers to his Church to partake from him, either for being of welfare of ſoule and body.

Eſa. 49. 11.

So

So that the Papists by their multitude of Sacraments doe exceedingly alay & weaken that excellency of them which they would lift them up to. God grant it may bee a signe of their vanishing, & that speedily; as certainely they are some of that drosse which must be consumed with the breath of his mouth, before his owne shall be purged and restored to their integrity.

But thirdly and especially, we and they differ most in the efficacie of the old and new; which (as I said) flowes of necessity from the difference of clearenesse in the old and new Covenant. Efficacie alway attending truth, the sealing power of the Sacraments of the old Testament must needes be weaker: because the truth which they sealed was darker. Which want of power I doe not ascribe to the defect of true relation or union Sacramentall, or as if I denied their Sacraments to be spirituall: for whatsoever sacrament is not Christs and hath not the spirit of Christ annexed to it, is but a counterfeit. Circumcision therefore was Christ Sacramentall, and so was the Passeover. But the one sort was onely a seale of a thing to come in time, the other of the Gospel seales of the same thing, come and already having performed whatsoever was promised. Now as a thing enjoyed excells a thing hoped for (say never so sure) so the seale of the latter exceedes the former in all the efficacy of it, perswasion, peace, joy, contentment to the soule. Absence breeds suspence, presence expells it and represents certainty, and satisfaction to the Receiver. So then this I say, ordinarily the Iew could not, (except in some especiall cases and persons) enjoy such a measure of sealing power from their Sacraments as we doe or may; they received not such certainty of perswasion of their reconciliation and being in Covenant as we, nor found such fruit as we may. Because the sealing power of the Spirit and of faith, was but weake. As the King is, so his kingdome must be: if he obscure and unknowne, his authority is weake. So here in the old Testament. Christ himselfe was an obscure King and Priest, and Prophet, in his Church: his kingdome therefore and authority was according. But now, the Kingdome is as the King, and standeth in power, peace, and joy of the Holy Ghost: and therefore needes must both the Word and Sacraments be so, by which, as by Channels they are conveyed. And yet doubtlesse, God left them not destitute of such fruite as that age was capeable of: they were commanded to rejoyce in their feares and affections of gladnesse and joy they had, and so spirituall as their carnall nall and ſenſuall ſpirits were fit to receive: the Lord ſupplying that want of ſpirituall cleereneſſe which now is offered, by ſome ſenſible and outward feelings and expreſſions; ſo farre as the generals of a bleſſed ſeede to come, and happineſſe by him were apprehended. The diſtinct kinde, whereof perhaps wee can not ſo well diſtinguiſh. But to be ſure, Heb. 11. ult. God finiſhed their dayes without the promiſe ſeene and fulfilled, that they without us ſhould not be perfect. I may adde one thing more out of Acts 2.17. and Ioel 2. compared; That the weakeneſſe of diſpenſation and (as I may call it) barrenneſſe of power in the Miniſtry of the Word among the Iewes; made the Sacraments alſo as barren in their grace and ſealing power. We little reade in the old Teſtament of ſuch numbers of converted ones as after the aſcenſion: therefore no doubt Circumciſion was as weake in the grace thereof, and the ſealing power of it. The Goſpel hath more fulneſſe of ſeede, and begets more unto God, than the Law could doe: and therefore Baptiſme is a farre fuller Sacrament to confirme the ſoule in her new birth, than the other was. So for nouriſhment. The Goſpel exceedes (by many degrees) the Miniſtery of the Law in Point of her building up and nouriſhing the ſoule in the grace of the new birth: the Goſpel hath filled the breaſts of the Church with farre more milke, and ſtored her with farre more proviſion than the old Teſtament could doe: For thereby the Spirit is powred out upon all fleſh. Looke what difference there was betweene them and us, for the fulneſſe of bodily food, that (in a ſort) may bee ſaid for ſpirituall fulneſſe. How many creatures for kinde, or for circumſtance (as in caſe of bloud, or ſtrangled) might not they touch, the Hog, the Conie, the Hare, and many other, both beaſt and foule, tame and wilde; which to us are cleane and ſanctified? How much more doth the Lord afford us fuller feede of the Sacrament of the Supper than their Paſſeover? Even as a feaſt exceeds an ordinary? Therefore Paul calles theirs a miniſtry of the letter, ours of the Spirit; not becauſe they had not the Spirit, but in compariſon of the fulneſſe and power of ours.

Barrenneſſe.

The new more effectuall.

Now for us, our Sacraments are farre more effectuall. The very change of the old into new argued the excellenter efficacy of them. As the traine of a Prince perſonally riding in progreſſe is richer then an Harald or Harbinger. The Sabbath (we know) was changed at the reſurrection, to honour it: So the Sacraments at

at his annointing to his office, and at his paſſion, to magnifie them. How ſhould they ſo doe, if their Traine were not greater? I meane if the Spirit of Chriſt and his ſealing, perſwading, ſetling, comforting, pacifying power were no greater? Alſo, except that bleſſed traine of his graces more glorious and plentifull, as humility heavenly-mindedneſſe, patience, hope, love, zeale; ability to walke with God more cloſely, to diſcharge our callings more fruitfully, to ſuffer more willingly, to live by faith more ſetledly, and the like gifts of Chriſt Sacramentall, attended them? Hence is that of Auſtin ſo common, Our Sacraments (ſaith he) are in efficacie greater than theirs, in profit more gainefull, in performance more eaſie, and in number fewer: Beſides, ours in their underſtanding are moſt ſublime, in obſervation moſt pure, and in ſignification moſt excellent. They lived in the Porch of Sacraments, we in the Parlour. Let us take heede; leaſt, as they in their age, when no Nation under heaven enjoyed any Sacraments, ſave themſelves; were ſo puffed up by their priviledge, that they diſdained all as Dogges in reſpect of themſelves, cleaving onely to the barke of theſe Ordinances, without any ſeeking after the Spirit and power of them: and ſo opened a way to Gods wrath, to bring into their ſteed the Gentiles, who alwaies thirſted after them: ſo let us feare leaſt wee ſtand ſo much upon our dignitie above theirs, that in the meane time there ſhall be found even among us, baptized ones, and Communicants farre more blinde, prophane, careleſſe, than the Iewes was; yea and ſome of us who goe for better, bee found as formall, barren, as farre from the Covenant, as eſtranged from forgiveneſſe, and as deſtitute of the life and ſealing power of Baptiſme and the Supper, as they of their Circumciſion and Paſſeover. If it be ſo, our dignitie ſhall ſo lift us up to heaven, that it ſhall throw us downe to hell; and I will not onely ſay, the Lord will not be pleaſed with us, as with them, 1 Cor. 10. 5. but as it is, Heb. 2. 2, 3. by how much more powerfull grace is put into his Sacrament, and by how much more eminent waies and ordinances he hath honoured us: by ſo much the more ſhall our condemnation for our unbeleeſe be more fearefull than theirs, who had ſo dimme a Covenant, and ſo weake Seales in compariſon of us. Rather let us labour to enjoy the priviledge of our priviledge above them, in carrying about us that evidence of faith, and that peace of conſcience, and that joy of ſoule, which our Sacraments ſeale up to us; that we may be as much better than they, as our Sacraments excell theirs in efficacie: and then that kingdome of Christ within us, as well as that without us, shall be a kingdome not of words onely and signes, but of power also. And so much of the former generall of this Chapter.

Agreement and difference of the 2 new Sacraments.

Touching the latter, how farre Baptisme and the Supper doe differ or agree; briefely understand, that as they agree in Circumstances concerning Sacraments in generall, so also in the definition of a Sacrament, wherein (as specialls contained under one kind) they communicate. They are both ancient (and within three years one as ancient as the other:) they are both alike publique, as being equall legacies of the Church militant: they have both one Founder (although the one by mediate Commission, as Baptisme by John the Baptist, by extraodinary calling, the other immediatly by Christ himselfe:) they both agree in the Name, Necessitie of a Sacrament. Againe, whatsoever is true of the definition of a Sacrament, is equally true of both these, as in the next Chapter shall more fully appeare. For why? In both the Lord conveyes spirituall grace by visible resemblances set apart by himselfe, and furnisht with power to that end.

Their Agreement.

But in a word, that I would say of their mutuall agreement is this; First, they both agree in the offer and representation of whole Christ joyntly and undividedly to the soule. Touching the first: Know, that when wee call the Sacrament of Baptisme, the Sacrament of entrie and ingrafting of us into the body of Christ, and of begetting us to Christ, yet wee divide not Christ imputed, from Christ inherent; wee must not thinke Baptisme gives us an estate in Christ for justification onely, for it estates us in Christ wholy, both for wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification and redemption: though justification makes us truely the Lords, yet because the Sacrament conferres whole Christ, therefore it conferres him as God offers and the soule needs him, that is, both for justification and sanctification, Christ our pardon, and Christ our life: for without both equally ours, all Christ is not ours. A speciall point to bee noted for the better understanding of the act of faith in applying Imputation and Sanctification both at once to the soule, (of which point I treate elsewhere.) So againe, the Sacrament of the Supper conveyes Christ to the soule wholly and undividedly, not onely for the encrease of our Sanctification, but our Iustification also.

1. In the joynt offer of Christ.

Practicall Catechisme.

For

For although Iuſtification as it is a beneſite of Chriſt, receives no encreaſe: Yet faith Sacramentall in apprehending it receives encreaſe. And thus both agree in conveying whole Chriſt to the ſoule. Part. 3. Article. 2.

Secondly, in reſpect of their ſealing up of all Chriſt to the ſoule, (of which in the next Chapter) for, except both concurre in ſealing, neither of both doe ſeale him: True it is, that ſome further thing is offered to the ſoule in the Supper than was in Baptiſme, but yet becauſe ſtill one Chriſt is offered in both, therefore increaſe of grace cannot be ſealed up where ingrafting and begetting hath not beene already conferred by ſpirituall Baptiſme. Neither without other give whole Chriſt (if both may be enjoyed) although each give him wholy becauſe Chriſt is inſeparable from himſelfe: the whole ſoule is in each member which is in the whole body; yet if we divide the toe from the foote, there will be no ſoule in the toe. Take Baptiſme from the Supper and the ſupper can bee no ſealing Supper: for how ſhall life bee encreaſed in a thing which never had true life begotten in it? I conclude then, the Sacraments of the Goſpel although they are two, yet doe not cut Chriſt in two parts (as the child which Solomon bid to be divided in two parts) but ſtill offer one Chriſt to be communicated. Both thoſe harlots could not have one and the ſame child: but all Chriſts members, have that one childe, Ieſus Sacramentall; although for ſeverall ends (as by and by ſhall appeare) one ſerving to create him, the other to enlarge him: yet both agree in exhibiting one Ieſus. Of the uſe anon. 2 Sealing Chriſt.

Now laſtly, touching their diſagreement, as it ſtands in many leſſer things, ſo in the particular ends eſpecially; for the former, they are theſe five, 1. Order, 2. Frequency, 3. Opportunity, 4. Elements, 5. Subject. For the firſt. The order of them, is, that Baptiſme goes before, and the Supper followes, even as being goes before proſpering. Yet I denie not but thouſands have beleeved ere baptiſed; but now I ſpeake of the order of the ſeales, not otherwiſe. Which diſcovers the folly of ſuch as would defer baptiſme to the laſt period of their life, out of an errour, both that it conferd grace by a vertue inherent, and that it pardoned ſins only paſt. By which folly ſome bereft themſelves of Baptiſme finally, by ſudden death. Secondly, in frequency. Baptiſme is but once to be adminiſtred, the Supper often. Wee are but once borne. And therefore the rebaptizing of Anabaptiſts is a curſed pro- Their diſagreement, in five things. Order 1. Secondly, frequently.

fanation: not onely in respect of their condemning Infants baptisme in generall, but of repeating baptisme administred, although by or in a false heretical Church: for even such baptisme must not be doubled; if the mystery of the Trinitie and the Doctrine of Christ be maintained in any generality, although with much corruption. The like I may say of those that denied to restore them that were once lapsed, upon pretence that then they must be rebaptized; and also them that presumed to rebaptise such as they received againe into the Church, after their repentance of some notorious heresie, or odious practise which they had fallen into or committed. No, we abhorre such scurfe, affirming one Baptisme, and that one, once to be given to the Church for true sealing up the ingrafting of the soule into Christ when it shall beleeve the Covenant.

Thirdly season. Thirdly, in opportunity or season, Which I speake not positively, but upon supposition of the Churches wisedome and liberty in determining the season of the Supper to bee in the morning, leaving the season of Baptisme indefinite as occasion serveth. And that, because the one beeing administred to growne ones, requires fit and due season to quicken them up, which in the other is not requisite. But for all this, I doe affirme no necessitie to be in this season of the Supper, seeing it is in the Churches power to altar the morning to the afternoone; and if wee should so receive, I dare not impeach it, so it be done without confusion. The fourth is the Elements, the one having Water, the other Bread and Wine; both serving pertinently to the uses they were made for, and neither having in them any fitnesse to resemble each others use; Water being no more fit to nourish, than Bread to wash, but each suiting properly to his end. The last is the Subject; the one the Infant, the other the growne, and such as are of discretion. Which I speake not as if the Church may Baptise none but Infants: for as it doth baptize them as lawfully, in the faith of the Parents, and in hope of their owne (when they come to understand the Covenant) as it offers the Supper to actuall beleevers; so yet if any such be brought into the Church as never was baptized, being (as falles out) of twelve, twentie, thirtie yeares: the Church is bound upon the due examination of such, and confession of his faith, to baptize him as well as an Infant. But for the other Sacrament, to admit children, (though under colour of ripe knowledge and grace above others) it is not a fit thing, in respect of Fourthly the Elements.

Fiftly the subject.

of ſcandall and opening a way to the profanation of Sacraments by others of like age: not to ſpeake of the raſhneſſe of it, in aſcribing that to raw youth, which requireth ſetling of judgement and ſoundneſſe of affection. But of all other differences, the particular ends are greateſt; in which the two Sacraments are irreconciliable. The one ſo ſerving for the Breede of a new creature; the other for the Support therof, that neither can nor ought to be applyed to others end or uſe; as in their due place ſhalbe ſpoken. Addition. See Chap. infra.

The uſe is, Firſt, to bleſſe God and adore his Wiſedome, who hath in theſe two Sacraments, ſo harmoniouſly and agreeably united, repreſented, and ſealed up all the Lord Ieſus, ſo farre as a poore ſoule can comprehend him; not wearying us with confuſiō of Sacraments. Secondly, acknowledging God to be the God of order and diſtinction, in appointing us theſe divine ſeales: and that for three cauſes. Firſt, to avoide the blinde devotion of Idiots, who not looking at which is which, but confuſedly at both as objects of holineſſe and devotion, goe no further to conſider Sacraments in their diſtinct ends. Much like Papiſts who uſe Holy-water, and the bread of their Pix (becauſe hallowed after their manner) to any ends they firſt light on: as to ſprinckle a ſicke man, to ſcare away Devlis, yea, putting the Hoaſt into the dead mans mouth. Any thing ſerves to any end among ſuch Merchants, and Huckſters of holy things. And how few (thinke wee) are there to be found in many Congregations, who can diſcerne betweene theſe two Sacraments in their particular ends? Save that they ſee they be two ſolemne performances, having diverſe Elements and Acts belonging to them: elſe they know no ods, but put them up ſhufflingly in the bagge of their devotion, being unable to give a reaſon why themſelves were baptized, when they were Infants, or why being elder, they receive the Supper? Vſe 1. Vſe 2. In three branches. 1.

Secondly, to confute the practiſe of all thoſe who Popiſhly aſcribe to the Supper the conferring of grace of all ſorts: and when they receive, they thinke that although they never reaped the fruit of their baptiſme before, neither had faith, yet one Sacrament may ſupply all wants; which is to deſtroy the diſtinct end of each Sacrament, and to plucke up good Land-markes, confounding the agreement and diſagreement of both; for as all Chriſt is in both, ſo yet for two ſeverall purpoſes. A Divines life, we know, is to ſtudy; and to Preach; he doth both theſe wholly, himſelfe wholly is required to doe either; howbeit the things he Vſe 2.

doth are divided acts; he preacheth not while he is in his Study, nor ſtudieth while he is Preaching. Let us abhorre ſuch profannes; and know all Chriſt is in both the Sacraments; yet orderly, and ſo, that who ſo hath not enjoyed him in the firſt to beleeve, cannot enjoy him in the ſecond to grow.

Vſe 3. Thirdly, to teach us how to apply the benefit of theſe two Sacraments according to our ſpeciall temptations. The former thus: If Satan tempt us concerning the truth of our Converſion to God, telling us we are in the ſtate of enemies, cut off from God, aliants and excommunicants from him and Chriſt: whither ſhall we recourſe? To the Supper and our oft receiving? No in no wiſe, for Satan can ſpeake Divinitie when he liſt, and tell us that the Supper is no Sacrament of Regeneration. But in this caſe, flie to thy calling, and to the ſeale of it, Baptiſme (if indeede thou canſt proove thy calling by the worke of the Law and Goſpel; elſe thy ſeale is to a blanke) and preſſe the Adverſary with the weapon of thy Baptiſme, ſealing it up to thy conſcience, 1 Pet. 3. 21. which ſhall quench the fierie dart of his temptation, and ſcare him from thee, better than all Popiſh Holy water. Againe, doth the Devill tempt thee to beleeve thou art an hypocrite, becauſe thou haſt a dead heart, thou groweſt not in grace, thou art ſunke from thy firſt love, fallen to the world, pleaſures, vanities, luſts of thy uncleaneneſſe, waxen unprofitable, and revolted from God? What ſhall now helpe thee? That thou art baptiſed? No, hold that cloſe alſo, that thou mayeſt pleade the other rightly: But in this caſe flie eſpecially to the Supper, and alledge thus. I am ſunke too farre into a formall courſe, and the cuſtome of the world, but yet Lord to thee I appeale, that in truth I have coveted thy Sacrament of Reſtorative and Nouriſhment; I have come with hunger to it for the preparing of my loſſes and decaies, and depart in good hope and comfort of recovering life and vigor againe: and therefore in deſpight of Satan, I will hold to the end of this Sacrament, which is, to ſeale up comfort to the afflicted, and ſtrength to the weake, and recovery to the decayed, and raiſing to the fallen: therefore from hence I will fetch it by vertue of the promiſe.

1 Pet. 3. 21.

Vſe 4. Laſtly, it teacheth us the excellency of the Sacraments, becauſe they have ſuch a gift in them, as to repreſent all Chriſt at once to the ſoule, Chriſt wholy and in each part of his merit and efficacy. It were an odde and ſtrange Picture which could deſcribe the

ſame

ſame man living, dying, dead, raiſed up and aſcending to heaven, and all in one perſon: That which no Art of man can doe, the Lord can doe by the Sacraments, that is above all Images of Crucifixes, and can tender to the ſoule in one view all theſe; the Lord Ieſus dead, riſen, aſcended: the Grace imputed of reconciliation, the Grace inherent of holineſſe, all the particular Graces of the Spirit, the promiſe of God made all, Yea, and Amen; in Chriſt, for this life, and for a better; for all conditions, and times and occaſions are offered at once in each Sacrament; the one to give us right and title to Chriſt when we wanted him; the other to rivet us more into him, to enlarge us in faith and the fruits, till we ſhall neede no more Sacraments or Ordinances. And therefore let us much eſteeme and honour Sacraments as moſt divine comprehenſions of all Chriſt, and channels of his fulneſſe, from whom as our Head, We receive grace for grace, Ioh. 1.16. And this for the ſecond Chapter. Iohn 1.16.

CHAP. III.

Of the ſubſtance of a Sacrament in generall; The Deſcription of it propounded, and examined.

HAving ſpoken of the Circumſtances, the agreement and diſagreement of Sacraments: Next we come to the ſubſtance and nature of a Sacrament; which will bee underſtood the better by the deſcription and particular handling the parts thereof. A Sacrament then is, an ordinance of God, wherein, by ſome materials duely appropriated and united, and by ſome acts duly adminiſtred, the Lord ſignes, and ſeales up to the ſoules of the Elect, the truth of his Covenant, and receives a reciprocall ſeale from them of their covenant with himſelfe. Subſtance of it. Deſcription of a Sacrament in generall.

For the clearing hereof, I would have the Reader conceive, that in this place I take the word Sacrament in the greateſt latitude; not onely for the ſubſtance of it in it ſelfe; but alſo as it is adminiſtred and performed in a ſolemne manner, betweene God and his Church. So that hereby two things ariſe to be conſidered. 1. The Subſtance of a Sacrament in all her conſtituting cauſes. 2. The due adminiſtration and performing thereof in the Ordinance. Touching the firſt, we are to conſider theſe foure cauſes. 1. The efficient and ſupreame cauſe of a Sacrament. 2. The materials Two Generals. First, Subſtance. Secondly, Adminiſtration. In the ſubſtance foure things.

of

of it. 3. The true formall cauſe. 4. The finall. Where firſt, the generall end, Sealing. Secondly, The branches, two: firſt, Gods ſealing of the truth of his Covenant to us. Secondly, turning backe againe our owne covenant ſealed to him. In the latter member alſo, viz. The Adminiſtration, we conſider the acts of Miniſters and people, and the ſpirituall diſpenſation of God in theſe externals, attending thereon, for the ends mentioned. Of the firſt of theſe in the firſt place.

Firſt, the Author God. Proofes of it.

1. The Author of the Sacraments, all, and each, Old and New, is one unchangeable, Eternall and onely wiſe and gracious God. And no wonder: for firſt, in his boſome of Eternitie lay hidden

Reaſon 1. that purpoſe of entring Covenant with man, fallen from the grace of Creation. It was free for him to relinquiſh him finally in that revolt of his: in that he did not, it was free mercy, doubly greater than the love of Creation. If the deviſe then of a gracious Covenant with man, was onely in the power of the Creator, who ſhall be ſuppoſed to be the Author of ſeales to this Covenant, ſave

Reaſon 2. the ſame God? Secondly, If the Lord onely found out his Sonne to be the foundation of this Covenant, meant him, ſent him, made him, enable him, to ratifie it by the bloud of the Covenant; accepted all this, offers it, ſeconds and aſſiſts it by his owne Spirit, to make it effectuall. Who can doubt, that he onely is the Author of Reaſon 3. theſe Seales whereby this effectualneſſe is conveyed? Thirdly, if he only be the Author of Bleſſing the word of promiſe to breede faith in the Covenant, which is the leſſer: Who but hee ſhall breede the aſſurance of faith, and the reflection thereof upon the ſoule, that it may know it ſelfe to beleeve? Now how is this done ordinarily, ſave by the ſeales? If he then bee the Author of the leſſer efficacie, who but he is the Author of the greater by the Reaſon 4. ſealing Ordinance? Fourthly, if no externall bleſſing accompanying the Covenant, (for ſo the Lord was wont to perſwade o-Deut. 7. & 32. bedience, Deut. 7. and Chap. 32. Hoſ. 2. Eze. 33. &c.) can come from any other Author ſave the Lord: as the bleſſings of raine,

Deut 5. 29. dew, plenty, health, long life, ſucceſſe, (Deut. 5. 29.) and the like; who ſhall dare uſurpe the authority of Seales and Sacraments, which are the moſt eminent annexes to the Covenant of Reaſon 5. all other? Fiftly, If the Lord Ieſus himſelfe was the onely ſtabliſher of the Teſtament and Covenant by his death and bloud (for without death no Legacy is of valour) then who but himſelfe ſhall make Sacraments, which are in effect, nothing elſe ſave the the power of his life and death? Sixthly, If the Lord onely can authorise divers signes for the Sacraments (as supr. Chap. 2.) if he onely can abrogate old ones: if hee one day shall abolish all, old and new, their nature and use, as past use: who but himselfe shall frame Sacraments? It resting in one and the same power to make lawes and to abolish them. I conclude then that God alone is the Author of a Sacrament. As indeede the Scripture doth witnesse: The Lord onely, Gen. 17. appointed Circumcision: The same Lord, Exod. 12. ordained his Passeover: the Lord extraordinarily gave commission from heaven to John to appoint Baptisme: and the Lord Iesus with his owne sacred presence and hands ordained the Supper before his death: Seeing after his Resurrection he could not, being partly an act of humiliation: and so all Sacraments were given by the Lord, in their severall kinds, for their severall uses, as in the next points shall appeare. And to say the truth if it bee once granted that the Lord is not sole ordainer of Sacraments, what a wide doore must of necessitie be set open for both usurping Ordainers and counterfeit Sacraments? Where should the period bee, or why should not hundreths as well as three or five be admitted to the heape?

Reason 6.

Conclus. Gen. 17. Exod. 12. Luke 3. 1,2,3. Luke 22. 18.

For use therefore hereof, this teacheth us to abhorre all Sacraments which have not God and Christ for their ordainer. If they cannot shew their pedegree in the Lords Genealogy, nor bee bookt in his Records, nor have his stampe set upon them, we say of them as our Saviour of the Penny, Give unto Cæsar that which is his: So give to the Pope his Vnction, throw him backe his Sacramentall Orders and Pennace, we abhorre whatsoever savours not of God, or copper coine. Yea, and we loath whatsoever of Gods first ordaining, they by their abuse have corrupted, namely, as corrupted: and seeing God and Christ never gave us a Sacrifice for a Sacrament, wee abhorre to meddle with it as a Sacrifice propitiatory for the quicke and the dead; and for their Baptisme we loath it also as administred by them, as an horrible defiling of Gods Ordinance; professing to depart frō their Sacraments, both for their new inventions, and for their adulteratings of the old; and bid them take them as their owne, for now they have used them thus, they are no longer Gods. As for their distinction of their Apostolicall & Divine, we take what they grant; if they be not Divine, although an Angel from heaven did ordaine them, wee should abhorre them: How much more when their

Pope,

Pope, or their Clergie, or the body of their defiled Church? For were their Church a chaſt Spouſe, ſhe durſt as well forſweare her husband, as caſt off ſubjection in embracing his Sacraments, and uſurping power to appoint other; which is ſo farre beſide her commiſſion, that ſhee may as ſafely deviſe a new Covenant, Scripture and Doctrine, as doe it.

Vſe 2. Secondly, this teacheth us to eſteeme ſo much the better of Gods Coyne, as we ſcorne the baſe ſtuffe of Popery: Gods ſtampe upon the Sacrament, ſhould make it honorable and precious in our eyes. If ſome civill ordinance hath honour in it, becauſe God hath put it upon it; if marriage be ſo ſolemne, if the Crowne of an earthly King be ſo ſacred, how holy is his Sacrament? He who profanes it by ſacrilegious adding, detracting, or profaning, either by ſuperſtition or unprepared uſe, ſhall finde God will not hold him guiltleſſe for taking his Name in vaine. Wee delight when wee have any curious thing of a choiſe workeman, to ſay, It is a Picture of ſuch a ones drawing; It is a Muſicall Leſſon of ſuch a ones ſetting; a Watch of ſuch a ones making: How ſhould Gods Maſterpeeces then affect us? Not to over-prize them, to keepe them in Pixes and under Canopies of gold, but to preſerve them in their ſpirituall integrity.

Vſe 3. Thirdly, it ſhould teach us to behold them, not in their outſide, but as they are in Gods ordination; not the outſide of a man which we ſee, but the ſoule (which is not ſeene) is the man: ſo, not the outward thing, but Gods Ordinance in it, is the Sacrament. Of which more in due place.

Vſe 4. But Fourthly, and eſpecially, ſeeing God is the Author of Sacraments, let us be ruled by him in the right manner of receiving them: Looke what Ioſia, 2 King. 23.21. ſaid to the people, Keepe the Paſſeover to the Lord your God according to all that is in the Book of the Covenant: ſo here I ſay, Receive to the Lord, be ruled by him in Preparation, in action, and the fruit of both: Its onely in him that ordaines, to order alſo and preſcribe the due manner of uſing them. Take wee this item with us (before we come to the Doctrine of right receiving) that it may ſet a ſpurre in our ſides, to quicken us to due preparation and uſing of them; for hee who gave them to his Church, will moſt ſeverely puniſh all ignorant, raſh, unbeleeving, unrepentant, uncharitable, indifferent commers to his Sacraments: and every ſuch one ſtands to Gods Tribunall, as we ſhall heare in due place.

2 King. 23. 21.

Laſtly,

Laſtly, let this point teach us to whom to goe for the ſpirituall life of faith, and the grace of love, for the great worke of receiving. Its in him the firſt principle of life who made them to beſtow them. Renounce thy ſelfe, thy owne ſence, will-worſhip, devotion, religion: Its no moralitie to receive well, no act of ours; Its a moſt ſpirituall act about an object of divine excellencie; the relation of a Sacrament the end of it, the manner of partaking it, require a new bottome, and the caſting out of our owne: till God have ſtript us of our ſelves, fleſh and blood ſhall never feele any ſubſiſting of Sacraments; they will vaniſh. Onely a word of promiſe, and a ſeale of the Spirit added to it, by, and from a God of boundleſſe mercy, can breede faith to become as reall an evidence and convincing the ſoule, that there is Chriſt, Pardon and Grace to be gotten, as ever Phariſee felt falſe bottome in his owne worke wrought, carnall and outward devotion, and farre greater. And this note, The Lord is not ſo to bee counted the ordainer of Sacraments, as if he had put all his power over unto them to conferre grace to all ſorts. No, no, he holds the bridle ſtill in his owne hand; if he bleſſe, they ſhall be bleſſed, if not, accurſed: and all to teach us to ſeeke him for the grace of his Ordinance, to abhorre our ſelves, to pray for the Spirt of the Promiſe to make the ſeale effectuall, elſe all is empty and bottomleſſe. Vſe 5.

The ſecond thing is the matter of a Sacrament. In the which point two branches offer themſelves to be conſidered: Firſt, The neceſſitie of it: Secondly, The ſimplicity. Touching the former; Elements muſt be ſenſible. I meane no abſolute neceſſitie, but ſuch as the ſutableneſſe of providence to the impotencie of our nature requireth. Such is the woefull blindnes and dulnes of our underſtanding and unbeleefe of our hearts, to conceive or apply to our ſelves the Myſterie of Chriſt, that (except the Lord ſhould ſuffer men to vaniſh wholy in this their wretchedneſſe) he muſt of neceſſitie ſteppe out of his ſpirituall courſe, and temper himſelfe to our infirmity; declaring ſpirituall things by carnall. And he doth by this meanes condeſcend to us, leaſt we ſhould be offended with the hard things of his Kingdome; but might even ſee, touch, taſte them: and by ſpeaking to all theſe ſences at once, he might convey the ſavour and faith of them, and in them familiarly to us. He doth catch us (as it were) by this wiſe craftе, which though it bewray much dulneſſe in us, yet no leſſe deepe wiſedome and love in God, And Secondly, Matter. Two things. First Neceſſitie.

First, Our weakeneſſe requires it.

And this courſe he hath taken in all times paſt with his Church; for when any promiſe, charge, threat, or act of his hath paſſed to corrupt man: he hath beene faine to ſecond it with ſome ſigne and outward warrant to the ſence, to confirme them in the truth of it, who were Actors or beholders thereof. When the Lord ſent Moſes as a Saviour to Iſrael, and to Pharaoh, how did the Lord both ratifie his calling, and threates, by miraculous ſignes? So Gideon and Hezekiah; ſo the Prophets in their errands: as thoſe ſtories of the rod becomming a Serpent, the dry and wet Fleece, the rotten Girdle, the Pot with the ſcumme, and fleſh ſodden together, doe witneſſe. Not to ſpeake of thoſe many Shaddowes and Types of holy things in the worſhip of God, there being ſcarſe any one materiall thing in the whole Myſterie of Chriſt, which had not ſome one, perhaps more ſpirituall reſemblances. Yea, we ſee in the new Teſtament, how the Holy Ghoſt doth parallell many paſſages of Hiſtory to ſpirituall Myſteries; as Hagar and Sina to reſemble legall bondage, Ieruſalem, to typifie the oppoſite liberty, the water that ſupported Noahs Arke, to expreſſe Chriſt and Baptiſme: which, although I ſpeake not to equall Types and Figures to Sacraments (which are of a farre higher nature) yet generally, they ſerve to ſhew what the infirmity of our dull nature doth call for at the hands of God, to vouchſafe theſe Sacraments.

Secondly. For prevention of Idolatry.

Vnto which another reſpect may be added, to wit, prevention of will-worſhip. As the Lord gave the Iewes an earthly tabernacle, and materiall inſtruments of worſhip, warranted by his owne Will, to reſtraine the carnall part from deviſing Idoll-inventions to ſerve him by: So Sacraments ſerve in a ſort, to curbe our baſe hearts from the like errors. For, if even theſe be not ſufficient to ſtop our folly in this kinde, which will know no God, or worſhip further than we ſee him; then what would we have deviſed to our ſelves, if God had not allowed us theſe? Let the many additions of Popiſh Sacraments, and Sacramentals, Images, Idols and the Crucifixe, &c. be evident proofe hereof.

Iudg. 13. 20.

Teaching us to circumſcribe our curious and fickle hearts within Gods bounds: and ſecondly, to magnifie his proviſion in this kinde, for the releefe of our dull and ſlow hearts: yea, as Manoahs Angell aſcended in the ſmoake of the ſacrifice; ſo let us incorporate and indoctrinate our feeble mindes and ſoules into the evidence of theſe divine propps of the Sacrament. As our Saviour

ſaid to Thomas, Put thy hand into my ſide, and the print of the nailes; (he being content that his exalted eſtate ſhould admit ſuch ſcarres to convince him) ſo in this Sacrament hee ſhewes us his markes, bidding us not to bee more formall and hardned; but faithfull. The more waies the Lord ſeekes to encounter the dull conceit and the ſtupor of our underſtanding, yea the blunt edge of our affections in holy myſteries; the more naturally and familiarly he deales, that he might ſurpriſe our earthlineſſe, ſenſualitie and heavineſſe of ſpirit, ſlow to beleeve theſe heavenly things; I ſay, let us bee the more teachable and pliable to his diſcipline: Let the impreſſion of his Ordinance pierce more deepely into us, and worke a more through conqueſt of our hearts to the obedience of him. A pen of a Diamond hath tenfold that force to engrave a Figure in glaſſe or mettall than ſome ordinary toole: So when the Lord ſeekes to ſend inſtruction into us many waies at once, by all the ſences, eyes, taſte, touch, as well as by the worke of the bare word: oh! let us beware leaſt our reſiſtance of Spirit, and hardneſſe of heart, diſcourage him quite from any further dealing and treating with us! If when I teach you carnall things (ſaith our Saviour) for ſo it was his courſe to teach nothing ſave by Similitudes, Parables, and ſometimes reall objects, as by ſetting a little child before them, and waſhing and wiping their feete himſelfe, (in that leſſon of Humiliation and ſelfe-deniall) Yee underſtand not: how ſhall yee conceive heavenly? Meaning, if thoſe things which were uſed as the more cleare to expreſſe the more darke; were yet as darke to them as the things themſelves: What way ſhould be found to beate in inſtruction into ſuch dullards? Bray a foole in a morter, yet ſhall not his folly depart from him.

Prov. 27. 22.

The latter is the ſimplicitie of materials in the Sacraments. A queſtion may be asked, why the Lord ſhould appoint ſo homely, triviall, and common Elements? As we ſee water in Baptiſme is a common thing, bread and wine uſuall ordinary creatures, nothing in them ſtrange, farre off, precious or ſolemne to the ſence. Why rather choſe he not to deſcribe the price of thoſe graces, offered in the Sacraments, by ſome rare and coſtly objects? Anſwer. This indeede ſounds beſt to our ſuperſtitious and fantaſticall hearts: as to Naaman, when hee heard of Iordans waters, by and by, the better waters of Abana and Pharphar were preſented by carnall reaſon. But as God had another purpoſe to him in the healing healing of him by waters; hee meant not to magnifie the one above the other, but rather to magnifie his power and grace above them both; ſo here. More diſtinctly theſe two maine cauſes may be aſſigned for the meanenes of the Elements. 1. The generalneſſe. 2. The ſafetie of them. For the firſt, water, bread and wine are Elements, generally to bee come by and provided with eaſe. Rare is that country that wants them; now it was meet that the moſt generall materials be appointed for Sacraments, leaſt elſe the precious neſſe and difficulty of getting them, ſhould either hinder the uſe (at leaſt frequently:) for many Congregations are ſo brutiſh at this day, that they ſhun oft communions for the matter of charge) or elſe give occaſion to the curioſitie of men to deviſe diverſities of ſupplies, and ſo to bring in confuſion. But the Elements being ſo generall that ſcarce any countrey is to bee found that wants them (and if ſome odde ones ſhould, yet the uſe of rootes (ſerving for their bread) is the more pardonable, this danger is prevented. The 2. and more chiefe is, prevention of carnall worſhip, that the ordinance may bee preſerved more ſafe and entire from ſenſuality and pompe. If the Lord had appointed a feaſt of pompe and ſtate, coſtly junkets, rich attires of Prieſts to uſher and ſerve in ſome rare coſtly cates, either naturall or artificiall, as at this day the Papiſts boaſt of their brave Sacraments, and rich ſetting them forth with embroydered attires, ſumptuous Canopies, Pixes, Proceſſions, and Pageants; lo, all the glory of ſpirituall Sacraments would turne into outward pompe and oſtentation; as we ſee Ahaz more ſolicitous of the ſtate of his Altar which he offered upon, than the ſubſtance of worſhip and ſacrifice. No ſooner was poore Moſes gone out of ſight, but the Iſraelites muſt have a Calfe of gold to looke upon, to offer unto, to feaſt, and play and dance before it; this pleaſed their Idolatrous humour well. And even juſt ſo, it well pleaſeth the carnall humour of Papiſts to have ſuch places of worſhip ſo painted, and embelliſhed ſuch materials in this worſhip, as might amaze their fleſhly eyes and ſences, eate up their ſpirit and inner man, checke the life and ſavour of faith, and pleaſe a lazie and ſenſuall heart with ſhewes and ſhadowes, that they may depart as wiſe as they came. Contrarily the Lord ſtrives to provoke us to ſerve him ſpiritually; and therefore ſetteth meane objects before our ſence, to the end we may know, that there is ſome further object there for us to looke at, than the bare Elements. That ſo,

by

by how much this feast comes short of mens banquets, by so much the more the heart might not rest upon outward receiving, but seeke a supply of outward, by inward and spirituall dainties, not seene: and seeke the things that are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. Even as a father seeing his childe proud of fine clothes, makes him a sute of sackin or lether, to take down over-great delight in himselfe; so here, to cracke the pride of carnality, the Lord cloathes his Sacraments meanely; and so puls up the heart to himselfe. Its noted, Luke 22.19. That after Supper Christ tooke the Cup, &c. And why? Surely, that the body being already full, might the lesse looke after nourishment, remembring a farre greater worke was in hand. Col. 3.1. Luke 22.19.

The use is to condemne all Popish, carnall serving of God; for as much as those things which to men are glorious, are base to him. Heathens shall rise up in judgement against such, who (by that little glimpse of a God a farre off) could say, What good doth gold or pompe doe in a Church? If God bee a Spirit, give him a sound heart, a righteous life, and then small pompe may serve; great sacrificing dishes of plate are not necessary; I speake not against comely decencie in the worship of God; who is as truely a God of Order, as one that loathes carnall bravery. Vse. 1.

Secondly, the very baseneſse and poverty of the Elements, should raise us up to a spirituall view of the use they serve for, and cause us to beware that we cleave not to them. They tell us, State and Pompe is not in us: Wee onely serve to convey your hearts to God; we dare not filch away from God the glory of his intention; onely by our proprietie and separation for holy ends and Sacramentall relation, we would raise the soule upward, and carry it within the veile, to behold the Treasure of Christ in the fruits of his blood-shed. Therefore even as Peter being hungry, yet dwelt not in the Kitchin, but in the Chamber was rapt up in such a trance as presented him a sheete full of Gods provision, bidding him, Arise and eate: so should our soules be farre from dwelling upon the creatures, and arise and eate Gods Provision with an heavenly heart by faith: Behold the Sheet of God let downe from heaven, in which Christs delicates and feast upon the hills, Esay 25. is offered to us; discerne these a farre off, as an Eagle would doe a Carkasse, and sease upon this prey; lye not like a Dorre in the dunghill, onely resting in the Elements, which alone are beggerly rudiments: but the body is Christs: We use to say Vse 2. Act. 10.10,11. Luk. 17.37. Col. 2.17.

and anſwere, Miniſter and people, Lift up your hearts! We lift them up unto the Lord! Oh! that as wee have ſpoken well, ſo, there were ſuch an heart in us! That as we ſee all things in the Sacrament, drawing us from a carnall religion, and all externall pompe, as farre of as our baſe Trades and buſineſſe of the world: ſo we might be aſhamed to have our ſpirits taken up in them, while heaven is offered to us.

Thirdly, their forme.

From the matter of Sacraments, we come to their forme and inward excellency: which is nothing elſe, ſave the impreſſion of God, ſtamped upon them by his owne hand for ſpeciall ſignification and uſe. Now the whole workemanſhip of Chriſt about the forme of Sacraments may bee reduced to this double head. Two Generals here. First, Appropriation. Secondly, Vnion. The former of theſe is precedent and preparing to the latter: and its ſuch a worke, as concernes the remote ſignification of Sacraments: The latter more belongs to their exhibiting and ſealing power: but both eſſentiall to the being of a Sacrament. To begin with the firſt, Appropriation hath in it, theſe two maine acts. Firſt, Propriety to ſignifie. 2. Actuall ordaining to Sacramentall uſe. Touching the firſt; In it two things. First, propriety, The Lord in making a Sacrament, beholds the materiall Elements in their naturall aptitude and peculiar Symbolicalneſſe to expreſſe ſuch a thing. To open this, Conſider that things are ſaid to be apt and peculiar to reſemble, either by a made aptneſſe, which is not in the thing it ſelfe, but put upon it accidentally: or elſe is apt by an agreeableneſſe in it ſelfe, ſo to doe. In Latine we would thus diſtinguiſh them, [Apta facta or, Apta nata.] of the firſt ſort are all ſuch things (whether Reall or Nominall, or Notionall,) as have their ſignification from an outward conſent of them that impoſe this aptneſſe. As I know when I heare the name of London, Yorke, or Dover, what places are, and what are not ſignified and meant: Why? How comes my conceit to faſten upon ſuch a Citie by the mention of ſuch a name? Surely from no naturall aptneſſe in the names to ſignifie one Citie rather than another; but by impoſition and conſent, or cuſtome, which is as good as a naturall aptneſſe to decipher ſuch a place: men will ſo call it, therefore it prevailes to be apt to it. Of this kinde are all watch-words, Dan. 3. 5. When the noiſe of all kinde of Muſique ſounded, then was it thought a fit ſeaſon to fall downe and worſhip the Image. Why? It was ſo conſented and agreed upon. Such is not the aptneſſe here meant. A ſecond therfore is naturall, Propriety double. First, Accidentall.

Dan. 3. 5.

when

when a thing hath peculiar aptneſſe in it ſelfe to reſemble; although the things are of never ſo different kinde, yet in their kind, they concurring in one third notion; look what is in the one, doth, or may incline to deſcribe the other, even of it ſelfe. And thus a ſhaddow is apt to expreſſe ſhortneſſe or changeableneſſe of mans life: a deepe well apt to reſemble the depth of a mans heart; ſo water is apt to expreſſe a cleanſing, bread a ſtrengthning food, and wine a refreſhing of the heart. And this latter is the aptneſſe which our Saviour beholds Elements in: ſuch a peculiar aptneſſe as might alone carrie the minde of the beholder to that which is ſignified. And hence is that of Auſtin, Except Sacramentall ſignes had a Symbolicalneſſe with the things they repreſent, they could be no Sacraments; meaning, they could not be ſo apt to reſemble. For howſoever the Lord might by his power have made any ſigne to become a Reſemblance, and that becauſe he ſo pleaſed; yet, ſeeing in this he ſought not the declaring of what he could doe, but of that which is beſt for the convincement of diſtruſt, and dulneſſe of our nature, hee rather choſe ſuch Elements as might out of their owne congruity, reſemble things ſpirituall. Appropriation then requires a naturall aptneſſe to reſemble.

Secondly, naturall.

Sacramentall matter is apt naturally.

The latter and maine peece of Appropriation, is divine, and peculiar application, not onely in generall to ſerve for holy uſe, but in ſpeciall to note out, typifie, and deſcribe to the ſoule the Lord Ieſus Sacramentall, for breeding and confirming the ſoule in grace. Now this is a further thing than the former; determining the propriety of the creature and the fitneſſe thereof to reſemble, unto this ſpeciall reſembling of Chriſt Crucified, in his waſhing qualitie, and his nouriſhing propertie. Although there were never ſuch aptneſſe in a creature to doe thus in it ſelfe, yet it hath nothing to doe to meddle with a Sacrament, except the Lord doe ſpecially appropriate it to ſerve for ſuch a purpoſe, and then it begins to have in it a Sacramentall proportion, and power to raiſe the ſoule from earth to heaven, whereas elſe it ſelfe being earthly, it were more likely to naile downe the heart to it ſelfe and to earthly thoughts and affections; But ſo potent is the worke of the Ordainer, who hath put this peculiar property into it, that although it be but a creature, yet it carries the ſoule from earth to heaven, in a moſt familiar manner. And marke, how this ſtands in the power of the Word. We know that the common bleſſing

Secondly, application of Elements by divine inſtitution.

Proofe of it.

of the creature to feede and cheriſh the body, comes from the Word: Man not living by bread, but by the Word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. How much more then muſt the vertue of the Ordinance come from God to make this carnall nouriſhing creature to bee a ſpirituall nouriſher? Hence it is that Auſtin ſaith, Accedat verbum, &c. Let the Word come to the Element, and there is a Sacrament. This Sacramentalneſſe of the Elements, ſtandes in a word.

Illuſtration of it. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Gen. 1. 3.

God that ſaid, Let light ſhine out of darkeneſſe; Let there be day, night; Let the earth bring forth fruits, graſſe, &c. effected it with a breath: ſo the word of Ordinance; Let Bread and Wine be repreſenters of the body and bloud, the merit and efficacie of Chriſt Crucified, to repleniſh the ſoules of the faithfull; hath cauſed theſe Elements for ever to have ſuch power to repreſent theſe things; ſo that no age or time ſhall ever prevaile to weare out this Impreſſion; yea, and not onely to repreſent them in their kinde, but alſo in their fulneſſe. So that as it was one charge concerning the Paſchall Lambe, that he muſt be wholly eaten or burnt: ſo by this Appropriation the Sacramentall ſignes doe reſemble fully, as well as properly. And as in the compound of Bread and Wine, there is not onely a ſupply of drie, but alſo of moiſt nouriſhment, that ſo both hunger and thirſt may be ſatisfied, and the body both made ſtrong, and cheerefull to ſervice: ſo by the Ordinance, theſe ſignes convey Chriſt in his Sacramentall fulneſſe of nouriſhment, ſo that nothing is lacking to the ſoule which Chriſt can ſupply it with, if it beleeve.

Reaſon of it.

Now to returne, take away this third act of Chriſts Word and inſtitution, giving this peculiar power to the ſignes to reſemble the ends of the Sacrament: Tell me, what is there in the word, which hath in it an aptneſſe to reſemble, but might bee a Sacrament? Whereas now we ſee not aptneſſe, but Approbation of Gods word, determining ſuch an apt thing to ſuch an apt uſe, is the very life, bloud, & marrow, of a Sacrament. There is no doubt, but as the Scripture teacheth, a Chriſtian wiſe man will picke out holineſſe out of each reſemblance; an houſewife that is godly, will not boult out her flower from the bran, but her heart will carrie her to our Saviours words, Satan hath deſired to winnow you, &c. An Husbandman will not uſe his Fanne or Floore to dreſſe or caſt his corne in, but he will muſe of that finall ſeparation of the droſſe from the Wheate. But there is great oddes be-

tweene a voluntary act of our owne devotion, and an obedience to a Sacramentall charge. As the Text ſaith, Luke 4. There were many Leapers in Eliſha's time, and many Widdowes, but not many to whom he was ſent: So the world, yea, the word is full of reſemblances, but not of ſuch as Chriſt hath ſet his ſtampe upon to be Sacramentall. The ſetting of a young childe before the Diſciples, and the waſhing of their feete with his owne hands, were Chriſt acts (ſtill at this day apiſhly followed by the Pope) but neither appointed to be Sacramentall: but onely naturall reſemblances (to an holy heart which hath a gift to make uſe thereof) of a ſpirituall grace of humility. Appropriation then eſpecially ſtands in this determining of the Elements to ſuch an uſe by the Word and Ordinance. Luke 4.27.

Ere we proceede, this firſt point may be of ſpeciall uſe. 1. To bleſſe the Lord as for the releeſe of our dulneſſe by outward Elements, ſo eſpecially for the aptneſſe thereof, chuſing ſuch as (without any more adoe) might eaſily acquaint us with ſuch holy things; of which before. And to teach us to beg of his Majeſtie heavenly hearts, which might bee capable of his meaning herein. Vſe. 1.

Secondly, this muſt keepe us within holy bounds, as concerning our deviſing and ſetting up to our ſelves; reſemblances of holy things: as Crucifixes, and the Image of the bleſſed humility of Chriſt, to behold and worſhip. Who allowed us theſe? The Sacraments ſerve as a Superſedeas from all ſuch inventions. All Popiſh raſh of forged Sacraments here falls to ground. Vſe 2.

Laſtly, let us learne to familiarize with Gods Sacraments in the point of the inſtitution of reſembling the Lord Ieſus. Let us not be dull and blockiſh in appropriating them to their uſe, but learne ſtill to climb up by them to heaven. If thy mind be at York, inſtantly at the naming of the City, when yet the body is an 100. miles diſtant: and no ſooner doth a woman heare her husbands name, but ſhe is preſent with him (though he be in a far Country) by the velocity and ſpeed of the apprehenſion, ſtirred up by ſuch a relation: Oh! how dull and ſlow of heart are they who in the midſt, not of artificiall, humane or naturall, but divine appropriations, are ſo carnall and heavie, that ſcarſely the Sacrament will ingender one lively repreſentation of the Lord Ieſus, to nouriſh us and cheere us? But as we come, ſo we ſit, and ſo depart, as ſtrangers and idiots, as if Chriſt and we were divided as far as heaven and earth. Vſe 3.

2 Cauſes of our dulneſſe herein.

The cauſes of which are theſe, either that weē are not thoſe new creatures in whom God hath renewed the powers of underſtanding and affection; and therefore want the diſcourſe and the ſpirit of relation: in a word, want the operation of a new Creature, which is faith ſtirring the ſoule to a lively meditation of Chriſt, by the Word, the Ordinance, and promiſe of God: (and then what wonder if Sacraments which ſhould be the moſt active meanes, become all a-mort, dead, and dumbe with us, and we being held and taken in all our limbes at once, like numb-palſie-ones, can neither ſtirre hand or foote towards Chriſt!) or elſe we abuſe the gift of faith and the power of the new creature, by diſabling our ſelves and diſinuring our ſoules from this worke, and diſguiſing that Image of God in us (which ſerves to carry us to God) by ſetting it upon traſh, world, profit, pleaſure, eaſe and ſenſuality till it ſeeme tedious unto us to ſet it upon holy thoughts in the Sacrament. To prevent this, it were good counſell to trade or ſpirits to heavenly things even by earthly occaſions, as well without as within the Sacraments. He ſhall not finde his ſpirits ſo flat, and lazie in meeting with Sacramentall Chriſt, who inures his dead heart dayly to an holy nimbleneſſe in comparing earthly things with heavenly. He that cannot ſee a Piſmire but he will thinke of providence: not a gariſh harlot dreſſing her ſelfe for an adulterous wretch, but will taxe himſelfe, for his leſſe loving Chriſt: ſhe that cannot lay a leaven, but thinkes of the kingdome of Chriſt: and in a word, hath a gift to be heavenly, and to turne ordinary properties of the creature or common occaſions, to holy meditation: he ſhall not have his heart in another world, when the Lord preſents unto him the Lord Ieſus, by Sacramentall reſemblances. And thus much for the firſt.

Caveat thereto.

Prov. 9. 6.

Math. 13. 33.

The ſecond part of the forme of Sacraments; is Vnion. Which yet comes neerer than the former, as more cloſely conveying and exhibiting the Lord Ieſus to the ſoule. Yet, we muſt know the former makes way to this; the aptneſſe and ſpeciall application of ſignes to this uſe, helpes much the minde to conceive; but this is the more immediate object of faith to faſten upon Chriſt, that the Sacraments are no longer the bread of the Lord, but bread the Lord, wine the Lord, and water the Lord. And this Sacramentall union is an act of Gods ordaining Spirit and Authority, by vertue whereof the Lord Ieſus, in all his merits and efficacie is not onely reſembled and preſented by apt likeneſſe

to

to the minde, but really made one with the Elements, that by them and with them he might be carried into the ſoule inſeparably for aſſurance of Vnion and Communion with God. Hence it is that the Scripture ſpeakes in ſuch a phraſe, This is my body, This is my blood of the New Teſtament: yea in the Old Teſtament, Chriſt is our Paſſeover. The Rocke was Chriſt, I am that Manna which deſcended, &c. All which phraſes denote a realneſſe and union with the Elements, true and unfaigned. And indeede all divine unions are Reall: although they differ in their ſeverall kindes; yet by vertue of the Ordinance and the power of him that hath ſo made them, they are no ſhaddowes of emptie things, no dumbe Pageants, as we may ſee in other unions. There is an intellectuall union in nature betweene the minde and the object; in which reſpect we ſay, the minde is all things, meaning in and by this comprehenſion and union. The object and the minde are one by vertue of this power of God in the ſoule, not becauſe they are ſubſtantially one, but notionally. Yet this notion is realneſſe in her kinde. Man and Wife are one fleſh, no more two but one: how? by vertue of divine inſtitution: this union is reall and true, yet not meerely Phyſicall and natural oneneſſe, but in the kinde of it, a matrimoniall union. The like may be ſaid of all civill unions of the family; which by vertue of the Ordinance of God aſſiſted by law and order, become bodies united. I doe not allude to theſe as if they did hold in all points: but for two cauſes. Firſt, to ſhew the power of divine Ordinance to unite and make things one. Secondly, to ſhew that the diſproportion of the natures of things united, either for kinde or diſtance, is no let to realneſſe of union: in a word, its the Ordinance of Chriſt, which hath an indeleble and irreverſible power of the conjoyning of the Lord Ieſus to the Elements, in a reall and Sacramentall kinde (ſo farre as ſerves the turne) not to ſubject Chriſt to a baſe creature, but to ſubject the creature in her property to be a cloſe and neere uniter of the ſoule with Chriſt, to whom elſe (through the incapableneſſe of fleſh) it could not ſo eaſily have beene knit, and made one withall.

Luke 22.16. 1 Cor. 5.9. Iohn 6.32.

All unions reall.

Sorts of them.

This point will the better appeare, if we goe a little further, and ſhew that even the greateſt and deepeſt unions that are, ſerve to make way for the union and communion of the ſoule with her firſt originall, hereafter in glory, and here in grace. The very perſonall union of the Trinity, how ſhould it be better conceived than by the myſtery of redemption? wherein God could not poſ-

All unions ſerve to make God and the ſoule one.

ſibly have ſatisfied God, nor man be brought and united to God, except there had beene a perſonall union, that is, a ſameneſſe of deity in the differing of perſons. The like is true in the union of Chriſts Godhead with the nature and fleſh of man: why was it, but to ſerve Gods holy purpoſe to reconcile and unite fleſh to God by the perſon of Emanuel? So alſo, that ſpirituall union of the whole body and ſoule of a beleever with Chriſt, why is it, but to prepare it for eternall union with him? The union (or communion rather) of the members of Chriſt into one body and being, to what ſerves it but that the whole Church may be one with Chriſt and her head, that by him ſhe might be one with God himſelfe, who ſhall be all in all in glory, wholly poſſeſſing and poſſeſſed? So alſo wonder not if this inferior union of Sacraments, be ſo real and cloſe: ſeeing its cleare, the Lord in this, condeſcending ſo low to the capacity of man, unites himſelfe no otherwiſe to the Elements; than that in and by them as channels of conveyance, he might (when and where he ſees it good to uſe them) derive himſelfe into the poore beleeving ſoule in a fuller aſſurance of Communion with her? So that our Saviour ſaith, Mervaile not that I ſay unto you, Hee that eates and drinkes my fleſh and blood, ſhall abide in me, and live for ever. To man ſuch a union is impoſſible betweene a creature and the Creator, betweene baſeneſſe and glory: But it is the Word and Ordinance that cauſeth it; and which hath ſetled this Sacramentall union indiſſolubly, that our ſoules might fare much the better, and the union of the ſoule with Chriſt himſelfe might be more familiarly conceived.

To adde ſomewhat for the better opening of this union, let us firſt underſtand what it muſt be, and then what it cannot be. Firſt, of neceſſitie it muſt be ſuch an union, as the nature of the things united will admit. Then ſecondly, ſuch as the ends of a Sacrament will ſuffer. For the former: The nature of the things united will not admit either a locall or a Phyſicall union: They will and may admit a ſpirituall one. Firſt, not a locall: viz. That as the Bread and Wine are locally preſent, ſo that the Body and Blood of the Lord Ieſus be alſo locally preſent; this I ſay the nature of the Lord Ieſus his Body will not admit: For although it be a glorified body, yet it is a true naturall body, and therefore limited, and ſo cannot Conſubſtantiate with the Elements in all places, where they at one and the ſame inſtant, are preſent to the ſence of the Receiver. Which confutes the Lutheran error, of locall Preſence, as if of neceſſity there muſt be a corporall Preſence, or elſe thoſe words [This is my body] cannot be verified: No, we deny it it, becauſe it reſiſts the nature of the things united and preſent. Secondly, neither will their nature admit a phyſicall Preſence or union; that is, ſuch an union as by which the proper formes and beings of the things united are loſt, and become under a new forme of mixture or compoſition. For the Natures of Chriſt and the Bread are incompatiable in point of mixture or compounding, becauſe the one is a ſpirituall, the other a corporall thing, which admit no ſuch mixture as corporall things of like nature doe, as wine and water. So then if this union be not mixt, it is much leſſe Tranſubſtantiate: for in that the one doth not mixe with, but evacuate and diſanull the other, leaving nothing of ſubſtance behinde.

But, the nature of theſe Elements admit a ſpirituall union: nothing hinders why the things which are furtheſt diſtant or remote in place, may not yet be preſent in truth and realneſſe: for the ſound of a Canon- ot 40. miles off from my eare, yet is preſent by the meane of the ayre bringing it home to me: and the body of the Sunne, of light and warmth diſtant farre from me, yet by the ayre which carryeth the beames of it, is preſent and made one with my bodily touch and feeling. And againe, nothing hinders why two things phyſically disjoyned, may not yet ſpiritually be one, and joyned together, by vertue of the power of the ordainer. In a word, the Nature of the things united will admit a reall union, although no corporall union, either locall or mixt, and much leſſe tranſubſtantiall: therefore the things united in the Sacraments are onely ſpiritually and really united.

2. What they will admit, viz. ſpirituall union.

Secondly, the union of a Sacrament muſt bee ſuch as the ſcope and end of a Sacrament will ſuffer and no other. But the end and purpoſe of a Sacrament cannot admit anyother union betwixt the ſignes and things ſignified, ſave ſpiritually reall. For then muſt we deſtroy the ſcope of a Sacrament in a double reſpect. 1. Of relation; for except there be maintained in the Sacrament diſtinctneſſe of termes, and relation of one to another: ſo that a bodily thing may ſignifie and intimate a ſpirituall: and a ſpirituall be repreſented by a carnall, yet each diſtinct in their nature: the Sacramentalneſſe periſhes; ſimbalicalneſſe and reſemblance being wholly extinct by mixture and confuſion of things united. Then ſecondly of materialnes. For if we admit ſuch an union as it is tranſubſtantiate (which indeed is no union of two in one, but an excluding and ſwallowſwallowing up of one by another) what ſhall remaine of the Elements behind? If they anſwer the accidents of them. (This being premiſed that its impoſſible accidents can ſubſiſt without their ſubject) I anſwere, meereneſſe of accidents take away materialneſſe or corporalneſſe, and therefore diſanull as much the ſubſtance of a Sacrament, as if we ſhould hold that the Elements could ſwallow up the things ſignified. But ſecondly, the end of a Sacrament will eaſily admit ſuch an union of things, as whereby the Lord Ieſus and all his good things may bee conveyed to the ſoule really, and this being as much as a Sacrament ſerves for, and concurring equally and fully with the ſcope and purpoſe of it, whatſoever is more, is ſuperfluous. And therefore reſiſting that end, muſt needs be a falſe and erronious union, not from God.

Vſe 3. The uſe of this whole doctrine is manifold. It is firſt inſtruction to teach us what muſt diſcerne and judge of this Sacramentall union; what nature it is of: Surely not Popery, not fleſh and blood: Rom. 8. 1 Cor. 2. for they being deſtitute of the Spirit of this union, cannot comprehend it: Its a Riddle which only he can conceive who plougheth with the Lords Heifer, which onely conceives it. Carnall men cannot judge of ſpirituall things, becauſe ſpiritually diſcerned. If we would know either what this union is not, to wit, Popiſh, and carnall, and locall: or what it is, to wit, reall yet ſpirituall: then judg what either the nature of the things united, or the ſcope of a Sacrament will admit; and there reſt, goe no further. If then it ſeeme ſtrange how a thing may be as truely reall ſpiritually, as carnally: ſeeke the Spirit of God who is the knitter of this knot, and that will teach thee, that the power of the Word which appointed light to be, and it was, and the evening and morning to be a day, and it was, and man to be, and he was: did alſo ordaine the Body and Blood of Chriſt to be really one with the Elements without locallneſſe, or mixture, and therefore ſo they are.

Vſe 2. Secondly, looke what difference there is in the things united, in the point of their Sacramentall union; the ſame difference and diſtance muſt be obſerved by the Communicants in point of partaking them: To wit, that ſtill the ſeverall nature of theſe things be preſerved entire: and yet by the one carnall thing, the other which is ſpirituall be bettered and enlarged. Touching the firſt, the ſoule, the ſpirit, the faith of the receiver, looke at the Spirit of the Sacrament, the Lord Ieſus crucified: The hand, the eye, the mouth of the Receiver, looke at the Elements only: Do not think then

then that the carnall part can meddle with the ſpirituall, nor the ſpirituall with the carnall (as it is ſo,) but the outward man, ſees, touches, taſts and digeſts the outward: the ſpirituall beholds, taſts, and enjoyes the ſpirituall, each muſt keepe his owne bounds. If I would diſcerne an outward thing in the Sacrament, I muſt uſe my ſence, my touch, my taſte: and if theſe convince it to be carnall, ſo it is: Againe if I would diſcerne a ſpirituall thing there, I muſt conſult with my inner man and the inner ſence of faith, and thereby I muſt pronounce an inner thing to be preſent: If I want eyes and ſence, I can perceive no outward thing. If I want faith in my ſoule, I can perceive no ſpirituall thing: each thing or object muſt be perceived by the proper inſtrument belonging to it.

To the end I may perceive there be true materials in the Sacrament, and not onely bare accidents without a ſubſtance, the outward ſenſe is tryall ſufficient: ſight, touch, and taſte, will not eaſily erre about their owne objects, as our Saviour tells his Diſciples, Looke upon and handle me, for a ſpirit hath no object of touch, fleſh, blood, and bones, as ye ſee me have. Againe, if the queſtion be of a ſpirituall being or body, and blood of Chriſt: let ſenſe and teeth goe, there faith and the Spirit of Chriſt muſt convince it; if that feele the beames, warmth, and ſee the light, and taſte the influence iſſuing therefrom: then certainely they are there; for the Spirit cannot be deceived about her owne object. Onely this I adde. Neither of theſe can be ſevered from other: for by the externall, the Lord hath appointed to convey the ſpirituall, and not without them; and in that relation of each to other, even the meaneſt ought to be honoured; and the outward ſenſe ought to be ſo buſied about the objects of ſence, as thereby to helpe, ſuccour, and ſtrengthen the weakeneſſe of faith in the object, that is, ſpirituall. More of this in the Act of Receiving. Luke 24.39.

Thirdly therefore, this Doctrine of Sacramentall Vnion confutes this Dotage of Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation. The Papiſts, not content with the union we ſpeake off, caſt oyle into the flame, and maintaine a converſion, and confuſion of Chriſt and the Elements by a corporall preſence and realneſſe. And, as one once demanded by Boner, whether Chriſt was not blood and bone in the Sacrament: made him a merry anſwere (let me ſo diſgrace Popery, that yet I may ſpeake with reverence) yes my Lord, I thinke not ſo onely, but that there he is boots and ſpurres and all. Meaning, that ſuch is Popiſh exceſſe and ridiculouſneſſe in this, Vſe 3.

that that it deserves to be esteemed in the Church as a laughing stock. And sure it is, (as themselves also say) they receive not from God a Sacrament of Vnion, but offer up to him a sacrifice of their own for propitiation) I say the Papists by this foppery under colour of magnifying the Sacrament doe quite destroy it. Marke then what I said before: Vnion still must be conceived according to her kind, not corporall, but mysticall and by Ordinance. As then its a truth, except the Elements and the Lord Iesus were one, no bad receiver could be guilty of eating his owne condemnation: so yet, if this union be conceived as transubstantiall, it is impossible it should be Sacramentall. For Sacramentall union still is symbolicall, which its impossible to conceive in things changed into a naturall sameness and substance. As wee know, in common speech we say, No like thing is the same, because a like thing is like to another. Identity then in Christ and the Elements disanuls Sacramentall union, and therefore the Sacrament it selfe.

ow Popish rors grew.

This error of theirs as it came from the forge of carnall reason first, and the savor of the Kitchin, so it received varnish from the erronious conceiving of Scriptures and Fathers expressing Sacramentall union. As, when our Savionr saith, This is my body, and Paul. The bread we breake, is it not the Communion of the body of Christ? from which and the like places they presently cry out, Loe yee: the bread is his body. So when the Fathers (especially those who were the greatest Orators) doe hyperbolize in the praise of the Sacrament, calling it the bread of life, and an ineffable union, and that after consecration, the bread by the omnipotency of the Word is made flesh, &c. they abuse the scope of the Fathers, (which to themselves was good) because although they meant no other but to magnifie Sacramentall union, yet the excesse of their speech occasions the errour of corporall union to prevaile. Let us loathe their Idolatry and superstition.

Fourthly, it should teach, Gods people, never to cease magnifying the love of God, who hath refused no course, neglected no meane, which possibly might make for the communicating of himselfe to lost man both in union and fellowship; and seeing his word through our infidelity could not sufficiently satisfie your scrupulous and doubtfull mindes touching the realnesse of his faithfull meaning towards us; hath not onely stooped to be in our flesh as a man, but to tye himselfe to base creatures, that so hee might familiarize with our soules more nearely, and make us one with himselfe: so that the meate and drinke wee receive, is not made our substance of flesh more really than the Lord Iesus is made the substance of our spirituall nourishment: Oh! I say how should his love (shewed upon so hard conditions) not only ravish us, but also prevaile with us for those ends which it serves for? how should our soules study for union with him, influence from him, to become like him? How should we strive to attaine the perfection of that happinesse which Adam lost? and recover it in a farre fuller and nearer union with Christ, and by him, with the Lord? Oh! this is the scope which all unions (and especiall this Sacramentall) have to unrivet us from base unions and fellowships with things below, that so we might settle our hearts upon him, whom to know and beleeve to be our God reconciled, is happinesse: and to be united to his natures, in one mysticall being of holinesse, is above all earthly fading comforts. Oh! hath the Lord joyned himselfe to the creatures, that we not resting in them, might by them bee carried to him in whom true rest and peace is to be had? How should we despise to be one with money, with pleasure, with a mans acceptance, with other carnall objects and say, since I came to see the excellent union of the soule with God in Christ, I see nothing below but seemes base to mee, and such as I am loth to unite and give over my selfe to it, to be a servant to it, to be possessed by it, or to possesse it: I will use all other things, and enjoy the Lord. None of his good things, can be made mine without union: therefore as I seeke them and the increase of them in the Sacrament, so I will especially seeke union, and make much of the Sacrament for the purchasing of it.

Fiftly and especially, how doth this point presse the necessity of faith upon us, in the use of that Sacrament? Only faith is able to discerne the Lords body in this Sacramentall union: and (as by the former point to make us partakers of the divine nature) so by this, to strengthen the soule in the increase of communion, by the Sacrament. Let it be double exhortation then to all beleevers, both to discerne and to apply the Lord Iesus Sacramentall. For the first, Turne we all our cavilling and carnall reasoning (which is endlesse (for carnality comprehends not mysteries) into a quietnesse and stilnesse of beleeving: forsake the swift rowling torrent of never satisfied sence, and embrace the softly and still streame of Siloam; cut all knots in two by the Ordinance, and thereby determine all endles reasonings of Popish curiosity: spend that time in admiring this myſtery, and in longing to be partaker of that which is by it reſembled, I meane union of thy ſoule with Chriſt. If this be ſo myſticall, how excellent is that to enjoy by faith? Oh! Till union be made, nothing is thine. Behold not with a carnall eye, ſay not with thoſe Iewes, how will he give us his John 8.22. fleſh? Will he kill himſelfe? If reaſon may prevaile, the Sacrament (ſetting aſide a little blinde devotion) will diſcover no more Chriſt to the ſoule, than bread and wine in a Celler: Its the power of God uniting Chriſt, regeneration and nouriſhment to the ſoule; not a few qualities of Chriſt, but whole Chriſt to the whole man: And the Sacraments obey him herein: repreſenting whatſoever he hath united to them: No devill, no inſtrument of his, no Pope can ſever theſe two each from other: The Sacrament they may quite deſtroy, but this union they cannot take from the Sacrament. The ſpirit of the Ordinance it is, which makes it abide ſo irrepealeable. Doe not then ſever thoſe things by unbeleefe which the Ordinance hath put ſo cloſe together: wander not, deſcant not, goe not into heaven, nor downe to hell with a Rom.10.15. 16. Papiſt to conſult and aske, How ſhould this be? But know, the word is neere thee, in thy eare, yea hand, eye, taſte: the vertue of the Ordinance makes whole Chriſt as neere the Elements, as the qualitie of cleanſing and feeling are neere them. Deſtroy the one and deſtroy the other: If the one be naturall, the other is ſpirituall, and from an higher union: if it be againſt ſenſe to divide the one, its ſacriledge to ſever the other. True it is, the things thus united are farre diſtant in place; but yet the power of the eternall Ordinance can eaſily unite them. And ſhall not the gift of faith unite the ſoule to the Lord Ieſus by theſe Elements as well as the ordinance for ever unites the Lord Ieſus & the Elements? Beware then leaſt we ſever what God hath united! It is not the farreneſſe off of a thing in place which can hinder union; The Lord Ieſus his body in the grave loſt not union with the divinity by the diſtance of the ſoule in Paradiſe: becauſe the relation was indiſſoluble: the vertue of Chriſt crucified is united to the ſoule; if it beleeve, although his body keepe his place in heaven. Faith in this kinde is not unlike to the hand of the Marriner in ſounding the depth of the ſea: His hand cannot touch or fadome it; but by vertue of the line and plummet which he lets down and holds in his hand, hee feeles the bottome, and gapes the depth, be it never ſo remote. So the hand of faith holding the cord and plummet of the word and promiſe, feeles a bottome of Truth and unites it ſelfe to Chriſt. For the ſecond, from this diſcerning power goe to the applying; get this grace of faith to unite Chriſt Sacramentall unto thy ſoule: Say thus, Are, water, bread, wine, inſeparable from Chriſt? Why ſo? Doth God care for Oxen (as Paul ſaith) or careth he to be one with bread and wine? Are theſe the ſubjects of his delight, poore, baſe, corruptible Elements? No, no, thoſe lively Temples of our ſoules, and ſpirits of juſt beleeving ones, are the places of his delight: Oh! then ſay ſo, Lord, this union ſerves for a better, that thou and thy ſoule be one by the convey of the Sacrament, that I might eate, drinke, enjoy thee! Oh lift up thy head my doore, be thou lifted up in me, oh eternall gate of my ſoule; that the King of glory may come in. Let faith unbolt and ſet you wide open, that Chriſt may enter and take you up for his habitation, and be your head as the husband is the wives to procure her all good, as a Prince is his government, as a Maſter in his Family, nay, as the ſoule is in the body, Iohn 17. ult. to act, rule, frame, purge them, to increaſe the power of faith in adoption, reconciliation: to enlarge the graces of his ſpirit, love, meekneſſe, patience, thankfulneſſe: to fill the conſcience with joy, hope, peace: to cauſe theſe to flow out of the belly of the ſoule, as waters of life, unto eternall life: yea, not onely better hearers, worſhippers of God: but more wiſe to rule, more faithfull to obey, righteous in buying, ſelling, exemplary in our Chriſtian practiſe, harmeleſſe, upright, ſober; to purge us of our wrath, uncharitableneſſe, unmercifulneſſe, unprofitableneſſe, that the Lord Ieſus Sacramentall, in the ſpirit of him, may become more lively, powerfull and fruitfull in us. Oh! pray, and give the Lord no reſt till he have bred faith in thee to theſe ends.

that:

And to conclude, if the poore creatures thus hold their union with Chriſt, and thou by unbeleefe remaineſt deſtitute of him, know theſe dumbe Elements ſhall one day riſe up in judgement againſt thee, and condemne thee: for they have kept their union which is but ſubordinate and ſerving to a better end. But thou haſt rejected thy union ſpirituall with Chriſt, in the increaſe of his graces. Oh wrech! In naturall things and in vicious things, thou art ripe and quicke enough to apprehend, yea more than thou oughteſt. which affords thee ſuch a Rent and Revenue, offer it ſelfe to thee: no ſooner doth the name of the harlot whom thou haſt conſorted with; the glaſſe in which thou canſt reflect thy owne face upon thine eyes, ſtand before thee: but inſtantly thou feeleſt an union with thoſe luſts which thoſe names and notions preſent to thee: thy ſpirit ſavours drunkenneſſe, covetouſneſſe, uncleaneneſſe, and pride: onely the Sacraments are offered to thine eye by the Lord, in which Chriſt is nominated, nay actually exhibited, and united: and here the union is ſo ſtrange a thing from thee, that any other baſe object will ſooner offer it ſelfe alone without any other occaſion, than the leaſt apprehenſion of Sacramentall Chriſt come into thy thoughts or affections, either to beleeve in, love, joy in, or much leſſe to be knit unto, and made one with: that all his excellency and grace might be thine, and that fatneſſe and ſweetneſſe of his might be conveyed by faith into thy ſoule. How ſhalt thou be able to anſwere this ſenſuality and eſtrangment of ſpirit from the Lord Ieſus? Iuſtly may the curſe light upon thee, which Paul pronounceth upon all ſuch as love not the Lord Ieſus. Thus much for the forme of a Sacrament be alſo ſpoken.

1 Cor. 16. 22.

The 4. is the end twofold, primary or ſecondarily.

I proceede to the laſt generall in the definition, which is the end of a Sacrament. And that is double, either concerning us from God, or God from us. Both (as I noted) are the ſcope of a Sacrament. The reaſon whereof is, becauſe the Sacrament intends full as much, and neither more nor leſſe, than the Covenant doth: (I meane the Covenant of grace) But the Covenant of grace is reciprocall: That God be our God, and wee bee his people, that God be our God al-ſufficient, and wee walke uprightly before him. I doe not meane by reciprocalneſſe, any equality in working: as if our obeying, or uprightneſſe could worke God to be ours, as his being ours, workes us to be upright. But that indifferently the one as well as the other part and condition is interchangeably requiſite on our parts, as well as the Lords. As then the ſeale of the Covenant aſſures the one, ſo muſt it the other: it muſt ſecure the Lord of our upright walking, as well as us, of his being our God: both muſt needs goe together. Yet I meane not that the Sacraments doe equally ſeale up both: for Gods ſealing grace to us is ſtrong, our ſealing backe to him of duty, is weake: the Sacrament is the Lords, and therefore principally aimes at our good: yet I ſay God lookes for it that the ſame meſſenger of his unchangeable love to us revived at the Sacrament, ſhould carry backe backe to him our revived Covenant of upright walking. The Lord ſo comes to his oath and ſeale for our ſecurity, that he looks we alſo come to the oath of Covenant with him: he will not be tied, and we be looſe. Firſt then of the former of theſe two ends, Gods end concerning us.

Touching which, let us conceive what God covenanteth, and ſo wee ſhall ſee what the Sacraments doe aſſure. Touching this point, of the offer and Covenant of God, I have elſewhere largely ſpoken, therefore I doe here referre my Reader to that diſcourſe, to ſpare a labour. Onely thus much in a word; when Adam had loſt his integrity by diſanulling the Covenant of creation; the Lord had it in his boſome, what he would doe with all his poſterity: if hee had quite deſtroyed them all, it had beene but juſt: In this demurre, grace caſt the ſkole, and brought him (out of his meere good pleaſure) to purpoſe to recover a Remnant out of their ruine. And as he meant this within himſelfe, ſo he thought it meete, to expreſſe ſo much to us, not by including ſome, and excluding others, but by a free unconditionall offer of grace (in reſpect of any thing in man) to covenant with him to be his God, and to become propitious and favorable againe unto him, as if hee never had beene offended. This covenant he eſtabliſhes with us in the bloud of his Sonnes ſatisfaction: requiring of us, to beleeve that thereby his Majeſty is reconciled with us, and that therefore we be reconciled to him: This hee urges us to beleeve nakedly, upon his bare word and covenant, and that we ſeeke no ſtarting holes: but ſet too our ſeale, that he meanes no leſſe than his words import, for his Sonnes ſake, that hee will bee our God and forgive us. Now there is weight in the promiſe alone, ſufficient to overprize our infidelity: But ſuch is the baſeneſſe of ſpirit in us, being diſabled by our fall, that neither can our feebleneſſe reach it, or remember and repreſent it to us in due ſort: and much leſſe our guilty, ſlaviſh and treacherous hearts (which muſe as they uſe, and thinke God like themſelves, to hate them whom they have hurt) can beleeve it.

What God covenanteth.

Practic. Catech. Part. 2. Article. 3.

Here the Lord not content with the bare offer and Covenant of grace in Chriſt: rather than hee would leave any (who is not wilfully an enemy and hating reconciliation) unconvinced of his unfeignedneſſe of meaning to doe as hee ſpeakes, condeſcends ſo low, as to ſtoope to our weake, forgetfull and baſe hearts: and therefore comes (as the author of the Hebrewes speakes Chapter 6. 17, 18.) to joyne an oath to his Covenant; That by two things in which it was impossible for God to lie, wee might have strong consolation in our taking refuge, upon pursuit of our conscience, Satan, or any enemies. Now what is the oath of God in the Gospel? Surely no other save his seales, that is, his Sacraments (which I take to bee no small cause why the Fathers devised the name of a Sacrament, that is, an oath.) This oath or seale (call it as you will) must be that uttermost security which the Lord can or will reach us forth in his Gospel, to take away our distrust and slavery; That as among men in the greatest controversies, an oath is beyond all expectation able to decide the doubt: so in this matter of Gods open and hearty meaning in his Covenant, if the soule question it, hee desires that his oath might put an end to our unbeleefe. The Lord (to speake with reverence) taking a kinde of corporall oath in the Sacrament: I take these Sacramentall Elements united to the crucified flesh of my Sonne to witnesse: that as surely as nothing can sever from the one, a cleansing, feeding, cherishing quality to the bodies of the creature to whom my word hath so appointed them; so, nothing shall separate the quickning, comforting, and refreshing qualitie of my Sonnes satisfaction, (that is, my love and grace) from the soules of them, whom I have ordained it unto; I sweare and vow, my Sonne is theirs, as truely as the bread they eate, and the wine they drinke.

Heb. 6. 17, 18.

Three ends of them.

Let us then collect out of this that hath beene said, a threefold end of Sacraments; 1. To be Glasses. 2. Memorialls. 3. Pledges and that of best assurance (if oath and seale be sufficient) of the true meaning of God to the soule in bidding it to bee reconciled.

1. To be glasses.

The last of these three is the chiefe, yet there is use of the former two. Of which seeing partly I have spoken, and partly shall speake, therefore here the lesse. Touching the first, then; that Sacraments are as Glasses to the soule; I spake before in that point of the matter of Sacraments: noting that the Lord chuseth things of most ordinary familiarnesse, to helpe the feebleneſse and carnality of our minds. And in the like respect, the Lord hath given them, to this end, that they might be looking glasses: that as in them each part of the face may bee cleerely discerned; so in this mirror of the Sacrament (for that of Paul is as proper to the Sacrament as to the promise, 2 Cor. 3. vlt. that with open face wee

2 Cor. 3. ult.

behold

behold the Lord) wee may fullier diſcerne the very letters of the Covenant, which before ſeemed dim. Spectacles (we ſee) are of uſe to cauſe a weake eye to ſee clearely, by multiplying and inlarging the character or object. And the perſpective glaſſe will ſo extend the object a farre off, that a man may perceive (a two or three miles diſtant) a little cottage under a darke wood ſide with all the proportion of it, not a doore, wall, or window of it excepted. Even ſo it is here. The Sacraments are glaſſes, yea perſpectives, which diſcover to the dim eye of the ſoule, all that fulneſſe of Chriſt, which the onely promiſe could not: yea its as a picture at large, ſhewing the ſoule all the dimenſions of mercy in Chriſt, his length, depth, height and breadth, which is (as Paul calls it) the fulneſſe of God. That as the Prophet ſpeakes of the writing which ſhould be written in great letters, that hee that runnes might reade it: ſo here. For the 2. Memorialls of Chriſt, I ſhall more fully handle afterward, when I ſhew the duty of the Communicants behaviour in the act of receiving. Here this may be ſufficient, to ſignifie, that as Monuments, Marble Pillars with engraven characters, ſerve to bring to the memory, the lively impreſſion of things fallen out or done time out of minde: ſo the Sacraments ſerve to bee memorials to our forgetfull mindes, to make lively & freſh the memory and impreſſion of the Lord Ieſus crucified, together with the power of his death and ſatisfaction: So that no injury of time, weakeneſſe of memory, or craft of Satan, might ever be able to weare out the print of ſuch a divine gift and favour, as much worth as the ſalvation of mankind, See at large in the place quoted.

2. Memorials. Habak. 2. 2.

But thirdly, and chiefely, I adde, for pledges and ſeales of ſecurity to the ſoule doubtfull about the meaning of the Covenant. The other two make way in the minde for this: but this is the laſt and finall end of Sacraments in Gods ordination. To adde a word or two to that I have ſaid of it; the Lord by his Seales ſeekes the uttermoſt ſecurity of the ſtaggering ſoule, in his true and faithfull meaning to ſave and ſuſtaine it here, during the kingdome of grace. Theſe ſeales he appoints frequently to be offered and received; that as the weake ſoule findes her ſelfe to ſtand in neede, ſo ſhe drinking at theſe brookes, might lift up her head. To make my meaning more plaine; we ſee among men for ſundry cauſes, it is meete one ſecure the other of his faithfulneſſe. If men be ſuſpected for reſtoring what they borrow: wee ſee they are faine

3. Pledges or ſeales.

Illuſtrati.

to lay in a pledge with the lender to ſecure him of his own. When Abraham ſent his ſervant upon a weightie errand farre off, hee
Gen. 24. 2, 3. cauſed his ſervant to put his hand under his thigh, and bound him with oath to deale behind his backe, as if he were in his preſence: So God doe and more, if thou faile of ought which lies upon thy truſt and fidelity: Even ſo doth the Lord abaſe himſelfe to us in Sacraments, ſeemes to yeeld to our infidelity, as if it were excuſable, and to make himſelfe obnoxious to us, who is free and bound to none: hee is content to cleere his fidelity by laying a pledge in our lap, and by ſecuring us of his faithfulneſſe by oath, the end of all ſtrife. Nay, to ſpeake more fully, the Lord in the aſſuring of the bargaine of his grace, doth much like to an honeſt man willing to ſell his inheritance. Finding out ſuch a honeſt chapman as gives him content, hee offers him the Land upon a price, declares the goodneſſe of it, tells him it is richly worth his money. Having thus preſented the object to the free choiſe of the Chapman: Lo, the Buyer moved by the ſinceritie of the Seller, and the goodneſſe of the penny-worth, conſents to his price, and contracts with him for the land. They both are firmely agreed, neither ſuſpecting other, their words ſeeme as deeds each to other. But in the upſhot the Buyer conſiders, while the Seller and I live, and there ſhall be no queſtion betweene us, all is well: but if the Seller die, and leave me no ſecurity for my own, what availes it me to pay my money? Who knowes what may befall, beſides either of our intentions in ſo bad a world as this? Hereupon theſe ingenuous dealers treate further, and the Seller taking great content in the Buyer, tells him, I ſee you are willing to deale with me, to beleeve my honeſt contract, and I finde few ſo true in paying for their purchaſe as I ſee you are: your money I have received, and therefore you ſhall well ſee I will not bee more backward in ſecurity, than you are in payment: Goe to the learnedſt counſell you can meete with, get him to draw the Covenants as ſure and ſtrong as can be, and looke whatſoever ſhall be demanded, I will make good, and I will ſettle the land upon you as ſtrong as Law can deviſe to ſettle it.

In like ſort deals the Lord with a beleeving ſoule: I ſee thou haſt a good deſire to deale with mee for my grace and pardon in Chriſt, thou haſt received my report, beleeved my promiſe, for the faithfulneſſe ſake which thou perceiveſt to bee in mee, howbeit I ſee many doubts riſe up in thy minde to unſettle thee;

I ſee thy ſenſuality is great, thy heart wavering for time to come; I am abſent from thine eye, and Satan buzzeth feares into thee of my unfaithfulneſſe: I have therefore reſolved to aſſure thee (to the uttermoſt) of my ſimplicitie, and have added to my Covenant a further ratification of my Sacraments. I here give thee a pledge, an oath, a ſeale, I chuſe the Symbols of the fleſh, water, and bloud, of my crucified Sonne, the very inſtruments by which hee wrought ſatisfaction for thee; as verily as this Sacrament offers thee theſe united Elements, which bee as a marke and print of the very nailes and wounds that pierced and ſlew him, and wrought my angry ſoule to bee appeaſed: ſo verily, doe I in particular tender them to thee, and make them thine, ſo that if thou bee fruſtrate, I am content to ceaſe to bee faithfull, and ſhall become a lier: Behold therefore in my Sacrament, all my Sonne, and the utmoſt ſecurity which I am able (externally) to give thee, and to make him thine as ſurely as my Goſpel can make him. Thus, I ſay, doth the Lord, and joynes the Spirit of his Sonne, (called his ſealing Spirit) to the Spirit of promiſe before given: That the one with the other, the ſeale with the Covenant, might bee above the Covenant alone, and ſo leave the poore ſoule in peace and ſecurity, as concerning his faithfull Covenant to ſave and ſuſtaine the ſoule in all her feare and doubtfulneſſe, and to take refuge with ſtrong conſolation.

And let the uſe hereof in Gods feare bee as weightie with us as the point it ſelfe is: Firſt to teach us to mourne, to conſider how lamentably this end of Sacraments (on Gods part) is unknowne, untaught, deſpiſed in the Church of Chriſt after threeſcore yeares reſtoring of the Goſpel, and upward; and all by the ſinne of wofull and wicked men, who have by their ſloth deprived Gods people of ſo great a Iewell, as the miniſtry and uſe of Sacraments. Where is there one Congregation of many to whom this myſtery of Chriſt Sacramentall is revealed in the kinde? How hidden and darke is this Doctrine to the moſt? And where it hath ſounded, how ſtrange is the ſound thereof, even as of many waters? may ſay, the one halfe of Chriſt in his efficacie and power, either by Covenant or Seale, is kept from the body of the people by the careleſneſſe of Teachers. Vſe. 1.

Secondly, to exhort all that care to receive the Sacrament to any purpoſe, not to reſt themſelves ſatisfied in knowing what Vſe 2.

I have ſpoken; till they know the truth as it is in Ieſus Sacramentall: till they finde and feele Gods end of Sacraments to be fulfilled in and to their owne ſoules in the ſealing and ſecuring power thereof. Oh! Didſt thou know the gift of God in a Sacrament, how the Lord hath hung it to his Covenant, as a ſeale of uttermoſt aſſurance of Chriſt thy peace and welfare, how wouldeſt thou both addreſſe thy ſelfe to it, and ſet thy ſeale of faith to it? As concurring with Gods end, and receiving full ſecurity to thy doubtfull ſoule of Gods being thy God, reconciled and alſufficient? Oh! looke to it as thy life! Shall an oath among men decide all, and ſhall God ſtake pledges, ſweare, ſeale up his Covenant with his owne hand; and ſhalt thou dare to remaine (notwithſtanding) at as dead a point as if hee had never wet his finger to give thee contentment? Oh! how ſhalt thou endure that wrath of his, which ſhall burne forth againſt all that give him the lie, holding their owne againſt him and his Oath, and receiving his Word as a vaine thing? Doubtleſſe if his wrath ſhall ſmoake againſt that ſoule which having heard his Law and Terrors, ſhall cry peace to it ſelfe, and ſay, None of theſe plagues ſhall befall me. What wrath ſhall breake forth againſt him that hearing the Lords Oath, and beholding his hand and ſeale to his Covenant, ſhall treade it under feete, and adde drunkenneſſe to thirſt by unbeleefe, in ſtead of adding aſſurance to faith, a ſeale to a Covenant. Let us teach our ſelves by the practiſe of men. If a man having received the uttermoſt witneſſe and ſecurity which the Law of the Land can give him, applies it in ſpeciall to the ſecuring of his heart, and reſts in full perſwaſion that his money is not loſt, his purchaſe is good, what ſhalt thou doe towards the Lords ſecurity? For tell me I pray thee, wherein reſts the ſecurity of a Purchaſer? Is it not in the ſpirit of the Law of the Land? Doth he not tell himſelfe, This is thine; the ſtrength of the Law of the Land is thine, thou art on ſure ground, the Law muſt be no Law, ere the right be no right. Sleepe therefore ſecurely, enjoy thine owne, feare nothing: Such a Law there is, by vertue of which, (the generall equity and proviſion of the Law, and the ſecurity of every man) thou maiſt buy and ſell upon it, that thine is thine owne.

Gods ſecurity beſt.

And is not there a greater and ſtronger ſpirit to ſecure thee in the matter of thy ſalvation, offered in the Sacrament? Is there not here the Spirit and ſeale of the Lord Ieſus to ſecure thee? Will not

not this Spirit deliver thee into as firme a Tenor and Poſſeſſion of Chriſt thy pardon and life, as the other of a peece of land? Shall a clod of a field, and the ringle of a doore, the ſeazin and delivery of a houſe and land thereby, leave thee better ſatisfied for the temporall right, than the Spirit of the Death and Reſurrection of the Lord Ieſus, for thy ſpirituall? Looke to thy ſelfe and beware. Weakeneſſe of unbeleefe the Lord will pardon: But if thou deſpiſe his mercifull releefe of this weakeneſſe, and turne it to wilfulneſſe, beware leaſt thy wilfull falling proove not a falling ſickneſſe, and thy weakeneſſe become not ſuch a diſeaſe in thee, as the Lord will have no regard to cure thee of, but leave thee to thy contempt, to thine heart of infidelity, that cannot beleeve. Rather bee exhorted to ſeeke the Lord in his gracious way of aſſurance, bewayle thy impotency, and ſay, Oh! Lord, except thou adde thy Spirit to thy Seale, as well as thy Seale to the Covenant; my curſed ſpirit is as prone to breake all bands in ſunder as any mans. With thee Lord weake meanes of beleeving, ſhall bee ſtrong, without thee the ſtrongeſt are weake; how much more then canſt thou make the ſtrongeſt to become ſtrong? I deny my ſelfe, I ſet my Boate upon thy ſtreame to be carried by thee; Lord ſanctifie thy Sacraments, to become unto my ſoule the utmoſt aſſurances of thy Grace, and carry mee ſo into this aſſurance, as that being rid of my feares, I may ever bleſſe thee for the fruite of thy Sacraments. Thus much for the firſt end.

Touching the ſecond (to adde a little to that I ſayd formerly) I call this an occaſionall or ſubordinate end of the Sacrament: viz. That wee might renew our Covenant with God. Wonder not that the ends of the ſame Ordinance differ in weight; for as in Sacramentall graces, faith and love, wee ſay all are eſſentiall to a good receiver; yet not equally neceſſary to the act of receiving: ſo here, both theſe ends are intended more or leſſe, although Gods ſealing of Covenant to us, bee chiefe. Briefely then; the Lord expects that the ſoule being made partaker of his Chriſt, in the feaſt of the hills, as Eſay 25. I meane with the fat things and refined wines of his Supper; and feeling his love ſealed to her there, in reconciliation, and renewed holineſſe, doe occaſion her ſelfe thereby, even while the benefit is freſh, to revive her love, and reaſſure the Lord of her fuller purpoſe of heart to cleave to him. And how? Surely in better living by faith, better

Pſal. 130. 4. For why? If there be mercy with him that hee may be feared, much more is there renewed mercy with him that hee may be doubly and renewedly feared? And how can we (without hypocriſie) long for the Sacrament ere it come, upon pretence, that our ſpirituall darke, dead hearts will be revived, and our appallings in grace, cured and new ſtrength added: and yet having our turne ſerved, leave God to himſelfe, to goe ſeeke the fruit of our being ſatisfied, with the pleaſures, apples, and flagons of his Houſe? But returne him the ſtrength of his coſt, in his owne ſervice. The uſe hereof is, firſt, to taxe the moſt for their Vſe 1. extreame baſe requitall of God for the grace they pretend to reape, at, and by the Sacrament. Surely, either they deceive themſelves with a ſhaddow for ſubſtance, or they faile God marveloufly in this end of his. Either they make no vowes at the Sacrament, or breake them as faſt. Oh! the formality of moſt Profeſſors in their receiving! as appeares by this, that in ſtead of making this Ordinance, an hint and opportunity to provoke themſelves to a cloſer and narrower ſurvey of their hearts and wayes: Lo, they turne this grace into commons, and into a bare frequency of oft and monethly receiving (which I doe not diſlike in it ſelfe) but alas! grow to an habited falling ſickneſſe and numbe Palſie of practiſe, and walking uprightly: no ſooner hath the raine fallen upon their rocky and ſtoney ſpirits, but the next puffe of wind hath dryed it up: and ſo they live in a moſt mortall and wofull contempt of the end of Sacraments; whereas they are ordayned for the ſpeciall advancing of the ſoule to God, and the furthering of the bent and ſtreame of the converſation to him: Lo, they are never more dead-hearted, dull, ſecure, ſapleſſe, than after their Receivings. Oh wofull! Surely beware leaſt yee bee of that ſort of whom Iob ſpeakes, That they ſhall never enjoy the flouds of honey and butter: never come to that welfare and encreaſe of God which he beſtowes upon his carefull ſervants, who keepe touch with him, and come to him, as well for Gods glory as their owne good. Except thou keepe thoſe things cloſe together which God hath united: his Seale to thee for comfort, and thy oath and vow to him for better ſervice, thy Sacraments are liker to prove thy bane than thy gaine. Iob 20. 17.

Secondly, let it be ſpeciall exhortation to all Gods people to unite both theſe ends in one, as they deſire comfort from either. Let no Sacrament paſſe thee (by thy good will) but the ſad remembrance of thy dead, barren, and formall Religion may ſo ſting thee, that with all thy might and endeavour thou ſtrive to obtaine of the Lord a more lively, reſolved and bent heart to returne to thy Chriſtian courſe with cloſeneſſe, and keeping of Covenant. Borrow from the preſent experience of mercy in the Sacrament, and hearty purpoſe to ſhake off the uſuall enchantments of Satan, and the errour of the wicked, which have pluckt thee from thy ſtedfaſtneſſe formerly: beſeech the Lord to ratifie thy covenant which thou haſt ſo oft broken; and pray him, that by this (if by any occaſion) thine heart may be pull'd up to Davids practiſe, who finding himſelfe in a ſad time, delivered from the anguiſh of his ſpirit, reſolved to pay his vowes for it, in the midſt of Gods Houſe, and ſayd, what ſhall I give to the Lord? If hee could take up the Cup of ſalvation and praiſe the Lord: how much more ſhouldeſt thou take the Cup of ſalvation which the Lord purpoſely puts into thine hand? Yea, thou ſhouldſt ſay, Oh Lord my portion, I have determined to keepe thy Law? Yea, and I have ſworne, and (by thy ſtrength) I will keepe my oath, even to obey thy Commandements. Surely if men can breake into ſo many vowes and promiſes by occaſion of a ſickneſſe, or ſtreight, that if God ſet them at large, they will ſo, and ſo requite him (which yet proove broken vowes for the moſt part) then what vowes ſhould received, ſealed mercies produce from us (except wee bee baſe hirelings and hypocrites) where the Lord himſelfe is before hand with us, in the grace of the Sacrament? yea, while the ſmoke yet goeth up, how ſhould we aſcend in it as (Manoahs Angell) to heaven? Surely thoſe Papiſts who abuſe Gods Sacraments to curſed ends, as to combine themſelves in helliſh plots and cruelties, and to adjure each other to ſecrecy (which is as farre from the end Vſe 2. 2 Pet. 3. ult. of of a Sacrament, as if one borrowing his neighbours horse to fetch his rent, should abuse him to take a purse) yet even their wickednesse shall not bee much worse than theirs, who vow better obedience, and take the Sacrament upon it, and shall yet forfeit so solemne a band, and returne to their vomit.

Chap. IIII.

Of Sacramentall Acts, and the use thereof: and of the celebration and solemnity of the Sacraments.

HAving spoken enough of a Sacrament, as touching the constitution therof; it remaines that we finish the Description by adding somewhat touching the actuall celebration of Sacraments. For it is impossible that the excellency of their nature, of which wee have treated, should reach to us without a communication and imparting them to us. The Lord himselfe who ordayned Sacraments, is the holder out of them also to the soule. Now seeing the Sacraments containe, partly things spirituall, partly carnall: the former whereof are to bee carried and conveyed by the mediation of the latter: it followeth, that the externall Elements must be conveyed, by externall and sensible agents, to sensible objects, by sensible Rites and administrations. The Lord himselfe the Agent, is a Spirit, and treateth not with us immediately, either by word or presence. Needes must hee therefore set forth a deputed Instrument to bee for him, and that is his Minister. Againe, the soules of the faithfull are invisible, therefore cannot immediately bee touched; therefore their bodily and personall presence is required: that so the conveyer, and they to whom the things are conveyed; may meete and consent together. And, as formerly I sayd, that the things offered by God to the Church are spirituall, under outward Elements; so the offering thereof to the Communicants is spirituall, and by the Spirit of Christ; yet this spirituall offering is made by outward Acts and Administrations, which I call holy Rites, appointed by God himselfe, and passing betweene the Minister and people, that so the gift also offered, may therein passe and bee conveyed. First then a little of the Persons, and then of the Acts, requisite requisite to celebration of Sacraments, that the Lord and the soule may meete each other. 1 Persons which are two.

The Persons are two (we see) the Minister and people. The Minister then is such a sacred person as is lawfully from God by men, appointed as a Sequester betweene God and the Congregation; serving to this end to bee betweene God and the people, for the conveying mutually of good things betweene each other, and by name, the good things of Christ Sacramentall. In whom wee must consider both his calling, and person he sustaines. Touching his calling, hee ought to bee a man truely separated from men, and his life, to God and holy use: hee must bee called by God, as was Aaron, and lawfully warranted by men, as the voices of God to the Congregation, that hee is meete for such use. He must be of competent understanding, and skill in all the mysteries of Christ and godlinesse. Hee must bee of competent gifts to teach, utter, and expresse the same to the people: For how shall he exhibite those Seales as from God, which he neither understands in the ground thereof, to wit, the Covenant of grace, nor yet the Doctrine and nature of the Seales hee offers? How fearefull a derogation is it to the Sacrament, (in which all things should be Symbolicall) when he that is in Gods stead to the people, shall neither know the nature of the Covenant, to bee able to preach it, nor of a Seale, either to teach or deliver it? What a confusion is it for the Minister so unqualified, to occupy the roome of God himselfe? As if the Lord sealed a Covenant to his people, and a seale which hee knew not the meaning of. The like I may say of the life of the Minister. Seeing the Lord is holy, and offers holy things, and such an high Priest, it behooves us to have as is holy, blamelesse, and separate from sinnes: How necessary is it that the Minister bee also in this symbolicall? That by the grace of his person the Lord may seeme to draw his people to an holy carriage in the Sacrament, saying, Be ye holy that beare the vessels of the Lord. What a Trumpet of prophaneness is it to the people, and a meane to abhorre the Sacrifices of the Lord, when even that sacred person which offers the holy things of God, is himselfe prophane? What an opinion might it breede in the ignorant (seeing such a sight) that God is like themselves, in putting no difference betweene the holy and profane? But if our duty and worke be done any way, it skills not how? as if all were alike in Gods account.

1 Minister. In whom. 1 Calling. Heb. 5 4. Eph. 3. 2, 4. 1 Tim. 3. 2. 1 Tim. 3. 2. Heb. 7. 26. Esay 52. 11. Hag. 2. 12. Psal. 50. 21.

The

2 Person. The second thing in the Minister thus duly called, is the Person hee sustaines. That is laid downe in the old and new Testament clearely. In the old, when the Lord bounded Moses and Aarons office, he saith, that Aaron should be, or serve for all uses betweene God and the people in point of worship and spirituall respects. And Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 20. saith, We are Embassadors for God, as if by us God and Christ besought you, &c. Note then, there is a double relation in the Minister, as in all, so especially in Sacramentals: one whereby he conveyes to the people from God his gifts and graces, and Ordinances. Another, whereby he returnes from the people of God, praises, duties, and acknowledgements.

Exod. 29. 9. Exod. 4. 16. 2 5. Cor. 20.

Vse 1. The use whereof to the Minister is, that he tremble to take upon him such a Person and service, except well and truely warranted thereto by calling from God and the Church, as one well qualified. If the eye bee darke, which should bee the light of the body, how great is that darkenesse? If to dishonour the Profession of God bee so horrible, what is it (as Hophni and Phinees did) to make loathsome the very sacrifices themselves by a notorious debauchednesse of manners and life? Will not God loath such agents for him, whose pure Angels are uncleane in his sight? Oh! yee profane Idols, Epicures, malicious and hereticall, avant from the presence of this holy God of Sacraments; pollute not (for so yee doe as far as in you lyeth) the Sacramentalnesse and symbolicalnes of the things of God by your unsutableneſſe. If Heathen Poets cry out against ye, and bid ye get ye a far off; what shall the Lord doe, who will bee sanctified in all that come neere him? Remember Nadab and Abihu! But a question is, what shall we doe in case of such an unavoydable Minister? Is not the Sacrament a nullity, so administred? and is it not a thing unlawfull so to communicate? I answer, That it were a thing much to bee desired for our greater joy and comfort, that hee who deales betwixt God and them in this kinde, were a man without blemish and offence, meete and apt; Howbeit if (all courses being used) it is unavoydable, but we must fall upon others, I affirme, though the Ordinance bee hereby much eclipsed in her beauty, (which the grace of the receiver ought to supply) yet it is not thereby disanulled. The pollutions of Ministry and Baptisme, disanull not the Sacrament: The grace of our Lord Iesus not being pinned to the sleeve of an unworthy man: no more than a Sacraments consecration rests upon the present intention of the Priest (whose minde may ment, as either the ſignes or the words of inſtitution: now if they be wanting, the Sacrament is deſtroyed; I anſwer, The inſtance Anſwer.

holds not: For in theſe, as there is more immediateneſſe of being, (matter and forme being more eſſentiall than the inſtrument:)
So alſo, the error is generally cureable; it being as eaſie to appoint true Elements, as well as counterfeit; and to utter the true words of inſtitution as well as falſe. But not ſo in the Miniſter. It being ſimply a thing impoſſible, ſo to order it in any Church, that all Miniſters ſhould be teaching and inoffencive. And bee it admitted, that ſuch error growes, by the wilfull ſinne of ſuch as might avoid it, yet it is unreaſonable (the body of the Church ſuf-fering rather ſuch an error with griefe, then cauſing it by their act) to caſt ſuch an aſperſion upon the Sacrament, for the ſin of ſuch men, as it is not in our power to reforme. In ſuch a caſe wee are bound to behold ſuch a Miniſter as in the place of him whom the Church (if ſhe might) intends to be qualified: and to looke up above him to God, to preſerve the honour and fruit of the Sacrament, pure and inviolable. If further it be objected; How can that which is uncleane, affoord cleanneſſe to others? I anſwer, Its too great an aſcribing to any Miniſter to ſet him in Gods roome, or in Chriſts, to conveigh cleanneſſe to the ſoule; it is the Lord (not a man) who walkes in the midds of his people, to cleanſe them: and our Saviour prayes, Sanctifie them in thy truth, Ier. 31. 33.
thy Word is truth. Hee ſaith not, Sanctifie them in the Miniſter. Iohn 17. 17.
Rather I would allude thus, as a woodden pipe may affoord moſt pure water, running through it: ſo alſo the Lord can and may af-foord to his people the pureneſſe of Chriſt, and good of the Sacrament, through a woodden, as a golden pipe. If laſtly it be demanded, But what if he cannot teach the Doctrine of the Covenant?
Is it not then unlawfull for him to receive the Seales from him? I anſwer, It is not lawfull for us to offer them: But it is not our duty to reject the Sacrament for his cauſe. Rather ſeeke inſtructi-on where it is to be had, and then come and receive: communicate not with his ſin, nor be led by the blinde, leaſt both fall into the ditch.

Now touching the Miniſters acts in celebration; conſider, that The act of

Mat. 3. 11. Church, The Lord Jesus baptized with the holy Ghost and with fire, then when John baptized with Water, Matth. 3. 11. And this he doth while the Minister cleaves to the words of institution as God hath prescribed. For when the Minister corrupts the forme, the Sacrament is corrupted; if he deface the words of institution by any other of his owne, the Sacrament begins to bee his not the Lords. Addition to the words of institution defiles, but detraction from the words of institution destroyes the Sacrament.

Vse 1. Teaching the Minister to beware of any boldnesse in this kinde; least with the Papists he spoyle the Ordinance of a Sacrament. And as concerning the acts themselves, now this, that by them the Lord conveyes to his people, Iesus Christ, and all his benefits: Its he who by those acts doth impart the grace of the Sacrament, as the Ministers impart the Elements. And those acts are. 1. To teach the people the true nature and use of the Sacrament. 2. To separate the Elements from common use, to divine. 3. To qualifie them by his sprinkling of the one, and breaking and powring out the other; which is the accommodation of them. 4. To sanctifie them by the Word and Prayer, to become the channels and exhibiters of that which they resemble. 5. To apply them duly to the parties who are the due objects thereof, and that in speciall. 6. To pray for blessings upon the administration of them. 7. To be the mouth of the people to God, as he hath beene the deputed instrument of God to convey to the people his grace; even so, to returne the peoples unfeigned thanks to him againe for his faithfulnesse. Now touching particulars, the next two Chapters will better declare them in each Sacrament. Here I onely speake generally of Sacramentall Agents.

Vse. The use is, That the Minister looke carefully to himselfe, not onely to the pureneſſe of his spirit, but even of his outward man also. Not to intermedddle with such sacred things with prophane mouth, hands, members; not to approach to the Lord with light, vaine, irreverend behaviour; but solemne, and holy, such as well becomes the holinesse of the things conveyed, and the pureneſſe of God whose deputy hee is. Much lesse to adventure with a mouth defiled with oathes, railings, contention, ribaldrie, with hands defiled with uncleane covetous acts: with a body and members, guilty of incontinent, intemperate lusts, of drunkennesse, laciviousnesse, ill companionship, or the like scandals, to to approach the preſence of God and his people. Let holy outward acts be celebrated with ſutableneſſe of outward members. For certaine it is, as the honour is great which the Lord puts upon his miniſters in this kinde, to ſeale the grace of his Covenant by his Sacrament to the people; ſo the ſacriledge of unholy and audacious dealers with theſe Ordinances, is doubly dangerous. If the people in their profane and unworthy receivings bee damnable, how much more the Miniſter, who defiles not himſelfe onely in his corrupt receiving, but the Lord himſelfe (as farre as hee can) by profane adminiſtration.

The ſecond perſon is the Congregation; who alſo are bound to anſwerable acts in accepting and embracing the offer of God in the Miniſter. Of which alſo in ſpeciall we ſhall treate in the two next Chapters: there it ſhall be ſufficient to ſignifie, that as all acts Sacramentall are as eſſentiall to Sacraments, as the miracles themſelves; ſo, the want of Sacramentall receiving, diſannuls the Sacrament, as well as the want of offering. So that the people alſo have their parts to act herein. Theirs are theſe legacies, to them they belong: They are therefore with all holy preparation of themſelves, and theirs, by prayer, to offer themſelves to the Lord in the Congregation, preſenting themſelves, ſoules, Exod. 12. 4.
bodies with ſuch comely, chaſte, reverend and holy thoughts, affections, and behaviour, as may teſtifie them to be meete gueſts of ſuch actions, before, in, and after the actions, demeaning themſelves, ſo as they may ſanctifie the Lord thereby, and not polſute his name, who draweth ſo neere them in theſe myſteries: yet this I adde, as in the former, that although ſuch carriage is that which the Lord commands, and will ſeverely be revenged of the contrary: yet, if through the ſinne of man, and decay of Gods Order, ſuch ſhall be admitted as doe contradict this rule; that we doe not thinke this eye-ſore and defect to diſannull the Sacrament. But with mourning and heavie hearts, both for the ſinne and ſacriledge of ſuch receivers, and givers of the Sacrament: to looke up above both, and with ſo much the more ſerious preparing and ſanctifying of our ſelves to come to the Lord, beleeving that the prophaneſſe of the vile ſhall not hinder the faith of the well prepared: fithence we come into the preſence of that God of piercing eyes, who can pierce betweene the joynts and marrow, and both behold the humbleneſſe of Heb. 4. 12.

Chap. V.

Of Baptiſme; the Deſcription of it opened, and the uſe thereof annexed.

HAving thus treated of a Sacrament in generall, wē comē to the particular Sacraments of the Goſpel, and firſt of Baptiſme. For although our chiefe ſcope be the Supper, yet becauſe the other is much unknowne, and therefore neglected: we will take it (in our way) to ſome conſideration.

Three things on it.

Firſt, by ſhewing what due performance is required to it. Secondly, what the grace of it is. Thirdly, what the uſe of the Doctrine; and all theſe in one Deſcription, whoſe parts ſhall be examined.

What it is.

Baptiſme then is the firſt Sacrament of the Goſpel, conſiſting of Water, which is Sacramentally Chriſt; or wherein by water duely applyed: not onely the preſented partie is made a member of the viſible Church; but alſo, ſealed up to an inviſible union with Chriſt, and thereby intereſſed in all thoſe benefits of his, which concerne the being of regeneration.

The firſt branch.

By calling it the firſt Sacrament, I point at the precedencie and order of Baptiſme. The which all thoſe names of Baptiſme, both in Scripture, and elſe where doe approove. It is the ſeede of the Church, as the other is of foode. It iſſued firſt out of the ſide of our Lord Ieſus on the Croſſe. It is the creating inſtrument of God to produce and forme the Lord Ieſus to a new creature, and to regeneration in the ſoule: It is called our Vnion with Chriſt, our marriage Ring, our military Preſſe-money, our Matriculation, Cognizance, and Charracter of Chriſt, our emplanting or engrafting into him, and his Body, our Shippe, our Arke, our red Sea, our putting on of Chriſt. For as all thoſe goe before our Nouriſhment, Communion, Cohabitation, Service, Fruit, Manna, or foode from Heaven; ſo this Sacrament muſt goe before the other. Breeding, begetting, and bringing out of the wombe,

wombe, doth not more naturally goe before the feeding of the Infant by the Mothers breasts: than this wombe of the youth of the Church, goes before the breasts and milke therof: the Church being no dry Nurse, but a Mother of her owne, the sonnes and daughters of her owne wombe. Psal. 110. 3.

Which convinceth thousands of their preposterous sacriledge, in that they presse in upon the Church, for her pappes and nourishment, when yet they are basterds, and no youth of her body, no sons of her love or desires. And therfore she abhorres them, and hath drie breasts for them whom she never bare. The Lord Iesus abhorres to be foode where he hath not beene seede: flesh and blood indeede to feede, whom he was never seede to beget. Let all who desire to taste of the sealing power of the second Sacrament to nourish them as Saints: first prove the sealing power of the former Sacrament to beget and make them Saints. Do not impute such folly to the Lord Iesus, as to give the milke of his breasts, to still-borne ones; or to set them into his stocke, who are rotten and dead twigges; as if the bare outward washing of the flesh were sufficient to regenerate and give title to nourishment. This is to dissemble with God, the Church, and our soules; and to turne both Sacraments to our perdition. Beware all such mockers, least the Lord bee froward with them, that fight against the God of Order: least in stead of finding nourishment, before breeding, as they robbe God of his Order, so they meete with wrath and judgement, before mercie and salvation; yea, least God accurse their single emptinesse of Christ, with such a double barrennesse, as will admit no conception or birth. Vse 1. 1 Pet. 3. 21

And Secondly, it taxes the confused devotion of such as would not be baptized till death, having yet enjoyed the Supper, usually all their life. As if the Lord were not able to grant and continue unto them the fruit of Baptisme, but at the houre of death; or that the soule could in faith use the Sacrament of feeding, which had refused the first Sacrament of begetting; or as if God needed such our wisedome to preserve grace, and interpret sinne. Let us beware of such wil-worship. The foolishnesse of God is stronger and wiser than our best strength and wisedome. Vse 2. 1 Cor. 1, 25.

Secondly, I adde [consisting of water which is Sacramentally Christ.] Touchiug Sacramentall union, I treate nothing. Onely note, that although the Grace of Christ must neither be equalled, The second branch.

The next point concernes the due acts & performances of meet persons, in the applying of water. The persons are, the Parents, the Congregation, the Minister, and the infant: The acts are the mutuall carriages of these towards each other Sacramentally. Touching the which, in briefe thus (being loath to digresse much from the streame of the point.) The Parents, are to have competent knowledg (the more the better if sanctified) both of the woefull pollution of nature which by themselves their children hath contracted: to blesse the Lord for mercifull despensing with it in the penalties deserved to bee inflicted even outwardly upon it, (for the deformity of sinne) in the markes thereof, maimed, blind, halt, lame, monstrous: yet in this not satisfied, they ought to behold the inseparable inward defiledneſse of the infants nature and spirit: the more the Lord hath done his part, the more tenderly to commiserate the wretchednesse of the inner man of it deprived of the Image of God by originall sinne; to mourne and sigh for it to God by deepe groanes and confession: to pray, and be instant with God for the pardon of it, the purging and the sanctifying of it: To blesse God who hath ordained such a remedy as the Sacrament; not to abolish, but to kill the poyson of sinne: to remember that the child of it selfe hath neither sence or savour in Baptisme; no nor right thereto, of it selfe, (it being the priviledge of the Church) further than in and by themselves, and their right to the Covenant, it partakes an holinesse. Therefore they ought seriously to revive their faith in this Covenant: to offer their infant to God by vertue of that promise made to the righteous and their seede, that God will be their God, to many generations.

Oh! how fearefull an account have theſe to make? and although I deny not, their childe is baptized viſibly; and their ſinne cannot berre the Lords Covenant of grace (if he pleaſe to call it) yet, what woefull acceſſaries are they to the woe of it? How much better is it to bee childleſſe and barren, than to bee fruitfull under ſuch a curſe? with the infants: Better to be Herods Swine than Son: So of theſe.

The ſecond perſon in this worke is the aſſembly. Here is the legacy of Baptiſme: her part is as the Church of Chriſt, to bring it forth duely when it ſhall duely be demanded. Alſo to preſent themſelves there in publique with reverence, both at Word and Sacrament: to recognize the former grace of Baptiſme offered themſelves, that they may be eſtabliſhed therein; or elſe by remembring their owne breach of vowes, to be abaſed by the occaſion: to preſent the infant to God by the Miniſter: to looke up to heaven for it by humble confeſſion, Prayer and thankes, and ſo to conferre the marke and ſeale of the Sacrament upon it.

The ſecond perſon, Aſſembly. Her duty.

Which point ſerves to correct and rebuke the common errors and abuſes generally prevailing in Congregations, againſt this dutie: few abiding the Sacrament, but rending Gods Seale from his Covenant ſacrilegiouſly: others ſtaying rather to gaze and gape, and to heare and ſee bables, than for any holy end; and after the name given, poſting out with as much reverence, as they were preſent with ſmall humiliation, love or communion: and ſo (as if it concerned not them) leaving the action to them whom it imports, and by their example, teaching others to doe the like for them, and bringing in a profanation of the ordinance.

Vſe 1.

The third perſon is the Miniſter, deputed by God & the Church, to ſtand betweene them as ſequeſtet of bleſſings, and duty: from God of bleſſing, whoſe baptiſme he offers, and whoſe perſon (in his acts) he reſembles; from the people of dutie and ſervice, in their name, bringing forth the Sacrament to publique uſe. Before both he muſt behave himſelfe with gravity and holineſſe: ſeparating the Element, and touching the laver with the blood of the lambe, that it may be ſacred: bleſſing the fountaine by prayer and praiſe of his lips, beſeeching the Lord to aſſiſt, to ſanctifie and to baptiſe the party with the holy Ghoſt and fire: and ſo by the words of the inſtitution, In the name of the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghoſt, receiving the childe and dipping it in water, to pronounce it openly to be a reall member of the Church of Chriſt. A great worke, and yet there is a greater, even to be an able Miniſter of the Covenant, and to underſtand the Doctrine and uſe of Baptiſme competently, to teach it ſenſibly to the people, that hee may not as a dumbe Idoll, bring forth a thing to the people which himſelfe knowes not. I have ſpoken of the uſe before; onely this I adde, That although any of theſe three perſons faile of the Sacramentall dueneſſe and ſervice, I doe not inferre a nullity of the Sacrament, (ſo long as the inſtitution is preſerved) but a neceſſity of ſinne in ſuch offendors: for whoſe cauſe it might be juſt with God to puniſh the children: howbeit

Rom. 11. 28. by vertue of his Covenant and election, he is and will be the God of his owne, and the ſinne of man ſhall not infringe the mercy of God in due time, from calling to himſelfe and converting even the children of ſuch ſinfull ones, freely to himſelfe, in the Miniſtry of the Goſpell.

Digreſſion to dipping. Touching that I have ſayd of Sacramentall dipping, to explaine my ſelfe a little about it; I would not be underſtood as if ſchiſmatically I would inſtill a diſtaſte of the Church into any weake minds, by the act of ſprinkling water onely. But this (under correction) I ſay: That it ought to be the Churches part to cleave to the inſtitution, eſpecially it being not left arbitrary by our Church to the diſcretion of the Miniſter, but required to dip or dive the infant more or leſſe (except in caſe of weakeneſſe) for which allowance in the Church we have cauſe to be thankefull:) and ſuitably to conſider, that he betrayes the Church (whoſe officer he is) to a diſordered errour, if he cleave not to the inſtitution: To dippe the infant in water. And this I ſo averre, as thinking it exceeding materiall to the ordinance, and no ſlight thing: yea, which both Antiquity (though with ſome addition of a three-fold dipping: for the preſerving of the doctrine of the impugned Trinity, entire) conſtantly and without exception of Countries hot or cold, witneſſeth unto: and eſpecially the conſtant Word of the holy Ghoſt, firſt and laſt, approveth: as a learned Critique upon Mathew chap. 3. verſe 11. hath noted, that the Greeke tongue wants not words to expreſſe any other act as well as dipping, if the inſtitution could beare it. And ſure it is, if the Lord meant not as (he ſaith) that the infant ſhould be dived to the bottome, yet he much leſſe meant he ſhould be ſprinkled onely upon the ſurface: But rather betweene both extreames, he ſhould be baptized, which word ſignifieth the true act of the Miniſter, to dip or dop the body, or ſome part of it into the water: And the eſſence of Baptiſme, in the very ſymbolicalneſſe of it, urgeth no leſſe: For what reſemb ance of ingrafting, putting on of Chriſt, is there in ſprinkling? what typicalneſſe is there of our deſcending into and aſcending out of the water, both which are expreſſly ſpoken of Chriſt in his Baptiſme of Iordan?

What

What reſemblance of our buriall or reſurrection with Chriſt, is there in it? So that I doubt not, but contrary to our Churches intention, this errour having once crept in, is maintained ſtill by the carnall eaſe and tenderneſſe of ſuch, as looking more at themſelves than at God, ſtretch the liberty of the Church in this caſe deeper, and further than either the Church her ſelfe would, or the ſolemneſſe of this Sacarment may well and ſafely admit. I doe not ſpeake this as a thing meete to diſturbe a Churches peace: but as deſiring ſuch as it concernes in their places, to looke to their liberty and duty in this behalfe.

The fourth and chiefe perſon, yea equall object of Baptiſme is the party baptiſed. For not onely the Church may and doth baptiſe her infants: but alſo (adultos) growne ones alſo, if any ſuch being bred Pagans, and brought within the pale of the Church, ſhall teſtifie their competent underſtanding of the new covenant; and profeſſe their deſire to be ſealed with Baptiſme, for the ſtrengthning of their ſoule in the faith thereof: profeſſe it I ſay, not baſely and ſlightly, but with earneſtneſſe and entireneſſe; cutting off their haire and nailes, and abhorring their Paganiſme. But the truth is, the exerciſe of the Churches baptiſme is upon infants: Here the Anabaptiſts riſe up, pleading the corruption of ſuch baptiſme, and urging the firſt baptiſme of catechiſed ones and confeſſors of ſinne, and cravers of the ſeale, upon the worke of the Miniſtry foregoing in knowledge and faith, which can be incident onely to adulti, or growne ones. They alledge that we ſeale to a blanke, to no covenant, and therefore it's a nullity. Sundry learned men have undertaken to ſtop their ſchiſmaticall mouthes, and to anſwere their peeviſh Arguments: my ſcope tends another way in this Treatiſe, ſo far as my digreſſion may be veniall. I ſay this, for the ſetling of ſuch as are not wilfull, that I take the baptiſme of infants to be one of the moſt reverend, generall, and uncontroled traditions which the Church hath, and which I would no leſſe doubt of than the Creede to be Apoſtolicall. And although I confeſſe my ſelfe yet unconvinced by demonſtration of Scripture for it, yet, firſt, Sithence Circumciſion was applyed to the infant the eighth day in the Old Teſtament. Secondly, there is no word in the New Teſtament to infringe the liberty of the Church in it: nor ſpeciall reaſon why we ſhould bereave her of it. Thirdly, ſundry Scriptures afford ſome friendly proofes by conſequence of it. Fourthly, the holineſſe of the child, (externall and viſible) is from their parents who are (or ought to be) catechiſed, confeſſors, penitent, & Proteſtants in truth (which priviledge onely open revolt diſables them from) therefore I ſay, The ſeede being holy and belonging to the Covenant, the Lord graciouſly admits them alſo to the ſeale of it in baptiſme.

Howbeit here a further quære ariſes. And becauſe the Sacrament of Baptiſme is here handled by us, not as halfe a Scrament, (onely including a waſhing of the fleſh) but an entire Sacrament, holding out and giving an inviſible grace by outward meanes: By what authority ſhall we ſay, an infant may bee preſented to that, whereof it is not capable? To that I anſwere: Firſt, it's not meete that Baptiſme being the Sacrament of new birth, which can be but once, ſhould deſtroy her owne Analogy, by frequent adminiſtring: therefore if but once, the moſt comprehenſive way, is to doe it in the infancy, when the outward admiſſion of a member is allowed to it. Secondly, although the child be not capable of the grace of the Sacrament by that way, whereby the growne are, by hearing, conceiving, and beleeving: yet this followes not, that infants are not capable of Sacramentall grace in and by another way. Pittifull are the ſhifts of them that have no other way to ſtop an Anabaptiſts mouth, ſave by an errour, that an infant may have faith. Its eaſie to diſtinguiſh betweene the gift conveyed, and the manner of conveying it. For if the former be, the latter in ſuch caſe will prove needleſſe. But if the infant bee truely ſuſceptive of the ſubſtance of Chriſt, none can deny it the Sacrament. Now to underſtand this, marke, that infants borne of beleeving parents, are of the number of thoſe that ſhall be ſaved (though dying in their infancy) none of our reformed Churches will deny. It is enough therefore that ſuch before death doe partake the benefit of Election in Chriſt, together with the benefits of Chriſt in regeneration, adoption, redemption, and glory; Now that the Spirit can apply theſe unto ſuch infants, is not doubted of: though the manner thereof to us be as as a hidden and myſticall thing: yet ſo it is, the Spirit of Chriſt can as really unite the ſoule of an infant to God, imprint upon it the true title of a ſonne and daughter by adoption, and the image of God by ſanctification without faith, as with it. Now, if the grace it ſelfe of Baptiſme bee thus given it, why not Baptiſme? Nay, I adde further, I ſee no cauſe to deny, that even in, and at, and by the act of Baptiſme, (as the neceſſity of the the weake infant may admit) the Spirit may imprint theſe upon the ſoule of the infant.

Let the uſe of the point be to all ſuch as are growne to yeares of diſcretion, to looke backe to their Baptiſme. Let ſuch bleſſe the Lord for his bounteous prevention of them with the Sacrament even before they had any ſtrength to conceive it! Why ſhould the Lord ſo doe, except to heape hot coales upon thy head (oh poore wretch!) and to teach thee to conclude; that hee who was found of thee, when thou ſoughteſt him not, will much more draw neare to thee when thou ſeekeſt him with thy whole heart? What a mercy is it, to know the Lord to bee a provoker of the ſoule to imbrace that covenant, the ſeale whereof he is content to beſtow before hand, for the hope of time to come? Who ſhould ſo play the Traytor in coole blood, (having found the Lord ſo faithfull in his love) and to cavill thus, I was baptized and made my covenant when I knew nothing, nay I did make none my ſelfe, but others for me! Let them looke to their ſtipulation and promiſe, I made none! Can any Trecherous wretch ſo requite the Lord? Rather (if any ſparke of love be in thee) wilt thou not breake thy heart by this earely mercy before hand? Wilt thou not ſay what a ſhame were it for me to give over him now in the purſuit of his grace, when he hath formerly layd a pledge in my boſome of his gracious meaning to forgive and ſave mee? Were it not juſt I ſhould be left to periſh with my Baptiſme of water, barred from the true ſeale of Gods covenant: Oh! be vigilant, and induſtrious to redeeme the opportunity of grace, and to follow all meanes for the obtayning of grace! Kill all baſe enmity and treachery which ſuggeſt the Lord to be thy foe: ſay thus, Surely, if he had meant to deſtroy me, hee would never have done any ſuch kindneſſe for me: but this preventing freely, aſſures me of his bleſſing upon my attending the meanes to get vocation and faith. Oh! be not faithleſſe, but faithfull! ſuffer no baſe eaſe, ſelfe pride, ſecurity, infidelity to clog thee and hold thee in chaines: Doe thy worke the better, and neglect no helpe, ſeeing thou haſt thy pay beforehand. But to conclude, if the falſe and hollow are ſo culpable: what ſhall be ſaid of ſuch as abuſe the livery of Chriſt, to debauch themſelves in all kind of profanenes, pride, drunkenneſſe, riot, uncleanneſſe, ſwearing, abuſe of the Lords day, and that lawleſly! How much better were it, they had

The 2. Generall grace of it.
2 Fold.
1 Common.

From the personall acts, I come to the second generall: viz. the Grace of the Sacrament of Baptisme; which I illustrate by a Diversity: viz. that it serves also for admission into the visible body of the Church. This then is the common favour of Baptisme; viz. matriculation, and outward incorporating into the number of worshippers of God, and into visible Communion. This is as the porch into the house.

Rom. 4. 11. Gen. 17. 12, 13.

The Lords scope in Baptisme is an inward grace, but this generall priviledge is to all equall: viz. A badge of an outward member: distinction from the common rout of the world, out of the pale of the Church. The Lord appointed Circumcision as a seale of the righteousnesse of faith chiefly: yet as an overplus he allowed it to be the Differencer of all other Nations from the Iewes. It was as a fence and wall of separation from them in all their converse. So in Baptisme now, a marke or badge of externall Communion: whereby the Lord settles a right upon the person to his ordinances, that it may comfortably use them as his owne priviledge, and waite for the inward prerogative of Saints by them. And yet this (as much as men boast of it) is but a shell in respect of the other. There is an outward implanting of the wilde Olive in the sweete Olive; that it may be exempt out of the state of Aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel: But there is a better use of it, to bring us to mount Zion, Heb. 12. 25. to the soules of just men, to the Assemblies of Saints. The first is not to be slighted: the latter is to be rested in and honoured. Therefore hee who rejected Circumcision, was to bee cut off from his people: voluntary cutting off was punished with necessary.

Heb. 12. 22, 23.

Use 1.

The use whereof is, first, to teach us to pitty the estate of so vaste a portion of the world as the Lord hath left in their blindnesse of minde, and savadgnesse of spirit; and cut them off from the Church of God wholly. Oh! the fearefulnesse of sinne which should lye so heavy upon the Lords heart as to leave so many Millions for thousands of yeares, and thousand thousand generations destitute of God, Word, Covenant, and hope (ordinary I meane) giving them up to be a kindome of Sathan, for the

Prince

Prince of this world, to rule at his pleasure! Not to speake of the Iewes whom God hath left to the obstinacy of their rebellion, contempt of Christ and his Covenant and Seales. How should we mourne for them, and pray for their conversion and the fulnesse of the Gentiles?

Secondly, what terrour should it strike into the spirits of such as yet never saw their naturall condition? What doth baptisme teach, but this, our woefull Apostasie from God by sinne, our estrangement from his life, and our excommunication from his people? It is not our outward baptisme which can releeve us: Onely it shewes how deepely our nature is sunke and revolted from God; and how gracious the Lord is in this his Sacrament, to give us by it an unconditionall free title to mercy and forgiveneſse, whereas he hath debarred still an huge part of the world from Christendome. Vse 2. Eph. 4. 17, 18.

Thirdly, it should incourage all fearefull hearts, that doubt whether the Lord meane as he saith, in his Covenant and offer to be reconciled to God, to beleeve that he is ingenuous and faithfull therein: seeing that by Baptisme he hath taken away that objection, wiped away the shame of Egypt, and the reproach of uncircumcised ones: granting a second priviledge to them, and a title to heare, pray, worship, beleeve; that by this he might plucke them, not onely from Infidels; but much more from that infidelitie and Atheisme which estranges them from God: and might make them true free denizons of his Kingdome in grace and glorie by regeneration. Vse 3.

Fourthly, its wofull conviction to all such as still disguise themselves under this priviledge of visible members: and wiping off this oyle of consecration, still abide most uncouth monsters and savages, in the bosome of the Church under Gods cognizance, living in all base courses, open profaning of Gods Name and Sabboths, blaspheming that God into whom they are baptized; degenerated both from the habit of Christians and men, and drowned in the gulfe of all excesse of impiety, intemperance, unrighteousnesse, and whatsoever even Heathens are described by, Rom. 1. Ephe. 4. Oh! how doe they cause Pagans to abhorre the heare say of baptisme and Christ? as some Indians beholding the Spaniards in the East parts, cryed out, If these were Christians, they would still keepe their God to themselves: and an Heathen Physitian spake somewhat like, If these be Christians, my soule Vse 4. Rom. 1. be

Ier. 9. 26. be with the Philoſophers. Surely their foreskin is ſtill upon them, yea they have drawne it up againe as aſhamed of their Baptiſme.

The ſpeciall grace of it, is Chriſt our new birth. But the chiefe thing here conſiderable, is the true grace of the Sacrament of Baptiſme, which point is one of the moſt materiall both for knowledge and uſe, of all the reſt. Conceive then, the Lord Ieſus being wholly given of God in each Sacrament (though for divers ends) this former Sacrament offers him wholly, in point of our new birth, or the new creature, Chriſt in all his breadth, height, depth, and length; Chriſt for being and regeneration. Perhaps for the ſimpler ſort it might be enough to uſe the Apoſtles words, of him are we, who is made our wiſdome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and redemption. 1 Cor. 1. 30. or to adde thus much, All Chriſt is given us, either for our calling, or for our imputation, or for our ſanctification. Howbeit, for my owne exerciſe in part, and for the clearer view of Chriſt Sacramentall in the water: I would adde a little more, deſiring the weake reader to pardon my diſtinctions, as more meete for ſuch as better conceive (or would at leaſt) the gift of Chriſt in his extent and fulneſſe. The grace then of Chriſt beſtowed in baptiſme, is either firſt grace, or conſequent upon it. The firſt grace I call, either that which maketh us accepted, or that which is freely given to inhere and abide in us. Concerning the former kinde: Grace accepting is either grace of meanes ſerving to attaine acceptance, or the grace it ſelfe attained. The former of meanes, in one word is the grace of vocation in all the paſſages thereof, preventing, aſſiſting, and perfiting this acceptation of the ſoule. The grace it ſelfe of acceptance attained, may be diſtinguiſht into grace, either of maine eſſence or of priviledge. Grace of maine eſſence is double, either juſtification of our perſons from ſinne of guilt and blemiſh; or of curſe (wherein Gods acquitting us in judgement by remiſſion and pardon, properly conſiſts:) or reconciliation, by which being pardoned, we returne to grace and favour againe as before, our blood being reſtored, and we beloved. Then ſecondly, grace of priviledge is double: poſitive or privative. Poſitive priviledge in a word is our odoption: which (beſides favour) reſtores us to the former condition (yet much bettered) of children, ſons, daughters, heires; and ſo to the priviledges of a beleever according to the ſeverall occaſions of his life and courſe. Privative in a word, ſtands in redemption: that is freedome from all the evils, dangers, enemies, croſſes, within, without, bodily, ghoſtly, which threaten

1 Cor. 1. 30.

Diſtinction of it to be marked.

ten annoyance to our happy eſtate in Chriſt. Thus for the firſt ſort.

The ſecond are graces inherent in us; in a word, Sanctification of the whole man, body, ſoule, and ſpirit, ſtanding both in conſcience and converſation, and this is double, either mortification and conſumption of the old man, renouncing him with his affections and luſts, and crucifying them all with Chriſt; or elſe quickning up of the ſoule in the bent, frame, intent and ſtreame of it, to the life of God and grace. Thus of the firſt grace. The conſequent upon this, is the proper iſſue and fruit of each of theſe firſt graces which they leave behind them in the ſoule: The proper iſſue of vocation, is union and bringing to God by the inſtrument of faith. The proper iſſue of juſtification is peace and quiet of conſcience. The fruit of reconciliation is holy Complacence and contentment or joy of the Spirit in God her Saviour, as Mary ſpeaks. The fruit of adoption is, the honour, liberty and excellency of beleevers, with the Spirit of children, confidence, and calling God Abba, reſting upon him for all good things; a true right to earth, heaven, and all therein: All things being ours, we being Chriſts, as Chriſt is Gods. The fruit of redemption is aſſured ſecurity of heart from evill, conqueſt and triumph in Chriſt, true deliverance of ſoule from Satan, to God and for God in all obedience. The fruit of ſanctification, is the bleſſed guard and furniture of Graces reſident both in the minde, as light, pureneſſe and wiſedome, diſcerning: in the will, all habits and uprightneſſe, integrity, cheerefulneſſe, faithfulneſſe: in the affections, of love, hope, feare and zeale: in the conſcience, ſenſibleneſſe, tenderneſſe, quietneſſe: In the whole man, ſerviceableneſſe to God in the converſation and whole courſe of it. This ſhort draught I have the rather inſerted in his due place, to give light & order to ſuch things as I have handled in the three Articles of my ſecond part, and the fourth, fifth, and ſixth Articles of the third part of my Practicall Catechiſme, that the Reader may ſee how all thoſe good things iſſue from Chriſt diſtinctly: I meane, the uſe of meanes, the ſtrength againſt lets, and the right to all priviledges both conditionall and actuall: But eſpecially to lay downe a view of Chriſt our union and communion Sacramentall.

But there are two phraſes in the Scripture by which the holy Ghoſt delights to deſcribe the grace of baptiſme: The one by remiſſion of ſinnes, the other by dying unto ſinne, and riſing up unto righteouſnes. Of the firſt there is frequent mention, Luke 3. 3. Luke 3. 3. Iohn baptized to the remiſſion of ſinnes, Acts 22. 16. Waſh a-

Therefore wee are buried by baptiſme with him into his death; that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from death by the glory of the Father: ſo might we walke in newneſſe of life. For if wee have beene planted together with him in the likeneſſe of his death, we ſhall alſo be to the likeneſſe of his reſurrection.* And note this further, that as the holy Ghoſt expreſſes the meriting cauſes diverſly, now by one, then by another part of his mediation: ſo ſometime he applyes that his merit to one fruit, ſometimes to another: yet ſo that by one merit wee underſtand all, and by one effect of it, all the reſt.

1 Pet. 3. 21. Take a Text, 1 Pet. 3. 21. The like figure whereunto, baptiſme now ſaveth us: not the waſhing of the filth of the fleſh, but the anſwer of a good conſcience in the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt. Marke, the reſurrection of Chriſt, being the compleatneſſe of his ſatisfaſatisfaction, and the declaring of it, is made here the meriting cauſe of the grace of Baptiſme: But by it, all the ſatisfaction is meant: and the affects of this Baptiſme is called, The anſwer of a good conſcience, which is the peace and ſecurity of it, properly iſſuing from pardon of ſinne and guilt: yet in and by this, all are meant, both juſtification and ſanctification. The ſelfeſame phraſe is uſed, Heb. 10. 22. Having your hearts ſprinkled from an evill conſcience, and your bodies waſhed with pure water, that is, with peace. For this bloud, Heb. 12. cryeth better things then that of Abel. The phraſe of ſprinkling compares Baptiſme to the Iſraelites ſprinkling their doore poſts with the bloud of the Lambe. If they had not done it, they had beene in danger of ſlaying by the Angell. But having done it, their hearts were at quiet and peace through the promiſe. So Baptiſme is a better ſprinkling of a better bloud, upon a better object, to a farre better peace, even peace of conſcience, as being paſſed from death to life. By all theſe places not unmeete to bee conferred together, wee ſee that whole Chriſt crucified, Chriſt in Water, Chriſt in Regeneration, Chriſt in our Vnion, and by it all his benefits are the extent of the grace of baptiſme. And that the Miniſter ſtanding in Gods ſtead, applying water to the Baptiſed, doth by it apply the power of the Lord Ieſus by the Spirit accompanying the ſame, to create a new birth of grace and life in the ſoule.

Heb. 10. 22.

Exod. 12. 22.

Heb. 10. 14.

The uſe is exhortation to all that bring or behold children brought and offered to the Lord in his Sacrament of Baptiſme; to lay in by faith for the Spirit of Chriſt in the water whereby the Lord would vouchſafe to thy child & renew to thy ſelfe (if ever truely converted) the Lord Ieſus for regeneration and the new creature. To this end doe two things. Firſt, Behold the truth of this offer of the Lord Ieſus in the water by the helpe of the word, and not ſo onely, but what the word of Regeneration can worke of it ſelfe in the ſoule, and therefore much more can further it by the Sacrament. Secondly, by and through this Word apply the merit and power of the Sacrament to thy ſoule in particular. For the former, know, although a Sacrament be above a word, yet it is ſo, by a word, and with it, and not elſe. Behold not a Sacrament without a word, for then thou ſeeſt a meere empty vaniſhing Element. Behold it in a word, and thou ſeeſt no leſſe than Chriſt in the water, true regeneration offered thee. Take all thoſe Texts I cited before: looke up to God by prayer, to ſee the truth of Vſe 1.

2. Things.

1. Behold the truth of the word.

2 By the word apply the power of the Sacrament.

Ephe. 4. 22. of them, as they are in Ieſus, to rivet every of them in ſpeciall into thy ſpirit, that ſo thou maiſt feele a bottome to thy faith out of a word: Labour to ſee what makes this word ſo powerfull, even the truth of a promiſer, the merit of a ſatisfier: who died, ſhed his bloud, was buried and roſe againe by the power of God, that he might fill a promiſe with efficacie, and perſwade thy heart, that ſeeing all that hee ſuffered was for thee to make himſelfe thine in remiſſion of ſinnes, and renewing of the holy Ghoſt, therefore the promiſe that offers this to thee, in the Sacrament, is Ephe. 5. 26. ſound and effectuall. Reade and ponder that place I named, Eph. 5. 26. Waſhing of water by the word. And ſo be reſolved if the word of a true God tell thee, That he will waſh thy ſoule by Chriſt in the Sacrament, it ſhall be ſo, it cannot bee otherwiſe: and if hee have ſaid, Chriſt the water, is ſpirituall birth, regeneration, renewing, purging, burying in the grave with Chriſt riſing up with Chriſt; then ſo it is. This word will give a bottome to thy feete to ſtand upon, while thou reacheſt out with thy hand to take Chriſt: ſo that thou ſhalt not ſtagger. Conſider that the ſame word wich hath held Chriſt and water in ſo ſtrong an union, can alſo hold thee upon ſure ground. Alas mens going to worke without a word, marres the power of Baptiſme: and cauſeth the ſoule to be preſent with any object, more then with Chriſt in the water.

It goes with the Spirit. Further be aſſured this word of Chriſt in his promiſe of the Sacrament never goes alone: The truth of it alwaies is annexed to the Spirit of Chriſt in the water. All the world is full of this; tells 1 Iohn 5. 6. us, the Spirit is that which aſſiſts the Sacrament. The Spirit quickneth, water profits nothing alone: It is the Spirit which muſt joyne with the word, with water, and which joynes Chriſt by both to the ſoule, or els the graces of the Sacrament are as far off, as heaven and earth. But the Spirit of Chriſt crucified, water and bloud, meeting with the Sacrament, fetches out all the power of Chriſt into the ſoule, and makes the promiſe of bleſſing effectuall. Hence it is that nothing is ſo common in Scripture as the Spirits concurring with Baptiſme. Mat. 3. 11. He ſhall baptize with the Matth. 3. 11. holy Ghoſt, and fire. Tit. 3. 5. Water of regeneration, and renewing of Tit. 3. 5. the holy Ghoſt. As it attended Chriſts Baptiſme, ſo it muſt ours if it be efficacious, elſe not.

Theſe two things being forelaid, bring forth thy faith in the Word and Spirit of the Sacrament, both for thy child & thy ſelfe, for begetting or reviving of Christ to regeneration. And as the hand puts on the apparel upon the body, yea, as thou beholdest the Minister to dip thy child in water; so, concurre with him by faith, & behold God the Father, putting the Lord Iesus upon thy soule and the soule of thy child, for pardon, peace, joy, confidence, security, grace, & holines; and fasten upon the Word, and draw therby the Spirit of baptisme to helpe & satisfie thy soule with Christ in all these. As thou wouldest put on a garment upon thy naked body: so be stript & empty of all good and grace in thy selfe; feele in thy soule an utter absence of life, of sence, motion & power towards the inner man of grace: Lie before the Lords Sacrament, as a forlorne wretch. Say thus, If thy baptisme Lord be for my regeneration, what am I without it? A dead dogge, a very lumpe and masse of sinne, and curse, utterly void of the least dramme of life, savoring nothing but earth, vanity, lusts, world, pleasures; a very slave to these, and a very carcasse of all goodnes, & being of God. O Lord! strip me starke naked, pluck off my mufflers, shame me, drive me out of my selfe as one poore, miserable, blind, & naked. This is the first worke of faith, to put off the soules ragges, and to void all conceit of life, hope, of grace in it selfe; & to set it before the Lord as Adams red earth lay before him, when hee was to breathe the life of Creation into it. Now the Lord is creating thee anew by this Sacrament. Remember, Creation is of nothing. Baptisme never made new creature, where it findes any thing of ones own. Baptisme should then not create, but rather draw somewhat out of our own principles, to make us somewhat, to which we bring matter of our owne. O! people come to the Sacrament full of their owne devotions, and looke that God should make them new creatures of their owne stuffe: this were to patch and soder our old, not to create a new man in us.

for

These two things bring faith.

How this? 1 By the stripping of thy selfe.

Secondly, being thus nothing in our selves; apply we our selves by the word to the work of the Spirit, of union Sacramental; bare, poore, empty water, which hath in it selfe no Sacramentall substance, yet by the union of the spirit of Baptisme, incloseth the Lord Iesus to regeneration in it: If thou canst say, water is not a more beggerly Elemēt in the Sacrament without Christ, than thy soule is empty, unsubsisting without regeneration: Looke to the Lord by thy faith, & pul hard at him for the Spirit of Baptisme to renew a life, a spirit and being of pardon and holines in thee. If while the word lasts, & the Spirit of Baptisme endures, (even to the worlds end) Christ and water shall never be sundred from the Sacrament: beleeve thou as firmely, that Christ as water, shall never be severed from thy poore soule, that lies humbly before him, destitute of all life in thy selfe, and lost for ever except Christ bee Acts 8. 16. thy life & succour; I say the Lord Iesus shall never be wanting to such a soule, in the point of regeneration. Pleade then thy cause strongly with the Lord; Behold here is Christ in water. What letteth why thou maist not be baptised, as Philip said of the Eunuch? Shall water ever lose her cleansing? Were it not madnes to think so? And shal Iesus Christ then lose his power to cleanse the soule? Hath he not annexed his cleāsing to waters cleansing? Is it possible that all the devills in hell can dissolve the Sacramentall Vnion of Christ & water? Oh Lord, why is this Vnion, and for what serves it? Is it good for any thing, save as it is Sacramental? Was it Christ before? Is it Christ after? No sure, but during the Sacrament only. And why so? Surely to teach me, all this Vnion is for me. Christ water serves for my soules washing. Hee delights not to be one with a base Element for it selfe; but that in & with a creature of a cleansing quality, he might flow into my soule with his renewing Spirit! Oh Lord, I beseech thy Word! Lord let the Spirit convey thee with water into thy soule! Be it, Oh Lord, as thou hast said! Separate not thy Spirit from thy Sacrament, but give it the power of begetting me to the life of faith and a new creature.

3. Abhor carnall reason. Ioh. 3 9. 1 Iohn 5. 8. Thirdly, look off from all thy carnall reason, & the fillimes of the creature: Say not with Nicodemus, How shall this be? Consult not with flesh and bloud: cavill not, aske no further signe; thou hast three in heaven, and three in earth, bearing witnes to Gods truth: Water is one of these; it is the instrument of the Spirit; though it be on earth, yet that is from heaven, call not for a voyce from heaven the second time; its enough that in the Baptisme of Christ, it Mat. 28, ult. was manifest; Hold close to the Word & Promise: Goe, Teach and Baptize; and lo, I am with you to the end. Let all conceits of Reason vanish in the truth of God: and when corruption hath done all it can; yet role thy selfe upon the promise, and by the Perspective glasse thereof, thou shalt see that grace in the Sacrament which else is invisible to flesh, and covered under the ashes of unbeleefe. Let all be quasht with this, My soule, God hath said it, I see nothing but water, but there is Christ with water to regeneration.

4 Close with the Spirit of the Sacrament. Lastly, cloze with the Spirit, and meete it at the Sacrament. If thou meete it not there, its because thou bringest not faith with thee:

thee: for that is there for ever inseparably. Grone in thy spirit unto the Spirit of Christ, that hee may sustaine thy bottomlesse heart in her desire after the grace of the Sacrament. Say thus, Oh blessed Spirit of Baptisme, remember thou wert given by the Lord Iesus at his ascension for thy Church, Iohn 7.56,57. Now Christ is glorified, now let thy Spirit be given to bring the life of the Sacrament into me! Once when the world was a Chaos, the Spirit of creation fostered and brooded the waters, and brought forth order and matter for each part of the world! Oh now come downe with thy fire, and warme this water, make it effectuall, for the scattering of my darkenesse, errour, rebellion, corruption, and the purging of old Adam, the mortifying and consuming of my concupiscence and lusts! And then travell againe with me in this thy Ordinance, till Christ and the new creature bee formed in me! Make me thy offspring, and generation: breede the thoughts, affections, and disposition of the new birth in me! Oh make this fountaine and laver blessed & fruitfull to be the seede of Christ in me! Once thou didst so worke with Iordan, that the washing of a Leper, caused his flesh to returne as the flesh of a child. Take away my leprosie also, and make me as a little childe! Once thy Angell so stirred the Poole, that who so stept in next was healed, of what disease soever hee was sicke! O stirre this Poole also, make it an healing water, put into it the vertue of him, that with a word spoken could cure all maladies. Heale mine Lord, by this poole: if an Angell could heale a lame legge, a blinde eye, a deafe eare: thy Spirit can heale worse diseases, the disease of my nature, the distempers of pride, worldlinesse, selfelove, impatience, infidelity, and what not! As Elisha having the cloake of his Master, with the promise of his Spirit, smote the waters, and caused them to goe this way and that, till he went over dry: so doe thou cry, Where is the Lord God of Baptisme? The Lord Iesus in the water, the Spirit of regeneration? Oh! let the Arke carry mee safe and free from the gulfe of wrath and destruction! First, O holy Lord, let thy Spirit cast his salt into these waters, which my sinne hath made barren and accursed, (even as all other creatures) and sanctifie them by union, and put a blessing upon them, implanting the roote of the Lord Iesus into my poore soule, by dipping me into them, that so as verily as I behold my childs face, and my owne flesh cleansed from spots by outward water, so surely wee may finde our soules and spots thereof to bee washed by the bloud of Christ (this true laver of the new Birth) unto remiſſion of ſinnes, and eternall life? Thus much of this point, I now come to the third and laſt.

The third generall. The end of it.

The third generall in the Deſcription is, the end whereto baptiſme ſerveth. And that is, the ſealing up of all the grace (mentioned before) to be the ſoules owne, in aſſured perſwaſion and poſſeſſion. I ſay not that this is the end which all baptized ones attaine unto: nay, not all, who yet by the word and faith doe attaine ſome comfortable fruit of Baptiſme. But this I ſay is the end which God intends in the Sacrament: To ſeale up the ſoule to an aſſured feeling and reall partaking of thoſe holy things of Chriſt, which are here offered. I meane not that this ſealing of Baptiſme is inherent in it, ſo as if the Spirit of regeneration were but an attendant to Baptiſme: no, in no wiſe: but this; where the Lord meanes to beſtow upon a beleeving ſoule (which though it relies upon his Word and Promiſe, yet findes many doubts and feares) this grace of knowing it ſelfe to beleeve, to be regenerated, to be elect, to be heire to heaven: (which reflexion is the worke of the holy Ghoſt) there the Lord uſeth the Sacrament of Baptiſme to be the inſtrument of this aſſurance, and to make up the evidence of the word, full and effectuall. For even as the ſeale annexed to an Evidence, makes it paſt queſtion (as I ſaid before) ſo doth this Seale added to the Word, perfect the evidence of it, and therefore we may truly ſay, carries in it the laſt, beſt, and uttermoſt evidence, which the Lord hath to beſtow upon the ſoule, to put her out of queſtion.

To ſeale our regeneration.

By looking at the Covenant.

To repeate things ſpoken already, is not my purpoſe: onely apply the generall to particular: The ſeale of Baptiſme lookes at the extent of the Covenant: Thou knoweſt what it is to have the Lord to be thy God in Chriſt, I ſpeake (even now) at large of the grace of Baptiſme. The ſelfe ſame is the extent of the Covenant; it reacheth not one inch ſhorter, than that I ſpake there. Now marke, as large as that is, ſo large is this Seale of Baptiſme; and the Lord keeper of the great Seale is the Spirit of Chriſt: he it is who brings it forth to the ſoule that needes it, and hungers after it by the taſte of the graciouſneſſe and ſweetneſſe of God in the Covenant. And he askes the ſoule, and ſaith: Poore ſoule, have not I oft convinced thee by my promiſe, of my faithfull meaning? Have I not ſaid, I will never faile or deceive thee? Yes Lord, but I am ſold under carnall ſence and infidelity: Well, but what ſaiſt thou if I bring forth the markes, the wounds, the water, and bloud of the Lord Ieſus ſide, and ſprinkle them upon thee? When Tamar knew not

how

how to convince Juda, lo, ſhee ſends him the cloake, ſtaffe, and ſignet, asking him, Whoſe they were? and when he ſaw them hee was convinced. This courſe was better than words, it had a reall relation in it. So here the Spirit brings out the very inſtruments of aſſurance, and laies water upon thy fleſh to ſecure thee, Chriſt in his life and death is thine: and ſhall not this be a reall relation above the naked word unto thee? Yes ſurely, if together with the outward preſenting of the things, he alſo clap the Seale upon thy ſoule: and leave a print upon thy ſoft heart, which may aſſure thee he hath beene there, to fetch out thy ſlaviſh feare and infidelitie. Eph. 1. 13. Reade Epheſians, Chapter 1. verſe 13. where this Spirit is called the ſealer of the Promiſe: its called the earneſt of our inheritance, Eph. 4. 30. and purchaſed poſſeſſion. Reade alſo Epheſ. 4. 30. where it is called the Sealer of our redemption; By which phraſes, all the whole grace of Chriſt is meant, viz. That the Spirit in Baptiſme ſeales our Vocation, our Iuſtification, Adoption, Sanctification, and the reſt, one as well as the other.

Now for uſe. If this be true, what cauſe of mourning is there for us in theſe times, that the grace and ſealing power of the Spirit in Baptiſme is ſo unknowne to the body of Congregations in this Church? How few behold Baptiſme with ſuch an eye? Oh! how doe the moſt turne it into a ceremony? Some of the richer ſort, making it a ceremony of pompe and ſenſuality: the poorer, of common paſſage and forme, which when its over, the Pageant is done. The better ſort acknowledge it but an initiating ordinance, ſerving to make men viſible Chriſtians. But as for grace, eſpecially this exceeding grace of the ſealing Spirit of Adoption and aſſurance, Act. 19. 2. what one of an hundred ſees it? Oh lamentable! We reade, that when certaine diſciples of Iohns baptiſme at Epheſus, were askt by Paul, If they had received the Holy Ghoſt ſince they beleeved? They anſwered, They knew not ſo much as whether there was any Holy Ghoſt or no. So may I ſay of our people: Alas, they are ſo farre from the Seale of Baptiſme, that they know not whether there be any ſuch thing or not? They know not whether God hath any Ordinance of ſo high nature as this, to convey aſſurance into a man of his regeneration: And how can ſuch chuſe but live a ſad, drooping courſe? Vſe. 1. Branch 1.

Nay, to this I may adde, that it is the cauſe of thouſands of Chriſtians (whom we ſhould highly offend, if wee queſtioned them) who ſcarſe ſee neede of ſuch a ſealing Ordinance. They praiſe God, Branch 2.

they have beleeved their ſalvation, and ſince that, they have beene rid of all feares and doubts, and walke on and on without ayle or annoyance. Indeede they found ſome adoe with themſelves ere they could attaine faith. But when they once got it, they got all at once, and ſince feele ſmall doubts or oppoſitions to it, wherein or without. No do? What? was all grace laid in one houre in your boſome? Have ye no ſtepping in of Sathan, fleſh, infidelity, revolt, bad world to unſetle ye? I will not judge you: but judge your ſelves, and enquire, whether that ſudden peace of yours be not rather ſuch a one as ſavors of preſumption of a deſire to be troubled no longer about the matter, than ſolid and profound: feare the worſt, the beſt will ſave it ſelfe. Tremble to thinke God ſhould have an Ordinance in ſtore, which you ſtand in no neede of. If it be ſo, then ſuch as neede it, ſhall have it, but you may miſſe it well enough.

anch 3. To theſe I may adde another (though better object of mourning) whoſe hearts are afflicted enough, for lacke of aſſurance: but what 1.4.16.& with their ſelfe-loving reſt in their complements, and not going to the golden Scepter (with Eſther) and what with their depth of melancholy, hardneſſe to be perſwaded; as alſo their deepe bondage by unbeleefe; they will not heare of ſuch a poſſibilitie of ſealing aſſurance, but either thinke it a fable, or farre from their reach: and therefore ſet downe their ſtaffe, that (if unbeleefe and ſtaggering can doe it) all their dayes muſt be miſerable. The Lord hath 1.3.18. removed them farre from proſperity, and put out their light. Oh, un- 11.32.6. thankefull ones! Doe ye thus requite the Lord for his Sacrament? Is this your meditation, application of the ſealing power of it? Is 7.12,13. it too good for ye, with Ahaz; to receive a ſigne from God! Doe ye not neede it? Or, are ye ſo ſaped in bondage and anguiſh, that ye heede it not? Why then yeeld ye purpoſely to it? Why ſtrive ye not to lay in for any grace which God hath for ye? What ſervice ſhall God have from ye without it? If ye ſlight this comfort, muſt ye not needs ſlight obedience? If God ſhould ſtrengthen ye in ſeekng it, and hold ye off; yet is there any ſuch employment, ſo precious as this. Oh? poore ſoules, if lamenting would doe you good, what neede have ye of it? Oh! conſider and cõme out of your dungeon! Tell me, when our Adverſaries the Papiſts laugh & ſcorne the Doctrine of aſſurance, ſay its impoſſible; doe you favour them? Sure I am in your conſcience and converſation, ye are of another ſtamp: 11.3.18. and doe ye not tremble that you ſhould dwell next doore to ſuch, and fall into the ſame ſtreame of their error?

Secondly,

Secondly, let all humble ones, that would follow the Lord in his Ordinance (if by any meanes they might comprehend that for which they are comprehended of Chriſt) admire and adore this bounty of God in his Sacrament, who ſo long ſince thy Baptiſme, when thou thoughteſt no other, but thou hadſt beene forgotten, yet hath remembred, or offers to remember thee with the fruit of thy Baptiſme: who could have dreamt it? Once, when Peter heard Chriſt offer to waſh him, he told him, he ſhould never do ſo meane an office to him. But when our Saviour replyed; What I now doe, thou knoweſt not, but hereafter thou ſhalt know; then he changed his minde. When the Lord gave thee Baptiſme in thine infancie (which was a pledge of further favor) he ſhewed thee mercy. But loe, he had a deeper reach; and in due time, thou ſhouldſt know it; and now he offers it thee: No Sacrament paſſeth thee, but (if thy heart and minde be matches) he revives the print of thy Baptiſme unto thee. Oh! Why is not thy heart broken at it? Lord, I have lived looſely, and baſely, this twenty, thirty, forty yeares, ſince thy baptizing me: Shewing that I was not much the better for it: And now ſhouldeſt thou at leaſt ſend a ſhowre to fetch up the ſeede of regeneration, from under this drie clod; Out of the eater bring ſweetneſſe? and create thy ſelfe in a wombe ſo old, barren, and paſt all hope of new birth?

Sarah laughed (the text ſaith) when ſhe heard of ſuch newes: But truely Lord my heart hath cauſe to rend in pieces to ſee ſuch mercy. Oh Lord, I ſee with thee a thouſand yeares are as one day! Thou calleſt things that are, as if they were not? Thirtie yeares of ignorance, ſaped in the world, carnall, civill, ſaples under the doctrine of thy Grace and Covenant, (it may be alſo) a ſwearing, drunken, uncleane wretch (to be ſure, a ſon of old Adam) ſtill an hypocrite and unbeleever. Oh! ſhouldſt thou now (ere I die) prevent hell for me, and cauſe that word of Regeneration, which never afforded any ſavour to mee, now to ſhew me, that thy Sacrament forty yeares ſince caſt upon mee, hath not loſt her ſtrength and efficacie? Oh Lord! me thinkes now I ſee plainly why thou wert aforehand with me; Even that I might be aſhamed I ſhould be ſo behind with thee: That being on the ſurer hand, I might ply thy Covenant the more earneſtly! Oh Lord, if thou haſt not prevented me with the grace of the Spirit, I had ſlept in death! and in thy livery, lived and died a Traitor. But now, ſince thy Covenant hath entred into me: behold, I ſee thy Sacrament hath added ſome ſtrength unto my unbeleeving heart; and laying all thy dealing together, I perceive thou meaneſt to heape hot coales of fire upon mee, that I might at leaſure, (ere I goe to the pit and be no more ſeene) know and feele that bleſſed uſe of Baptiſme, which I never ſaw. Oh Lord, I know there is a ſealing power in it! its an annex to thy Covenant. No ſooner did that allure me to beleeve, but thy Spirit joyned it ſelfe to me, to ſecond it, to ſtrengthen my fainting heart, and then I ſaw,

3. If thou hadſt meant to deſtroy me, thou wouldeſt never have ſpent one cord upon me! But ſeeing thou meaneſt to ſave me, all ſhall do me good, Promiſe and Seale and ſo I have found it Lord, and bleſſe thee in the view of ſuch experience! How many hundreds of my age, education, and faſhion, have quite given thee over in the Covenant they made in baptiſme? But now I doe adore and wonder at this unſpeakeable love of thine towards me; Oh let it never bee forgotten.

Thirdly, let it teach thee to examine thy ſelfe about the truth of the ſealing grace of the Spirit in thy baptiſme. If the Seale bee as large as the Patent, to all uſes and ends of it; the way to trie thy ſelfe herein, will be this, to examine thy ſelfe about the worke of the word of Regeneration in thee. If that have brought thee neere to thy birth, lo, here is the Spirit for thee, to give ſtrength for bringing thee forth to the light. For baptiſme truly underſtood, ſeales up all which the Word hath bred in thee. Deceive not thy ſelfe in thinking that the water alone will beget thee to God. No, 22. its the Word of God, 1 Pet. 1. ult. which muſt doe it, as Iam. 1. 16.
8. Of his free will hee begat us by the Word of Truth. Trie thy ſelfe then by the uſuall acts of the Word of Regeneration, and ſo thou maiſt gather that this Spirit belongs to thee. This is no place for mee to digreſſe: I will cull out only two or three things which may ſerve for this uſe. Deceive not thy ſelfe, and God will not deceive thee: Didſt thou ever then feele in thy ſelfe that this immortall ſeede, caſt into thy eare, did ſo deſcend into thy heart, as to worke any 1, 11. immortall hope in thee? The Goſpel reveales immortality and glory to the ſoule: Did it ever bring to light any ſuch thing to thee? Did it ever conceive in thee a ſenſible diſtaſte of all hopes below, and raiſe thy affections above? Did it ever cauſe the things of the earth, long life, health, ſucceſſe, wealth, money, pleaſure, to be deſpiſed in compariſon of the hope which is ſet before thee? Cameſt thou ever from the Word, another man in thy aime, appetite, favor and love, than thou wenteſt? Did thy heart ever burne within within thee there? And when thou camest with earthly, base thoughts, did the Lord so dash them by heavenly doctrine, and the hope of Christ, that thou returnedst to thy house with a distaste of thy selfe for them? Wert thou ever so touched and taken with the promise of the word, that thou wert loath to forgoe it, for any delight? In particular, try thy selfe thus. 1. Hath the word of the law cast a destroying seede of death into thee, and taken away that life of old Adam, and jollitie in sinne? Hath it defaced thy old image, discovered thee to thy selfe to be an Alien from the life of God, and common-wealth of Israel? The sonne of an Hittite and Amorite, as odious as one of thirtie yeere old would be to thee, who ever was baptized? Instances of the words working.

Secondly, hath the Gospel cast a better seede of hope in Christ by the Covenant of reconciliation into thee? In thy hearing of this glad tidings, hath the Lord bored an eare in thee, by which this seede might conceive & kindle in thy heart? Hath it wrought the preparation of heart in thee, by brokennesse tendernesse, humility, unwearinesse of paine, selfe-deniall? &c. Hath it setled and digested in thee, as a thing of such beauty, as in comparison of which, all the glory of the earth is drosse? Hath it abode in thee, and wrought an undecaying sweetnesse into thee? Hast thou felt in thy wombe the paines of true life, and the new birth? viz. How corruption of nature, selfe, and infidelity, have rebelled against the worke, both of the Law and Gospel? Hast thou with Rebecca (in this combat) gone to God with thy complaint of the infinite lets that have held thee from beleeving? And hath the Lord by his Promise and perswasions, fastened thy anchor of soule upon his bottome of free grace and truth, renouncing thy owne hopes, feares, performances? So that now thou hast him close bound to thee in his word, from ever forsaking thee? Then I say to thee, thou art one whom the word hath bred Christ in, & formed life in thee by faith. What wanteth then? Oh! thy heart is fickle, and too weake to buy and sell upon the bare word without wavering! yea, thou hast much adoe to get victory over thy uncertaine heart! Well, no wonder. Thou seest nothing, and to resist sence, is a great worke: yet be faithfull with God and give not over his promise, & by due leaving to the bare truth of the Lord, begge further light, and rest not in thy measure, much lesse yeeld to any love of sinne to darken and defile thee: And so doing, I assure thee, that to thee, (and to none but such) the seale of baptisme belongs: thou shalt finde 2. the Ioh. 16. 9, 10. the Lord will by his Spirit convince thee deepelier; the Spirit of Baptisme shall bring forth Gods pledges, shew thee them, convey into thy faint heart, strength, confidence and courage of faith, & set thee above thy distempers, as if they had never annoyed thee: If, I say, he have purposed such a decree of grace unto thee, he will effect it in time: else know, that (howsoever) yet thy service is blessed, and thy faith hath bred the life of regeneration in thee.

Branch 1. To young Novices. Fourthly, let this be exhortation, to urge us to apply our selves to baptisme, for the sealing worke of the Spirit therein. And first I direct my speech to young novices under the meanes: Slight not off the first incklings of this sealing Spirit. The first layes and heates of the holy Ghost and fire, doe usually breake forth in youth. Consider, its not a dayes worke, nor a thing easie to settle the Spirit of sealing upon thy soule: there be many steps to it. Oh! looke to it, ye yong beginners; One cause why old Christians walke so heavily, is because they never heeded, or hatched the first motions of the Spirit in their beginnings! If then the Spirit of God doe call and stirre in thee, by early affections, love, zeale, enquiry; answer,

1 Sam. 3. 9. Speake Lord, for thy servant heares; put him not off by ease or bondage; If such a thought come, as this, What a dramme of Grace and Life of Christ is worth, or what vow thou madest in Baptisme, and how retchlesse thou hast beene to keepe it: dally not with such items, shake not off, either pangs of terrour, by lusts of youth; or pangs of hope & love, with ease and sloth: for so the Spirit of sealing is fore-stalled, and the faire forwardnesse thereto, will hardly Iohn 5. 4. be recovered. Put in thy foote presently upon the Angells stirring the Poole; if thou have an heart, none shall prevent thee heere, as there. If these seeds were not choked, and these buds cropt, they would proove the assuring, sealing Spirit of grace in due time. Through contempt of it, the Lord leaves youth to that hideousnes and ripenesse in sinne, yea a spirit of desperate debauchednesse in Reve. 22. 11. drinking, oathes and villany, as would not be beleeved of such youth.

Branch 2. To elder ones. Secondly, I speake to all other, apply your selves to the Sacrament of Baptisme for this last evidence and seale of the Spirit, to let you know that ye are the Lords. Lin not till the Lord hath sealed ye for his owne: set his marke upon you, not to be blotted out: Looke up at each Sacrament, each Baptizing ye see, to the Lord; that (which in the former point I spake) as he hath applyed the grace of Baptisme by the promise unto you, so now he would apply his Seale of assurance

assurance unto you by his Baptisme. Let not such a mercy be there to be had & you not aware of it. Thinke it not too good to receive, if God will grant it. What is freer than gift to an unworthy one? Lord I have long sate waiting for it, both by Promise and Sacrament. At length when I little thinke, let thy Chariots come to my doore, as Iosephs to Iacob, that I may say, Its enough: Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace. I would not be to seeke of this againe for the world. Say as Peter, Wash not feete, but all parts, throughly drench me in this laver; urge the Lord, Oh! though I am the unworthiest of thousands to enjoy it, yet it is as easie for thee to set thy Seale upon me, as for me to print soft waxe; to put on Christ upon me, as for mē to put on my cloathes: Let not my soule be sad & doubtfull all my dayes, for that which is so easie for thee to give. Let me have that Seale Lord, and it shall be above al securities of land and lease: cloath me with this Robe, and all other shreeds shall bee base unto me. Remember how long I have waited for thy salvation Lord, as one that longeth for newes from a farre countrey. Oh! they shall be welcome! And for my part, I confesse, except thou helpe in the worke, and apply thy Seale, all my Hearings, all thy Ordinances, Word, Sacraments, Promises, shall leave me as they found me; not one of the benefits of Christ can relish my heart, nor goe into my spirit, except thou draw it in to me; Oh! how woefull shall it be, to see all my labout as water spilt upon the ground?

Gen. 45. 28. Luke 2. 29. Ioh. 13. 9. Rom. 13. ult. Gen. 49. 18. Ioh. 6. 44.

Thirdly, I adde this one item and caveat to all relapsed ones, who are sunke from their first comfort & hope in the promise. Give not the Lord over for all that: Be not sullen and discontent with him, nor thy selfe. Mourne and spare not, that thou shouldest no more watch to such a trust as the Lord hath put into thee: That either thou shouldest be weary of clinging to the promise: That Christ should not be to thee yesterday, to day, and the same for ever: That either by feare of holding out, or presumption of thy owne, or ease, or worldlines, or especially by that body of death, thou shouldest give way to new contents, the devils painted bables, and the fashion of this base, declining, formall, hollow world. But be not hereby discouraged and desperate with thy selfe: Shall a man fall, and not arise? Look back to this Arke & Ship of Baptisme, whence thou art fallen; No new Baptisme shall neede; the old (if ever thou wert baptised truely) shall serve; lay then hold of that, and be conforted. I knew an holy woman who never found her selfe eclipsed and damped in her comfort, but shee found comfort by her Bap-

Pſal. 119. 94. lay hold upon one broken peice of this ſhip, and ſay, Lord, I have bin thine, ſave mee: I have felt thee ſweete in the promiſe and Seale, though now it be otherwiſe through a dead heart; doe but crawle in the waters, and touch a brim of this ſhip, and lo, the Pilot will receive thee in againe: not to make a trade and falling ſickneſſe of often revolting, but to make thee more wary and fearfull, never to provoke the Lord in like manner, through his grace ſuſtaining thee.

Vſe 5. Laſtly, if God have revived thy ſpirit by this Seale of baptiſme, walke before him in the ſtrength of it: Seale backe to him the fruit of it, in a moſt faithfull, cloſe, and wary courſe. Conſider, the ſealing Spirit hath many bleſſed properties; learne, hold, nouriſh them in thy heart and courſe: Give teſtimonie to God and his cauſe, honour and Religion; ſeale him this fruit of thy ſervice, who hath not neglected thee in ſuch a favour. Diſdaine not any weaker ones, who have not attained thy ſtrength, cannot ſaile upon the maine, but are faine with their poore weake faith to goe by the ſhore: pittie and helpe ſuch with the Spirit of compaſſion, for his ſake who ſealed thee, when hee owed thee no ſuch mercy. Apply thy ſelfe to the markes of this ſeale, looke upon each letter of this ſtampe, and
The fruits of the ſealing of Baptiſme. let it teach thee thy duty. The ſealing Spirit is a ſpirit of ſingular peace of conſcience, and joy in the lively hope of ſalvation; liberty with God, fulneſſe of faith and perſwaſion, confidence in prayer, pureneſſe of heart and life, and ſo of the reſt. Doſt thou walke thus?
1 Pet. 3. 21. Approve thy ſelfe in ſome truth herein. Touching the firſt S. Peter tels thee, baptiſme is the anſwer of a good, that is, an excuſing conſcience. What is that? If it be demanded, whether it bee broken, humbled, beleeving, pardoned? It anſwers, yea Lord, thou knoweſt it. Haſt thou peace thereby? Doſt thou walke with it daily, and
Rom. 5. 1. Ephe. 6. 15. nouriſh it? If ſo, this peace will be as Armour to thee. Paul, Eph. 6. 15. calles it the ſhooes of peace, for as by them our tender feete walke ſafely upon the flints, and rockes, and gravell, which elſe would cut and wound us: ſo by peace, we have ſafety in troubles, Iſa. 1. 2. Phil. 4. 7. count them all joy, and are not unſetled by them in our courſe; If ſo, then alſo this peace wil rule our hearts and mindes: We will be kept in awe by it, that rather than we would loſe and forfeit that, we would loſe any jewell: ſo deare it is and ſo hard to recover. Oh!

it

if so, then we shall not be moved in all the tumults of this hurrying world, the malice of Tyrants, the declining of Hypocrites, the great jollity of Time-servers, the scuffling for honours and great things: but this peace shall calme us. Againe, if this peace of heart by justification bee in us, it will present us with an holy complacence in our estate, a sweete content in God above any other object: as one that hath found a Pearle hath fuller contentment, than in the corne, cattell, and trifles formerly possessed; this comprehends al and drownes them: And the heart of such a man is at ease, he carrieth more about him than they who have large possessions. So, there is not onely a quietnesse from former warre: but an excellent reflexion of welfare, such as was in Adam ere hee sinned: and in this, better that he desires not to change it for any other. And lastly, to this present sweetnes & joy, there is also afforded to such a soule, an undecaying taste of the glory to come; a lively hope and waiting for it, as one who hath an earnest in hand of a full summe, waiteth for that summe to be wholly paid at the day appointed. So it is here. The peace which worketh sweetnes of spirit for the present, enlarges it selfe further, & gives the soule a taste of that eternal joy which it shal possesse hereafter, when it shal put off this corruption, & earthly tabernacle for one not made with hands.

Secondly, the Spirit of sealing hath fulnesse of faith in it. It is therefore compared to full sayles of winde, which carry the ship an end. Is it so with thee? Art thou free (in good measure) from a life of sence, from judging things of God by the outsides? Canst thou rest in this, that although thou neither heerest voyce from Heaven, nor seest shape, yet there is a Sun within the clouds? There is a God, and all the fidelity, truth, and love is still in the promises, which ever was without shadow of turning. Art thou by this faith carried above those feares, doubts, distempers, which (when the coast was misty) thou wert annoyed with? Walkest thou now with cleerer comfort, joy, and perswasion of Gods love, providence, promises? Is thy heart as the Arke above the rockes? Is it farre otherwise with thee in the frequency, the dismalnesse of thy unbeleefe, than formerly? Are thy buffetings, temptations, lusts, well blowne over? Then hold and nourish this fruit in thee, knowing it is no common thing. But Oh Lord! where is the man to whom I speake this? 2. Heb. 10, 22. Rom. 5. 2, 3, 4. Gen. 7, 17.

Thirdly, nourish thy liberty. Was it wont to be an unusuall thing to thee to be clogged with the weight of sin, Heb. 12. 1. vexed with the 3. Heb. 12. 1.

And this be ſaid of this third generall. Alſo of the end of Baptiſme: and ſo of the whole doctrine and uſe of Baptiſme (the more largely, becauſe I ſhall touch it no more, as I purpoſe to doe the other) Oh! how is it to be lamented, that the knowledge and uſe of it is no more underſtood by our Miniſters and people! Ephe. 6. 2.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Supper of the Lord. The deſcription and parts of it. And firſt of the Sacramentall Acts of it.

COme now to the Doctrine and diſcourſe of the Supper of the Lord: wherein, as I foreſee, that thoſe things which doe peculiarly concerne the handling of it, will take up much more roome than the former of Baptiſme, (as being the Sacrament of growne ones, and therefore having in it more life for preſent adminiſtration and uſe, than the other of Infants:) So alſo I ſee much labour is ſpared me in this latter, becauſe of thoſe generals which unavoydably have beene handled in the former; I ſay, ſo far as thoſe things do agree to the Supper, ſubjects only being changed. So farre then as ought hath beene touch before, of the Order, the Conſtitution, the Acts, Grace, or Sealing of Baptiſme, which may ſute and agree with this of the Supper, let none looke for the Repetition of it: onely in ſuch grounds, I will content my ſelfe to point to the ſpeciall application in few words, and dwell the longer upon things peculiarly proper to the Supper. And thoſe are theſe three: The Acts to be performed; The diſtinct grace offered in it. The ſpeciall end of it, which ſtands in the ſealing power, and the object whereabout it is occupied.

Deſcription of it.

The Supper of the Lord then (to deſcribe it firſt:) is the ſecond Sacrament of the Goſpel, conſiſting of Ieſus Chriſt exhibited in the Bread and Wine, wherein by certaine Acts duely performed about the Elements; whole Chriſt, body and bloud is conveyed to the Soule, for the ſealing up of her growth, and encreaſe in the Grace of the Covenant.

1 Branch of the order: Vſe.

Firſt, I point in a word at the order. In the firſt Sacrament, I noted noted the impudency of ſuch as will invert Gods order; Now in this I taxe the diſtruſt of ſuch as profit not by the connexion of this to the other. Who ſo then have truely taſted of the Grace of Baptiſme, and have lyen in the wombe thereof; Let them come in, and humbly, yet confidently, pleade for the ſuccour of this ſecond. For the Lord who hath no ſuperfluous nouriſhment for Baſtards; yet wants no neceſſary releefe for ſonnes and daughters. The Lord is not as that worke-man, who having built the houſe leaves it at Randome to who ſo will, to mend; it may droppe downe to the ground for him, its none of his: But the Lords buildings are all his owne, and he compts it no leſſe pertayning to himſelfe to keepe it in reparations, than firſt of free grace, to make it an Habitation of his owne, by his Spirit. Yea, the new borne Babe, whimpering for the breſt, pleades not more effectually with the tender Mothers heart, to give it, than that Soule which is really bred the Lords, hath liberty to cry, Abba, father, ſuſtaine me, preſerve me: I am thine Lord, ſave me, maintaine thy lot and portion in me, as by all holy Ordinances of ſupport, ſo by this thy Sacrament, as moſt peculiar to that end. Lord of thee I am, 1 Cor. 1.30. Blood, Fleſh, bone, all I am, I am from thee: maintaine the Creation of thy hands by all meanes, againſt all enemies, in all ſpirituall welfare and proſperity, meete for thy glory, and the good of thine, ſo farre as all thy Promiſes, and Priviledges (belonging to the members of thy Body) can effect it. Remember, it will be as great a diſhonour for thee, to leave the workemanſhip of thy hands, as if thou hadſt begun to build and given over thy worke at the firſt.

1 Pet. 2. 2.

2 Branch. The compound.

Secondly, I ſay, it conſiſts of Ieſus-bread and wine: Sacramentall union hath beene toucht already. Here I adde, that the Lord Ieſus, who unites himſelfe to his Word of Promiſe to his beleeving ones, bidding them, Eate good things, and delight themſelves in fatneſſe; Thereby, putting into his Word the ſpirit of nouriſhment, refreſhing, and ſupport to the ſoule, doth alſo unite himſelfe to Bread and Wine, (both Unions are Spirituall, both Verball & Sacramentall, yet Sacramentall including the Verball as above it) to convey Spirituall refreſhing more fully, more immediately, more lively into the Soule, than by the former alone. As if he ſhould ſay, Oh! poore ſoule, I am content to unite my power and fulneſſe of ſtrength and comfort, not onely to my Word and Promiſes, but even to my Creatures alſo, (& yet thinke it no abaſement neither) for thy good; I know thou haſt as great neede of a ſigne of my good-will and love to uphold thee, as ever thou hadst of my Creating power to forme mine Image at the first in thee: If there were use of both Word and Water to become a seed of Regeneration to create thee: there is as great use of the same Word, and Bread and Wine to cherish thee. No man ever hated, but preserved his owne flesh: To shew then how deare thou art to me (even as the wife to the husband) loe, nothing shall ever part thee and mee, which I can do for thee: I that was with the former to breed thee, will be with the latter to feed and nourish thee: no necessary ayde shall be wanting, for all ends meet, as well to keepe thee fat and Wel-liking in goodnesse, as to make thee good; I who created thee of nothing, yea of worse than nothing to be mine Image, will not faile of good to make thee better: therefore acknowledge my love and faithfulnesse in both. Eph. 5. 29. Psal. 84. 11. Esay 57. 19.

The Vse may be to convince all such as have a sinister and unequall conceit of the worth of Sacraments, as if the necessity and Sacramentall union of one, were not as essentiall and thankworthy as the other. Papists first, although they magnifie both Sacraments too farre; yet debase the Sacrament of the new birth under the other, which they call of the Altar: Here they put all their confidence, and lay all their treasure; Christ shall not only be united Sacramentally to it, but even Transubstantiated into it: its their Pandora, to which they have brought all their base additions to adorne and set it forth: whereas the union with both these is one and the same for their severall use: and if not equall, than none at all. Contrary to whom, is another conceite of such as thinke, there is lesse use of this union than the other: seeing the Church may far worse want the Sacrament of ingrafting than the other. To which I answer, that although in some respect its not to be denyed that the Sacrament of a Christian being, hath in it selfe a preheminence above the other of well-being; yet in the wisedome of the ordeyner, and for the continualnesse of use which the Supper hath to repaire the daily wanings and decayes of the soule: its most certaine there ought to be made no comparison between their necessity, no unequalnesse to be imagined. But as the child being asked whether it love father or mother best, is taught to say, I love them both best, I love neither better than other; so ought a Christian to say of these Whereas the administration of God in the old Church is alledged, That their circumcision was long without a Passeover: I answere, What God can doe by one when he denies another, is not here debated: but rather what eſteeme he requires of both, ſo long as both equally may be enjoyed: Nay further, we know God bare with his Church for the long intermiſſion both of Circumciſion and paſſeover, after the ordaining of both: how much more ſhall he not tollerate onely, but ſupply abundantly the neceſſary want of the one, if perſecution compell it? But otherwiſe in the liberty of both, who ſhould dare to dreame of an inequality?

theſe foure particulars. Firſt, the ſenſiblenes, Secondly, the aptneſſe Thirdly, the ſimplicity. Fourthly, the fulnes of theſe two Elements.

The firſt ſenſibleneſſe.

Touching the firſt, ſeeing the Lord would have theſe Elements ſo plaine and ſenſible reſemblers of heavenly nouriſhment, how ſenſibly ſhould our ſoules be lifted up by them to the things reſembled? It comes to my mind what Moſes, Deut. 8. 2, 3. &c. tels the Iſraelites, that the Lord had ſo palpably diſcovered himſelfe to them in the Wilderneſſe, that for ſhame they could not but know, beleeve, and obey him. The Lord (ſaith he) hath revealed himſelfe to all our ſences, ye have heard his terrible voyce in the Mount, ye have ſeene the rocke guſh forth water, a Table ſpread in the Wilderneſſe; all other wonders, you have felt him on your feete, your ſhooes not waxing old; worne him upon your backes, your apparrell not tearing: and ſhall the Lord be ſtill a ſtranger? goe fight againſt the Philiſtims. We know what Ionathan ſaid to his ſervant: Be of good courage, if God give us a ſigne that our journy is from him, we ſhall prevaile. So I ſay, this hill is craggy, & there is ſmall likelineſſe of overcomming if we looke to carnall reaſon: But ſeeing theſe Elements or rather the Lord in them, ſay to us, Come up, be we of good cheere, beleeve and goe up the Lord is with us, and hath given us a ſigne that we ſhal prevaile, as unlikely things as theſe may ſeeme, to reſemble and convey Chriſt our nouriſhment unto us. Secondly, as touching the aptneſſe of Bread and seales, rather ayming graciously at the most easie, peculiar way to let in Christ, than dealing in some dark course, little to the purpose for our good. He knew it was no easie thing for flesh and blood to be subdued to the Sacrament of Christ our nourishment: therefore he offers him most aptly and fitly unto us, that like might carry us to like: As he saith, 1 Cor. 14.19. I had rather speake one word in the Church to understanding and edifying, than 10000 in a strange language. So the Lord had rather give us one or two signes of our spirituall refreshing, with propriety and facility, than a 1000. with darknes: And why? because he knowes they are mysteries which he offereth both in word and Sacraments. If then he should speak to us in strange phrases, a farre off, or offer us Sacraments of things intricate and obscure, how should we conceive him when a darke thing is opened by a darker? If the Trumpet give an uncertaine sound, who shall prepare to the battell? Sacraments are Gods Legacies: If then wise men would not leave legacies unapt to their Children as Bookes to an Idiot, or shop and tooles to a Student; but wise and apt gifts according to the use of such as are to enjoy them, how much more the Lord? 1 Cor. 14.19. 1 Cor. 14.8.

The use is to confute Popish preaching and Sacraments in point of their obscurity. Alas! far are they from crucifying Christ plainly before the people, by manifest ripping up of the mystery of godlines, Christ incarnate, crucified and ascended, to be the life and support of his Church. Rather they maintaine this principle, That ignorance is the mother of devotion, and wrap Christ againe in his swathe-bands of darkenes, that no man may conceive him: yea, when they have so handled the matter, that the people are carried furthest frō Christ, both in doctrine and seales, then are they quietest and their hearts most at peace. A signe that Sathan the God of this world dwells among them, and keepes all locked up in peace, minds, consciences and affections, so that the light of Christ might not enter, but rather all prophaneness, and Idolatry might beare sway. As for the aptnes of nourishing Elements, what shew is there left in their Sacrament of their Altar, either in the matter, (which they have taken in part from the people) or in their administration (which stands in Heathenish obscurities & rites of no significancy:) or in their scope (which is to give God a sacrifice, not to take from him any nourishment) Therefore let us abhorre them: and both blesse God that he hath not quite suffred us to be drowned in their darkenesse: beseech him to purge us more and more in these ordinances, and especially grow more capable by them: for if Vse. 1 Tim. 3. alt. 2 Cor. 4.4.

theſe Glaſſes will not helpe us, we are not dimme, but blinde.

3 Simplicity. I proceede to the third, the ſimplicity of them. We ſee by what homely naked Elements the Lord Ieſus reſembles this ſpirituall nouriſhment: not by coſtly bread, ſpiced and delicate, nor by compound and coſtly drinks (ſuch as ſome nations, Turkiſh and others uſe at this day) ſuch as might better ſute with the palate, than ought elſe: nor yet with coſtly ſtate of Celebration: but homely bread & common wine: yea, and that when the bellies of the Diſciples had bin filled. To the hungry and thirſty, meate and drinke is welcome for it ſelfe: But our Saviour offering theſe to full ſtomackes, would have them to know, that other things were by him intended.

Vſe 1. The uſe is to confute all Popiſh bravery in the adminiſtration of this Sacrament; their apiſh ceremonies and trickes uſed to ſet forth Gods materialls, as if he were too ſimple for them: Oh! They muſt have ſo many pompous Rites of Altars, Adoration, Circumgeſtation, as if Gods naked Elements were baſe things. Nay their curſed tranſubſtantiation, as it offends in other higher reſpects, eſpecially in turning a baſe creature into the ſimilitude of God: and ſo deſtroyes all Sacramentall relation: ſo alſo againſt this in ſpeciall, that it deſtroyes the plaine homelineſſe of Gods invention, thinking that except bread and wine turne fleſh and blood, their goodly Idoll is diſparaged. An abuſe properly to be taxed in this place, for in the other Sacrament, they maintaine no Tranſelementation of common water, into the water or blood of Chriſt.

Vſe 2. Secondly, it ſhould teach all true receivers of this Sacrament, to take order againſt a carnall heart in their comming to, or taking of this Sacrament. Let our hearts be to all carnall receiving, as the ſtomacks of the diſciples now were to bread and wine, whereof they were filled: come to the Lord as one weary of thy ſenſuall appetits and objects. Bring not the thoughts of thy trade, mony, belly, pleaſurs thither: Its an holy thing of the higheſt nature which the Lord offers thee: If thou ſhouldſt behold al precious outward objects of gold, and ſilver and Iewels to melt and run down the ſtreets, how baſe they would be? Thinke here when thou commeſt to this Sacrament, and ſeeſt the Lord Ieſus offered under ſuch bare & poore creatures; that God ſets him above all outward glory of the earth, and would ſhew thee his glorious grace in the true luſter thereof, ſo that no baſe thing ſhould eclipſe it; Be then, or ſtrive to be as Chriſt would have thee, wholly ſpiritual, and ſet thy affections upon thy treaſure, where Chriſt ſits: looke not upon the outſide, behold not the rags and cloaths of Chriſt riſen; but heare the Angel, ſaying, ſaying, Behold hee is riſen, hee is not heere. That Lord Ieſus whom here thou ſeeſt in his ſpirituall grace, farre better than any carnall bravery can expreſſe, a naked ſimple Chriſt preſent to the naked, plaine and honeſt eye of faith: I ſay, him thou ſhalt one day behold at his ſecond comming, confounding all the pompe of the world, ſo that not a ſtone ſhall be left upon a ſtone. Say with Paul, If I were to know Chriſt upon earth, yet would I not in the fleſh. Math. 24. 2. 2 Cor. 5 16.

Col. 3.

Fourthly, for the fulneſſe of theſe Elements. For we ſee that our Lord Ieſus would ſeparate and ſanctifie, both as well as one, to typifie full nouriſhment: Bread is the ſtaffe of life; wine the cheriſher of the Spirit: Both make full nouriſhment, and therefore well ſucceede the Paſſeover which was wholly to be eaten or burnt. To teach us to abhorre that curſed Popiſh ſtealth and ſacriledge in taking the cup from the people, pretending that the other of bread containes it: For what is that to us, that God can exhibite the power of both in one? We looke in the Supper, not what his unlimited, but his revealed power is: he will ſo worke by power as he is pleaſed, and willeth to worke not otherwiſe: Therefore in reverſing the ſigne, they doe quite diſanull the Sacrament. Other uſes ſhall be added when we come to their proper places to treate of the ſecond generall, Chriſt nouriſhment: and how we ought to come in the ſence and tryall of our wants to the Supper. Fourthly, the fulneſſe. Exod.

Now I come to the outward acts of the Supper. Ere I ſpeake of them in ſpeciall, this I adde to the former, that all acts and rites of this Sacrament are then duely performed, not onely when perſons are duely qualified to give and receive: but alſo when the Inſtitution is punctually followed, becauſe that is our canon to go by in this kinde, which neither Miniſter nor people muſt tranſgreſſe, either by exceſſe or defect. For if once any liberty be allowed men to chop or change herein, certainely there is not greater variety in dreſſing our bodily diet (each ſtomacke affecting her own way) as there would prove diverſity of faſhions in giving & receiving the Sacrament. Therfore one ancient inſtitution muſt over-rule al perſons, times, & adminiſtrations. And looke what I ſaid before about the choice of Elements, & ſuch like things: the ſame I ſay of the adminiſtration of that Sacrament, that all muſt fetch their warrant frō hence. I doe not meane that each circumſtance of action, which our Saviour or the Diſciples performed, is neceſſarily included in the Inſtitution: No, there may be ſundry perſonall acts done in this or any other ſervice of God, which when they are done, become Of the acts of the Supper.

worſhip, and yet are arbitrary to doe or not, as the perſons are diſpoſed; onely plaine and unavoydable reſpects of defilements, and true ſcandall, are to be avoyded: but by [Inſtitution] I meane thoſe eſſentials of matter and perpetuall rites about it, which our Saviour himſelfe and his Diſciples performed. Theſe I affirme are indiſpenſable, both one and other: It being as ſinfull to offend in the due forme of Baptizing, as in changing the Element: and ſo, as unlawfull to alter the words of Inſtitution in giving the Supper, as in changing the Elements, or in taking away their number. And hence it is that Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 20. being to correct the foule abuſe crept into their Supper, by Love feaſts, calls them to the Inſtitution, wherein ſeeing no ſuch thing could be ſeene, therefore he pares it off as ſuperfluous. In like ſort the Church of Chriſt hath abhorred all ſuch additions of traſh and humane invention, as crept in, in their ages: as Creame, Salt, Oyle added to water; detraction of the Cup in the Supper, diſanulling of the union, and turning the materiall of a Sacrament into the forme, ſo that there ſhould not be a difference in the thing ſignifying and ſignified: and ſo at this day we renounce the errours of the Greek Church mixing water with wine, and their old abuſe of fire in Baptiſme, to marke the face of the Infant: and infinite others of the like ſort: ſome of which defile, others diſanull the Inſtitution, both infringe it: Yea, ſo ſolemnly ought the Inſtitution to be performed, that by vertue of it, other vices and errors of perſons (not ſo avoydable) are to be tolerated and excuſed from annulling the ordinance, though they are ſoule eye-ſores. The uſe whereof is, firſt, to prepare way to ſpeake of the ſeverall Acts following in this our diſcourſe with better favour: to teach us to obſerve them the more ſtrictly, and to profit by the uſe thereof. Secondly, to make conſcience, as neere as poſſibly we may, of the punctuall inſtitution of Chriſt, abhorring all other, as the way to ſuperſtition and confuſion: and beleeving that all the grace and bleſſing belonging to the Sacrament (next to the ordeynee himſelfe) depends inſtrumentally upon the ſacred and inviolable inſtitution of the Lord Ieſus.

1 Cor. 11. 20.

The acts of the Miniſter.

Now to the particular acts, and firſt of the Miniſter, then of the people: to repeate nothing before ſaid of his qualification; Note, That the Miniſter being in Gods ſtead betweene him and the people, is to act thoſe, all and onely acts which the Lord Ieſus himſelfe did, at the Celebration of the Supper: not as if hee ſhared with Chriſt in the power of either ordeyning or ſanctifying the Elements ments of himselfe, since all which he doth is both in the name of, and for the use of his Master, for whom he is onely to make way in the hearts of the people. But as a Minister, he is for and in place of Christ himselfe, Christ being in him, (or the Father himselfe in Christ rather) the doer of all, as the Prophet of his Church. And the acts he is to discharge, are foure. Taking, blessing, breaking, or powring out, and distributing of the signes of both kindes.

First, touching the taking of the bread and wine, it conteineth these two things. First, the culling out or chusing. Secondly, the setling of them unchangeably to their service. For the former, The Lord Iesus, Luke 22. 19. 20. tooke bread, and likewise the cup: that is, out of his wisedome, hee chose out from among all other creatures, these two, bread and wine, to decipher the spirituall nourishment of his body and blood: so that by this choise, they have the prerogative to doe that which no other creature besides may. Now in such a choise, there must be a separation of Elements from their dishonour to honour: From baseneſse and vileneſse to glorious use: for what comparison is there between earth and Heaven, the common creature in dayly use, taken from the Bakers basket or the cellar; and the heavenly body and blood of the Lord? What shall then reconcile these? Surely the divine power of Christ: he must take off the common and base cloathing of it, and as it is sayd of Iehoshua (for the typifying of the more honourable ministry of Christ above the legall) that his filthy ragges should bee taken off, and goodly pure garments put upon him: so heere, the Lord takes off the old coate of the creature, serving for all sorts, at all times, for corruptible or corrupt uses, so that (for the time being which it is serves for) it is sacrilegious to conceive or use it for private uses: (as it's sayd, Ely's sonnes thrust their forke into Gods Caldron, and pull'd out holy meate for themselves) but it is separate from men; its Gods bread and wine for his owne Table and use.

Taking. Luke 22. 19. 2 Things. 1. Separation from common use. Zach. 3. 4. 1 Sam. 2. 13.

Secondly, the Lord cloathes them with honour: he brings them into his owne house; and ordeynes them to be vessels of use for himselfe. Not that this separation takes any thing from the natures of the creatures: nor yet that it puts any inherent holineſse into them: No, but onely takes them from common use, and puts them to an honourable and holy. And yet this must not be conceived in a generall sence onely; as if there were no more in it, than in other creatures made pure to the beleever. For so each creature is pure to Tit. 1. 15.

the pure: purified from the uſurpation and curſe, and ſanctified by the Word and Prayer, to convey love from the giver, and to prepare the receiver for his ſervice: But this is a further holineſſe, ſuch an one, as though it be not inherent, yet it is reall and in relation to the uſe the Elements ſerve for; it is a cloathing of honour and holineſſe during the ſeaſon of it, and that by vertue of Chriſt, who hath ſtamped it upon them by his owne hand.

2. Setling.

Secondly, the Lord Ieſus by taking, hath ſetled an abiding ſervice upon theſe Elements: ſuch as no mortall man might dare to reverſe or deface, adulterate or change. For why? Who is able to amend the worke of God, or to adde to the worke of perfection it ſelfe? This ſeparation being in a ſort as the worke of Creation: which God ſeeing, approoved as good, and not to be bettered: and therefore to laſt and abide for all ages. So that curſed be he who ſhall meddle with this holy workemanſhip of Chriſt: His ſeales are in this as his word is, outlaſting and outliving the deviſes of men; through all generations, and abiding for ever. Choſen they were by the hand of a dying Saviour, yet immortall: and therefore no hand ſhall ever be able to aboliſh them: If any ſhall adde or diminiſh from them, the Lord ſhall diminiſh their names from the booke of life; and adde unto them all the plagues written in his booke againſt all ſacrilegious theeves or uſurpers in holy things. But more in the uſe.

Vſe 1. Of the former branch. Ruth. 3. 16.

Firſt then for the former points uſe. It ſhould teach us to rejoyce, when we behold what coſt God hath beſtowed upon baſe creatures for our good: when Naomi ſaw Ruth come home full of the bounty of Boaz, ſhee asked her, Where haſt thou beene my daughter? One cauſe of her joy was, becauſe ſhe ſhould fare the better for her daughters change: So, there is no good ſoule which ſees this coſt beſtowed by the Lord upon theſe Elements, how he ſeparates the vile, and puts on a pretious garment upon them; but he ſhould rejoyce therein for the good of his owne ſoule, and ſay, Lord I ſee this creature cloathed with honour, that it might carry him who ſo cloathed it, into my ſoule, and put on the Lord Ieſus upon me the more eaſily, in all the riches of his attire, in all the fulneſſe of his grace and nouriſhment: I ſee no uſe the creature hath of it, but that all the excellent Nouriſhment which it reſembles, might be layd as by an hand in my lap. The Diſciples who ſaw their maſter uſually converſe with them in his poverty and baſeneſſe, no doubt were raviſhed, when they beheld him transfigu-

transfigured and glorious: Oh! they sayd; Its good being here, they were loath to depart: so we may say with the Author to the Hebrewes; Behold we see Christ who was base now in glory, leading captivity captive, giving gifts unto men: yea so glorious, that hee chuseth rather to appeare in the honouring of poore Elements than he would be wanting to us. Abroad we see these creatures not only subject to vanity in their use, but also abused by sinfull wretches to corrupt and base ends: but when we come to the Sacrament, loe, there we see them cloathed with honour and set a part to heavenly ends: such as no Drunkard, Epicure, Swearer, or carnall minded person (though he prease to the Sacrament never so boldly) can atteine unto; There they onely serve to reach out Christ the nourishment of his Church: they cease there to be perishing, and begin to be meate and drinke of eternall life. How should we blesse God for them? When Bezaleel and Aholiab were endued with gifts from heaven, to carve and ingrave wood, brasse and gold in a curious manner; who could have beheld a peece of rude wood or mettall, a little before common and mishapen, but now curiously set forth with pictures and delights, serving for the Tabernacle and the honour of God directly; but he must needs adore the wisdome of that Arch-workeman, who by such meane men could put such honour upon such poore creatures? Labour we to doe likewise when wee see what power the Lord shewes forth by his weake Ministers, and in his weake Elements, and draw neare to them with more delight.

Mach. 17. 4. Heb. 2. 9. Ephes. 4. 8. Exod. 31. 4, 5.

Secondly, how should this point convince all Popish transubstantiation? who maintaine that now the creatures are not what they were; but begin to be what they were not, and that in substance! Such speeches of the Fathers, must not be interpreted by Popery, but by this act of Gods separation? Which is not a separation of substances, leaving unsubsisting accidents behind; but onely of their common vileneſse of use unto an holy one, during that time. Againe, how doth it convince their folly in ascribing to the Elements a divine nature, and an inherent holinesse? So that by the work wrought they should convey (as a vessell sends forth liquor by a pipe) an holinesse to the receiver? No: nothing can of it selfe bestow that which it hath not: The Sacrament hath an holy use cast upon it, which God over rules (as he sees good) to convey holinesse. But in them (as themselves) there is no inherent holinesse. Their Churches, Altars, Superaltars, Chalices, Copes and vestments,

veſtments, if they were (as they pretend) holy, they have it from theſe and the like ordinances performed in them (except they be of the Phariſees blinde error, to thinke that the gold of the Altar, is better than the Altar?) If then Bread & Wine themſelves confeſſe, ſuch holineſſe is not in them: what ſhall become of theſe implements? viz. their Bookes, Bells, Candles, Reliques, Creame, Oyle, Salt, Spittle, and ſtuffe not of Chriſts, but their owne ſeparation? So much of the former branch.

Vſe of latter branch.

Touching the latter, let it be a comfort to all Gods pople to conſider the perpetuitie of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, the nouriſhment of his Church. So long as Chriſt Ieſus ſhall have a Church, till he drinke this Paſſeover in his heavenly kingdome with them, he will ſee theſe holy ſignes (ſeparated by himſelf to holy uſe) to abide therein: for he hath ſetled them upon it for ever: what perſecutions, what confuſions of Popery, what malice of enemies could ever prevaile theſe 1600. yeares, to rob the Church hereof? As Jachin and Boaz abode while the Temple ſtood: ſo theſe two Pillers of Gods Sacraments ſhall never ceaſe, till the ordainer of them ſhall come to judgement! They may be eclipſed, the light, purity of adminiſtration defiled, and for a time ſundry corruptions of men may be permitted by Gods providence to peſter the Church: but none of all theſe changings of the Sacrament into a Maſſe-ſacrifice, none of their pollutions and ſuperſtitions brought in and obtruded upon the Church, ſhall prevaile. That ſetled ſeparation of our Lord Ieſus, ſhall give life to the Sacrament; and as the Church her ſelfe, Micah. 7. 8. ſaith to thoſe Babilonians, Rejoyce not over me, O mine enemie, for when I am fallen I ſhall riſe: Then ſhall ſhe who upbraided me ſee it, and tremble, and be trodden down as the mire of the ſtreetes: So may the Sacrament of Chriſt triumph over all Popiſh enemies who ſet up a ſigne of contradiction againſt her, Maſſe and Altars, and other defilements; Rejoyce not over me for I ſhall ſee thy ruine: the life of Chriſts Ordinance ſhall give mee a riſing and recovery, and I ſhall ſay, Where is now your mouth that ſcorned the Sacrament, where is your God of bread become? Oh! one day the Lord Ieſus ſhall conſume your traſh with the breath of his mouth, and then his owne Sacrament and all his holy Ordinances ſhal be ſet up in their puritie, when all humane ſcurfe ſhall breathe his laſt, and ſay, Thou haſt overcome, Oh Lord! thy truth and ordinance have prevailed.

to

to separate the Elements from common to divine use: It should teach him to begin with this act, and (as may be obtained) to take the materials himselfe at the entrance of separation, and thus to separate them by vertue of the Ordinance; not to leave it to his Sexton or Clerke to fetch from the Taverne as he list, and powre out at his pleasure; Better is an overplus than a defect in this behalfe. And for the first act, thus much.

2 Act of the Minister, blessing. Luke 22,19.

The second act of the Minister about the materials, is blessing them: for so our Saviour, Luke 22. 19. is said to doe ere he brake them. Still I must put in this, that the Minister of himselfe can doe nothing: (oftentimes hee is farre from being blessed himselfe) but the obedience to the institution doth it. Now by blessing is meant sanctifying: the word being taken from the ordinary manner of the Iewes in their feasts and meales, whose graces were called blessings, because the first word of them was, Blessed be God who causeth bread to grow out of the earth, and who giveth wine out of the grape &c. From hence our Saviour is sayd to blesse bread and wine (though in another forme, and to an higher end, yet in generall) as in the use of the creatures. And the truth is, whosoever they be that dare come neere the Table of the Lord, and the blessing of the Minister, being privie of ordinary using the creatures without blessing, are fit to be quite excluded from this Sacrament. Remember the phrase of this blessing issued from that.

What it is? Sanctifying. 1 Cor. 10,16.

Now besides this blessing, although it properly denote Thankes, yet includes prayer also: Both make up the blessing of the Sacrament. Our manner at this day is to say, We give thankes: not as if we did nothing else, or as if prayer were inferior to it; but so the use of speech hath prevailed. First then our Saviour prayed, and secondly prayse and gave thankes to his Father, and in both stood this second act of blessing. He was in this his act subject (as Mediator) to his Father and so acknowledged no lesse, viz. That looke what he did, he did deputedly from him as the chiefe Agent in the sanctifying of the Sacrament. And even so is the Minister much more to doe in his stead: not to arrogate to himselfe Popishly this power, but to abase himselfe to the lowest earth as a worme creeping out of her hole, when he lifts up his heart in this kinde to the Lord, in the behalfe of the Church, for a blessing upon the Sacrament. Its farre from him or his intention, to make or not to make the Sacrament, it depends upon an higher power. For in this case without question, the greater is blessed of the lesser, to wit, instrumentally.

First by Prayer.

For

Why? For the former of these two, viz. our Saviours prayer; its not to be wondred at, that its a part of this blessing. For why? It was put up to his Father, to the end that he would give his solemne consent to it, and by his word establish it to be a Sacrament. Even our blessing the creatures is by applying the strength of the word; for man

Math. 4. 4. lives not by bread, but by each Word of God. So that our Saviour here craveth a Word from his Father, for the blessing of this Ordi-

1 King. 8. 22. nance. Salomon when he consecrated the Temple: what did he? Applied a word by Prayer unto it: thou O Lord art so great, that the Heaven of Heavens cannot conteine thee: yet thou hast said, I will dwell in this house, and make it a place of my residence. Oh! be it so? Now although a greater than Salomon be here, yet loe, as

Verse 27. Math. 12. 42. being now deputed by his Father to this great worke, he beggeth from him, to set his (Fiat) to this his act of Iustificarion. As if he should say, Father its not of my selfe, as man: but from thee and Esay 42. 1. thy command, I thy righteous servant have separated these Elements: Oh Father then, as the chiefe ordeiner, shew that I have done nothing rashly and without thee in this attempt!

Conteines 4. things. But more fully to speake of this Prayer of Christ, it conteines these foure things in it. First, as I said, The Lord Iesus having abro-

1 gated one Sacrament, and substituted another, craving a consent from his Father by Prayer, as if he had said, If thou oh Father say the word, these Elements shall be Sacramentall, they shall be united to my Deitie and flesh, they shall be conveiers of holy

Ioh. 17. 22. things, the blood, spirit, power and life of the Lord Iesus into the soules of the faithfull. Oh Father then, as thou and I are one, so declare; that looke what I upon earth have done, that thou hast ratified in heaven: let not thine elect make any question, but that its thy will as well as mine, that these Elements be sanctified for such

2. use. Secondly, as he begges of his Father, Consent; so especially

1 King. 8. 28. he craves blessing upon them. As Salomon in that his prayer begs, Oh Lord, since its thy will to dwell in this house which I have built, therefore I beseech thee shew it by reall effects: Whensoever thy people shall be hem'd in by their enemies, be afflicted with famine, pestilence, sword, or whensoever they shall pray for any good thing: Oh Lord! looke downe from heaven, and let it be enough that thy people looke toward this house: Oh then meete them, and blesse them! So our Saviour here: Oh Father, I know, thou heares me alway, and by name in thy consent to this separation of the Sacrament. But Lord, shew it both at this time to my disciples, disciples, and for ever to the end of the world: Let them not looke toward this ordinance in vaine, but put the savor and foyson of thy Sonnes grace, strength, and refreshing into them; that they may actually conferre upon all hungry beleeving soules, my righteousnesse of satisfaction, and sanctification of merit in the one, and efficacie in the other, to sustaine them and increase their comfort, both in their reconciliation and holinesse, as the neede of each requires. 3. He begges of his Father, that his poore doubtfull and weake people might understand this blessing to be granted, as well as himselfe, that they might come confidently to this Sacrament. 4. That by vertue of this his prayer and blessing, the Church might approch with confidence to the Throne of Grace to doe the like, that is, to blesse the Sacrament, both minister and people, with hope to receive the like blessing upon their receiving.

1 Cor. 1. 30. Exod. 20. 1. 3. 4.

Ere we goe to the next branch, this may afford us speciall use: let it be exhortation then to all poore humbled ones in the sight of unworthinesse, to all fearefull, distrustfull ones of themselves, that mourne for their dead and dull receivings, and that the Sacrament comes and goes from time to time with small fruit. Oh! Why is it thus with you? Is the Lord here, and you are not aware? Doe ye fare, as if the Lord bad yee come hither in your owne strength? Hath not he bestowed blessings upon it, yea, and (in spite of all devils in hell, corruption on earth, formalitie of the wicked) it shall be blessed: Why then looke ye no more firmely to the effect of this prayer? Let me adde one thing more, This prayer of Christ was but the first of his requests in this behalfe: Loe, as he is our Advocate in heaven, he plies this worke still, and followes this first suite with his Father, to the uttermost, that he would apply the power of his death and blood to his Word preached, and Sacraments ministred in his Church; so that no opportunitie is now wanting to second this blessing: doe not feare least God should have forgot this old prayer, for with him two thousand yeares is as one day: But say it were not so; yet we have an Advocate daily to put him in minde of each occasion. So that if the Lord Iesus be alway heard when he prayeth, its well for us, though old suits might be forgotten, which is impossible.

Vse 2.

2 Pet. 3. 8. Ioh. 11. 42.

But alas alas! The cold comfort we feele by the Sacrament is the fruite of our little denying our selves, cleaving to the Prayer and the Promise, This is my welbeloved, &c. If Iehoshaphat could so confidently goe to God, so long after Salomons blessing the Temple, pleading to be heard; how much more thou in the prayer of the Lord Ieſus? Did not Rebecca and Iacob laugh and take courage (thinke wee) when they heard Iſaac tell Eſau, That Iacob was already bleſſed and ſhould be ſo? Why doſt thou not laugh then to heare a greater and ſurer bleſſing from Chriſt? Why goeſt thou out of this Bleſſing and Promiſe, into thine owne warme Sun, to compaſſe thy ſelfe with thy owne ſparkles? Thinkeſt thou it is with this great Maſter of Requeſts, as at the Court, that many requeſts may be made, ere one granted? No, no, the Lord heard his Sonne in his feares, much more his deſires: bring thou faith and feare not to receive a Sacrament under ſuch a bleſſing, as the Prayer of Chriſt lyes in pawne to procure. Let thy heart be never ſo hard, empty, barren and farre from proſperity: if thou come in faith, the bleſſing is thine. Its noted by the Evangeliſt, That when Chriſt prayed, Glorifie thy Name, &c. anſwere was made, I have glorified it, and will glorifie it againe. Our Saviour tells his diſciples, This was for their ſakes. If thou canſt by the eare of faith, heare this voyce, it belongs to thee.

Vſe 2. Secondly, it ſhould not onely be inſtruction to all Miniſters, to ſanctifie the Sacrament to the Church and themſelves. But eſpecially it ſhould teach them to be humble in ſo doing, and to come unto God in all abaſement, even as duſt and aſhes, when they come to aske the bleſſing of God upon this or other Ordinances at the hands of God. If a man having many children, eſpecially his eldeſt Sonne and heire ſo obedient and loyall, that he never askes any boone of his Father, but he comes in great honour and reverence to aske it; Will not this teach all the reſt (except Impes and degenerate) to be much more ſo? Behold heere thy elder Brother, the Lord Ieſus Lord of all, yet ſubject and begging every thing hee needs, not for himſelfe, but for his Church: and ſhall it not ſmite into thee one of the baſeſt of all the family of God, much more humblneſſe in thy prayers?

Gen. 18. 27.

Vſe 3. Thirdly, it ſhould teach both Miniſter and people in their bleſſing of the Sacrament, when they feele their owne wofull baſeneſſe, to be admitted to ſuch a ſervice, (as being privie to horrible prophaning of ſuch Ordinances, and guilt of other ſinnes,) to behold themſelves, their Prayers and preparations, in the perſon and prayer of the Lord Ieſus, in which they may be accepted as if worthy. When they have once prayed for bleſſing, pray againe with Hezekiah, The good Lord accept me, though no way prepared according to

to the preparing of the Sanctuary. Isaac bids Iacob, come neere my sonne, that I may feele and know if thou be indeede my sonne Esau; and so comming in his linnen and roughnesse, he tooke him to be so, and blessed him. Doe thou so and prosper. Gen 27.21.

Lastly, by all this blessing of the Minister in the Name of the Lord Iesus, we meete with no step of Popish Consecration, neither in point of their five blessing words, nor yet of inherent holinesse put into the Sacrament thereby. Touching the first, we see no warrant for the Masse priests inchanting the Elements by his whispering the five words over them: for loe, the Consecration was ended; ere any of those five words were pronounced: and therefore, not those Words, but blessing and prayer to God in the vertue of his first institution, and the promise made thereto, doe sanctifie the Elements. Which word of Prayer and Blessing, our Saviour did not (as a Sorcerous Priest) murmure over the Bread and Wine, but openly and clearely uttered them to his Father, in the hearing of the Disciples, for their edification. The dumbe Elements have no eares to heare such a voyce, but are meere patients in the Sacrament. And therefore we abhorre that Popish turning of the Priests from the people to the signes, as a base inchanting ceremony; fitter to worke a blind and carnall devotion in a superstitious heart, than a sensible reverence and holy confidence of a beleeving soule. For the latter, observe that our Saviour begs for no inherent holinesse to be put into the Signes, save only a conveying instrumentall holinesse that the Lord would vouchsafe to use them to the ends of a Sacrament: that is, to make dumbe, silly creatures (incapable of any reall grace) to carrie reall holinesse into the soules and spirits of beleevers, onely capable thereof? Much lesse than did he, either by these or those five (as they misreckon) Transubstantiate them to his body. When God blessed the Sabboth day and hallowed it: Did he infuse holinesse into the day? Are dayes, garments, vessels, houses, capable of inherent holinesse? No, its enough they attend holy things: and ought therefore decently to be kept: otherwise neither are they holy inherently; nor yet actions and things therefore holy, because there done; but because they are so in their nature and institution. Vse 4.

I hasten to the latter branch of his thankes. Thankes is the second branch of Christs blessing: And so of the Ministers act in the consecration of the Sacrament. We have to note that thus it was in other blessings. When Salomon dedicated the Temple, one branch of Thankes. Why joyned with prayer.

of it was ſolemne thankeſgiving to God that had ratified his Word and promiſe, enabled Salomon to perfect the Temple, and make 1 King. 8. 24. good that which he had ſpoken. The aſcent of thankes is ſo great a glorifying of God, that commonly it becomes a rich deſcent of bleſſing. And when prayer is offered to God without thankes, its no ſigne that the ſoule faſtens upon God for the granting of thoſe things which have beene deſired. But our Saviour here, having had a commiſſion from his Father to ordaine the Sacrament, takes it for granted, that he was heard by him in this his requeſt for ſanctifying thereof to his Church: and therefore, together with the prayer doth alſo here annex his thankes for anſwere. Prayers and praiſes ought ever to attend each other, eſpeciall for things formerly received, that by the experience of former anſwere from God, our hearts might not be to ſeek of confidence and hope for the preſent, and for time to come. For ſure it is, our ſelfe love doth ſo ſway us in ſeeking what we would ſtill get, that the acknowledgement of what we have already enjoyed from God, is forgotten. Nay rather; even while they pray for bleſſing from God upon any of his Ordinances, or otherwiſe, it is our duty even then to give thankes, ſo farre as wee feele our ſelves to have pray'd in faith, and in the name of Chriſt: for faith in a manner preſenteth the thing (which we doe warrantably ſeeke) unto us: And although I grant ſuch a bleſſing may actually be denied us, yet our thankes ſhall returne (in ſuch a caſe) into our boſome, and ſhall be accepted of God.

Cauſes of his Thankes, Three.

But in this caſe of our Lord Ieſus, and his thankes, the caſe is altered: for he gave thankes in aſſurance of being heard, and upon promiſe thereof from his Father, without faile: and therefore hee might with more confidence offer up thankes even with prayer.

The firſt cauſe Iohn 11. 41.

Sometimes it ſo fareth with his members, that even in the act of prayer, the Lord intimates their ſpirit, that they have prevailed: as we read that ſome of the Martyrs had a kind of propheticall ſpirit given them, ſo that ſome things which God had enabled the to aske in full aſſurance of faith, they received an anſwer from God, that they were granted; and therefore their prayers commonly brake out into praiſes, and themſelves wrote and ſpake of thoſe bleſſings as preſent, though there were ſome yeares ſtill to come, ere performed. And no doubt ſuch caſes fall out ſtill in the experience of ſuch as are neerely acquainted with God, and ſtrong in faith, that they have anſwere with Jacob, they have prevailed, even Gen. 32. 28. in their wreſtlings: and therefore what doubt is there, but

that

that then, Thankesgiving should be answerable?

But I will not digresse to other meditations: The thankes and blessing of Christ here, should be full of comfort to the poore Minister of Christ, and all his faithfull people, in their blessing of the Sacrament; that they come to God for that which is already granted to Christ, and that even so assuredly while he prayed for it; and at the instant he received it as granted, and blessed God for it; and withall added his owne blessing to his Fathers, and gave his Spirit of blessing to the same Sacrament; from his Father and from himselfe so to attend it, that it might never be absent from it, in the matter of union Sacramentall, and further in point of true sanctification of it to all his members, to the end of the world, who should come in faith and repentance to receive it. Its not under a desired blessing onely, but a granted one, acknowledged, and therefore assured. Oh! that any should come with a drooping and sad heart, doubtfull, and staggering to that Ordinance, upon which at the first institution, so great a handsell of grace was bestowed, and a promise of so great future blessing granted. Vse.

A second cause of his thankes was, for that he foresaw, even now at his death and departure shortly from the earth, that his Father would not suffer the memory of his sanctification & death to be razed out: but eternize it as a lasting monument in his Church. Hee foresaw that infinite honour and glory which he should receive as a perpetuall tribute from his thankefull Church, and what praise the Father by him should obtaine at the hands of the faithfull, for the continuing of so lively, powerfull a memoriall of his death, and perfect Sacrifice offered to God for the sinnes of the Elect. The foresight hereof, that his Death should be a lasting Monument of himselfe, and a meane of perpetuall honour to the Father, through him, was another Branch of his blessing of the Sacrament. Oh! when he saw, God and himselfe had blessed it with their presence for ever, and that no enemy should prevaile against it; but that as Es. 55. ult. it should bee an everlasting Name not to bee forgotten, and as Esay ult. it should be a dayly Sacrifice from Sabboth to Sabboth to the worlds end; that it should prevaile against the gates of hell, ignorance, and superstition, attend the Gospel for ever as a Seale of the promise: and finally survive all base Pillars and Monuments of prophanesse and Idolatry. Oh! these things caused him to raise up his heart to his Father in thankes, and therewith to be rapt vp to blesse his Name, and to set his Seale to the Sacrament. Be it so The second cause. Esay 55.13. Esay 66.23.

Oh Father: and bee pleaſed to confirme this grace, and I in thy Name doe bleſſe and hallow theſe Elements to be ſuch memorials for ever.

Vſe. The uſe of this may be to us this: Never come to enjoy the Sacrament, but to looke up to God in this bleſſing of the Lord Ieſus, and to beſeech him that it may be ſo continued: and to purge out from his Church in all kingdoms that deteſtable Idoll of the Maſſe, that it may not ſtand up as a ſigne of contradiction, againſt this faithfull witneſſe of God: that the Lord would not ſo lay to his heart this our profanation of his Sacraments as to remove it from us, and beſtow it upon a people which ſhould honour him with better fruit of it. Oh! how have we in England of a long time plaid the Harlot, and after this 60. or 70. yeeres of the Sacrament, waxen weary of it, and when any occaſion of a Maſſe hath been offered, ran by troopes unto it, as glutted with this Manna from heaven; how have wee lyne heavie upon the ſtomacke of God by this our tranſcendent abomination, and excommunicate thing, deſerving that the floudgates of all Popiſh traſh ſhould be let in upon us; and the Goſpel, Ordinances, and communion of Saints quite defaced, and ſent into another world from us: That, I ſay, either the poſſeſſion, or the power of them ſhould for ever bee pulled from us. Let ſo many as are free from this contagion, ſtill keepe their garments unſpotted, and ſtill begge of God that the bleſſing once obtained by Chriſt upon the Sacrament may bee ſtill granted, that in ſpite of all Popiſh pollutions, Chriſts Supper may bee kept pure in the Church for a Seale to his Covenant, and for the glory of the Father through the Lord Ieſus.

Revel. 14.4.

The third cauſe. A third, and laſt cauſe was, the view of that unſpeakeable Grace which the whole Militant Church ſhould reape by it: That good which he foreſaw the Sacrament ſhould do, cauſed him to breake out into this bleſſing; & to ſet his Seale unto it to the ſame purpoſe: That as his Father had granted it to ſuch an end, ſo himſelfe alſo bleſſed it; as if he ſaid, Goe my bleſſed Ordinance, be the Legacy of my Church, and ſeeing the Father hath made thee an inſtrument of ſo endleſſe comfort, and ſtrength to the weake ſoules of my people; take my bleſſing alſo with thee; Loe, I am now offering up my body and life upon the Croſſe, and I convey by them all the merit and power thereof to the hearts of my people, when and where, and how oft ſoever they ſhall partake it. It is no queſtion, but that our Lord Ieſus mourned in Spirit alſo, to behold the errors, and infinite infinite abuses both of doctrine and practise which should insue in the Church, through Popish corruption, and base customes and profane unreverence of men; yet all this hinders not his thankes for the blessed fruit of the Sacrament.

The use of which is, That we also, both Minister and people, do thus raise up our hearts to God in the meditation of these things. First, if wee could but consider how exceeding great a blessing it were, to see one heavie soule comforted, one doubtfull heart resolved, one staggerer setled by the Sacrament: How might we be provoked to blesse God? Nay, when we consider how many the true Ministery of Christ Sacramentall, hath humbled, broken and converted to God: by the due esteeme of a mountaine by many little mollehilles; How great may we imagine, is that crop of grace and blessing which the Sacrament purchaseth to the soule of Gods people, throughout the Church? But alas! our Saviour beheld this by the eye of faith, and by the sympathie of love to God and to the elect: the glory of the one, and the good of the other: Wee rather looke at things with a dead eye of common forme, and base custome, and blinde hope that so it may bee, and enquire no further; whereas, if we observe narrowly, both our owne gaine, and the fruit that others reape by receiving aright, the Sacrament day should indeede be a blessed day of dayes, a day of prayses and wee should not in vaine call it an Eucharist (which signifies thanksgiving) but really and from experience. We should in the consideration of this exceeding goodnesse of God, to our selves, and to the whole communion of his Saints, breake out as Debora, Iud. 5. and say, I rejoyce for the people of Gods welfare, and for those that came in faith, and departed from the Congregation with comfort. Their good should be our joy: this is the fellowship in graces which the Church of God hath one with another: to rejoyce with them that rejoyce, and to mourne with them that mourne. Both are parts of Christian sympathy. What Christian soule, what true Minister of God is there, who should not seeke to thrust from this holy banquet, all profane and brutish ones, spots of Assemblies, eyesores to the godly, and to the reproach of Gods Sacraments? And who is there, who seeing such intrude themselves, should not mourne for their owne, and the lot of the Church, who must bee pestred with such? Oh! what a quayling it is to our joy to behold what corruptions and corrupt ones hang upon these Ordinances? And so much for the second act of blessing.

Iudg. 5. 9.

Iudg. 13.

The third act Breaking.

The third Sacramentall act of Chriſt and the Miniſter, is the breaking and powring out the Bread and wine. In the opening hereof, marke two things: Firſt, the order of it: Secondly, the Act it ſelfe. For the firſt, Why did Chriſt firſt bleſſe, then breake & powre out? Anſwer, That he might reſemble the order of his own ſatisfaction. For firſt he was annointed or qualified in his perſon to ſatisfie ſet apart and ſanctified to it; and then he was Sacrificed; to have ſeparated or bleſſed them after the worke of the Croſſe performed, had beene needleſſe: and ſo to have beene firſt crucified, ere bleſſed and called, had beene Sacrilegious: Even ſo here in the Elements; reſembling his ſeparation and death.

Two things in it. 1 What it was?

But for the act it ſelfe, conſider two things: firſt, What was it? ſecondly, Why was it? For anſwer to the firſt; The breaking of Chriſt was a taking of the loafe, and a breaking thereof with his holy hands into gobbets and morſels meet for his diſciples; not minſing the bread, and cutting it with a knife into ſmall bits, nor yet into overgreat peeces, but I ſay into morſels competent. I doe not quarrell with the cuſtome of cutting with the knife: for (as I ſaid before of ſprinkling the water, ſo I ſay of this) I diſanull not the ordinance thereby: yet ſtill I ſay, I would rather chuſe to cleave to the inſtitution in ſo plaine an act of our Saviour, if it may conveniently be done, than to balke it. And the rather, becauſe it may ſavour of ſome Popiſh niceneſſe: for as they weare white gloves when they meddle with the Elements, and touch them not with their bare hands, pretending more reverence to be in a beaſts skin, than a mans naked hand: ſo ſome thinke it too homely perhaps to breake the bread with their hands, in compariſon of cutting it with a knife. To ſuch I ſay, that they are too nice herein; and the inſtitution of Chriſt much more to bee followed; the Miniſter himſelfe breaking it, and not leaving it (as ſometimes is uſed) to the Clearke or Sexton to be done.

2. Why it was.

Secondly, why was it? I anſwer, for ſundry cauſes: firſt, to parallell the Sacrifice of the Paſſeover, (a type of Chriſts Supper,) which was to be ſlaine, & the blood of it ſprinkled about: ſecondly, for a more meet apportioning of the bread of the Sacrament, and the Wine to the eaſier uſe of the Receivers, than in the whole loafe or flagon; thirdly, and more principally to preſent the voluntary offering up himſelfe the next day upon the Croſſe for an oblation to God: Elſe hee would have choſen ſome others to breake and powre out; but in doing it himſelfe, he typified his laying downe his life freely, when as else none could have taken it from him: for when his apprehenders were cast upon the earth, then did he yeeld himselfe to their hands: fourthly to signifie to the Church that although the Lord Iesus were in himselfe the fountaine of all life and nourishment to the Church: yet his Church could not otherwise bee capable of him to such ends, than by vertue of his being broken upon the Crosse He was as a sealed fountaine before, but now set open for the Church. This Reason I would have well noted. No other way, but to be broken, could make him meate and drinke indeed. The Butt of wine in the Cellar hath wine of excellent qualitie in it selfe, but except it be broached, none can be the better for it. Hence the Church in the Canticles cries out, Thou art as an oyntment powred out; in the savor of thy oyntments we will follow thee. As that box of oyntment, Iohn 12. 2. which was broken upon him, and powred out upon him, so that all the house smelt of it. Hence the Holy Ghost especially dwells upon his powring out of his soule unto death: his being broken for our transgressions, and other the like phrases there, Esay 53. And Saint Paul dwels upon his bloudshed, Rom. 3. 25. and in twenty other places; to shew that nothing but death could make us the better for him, either in pardon or Sanctification: No incarnation of his, no innocency, Miracles, no Compassion, Teares, Love, Reproaches, Preaching, Prayers, without his being broken, could make him usefull to us.

Ioh. 10. 18. 4. Zach. 13. 1. Cant. 1. 3. Ioh. 12. 3. Esay. 53. 12. Rom. 3. 25.

Fifthly, as he could doe us no good save this way, so there is a further thing in it, for Christ could not be broken for nourishment, till he was for expiation and attonement. By being once broken by death, he hath paid the price of wrath, and also became meete nourishment, Christ being made ours to pardon, is also made ours to feede and furnish our soules with all graces of his Spirit: the Supper is so the Sacrament of our growth in the Lord Iesus, as first hee is our growth in faith and Iustification, and then of holinesse. 5.

But here is an objection: How can Christ bee broken for our nourishment, whereas the Scripture tells us, Not a bone of him should be broken? Answer: No necessity lay upon Christ to bee broken, according to the utmost measure of breaking: Onely essentiall breaking and powring out of his soule by death lay upon him, and this was necessary to make attonement for sinne; else no union could have bin purchased with God, nor any fruit thereof Objection. Iohn 19. 36. Answer.

in either reſtoring of life, or continuing welfare unto it reſtored. The providence of God was ſuch in the alleniating of the Croſſe and breaking of Chriſt, that he was diſpenſed with, as touching thoſe exceſſes, extremities, indignities which elſe might have lighted upon him, had not the excellency of his perſon, and his ſufficiencie to ſatisfie, taken them off. Therefore whereas the Law was, that the bones of the crucified ſhould be broken, to haſten their lingring death, the Lord Ieſus his bones were not broken, he being dead before; and ſo it was with him, in the continuance, in the helliſh meaſure of torment, that he was freed from them: It was enough that he was ſo broken, that the bande of ſoule and body was diſſolved, and his ſoule was powred forth unto death.

Vſe 1. The uſes are weighty, Firſt of Confutation of Popery. And that, firſt in this, that they make a meere apiſh Pageant, and Poppet-play of this Sacrament, yea, rather an enterlude to pleaſe and delight the ſences of the blinded devout, than a reſemblance of the crucified body of the Lord Ieſus for the comfort of the Church. Buteſpecially that they deſtroy the eſſence of the act of Breaking. In ſtead whereof, they come and bring an whole unbroken Element, made of a fine and delicate wafer, round and whole: And as for powring out the wine to the people, they never powre out, nor allow any at all unto them, but keepe it quite from them. Thirdly, they profeſſe not to act the part of the Father, reaching out the broken body of Chriſt to his people: but their Prieſt ſuſtaines rather the perſon of a falſe Church, and an Idolater, to offer up to God a Sacrifice of Chriſt, for expiation: deſtroying the power of Chriſt our only Oblation, offered by himſelfe, never more needing to be offered. And whereas we preſſe this argument againſt them, they flie to a ſhift which overthrowes their cauſe, ſaying, They offer an unbloody ſacrifice in their Maſſe, not bloody as that of the Croſſe. In all three reſpects, being the moſt wofull enemies of the Sacrament.

How Papiſts enemies to a broken Chriſt

For firſt, they act it as a thing of mirth, not as a broken Chriſt: ſecondly, they neither breake nor powre out to the uſe of the Congregation: thirdly, they profeſſe to have ſo little neede that God ſhould give them his broken Sonne, that they bid him take him backe to himſelfe, for they care not for him: nay, they give him backe with a mocking of God, and ſay, they offer him an unbloody Chriſt and unbroken: whereas its ſure, if the Lord Ieſus had done ſo, he had blaſphemed and not ſatisfied. Curſed be all new offering of a Chriſt, as a propitiatory Sacrifice to God: or offering of a

Heb. 9. 22.

Chriſt

Christ without bloud. Thou shalt as soone satisfie wrath by thy owne, or by an Angels, or Saints prayers, as by a Christ unbroken and unbloudy. A Christ neither broken nor bloody, is an Idoll, nothing in the world, neither meete to satisfie, nor to nourish. So that, forasmuch as the Church of Romes Sacrament is a Christ no Christ; no price, no pardon, no peace, no reconciliation, or eternall life, is to be found there; We beseech God for ever to deliver us from her, and our selves depart from her as a fatall enemy and destroyer of the Sacrament of the Supper.

Secondly, this teacheth both Minister and people, to bring with them pure hands and holy bodies and spirits, when they touch, breake, powre out, take and eate these precious mysteries; For what communion can be betweene light and darkenesse, Christ and Belial? 2 Cor. 6. 16. The very Sacramentall acts alone, require holinesse of all that thus draw neere unto God, least he be revenged of their profaning his Ordinance: And how carefull should the Minister be himselfe to act this breaking, and powring out, not leaving it to another: since thereby the voluntary Act of the Lord Iesus is obscured: he himselfe still freely giving himselfe by the onely hand of his deputed Minister? Vse 2.

Thirdly, and especially, let it be exhortation to all Christs people, to acknowledge the admirable wisedome of this his ordaining the Sacrament for us in so lively a manner, and under such powerfull signification. That whereas we come to the Supper for our nourishment and growing in faith, and grace in Christ; Lo, the Lord offers these under the lively signes of the Lord Iesus himself, and not onely so, but crucified and broken & powred out for us, even meet nourishment, meet to be apprehended by us in the act of his suffering, to secure us of our justification by removing of wrath; in the act of his preparednesse to nourish us, by cutting himselfe out into morsels for us? Oh! what life and sappe is there in a Sacrament, so offered to a poore soule, as crucifying Christ before our eyes, and giving him so, into our hands? What thankes should this draw from us? If Esay, Chap. 63. 1. could in the meditation of this point, so many hundred yeares before, ravish his heart, how much more we? How should the instruments of our soules peace with God, and welfare in him, cause us to cry out as he did, Who is hee that commeth up from Bozra in his red garments, besprinkled with the wrath of God, upon soule and body, by agonies, desertions, outcries, and dolours incomprehensible under that justice and wrath, the wine- Esay 63. 1. Vse 3. Exhort. to diverse things.

preſſe and fierceneſſe whereof he trod? And although he thereby was powred out to death, yet he ſo trod out that wrath that it ſhall never ſeaze after upon a beleeving ſoule; Oh! not onely to thinke of this (as Eſay did) a farre off, but to behold the very thing in the Sacrament, in a broken, powred out bloudy Sacrifice, made ready to our hand, both to forgive, refreſh, and revive the aſſurance of both to our ſoules, what thankes and joy ſhould it breede in us? How ſhould it magnifie the power of the death of our Lord Ieſus in us? Hee himſelfe was holy taken up in the joy of it (as bitter as it Ioh. 12.24,25 was) and ſhall not we? Reade Ioh. 12.24,25. when ſome Greeke Proſelites preſſed to have a ſight of him two or three dayes ere his ſuffering, he pulls them to behold him dead, not alive: Except the wheate corne fall and die, it abides alone: If I be lifted up, I will draw all unto me; meaning by the word and Sacraments of this Paſſion. And ſhall not theſe raviſh us much more?

Vſe 4. Fourthly, what compaſſion and mourning ſhould this ſight Zach. 12.10. worke in us? Reade Zech. 12.10. They ſhall ſee him whom they have pierced, and mourne, and bee in bitterneſſe, as one, for his onely Sonne. I exhort none to whip themſelves for Chriſt, (for woe bee to ſuch as mourne for him whom they ſhould rejoyce in.) Exod. 12.8. behold your ſelves in the Sacrament, who brake, rent, and powred out the heart-bloud of the Lord Ieſus to the earth. Truly, if thou be not ſenſible of this thy ſinne, and broken for breaking the Lord Ieſus, thou art a Cain to this Abel, and his bloud ſhall cry for ven-
Gen. 4.10. geance againſt thee. Hearken to the voyce of Iuſtice, crying out, Either rend this ſinfull curſed ſoule in peeces for her hypocriſie, infidelity, profaneneſſe; or tare the fleſh of thy Son for him. Aske, oh Lord! why ſhould not I have beene torne and broken rather for my owne ſinne? But thou haſt laid the iniqnity of mee upon him: Oh! how I am ſtung for the cauſe? Therefore I mourne, not becauſe thou didſt ſpare me, and lay my guilt upon him, but becauſe I was that ſpeare, thoſe nailes that brake his holy hands and ſides. Oh! How few come into the Congregation thus abaſed? Behold thy owne juſt deſtinie in the broken body of Chriſt, and mourne. Oh, thus my pride, hollowneſſe, worldlineſſe had handled mee, if the Lord Ieſus had not ſtept in! Moderate that frothy lightneſſe of ſpirit, which beholds Chriſt in the Sacrament, as an object of all joy and mirth. Oh! Let it be thy ſadneſſe firſt, and thy gladneſſe after. If the ſight of a Page being beaten for a Prince, wil cauſe the Prince

to mourne, and see his errour in the Pages strokes: what shall the Page doe then when he sees the Prince smitten for his pranks? Oh such a broken heart would make Christ sweet in the Sacrament, such a mourning would bring joy. For why? As thou shouldst have suffered unsatisfyingly, except Christ had satisfied: So, he having freely broken himselfe for thee, hath prevented thy breaking, and caused thee to blesse him, and say, Oh! because thou hast delivered me from this anguish, I will take up the cup of salvation and praise thee: Thou stept in, Oh Lord (when Angells durst not) betweene wrath and my soule, that the snare being broken I might escape. Psal. 116. 13.

Seventhly, concurre therefore by faith with this broken Lord Iesus in the Sacrament; first, behold the order of it, then the act it selfe. For the first, Remember, that all true right to the Lord Iesus his nourishment to thy soule, in renewed grace, Spirit of prayer, of uprightnes, watchfulnes, bearing the Crosse well, issues from thy renewing of faith in his reconciliation and forgivenesse. If thou have lost thy peace by an ill conscience, beware thou come not first to the Sacrament to fetch strength to returne to thy former course of walking with God, till first thy pardon and peace be renewed; that were to soder, not to mend thy breach: yea, it were to dawbe with untempered morter. Christ is first broken as a satisfier of wrath; and then as a nourisher of a poore emptie soule. Vse 7. Two things. 1 Order.

Touching the second, Learne to apply the Lord Iesus broken in the Sacrament for thee, in a confident manner. If hee have beene really thine, broken for thy renewed pardon, yea, the oftner the better; lay thy soule in the clift of this Rocke, get thy selfe into his wounds, and lie in his side, and thence shalt thou draw nourishment to sustaine thee, whence thou dreweſt strength to make thy peace. This broken Christ, his bloud, his powring out, containes both thy peace and thy grace; and by an inseparable union of the Spirit is given for both. Lesse than the bloud of Christ dead upon the Crosse could not save thee; and lesse, than it cannot restore any grace of his Spirit decaied in thee, as the Spirit of Prayer, watching, soberneſſe, heavenlineſſe of heart. But if the Sacrament have revived the one, feare not the other will follow. There is a knot of unions in Sacramentall broken Christ; get one, and get both: faith will teach thee how to get both; and doth sweetly claspe with Christ for welfare in both. Touching the substance of which, I speake lesse here, because I shall handle it in the second generall head of the grace offered in this Sacrament. 2 Act. Exod. 33 32.

Onely

Onely this one thing I adde here, that the broken body and bloud powred out of Christ, is offered thee in this Supper, to nourish thy faith in Christ crucified, afflicted, wounded for thee; that hereby thou mightest draw strength from his Passion, to suffer and overcome in him, or for him whatsoever the Lord shall thinke good to lay upon thee: whatsoever then thy Crosse be, especially if bitter, wearisome, unusuall, darke and tedious to be borne: come to the fountaine of patience and victory, the Lord Iesus broken for thee: He hath overcome the chiefe dint of all crosses, in taking the fire, wrath, and sting of sinne, out of thy conscience; and this is one maine helpe to settle a restlesse heart under deepe affliction; that Christ broken hath taken away guilt, and brought pardon and peace. And secondly, having so done, he hath overcome the force of the Crosse, and hath brought patience, selfe-deniall, calmenesse, humblenes under the same into thee; so that in him thou shalt be upholden, endure, and beare thy yoke, not murmure, not thinke long, not use shifts; but by the promise sealed by the Sacrament, beleeve the Lord will in due season give thee beauty for ashes, and the sweet fruit of righteousnesse and patience, more sweete, than the trouble was grievous. These the Sacrament doth confirme and settle the soule in daily, if Christ broken be wisely applyed and put on by faith. To conclude all, I say, if the Lord Iesus Sacramentall, be a broken Christ, for all uses.

Esay 61. 3.

Use 8. Eightly, how cursed is the condition of all such receivers, as are yet to seeke of him in any benefit of his Sacrifice and Crosse, Oh! how fearefull is the Sacrament to all such as never understood the Doctrine of Christ broken? How shall they be the better for the Supper? Oh! what terror should it worke in such consciences as cannot by experience speake one word to their soule of the benefit of Christ in either? Surely if the Lord Iesus broken were never given them; no other benefit of his Adoption, or Sanctification, either in grace and glory can be theirs. And by consequent, that fulnesse of Christ which here is exhibited to the faithfull, to save and refresh them, becomes by their unbeleefe as unfruitfull to their soules, as if Christ had never died nor Sacrament ever beene offered them. For they are still the same, neither good day mends them, nor bad payers them, for any pardon or grace that ever Christ broken could yet helpe them withall. But for the third Act, thus much.

The fourth Act.

Now the fourth & last ministeriall act of the Supper, is the distribution of it to the people, with a charging them to receive it as from

from God. For its expresly added, that our Saviour having taken, blessed and broken the Elements, did give them himselfe to his Disciples. He called them not about him, and suffered them to serve themselves of them, but dealt out both Bread and Cup to each of them, and sustaining a double person both of the divider, and of the thing divided, charged them each and all to receive and apply them, as the offer of God. And to say truth, to what end served the former acts, save for this last? Touching the severall distribution of Christ; I do not thinke that he did severally give it to the person of each disciple immediatly; but that reaching out the severall morsels, he gave personally to them who were neerest, and so by them, he conveied it to the remotest sitter, till all were served. And this he did, not onely in the Bread but in the Cup also, as Saint Luke doth particularly mention, and so the other, and Paul 1 Cor. 11. expresseth. The distributing. 1 Cor. 11, 21. Luke 22, 20.

Now in this last act, I consider two things. First, personall. Secondly, peculiar application of the Sacrament. For the former, he would intimate thus much, that the Minister in his reaching out the Elements to each receiver, is the hand of the Father, applying the Christ of the whole Church, to such a man, and such a woman in person. And as each communicant sustaines a double person, either of membership as he is belonging to the whole body, or of person, as he is to answere for himselfe to God: so in the former respect he communicates no other Christ than the Christ and head of the body: and so calls God our Father, and Christ our Christ, seeing he hath no right to any Christ, save in the Communion of Saints. By vertue of which, he approves himselfe to be a true member of the body, claiming no right to Christ otherwise than the Christ of his whole miliant Church. But in the second respect, as each person or beleeving receiver, stands in his owne place, and receives speciall grace for himselfe, so hee calls God my Father, and Christ my Christ; and therefore comes not to receive any implicite Christ, or as the Church receives him; but comes to receive him for himselfe in person, for his owne pardon, assurance, peace, support: and so his own as no mans else. Each Christian hath Christ in a community, because a branch cut off from the stocke is but dead, and the Legacy of Christ Sacramentall is not given to a member, but to the body, that so it may aptly and fitly be derived out into portions. As of many graines one loafe is framed, and whole Christ is given to the whole body: so also of this loafe the Lord cuts out here onemorſell, there another, for each members ſeverall uſe, which perhaps is not anothers. The arme in the body hath no nouriſhment

Rom. 11. 17. ſave in the body, that it might learne to abide in the body, and to neede it as a fellow feeling member. Howbeit, the nouriſhment of the arme in ſpeciall, is not the foots, nor the thighes, but its owne.

2. Peculiar. Secondly, in this diſtribution of the Sacrament, our Lord Ieſus aymes at peculiarneſſe: and teacheth us, that when the Miniſter reaches out the Elements to this perſon and to that, hee doth not onely preſent a common Chriſt to become my Chriſt; he doth not onely make him my Lord and my God, and lay him in my lap, for my reconciliation and life: but alſo he doth make him mine peculiarly, for the granting of ſuch graces, and ſupplying ſuch wants as I in particular finde in my ſelfe: without which it ſhould not availe me that hee ſupplies the wants of others. And thus Chriſt Sacramentall, is no common Chriſt, (though a Chriſt of Community) but a peculiar and ſpeciall Chriſt cut out, divided and proportioned for each ſoules neceſſitie: as many lines are equally drawne from one center, to each part of the orbe and wheele thereof.

The ground of it. To make this point cleare, conſider the ground of it; The Lord Ieſus who is the (Demenſum) or portion of the Church, is alſo his owne ſteward to divide and deale out himſelfe as the dole of the Church, and of each of his houſhold. Salomon, Prov. 27. ſaith to all Maſters of Families, Looke diligently to the ſtate of thy flockes and heards: Provide hay & ſtover for them, that thou mayeſt thereby have ſuſtenance for thy children, and maydens. what he will as his Fathers ſteward; officers are as they are, muſt do as they can, but he as he liſt; well may he be truſted for faithfulneſſe in all the houſe or Church of God: having ſtored up in himſelfe all gifts and treaſures, and being the wiſedome of the Father to divide them to all and each as hee needs it, knowing them by name, and their needs; and knowing what, how much, and what will beſt fit them: and wanting no tenderneſſe to attend his wiſedom. Far be it from him to give ſome all, ſome never a whit, for he is juſt: or to give ſome the portion of others, for he is wiſe; or to give to the ſtrongeſt, and overſee the fatherleſſe and weake, for he is tender and in all three faithfull, even Gods right hand to deale as God himſelfe would doe, if preſent. As it was he who firſt did take off our yoake, and lay meate before us: ſo it is hee who maintaines us at his coſt, gives us our daily bread, in word and Sacrament, till wee neede it no more, Hoſea 11. 4. Yea he himſelfe is our foode and ordinary, which no ſteward can bee, as in the next generall ſhall appeare. Hoſ. 11. 4.

For the uſe hereof, firſt its confutation of Popery, who (as I oft have noted) make Chriſt the worſt (to ſpeake with reverence) and moſt baſe, unfaithfull and fooliſh ſteward in the world, to pull away the Cup from his people; and to defraud them of that full nouriſhment which both his Father allowes them, and himſelfe was broken and ſhed his bloud to become. And whereas they cavill thus, that Chriſt gave onely to Miniſters, to no lay men, and ſo they doe: but as for the people (by whom there is perill of ſpilling) they doe it not, for honour of the Sacrament. Ye hypocrites who ſtreine at Gnats and ſwallow Camels, how can ye be ſecured that the wine will not be ſpilt in a Miniſters drinking it? Or who taught yee that the Church ſerves for the Elements, and not they rather for the Church? Cares Chriſt for dropps of wine more than the ſoules of his people? Is it more with him that wine ſpill, or the ſoule periſh? Againe, where learne ye to expound the words of Chriſt (Eate ye, drinke ye all) excluſively? Doth hee not ſay, I am with you to the worlds end? Doe the Apoſtles live for ever? Saith he, Doe this as oft as yee doe it, till I come? Tell me I pray, by the ſame reaſon, why may any ſave the Miniſter take the bread? Is there any proviſo for them? No, no, hee ſpake here as elſewhere, in the perſons of Miniſters to all beleevers, as in John. 17. he expreſſeth, I pray not for theſe onely, but for all that beleeve. Vſe.

Secondly, this point teaches the Miniſter of Chriſt to looke to himhimſelfe that he uſurpe not Chriſts roome in this act, nor come to divide that Lord Ieſus Sacramentall, whom he cares not to divide and reach out in doctrine to the people. If Chriſt had ſo done, what had his giving of the Elements beene but a dumbe Pageant: whereas if it were the care of Gods ſtewards to conſider, that looke what they doe at the Sacrament, they doe onely in relation to their Miniſtry: how wiſe, ſtudious, and faithfull would they be in that other cutting of the word, and giving it duly to the people, by ſpeciall obſerving, applying and dealing out to each hearer his portion? How would they ſtudie the people in themſelves? Learne to put a difference betweene the portion of novices and ſtrong ones, of ignorant and skilfull, of happy and cheerefull ſpirits, of the fallen or ſtanding? framing the uniforme truth of God to the text in hand, and the text and uſe of it, to the occaſion of their people? That ſo Gods Spirit might not ſeeme ſtreightned; and for eaſe, careleſnes and forme, ſeeme to eate up all power and ſpirit in men, cauſing people to miſapply truthes, ſo deluding themſelves.

Vſe 3. Thirdly, what a ſweet ground of inſtruction is this to all, to magnifie Chriſt Sacramentall, in the wiſedome of his ſtewardſhip? To aſcribe his due honour to him, in ſeeing and ſerving the wants and turnes of, not congregations, but particular beleevers? What member is there of a great noble mans houſe, whoſe eye is not ſet upon the ſteward of the houſe? from him they have their meate, their Phyſicke, their cloathes, their lodgings, their wages, each one his portion; therefore of all others, hee is the chiefe object of honour, if faithfull. Oh! couldeſt thou ſee the moſt curious wiſedome of thy Lord Ieſus thy ſteward, in the diſpenſing of Sacramentall graces, neither ſuperfluouſly, nor niggardly; neither the apparrel of the growne to the yong, nor Phyſicke in ſtead of foode, nor ſtrong meate in ſtead of milke, nor any of theſe out of ſeaſon, when the ſoule is paſt them and ſtarven: but theſe fully, juſtly, wiſely, tenderly, and all in ſeaſon: yea to all, ſo that the number of his people wearies not his diſpenſation. Oh! how would it raviſh thee! Its the ignorance of the ſtewards excellency, which makes him ſo little ſet by. Men make uſe of him for every thing, and honour him for nothing, and indeede rather cozen themſelves of him, than of his due. None of his graces ſerves only for a dumbe ſhew, but for uſe: Conſider what a ſteward thou haſt, who cuts out himſelfe for thee; being made of the Father to this end. Its he he who is the dispenser of the manifold graces of God; yea so doth he parcell them out to thee, that hee was pleased himselfe to partake them: He would be baptized himselfe, would eate and drink the Supper himselfe, that he might sanctifie his Minister to distribute, and his people to receive this nourishment; that he might by his owne holy dividing, eating and drinking, cover all the defects of his Church in both, and encourage them to come unto him, even in their weakest preparations. Alas! not himselfe was the better for these, but in all his Churches welfare, he is refreshed as in his owne, and when he can make us accepted in himselfe, and well-pleasing, he hath his desire.

Fourthly, this should informe us of the excellency of the Sacrament, and how it adds a blessing to the promise. For the promise makes the proposition of a Christians comfort; All that thirst, hunger, beleeve, may come and bee eased, refreshed. But the Sacrament is the Assumption, and addes, But thou art that party: To thee I offer these good things, take thou, eate, drinke thou: thou poore soule fearefull to apply the promise, I speake to thee, its thy portion (although thou wilt not acknowledg it) I know thee to be such an one, I come now to thy doore and lay this refeshing unto thee, take it, its thine: Many poore soules cavill against the promise, and say, If I were named as the party to whom the Lord Iesus belonged, I durst, but alas! how dare I? how many step in before me? Indeed to the Church these things belong in generall, but in so great a number of men, how easily is such a poore wretch as I trod downe? No, no, the Sacrament is the hand of Christ thy steward, seeing thee, singling out thee, looking downe for such as are broken, empty, base, and fatherlesse, that he may bee strong with all such! and now in speciall to thee he saith, Thou art this thirsty beleeving soule, apply the promise to thy selfe, Iohn, Thomas, such a man or woman: for in a manner the Sacrament supplies the defect of the word, both in personall and peculiar application. It tells thee thy name is written in heaven: it gives thee a ticket in speciall from God, to secure thee to be his: and as it offers whole Christ to the Communion of Saints, so it severs out thee and tells thee that thou art not forgotten amongst the rest, but to thee the Lord Iesus broken belongs. Thou seest not the parcell of bread & wine, more personally offered to thy hand, than Christ to thy soule. So that as by vertue of generall Christ thou denyest thy selfe, and prayest, Our Father, give us this day our daily bread, forgive us, Vse. 4.

leade not us into tentations: that is compſt thy ſelfe to ſerve onely for the uſe of the body: ſo by vertue of Chriſt cut out and divided to thee, thou ſayſt, I beleeve in God: I beleeve in Chriſt: I beleeve in the holy Ghoſt: I beleeve my ſelfe to be the Lords, and faſten ſo upon Chriſt, not as every beleevers, but mine owne in ſpeciall, to pardon, to ſave me, as if I were the onely perſon. And not onely thus, but after this Aſſumption, comes in a Concluſion, Therefore Chriſts benefits are thine, all his graces, his enablements for doing, for ſuffering, ſupply of thy ignorance, reliefe of thy forgetfulneſſe, wanderings, earthlineſſe, &c. I ſay Chriſt is peculiarly thine with all his nouriſhment of eternall life. Learne to make this uſe of the Sacrament.

Vſe 5. Fiftly, it is inſtruction to the people to ground their hearts duly in the eſteeme of the Miniſter of God. Hee is in this diſpenſation of Chriſt both in word and Sacrament, the true arbiter or middle man to convey from God to them the Lord Ieſus in all his good things: and the returner backe againe from them to the Lord, the Calves of their lips, their renewed thankes, affections, covenant and obedience: Surely they ſhould behold him as an object of ſingular love and eſteeme for his workes ſake. How oft ſhould they muſe with themſelves? Oh ſingular favour, that the Lord ſhould treate with us by entercourſe of his Miniſter, allow him in his ſtead to divide Chriſt to us in Word and Sacrament, to reach us out our peculiar portions as our ſteward wiſely and tenderly: to ſpeake to my heart aptly, pertinently, and then to apply it by the Sacrament? More ſpecially, to ſeparate the precious from the vile, to bring a perſonall promiſe home to thee, a peculiar ſupply of thy wants! Oh! how ſhould the feete of ſuch be beautifull? The truth is, I grant, the unfaithfulneſſe of ſome, is the cauſe, which holds them from due honour: when people ſee nothing in them tending to this mediation, no tenderneſſe to their ſoules, no love, but ſeeking their owne ends, polluting the Ordinances both by admitting the worſt, diſmaying the beſt, diſcouraging the weake, and defiling themſelves: Oh! how ſhould this procure them honour? But doubtleſſe if as Shepheards they would take the weake ſheepe on their ſhoulders, and be all in all for Chriſt, dividing him in Word and Supper aright, what eſteeme would follow them, and the vileſt not dare to open mouth againſt them?

Vſe 6. Reproofe in thee reſpects. Sixtly, this is reproofe of the people in divers reſpects, firſt their cavilling, ſecondly, their unprofitablneſſe; thirdly their diſtruſt of of Christ Sacramentall. For the first, how doe men grudge against Christ, and the portion of others? Carve for themselves? Oh! if such or such were present here were for them; for they are thus and thus, techy, worldly! As Peter, Iohn 22. asked Christ, What shall this man doe? But what hast thou to doe with the portion of another? Looke thou to thine owne: Doe not cavill I say Oh, such can carry away such and such gifts as I cannot attaine! Why? hath not the Lord for thee as well as them? But thou seekest another mans supply, not thy owne. As Absalon sought to governe, when he should have beene subject: so, thou commest for the gifts of such and such, but no supply of thine owne wants. What should the hand doe with the gift of the head? or the foote of the hand? Keepe within thy bounds, covet the speciall portion of thy soule: come to Christ divided to thee, if that will not satisfie thee, thou art no member. Perhaps if thou hadst another portion it would pride thee! Cast away envy, and get faith, and Christ hath for thee as well as him. 1.

Secondly, it taxeth the unfruitfull receiving of many who come for supply of their wants: but they are still to seeke from Sacrament, to Sacrament, and still are as full of their wants as ever. They fasten not upon Christ their divided portion, but rest in their complaints, laying out no money for bread. They come and goe daily as naked as ever, as if Christ were cut out and given there to have their custome daily, and heare of their wants and needs, but to be a supply of none. Much like those who wanting any implement in their house, let all neighbours know their wants, and seeke to borrow but want credit, and want still. Oh! its fearefull thus to profane Christ offered as a supply of every soules wants. If thine be still unsupplied, what fruit hast thou reaped by receiving, or how can thy heart rest satisfied any more than he who dreames of treasures, and when he awaketh is empty? 2.

Thirdly, the distrust of many is to be rebuked sharpely, who are not convicted of this use of the Sacrament, but remaine incredulous, comming to it as a strange thing, knowing no such thing, as that Christ divided into portions is there? Oh! the ignorance and infidelity of most receivers is great in this! Nothing is so formall, fulsome a thing with them as the Sacrament, which yet is the reallest blessing under the Sunne, even the Lord Iesus in his peculiar distribution and supply of al his peoples wants, Oh if thou knewst the gift of God, how should these scales fall from thine eyes, and 3.

how ſhouldeſt thou behold the Supper of Chriſt? As Iehojakin lifted up from priſon to the daily portion of the King of Babels meate, ſo ſhould the hereſay of a Sacrament be to thee. Thou wouldſt abhorre thy ſelfe for thy blinde, baſe, and fulſome receivings, more than for thy ſwearing and drunkenneſſe. To theſe I ſhould adde the laſt uſe of exhortation to the Lords people, to get ſelfe-deniall, and the ſence of their owne wants: and therewith to bring ſpeciall faith to take out this portion to themſelves. But I reſerve both theſe to their ſeverall roomes, if God will, hereafter. So much therefore be ſpoken of this firſt generall, viz. the acts of the Miniſter in the Supper. Now followeth the two of the people, in receiving.

The two acts of people,

The Acts of the people in receiving are two, all ſutable to the miniſteriall charge which the Lord Ieſus himſelfe at firſt, and the Miniſter in his Name continually doth lay upon them, the which are, Firſt, taking or receiving. Secondly, eating, enjoying and poſſeſſing the comfort of theſe good things. Concerning the which, although in coherence to the former, it were not amiſſe here to treate of them: yet, conſidering they cannot be well underſtood, till the next generall have bin handled, to wit the grace of Chriſt offered in the Supper, (how ſhould an act be underſtood till the object about which it is occupied, be conceived?) Firſt therefore of that in the next Chapter, and then of theſe two after by way of uſe of the doctrine, (if God will) ſhall more ſeaſonably be ſpoken in the eighth Chapter following.

Chap. VII.

Of the ſecond part of the deſcription, viz. The grace of the Supper.

WE come now to the ſecond generall in the deſcription of the Supper, to wit the grace of Chriſt offered therein to the beleever: and that is whole Chriſts body and blood for ſpirituall nouriſhment of life once received. The diſtinct underſtanding of which point in the branches, will prooye one of the maine points in this deſcription, and give us light in the doctrine of the Supper. Here then let foure queſtions be opened.

4. Queſtions. Firſt, how the grace of the Supper is conveighed into the Sacrament?

ment? Secondly, how comes it to passe that Christ Iesus is our spirituall support in grace, as well as our being and regeneration? Thirdly, how comes Christ to be propounded to us as our Sacramentall Support, or foode? Fourthly wherein consists it? For the first question, I must answere it by some steps or degrees. Obserue then, that first, its the good pleasure of God the Father to select out unto himselfe such a number of people (from the common masse) whom he will bestow himselfe upon, and his Image in grace and glory: whom he will make his beloued, be knowne in, and set his marke upon, both by pardoning them, and sanctifying them, to be his owne peculiar. Secondly, since he will have such a number to be his, looke what life of his he hath once given them; and what estate of grace he hath called them unto, the same grace he must sustaine, and continue in them and keepe them therein, from sinking, or losing that which he hath vouchsafed them: which cannot be except he doe spiritually nourish them, as he first spiritually bred them.

First Question. How is Christ the soules nourishment.

Thirdly, looke by what meanes he first thought meete in his diuine wisedome to communicate his life unto them: by the same he must convey the maintaining power thereof in them; for as much as by the same things whereof we consist, we are also nourished. If then the Lord Iesus were the Mediator of life at the first to them, affording himself to be seed, and begetting unto them; then the same Lord Iesus must become also foode of this life, to cherish it, to repaire it, to supply the wants of it, to redresse the decayes of it, and to uphold the frame of it in them. If God thought it good not to betrust them with this second life of grace, as he did Adam with that first of creation: and therefore hath put over the custody of that life and the supply of nourishment tending thereunto, into the hands of the Lord Iesus, that so it might never faile nor wanze away any more: Then surely it behooves that the Lord Iesus be as well the keeper of this life, and the nourishment thereof, as hee was at the first the breeder thereof. Fourthly, the Father to this end must really convey into the person of Christ all such power and vertue, as may enable him to be the life and nourishment of his members: and therefore he must fill him with himselfe bodily, and make him the treasury of all graces, wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification and redemption: all good things necessary for the making of such as are not his to become his: and such as are his, more his, or his in a more full and assured maner, to prosper, grow,

1 Cor. 1. 30.

5. and thrive in him unto perfection. Fiftly, hee muſt alſo qualifie the Lord Ieſus with the gift of conveying this holy nature of his, and this bleſſed nouriſhment of his unto his people: and this he doth not onely by the union of fleſh with God, but eſpecially by the death and ſatisfaction of Chriſt, by which as by a wide dore, he opened the treaſure of life & nouriſhment which was in him, and merited that the life of grace in forgiveneſſe and holineſſe might be theirs, and that himſelfe in his fleſh and blood, broken and powred out, might be a moſt effectuall ſeede of life, and foode of life, to ſupport them.

6. Sixtly, to this end, he hath the authority to ſend forth the Word of reconciliation, and of nouriſhment unto his people, and as by the power of vocation, to call them from death to life, that all who heare the voyce of God might live; ſo alſo to create in their ſoules by that word of his, the gift of faith, to pull them to himſelfe, to unite them to himſelfe, and to convey his owne ſpirituall life by this union of faith unto them: cauſing his bleſſed Spirit to concurre ſo with the word, as to ſettle it upon them: and having ſo done, to give them this priviledge, that they ſhall as truely be maintained at his coſt, be kept in his name, be upheld in grace, proſper in it, be defended againſt all enemies within or without, which might impeach this their welfare, growth, fruitfulneſſe and perſeverance, as ever he bred life in them at the firſt.

Eſay 57.17.

Iohn 17.11.

7. Seventhly, and laſtly, they receive by this priviledge, as true right to claime, plead for, and expect the Lord Ieſus to be their nouriſhment, as the poore dumbe creature by the inſtinct of nature being brought forth, runnes to the Damme for milke. Or as the Infant comming forth of that wombe which gave it life, cries for the breaſt of the ſame mother, and pleades to be nouriſhed by her. By theſe ſteps it may be conceived in generall, how the Lord Ieſus is made of the Father, the true foode of his members.

The third queſtion, viz. How Chriſt is ſo in the Supper?

But as yet here is nothing of Chriſt our Sacramentall nouriſhment: Vnderſtand therefore the Sacrament to ſtand in relation to the Word of promiſe, wherein Chriſt is made the poore ſoules owne, to feede her. As I noted in Baptiſme, ſo here againe obſerve Chriſt in the promiſe, and Chriſt in the Supper differ not, ſave in the manner and degree of exhibiting him our nouriſhment: Looke then what the Spirit of the promiſe workes for the ſoule, that it muth more worketh by the Sacrament. Take ſome inſtances. Firſt, it preſents the ſoule of every one truely bred, with thoſe choiſe

That the Lord makes her a feaſt upon the mountaines, of fat things, of wines refined and pure; and the diſhes of the feaſt are, Chriſt in his graces, plucking away the veile of darkeneſſe, removing death and feare, bringing joy and peace, Eſay 55. 2. he offers him in all kinds of things uſefull and nouriſhing, wine, hony, oyle: bids her eate good things and delight her ſelfe in fatneſſe. In Pro. 9. he invites her to his feaſt and proviſion of all choiſe daintie, not for neceſſity only, but for fulneſſe, for delicacie, for varietie and delight, for ſafety, for durableneſſe. In Pſal. 23. he leades her as a ſhepheard into his paſtures, ſtreames, folds; guards her againſt dangers and death, annoints her head with balme, and fills full her cup. In the Canticles, he makes himſelfe her husband to marry himſelfe to her, and beſtow all at once upon her: his garments ſmell of mirrhe, Cinamon, and Caſſia. In Pſal. 84. he denies her nothing that is good for her, either for light or defence: in thoſe Parables hee makes her a feaſt, brings out the Calfe. In Iohn 6. tells her, his fleſh is not onely life, but meate indeede, and his bloud drinke indeede: and plainely ſaith, They that live in him ſhall abide in him, and out of their belly ſhall ſpring up waters of life: they that eate him ſhall not die, but live for ever. In Revel. 3. he offers himſelfe to her in all reſpects; Attire for nakedneſſe, gold for poverty, eye-ſalve for blindneſſe, himſelfe a ſupply of all neceſſities.

How much more then doth he leade her to this great Sacramentall promiſe mentioned in the Text, This is my body given for you: this is the Cup of the new Teſtament in my bloud? Againe, the Spirit of the promiſe, brings the Lord Ieſus and all his fulneſſe of nouriſhment into that promiſe: the ſpirit of nature doth not ſo prepare the nouriſhment of the infant, and ſeale it in the breaſt, for more eaſie faſtning, than the Spirit doth ſettle all the fulneſſe of Chriſt in a promiſe, ſo that it offers it ſelfe to the hungry ſoule. Beſides it puts the faithfulneſſe of the promiſer into the promiſe, all the tenderneſſe and compaſſion of Chriſt to the wants of the Church, and the truth of his meaning, not to faile her in any good thing hee can helpe her with. Furthermore, it ſtrips her of all her ſtrength: tells her, that although ſhe be borne of God, yet except he cleave to her as a feeder, as a father, a nurſe, a ſupply, ſhe cannot ſubſiſt: ſhe will goe to worke elſe with her owne tooles and compaſſe her ſelfe with her owne ſparkles, and deceive her ſelfe with her her owne traſh: ſhe cannot doe any duty, get out of any temptation, beare any trouble of her ſelfe, without Chriſt ſhe can doe nothing. Moreover, he ſheweth her, all her ſufficiencie is from Chriſt: The worke and life of grace requires his daily, hourely acting power in her, to ſet it on work, or elſe all ſhe hath in her is in vaine; the principle of life ſhe hath, will not worke, will not helpe, except it be jogged by the Spirit that gave it, (as the hand that ſtirres the ſaw) to quicken the operations of life: no meanes, no diet can nouriſh without this. And ſo I might be endleſſe: For this ſpirit doth by a promiſe offer the Lord Ieſus to the ſoule as one that knowes all her wants, takes meaſure of her defects, as one ſhould doe of a body for apparrell, to make it fit and ſutable: So doth Chriſt provide all nouriſhment, apt nouriſhment, for every part, againſt each corruption, temptation, affliction, for every duty, for marriage, for liberty, for company, for Sabbaths, hearing and ordinances: yea (to draw to an end) the ſpirit by the promiſe, doth ſtirre up, firſt, ſight of Chriſt her nouriſhment; ſecondly, affections after him; thirdly, an hand to reach him, take him, put him on, apply him: faith to digeſt, and draw from him whatſoever he offers her, freely, cheerefully, confidently, ſenſibly; faith carries her into the ſtreame of his welfare, the floods (as Iob ſpeakes) of his butter and hony: and venturing upon his word, takes him as hee offers himſelfe, and not by a baſe and trecherous heart, putting him off with his ſtore and plenty, as if it were too good for her to receive.

4 Leanes her to the ſufficiency of Chriſt

5 Takes meaſure of all her wants in ſpeciall.

6 Workes application of the promiſe.

Concluſion. Now then to end this point, if the Spirit can thus work the heart to imbrace Chriſt by a promiſe, how much more by the Sacrament of the Supper? in which I may truely ſay the Lord Ieſus is brought forth in his likeneſſe, eminently, even in the inſtruments and immediate manner of nouriſhing, all Chriſt, whole in reſpect of his obedience and death, pardon and holineſſe, as a Diamond not to be broken, and yet broken alſo upon the Croſſe, divided into portions, as the meete morſells of each poore receiver that needs his fleſh and bloud: True bread to be her ſtaffe of life, and wine to be the cheriſher of her Spirits. Oh! the bringing forth of theſe flagons, in ſo ſenſible a manner, to affect all her ſoule, and to overthrow infidelity, muſt needs be a more effectuall inſtrument of the Spirit to perſwade her, that Chriſt is all in all unto her, for her ſupport in grace and holineſſe, than either the word alone, or any other ordinance, the Lord having in ſpeciall ſet the Supper apart, neither to be a breeder at all of grace, as the word preached is, nor to be a nouriſher in any ordinary manner, as other publique or private meanes, in each of which Chriſt conveyes himſelfe and his communion to the ſoule: but an ordinance onely tending to nouriſh, ſerving for the nonce, and to no other purpoſe, and therefore having no other ſcope, muſt needs be moſt effectuall for the end it ſerves for. Each thing is moſt prevalent in her owne predominancy and Element. If then the ſpirit ſo can worke by the promiſe alone, how much more by the Sacrament which repreſents that which it offers under the ſhadow of the ſignes? and tells the ſoule, Behold the print of the nailes, behold my ſide, behold my ſelfe here is my body, here is my bloud given for thee, ſhed for thee: Be not unfaithfull, but faithfull. Sooner ſhall bread and wine ceaſe to nouriſh thy body, than my fleſh and bloud to nouriſh thy ſoule to eternall life: The concluſion is, the Spirit doth more eminently convince the ſoule by the Supper, of her nouriſhment by Chriſt, than it can by the Word alone, for as much as the Sacrament with the Word is above the Word.

is,

Ioh. 20. 27.

Verſe 28.

The fourth and laſt queſtion remaines, wherein Sacramentall nouriſhment conſiſts? The meaning of which queſtion is double; The firſt concernes the parts of it: The ſecond, the degrees of it, The firſt lookes at the object, how many wayes Chriſt is the nouriſhment of his. The ſecond rather lookes at the influence it ſelfe, of what kinde or meaſure it is. Touching the firſt, As I ſaid before of Baptiſme, that it affords to the ſoule, Chriſt to be her ſeede in all reſpects of true being and regeneration: ſo now I ſay, the Supper offers him to the ſoule in each of thoſe particulars for welbeing. I have oft thought of two Texts which will expreſſe the difference. That of Paul, Ephe. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God who hath bleſſed us with all ſpirituall bleſſings in heavenly things by Chriſt: doth note unto us the grace of Baptiſme, as all the Chapter following proves in which the diſtinct eſſence of thoſe bleſſings conſiſts: There is another in 2 Pet. 1. 3. His divine power miniſtring to us all things for life and godlineſſe: he meanes not the being of thoſe things, but daily ſupply and increaſe, influence from the Spirit of Chriſt, to uphold the ſoule in them, which hath them: and this denotes the grace of the Supper. Now if we marke, we ſhall ſee the Scriptures ſpeake of this nouriſhing grace of Chriſt ſundry wayes: Pſal. 84. He ſhall deny them no good thing. Delight in the Lord, and he ſhall give thee thy hearts deſire. Do but thinke what it is which of all other thou wouldſt have, finde out thy want, and the Lord ſhall be thy ſupply; noting that how infinite ſo ever the needs and decayes of the ſoule are, God hath ſupply enough in Chriſt for them. This is moſt generall. Sometime the holy Ghoſt ſhortly knits up particulars, as in the ſame Pſalme, The Lord ſhall afford light and defence to his: By light including all ſuch good things as wee call poſitive graces, as pardon, peace, ability to duties, &c. By defence, all privative grace, as prevention of evili, ſtrength againſt enemies, aſſaults of Sathan, world, fleſh, ſtreights and croſſes.

1 Cor. 1. 30. Sometimes he is more large, ſaying that Chriſt is made to us, wiſedome to make us more and more underſtanding in the truths of God, and direction to live accordingly: righteouſneſſe, to know our ſelves juſtified by better and ſurer evidence: Sanctification, to grow holier, and more mortified daily, abler to walke with God in the courſe of our converſation: Redemption, to uphold us in all our troubles, with more humbleneſſe, patience, faith and experience, and to helpe us againſt all enemies, till we be fully delivered from all.

Eſpecially by applying it to the graces of Baptiſme.

But as I take it, the moſt convenient way to expreſſe the extent of this grace, will be to apply the Supper to all and each branch of the grace of Baptiſme. Briefely then marke: Doth Baptiſme give us an eſtate in Iuſtification, Adoption, Reconciliation, Redemption? Then the Supper confirmes and nouriſhes them! Hereby the way a doubt may be ſoone made, (and is as ſoone anſwered) that is, That the graces of a Chriſtians condition encreaſe not, a man cannot be ſaid to increaſe in Iuſtification, Adoption, &c. Anſwer, Graces indeede of imputation doe not admit increaſe, but yet are not excluded from being the object of the Sacrament, and that in two reſpects. Firſt, themſelves, for though their eſſence encreaſe not, yet the ſoule may and muſt increaſe in the knowledge and aſſurance of them. Secondly, the fruits of them, as the peace, the cheerefulneſſe and joy, the contentation, the confidence, the libertie, the welfare of the heart may either be greater or ſmaller, and therefore they concerne the grace of the Supper.

1. Objection.

Anſwere.

2. Againe, doth Baptiſme ſeale up inherent ſanctification to be the ſoules owne? Then doth the Supper nouriſh the ſoule in that. Firſt in the mortifying and quickning power of it; for the Lord Ieſus broken and powred out, affordeth the ſoule daily ſtrength to breake the chaines, the power of ruling and defiling luſts: ignorance, errour, ſecurity, infidelity, profaneneſſe, ſelfe-love, unrighteouſneſſe, intemperance. Alſo it brings in the power of the reſurrection to rectifie, and informe the whole man, to better him in the grace of regeregeneration, ſinceritie, integritie, conſtancy, courage, &c. Yea more, it betters the Spirit and frame of the inner man, with fuller bent of reſolution, and ſtreame of heart and affections, to be for God, and to goe in the ſtreame of obedience to him. Secondly, it quickens and nouriſheth the ſoule in the ſpeciall graces of ſanctification, wiſedome, watchfulneſſe, humility, love, feare, faith, patience, mercy, and all holy affections, and gifts ſerving to holineſſe.

Againe, doth Baptiſme conferre the grace of a well ordered converſation? Then doth the Supper nouriſh that grace: take ſome inſtances. One ſpeciall grace of inward converſation, is the life of faith in all eſtates, in all duties, meanes, and graces. The Supper then ſtrengthens this life of faith, in all theſe, enabling the ſoule to be more ſober in proſperity, more humble under the Croſſe, more fruitfull in well doing, more diligent and conſcionable in all ordinances, more effectuall and plentifull in graces. Another inſtance may be of outward converſation, ſtanding in marriage, liberties, calling company, ſolitarineſſe, the tongue, the government of the family. The Supper then ſerves to better all theſe, to correct the errors, wants, infirmities of theſe, and to eaſe the complaint of the ſoule for her unaptneſſe to theſe; her ſloth, awckneſſe, wearineſſe, earthlineſſe hollowneſſe, barrenneſſe, unprofitableneſſe, unskilfulneſſe to ſerve God aright in all theſe. 3.

Againe, doth Baptiſme ſettle the conformity of the Lord Ieſus his ſufferings upon us? Then doth the Supper confirme the ſoule therein, to thinke afflictions daily more welcome, to count them no ſtrange thing, to wait for them, to be humbled, and broken, and powred out by them, made by them, more ſober, ſelfe-denying, more patient to beare, and more wiſe to profit by purging out the cauſes; more growing in graces, living by faith in ſtreights, for an holy uſe, and good iſſue of them. And in a word, the Sacrament is Chriſt our Influence and Nouriſhment in all reſpects, wherein the ſoule is capable of any want or complaint; ſerving to this purpoſe, that he may be quickned up in our affections, and in ſteed of a decaying, uncheerefull courſe (which Satan and corruption beſet us with) wee may walke in and out with God, with peace and comfort, and it may goe well with us in all that we put our hands unto, both without and within, in life and death. It is a ſtrengthner of us to duty, a ſupply of needs, protection againſt evils, proviſion of good things It is enough that the Supper is as 4. Deut 5.29.

large as any wants can be: No man knoweth where another mans ſhoe pincheth but his owne, but whereſoever the pinch is, Chriſt in the Supper is eaſe. All the difficultie is in the wiſe application, there is none in the point. This for the extent or object of Chriſt our nouriſhment.

Queſt. 2. The degrees. Which are foure.

The ſecond Queſtion will yet come cloſer to the point: viz. What this influence of Chriſt is, in what kinde or degrees it conſiſts. The anſwer is; That it ſtands in foure ſeverall parts and tends to as many ends. Proſperity of ſoule being the adequate end of the Supper; looke wherein true proſperity conſiſts, therein ſtands this influence: So that by this latter, the former will diſcover it ſelfe. Chriſt our nouriſhment by Chriſt our influence, which is the efficacie of it in the ſoule. The ſeveralls are, health, growth, ſtableneſſe, and fruitfulneſſe in grace. The Lord Ieſus Sacramentall being all theſe in all ſuch as are truly begotten of him, in ons meaſure or other.

1 Health of ſoule. 3 Iohn 2. Prov. 3. 8. What it is viz. Suſtaining the ſoule in her welfare Touching the firſt, health of the ſoule is one ſtep of ſpirituall proſperity. Saint Iohn Epiſt. 3. 2. prayes for Gajus (an holy, yet ſickly man) that he might be well, or in health, as his ſoule, proſpered; intimating that one (and the firſt) ſtep of proſpering, is healthineſſe. Salomon ſpeaking of the feare of God, ſaith, It ſhall be health to the navill, and marrow to the bones: noting that the ſoule which truly proſpers by Chriſt, is healthy, even as a body is. Note then, even as when we ſee corne, hops, or the like, hold their vigour and colour, we ſay they will thrive: and as the body when it holds it owne, and keepes good colour and countenance, the bones running full of marrow, and the bloud and ſpirits running well and aright in the veines and veſſels, then its called hayle and ſound; ſo it is with the ſoule of a Chriſtian. His nouriſhment is then well aſeene on him, when he holds that which he hath received once from Chriſt, when he beares his yeares well, when the conſtitution and frame of his ſpirit abides ſound, humble, beleeving, upright, thankefull, wiſe, wary, holy, righteous. Wee call health, the due conſiſtance of the conſtitution, and humors, without either exceſſe or defect: when the body keepes temper and vigour without any clogge or oppreſſion of ill humors or ſurfeit, befalling her. So is it here: when the ſoule is preſerved from the annoiance and diſtemper of the wonted bad qualities, pride, eaſe, infidelitie, unthankfulneſſe, envie, world, ſelfe-love, unſavorineſſe: when kept from looſeneſſe and ſecuritie, and hanging her grace upon the hedge, and running

running out of course, to all occasions, companies, baits, profits, pleasures, vanities: whereby the life of grace should be choked and oppressed: then she beares marke of some health and prospering; then she seemes to hold her owne in the life of faith, and the order of good conversation.

Now to this first end, the Lord Iesus our nourishment serves, especially in the Sacrament; and to this end all true Receivers frequent it, viz. That they may fare well, and prosper in soule. The Lord Iesus is able to doe this and more for them: David hath a sweet speech, The Lord is my portion, thou shalt maintaine my lot and my chance: Christ is able to uphold his owne worke, and the portion which he hath in his: As Iohn 17. he prayed for it, Father keepe them in thy Name: so he can doe it, and of his fulnesse, they receive grace for grace. His flesh is meate indeede, and his bloud drinke indeed: its seene upon their faces, and runnes in their veines, it puts sappe and vigor of joy, peace, and hope into them; and will not suffer them to looke worse and worse: as its said, Dan. 1. That the pulse they ate by the blessing of God made them looke as well and fresh at seven dayes end, as if they had eaten the Kings fare. How much more then shall the Kings diet doe it? Gods servants neede not forsake his house and fare, for the diet of the world, joviall, bold, wanton libertines, and timeservers; the Lord hath better fare than so for them: He counts it a dishonour to his Housekeeping, to see any of his to looke meager, or evill-favoured. And therefore looke what grace he hath put into them, he upholds it in them by his diet, by his flesh, by his bloud; So that they have the true Spirit of nourishment in them, they doe not coole in their love, through the abundance of iniquitie: they are not pulled from their stedfastnesse, by the error of the wicked; they doe not decline in their zeale, love, affections, judgement, savor, by the malice of Satan, the corruption of their owne spirits, the examples of formall and temporizing ones; they leave them to themselves, and looke to what they once receive, and to him they have once betrusted themselves with; and from his nourishment they finde themselves to be enabled to keepe the good things they have swet for as 2 Ioh. 8. which in so bad and degenerate a world as this, is no small portion.

Christ our nourishment can doe it Sacramentally. Psal. 119. 57. Iohn. 17. 11. Iohn 1. 17. Iohn 6. 55. Dan. 1. 15. 2 Iohn 8.

The 2 degree of Christs Sacramentall influence, is growth. And this still argues more prosperitie of soule, and that their nourishment doth them good. We see it in the creatures, and bodies of men; health will cause growth, by the constant use of nourish-

So it is with a true proſpering ſoule: He lookes not behind him what he hath bin, is not weary of health and welfare, waxeth not reſty, lazie, careleſſe, and ſtanding at a ſtay, as who ſay, I have held long enough, and abode the heat of the day. all all his obedience and growth in it, was not for himselfe, but for his beleeving ones; that they might grow up in more meekenesse, humblenesse, brokennesse of heart, mercy, love, patience, holy example, more in quality of graces; that they might be more purged from the uncleannesse, of their owne spirit, and be more pure, and savory; more in the quantity and measure of them, that as a little did some good, and went a little way, so more may doe more, and goe a farre greater: give more light, seeme more beautifull, afford more savor, beare downe an ungracious world more powerfully, and witnesse more sweetly to their owne heart, the truth of regeneration, than ever.

By his Sacrament.

And to helpe themselves herein, they apply themselves to the Ordinances of Christ, not only to the word that they might grow thereby: But to the Sacrament of the Supper especially, being the especiall helpe appointed to this onely end, to bring the Lord Iesus into the soule for her nourishment and growing in grace. So that needes it must be, that this growing in grace, which a poore soule seekes, is one of the most especiall fruits of Christ in the Supper: and Baptisme doth not more truely assure her of Regeneration, than the body of the Lord Iesus, and his blood in the Sacrament, doth assure her of her growth in grace. Such as the seede is, such is the crop: wheate brings forth twenty, a thirtie, or sixtie fold, its still of wheate: even so the food of Christ, which is heavenly, and holy, (for the flesh profits nothing, nor the blood, although one had dranke it under the crosse, its the Spirit onely which quickneth) and was given for the breeding and nourishing of the soule in grace, it breeds an heavenly growth, and a spirituall encrease in every true Receiver; especially being assisted with other helpes, inward and outward, the mercies and blessings of God, which as Talents, are put to advantage for Gods glory.

Math. 13, 8.

Iohn 6.63.

The third degree. Stableneſſe in grace.

What it is?

The third is stableneſſe in grace. We see that mens bodies in time by continuance of helth and growth, come to a pitch, to a measure of growth. This is a third prospering. It is not with the soule as with the body, which ceaseth to grow, when it is at her pitch, or declines rather when it is growne to her full point. But herein a pitch of bodily growth, resembles spirituall: that as the man grown to his full period, enjoyes (as it were) himselfe and his former yeares which he hath lived: becomes now (of a growing) a grown man, is come now to his best, to his full strength, ability and sufficiencie for service; so is it with a Christian. He growes in Christ

to Ephes. 4 13. to the measure and falnesse of him, Eph. 4. 13. So that whereas before in his beginnings, and proceedings, he found much ignorance in minde, much error in judgement, much infirmitie in spirit, much to seeke of direction and wisedome in his course: Also much unsetled, wearisome, off and on, up and downe in holy practise, many combats and conflicts with his bubling, rebellious, inconstant, trecherous withdrawing spirit; lo, now its otherwise; now hee is growne to some stay, setling, ripenesse, and experience in Gods matters, Heb. 5. more exercised in his spirituall senses to put a difference betweene good and evill, persons and things; not so blind as formerly, but light in the Lord, judicious, observative, sober in affections, staide in minde and resolution, having his heart at better bay and more awe, for teachable subjection to God, more firme in purpose of heart to cleave to God without distraction, 1 Cor. 7. 35. not easily carried away by each doctrine and dice-play of men, not mistaking truths, not slighting them, not partially affecting them; but moulded in them, fashioned by them, and keeping his fashion as a man would do of his apparell, against each novelty. So also constant, setled, rooted and stable, 1 Cor. 15. last (reade it) not ungrounded in the foundation, not to seeke when Satan buffets, but knowing his devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. and also strong to resist, couragious in the use of the Armour, and so persevering in his course.

Christ Sacramentall doth this. Ephes. 3. 17.

This is that which Paul, Eph. 3. calls Christ dwelling in the soule by faith; as the Inhabitant who keepes in his owne, is not as a Stranger, or a Sojourner who comes and goes, but a Ledger, one that holds his abode, and delights in his dwelling. Oh! this is a great degree of Christs infusion and influence into the soule, when hee pitches there, settles and dwels there, (for what else is the stablenesse of the soule in grace, save Christs dwelling in it by his grace?) and is no flitter thence. And this third degree of nourishment the Lord workes in all his, who have attained the former two. They come to be as the Scholler riveted into his Rules, or the Tradesman in the mystery of his occupation, not to seeke of it: It is the promise of Christ to all his, that they shall grow up thus in the body; not by any vertue of their owne, but by the Spirit of the Lord Iesus their nourishment: and to this end, especially they cleave to this Sacrament, and improve the promise of it, This is my Body; This is my Blood, even to settle the soule by the frequent receiving of it, upon the Lord Iesus; for stablenesse, strength, courage, that they may enjoy the Lord Iesus in all the Sacraments they have received, and retaine the power of all the Ordinances they have vſed, all the graces they have growne in, all the duties they have done, afflictions they have endured, examples they have ſeene, works and gouernement of God which they have marked: I ſay, that from all theſe the Lord would bring ſuch an holy experience of heart, reſolution of purpoſe, ſetling of ſpirit vnto the Lord, his threats, commands, and promiſes, as not doubting but they are firme and ſure, and therefore a rocke and foundation ſufficient to rely vpon in all windes, ſtormes, and weathers whatſoeuer. This I ſay is that third degree of Chriſt our nouriſhment which each communicant lookes for at the Supper. Math. 7. 24.

The fourth and laſt, is fruitfulneſſe in grace. See 1 Cor. 15. vlt. where the Apoſtle joynes theſe two laſt branches: Be ye vnmoueable and ſetled, alway abounding in the worke of the Lord. We ſee it in plants and men: The plants muſt be well ſpread and rooted in the earth before they can grow fruitfull, at leaſt in plenty. A little roote will not nouriſh large branches and boughes: Sometime the roote is ſo bare and fleet, that it will ſcarce furniſh the tree with leaues; but a large deepe root hath many ſtrings, and little ſuckers, which worke for the tree, and feede her with nouriſhment, ſo that the roote abiding deepe and faſt in the earth, the fruit is plentifull. We know Nature is neuer more fruitfull in the actiue principle of generation, than when the ſtrength of the body is well confirmed. So then, this is the laſt ſtep of ſpirituall proſperity, when this fourth is added to the three former, to wit, fruitfulneſſe in a good courſe. And it is the perfection of that influence & communion which we here enjoy in the Lord Ieſus our nouriſhment. That meate indeede, and drinke indeede, is this abundance and fruitfulneſſe; When out of the abundance of the heart, the tongue is fruitfull in uttering, the hands in working, the feete in walking, the members in ſeruice, the whole tree in bringing forth fruits of righteouſneſſe. Eſay 61. 3 calls ſuch accepted, and beloued of the Lord; as we eſteeme exceedingly of bearing trees, eſpecially if yearely and plentifully. It is from the roote of the Lord Ieſus, that the ſoule doth grow thus fruitfull. The indwelling of Chriſt, is the abundance of influence: the leſſe of Chriſt the ſoule hath, the leſſe ſap and fruit; the nearer the Communion, the greater the influence. The greater the treaſure is from which a man draweth, the richer the ſupply. We ſay, Its ſweet to take from a great heape. An heape will ſerue for all vſes: a poore vnſtockt man is eaſily perceiued in his wares, the ſmall The fourth degree. Fruitfulneſſe in grace. 1 Cor. 15. vlt. What it is?

ſtore

ſtore and choiſe thereof: he that hath little mony to lay out, is bare in his houſhold attire, family, dyet; ſcarſe hath for neceſſitie, but nothing for delight and plenty. So is it with a man that is no proſperer in grace, hath only from hand to mouth; he cannot verifie our Saviour his ſpeech, That out of the abundance of the heart, he bringeth good things abundantly: but rather he is ſcant in good ſpeech, ſcant in preaching (no more than needs muſt) in hearing, prayer, meditation barren and poore: ſo in the graces of the Spirit; little love, ſmall humility, compaſſion, ſo in duties, ſo in meanes. Alas, the roote is bare, and therefore the tree is unfruitfull.

Chriſt is this roote of fruitfulneſſe. Iohn 11. 3. & 12. 1, 2.

So alſo the deeper the ſoule is rooted in Chriſt; the larger roome he hath in the heart the more ſcope and entertainement he findes, the greater graces he affords. If we compare Mary and Martha's houſe, with the houſes which now and then Chriſt was bidden too, no doubt but we ſhall finde, that his fruits of preaching, love, converſe, miracles, and good doing, were more full in the former than the latter. Why? There was no ſtop, he might be ſure to bee welcome at all times: therefore he ſhewed himſelfe more there, than elſewhere. Chriſt then the more he is rooted in the ſoule, the fuller he is of influence, and ſo growes more fruitfull. For, what is fruitfulneſſe? Surely when a Chriſtian being aſhamed to conſider what a barren heart he hath had under full meanes; and how little and narrow the good is which he hath done for God, to himſelfe and others; and beholding the cauſe thereof, his want of true ſtock of knowledge and faith: mourneth for this his miſery, and ſeeking for an heart fuller of Chriſt and his nouriſhment, doth from his treaſure extend himſelfe plentifully to the exerciſe of ſuch graces, meanes and duties, as may be uſefull to himſelfe, and in the communion of Saints. If a poore ſhopkeeper almoſt banquerupt, be ſet up, and holpen up againe with new ſtocke, what will he doe? Ply the matter, runne to London, furniſh himſelfe with the beſt of wares and choiſe of them, bring them home, fill his ſhop in every corner; and ſatisfie the turne of every buyer. Oh! what a change is there?

So it is with a Chriſtian recovering out of a fruitleſſe courſe by the Lord Ieſus his raiſing and ſetting him up againe, ſtores himſelfe with plentie of graces, ſets them on worke, fills each part of his life with dutie; yea, ſets himſelfe againſt his former unprofitableneſſe: Adding to his knowledge, faith; to his faith, love, meekeneſſe, patience, expetience, hope; that ſo he may not bee unfruitfull in the Lord Ieſus. If hee have riſen up well apaid in his moruing awaking, he reſts not there (as before) but fetches from his treaſure a cheerefull heart to his calling: from thence proceedes to family duties & gouernement, from thence to doe good, and to take good in company, thence to bee well occupied alone, thence ready to viſite the ſicke, to admoniſh to comfort, to adviſe others, and when all is done, to nouriſh in himſelfe the life of faith one while, humbleneſſe another while, forbearance, longſuffering in provocations; thankes for bleſſings, patience if croſſed: ſometime in one, ſometimes in another duty; yet neither hurt by one from another, not glutted by ſucceſſion of ſervice, but fruitfull and unwearied in all, with one eye to his ground, another to his end. Even as a man of an active ſpirit, if well apaid in diet, and refreſhed in body, ſtickes not from morning to night to be doing, loathes to bee idle, and thinkes himſelfe to have loſt that day wherein he hath not beene full of employment. Now ſo is it here; the Lord Ieſus his nouriſhment, ſo enables the ſoules of his, that they ſeeke occaſions to expreſſe goodneſſe, as eagerly as a barren heart ſhunnes them: that which ſtrikes the one dumbe, and as dead as a ſtone, yea is as bane to him, that quickens and joyes the other, becauſe the fulnes of grace makes the worke moſt ſweet and welcome. Now wherein is the Lord Ieſus ſo full a nouriſhment as in his Supper, in which he brings forth al his ſtore and Magazine to fill the ſoule that is emptie with good things, and ſo to ſend it away from his Table, furniſhed (as the Apoſtle ſaith) as a veſſell of honour, and prepared for every good worke, ſo that none comes a miſſe? Thus I have given to the Reader an anſwere to this queſtion, what the Lord Ieſus our nouriſhment is, both in his parts and degrees, one of the maine things which I would wiſh him to marke in the whole Treatiſe, for the true conceiving of the vertue of the Supper.

2 Tim. 2. 21.

Now I come to the uſe, which is as weighty. And firſt this Doctrine is one of the fearefulleſt terrours that can fall upon the profane ſort of men, that live within the boſome of the Church viſible: All Atheiſts, Neuters, meere Civillians, Ignorant, profane, Libertines & Hypocrites. Is the Lord Ieſus the Sacramental nouriſhment and influence of his Church? Oh wofull then your conditionl who cut off your ſelves from all communion and fellowſhip with him; I ſay not in ſome, but in all grace of his, or part in his Ordinances. Alas! the day is to come that ever ye ſaw neede of him, to subsist in him at all. Your bondage, enmitie, and hell, see me libertie, amity, heaven to you. The devill hath bored your eares for vassals to himselfe, as notorious wretches, who are willingly slaves when ye may be free. Who then wonders if the Supper of Christ, and that offer of welfare which he makes therein to his, be as a fulsome thing unto you? Alas! as long as your drinke, lusts, play, company, sleepe and belly-cheere, be granted you; who wonders if Math. 7. 6. ye despise (with Esau) this birth-right? If with swine yee tread these Pearles, and this Manna in the dirt? Alas! it availes not you Heb. 12. 16. to have such a priviledge as Christ to foede your soules, if the whilst ye want your carnall appetite satisfied. If this foode were but as a messe of Pottage, as the wearing of your lockes, yee would have had him ere now. But oh! sapelesse, barren, and unsavory wretches; to whom these dainties are as a dry chip. Who come and goe to the Sacraments, as to dumbe Pageants; more fit for a masse of trickes, & apish ceremonies, than the solemne feast of Christ Sacramentall.

Woe be unto you, oh ye Dogges and Swine! your mortall sinnes and fearefull, your swearing, your lying, cosenage, drunkennesse: But your chiefe misery is, that you are carnall wretches, sold under your lusts, destitute of all union or communion with God: your hearts are not where your bodies are, when you come to Christ &

Vse 2. Secondly, let this be reproofe to such as go for religious, and per-Reproofe. haps may be so (for we cannot tell, but leave it to God and themselves to try) to whom after all this long while of Sacraments, the doctrine

doctrine and mystery of the Supper is both unknowne and untasted? What juster complaint can we take up among many, than this, that Christ the nourishment of his people is so little knowne? Looke to it; if the Gospel and the pearle hidden in it be yet hidden from you, the God of the world hath so blinded you with the ease and forme of an empty profession, that the glory of Christ should be still eclipsed from you. Beware least there be not in you still a common heart of the world, which causes these spirituall things to be so harsh and so unsavory. 2 Cor. 4. 4.

But to such as desire to bee affected with their ignorance in this kind, I say but this, Examine and trie your selves about this weighty matter, I meane the knowledge and use of Christ in the Supper; and let this make amends for your ordinary egresse and regresse to this Ordinance without searching your selves. I know right well; Sacraments were never so common, so monethly, so ordinary; and here and there Sermons, or some kinde of preparative, are made before them; but who is he almost that knowes what Christ offers to be unto his truly bred ones, the youth of his wombe, in his Supper? To whom are those flouds of Hony & Butter knowne, which are in Christ for the soule that is starven and needs him? Oh if Christ in the promises of nourishment were your delight! your need would make you seeke out, and search after the seale annexed to the promise, that by it, your bare faith, naked and barren soules of the power of Christ to purge and sanctifie you, might be doubly refreshed. Tell me in particular, Did it ever enter into you, that the Lord Iesus serves to feede, as well as to breede all his? To nourish his in those graces of the Spirit, which Baptisme hath begot in thee? Doe you know the way unto him by the Supper, (as to the Church by the path) for making your Iustification, Adoption, Reconciliation, more evident to your soules? doe you lot upon it, that there (if any where) even at the feast of Gods mountaine, the broken peace of your consciences, the joy of your soules, the confidence, contentation and liberty thereof to goe in and out with God, is to be revived? Why make yee then no more use hereof? Why doe Sacraments then as clouds passe over your heads, leaving so few of these drops upon them?

Oh! if you knew the gift of God truly, that here is the fountaine for you to drinke at, to quicken and enlarge the graces of the Spirit, faith, love, courage, thankes, uprightnesse, mercy, patience, and fitnesse for the Crosse, (all which you so infinitely want) how

Secondly, trial in foure particulars. 1. Againe if ye ſhall ſay, ye hope ye have got theſe in the Sacrament: I anſwere, I know ſome doe, but ſeeing I ſpeake to the bodie of Chriſtians who doe not, it cannot hurt any to trie that alſo: I may truely ſay; all ſuch as finde Chriſt ſuch nouriſhment to them, may be knowne by their fruites. Oh! they are healthy and proſpering, they diſcredit not Gods Diet, are not meager, evill favoured, ſurfeited with ill humors, pride, eaſe, the world, revenge, hypocriſie. This Phyſicke and diet of Chriſt broken and crucified hath given corruption her deadly bane (more or leſſe) in point of reigning and deluding, and defiling them: they loathe to decline from Gods truth, and the power of it; the wayes of ſtarters and revolters, and time-ſervers, are as vile to them, as drunkenneſſe or uncleanneſſe: They hold their owne towards God in ſome poore ſort, and this pulſe of God (as its counted, although indeed reſtorative) fleſh and blood of Chriſt, is made fleſh of their fleſh, and runnes in their veines, and miniſters vigour, ſpirit, and life, unto them, to keepe them in Chriſts body, in the midſt of all the pollutions, and declenſions, and coolings, and curſed examples of this
2. world. Secondly, this Supper of the Lord Ieſus, fattens and makes them thrive in grace, makes their grace more, more favory, better qualified, enlarged in meaſure, more humble, meeke, patient and heavenly, than when they firſt beleeved: This grace of the Sacrament heales them of an hide-bound heart, dead and ſtale, wearie, and ready to ſtand ſtill in grace. Every Sacrament addes a little of Ieſus Chriſt his tallneſſe, thickneſſe, depth, and makes them increaſe in favour with God, in credit with his Church to reach further than formerly they did, and to be enlarged in holy abilities for God and his ſervice; loathing to ſtand ſtill, as much as to be quite dead.

Thirdly, they ſhall finde it by their ſetledneſſe of Spirit, and holy purpoſe of heart to keepe the commandements, and to cleave to the Lord, as Barnabas ſaith, Act. 13.27. They ſhall wax more rooted, grounded both in truths (eſpecially the maine) and in the power of them; and that not in doing onely, but in ſuffering alſo. Chriſt will be a Bulwarke unto them, to fence them with courage and armour againſt aſſaults, enemies, Sathan, and the errors of the wicked that they may not be pulled from their ſtedfaſtneſſe. Laſtly, the Lord Ieſus will nouriſh them ſo fully, and ſo roote them in himſelfe, and ſet their pipes ſo in his well-ſpring, ſo dwell in them, that out of their bellies ſhall flow rivers of waters, able to water all their practiſe, and to make each part of their life fruitfull. I ſay, he ſhall heale their barrenneſſe, extend their grace ſo, that it ſhall ſuffice them for many uſes of life, as formerly for few. Briefely then trie your ſelves by theſe markes. Sure it is, they catch many in their ſnare, convincing them either to be none of the Lords: or elſe to diſhonour his Diet, and to call the Lord a hard Maſter, who reapes where he ſowes not, and keepes a bare houſe: whereas the very hired ſervants of his houſe fare better, than the jolliеſt and braveſt that live out of it. Oh if ye be theſe children that have their daily portion from Chriſts trencher (as Ierem. 52.33. it is ſaid of poore Iehojakin that priſoner) happy is it for you, theſe trials ſhall not hurt you; but if yee be not ſuch, certes, to trie may doe you good, and prevent that danger which all bad Receivers are liable unto. Which grace the Lord grant you.

And nextly as in due place, whom ſhould I turne my ſpeech unto, ſave unto the Iehojakins of the Lord (be not offended at the name, ſeeing its probable, God at laſt ſhewed him mercy for his obedience) I meane, ſuch as by this daily portion of his Chriſt, fare well and proſper in goodneſſe. Theſe I muſt diverſely ſpeake to: firſt the ſtronger ſort, then the weaker. To the firſt in a word, this I ſay, That if the Lord in mercy have granted you this portion, and theſe bleſſed fruits of proſperitie, whereby ye are eaſed and cured of that Epidemicall diſeaſe of the age, a declining, hide-bound, unſetled and barren courſe with God; I ſay unto you, bleſſe God in ſecret, who hath given you morſells and draughts which the world knowes not: count your portion to be fallen into a good ground, and deſire not to change it for the husks of Swine, no nor the feaſts of Princes: To you I ſhall ſay more after, in the point of enjoying Chriſt.

Pſal. 16. 6.

2 The weake. But unto you weake ones, let me ſpeake otherwiſe, and take your ſad words out of your mouths: you cannot deny, but the Lord hath both bred you, and fed you by his Son, and by his Sacrament; yours they are, and as Chriſt is Gods, ſo you are Chriſts; but yet that nouriſhment of Chriſt which I have here deſcribed in the parts and degrees of it, which dogges doe catch at boldly, perhaps you dare not apply to your ſelves: you are affraid that this my diſcourſe will condemne you; for you are farre from the tyth thereof (you ſay) farre from improoving the Sacrament to all thoſe ends, or in ſuch degrees as the laſt uſe preſſeth: your faith (notwithſtanding all your Sacraments) is weake, your comfort, peace, freedome of heart, ſmall: your grace little ſtirred up in you (to your feelings) your inner bent of ſpirit ſtill faint, and your ſtreame weake; your converſation full of diſorder, and the ſtaves of your wheele which ſhould ſupport the race of it, pittifully broken; your errors many in ruling your tongues, families, liberties and ſelves aright: and you ſay, if this be the fruit of the Sacrament to make Chriſtians proſpering in health, growth, ſtaiedneſſe, and fruitfulneſſe: Oh! what ſhall then become of you?

Obj.

Ans. I anſwer: Hold the Evidences of your Baptiſme and regeneration: proove your calling to be ſound: and keepe that you have gotten: mourne that you have not improved Chriſt in his foode and welfare, ſince you knew your ſelves to be the Lords: perhaps there hath beene a fault this way, that you have reſted too much in that, and too little ſtirred up the grace of Baptiſme by the Supper. Let that humble you: and covenant for hereafter to make better uſe of the promiſes and Sacrament of nouriſhment than you have done: for your comfort, this I ſay, The Lord hath taken away your ſin, you ſhall not dye: the Supper is the nouriſhment of the weake as well as of the ſtrong: All meaſures are not alike: By thoſe which I have here noted, I doe not deſire to ſnare any, but to ſhew Gods bounty and what Chriſts fulneſſe can beteame, not what each Receiver carries away. Therefore be not diſcouraged: God is like a tender tender mother who hath both ſtrong children and weake, ſhe hath meate for them all: But if any one be poorer and weaker than another, that ſhall have the daintieſt: not that it may ever looke to lye upon her hand: But that being cheriſht by her cordialls, it may grow ſtronger, and be free from ſuch maladies. Therefore in Gods feare, if there be truth, and a mourning heart for failings, and hunger after the beſt meaſures of grace which Chriſt hath for thee: let not this view of doctrine diſmay thee. Encourage thy ſelfe to waite for pardon of old defects, and the Lord ſhall by that I have ſaid, rouze up thy ſpirit to an earneſt coveting and a true enjoying of ſuch welfare in Chriſt as thy heart longeth after: Deſiſt not thy diligent receivings, and holy, humble preparing of thy ſelfe; for if thou leave Chriſt (as Peter ſaid when thoſe carnall followers departed) whither ſhalt thou go? He onely hath both words and food of eternall life.

But here ſome may ſteppe in and ſay, yea, wee ſhould have hope of this if onely we had ſome defects and decaies in grace and goodneſſe: But it is worſe with us; for we have harboured our corrupt qualities of ſloath, eaſe, deadneſſe, yea, perhaps, a proud, uncleane, covetous heart: yea rebellious againſt many knowne truths of God: ſinned againſt his mercy by much preſumption, againſt his threats by ſecurity, againſt his charges by contempt and diſobedience: our hearts accuſe us of coldneſſe, ſelfe-love, unthankfulneſſe, forgetting of Gods adminiſtrations, wearineſſe of the yoake of a ſtrict walking with God, and counted it preciſeneſſe; taken the uttermoſt of our liberties: counting them our enemies who have reprooved us: And now loe, the Lord arraigning us at the Barre of juſtice, wee are confounded in our ſelves, and almoſt driven to deſpaire: when our conſciences doe riſe up againſt us, and the Lord ſeemes to leave us to our ſelves, we ſeeme to be in hell: Is there any hope for ſuch as we? I anſwer, firſt I wiſh ſuch to try their Baptiſme and the truth of their firſt calling to be ſound: (of which after in the triall of our eſtate) and if they can prove that they have ever beleeved the promiſe; and found favour with God, then I ſay, the grace of God within you ſhall ſtirre up your ſoules to an unfeigned humiliation, and brokenneſſe, and ſhall recover you to a ſight of his promiſe. The Spirit of God ſhall not ſuffer you to runne from God with ſuch full bent of heart, but your checks and combats, working with the experience of mercy and former pardons; ſhall revive the ſeede of God within you: So that yee ſhall not wholly ſhake off the ſpirit of regeneration: The grace of your Baptiſme ſhall be as a ſecond boord after ſhipwracke to recover you; and ſhall ſend you to the Supper with hope of regaining that light and comfort which your revolts have darkened and eccliped: elſe ſhould the Sacrament be of no power to ſuccour diſtreſſed conſciences in their relapſes; But this I adde, ſuch ſhall finde it hard to bind up their breaches, and wiſh they had never revolted.

Vſe 4. Fourthly, let this be an uſe of inſtruction about that one particular of Chriſt our nouriſhment in redemption, a doctrine ſeldome preſſed in the Sacrament and therefore I will take ſome paines to preſſe it. The Supper of the Lord offers to all beleevers a portion of Communion with Chriſt in his afflictions: And as Baptiſme is our preſt-mony to bind us to Chriſt in all eſtates to be his ſouldiers as well as ſervants to our end: ſo the Supper confirmeth us in the grace of our Baptiſme. Therefore know that it is not for nothing that we receive Chriſt crucified, both body and bloud, under bread and wine: to put us in minde of taking up our Croſſe daily, making it our daily bread. That we drinke at this Supper, as its wine of refreſhing; ſo it is a Cup of bloud: and the wine of the indignation of the Lord upon his Sonne: Eſay 63.2,3. And although Chriſt dranke the dregges and trod the winepreſſe thereof to free us from the guilt and curſe of it: yet not from ſuffering for Chriſt: The Sacrament is a badge of our conformity with Chriſt (or at leaſt of our renuing courage) in his afflictions, Phil. 3. Chriſts cup was ſo bitter that he prayed off; Father, take it away: So muſt thou looke for the like, that if God ſhould compaſſe thee about and hedge in thy way, adde ſorrow to ſorrow, and make thee a Marah of a Naomi, removing thee (on the ſudden) farre from proſperity: Oh! thou mayeſt ſay, The Lord Jeſus hath drunke of this cup unto me: The extreame bitterneſſe and anguiſh of it, he hath taken off: if thou be his, thou maiſt ſay, Bleſſed be God, this Sacrament offers me a diſcharge from ſinne, curſe, Satan, hell and death: I know the hardeſt, and have ſhot the gulfe of theſe: yet ſtill there remaines a relique of bitterneſſe for thee to drinke, to frame thee to the love, ſelfe-deniall, patience, and victory of thy Maſter, and much more to be content to beare as he did. He bare for no ſinne of his owne; but thine onely: and he bare that he might helpe thee to beare, and in all thy afflictions be troubled; that he might take the ſting & venome of them away, and make them tollerable. Doe not then greet the Lord unkindely, and treacherouſly, when the the crosse comes, as if the Lord had sent it in wrath, to cut thee off, to take away thy right, Lam. 3. and to cast down thy soule out of her place: No, although the Crosse may seeme darke, uncouth and to have such sad circumstances in it, as for the present, thou seest not how to winde out of: But, remember thou receivest the Sacrament no ofter, than the Lord Iesus offers himselfe to thee in the heaviest, bittrest, and most unspeakable crosse, that ever was borne: What gall was not mingled with his drinke? Wherein was he afflicted save in that which was most precious, even the love of his Father? and for what, save for sin, that was more irkesome to him than death? If the Lord then crosse thee so, not in some petty slip of a finger, but in a tedious sort, even in what is most precious; consider the Lord hath done it: that he might make thee partaker of his holinesse, Heb. 12. conformed to him in his meeke yeelding to his Fathers will, to the contempt of the world, nay of thy vile and proud heart; to selfe-deniall in all things, to mortification of thy ranke lusts: yea he doth it, that thou mightest put thy mouth in the dust, and be low, when hee will have thee so: that rottennesse might enter into thy bones, and thou mightest have peace in the day of trouble. Lam. 3. 35. Mat. 26. 46. 48.

Be then under it as he was, whose cup thou dost drinke of; and shew what strength thy oft drinking of it, hath put into thee: Be sensible of Gods stroke in a moderation, neither too much, nor too little, Labour to suffer the will of God: let it cleanse thy soule and purge that scurfe which it was sent for; and trust God, and pray that he would deliver thee from that thou feareſt; waite for the good of it, the whilest; and for release of it in due time, not consulting with flesh, how, or how farre or when, but trusting him with it, who hath infinite wayes above thy reach to effect it. If the Martyres could endure their bodies to be burnt to ashes, gladly upon this ground; how much more thou, who never endured the fiery triall, nor yet the anger of God in thy smaller trouble? If hee have removed that, by his agony, bloudy sweat, and desertion: what else save sweet conformity to thy head, remaines for thee? Let it then be instruction to thee, to draw more and more strength from the Sacrament to enable and sustaine thee in thy bearing of it! Alas! we come for the staffe of bread, and the wine of rejoycing, to fit us to obey: but not for the helping us to eate the bread of affliction, and to beare the cup of indignation aright, as Micah 7. 9. Oh! what a stranger it is. Heb. 5. 7. Mica. 7. 9.

CHAP.

Chap. VIII.

Touching the Sacramentall Acts of the people: and ſo the third Generall of the Deſcription, viz. The End of the Supper.

NOw my promiſe made at the end of the ſixt Chapter requires that I come to the Sacramentall acts of the people: The which I will handle as the uſe of Exhortation, from the doctrine of the former Chapter falling fitly into the ſtreame thereof.

Fiftly, then is Chriſt Sacramentall our nouriſhment? Then let all his people obey his charge: firſt to take this body and bloud of his to them: ſecondly, to eate and drinke them. Touching the former, I meane this, receive and beleeve that this fleſh and bloud of his is given to thee, for thy particular nouriſhment. All the former uſes preſuppoſe this: obey in this, and all the reſt ſhall follow duly.

1 Take. For the better conceiving of this Act of taking: note, that it ſtands in relation to a gift offered in the Sacrament. And the gift is Chriſt and his benefits. Now to take them, is to doe theſe two things. Firſt to concurre with the giver in the offer of this nouriſhment. Secondly, to apply and make it our gaine for the purpoſe which it ſerves for. The former of theſe hath two branches, according to the nature of the offer made in the Sacrament: the former is concurrence of conſent, the latter of obedience: in both ſtands faith. That this may be conceived, marke, that the Lord offers this gift, either by promiſe: or by charge: The former is the ground of the latter; and therefore the ſoule concurres with him in both duely: conſents to his promiſe without cavilling: obeyes his charge without rebelling, takes by both. Touching the former, firſt, let it appeare how God offers and promiſes Chriſt Sacramentall: and then it will eaſily appeare how freely faith conſents. The promiſe is conceived thus, This is my body, this is given for you: this is the new Teſtament, and the Cup of it, in my bloud, ſhed for you: In this conceive theſe ſixe eſpecials (which in a ſhort view to ſee, will both revive and profit the Reader) briefely. 1. The excellencie of the gift. 2. The fulneſſe. 3. The aptneſſe. 4. The propriety. 5. The graciouſneſſe. 6. The manner of exhibiting: and theſe will ſhew how faith conſents. Firſt, the Lord ſaith, This is my body and bloud; that is: my nouriſhment, meate indeede, drinke indeede, not earthly, fading, mortall, but heavenly, eternall; he which eates it

1 The excellency of the offer.

ſhall

ſhall hunger no more, hē who drinketh it, ſhall thirſt no more: its the Lord Ieſus from heaven, heavenly. What ſaith faith? I conſent Lord, the reaſon is ſtrong, I take thee. Secondly, the fulneſſe. This my foode is no ſcant and halfe-diet: its my fleſh and my bloud, that is, my ſelfe in my Satisfaction and Efficacie, and my whole ſelfe, no part excepted, the whole Diamond unbroken: and with my ſelfe, all that I can afford, all my graces, to nouriſh the whole ſoule in each part, for each defect, for full encreaſe: not a particular gift to the minde, as knowledge, or to the heart, as patience; but all Chriſt and all his grace for the perfecting of the whole man in his meaſure. What ſaith faith? She conſents; its royall, O Lord, I yeeld and take it. 2 The fulneſſe of it.

Thirdly the aptneſſe. The Lord offers thee not meate and drinke which thou art uncapable of: as if whole loaves or flagons ſhould be offered thee, too heavie and groſſe for thy receiving; but its apt, prepared for thee, meate laide unto thee in morſells, in a cup, a meete draught for thee, a body given and broken: A cup of the new Teſtament in my bloud. What ſaith faith? I conſent Lord, I doe take it as prepared for me. Fourthly, proprietie. The Lord addeth, Its given for you: ſhed for you; for you in perſon; and for your wants and uſes in eſpeciall: So broken and ſhed, as if no other, but you were regarded in it: yea, though given for the ſinnes of the world, yet, ſpecially for you, and your nouriſhment. What ſaith faith? She conſents, Lord I leave not my portion for another to take, I take my owne my ſelfe. Fiftly, graciouſly. Lord its a nouriſhment given, Offered to you; what is freer than gift? Its not urged, extorted by force on your part (although if yee went from ſea to ſea, to get it, it were cheape on the price) but freely, and of mine owne accord, given, when it could not be expected; with a moſt plaine, betweeming heart, meaning as I ſpeake, not to deceive, nor defraud. What doth faith? Lord farre be it from me to warpe from thy meaning, I enquire no further, I conſent and take it. Laſtly the manner of exhibiting it. I offer it thee under ſignes of bread and wine; the ſtaffe of life, and cheere of the ſpirits: It is no other nouriſhment, than I offered thee in my Promiſe: That offered me as thy pardon, peace, and ſtrength; ſo doth my Supper: The manner of exhibiting is diverſe, but my offer is one, and the nouriſhment is the ſame; onely here I offer it in a more familiar and apt manner, to releeve thy infidelity; let not that which I offer thee for the better, in the more effectuall manner prove for the worſer, and 3 The aptneſſe of it. 4 The propriety of it. 5 The graciouſneſſe of it. 6 The manner of exhibition.

and be weaker in efficacy. What ſaith faith? She anſwers, Thy way is beſt, I conſent, I take it in the way thou offereſt it. Thus wee ſee how faith concurres with the promiſe, and conſents to it.

The 2. act. Obedience of faith.

Vpon the Promiſe depends the charge. For marke the Lord adds, Take it therefore, eate and drinke it. Why? becauſe its ſo qualified for thee, and ſo neceſſary, that thou canſt not take it, but thou ſhalt proſper and be happy; thou canſt not refuſe it, but thou muſt needs pine and periſh; Therefore I who by promiſe have thus drawne thee, doe alſo by my Authority command thee. I know many things (as excellent and weighty as they are) yet are not eſteemed, becauſe they are unknowne: Therefore I who know them better than thou, doe require and charge thee upon thy Allegiance, Take, eate and drinke this my body and bloud, that thou mayeſt proſper and fare well. What doth faith? She obeyes the command, and ſaith, I doe ſo Lord, I take them as thou commandeſt, I concurre with thy command as with the promiſe. Thus wee ſee the firſt worke of faith, to concurre with the offer of Chriſt her nouriſhment. Thus much for that.

The Vſes. 1.

The uſe of it (ere we come to the ſecond) is threefold, firſt, of diſtinction or difference betweene a true Taker of the Sacrament, and a falſe, a beleeving one, and an unbeleeving; Its worth our noting, becauſe every foole will be prating and ſay, he hath taken the Sacrament to day; Oh its high holiday with him! His garments are all white. But oh foole? what taking is thine? Onely of the Elements! onely the worke wrought! If this will commend thee to God for a true taker, its well, elſe all is loſt. But oh wretch! Thou art a taker indeed; but a theefe, thou takeſt that which is none of thine, by ſacriledge. Thou takeſt not by concurrence with a promiſe; Thou neither conſenteſt to that, nor obeyeſt the charge: thou runneſt not with God, but out-runneſt him, preventeſt him, and ſnatcheſt his nouriſhment from him as a dogge, which he hath given onely to children. And this I will proove. Thou haſt neither a conſenting eye of faith to ſee what the Lord gives thee: nor yet a conſenting heart to be affected with it: nor yet a conſenting hand to receive it: more than ſenſe convinceth thee of; thou takeſt not, becauſe thou conſenteſt to no promiſe; Thou haſt a traytors heart within thee. None of all theſe ſixe cords of this Sacramentall promiſe will draw thee: no, though the cord were made of many more links, thou wouldeſt ſtill be the ſame, an unwilling, unbeleeving ving wretch, and ſtill warpe, withdraw from God, and diſſent from his offer. Thou haſt no power to cleave, to conſent and obey.

I may ſay of thy unbeleefe, as of Sauls hypocriſie, 1 Sam. 15. Though Samuel did ſundry waies convince him, and ferret him out of his hole, yet ſo tainted an hypocrite hee was that hee would not be convinced: He was at laſt as at firſt: he ſaid, Honour mee yet before the people: and ſo went away an hypocrite. Such is unbeleefe: its like the Ethiopians colour, or the Leopards ſpots: if theſe may be changed, then may unbeleefe, not elſe. Oh! the endleſſe and bootleſſe urging of promiſes upon unbeleefe! behold her face in a glaſſe and abhorre her, and ſay, Into her counſell let not my ſoule come! And as I ſay of her treachery, ſo I ſay of her Rebellion: She will be awed with no charge, no more than won by a promiſe. Alas! ſhe thinkes as Eve thought being deluded by Satan: That God forbad her the tree of good and evill, for hatred and of evill will: all that ever God had inricht her with, could not ſway her rebellious heart, to conceive a good thought of him, ſtill hee did it to croſſe her. So doth unbeleefe deale with Gods charges: when he telles us, Hee commandes for our good, and not his owne: that it might goe well with us: we anſwer, No, I cannot thinke ſo, its harſh to my eaſe, and ſloth, to yeeld: True, but if it were poſſible that thy rebells heart could ſtoope, it would after ſeeme pleaſant, and thou wouldeſt not for the world but have obeyed. This by the way may ſerve to point out the contrary natures of faith and unbeleefe.

Gen. 3. 5.

Secondly, its uſe of admonition to all that would take the Lord Jeſus Sacrament all aright: To reſiſt carnall reaſon, which reſiſts faith, and holds the ſoule under the bondage of ſenſe and fleſh. Many when they come to the Sacrament in the ſight of the promiſe, wonder that any man ſhould not take Chriſt and his nouriſhment; who yet when they be baffled with carnall reaſon are ſo farre off the hookes, that they wonder any ſhould beleeve it! Beware of this lewde counſellor; if once hee and thou have talked, hee will corrupt the ſimplicitie of the promiſer, and the nakednes of faith: and fill thee with ſo many crotchets, that (as they in John) thou wilt cry out, How can this thing be? Can he give us of his fleſh? What a riddle is this? This is an hard ſaying, who can beleeve it? Surely no man that hath not chaſed away carnall reaſon, and cloſed with the promiſe. I doe not bid thee put off ſound reaſon: for then I might bid thee (with a Papiſt) beleeve that bread is turned fleſh,

ſeſh, and wine blood: I bid thee not be mad, but be not miſtruſtfull. Be not faithleſſe; aſcribe not more to the Pilot than Paul, as that carnall Centurion did, becauſe he ſaw no other than likelines Act. 27, 23. of ſhipwrake. An Angell of God (ſaith Paul) ſtood by mee too night and ſecured me: I beleeve God therefore; I ſee as little hope as any of you, nay leſſe; but yet the promiſe of God, and his charge, that I feare not, prevailes more with me, than all outward reaſon! Oh! doe ſo in the Sacrament, in the Supper as I urged before in Baptiſme. Look at the word and charge, Except baptized of water and Spirit yee are damned; cannot enter; he that beleeves and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved. Looke at this; and ſay not, ſhall a man enter the ſecond time into his mothers wombe and be borne againe?
Iohn 3, 4. But honour the promiſe, as Noah, when he was in the Arke was ſaved by faith; and the waters which ſwallowed up the world, bare Heb. 11. 7. 1 Pet. 3. 20. up the Arke and ſaved him; God hath ſayd it and he beleeved. So Chriſt hath ſaid it, This is my body; This is my blood. Why? (ſaith carnall reaſon) I ſee no more here than at home, what conſequence is this: here is bread and wine, therefore Chriſt nouriſhment? I eate and drinke, and take the one; therefore I may take the other? What ſenſe is here? None at all: It muſt be faith and Religion, not ſence muſt rule here, not (as Popery ſaith) againſt common ſence and true reaſon to produce a thing impoſſible) but to confute unbeleefe againſt falſe and carnall reaſon.

Oh! either cut the throate of it, or it will cut thine! Lift up the Arke of thy faith above the rockes and cragges of reaſon, or elſe it will ſplit: Begge the Spirit of the promiſe and of the command, to ſet thee upon the rocke that is above reaſon, Chriſt and the Sacrament, or elſe reaſon will deſtroy both! There are more with thee
2 King. 6, 17. (as Eliſha told his man) than againſt thee, if the promiſe and command of Chriſt be for thee! Its an evidence from God, and ſubſiſts in his faithfulneſſe, power, and mercy, grounded upon the death
2 Cor. 6. 1. of the Lord Ieſus; Receive not this grace in vaine, as if thy eares were ſtopped, eyes blinded, hands held and chained by thy fleſhly ſence! Rather let this promiſe of Chriſt looſen this chaine. Salomon ſaith, A gift in the hand, proſpers whether ſo ever it goes; Oh! here is a gift in the hand, Take and eate, This is my body given for you, and now given to you: let this proſper againſt all the mutters of carnall reaſon: and ſay, Oh! be there never ſuch unlikelihood (as Caleb ſaid of the Anakims) yet they ſhall be but meate for us:
Num. 14, 7, 8. If the Lord love us hee will give it us! So ſay thou! If God have ſpoken, ſpoken, ſtand-by ſenſe, and be ſtill: I know thou wilt be ready to put thy ſelfe forth in and againſt each promiſe, but I will have no care to heare thee, if God ſpeake. The charge of God hath power to enable thee, as well as to command thee; it gives what it commands; as when the Lord Ieſus bade the Palſie man riſe, hee put life and motion into his limbes and joynts, and left not the work to the criple; So I ſay, reſiſt ſence and corruption by a promiſe and a charge of Chriſt and it ſhall ſtoope unto them. The Lord hath put an infinite power into one againſt the other.

Vſe 3. And thirdly, be exhorted to cleave nakedly to the word of the promiſer, conſent and obey, Eſay 1. The words are both uſed to ſignifie faith, for a matter not unlike: and (ſaith he) ye ſhall eate the good things of the Land. So ſay I here, come with an open hand, and a ſimple heart, and a naked faith; and thou ſhalt eate this meate and drinke this drinke indeede never to decay. True apprehention of the promiſe firſt, will cauſe it. Say then thus, Lord thou ſaydſt, ſeeke my face in the Supper, thou ſaydſt, come, take, eate: What meaneſt thou but this, that I ſhould concurre with thee, and be of like minde, conſenting to thee, that thou dealeſt plainely, and ſpeakeſt as thou meaneſt, without hooke or crooke! Oh Lord what ſhould let me! I am convinced that if thou hadſt not meant well, thy ſelfe and Chriſt might have ſpared infinite labour: Therefore I conſent: Thou ſayeſt, take as freely as I offer, be to me as I am to thee; play not the traytor; Be enlarged to me, for I am enlarged. Oh Lord, ſo I am! I beleeve, I dare not diſtruſt, and deſcant, and play the ſlave with thee, but ſee cauſe, why thy word ſhould be eſteemed as pure, true, faithfull as thy ſelfe is: I am the cauſe of my owne ſorrow; could I be to thee, as thou art to my ſoule, my people, as thy people, my thoughts, affections as thine; Oh how happy! I will ſtrive for it.

Eſay 1, 19. 2 Cor. 6. 11. 12.

So, for obedience, ſay as Peter, At thy command I will let down, I will take thy Sacrament. Alas! what villany were it to thinke, thou ſhouldſt ſeeke thy good in it, and not mine! ſhould not I creep and crouch for it, rather than urge thee to command meek Nay, ſhould not I feare that if I diſobey thee in thy charge, thou wilt threaten me with condemnation for not diſcerning thy meaning! Oh! I obey with all gladneſſe! Give power to doe, as thou bidſt, and I will doe what thou wilt! And to end this point, deny thy ſelfe, and come in the ſence of thy utter periſhing to the Lord for this grace of the Supper. Come to the Lord with that ſpeech which the Iſraelites were bid to come to the Feaſt of the Lord, Deut. 26.5. A periſhing Syrian was my Father: So come with a ſoule in love with his dainties, and like to ſtarve for want of them. The drowning man hath the moſt taking hand of all, the moſt catching faſtening hand of all: two or three of his fingers will take more hold than an whole hand of one that is well enough: be it never ſuch a paulſe, -hand, trembling and ſhaking, yet if a taking hand, it is the hand which Chriſt calls to his body and bloud.

a Branch. Application of faith.

The latter worke of faith, is the application of the grace offered unto thy ſoule, for the gaine thereof. When thou haſt beleeved the promiſe once, doe as hee who hath bought and paide for his bargaine: incorporate thy ſelfe into the benefit of it, and apply it to thy ſelfe: Take the Lord Ieſus thy nouriſhment ſo, as hee may in truth really nouriſh and doe thee good in all thy whole ſoule in all the powers of it, in thy whole body and all the members, and in all thy whole courſe of each part and ſervice thereof. See it be well with thee in all, that thou proſper in all, and bleſſe God for faith, when thou feeleſt her carrying from this body and bloud of Chriſt, into ever faculty and member of thee. Faith in relation to Chriſt, in the Supper, may bee compared to the nouriſhing ſoule and her naturall faculties in man, and that in foure particulars.

Laide out by a ſimilitude in 4. Branches.

1. By the ſtomacke.

1 Faith Sacramentall reſembles the ſtomacke in the body. The ſtomacke we know ſo takes the nouriſhment, as that it unites it to it ſelfe and alters it in the properties, that it may become her own, and beginne to loſe it owne forme, that it may put on a new. Till the ſtomacke have thus held, cloſed and digeſted the meane, lo, it may be voided up againe. This is the firſt worke. Faith takes the Lord Ieſus and cloſes with him, puts him into the ſtomacke of the ſoule, digeſts him there, unites him to it ſelfe, ſuffers him not to depart away from her as he came, but holds him, makes him hers, and alters him in ſome degree for her owne nouriſhment. When the hand takes bread, fleſh, drinke to put it in the mouth, lo its true meate in it ſelfe, but not the bodies as yet: but if the ſtomacke have once laid it in cloſe, lo, it ceaſes to be bread and fleſh, and begins to bee the ſtomackes, and to undergoe a due change that it may afterwards be the bodies food. The Ivie doth not ſo cloſe with the tree, or the Miſle to the Appletree, for her owne end, altering the juyce for her owne uſe, as faith Sacramentall, alters Chriſts body, bloud, makes it another, turnes it into matter prepared for her ſelfe, ſelfe. Faith truely ſaith, by vertue of the ordinance and ſpirit of the ſame, loe, This body is mine, my meate, I lay clayme to it: this bloud is mine: All the grace of the Sacrament is mine. I dare not leave it behinde mee, for its given for mee, as meate for the body. And as the ſtomacke cloſes with meate as her owne, ſo doth faith with the Lord Ieſus, for why? By as due right this nouriſhment is hers.

Secondly, faith is like the naturall appetite in the body: wee know ſuch is the nature of that facultie in the healthy and ſtirring, that there is alway a paſſage from the ſtomacke to the veynes; and ſo the appetite is cleare, the ſtomacke kept cleane and fit for continuall attraction of new nouriſhment. So is faith in the ſoule, it holds the ſoule in ſuch perpetuall holy motion: and paſſages of old nouriſhment; that it is alway healthy, and empty and open to receive in new. Perpetuall expence of nouriſhment, prepares her apetite to new refreſhing. The ſoule that is deſirous of meat by ſtarts and fits, is clogged, and makes not away with the former: but when the uſe of nature hath conveied one meale away, and ſpent the ſtrength of one; lo the veines grow very attractive and pinch the ſtomacke to covet more, and to be in perpetuall appetite. Faith is the ſtirring work-man or houſe-wife in the ſoule, never ſurfited with humours, or clogged ſo with diſtempers; but that ſhe retaines ſome ſweete appetite after new refreſhing. Otherwiſe Chriſt yeſterday, to day, and the ſame for ever, would grow fulſome and weariſome with her; but by this meanes the appetite is in continuall health, and temper; ever ſending forth ſupply for new duties, occaſions of the heat and life, and therefore ever capable of new nouriſhment with delight. Hence it is, that though the meat bee not much, which ſhe takes yet ſhe thrives merveilouſly: and a little in an haile ſtomacke goes a great way? how much more then when hunger makes her feed fully? 2 By Naturall Appetite.

Thirdly, faith is like the great carrying veine in the body, from the liver the fountaine of bloud and nouriſhment, & to the ſmall veines in the extremities of the members. For as the one derives the bloud into each part by a property of nature ſacretly diſtributing the Maſſe into ſeverall parts, according to their variety of ſubſtance and need: ſo is it with faith, ſhe comes to the maſſe and full heape of bloud and nouriſhment, ſhe finds an hoorde of fulneſſe in Chriſt; and there faſtens her pipes and veines of conveyance, and thence ſhee carries to the uſes of the ſoule whether for bleſſings, a ſober 3 By the carrying veine.

thankefull heart: or for crosses, an humble, meeke beleeving, and confident upon the promise of Christs protection: here shee laies in grace to rule her selfe well in marriage, then in family, in hearing, in prayer: here she catches at grace to resolve her doubts, to bane her corruptions, to better her conscience, to comfort her in forgivenesse: none comes amisse; as the neede and measure of each part requires, so shee drawes and derives from Christ, her wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification and redemption. And looke how the distribution of nature, doth by secret instinct derive meete juyce for each part, not that to one which is the others due: but the tenderest to the most fleshly, and the viscous or course to the stiffer, as muscles and joynts: so is it here, the derivation of faith is wiser than of nature.

And the veines of last concoction.

Secondly, having so done, the lesser veines neerest to each member to be nourished, by the heate and concoction of it, doth turne this proper nourishment into the substance of the nourished, that both may be one; and this is the eminent worke of faith also, that turnes the Lord Iesus, into the being of the soule spiritually: it doth not onely carry meet juyce to the part, leaving it there unapplied; but makes the meat and the member one. The Lord Iesus by faith dwells in the soule, inhabits it, is one with it, bone of her bone, and flesh of her flesh: and by his owne strength prayes, heares, meditates in her: by his owne strength, patience, love, humilitie, puts an influence into her for the like; so that of his fulnes the soule hath grace for grace: yea Esay 26. he doth all her works for her, and in her: he is afflicted and suffers with her, rejoyces in her, and she saith, Now live I, yet not I, but Christ in me.

4 By the Naturall soule.

Lastly, faith is like the naturall soule her selfe in her operation: for as we see men well fed, are fit for worke; so is it here. Faith exercises the grace of the soule, received from Christ Sacramentall, in the severall passages of life, concerning each mans calling. Look how it is with ten men that have beene well fed at one feast, although they have ten severall workes to doe, yet they goe cheerefully about them; the Plowman to toile, the Merchant to project, the Scholler to his study, the traveller to his journey; the workes are severall, but the same feast affords strength and cheere of body and spirit, to each of them, for the managing of his taske; even so in the strength of this cake and water, this Lord Iesus his body and bloud, the refreshed soule goes about every lawfull service which the Lord calls her too: one hinders not another; But there is enough in Christ to fulfill all, and to fit each for his taske. So that, if hee be put on well as the apparrell; lo, in the warmth and comfort of it, the soule is ready to goe from duty to duty, from her rising, to her lying downe; who of her selfe was good for nothing. And thus she boasteth, boasts of the Lord; and sees that as her selfe cut off from him, is as the branch that withers, so all her sufficiency is from God; and as the sea sends forth all waters, and receives them, so doth the Lord receive from faith the honour of his all-sufficiency. These few things may serve for a draught of this truth, how faith Sacramentall applies Christ to be her nourishment, having taken him in the Promise. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Now I conclude with briefe use; partly of admonition; and partly of exhortation to all Gods people. First be warned against the lets of this Application. Beware least thy vaine heart be seduced by Satan to forsake the Lord in the plaine way of his Ordinance, as if because it is seely so fleshly shew, therefore thou stumbling at it, shouldest bee carried from that which should doe thee most good, to do thee most hurt. Helpe thy hand of faith, by the hand of sence, assure the one by the other, but hurt it not. Resolve to get the Lord by his owne way. Misse not the gripe and hold of a promise, for a shadow of thy owne conceit. Let not wandrings of thy minde, suspitions and jelousies against God and thy selfe, the guilt of old receivings, the examples of the common sort of Communicants, who make a custome of going as they come; the temptations by thy owne unworthinesse, emptinesse, and baseneſse, carry thee from the steddy beleeving of the promise. Tie not God to thy girdle; rather fasten thy Boat to his Barge, to be carried by the motion of it: Nourish not an evill eye against others, that they grow by their receivings, and prosper, but not thou. Turne envy into faith, and the fulnesse of him who hath blessed him, can also satisfie thee. Let not an evill heart of unbeleefe possesse thee, to thinke, the Sacrament will prove no better to thee, than it hath beene: rather thinke, its the way whereby God hath appointed to breake through the pikes: therefore the Lord will not suffer thee to live so barren as formerly. The Uses. I. Admonition in many Caveats.

Thinke not basely of Christ, as if hee oversaw all thy sorrowes, wants, lets, doubts, annoyances, corruptions, temptations: as if he cared not that thou still welter in them, and get not out. Although they have continued long, yet know, a thousand yeares with him, are as one day: he hath a day of salvation: an accepted time, and 4. 2 Pet. 3. 8.

will one day picke out ſpeciall Sacraments, and by them ſpeciall graces, for ſpeciall needs: cure thee of all the deadneſſe, world, hollownes, pride and ſelfe which is in thee, if thou mourne under thy burden: ſay, Corruption ſhall drowne, and Grace ſhall outlive it, and I ſhall yet ſee better dayes, and beſt at laſt: though I feele little, ſeeing God hath ſaid it, I beleeve it. 5. Doe not appoint God his meaſure, nor his time: but waite and trie thy patience: perhaps God lookes for it: Light is ſowne for the righteous, let them waite till it come up. Such health, growth, ſtaiednesſe, and meaſures as God hath allotted thee, ſhall be thine: that Demenſum which thy wiſe ſteward ſees beſt, is better for thee than a greater. Thou haſt no promiſe of ſuch a meaſure but of grace ſufficient. If thou haſt any dramme of it, know its pretious; thou art not worth the ground thou goeſt upon, the breath thou draweſt; and wilt thou carve for thy ſelfe in the degrees of grace?

Vſe 2. Exhortation. Secondly, and laſtly, come and bring thy faith to Chriſt thy nouriſhment, and cloſe with him for it. And remember, for as much as the Lord hath onely appointed this grace of faith to be that ſpiritually to thy ſoule, which the mouth, ſtomacke and veines are bodily to corporall nouriſhment: Therefore reſt not in any other inſtrument of application whatſoever, either in thy bodily, and carnall touch; or in the carnall conceit of thy minde; thinking thou commeſt with a devout minde, or with that faith in the Sacrament, which the Church do come with, infolded in a myſticall darkeneſſe of devotion; for what ſoever is brought hither inſtead of faith, ſhall be thy bane one day, and is abominable to God. Let it be thy appetite, thy ſtomacke, thy veines, thy ſoule, to draw, to vnite, to diſtribute, to aſſimilate, and to convey Chriſt into all parts of thy life. Lin not till his ſubſtance be thine. If thou hadſt a ſundry friend to furniſh thee with ſundry boones, thy want would ſend thee to them all: To the Lawyer for direction in thy ſuites and troubles; to the Phyſition for thy diſeaſes; to the rich to borrow monies; and perhaps for neceſſitie, to a Divine; in trouble of minde: Count the Lord Ieſus all. If a poore man be asked why he makes ſuch a trade of it, to frequent ſuch an houſe: Hee will ſay, Its a full houſe, its not deare, to trouble it often. To bee ſure, heere, to this ſtore and wel-ſping; the oftner thou come (to the Supper I meane) the welcomer. If his fulneſſe cannot make thee emptie, know all thy emptineſſe cannot robbe him of fulnes. Beleeve that thy neede can not amount higher than his fulneſſe: and ſo long thy pipes are ſure to be filled. But come in faith, and bring a free heart, and an emptie bucket, and be to him, as he is to thee: Come to him to clothe nakednesse, to pay debts, to rid thee of chaines; and let there bee no fulnesse in him, whereof thou feelest not neede, and then as the Sacrament is appointed to thee for speciall growth in godlinesse, so shall the Lord Iesus become unto thee; and thou shalt not bee the first servant that shall bring in a false report of Christ, for an hard master to thee, as hypocrites doe. And this bee said of this maine point, chiefely aimed at in the first part of this Treatise, to shew the use of Christ our nourishment.

One poinst still remaines: Namely, the second act of the people, to eate and drinke Christ. Which I distinguish from the other for just cause. When these two acts are divided in the Text, I expound them for one thing, Take, that is, beleeve; and eate, that is, beleeve; but when I finde them joyned, especially in so solemne a text as the Institution of the Supper is, I avoid repetition, and doe conceive two things to bee meant, by Taking (as I have said) Beleeving. By Eating, enjoying the benefit, or delighting the soule in the fruit thereof, according to those Texts: Of the fruit of thy labour thou shalt eate, Psal. 128. 2. Esay 1. 19. Thou shalt eate the good things of the Land. In which places, Eating is not taken, as in Iohn, Except yee eate the flesh of the Sonne of man, yee have no life in you (where eating is taken for beleeving) but as here, for enjoying. So then the eating of Christ Sacramentall, is, That spirituall enjoying of the Lord Iesus, and all his good things which we have received; to beare our selves as well apaid ones at his feast, and such as are filled and satisfied with himselfe, desire no better condition, count our portion to be fallen into a good ground: and so reflecting upon our soules what we have found at his Table, rejoyce therein as in spoyles, and behave our selves as those who have been keeping holiday in his house, and feasting in the Mount (not of Sinai or Horeb, as Moses did) but the Gospel, Esay 25. 8. and therefore wee having that we came for, bee as wee would bee; and possesse our soules with exceeding complacencie and contentment, and enlarge them to the Lord with joy and thankes, rejoycing in him, as Marie saith, our Saviour, and God all-sufficient.

Ioh. 6. 51, 53.
Esay 25. 8.

For why? Is there not good cause, or neede we bee ashamed, or plucke in our heads as if confounded? No, the feast we have beene at, and the dishes thereof are things of perfect sweetnesse and contentment; and that in respect of these foure perfections: first, Safeneſſe, ſecondly, Pureneſſe, thirdly, Fulneſſe, and fourthly, Durableneſſe. In all theſe, the dainties of Chriſt exceede all other, and hee in them all other objects. The world hath her delights and feaſtings, both wicked and indifferent liberties; but neither ſafe, both dangerous. Theeves delight to ſteale money, and ſtolen waters are pleaſant: True is the taſte, but as the Prophets Booke, Bitter in the belly. Knoweſt thou not that there will be bitterneſſe in the latter end? 2 Sam. 2. 26. When priſon, feares, gibbet come, then all the honey is turned into the gall of Aſpes, as Iob 20.14. Wickedneſſe is dangerous in the iſſue: witneſſe Gehazi's booty, Achans Garment and gold, the Fooles eaſe in his plentie; the Harlots taking her fill in pleaſure, in her husbands abſence; but her ſteps are not as her lippes: theſe drop hony, but they goe downe (with her gueſts) to hell. Nay even of the indifferenteſt liberties I may ſay, there is no ſafety in them; for there is a ſurfet in them, either to body or ſoule: Wine is a mocker, and ſtrong drink is a deceiver; there is a hooke and a ſnare underneath; in the iſſue, they bite as a Serpent. Too much honey is not ſafe; it ſurfeits, and kills: even as feaſts of great plentie breede diſeaſes, and make worke for the Phyſitian. The unſafeneſſe of the beſt thing, makes it imperfectly contenting; but the feaſt of Gods corne, and oyle, and milke, (as it coſts nothing) Eſay 55. 1. So a man may feede on them without feare; as in verſe 2. Eate good things and ſpare not: curbe not, nor put a knife to thy appetite, the more the better; no ſurfeit is in them. Let thy ſoule delight and ſatiate thy ſelfe in the fatneſſe, there is no hurt in it. Not ſafe onely in reſpect of Gods leave and warrant: as Salomon ſaith, Drinke of thine owne wells, thou art truly intitled to them in him in whom all things are thine by: but thou ſhalt never heare of them after, for any danger they can do thee. Reade Epheſ. 5. 18. In all other things is exceſſe.

Epheſ. 5. 18.

Secondly, theſe Dainties Sacramentall are pure and meere, uncompounded, and without the mixture of carnall delights: Sweete is that of Salomon, The Lord gives the righteous a portion, and no ſorrow with it. Hee meanes, there is no checke of an ill conſcience in it; as commonly in worldly contents there is, either by the perſon, or by the things; either the uſer is none of Gods, or the things are ill come by and impurely uſed. But here is neither impureneſſe of perſon or of things; each are pure to other, Tit. 1. 15. whereas the conſcience of the impure is defiled. Hence it is, that this mixture marres the feaſt. As we ſee in Belſhazzers jollitie, lity, there wanted no mirth, but the Lord caused such an horror to fall upon it, by that hand writing, that all the joy vanish'd. As he in the Fable, who all the while he was feasting had a naked sword (hanging by a bristle) with the point downewards, hanging over him. As once one said (when he had shewed a friend all his Treasures.) But what if a man should goe to hell with all these? When Haman had related all his contents to Zeresh and his friends, hee addes, Yet all these doe me no good, when I see Mordecai sitting in the Kings gate. The sweet meate of the wicked hath sowre sawce; but these dainties are pure, meate and sawce are good, in themselves they are holy, so to them pure. Esther 5.13.

2 Their pureneſſe.

Tit. 1. 15.

Dan. 5. 4. 5.

The third perfection is their fulnesse. In all other contents there is a scantnesse, in respect of the number, that men have not enough of them: if men of poore become rich, then they want pleasures; if both, then they want honour to make their contentfull. So they strive still for an earthly Paradise, which is lost; and when they have all, yet their soule hath not enough: But these dainties have a fulnesse and comprehension in them able to satisfie the spirit; there is an equalnesse in them thereto, both are eternall. The heart hath enough, as Iacob said when hee saw the Chariots; and although it longs after more for measure, yet it findes rest and quiet, even in the kinde of the things which are perfect in their nature. When men take money in a market, or for their rents, still they like that they love, but yet they want, and there is an hole unstopt: the barren heart cries as the grave, give, give: and why? save, because they have not enough: yea though they had enough (for a mediocrity is enough for a sober minde) yet because there is not a quality of content in them, their increase workes no full satisfaction. A man that hath spending money enough, wants a stocke; another hath mony to buy him one sute, but he wants for change: or hee hath enough to buy one of cloth, but not of velvet; or if hee have that which will suffice for apparrell, yet considering that children, diet, sutes of Law, and friends call for more expences; that hee hath, joyes him not so much as that he wants grieves him: So are all the fulnesses of the world, they have a scantnesse: not unlike to a coate made scant, which comes not over the wrists or knees or bosome, but leaves them bare. But this nourishment and fulnesse of Christ is as is described, in every kinde, and a full supply, as I noted before, and especially, out of Reve. 3.16. by an enumeration of all things for use and price. 3 The compleatnesse. Gen. 45.25. Pro. 30.16. Revel. 3.16.

The fourth and last is durablenesse, and continuance. When folkes 4 Durablenes goe to Pageants, and interludes, oh! how they are tickled? How they could ſpend dayes in them? But when all is done, they are all a-mort. As I have heard of ſome beſotted Epicures, who were not able to ſubſiſt, when their games and drinkings were over: and therefore ſo laid the matter, that the end of one ſhould begin the other: till at length with rotten bodies, and waſted conſciences, and emptie purſes, and tired ſpirits, they fell dead over their cups, and games. Alas, though this were a prodigious, yet not a perpetuall laſting; and yet ſuch a one as made themſelves laſt but a while. But lo, the things of this feaſt are durable meate, drinke, riches and honour. No wonder, they iſſue from a fountaine, Ier. 2. 13. not a broken pit: A Fountaine (we know) though it bee but a fingers deepe, yet outlaſts a lake that is up to the middle; the one payres with uſe, the other is fed with a Fountaine. Durableneſſe in kinde, and durableneſſe in ſucceſſion, is great perfection. If a man could buy cloth which would laſt all his life without wearing, and yet daily weare better and better, oh, what a market would he thinke hee had? When thoſe fading and blaſted crownes of Lawrell and Wormewood are withered; mens gaines, feaſts, brave cloathes, games and companies: then the garland of a Chriſtian made of Semper-vivum, not the hearbe, but the grace of the Sacrament, ſhall flouriſh and ſurvive upon the heads of the beleeving receivers; and when ſome of them blaſt at their death, yet they ceaſe not till another crowne of immortality ſucceede for ever and ever. Rejoyce in the Lord; but how long? Not as in froth, and the crackling of thornes; but alway, and againe (I ſay) rejoyce.

Ier. 2. 13.

Phil. 4. 4.

Vſe 1. Let this then be both to diſgrace the feaſt and mirth of fooles, and to advance this feaſt and theſe dainties of Chriſt in his promiſe and Sacrament. Firſt, I challenge all ſenſuall ones whoſe complacence is in their brave buildings, faſhions, and fethers, meetings, and pleaſures, tales and trickes, to fill up and paſſe the time away; come in, ſet theſe to the contents of the Lord Ieſus: and if ye can make equall in any of theſe foure kindes, wee will renounce our portion and cleave to yours; we will cry with you, Great is Diana of the worldlings. But if Chriſt exceedes yours in all foure, wonder not if woe come not unto you: but tremble you for your ſitting ſo long upon the devils deafe egges: throw egges and neaſt upon the dung-hill, and come in, and joyne with us, caſt your lot in with us, and let us have but one portion. We would not change with you although we might have this boot, to tell money all day, and have it when when we have done: although your lusts commonly strip you, even of the outward also. Rest not in a short ruffe, and running pull of joy, and to say, Would there were neither Preacher, nor Puritan in England. Alas! your time is short, and your sorrow will be endlesse: Let Husband and Wife looke backe and say each to other, What fruit have we had of all under the Sunne? Surely, neither safe, pure, full, nor lasting: therefore let us forsake it in time for a better, while there is season.

Vse 2. Exhort to enjoy it.

Secondly, let it exhort all Gods people to set their hearts to eate these good things (for all their fourefold excellency) to delight in fatnesse, and to enjoy the portion with sound complacencie and content which the world knowes not, nor shall ever enter into. Tell why doe men sow, purchase, build, labour? Is it not for the fruit? Vse all these in their kindes, but enjoy these, and in so doing, yee have the perfection which nothing else can, and these doe afford to the soule. But here yee will say is the difficulty. I answer, I will point briefely at two or three branches of direction and so conclude.

Directions for it, three. The first delight in God. Psal. 37.

The first is this, Delight in the Lord for this perfection of soule-content which he offers in his Christ. The perfection of love is joy: let him have perfect delight of thy heart, for his perfect nourishment. If David said well, Delight in the Lord, and hee shall give thee thy hearts desire: how much more then set thy heart upon him, when hee hath already done it, that hee may doe it more? Vse the Ordinances of Word, of Prayer, yea of this Sacramentall Christ our nourishment, as a stirrop to get up into this full, safe, pure, and durable object of delight in the Lord, his Christ, and Spirit, who (when all these poore helpes which serve to proppe up a Pilgrims travell, as so many baiting-places till he get home; shall faile:) yet shall be the eternall delight of the soule in glory. Begin this complacence and well apaiednesse of heart, here: and if it be hard, pray to God to give thee a judicious heart, to understand the weight and worth of the things, and to delight groundedly in those things which are best, and approved of God to deserve it. As if a Iueller assure thee of the value of a pearle, he neede say no more. And pray also that all thy affections may follow, love, joy, (feare to forgoe it) sorrow, (if weakened) and all the rest, as in a Gentlemans house, let the Master welcome a stranger, and all the servants will strive to doe the like.

Beseech him that his Spirit of comfort by faith, may not onely shew

1 Cor. 2. 12. shew thee the good things he hath given thee, 1 Cor. 2. 12. but shed a lively sweetnesse and joy in them into thee, so that as the Vine Iudg. 9. 11, 13 said, Thou wilt not forsake this thy fatnesse and sweetnesse for any thing. Beseech him to purge thy conscience from all creeping defilements of thy selfe, world, Satan, or crosses, which might dampe it: and so raise up thy soule by them, above all this earth, which might eclipse it: If it be an heaven upon earth, now and then to beleeve a promise, to savor a Truth, to receive a Sacrament, to bee in good company, to resist a lust, to revive a grace; what should hee bee who is all these, and whereby should the heart be sooner raised up to him, than by that which makes all this good cheere, the Sacrament of the body and bloud of the Lord Iesus? Oh! maintaine no melancholy distrust against this. But as Hanna, 1 Sam. 1. when she 1 Sam. 1. 18. had heard Eli, was quite another and wept no more, so bee thou. Peninna still was a chokepeare, (& so shall there never cease some thing or other to correct thy content,) but yet Peninna now was no more thought of. Remember if food and gladnesse alway goe together, (as Act. 14. 17.) how shalt thou hold up thy face before Act. 14. 17. the Lord of this feast, if thy sad heart poyson it?

2 Maintaine communion with him. Secondly, adde this; maintaine this Communion with God daily. As the influence of Christ in the Sacrament is a speciall peece of our communion with God: so, when we are gone, it should make us fond to hold it, that wee might be as it were drunke with the wine of his cellers, and the pleasures of his house. That so we may keepe a communion with him daily from Sabbath to Sabbath: and be alwaies breaking bread, and receiving, as those disciples at Ierusalem, who attended the comming of the holy Ghost. David was so ravisht with that he felt in the house of God, that he saith, had I but one thing of God, this it should be, That I might behold his face Psal. 27. in the beauty of his Temple and holinesse; and yet hee might never come into the Priests Sanctuary, much lesse the Holy of Holies, to see the merciseate and the Arke under it, covered with glorious Cherubims: which we may doe daily. This is to spend our whole Psal. 23. 6. life in Gods house, Psal. 23. ult. Not to be never out of it, (which old Anna her selfe could not) but to retaine that savor of immortality and hope of eternall life, which the communion of Saints in the Word, and Sacraments doth breede in the soule. Oh, the smell of these spices in the garden, which the North-winde of the Spirit, Cant. 4. 16. doth affoord to our nostrils, Cant. 4. 16. should so perfume us, as all other fellowship should stincke unto us: as no doubt Peter his nets did, did, and all the world when he was with Christ, and Moses and Elias upon the Mount, and would have built three Tabernacles, and said, It is good to be here. Matth. 17.4.

As those brutish ones longed, When will the Sabbaths be gone, and new Moones bee past? (meaning those feasts of continuance for weekes) so shouldst thou long for them. When will they come? And with David, Psal. 84. Oh, my heart fainteth, and my feete long for to goe to thy Temple! How rather are such in these dayes, in which though our cups and vessels of silver and gold, yet our receivers are wood and stone (for the most part) and such as savour not this bread of life, and foode of Angels. How should we bee afraid, lest this Idoll of forme eate up all, as those leane Kine in Gen. 41. 18. and lanke eares devoured the fat and full ones. Where is he who so comes to the Sacrament, as loth to leave it, and to goe into the ayre of the world againe? I commend not the excesse of these old Monkes, who forsooke the course of the world, for to live alway in holy services: But this I say, few such there are, who doe so much as hold any savour of this communion of Christ Sacramentall, a few dayes after: Oh! then, such as have found this hoord of grace in the supper, keepe it daily also, that it may attend ye fortie dayes, till the mount of God. Psal. 84. 2. Gen. 41. 18, 19, 20.

Therefore let our daily course hold this communion. But how, may some say? I will adde one or two words of direction. First, in the due exercise & quickning of the graces of the Spirit within us; both the life of faith (in all estates, blessings, and crosses: in all meanes ordinary, and extraordinary in their season as well as the Supper (all having their particular use) also in all duties of both Tables) and the fruits of this faith, I meane the graces of hope, love to the Saints (the partners with us in the communion, Psal. 16,2.) and patience, humility, courage, thankefulnesse, and the rest; of which I gave a touch before in the point of fruitfulnesse. Secondly, walking with God daily, as being under his eye, awfully, purely, and soberly, approving our selves to him in the way of our life: making his Word our delight in both the promises, commands, and threats of it; and so holding the Lord in our sight, as loth to forgoe him. Thirdly, Ascending in our thoughts from our owne welfare in private, and forcing our awcke hearts to the service of our time (as David, Acts 13.36.) as well as looking that it goe well with our selves, (of which selfe-love our spirit is full stuffed, except this grace scoure it out.) Remember we, that the gaine we Directions for it. 1. Psal. 16. 2. 2. Gen 5.22. 3. Acts 13.36.

get by Christ in his Assemblies, should presse upon us the bewai-Zeph 3.18. ling of the losse thereof, Zeph. 3.18. the beseeching God to establish the Lord Iesus, and to set up his King upon his Zion, in the power of his Ordinances, to demolinsh the Throne of Satan and Antichrist, that the Scepter of Christ may prevaile every where against Popery, Atheisme, Ignorance, Blinde devotion, profane-nesse, and forme of godlinesse. Lastly, in an heavenly heart, as Phil.
4. 3.20. knocking us off from below, moderating our liberties for us, Phil. 3.20. enlarging us to desire his glorious presence, to have communion with him as he is; concluding, that if these treaties with him at distance (as in the Supper) bee so sweete; then much more to eate and drinke it in his kingdome, Luke 22.16. Oh! if our treasure be Luke 22.16. there, let our hearts be so also, and send wee them before us, in token we looke to remove thither as our abiding place: Phil. 2.1,2.
Phil. 2.1,2. 2 Cor. 5.1. Thus doing, we shall use the Supper for the end which 2 Cor. 5.1. it was given for, to supply the absence of the Lord Iesus from us, Luke 22.16. Luke 22.16,17. till we may enjoy it.

The third, imparting our selves to others. Thirdly, let that good we have got out of the Sacrament, so plentifully abide in us, that we impart it to others. The nature of these graces is such: not to feede on them alone. When those Leapers, 2 King. 7.8,9. had filled themselves in the Aramites tents, with store
2 King. 7. 8.9. of all things, their hearts smote them, for staying there so long: and they resolved to hasten and tell the King and people of it, that were starven in the citie. So shouldest thou: The Sacrament, is called a communion in this respect as well as the former. Poore birds if they light upon scattered corne, call their fellowes to the heape.
Iudg. 14.9. When Sampson had found hony, though he kept the riddle, yet hee imparted his honey to his Father & Mother. The benefits of Christ are not of a secret and private, but a diffusive nature: Let us be ashamed to consider that other things in the world are so perfected by communion, that neither Trades, Arts, Customes and fashions, nor any other thing, have cause to complaine, but the matters of Christ are now at the barest and lowest: Why? save that those that should excell in them, conceale their skill and experience. The Communion day, should be our exceeding day, and as in feasts, so in this, wee should send (or carry) portions, and acquaint others (wisely and seasonably) with our lot, and receive from them like
The third generall. intelligence. And thus much for the second generall head, viz.
The grace of the Supper. I conclude with the last.

And that is the particular end of the Sacrament, viz. The sealing unto unto a beleeving ſoule, an aſſurance of that grace which it exhibiteth. I have ſpoke before of this ſealing power. I will adde but a little for the applying of the generall, to this particular. Deſiring the wiſe Reader, to looke backe, and make uſe of what I have ſpoken of this ſealing worke in generall, and to apply it here in ſpeciall to the ſealing of the growth, as already I have ſpoken in Baptiſme of the ſealing of our Birth, or Regeneration. The end of it.

And, that my Reader may retaine the ordinary view of the two ſealing workes, this briefely let me ſay, firſt, that the Spirit of grace is given by God, to attend each Ordinance, both the Word of Promiſe, and the Seale of Promiſe; and that to this end to worke perſwaſion of the ſoule, and to cauſe it to beleeve the things that are given her of God. Then ſecondly, note, The object of this perſwaſion by the Promiſe is double; and therefore the object of perſwaſion by the Seale is double: Firſt, perſwaſion of the ſoule that ſhee is truely the Lords, truely called, regenerated, and borne of God. That is to ſay, reconciled to him, and renewed in him. Secondly, perſwaſion that ſhe growes in the grace of the new birth, and ſhall grow as a lively member of her head, till ſhe receive the fulneſſe of that part. That God is the Author of both perſwaſions, appeares by the two maine heads of unbeleefe, which formerly I noted to reſide in the ſoule. Firſt, that ſhee dare not beleeve at all, that the Promiſe of mercy reacheth to her. Secondly, that ſhe dare not beleeve that ſhe ſhall ever reach to any further degree of ſanctification than ſhe preſently feeles. Both theſe the Lord in his double perſwaſion confutes. The third thing is, the Spirit therefore applies it ſelfe to both theſe; (yet not alway in one and the ſame meaſure of perſwading but) according to the neede or proportion of each part. By the Promiſe of the Word, ſometimes it works more, ſometimes leſſe perſwaſion, as ſeemes beſt to himſelf: & ſo, by the Seale of the Sacrament, he doth likewiſe, worke weaker, or ſtronger aſſurance: For though there be a perſwading power in an high degree in both, yet the Spirit is no ſervant to his Ordinances, but his Ordinances to him: they ſhall perſwade more or leſſe, according as that power of Chriſt which the Spirit diſpenſeth, is more or leſſe conveied into the ſoule, by his perſwaſion. He is never ſeparated from promiſe or Seale, according to the meaſure of his working by both. But that is as he liſteth; for he bloweth where and how farre hee pleaſeth. A needfull digreſſion to ſhew the order of the Spirits working. 1. 2. 3. 4.

Fourthly, note, the chiefe & maine perſwaſion of the Spirit in the Word, is the Spirit of the ſealing Promiſe, & the chiefe work of the Spirit of perſwaſion in the Sacrament, is the Spirit of the ſealing

Sacra-

Sacrament. And therefore as the Seale with the Promiſe, is above a promiſe alone; So the Spirit of the Seale with the Sacrament is above the Sacrament alone; and conſequently, the ſealing power of the Sacrament is above the Sealing power of a Promiſe: the Sacrament being (ordinarily) the inſtrument of working the ſoule to the higheſt aſſurance which it can enjoy in this world, whether of the truth of her regeneration which Baptiſme, or the growth therin, which the Supper ſealeth and perſwadeth. Sealing is the higheſt perſwaſion, and Sacramentall ſealing, the higheſt ſealing. We doe not limit God to his Sacraments, but (ordinarily) wee ſay, he limits himſelfe in this kind. Laſtly, I adde, the moſt apt way to get the perſwaſion of the Spirit in an higher meaſure, is to hold cloſe to the lower meaſure. As in the promiſe, the beſt way to get the perſwaſion of the Spirit of promiſe, is to cleave to the bare naked word, and truth of the Promiſer for himſelfe. So, the next way to compaſſe the beſt meaſure of ſealing perſwaſion in the Sacraments, is to come unto them with faith in the perſwaſion of a promiſe: for marke; the Spirit in multiplying perſwaſion, doth never loſe the former meaſures, but holds them ſtill as grounds unmoveable. He that can now ſwimme without bladders, yet retaines the skill he got firſt by them: and he that makes true Latin of his experience and art, yet forgets not his Rule, by which he firſt attained it: ſtill the power of the bladders abides in the man that ſwims alone; and ſtill the power of the rule is in him who of himſelf doth ſuddenly ſpeak true Latin: Even ſo the promiſe ſtill abides in the ſeale of the Sacrament, and the perſwaſion of the ſealing Spirit, although it be above a promiſe, yet it is not without it, but holds the relation cloſe. Even as the ſeale and delivery, and ſeaſin of a purchaſe, is above a Covenant, yet never without it, but alway relating to it, & adding a ſuperior ſtrength (which it had not before) of perſwaſion and aſſurance.

Vſe. Terror in two Branches.

Now I finiſh with the Vſes. Firſt, if the Sacrament of the Supper hath this end, to ſeale the aſſured growth of the ſoule in grace; let it be terrour for two ſorts. 1. Papiſts, who pervert the end of the Sacrament to baſe helliſh ends of their owne; of which before. Secondly, profane ones; who come in their ſinnes: who turne the Table of God into the table of devils; yea turne the Seale of the grace of Chriſt, into a Seale of Gods Curſe, into gall, poyſon, and the water of triall of the Adultereſſe. The Sacrament is not given thee to beget thy ſoule to God, but to nouriſh it being begotten. When then thou commeſt to the Supper, bearing the Lord in hand that thou art the Lords; Lo, thou calleſt for vengeance, if thou be an unregenerate one ſtill. Thou ſaiſt in effect, Lord, let this Bread and Wine be my bane if I belong not to thy Covenant. As ſhe that durſt drinke the water of jealouzie, knowing her ſelfe defiled, implied her craving the rotting of her wombe: So I ſay to all ſuch if they come not hither for the right end of God, they cannot chuſe but come for the wrong: either for the better, or for the worſe. A ſeale it muſt needes be, no man can hinder it, yea to a covenant: if not to the Lords, then to ſuch a covenant as they belong too; that is, a league with hell, Eſay 28. a league with their luſts, adultery, pride, &c. As if the Lord ſhould ſay, Be thou yet more filthy ſtill by rebuke of my Sacrament, more proud, more profane; Adde drunkenneſſe to thirſt, fulfill thy meaſure. Its not my Sacrament which cauſes thee to be ſo, but thy uncleane dunghill which dare offer it ſelfe to the pure beames thereof. As Ieremie Lam. 3. So doth this Ordinance cry in Gods eares, Lord ſeale them to an hard heart (which is thy curſe) to an hard heart which cānot repent, mourne, beleeve; becauſe they have abuſed all thy calles in the word, all thy patience, and meanes, and dare come hither in their ſinne, ſend them hence with thy black marke upon them, for the ſcaring of others! Nay, the Spirit of this ſeale cryes after ye, ere ye be gone out of the preſence of God, ſaying, how durſt thou ſit here to catch the foode of my people, with a dogges impudency? with that heart which thou bringeſt with thee from the Alehouſe or thy Harlot, or thy Oathes? Goe thy waies; never fruit grow more upon thee! No raine, no dew fall upon thy hard heart! That which was a ſnare to Iudas, even the Table and ſoppe of Chriſt, be a ſnare to thee, to fall, and riſe no more. If thou wouldſt avoyd this, let this Doctrine of the ſeale pull thee to the knowledge of the Covenant. Lam. 3. 65. Ioh. 13. 26.

an

Secondly, let it be an uſe of mourning to us, that we have ſo few to whom the end of this Sacrament pertaines. Sure if it bee the Sacrament of any, its theirs, whoſe hearts want ſealing of faith in the Promiſe; queſtion the perſeverance of their faith, their comfort, hope, peace: Doubt, that theſe decay ſo faſt, as they ſhall hardly recover them, and feare that Gods meaſures of health growth, ſetledneſſe, and fruitfulneſſe is too good for them. But alas! where are theſe now a-dayes? Hath not the ſtreame of this age carried them into another extreame, rather of formall preſumption & ſecuritie? What ſhal then this Sacrament do, if there be ſo few whom it concernes: Shall it returne in vaine to him that ſent it? No, it belongs to thoſe few (for all are not alike) whom the Lord loveth, and will ſeale to the day of the full aſſurance and redemption. The Spirit of ſealing Vſe 2.

ſealing ſhall not be quite ſtreightned for all the ſinne of others.

Vſe 2. Admonition upon two grounds. 1. Therefore thirdly, let it be admonition to all ſuch, that they ſlight not this end of the Sacrament, ſo that it ſhould not effect that end which it ſerves for. To which purpoſe remember theſe two items. Firſt, that this holy ſeale annexed to the legacies of Chriſts laſt Will and Teſtament, doth beare date from the firſt Inſtitution: and was purpoſely then ordained by Chriſt, becauſe he knew the next day following, it was to be in his full vertue immediately upon the Teſtators death, as we reade Heb. 9. 16. If then thoſe rejoyced in this ſealing day, a farre off ere it came, and ſaw it as Abraham and others by faith: then what excuſe ſhalt thou pretend, who ſeeſt not this power and end of the Sacrament, being after the death of the Lord Ieſus, & being offered under the Signes of his death, thou mighteſt not doubt of the effect of it. Secondly, the Supper hath the preeminence in this kinde, not only above other Ordinances of groth; but even the word it ſelf: wherin, although there be a power alſo of Sealing, yet not under ſuch Evidences of the Lord Ieſus crucified; nor under ſo great an authority and commiſſion to Seale.

Heb. 9. 16. Iohn 8. 56.

2. Grounds.

Vſe 4. Laſtly, therefore let the Lords end in the Sacrament be thine: even every poore ſoules portion, which grones in ſpirit for further perſwaſion of her growth and increaſe in pardon, holineſſe, and glory. Put not off any meaſures, or the Seales thereof, which the Lord offers thee: Let there be no effect of any Ordinance, which thou ſhouldeſt count ſtrange to thee, or walke in the want of, with any peace. Who knowes what encreaſes God hath provided for thee? But howſoever that bee, diſmay not thy ſelfe, as if it were the portion of ſuch or ſuch; and none of thine: If God will deny thee it, it is to humble thee (he can bring thee to heaven through a leſſe open doore) but let not thy ſloth and baſe heart as Ahaz, deprive thee, either of the bounty of his promiſe or ſignes; leaſt others enjoy it, and thou be ſtript even of that thou ſeemeſt to have. Go rather and ſumme up thoſe ſweete promiſes of God, for thy growth. Behold them, Ioh. 10. 9. Ioh. 15. 4. Reade alſo thoſe texts before, Ephe. 3. 16, 17. and 4. 15, 16. Col. 1. 11. and ſuch like, to ſet thy teeth an edge. Spred theſe promiſes before the Lord, begge his Spirit to ſeale them, Vrge 1 Ioh. 3. 24. and 4. 13. upon the Lord: And as a poore woman would cry to the Lord Keeper for his Seale, ſo thou to this great Keeper of the Seale, to bring it out to thee; Doe not give him the lie, make him not a lier in his chiefe worke, wherein his honour moſt ſtandeth, and in due time hee will heare thee.

PART SECOND
TREATISE OF THE SACRAMENT.

To the Chriſtian Reader.

Good Reader, I could not but adverti ſe thee of ſome cautions in the method and manner of thy reading of theſe Treatiſes: and here I would frame my ſpeech to two ſorts; the one weaker and more ignorant; the other ſuch as would thinke themſelves more judicious. To the former I ſay this: Firſt, that whereas weake ones, lighting upon a booke of this nature, cloven in two and divided; are ready to enquire whether part is more neceſſary, and as they fancy, ſo to take what they liſt, and leave what they pleaſe; falling upon that part which they thinke neereſt joyned with practiſe, paſſing by the other as leſſe needefull. Therefore I adviſe all ſuch to uſe a better order in their reading, and (as Ioſephs ſervants did in the ſearch of the ſackes,) to begin with the eldeſt and firſt, and to end with the laſt; and to reade in order, from the beginning of the former Part, to the end of the latter: by which meanes it ſhall come to paſſe, that underſtanding their grounds diſtinctly and wiſely, they ſhall proceede to practiſe with far greater light and ſavour, than otherwiſe they ſhould doe by their confuſed reading. I obſerve alſo another folly in weake ones: That when the occaſion of the Sacrament is offered, they commonly catch up ſome booke of that Argument, and while the pang laſteth, ſpend their devotion upon it, till they be weary; but no whit band themſelves to reade thoſe things which chiefly concerne them: and although they ſhould light upon ſome ſuch point, yet the diſcourſe being coherent, and they very unſetled, can ſcarſe reade over halfe one point: Therefore my counſell to ſuch is, To turne their ſudden pangs into an ordinary habit; that is, to devote themſelves to a deligent reading and coherent peruſal of the things, as they are handled, without ſlightnes and needles interruption; whereby they ſhall both meete with ſuch things as do moſt concern their eſtate, and ſhall be able (by taking note thereof) to turne to them at their neede, and not to be to ſeeke of them, nor wander in their reading at uncertainties; which will cauſe their reading to be ſweete, when they feele gaine to enſue therby.

The latter caution to the more judicious is this, That whereas ſome of them affecting to be thought ſo, when they meete with a booke of this nature, partly containing contemplation, partly practiſe: Theſe (I ſay) are in another extreame, and thinking the later to be under their curious braines, doe quite paſſe it over, and if they thinke to get ſome new point, of deeper nature than ordinary, or ſome diſtinction formerly unknowne to them, out of the contemplative diſcourſe; that they will faſten upon and ſtudy hard: labouring indeede rather to pride themſelves with oſtentation of ſome novelties or depths, than to edifie themſelves with any practicall and ſavory truths, as they are in Ieſus. To theſe I ſay this: That although I have beene willing to handle the Theory of this point of a Sacrament, (both becauſe it is little looked after, and alſo for ſatisfaction of ſober deſires of knowledge;) yet my chiefe ſcope was, rather to draw men to love and embrace the Sacraments, for their true gaine and ſpirituall commodity, than to humour any frothy braine in meere diſcourſe, to puffe men up withall. In a word, if the well minded Reader ſhall purchaſe any thing towards more ſound underſtanding, by theſe my Collections, I ſhall be glad; but much more glad, if I ſhould finde, that this knowledge of theirs, did drop as dew, and ſoake into their hearts and affections, to ſeaſon them with a pious and conſcionable regard of the Sacraments, a more due reverence in preparing themſelves to the Table of the Lord, and a more carefull ſurvey of themſelves after their receiving, that ſo their whole courſe might be much better, and their former errors rectified and reformed.

Now as touching the ſcope of this latter Part; underſtand, that looke what in my former preface and Treatiſe, I have endeavored, for opening the Doctrine; that I deſire to doe in this Part, for the ſtirring up of practiſe in men, in due preparing themſelves, and meete receiving of the Supper. And ſeeing it is ſo holy, ſolemne, and hazardous a worke, it imports us to looke well to our ſelves in our partaking thereof. Sacraments (my brethren) are no morrall acts, ſuch as the managing of our earthly affaires, buyings, ſellings, companies, recreations and callings are (which yet are holily to be performed) but holy things in their nature, eminently ſpirituall and religious in themſelves. They containe Chriſt Ieſus for the ſealing up of birth and proſperity of the ſoule. As the grace is exceeding ſpirituall, which they exhibit to beleevers: ſo is the curſe as pœnall, which they threaten to the abuſers. In no one thing doe we either more abundantly advantage; nor in any one more endamage our ſelves, as we goe to worke. Spirituall ordinances are both ſpiritually violated, and ſpiritually puniſhed. Hoping that this ſhort item, through mercy ſhall prevaile as much as a longer with the wiſe, and craving grace from heaven upon us both, I bid thee farewell.

CHAP. I.

Concerning Sacramentall Triall in generall: the Deſcription of it; and the duty it ſelfe propounded, reaſoned and urged.

HAving treated hitherto of the Doctrine of the Sacraments (wherein the uſe of Baptiſme was urged) it now remaineth that we come to the exerciſe of the Supper of the Lord: Whereunto this ſecond Treatiſe ſhall ſerve (if God will) & wherein (ſomewhat more largely) the Doctrine of our Preparation to this Sacrament ſhall be propounded: The rather ſeeing it was the chiefe ſcope of the Booke it ſelfe; and which occaſioned at firſt, the former Diſcourſe. That ſo the religious Reader might in one view both underſtand what a Sacrament is, and how to be received. Concerning which, I purpoſe to deſcribe what this preparation is; and then in ſpeciall to diſcend to the branches whereof it conſiſts, with the uſe and application thereof: and ſo with ſome directions and caveats at the end, to conclude the Treatiſe. Entrance. Deſcription of Sacramentall preparation.

Sacramentall Preparation and triall, is a duty required by God, at the the hands of all and every that desire to receive worthily; by the due exercise whereof a man may discerne whether or no he be qualified to receive; and accordingly either to proceede to Communicate with comfort or else desist for the present, till better prepared. I will briefely touch upon the severals of this description, which are these six. First, what difference there is betweene Preparation and Triall. Secondly, that Triall is a divine command. Thirdly, the persons who are to try. Fourthly, what the due exercise of trying is. Fiftly, the different sorts of religious search, and how this Sacramentall search differs from them. Sixtly and lastly, the end and scope hereof. The second, and fourth of these I reserve to the last place, as most essentiall to the duty. Touching the rest in their order I shall first speake a little of them, and so of the two other.

Six branches.

In what respect preparation and triall differ.

And first, let none cavill at my differencing Preparation from Triall. I know well that they agree in one, and that the former word usually is taken for the whole triall of a Communicant. My meaning by it is, to shew what a man who would try himselfe aright, is to doe, ere hee set himselfe about the worke. That is, to bring himselfe within some such compasse as may fit him the better to close with a triall of himselfe. Not onely to sequester himselfe from other businesse and objects of the world and his calling, that he may doe but one thing at once; but also to call in, and to calme his thoughts and affections, so that he may be himselfe, and gather up his loose garments, and gird the loynes of his soule to doe this maine worke well; that is, with a close, reverend, and intent purpose of heart. Solomon hath a sweet speech, For a mans desire he will separate himselfe; that is, lay aside for the time, all other businesse, and thoughts of lesse consequence, that he may do the maine thing to be desired, in a more due manner. And when the Merchant had found the Pearle, he is said to withdraw himselfe; that is, to goe apart and to weigh well the worth of that he had found. And in the story of Rehoboam, the holy Ghost uses this phrase of preparing the heart to seeke God; noting that to seeke God either in the worke of Conversion, or in any service & ordinance, requires a separation of the soule from the usuall affaires of the world, which distract the mind from weightier objects. As Salomon speakes of the foole, so it may bee said of most men, (who yet thinke themselves wise) Their eyes are in every corner of the world; that is, so busied and hurried about a thousand vagaries and fancies abroad, that they are no where lesse, than where they should chiefely be; in the meditation

Preparation is more generall.

Prov. 18. 1.

Mat. 13. 44.

tation of heavenly things: Hence that complaint of moſt, that meditation is ſo difficult to them; others, their memories are ſo fickle, becauſe they divide and cut themſelves (as Martha) into many peeces, who ſhould rather unite themſelves cloſely into one; and becauſe they have ſtuft and fraught their mindes and hearts with ſo manifold thoughts, and have ſo many irons in fire at once; that one hurts another; as in the crowding of a multitude at a ſmall wicket, (at which one by one might enter eaſily) wee ſee its long ere any one can well get through. Luke 10. ult.

A point of ſingular uſe, condemning firſt that brutiſh prophaneneſſe of many, who (to bewray what hearts they have) can hardly bite in their common talke and thoughts of baſe carnall things, when they are to kneele downe to prayer in their families, but mixe one ſo with another, till they breede irkeſomenes in others, and a pollution of holy things to themſelves. Perhaps all are not ſo groſſe, as once one was in his ſaying Grace before meate, who brake off uſualy in the midſt, to bid his ſervants to ſet his diſhes aright; but ſurely the ſinne of moſt men is greate in this kinde: Except God will take them as he findes them deepe in their buſineſſe, and over head and eares in other matters, hee muſt pardon them for Triall at the Sacrament; for indeede they have uſed themſelves to ſuch a courſe, that either they muſt defile Gods worſhip with their owne vanities, pleaſures, profits, either they muſt ſerve God and Mammon at once, or not at all: they never knew what an empty heart meant, unloaden of her uſuall thoughts and affections, prepared for God, ſerious and withdrawne from it ſelfe; they count it impoſſible to attaine to it. To whom I ſay, as good never a whit, as never the better. Vſe of it. 1 Reproofe.

Secondly, this inſtructs us about the nature of Gods worſhip. Its a ſeparation of the whole man for God; and that not in publike only, (where our ſhops and trades and affaires muſt be caſt out) but in ſecret alſo. To haye ſome few wandring thoughts after God, to caſt in a word by the way, of religion; to heare a chapter read in the cluſter of houſhold buſineſſe, is no worſhip; for that requires a ſeparation. There is more required alſo; but without this, nothing can be done. The hand which will compaſſe Gods Altar muſt bee cleane alſo: But firſt it muſt be empty: if it be filled with nutſhels and traſh, it can hold nothing elſe. If we cannot ſo much as heare a ſerious ſtory, or indite a letter without privacy; if we can doe no choiſe worke well, except we be ſolitary and ſerious: do we think Vſe 2. Inſtruction it eaſie to worſhip God in a Faire, a Market, an Alehouſe, a Bargaine, while we be working, or playing, or prating, or dreaming? No, all our courage, all our ſtrength is too little; a broken, humble, beleeving heart is little enough for it: Therefore at leaſt an empty, a ſwept, and voyded heart is neceſſary.

Vſe 3. Admonition. Thirdly, it muſt admoniſh us of a duty meete for us, if wee will be fit for Sacramentall Triall; we muſt ere we ſet to it, abhor that giddineſſe, lightneſſe, and fraughtneſſe of our ſoules, (which the moſt thinke is no ſinne) as our bane, and the deſtroyer of Preparation for the Sacrament. We muſt know, that as the gold weights will not trie gold till they ſtand ſtill; ſo neither can the ſoule trie her ſelfe till ſhe be well ſtaied and poyſed. When we will powre any precious liquor into a veſſell of glaſſe (eſpecially if it have a narrow necke) we will ſet it in a ſteddy poſture, for feare of ſpilling. No man can ſee any thing in roared waters. As the Lord Ieſus ſpeakes of agreeing with our adverſary, that we muſt lay down our ſacrifice by the Altar the whilſt, and doe that chiefely; and as Peter bids thoſe who will covet the milke of the word, that they purge out of their ſtomacke al ſuperfluity; ſo eſpecially do it in this triall at the Sacrament. Its manifeſt by mens cavils againſt this dutie, (viz. that they have callings to attend, and buſines to looke after, and they cannot prepare themſelves) that, I ſay, they account it as a veniall offence to be thus cloyed with other cares: but if it defile and deſtroy triall of thy ſelfe, how can it be ſmall? Thou wilt ſay; thy thoughts and affections are neither murtherous, uncleane, oppreſſing, defrauding, lying, revenging, profane, intemperate: What then? Is there no other diſeaſe mortall, ſave the plague? Let it therefore be as odious unto thee, to carry a light, a gadding, unſavory heart about thee, ſo full of other bables, that Gods liquor muſt nee's run over: I ſay, to be out of frame alway to entertaine the beſt things, let it be unto thee as odious as very profaneneſſe it ſelfe. And before thou venter upon triall, cleanſe thy ſelfe of this fulſome glut: & do not enterline or write Gods letters upon a blotted, but cleane paper, even as thou wouldeſt wipe thy Table-book, ere thou writeſt the Sermon. And whatſoever vanity hath preſſed thy heart, or dares preſume to come befor God; ſerve it with the ſame ſawce that Abner is ſaid to ſerve Aſahel, that wild Roe who (when he perceived to perke ſawcily in his preſence, and dare him to his face) he watch'd him ſo cloſely, that he ſmote him with the hinder end of his Speare, and laid him on the earth. Let thy care be,

Matth 5.25. 1 Peter 2.2.

2 Sam. 2.19.

ſo

ſo to ſmite thy giddy heart, that it may no more annoy thee, or interrupt thy ſpirit, being well occupied.

Laſtly, when thou commeſt to this tryall, ſummon thy ſelfe, and all the out-workes, and ranging thoughts of thy ſoule, all thy powers and members, to come in, to forſake other objects for the time; and cloſe ſeriouſly and ſadly with the Lord, in this worke of Sacramentall triall. As thou wouldeſt faine have thy heart cloſe at thy triall for the Sacrament; nay at thy great triall of death, ſo keepe it cleane, empty, unſnared, in thy whole courſe. Remember when thy heart would laſh out, there is a Sacrament, and a triall before it: If my thoughts then be paſt call, I ſhall have an ill worke of it, or elſe ruſh to the Sacrament with a ſurfeit upon it. Surely looke how thy heart is watcht unto in thy courſe, ſo ſhalt thou finde it, at a ſpeciall ſeaſon; and ſo thou ſhalt bleſſe God for the Sacrament, and ſay, Elſe Lord I ſhould have ſtrayed endleſſely; but this Ordinance hath kept me at a bay from wandering, not onely from thy Commandements, but even from a ſober and ſerious attending to it ſelfe, in lawfull liberties. So much for the firſt. Vſe 4. Exhortation.

Touching the ſecond point, viz. The perſons whom this triall concernes: it hath two branches. Firſt, how many, Secondly, Who muſt try? For the former, it may ſoone be anſwered: All muſt trie and examine, againſt the Sacrament. The charge is generall, admitting no exception. As it was to the Iewes for the Paſſeover, that all who eat it, muſt be liable to the rules of obſerving it: ſo muſt it be in the Supper, none can bee exempt from triall, who will have a part in the Sacrament. Briefly (not to ſtay the Reader long) He that hath not a ſoule, to ſave to thrive, to proſper in grace, or to be happy, or to deſire it; He that neither cares for the loſſe of heaven, or woe of hell; he that abhors the name of a child, & ſo the allowance of his fathers houſe, & the portion of an heire; he that chooſeth rather to be without among dogs & ſwine, he that hath cut off himſelfe and is become an Heathen & Publicane, a ſcorner & paſt grace, let him exempt himſelfe; elſe the Lord exempts none at all. Pearles indeed muſt not be caſt before ſwine, elſe it is not the difference of any outward reſpect that can diſcharge from this duty. All need the benefit of it, all are in danger to incurre the loſſe by neglecting it: all therfore are equally obliged to it. The people cannot exempt themſelves under colour of inabilitie, or not being booke-learned; they muſt not put it off to the Miniſter as more ſufficient for it. The Miniſter may not exempt himſelfe from it, as if he leſſe needed it than the

the people: Schollers are not free, becauſe their calling is to ſtudy, or reade the Scriptures, for they may be far from the triall of themſelves: Such as have learned the Doctrine of the Sacrament ſoundly, muſt not waſh their hands of it, becauſe of their knowledge. The wife muſt not thinke her ſelfe to be tried in her husbands carefull triall, as if ſhee were but his ſhadow, and hath him to anſwer for her; much leſſe the husband may quit himſelfe upon hers. The rich muſt not pleade liberty by his great buſines; nor the poore for lack of leaſure from his handy-labour; not the aged, becauſe of their infirmities growing upon them: not the more experienced, becauſe they have oft done it; nor the novice, becauſe he is greene, & new to begin: not the traveller, becauſe in a journey: not ſervants, becauſe they are under the government of others; nor governours, becauſe they have authority over them: No, there is no time, age, perſon, who can preſcribe againſt the Lord of heaven; Prince and people, learned and idiots, Iewe, Barbarian, bond, free, great or ſmall, are all alike and under no difference with him; But all of all ſexes, conditions, eſtates and relations, (if men, if Chriſtians, if of capable yeares and diſcretion) ſtand bound to this Sacramentall triall. Hee who will exempt himſelfe, let him bring forth his diſpenſation: Therefore let all covers of figleaves, drawne from the variety and defence of outward reſpect, fall to the ground, as unable to hold water, when God ſhall enquire who they are that dare take out their names from this generall rule; Gods Lawes are not as cobwebs, onely to catch ſmall flies.

Branch 2. Who muſt try?

The ſecond branch is, Who muſt try? To which I anſwer, Each one himſelfe; for theſe are the expreſſe words of the Apoſtle, in which were reaſon ſufficient; but beſides, there is cauſe for it. For firſt, the object of this inquiſition and triall, are not errours and ignorances (properly) whereof the ſoule for lacke of knowledge can take no notice; but either good or evill, whereof we are privy or guilty to our ſelves; and as for the reſt, the Lord in mercy pardons them to his owne ſervants, who mourne for them, as thoſe who would gladly know them, and ſo ſhun all evill, and repent of their omiſſions and failings; therefore it is conſcience which muſt give the anſwer, and make the inquiry. Secondly, the triall which flowes from the ſence, the eye, or heareſay, or conjectures of men and their actions, is Moſt uncertaine. For ſometime a good man out of ignorance of ſome caſes, being plaine and open, may ſeeme to goe to worke upon a worſe principle, than indeed he doth, & to be worſe

Each one himſelfe. Reaſon 1.

than he is. And againe, a ſly hypocrite, who can accommodate himſelfe to the opinions of men, and occaſions of things very cunningly, may procure the conceit of a very honeſt man; but conſcience well informed will beare witnes without coſenage or error, what a man is, Thirdly, it is conſcience which is the do-all in the ſoule: Reaſon 3. She is ſet by the Lord to be the eſpeciall of the narroweſt paſſages of the heart and life, (except hood-winked and defiled,) ſhe keepes the cinque ports, the out-lets and in-lets of the heart and life, nothing paſſes without her notice and verdict; that water which runs by the mill of our courſe, utterly unknowne to others, is to her well underſtood: And therefore from her muſt proceede this triall: ſhe is this himſelfe, who muſt examine, and who muſt be examined. Laſtly, all judgement and triall from others without, can not attaine to this true triall of a man: and that for theſe reſpects. Reaſon 4.

1. Becauſe that there is none that knowes or can know the ſpirit of man, ſave the Lord & it ſelfe by the Lords meanes. For then ſhould man become in Gods place: now that cannot be, for although ſome man may be in Gods ſtead to another, yet that is only in light & direction, not in ſearch or triall. The things thatt are in the ſoule, lie hid under ſo many lockes, & with ſo many windings & conveiances, that the ſoule it ſelfe cannot ſearch them of it ſelfe, except the Lord helpe her: much leſſe can any other doe it. Secondly, put caſe that ſome wiſe and diſcerning Miniſter ſhould by his wiſedome, diſcover ſomewhat more than others; yet, the intentions, extents, meaſures, and conſequences of thoſe evils are paſt his inquiry: how deepely the ſoule is engaged in her guilt, with how high or low an hand ſhe offended: againſt what light ſhe ſinned: what penalties ſhe hath incurred, what offence to God or men, and what wound to her ſelfe, (whether felt and repented or not) hath followed; no man beſides her ſelfe, can ſearch out. 1 Reſpect. 1 Cor. 2. 11. Iere. 17. The 2.

Thirdly, ſay he could, yet it is not in him to worke upon conſcience ſo diſcovered. The feeling of ſin, guilt & curſe; the true view of ſinne to humble, melt and afflict the ſoule, that it might apprehend pardon, repent, and returne to God, is the act of conſcience by the efficacie of the word, reflecting upon it ſelfe. Laſtly, though all theſe were, yet is it not in the power and authority of another to enquire. Perhaps a fit man is not preſent, if he be, he may want a calling: how ever, the iſſue upon triall may be out of his power and hand: for, either he is not to debarre from the Sacrament for ſuch ſinnes as are unconvinced, and open but onely within the boſome of the committer; or, if they bee ſcandalous, yet its beyond his 3 Reſpect.

ſtrength to execute the cenſure of ſuſpention upon the party, but notwithſtanding he will ruſh upon the Sacrament. Whereas a man examining himſelfe aright, may and muſt be ſuch a law to himſelfe upno due ſurvey taken.

Vſe of it. Admonition.

The uſe of the point is manifold; but it will more fitly fall upon the laſt branch. Here onely I admoniſh ſuch as would try themſelves well, to beware leaſt they reſt themſelves upon either the labours or opinions of others. How ordinary an abuſe is it of the publike and private directions that are given to the people for triall, that men thinke themſelves diſcharged from ſelfe triall? How great pitty is it, that faire weather ſhould doe ſuch hurt? And that men ſhould hang other mens triall of them, as a Cover of darkeneſs before their eye, that they might not come within themſelves?

Reaſons why men try not.

Some through unwillingneſſe, eaſe, or a falſe heart, ſtoppe their mouthes with this, that having had ſuch excellent helpes, they cannot chuſe but be well tried. Howbeit themſelves can give no reaſon why? And others when they have offered themſelves to be tried, with ſome ſence of their neede; yet either by having more knowledge of the Sacrament than was expected; or expreſſing ſome good affections of deſire and ſorrow for the preſent, or becauſe they have a gift to make the beſt ſhew, and to conceale the worſt: I ſay, ſome way or other, bleare the eye of their Miniſter or Parents: ſo that they thinking the Annointed of the Lord to ſtand before them, occaſion them to adventure boldly upon the Sacrament as if beyond exception. Alas poore ſoule! Doſt thou not know that the triall reſts in thy ſelfe? If thou be neither truly broken, beleeving or penitent, can other mens erroneous Charity releeve thee? It may poſſibly be a great ſinne in another to thinke thee unfit for the Sacrament (knowing no other) or to exclude thee: when as yet it is a fearefull, bold, and uncharitable raſhnes againſt thy ſelfe (who knoweſt thy ſelfe) to dare and preſume thereto. What ſhal it profit to winne a world of good opinion from others, and loſe thy owne ſoule? or to rejoyce in other mens errors, to deceive thy ſelfe? What did it boote Iudas to eſcape the judgement of all his fellowes in comming to the Paſſeover? Let that patterne diſcourage all ſelfe conceited and ſubtill hypocrites.

Objection. Is the triall of others needleſſe?

What then? may ſome ſay, is the helpeful triall of others needles? No, but of uſe. As we ſee the Levites to ſanctifie their brethren. Onely there is difference betweene the triall of others and our owne. The triall of others, ſerves as the materials towards a building:

ding: our owne tryall is, as the building of the workeman himſelfe. When all the Timber, Brickes, and Lime is ready laid: the workeman muſt finiſh the frame. The Saw or Axe may be layd upon the ſtone, or upon the timber: but except the lively hand of a man doe act thoſe tooles duly, there will be no ſawing of them in two. So is it here: The Miniſter or governour muſt give light and direction how to try, wherein it ſtands, and how the falſe heart ſhould be handled: he may teach, upon what termes ſearch is to be made, and what not: he may remove falſe ſcruples, errors & lets: But the verdict of triall muſt be thy own in ſecret when all is done. As at the Aſſyſes, there be two Iuries, the one of Inqueſt: the other of life and death: There is a ſingular uſe of the former, and yet that meddles not with the finall ſentence. Onely it makes an eaſie way for the finall, and remooves rubs, and gives light, what bills are to be enquired upon: and ſo the other conſults and gives verdict of life or death, guilty or unguilty. So here let the uſe bee, to admoniſh all cavillers and prophane perſons, who would take advantage of the rule, to try themſelves: and all to exclude the helpe of others, whom they would ſhunne, leaſt their ſinne and profaneneſſe ſhould be perceived. There are none who ſo decline the helpe of others, but thoſe who abhorre to try themſelves, and ſo at once would rid their hands of all. But oh wofull wretch! Wilt thou neither try thy ſelfe, nor take advice of others? If thou wert under arreſt for debt, and ſome of thy friends would become ſurety for thee, wouldeſt thou chuſe wilfully to goe and rot in priſon, rather than to be beholding for their love? Then may it bee ſayd, Thou art worthy to periſh. Even ſo I ſay to thee, If thou wilt not try thy ſelfe, nor be tried, let him that is filthy, bee filthy ſtill. Thus much for the ſecond point. Anſwere. No. Revel. 22. 11.

The third branch followeth, which concernes the difference of this triall from others; and that from theſe words; (Whereby a man may diſcerne himſelfe to be qualified to receive.) I will digreſſe as little as may be; but my aime is, to diſpatch ſomewhat in this point, which may give light to that which followeth, and to ſhew what may helpe to the better tryall of a Communicant when he comes to the Sacrament, alſo how a Chriſtian may without confuſion apply himſelfe to each ſervice of God, in the due manner and kinde ſeverally. Firſt, this triall and preparation differs from the triall wee ſhould premiſe to other Ordinances, as hearing the Word, reading, praying, faſting, family duties, &c. 3. Generall. The difference. Differ.

All

All which require a preparing of the ſoule to ſeeke the Lord: yea
1 From other Ordinances. in theſe reſpects they differ: Firſt, in that all other (for the moſt part) although they doe require an eſtate in grace, ere they can pleaſe God: yet ſo farre as they doe conferre towards the converſion of ſuch an one as yet wanteth grace, and muſt therefore be uſed upon paine of rebellion againſt God: therefore they doe not abſolutely require that ſtrict tryall which the Sacraments doe. True it is, thoſe who heare, pray, faſt, conferre, being deſtitute of faith, ſinne in the manner of doing: yet ſince the Lord hath alſo ordayned them to be inſtruments of begetting faith it ſelfe: therefore its alſo a ſinne to neglect them, although a man be unqualified to uſe them holily. But the Sacrament is of another nature, being no ordinance appointed for the breeding of grace, but of nouriſhing it onely: ſo that he who dares to come to the Sacrament being yet out of covenant, profaneth it both in matter and forme.
Double preſence in Sacraments. Therefore the cloſer tryall is required unto it, above others. Againe, in the Sacrament, the Lord is not ſpiritually and virtually preſent, but even viſibly and ſenſibly appeares to his people in the ſignes of the ſubſtance, matter and forme of his covenant; both our reconciliation, and ſanctification. A good ſubject ought to preſent himſelfe at each Court and meeting of Iuſtices, Seſſions, and Aſſyſes, with due regard and reverence, as one that dares not breake the peace, nor be a bad ſubject. Howbeit if the King doe ſend for him perſonally in his owne ſight, to tender and renue his Oath of Allegiance, it behooves him to put on a more awfull and reverend loyalty than before. So here, every ordinance is ſacred, and hath the Lord preſent in it: But the Sacrament exhibits him in a more reall, neere, and familiar manner, even as if the Lord Ieſus came corporally in preſence, to eate and drinke with us, and to preſent us with his owne fleſh and bloud to feaſt us; Therefore in the appoach thereto, our triall muſt bee more cautelous and ſolemne.

Differ. 2. 1. From legall. Againe, the tryall before the Sacrament differs from other ſorts of Religious tryall. There is a Legall tryall belonging to the unregenerate, by which the ſoule laying it ſelfe in the ballances of the Law of God, feeles her ſelfe weighed downe by ſinne to hell and deſtruction. There is a triall of the Goſpel, whereby a loaden ſoule, finding that the Lord offers her eaſe and pardon in Chriſt, upon the due preparations to faith, and actuall beleeving the promiſe, doth try her ſelfe about the worke of theſe, that ſhee may partake the benefit of Christ. There is a penitentiall tryall, by which a beleever having fallen from God and broken covenant, searches himselfe, and casts up his gorge, that he might by pardon of his revolt, returne to God, and recover himselfe to former grace and comfort. There is also an ordinary and daily tryall of a Christians course and walking with God: by which he watches to himselfe, and to the rule, and living by faith, and obeying God, viewing his practice dayly, and keeping holy quarter with God, as occasion moves him: These all differ, each from other, and all from Sacramentall triall, Not that they are excluded from it (for they are necessary antecedents to it) but yet they faile in this speciall respect of a Sacramentall tryall; which lookes at this, how the soule may be qualified to communicate.. 2. Penitentiall. 3. Ordinary walking with God.

So that in this tryall, as these former tryalls are helpefull, so yet a further thing is lookt at. viz. 1. How the soule hath carried it selfe in respect of former Sacraments received; how it hath lived and thriven in grace by them; 2. How it hath failed therein, and broken the covenant there renued in speciall. 3. What repentance it feeles for that speciall sinne, what faith it hath in the promise of the Sacrament; what fitnesse to joyne with the Church in communion of the body by love. What desire after former fruit and groweth, by experience thereof. 4. This tryall at the Sacrament is a speciall Reviving, stirring up and quickning of all these graces for the use of the Sacrament, and thereby (through mercy) the soule may goe and receive with the lesse feare, and more faith to speede of her desire. This trial is a further thing. 1. 2. 3 4.

The summe and scope of all is, thus much; 1. To teach Gods people, how to make use of all the former Tryalls for the helping them forward to this. Then secondly, to shew how a Christian should accommodate himselfe to every duty wisely and orderly, without errour and confusion, which is no small grace. 3. To confute the blindnesse of such as see no distinct grace contein'd in this tryall for the Sacrament, and therefore thinke that if they can bee devout, catch up a booke and reade, put on a demure habit, and violently keepe off themselves from usuall riots and prophaneness of life, or simper with a few good words, (that they carry good hearts to God, meaning no man any hurt) they thinke this to bee that which will passe for their triall at the Sacrament. To whom I say, Without knowledge the heart is naught. If they who have practized the 4. Tryalls above sayd, yet must not con- Use, 1. 2. 3. Pro. 19. 2.

found them with this, but revive this triall at and for the Sacrament; what ſhall bee ſaid to ſuch blind and ignorant tryers as theſe without rule or reaſon? Laſtly, it ſhould informe every good communicant in the nature of this true tryall, not to deſiſt and give it over, by wearineſſe, ſloth, or difficulty, till in ſome meaſure hee finde how hee is qualified for the Sacrament, ſeeing till then hee doth but miſtake the whole ſcope of the Ordinance, and mocke his owne ſoule.

4. Generall The iſſue of it

The fourth branch of the deſcription, is, The iſſue of this triall, viz. That accordingly a man may either proceede to the Sacrament, or deſiſt for the preſent. And this the nature it ſelfe of tryall requires, and otherwiſe it were needleſſe to trie except it were for the iſſue. Which is plaine by the end which the Lord hath in tryalls of another kind. Why is the Lord ſaid to try his people with falſe teachers, and lying Prophets? Is it not to know whether we will cleave to the truth, or beleeve lies? Is it not that the faith of the elect might be diſcerned from the rottenneſſe of hypocrites? Why doth the Lord try us with ſtreights and croſſes? Doth he not intend to try whether we will be content with our portion, or murmure and uſe indirect ſhifts? So the Lord tryed Gedeons ſouldiers who were meete for warre, who not. Men alſo in their tryalls (as at Aſſyſes) what intend they, ſave either to acquite, or condemne? My ſcope is to ſhew, that Sacramentall tryall hath alſo her iſſue, either to encourage a man to receive with comfort, or to deſiſt for the time, till better provided, with caution and wareneſſe.

Deut. 13. 3.

Iudges 7. 5.

Vſe 1. Inſtruction.

Which point is of great uſe. 1. To inſtruct all Chriſtian examinants, in treir triall to be carefull of themſelves, and not to ſuffer themſelves to bee deceived by error or ſelfe-love: For why? The iſſue is great, either the comfort of well receiving, and danger of loſing a great bleſſing if we come not: Or elſe the perill of incurring of a great miſchiefe and judgement, if they preſume to come. We ſay, the end of a thing is laſt in execution, but firſt in intention. If this were ſo in the purpoſe of ſuch as try themſelves; how wiſely, jealouſly, and religiouſly would they goe to worke? If they knew and conſidered, that the ſcope of tryall, is either to come or to forbeare; and that our deſiſting it ſelfe (if it bee ordinary) is a mocking of God, what colour ſoever we pretend; how cloſe and wiſe would it make them in going betweene both extremities, either of ruſhing to the Sacrament without triall, or deſiſting ſiſting upon unſufficient triall? How would it cauſe them both to tremble at contempt and refuſall: and yet alſo at neglect of due tryall ere they come? which is indeede to make a vertue of a neceſſity.

Secondly, this condemnes the formall and fulſome practiſe of common Proteſtants: who (if they be pull'd out of the vile profaneneſſe of ſuch as abhorre all tryall:) doe preſently thinke that God is ſo beholding to them for their trying themſelves, that let their tryall bee what it will, he owes them welcome to the Sacrament for it. Alas poore wretch; Tryall is appointed for an iſſue, not for a faſhion and formality, to ſtop the mouth of God and conſcience. That triall wich hath no iſſue, can have no due ſubſtance of matter or manner in it, but rather is a confuſed doing of ſomewhat without rule, with opinion of ſomething in the deed it ſelfe, to commend a man to God. No. As well the tryer of himſelfe may ſee cauſe of not comming as the not tryer ought not to come. Tryall hath ſtill a reſpect to the iſſue: and muſt be uſed to avoyd ſinne and puniſhment, not to increaſe both. Vſe 2. Reproofe.

Laſtly, let it be admonition to others, who upon tryall do finde themſelves unfit for the Sacrament. Of which ſort there may bee two. Some ſuch as (although Gods people) yet having fallen into ſome ſuch ſin as hath deepely defiled and hardened them, can not finde either their faith ſo lively, or their repentance ſo ſenſible, as that they dare to come, in ſuch a caſe I ſay, (if upon adviſe with other wiſer than themſelves they finde it ſo to require) their duty is to conſider, that the Sacrament may prove ſo farre from helping them, that it might rather encreaſe their guilt by boldneſſe. Therefore it ſhall bee their wiſedome to conſider, That the Lord hath other Ordinances to uſe, than the Sacrament. As that ſerves to nouriſh the faithfull: ſo there be others that ſerve to humble and caſt downe the looſe and preſumptuous. Let them therefore inquire after them: as Counſell of the Miniſter of God able to helpe them: Penitentiall ſearch and tryall of themſelves about the occaſion of their fall: Faſting and Prayer with conference, if they feele Sathan hath deepely bewitcht them & hardned them: Theſe Ordinances are appointed to caſt out ſinne: if it be yet unſeene and unrepented of: and to expell ſuch Devils as neither the Sacrament, nor any other Ordinance can, eſpecially the publique Miniſtery being the ſetter of them on worke, and the firſt convincer of the conſcience. Its a wiſe mans part to uſe every Ordinance for the good of it. Vſe 3. Admonition, Branch 1. Marke 9. 29.

Branch 2

Secondly, ſuch as by tryall find themſelves out of the Covenant of God in regard of any actuall faith in them, and beſides finde the guilt and taynt of much other corruption and evill: let them (much more) bleſſe God for this ordinance of tryall: and ſo long deſiſt from the Sacrament, till the Lord hath ſanctified the conviction of their conſcience, in ſome meaſure, to drive them out of themſelves unto a promiſe for reconciliation and peace. For the Blood of Chriſt and his Body ſerve not for the nouriſhment of any, in whom they have not bin as the ſeed of Regeneration, both in pardon of ſinne, and change of heart, in which converſion ſtandeth. Therefore let them ply this worke, of which in the tryall of our eſtate Chap. 2. more is ſaid. But to ruſh upon the Sacrament, upon tryall of this dangerous Condition, is a double ſinne, an adding of drunkenneſſe to thirſt: as alſo an abuſing of the Sacrament: cauſing it to ſeale up rather their guilt and curſe, than their pardon and peace, Remember ſtill, the Sacrament converts none, but ſtrengthens the converted.

Beware therefore (all ſuch) leſt by ſiniſter and unwiſe counſell of any, they blanch themſelves over, and thinke that becauſe they ſee all is not well, therefore the Sacrament muſt bee their Phyſitian. No, The word of Law and promiſe muſt firſt convince them of ſinne, and then of righteouſneſſe: whereof after they ſhall finde both the Sacrament to be a ſeale through faith: Baptiſme of their Converſion, the Supper of their Confirmation. Onely let this bee added, That as they doe for the preſent deſiſt from the Sacrament, ſo, yet they muſt ply this firſt conviction and tryall of themſelves, by attendance upon other ordinances, till they come to ſee clearely that the Sacrament belongs to them. For if they give over the worke by looſeneſſe and wearineſſe, before the fruit bee attained, they may feare that it had beene as good for them they had never ſeene cauſe by tryall to deſiſt, as having ſo done, to leave their worke unfiniſht. Sacramentall triall ſerves not to daſh men quite out of conceite with the ordinance, but to convince them for a time, that they may bee ſo abaſed for their cutting off themſelves from it, that they may returne to it with more comfort, and abhorre themſelves in that condition of deſiſting from it. And ſo doing, their Abſtinence ſhall be for their good: and although the Miniſter cannot ſuſpend them, yet their owne ſuſpending themſelves ſhall proove more gainefull to their ſoules, than their bold adventure. And ſo much for this fourth branch.

1 John 16.9.

The

The 5. and 6. now followeth: which (as I ſaid) I have kept to this laſt place, as depending upon one another, and moſt eſſentiall to the Doctrine. The 5. branch then is, that this triall is a charge of God, not left arbitrary to us, but neceſſary to the receiving worthily. To which ere I come, leſt any ſtumble at this word (worthily) as if any could be worthy to receive: I anſwer its the phraſe of the Holy-Ghoſt himſelfe in ſundry places: And looke in what ſence the wicked are ſaid to bee unworthy, in the contrary thereto the godly are called worthy: firſt in reſpect of themſelves, ſecondly, of the Lord. Touching the former, ſee Act. 13. 43. where Paul ſaith, Seeing you thinke your ſelues unworthie of eternall life, &c. he meanes, that they thought the tidings of it unworthy of them; they thought themſelves ſo worthy and ſo good, that they thought Gods offer unworthy of them, and ſo they deſpiſed the Counſell of God to ſave them. So here, the profane and hypocrites, doe thinke Sacramentall Chriſt a meane thing, diſcerne not what it is, or of what worthineſſe; therefore they are unworthy. But the faithfull receiver is worthy: Why? In reſpect of that worthy and precious eſteeme of the Sacrament, for which they account no preparation ſufficient. Secondly, in reſpect of God himſelfe. In which ſence, Rev. 3. 4. the Holy Ghoſt telles thoſe few names in Sardis, that they ſhould be clothed in white, for they were worthy; hee doth not meane they were worthy to bee ſo clothed; but being ſo clothed, they were worthy: that is, the Lord having cloathed them with the Robe of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, (the linnen of the Saints) they were worthy ones in his account: So contrarily, the unregenerate are unworthy, becauſe they are naked ſtill, and care not to bee covered with this garment: And why? They know not (or will not know) that they neede it. Now then, as the good receiver is worthy, becauſe he is ſo accounted in Chriſt, and his preparation is accepted in him, and the want thereof is not imputed: ſo the bad is unworthy, becauſe his perſon is not accepted, and therefore whether he prepare himſelfe, or no, he is the ſame; for out of the Lord Ieſus he cannot bee worthy. The Summe is, not the preparation of a man (in it ſelfe) makes him worthy: but the imputing of preparedneſſe by faith: and this workes an high eſteeme of the Sacrament, and a carefulneſſe to be a Communicant: neither whereof the ungodly can be partakers of. This by way of Digreſſion.

To returne then: The duty of tryall is commended by God. Prooſes of it

And this appeares by Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 28. as alſo by good Analogy of the Paſſeover, applyed by the Apoſtle to us. For the former, Paul concludes the direction for receiving well, and cutting off all abuſes: Let a man therefore examine himſelfe, and ſo let him eate: He that told them before what Chriſts inſtitution was: But as if knowledge alone of the pure ordinance were not enough, hee addes further; Let a man therefore examine: q. d. Although the meere obſerving of the inſtitution were enough to cut off the abuſe of your love feaſts: yet for the avoyding of all other corruption inward as well as outward, I command from God, Let every man examine. He doth not meane, let him if hee pleaſe, as leaving it to mens choyce: but the word is imperative, let him, that is, I enjoyne him: As, let a man abide in the vocation wherein God hath ſet him: let a man ſo eſteeme us as the diſpenſers of grace, &c. That is, I command him ſo. Neither is this as one of thoſe temporary counſels, of which Paul ſaith, hee had no warrant from God expreſſely: This ſaith not the Lord, but I. But it is one of thoſe, of which he addeth, This ſay not I, but the Lord. And the connexion of this 28. verſe with the 20. ev[illegible], &c. And hee ſubjoyneth, Let a man therefore examine, &c.

Further proofe.

Neither doth this reſt whereto this ſucceeds. Its manifeſt by the Scripture that ſely upon this text; but upon the Analogy of the Paſſeover was ſpeciall Preparation of them that ate the Paſchall Lamb it ſelfe for not onely the Lord required the Lamb it ſelfe to be put off from the damme 4. dayes: to teach the people in time to weane themſelves from thoſe ſweete breaſts of all worldly delights and lawfull liberties; but he required them alſo to keepe another feaſt of unleavened bread ſeven dayes; wherein all leaven whatſoever, was to bee ſwept out from their houſes, and Sacrifices to bee offered for expiation of ſinne and uncleanneſſe, that ſo they might not come polluted to the Paſſeover. And thoſe two paſſeovers of Hezekiah and Joſiah prove it: where ſpeciall charge is given to the Levites and people to ſanctifie themſelves and each other: although for the ſpeedineſſe of receiving, there could not be ſuch Legall clenſing as the Law required: and ſo alſo, the people and the King firſt purged out Idols, and defaced their groves & abandoned all will-worſhip ere they came to the Paſſeover. What betokened this, ſave the triall of their ſpirits, much more, purging out all Idols of the heart, ſweeping out the the leaven of corruption from within; without which the other had beene bootleſſe. Therefore Paul in that place doth preſſe the ſame, though not Sacramentally, yet univerſally, ſaying, Let us therefore keepe the feaſt; not with old leaven of malice and wickednesse; but with the unleavened bread of ſincerity and truth: Why? Becauſe Christ is our Paſſeover, who is ſacrificed for us: q. d. Let not us be behinde hand in our feaſt and ſpirituall Paſchall Lambe, to thoſe that eate the old Paſſeover. If they might not eate it with leaven, with any pollution of fleſh, as of Leproſie, touching of the dead, or the like ceremoniall defilement; how much leſſe we, with our reall and ſpirituall leaven and uncleanneſſe of ſoule? 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8.

To adde a word or two of uſe to this (for I leave the reaſons to the laſt point) this I ſay: That its well that we have an expreſſe charge from God for this triall. Elſe the world is full of curious heads, and profane hearts, to outface and outwrangle the Ordinance. Men have no joy to ſuch a taske as they feele to pinch their ſpirits, and preſſe upon them any power of practice; and therefore (although they are ready to caſt the cords, and breake the bands of the moſt convinced truths; yet) the more mannerly way is to queſtion the charge it ſelfe. And hence are thoſe uſuall interrogatories, How prove you that any man hath to doe with me when I come to the Sacrament? Or how prove you that Paul ſpeakes to us as well as the Corinthians, to try our ſelves? Or how can you proove that I am bound to ſanctifie the ſeventh day from the Creation, for a Sabbath? Or how know yee that God will have us preach and heare twice upon the Sabboth in publique? Or that a man is bound to pray by himſelfe, or twice a day in his family? Or that it is againſt nature for a man to weare long haire? Or for a woman to be ſhorne? And to theſe might I adde a thouſand other ſcrutinies of a baſe and profane heart, willing to overthrow all ſuch ſtrictneſſe, as it ſelfe diſtaſts; and loth to beleeve, or informe it ſelfe of any thing which it is loth to doe. The truth is, never did Satan ſo obſcure thoſe maine truths of the Scripture, in Popiſh darke times, by turning all into curious queres of things leſſe pertinent; as now he doth in this light of the Goſpel ſeeke to alay, and diſanull the power of truths by prophane cavillation. But I ſay ſtil both to the one, and to the other. Its well that God hath ſo punctually declared himſelfe in his Word as he hath. All that are not wickedly nice and curious, will rather yeeld to thoſe probable deductions from Scripture, which ariſe by conſequent, for the beating ting downe of our owne base spirits, and rejoyce in so doing, because they argue for God; than whet their lewd and prejudicate wits and spirits upon the devils whetstone to cavill against truths received: nibling here at one, & there another, till they have defaced their beauty and grace, and so exposed them to the utter contempt of themselves and others; Stop your mouthes therefore oh ye carpers at Gods precise rules, and play not the Proctors for the devill against God, lest he pay you your fees little to your content: Stoope rather to the Lords Canon in all things. And you to whom this yoke of tryall at the Sacrament is so heavie, consider the Lord will not lessen or lighten it for your sake: labour ye to be eased of the devils yoke of a profane carnall heart, and turne your swords into mattockes, deny your selves, get the Lord to change your mindes and wills, that so his yoke may become sweete unto you. And as the Prophet tells those Cavillers, who asked him, Why may not we goe to good Witches about our cattell, or things lost, &c. Goe (saith he) to the Law and to the Testimony; let that bee your touchstone, that will abandon both all will-worship on the right hand, and all profaneness on the left. If these give ye no allowance, know there is no wisedome in your witchcrafts, nor in your cavilling defences: So here say I, Goe to the charge of God, that will convince both Popish tryall, and tell you, that there is no Religion either in fasting before the Sacrament (although I doe advise no man to eate) nor in not spitting at the Sacrament, that much more will confute all profane contempt of tryall of our selves: let God speake, and let all men be lyers, both left hand profaneness, and right hand superstition must fall before the Ordinance. Oh! if men be so busie against the practice of goodnesse, when there is a rule to controwle them, what companions would they be, if wee wanted it? Howbeit even by this they shew that the duty is divine, because else their cursed spirit would never so fight against it. Thus much of the fift point.

Esay 8.20.

Generall 6. Whac it is.

The sixth and last branch is, what is that due triall which God requireth of every true Communicant, and in what things doth it consist? I answer, Due and true triall standeth either in the properties thereof to qualifie it aright; or in the object thereof, that is, the things to be tryed. Concerning which, first, I will lay downe some reasons why the Lord requires this triall in both respects. Then secondly, I will lay downe the due properties or manner of triall. And so with the use of the generall doctine I will finish this Chapter; ter; and in thoſe that follow, God willing, I ſhall handle the ſeverall objections to be tried in their order, one after another.

The Reaſons are theſe three. Firſt the plaine charge of God importeth it. For the word here uſed by the Apoſtle, is not a word which aimes at ſome defect in the meaſure of our grace onely, as the triall of light gold may bee diſpatch'd by weights which any man may uſe: but it eſpecially ſignifieth triall of ſubſtance, and ſoundneſſe of mettals, ſuch as onely the Goldſmiths skill can finde out: the Touchſtone and the Fornace onely can try gold, or ſeparate the ſilver from the droſſe. Even ſo, its not a common skill not eaſie worke to diſcover the ſoundneſſe or falſehood of the heart in matter of grace. There is nothing more hard than this diſcovery. Satan and Hypocrites can transforme themſelves into Angels of light; and make men to thinke them ſo. And the hollowneſſe and depth of the heart, and the ſelfe-love of it in eaſily beleeving our ſelves to be that we would be, & yet are loth to be, is unſpeakable. Nothing more eaſie than to pray for ſuch things as indeed wee would not have, if God would give, becauſe then our hearts and courſes muſt be changed; & yet we thinke we pray aright. Nothing more eaſie than to looke upon our ſelves in our outſide of duties & performances, & reflect an opinion thereby, that we are true worſhippers. No grace, but a falſe heart will counterfeit: and the depth of the heart is ſuch, that there is no ſhew of meekenes, innocencie, tenderneſſe of ſpirit, thankefulneſſe, love of Gods people, but a bad perſon may accommodate himſelfe unto, and act a part therein. The ſoundneſſe of the heart is very hard to diſcerne.

Reaſon 1. The Difficulty of this tryall.

1. To diſcerne hypocriſie from ſoundneſſe.

2 Cor. 11. 14, 15.

Secondly, although there bee ſoundnes in the heart, yet it is not alway diſcernable. As it is not eaſie to finde a Pearle in the dunghill, nor a needle loſt in ruſhes; ſo, its hard to finde out a little truth of heart and faith, when they are ſo covered and mixed with abundance of droſſe. Beſides, it is no eaſie thing, (although a man finde them) yet to walke conſtantly with God in the practiſe thereof. Its with us as with the foole, who not knowing the worth of gold, ſtoppes here a peece in an hole, there another in the thatch, and forgets it: So doe we ſlight that grace which ſhould rule us in each part of life; loſe the good things which have coſt us labour to come by. Its hard to improove the things wee have heard and learned and to bring them forth in due ſeaſon; they are to ſeeke with us, patience, when we are provoked: faith, when we ſee no likelihood of Gods hearing or anſwering our prayers, and ſo of

2. To diſcerne ſoundneſſe where it is.

3. To diſcerne our not improving of grace. Either in our privacy. 2 Iohn 8.

the reſt; as it is with tooles ſeldome uſed, ſo there growes a ruſt upon the gifts of God in us, for lacke of watchfull improvement. Sloth, and eaſe do fret into us as a canker, and creepe ſo inſenſibly upon us, that they marre us ere we be aware. The Talents of God which we have received, become unprofitable in us. The greateſt part of the duties we doe, is not the leaſt of them we omit: in the uſe of meanes and Ordinances, formality, and commonneſſe, unreverence, unſavorineſſe, defiles us: and the life of faith in croſſes, bleſſings, duties, is very poore and wanzing in us. 't were endleſſe to ſpeake of all. Now if it bee ſo hard to try our grace, how much hard to try our whole courſe, in which the wearieſomneſſe of our hearts doth tire us ſo, that the errors thereof in ſo manifold parts cannot be reckoned; as the ſinnes of our ſingle eſtate, or married ſtate, our callings, dealings in the world, lawfull liberties, company, ſolitarineſſe, with other innumerable occaſions: wherein as it is hard to ſurvey our ſelves diſtinctly; ſo its as hard to watch to our rule unweariedly.

Or in our outward courſe.

Much more is it hard to trie our corruptions.

To conclude, if the triall of our grace be ſuch, what is the triall of our corruption? Who can perceive the danger whereto the beſt lie open, by the unſpeakable ſweetnes of their perſonall and beloved ſinnes? How ſecretly doth Satan and luſt creepe in (as ſleepe to one warme in his bed) even to an honeſt heart ere it be aware? By what fine ſlights is it at firſt entertained, either becauſe it is but one, or ſmal, or ſoone ſhaken off; and having once entred, how doth it defile the conſcience? When once the tenderneſſe and ſenſibleneſſe of the ſoule; (which is the Sentinell) is gone: how ſoone doth ſinne grow upon it, and increaſe? That whereas at firſt it ſeemed a great thing to attempt, now it ſeemes little, to go through with it: and that which ſeemed little, now becomes as nothing: till at length it foulds up the heart in ſelfe-love and careleſſeneſſe, and growne to a cuſtome and falling ſickneſſe, that it is a great difficulty for a man to picke out an end in this confuſion of eſtate, or to know where to begin or where to end. So then if triall be ſo hard a taske, how due and conſcionable ought the practiſe of it to bee; ſeeing the Lord hath ſet the Sacrament to be the awer, and holder in compaſſe of our courſe?

Reaſon 2. Secondly, except we trie our ſelves before wee come: the Lord who ſearcheth and trieth the reins, will ſearch and trie us to our coſt, and litle to our liking. He will revenge our profaning of his Seale, with ſealing up our foule, & giving us over to thoſe evils in which which we preſumed to come; ſo that they ſhall become our ſcourges and penalties, to harden and defile us, and draw impenitencie over our ſpirits, that although we would we ſhall not repent. Perhaps if we may eſcape preſent judgement upon our perſons, to bee ſmitten downe ſuddenly with a thunder-bolt, or to bee plagued in our bodies and children with ſickneſſe or death (as thoſe Corinthians) we are content the Lord ſhould deale with us otherwiſe as hee pleaſeth. But oh wretches! To be accuſed with barrenneſſe for ever, with an inſenſible, dedolent heart, with a dead benummed ſpirit; to be ſtript of thoſe gifts we ſeem'd to have, to be ſent more emptie away from God than we came, to be pull'd out with that gueſt that wanted his wedding garment, and caſt into utter darkeneſſe: theſe are curſes ten times greater than the former. Thou eateſt and drinkeſt thine owne condemnation as Iudas did; the handſell whereof was this, that upon the eating of the ſop, Satan entred into him and fill'd his heart, ripened his treachery, and ſeal'd him up to a deſperate reſolution that he would finiſh it, though he went to hell for it. They that judge not themſelves, make worke for the Lord to judge them finally: and although it appeare not to men, yet the wrath of God abides upon them, and ſhall in time ſmoake out as upon Cain. The Sacrament is a ſpirituall myſtery, and cannot be violated, ſave by ſpirituall wickedneſſe. And whereas the gaine ſhould have beene great, if thou hadſt come prepared, even the enjoying of the Lord Ieſus wholly: now the judgement ſhall bee as fearefull, not onely to goe without him, but to drinke and eate hell and damnation. Of which more in the uſe.

1 Cor. 11. 30.

Thirdly, as we ſay in our Proverbe, leave is light: If we come to the Supper of the Lord, as becomes his gueſts invited by himſelfe: lo, we ſhall ſit there among his Angels, and eate of the dainties of heaven: we ſhall behold the face of his Majeſty with joy: we ſhall have our ſoules, within us, feaſting us with the conſcience of our obedience: wee ſhall not neede to feare ſadde affronts and accuſation: wee ſhall enjoy the ſweet fruit of our reverend and carefull triall: our faith and repentance ſhall there meete us: and if we faile in any meaſure of our hoped for welcome; the fault ſhall not lie heavie upon our ſelves, but we may be aſſured, that it is for ſome other end, for which the Lord deferres us; that at our returning againe he may give us an overplus. Theſe may ſerve for ſome reaſons to enforce due triall upon us. Reaſon 3.

But here a willing heart would faine know the properties of this tryall, Properties of true triall.

triall, and when he hath duly tryed himselfe. For answer to which, although in the Chapters following, this will appeare better in the objects of triall: yet briefely I will note some workes here generally concerning all the particulars, and so come to the use.

1. Wise. First, then let thy search and triall bee wise, and according to knowledge. Let the Law and Testimony bee the hammar, the Fornace, and Touch, to try thee in all, both thy heart and life. This will informe and instill such skill and discerning into thee, that nothing shall lightly passe thee without, both notice and due verdict: Thou shalt neither by loosenesse of heart judge evill, good; nor through blindnesse, or misprision, thinke good evill. This will let in light to thee to behold all things in their lively colours as they are. The Goldsmith will not easily be gulled in the triall of gold or silver. So if thou carrie this light and torch into the darke corners of thy heart, few either sinnes or graces shall escape thee. Else, thy owne false light, erronious judgement, prejudice, precipice, security, defilement, and the like, may soone deceive thee. And so thy triall may prove like Ahimaaz his newes, idle and confused.

Filiall. Secondly, let it bee ingenuous and filiall: Doe not thinke that the Lord onely enjoynes thee to search out the evill, and let the good passe: Triall of Gods people is as well of their vertues and graces, for their encouragement, as of their corruptions to their humiliation. And yet, let it also be impartiall. So abhorre a slavish heart of base feare causing thee to harpe upon the jarring strings of thy distempers: That yet thou much more loathe selfelove, to applaude thy selfe in any of thy corrupt and vicious habits or actions: But rather be as willing thy errours and evils be discovered, as thy graces. The true triall of a Christian is a middle betweene both extremes. The most usuall of the second, is the latter. Fewer offend in the other; and yet their danger is as great, because the true roote of triall, is the witnesse of a good conscience, testifying that there is grace at the heart, which a slavish triall denieth to it selfe.

3. Narrow and close. Thirdly, it must be very inquisitive and narrow; not hoverly and superficiall. It must not be like the mashes of a net made to catch great fishes, and letting passe the small. For both the good things and the evill are closely and deepely couched in the soule; Cursory triall will not search them throughly. Graces are as coales raked up in the ashes, and appeare not easily; or as a little corne in a great Chaffe heape. And corruption is as the core of a disease lying in the intrals; and as Gehazi his booty throwne into close corners. If the King

King ſhould ſend a commiſſion to a true ſubject, to ſearch Ieſuites, or Prieſts in a great houſe: they would take a narrow courſe both by belaying, and ranſacking the inner paſſages and roomes, for feare of eſcape or lurking: Sacramentall triall ſhould be ſuch. Not as the ſearching of friends houſes, whom wee very ſparily and generally looke over, or give notice before to remove out of the way that which wee are loath to eſpie. But as a man would ſearch the houſe of his enemies: And as we reade that the Papiſts were wont to ſearch for the Martyrs in all places, likely or unlikely, yea even the heapes or reekes of corne, and the haymowes, with forkes, ſwords, ſpits and ſpeares. So ſhould we doe our ſelves, as Searchers very glad and deſirous to finde what they ſeeke. And to this end, our triall ſhould be punctuall and painefull. By punctuall, I meane particular and perſonall, either graces or corruptions; which muſt naturally accompany thee. And therefore Chriſtian ſearch beſt attends Chriſtian Prayer and watch: looke what thou obſerveſt to peſter thee moſt uſually, either in thy ſpirit, or in thy courſe, that take note of, and make a Calender of it. Forgetfulneſſe and confuſion of memory doe much hinder triall. Note therefore both what ſinnes runne in the ſtreame and frame of thy life: and what ſpeciall evils beare ſway, and are moſt ſelfe-putting forth; and then the reſt will follow alone; and yet paſſe not by the leſſer: ſeeing thoſe which are but of a ſecond degree doe oft diſguiſe us, while we are bent only to marke the moſt prevailing ones; and ſo by ill cuſtome are unſuſpected. Few men there are in whom ſome maſterly ſinnes doe not beare rule, pride, ſelfe-love, worldlineſſe; or the like, to poyſon their courſe. Secondly let it be painefull: The iſſues of good and evill are as a ſpring of ſeven heads. A laborious ſearcher will therefore open them all, and take himſelfe tripping in all: ſearching the ſpirit within, the tongue and members without, and fetch in matters of humiliation from the triall of marriage, ſingle eſtate, Duties, Ordinances, company, ſolitarineſſe, liberties, callings, behaviour, and actions of common life. So much of the third.

Both in punctualneſſe.

And painefulneſſe.

Fourthly, it muſt bee faithfull and loyall, that ſo all the ſubtill ſtartingholes, and cunning deceits of the heart may bee found out; for ſelfe-love and falſehood will elſe bleare the eye of the wiſeſt. Bribes corrupt the wiſe; but not the faithfull: Sinne is a bribing miſchiefe, it labours to overthrow ſearch and enqueſt, that ſo it may eſcape the jury. But as a good Iuſtice, in taking the examination

4. Faithfull.

tion

tion of a felton, or rioter: will not bee gulled with each colour or faire tale, but will ſearch to the quicke, and drive him out of his trickes, and lay him open, becauſe he is for the King; ſo ſhould our triall be faithfull, becauſe it is for the King of heaven. Its for his honour; and yet alſo for our comfort to be true to the Lord and our ſelves: Elſe we ſhall finde as we binde, and the Lord will be froward with the froward, and ſubtill with the ſubtill. The Sacrament will not afford that peace to the falſe, which it will to the faithfull; with the true, honeſt, and plaine, the Lord will be good and plaine. If ſweete, gainefull, or naturall corruption bee ſo incorporate and beloved, that wee are loth to ſearch them out, and (like Laban) ſearch every where, ſave where our Rachel ſits upon her Idoll; the Lord will leave us to our defilement, and deprive us of the fruit of our triall. Now that our triall may be honeſt; obſerve two things: Firſt, nouriſh tenderneſſe of conſcience and uprightneſſe. Ofttimes many a ſecret evill of ſmaller conſequence may annoy ſome men, even a glance of the heart, or eye; when as a groſſer evill will not touch another. Its not eaſie for one that hath his glove upon his fingers to take up a needle or a little pinne, which the naked hand will eaſily doe. The tender eye will water and twinckle at a mote falling in it, as if ſome great hurt befall it: and the weazand will ſtreine at a gnat. Secondly, bee willing to take any helpe which may further thee to the ſearch. Sometimes a faithfull friend who obſerves thee; a ſtander by may ſometimes ſee that which a Gamſter ſpies not. Sometimes it will not be amiſſe to ſee and reade thy owne triall in the booke of a Croſſe; for each Croſſe hath her ſuperſcription, and will either tell us what grace the Lord would try or what ſinne he would correct; yet I ſay, the beſt trier is our owne conſcience and experience.

Pſal. 18. 25.

Gen. 31 34, 35.

Laſtly, let our triall be Direct; aime at the end of thy receiving the Sacrament, and the reviving of thy faith, or thy repentance of evill. Search out in thy ſelfe, either thoſe ſpirituall graces which are like to further, or thoſe evils which are indirecteſt oppoſition to a comfortable receiving the Sacrament. The Sacrament is a moſt ſpirituall communion with God; ſpirituall evils will moſt choke it, as infidelitie, hypocriſie, apoſtacy, unthankefulneſſe, falling to the creatures: let theſe and ſuch like be moſt purſued. Contrarily, the moſt ſpirituall graces, doe moſt cheriſh it; as daily faith in the promiſe, both of pardon and holineſſe, pureneſſe of heart, heavenlineſſe of minde, ſelfe-deniall, humbleneſſe, thankefulneſſe, and ſuch ſuch like: be ſure to finde out theſe; and ſo thy ſearch will ſtand thee in beſt ſtead toward the end thou aimeſt at. And thus much for thoſe properties of Sacramentall triall: according to which the particular object is to be framed, as in the following diſcourſe ſhall appeare.

Now for the Vſes of this point. Firſt, let it be terror to all ſuch, as (for all this) dare ruſh upon this holy feaſt, with unwaſhen hands, and with profanation or neglect, whether preſumptuouſly or careleſſely without triall. Be it knowne unto you; ye take the Name of God in vaine in an high degree, and are guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord, as tramplers of it under your feete, and crucifiers of him the ſecond time: Therefore he ſhall not hold you guiltleſſe. You boaſt much, that ye have received to day, and eaten your maker (as the Papiſts ſay) but you have eaten and dranke your owne bane and poyſon. This Sacrament ſhall be as that curſed water was to the belly of her who being defiled, durſt come to drinke of it, as if innocent. And as Eliſha ſaid to Gehezi, Went not my ſpirit with thee when thou runnedſt after Naaman? So, Is not the Spirit of Chriſt privy to thy profane neglect and bold adventuring, being in thy ſinne? Although the Lord come not really to plucke thee from thy fellowes in open vengeance, yet bee ſure, the Sacrament ſhall be as Judas his ſop to harden thee in thy ſinne, and ſeale thee up to impenitencie and damnation. Once a Monke did villanouſly poyſon a Chriſtian Emperour with the wine of the Chalice; but thou poyſoneſt thy ſelfe: How much greater is thy villany? Therefore, although I ſcare thee not from receiving utterly (to which by nature thou art prone enough) yet for the preſent, I admoniſh thee, abſtaine till tried and examined. But perhaps thou wilt object; Alas, I doe come indeede, for I am commanded to doe ſo by God, and by the Miniſter. I anſwer: So were the Iſraelites bidden to goe up againſt their brethren of Beniamin: But yet the Lord ſmote forty thouſand of them when they went. He who approved the juſtice of his own will, that ſinne ſhould be puniſhed; yet puniſhed them (Judg. 20.20.) even them who went about it, being themſelves as guilty. The queſtion is not about the doing of the duty, but the right manner of it So I ſay to theſe, that Gods Sacrament be received, is neceſſary. But who are they that are fit for it? God hath no ſuch neede of Sacraments, that he cares not now they be received: But moſt righteouſly he urgeth the duty, yet puniſheth the ill doer. Thou wilt ſtill cavill and ſay, thou haſt oft done thus, and art not yet yet ſtricken from heaven: I anſwer, the more is behinde; the Lord can ſmite with dumbe ſtrokes in a worſe manner. But durſt thou ſo abuſe his patience, and heape up wrath to thy ſelfe? But thou wilt ſay, I will abſtaine then, and ſo I hope to eſcape, for this charge concernes no other ſave receivers. I anſwer, thou excuſeſt a fault with a crime; thou canſt not thus eſcape, for God ſhall judge thee for both not comming, and not preparing. But thou pretendeſt, that its hard to try thy ſelfe, and thou art ignorant, haſt no gifts: Well, bee admoniſhed, Wiſedome is eaſie to him that will underſtand; thy ignorance comes not from ſeelineſſe, but wilfulneſſe. Thoſe whom thou canſt mocke as ſimple ones, can yet remember and repeate all theſe directions: and haſt thou loſt thy wiſedome in this buſineſſe? Oh! but thou ſaiſt, I am forgetfull. Why? Save that, thou haſt no heart; for thou canſt remember any quarrell, or wrong to reveng thy ſelfe. But thou wanteſt leaſure. Alas! the Trevent complaines of an ill pen, inke, and paper; But the fault is in ſloth, elſe all were well. For why? Thou canſt finde a day in a weeke ſpare to hunt, to game, to drinke, to bee in company, to ſit in the Alehouſe: if thou carrie thy corne to market, thou doſt ſomewhat elſe beſides thy buſineſſe: and ſo, if thy heart ſtood to this worke, thou ſhouldeſt finde leaſure enough for it too. But thou ſaiſt, Few doe thus, and thou doſt but as the multitude. Shall number and company qualifie thy judgement in hell? If thou wouldeſt be loth to ſuffer with them, bee loth to ſinne with them. And to end this uſe, breake off thy cavils, thinke not thy caſe deſperate; Say not, there is no hope for ſo ſaped a wretch as thou. Who can tell? Perhaps the Lord may bring honey out of a carrion, and even out of thy long contempt, fetch humiliation and repentance? I have knowne ſome touch'd more by the Sacrament than by any terrour beſides: That the Lord hath ſo long ſpared them in patience: they have concluded, he hath done it to breake their hearts. Perhaps the Lord will turne away his fierce anger, that thou periſh not: Howſoever it fare, be doing, humble thy ſoule, and chuſe (if thou muſt periſh) to periſh in thy triall, rather than juſtly to run hazard, and ruſh into aſſured miſery, by not trying.

Vſe 2. Exhortation. 1 To Miniſters. Iude ver 23.

Secondly, this ſhould be exhortation to all ſorts: Miniſter, and people, ſtrong and weake, all who would behold the Lord Ieſus his face with joy in his Ordinances, to ſubmit themſelves to this triall. The Miniſter firſt, knowing this terrour of the Lord; let him with compaſſion, plucke as many out of the fire as he can, by a care-carefull inſtructing of the people in this way of triall. Its not one of the leaſt objections which are made againſt it, that they have none to direct them. No bucket for this deepe Well: no man to thruſt them into this poole. How ſhalt thou anſwer the loſſe of ſo much bloud of ſoules, when God ſhall call thee to account? I know indeede that where the Miniſter is moſt faithfull, many people are contemners, but their bloud be upon their owne heads: ſave thou thine owne ſoule, and let them not periſh by thy ſinne. Secondly, let all godly Miniſters do their uttermoſt to debarre all open deſpiſers of this Ordinance, from partaking it: Though they have but ſmall power of the keyes of cenſure in their hands, yet let them uſe the key of Doctrine ſo much the rather, to ſtoppe as many as may be from running upon the pike of vengeance.

Likewiſe let all faithfull receivers looke to their dutie, and upon no colour, either of their knowledge, or former uſe of it, or other occaſions, neglect it, either for themſelves or their families committed to them. The Lord will accept a little endeavour, & judges, us not according to that we want, but that wee have, if there bee faithfulneſſe. And let none thinke that this duty is ſo urged, as if there were merit in it from the worke wrought; No, thy ſearching it ſelfe ſtinkes, and thy very cloathes may defile thee, if thou looke at thy ſelfe. But looke at him that commands it, and hath promiſed a bleſſing to it: that is, So let them eate of this Bread and drinke of this Cup: Let this welcome encourage thee. And becauſe I have already laid downe ſome properties of triall for thy direction: I ſay no more, but ſeeke the Lord in prayer and deniall of thy ſelfe, to helpe thee to put on theſe cords and ragges, to come out of thy ill cuſtome. And to ſhut up all; let me encourage all faithfull endeavourers to try themſelves: I know there is cauſe; for many tender hearts foile themſelves ſore in this worke, and make the remedy worſe than the diſeaſe. They ſay, theſe rules are ſo ſtrickt, they ſhall never practiſe them: and that therefore cannot be prepared; yea, they ſay, the more they ſearch themſelves, the more droſſe and ſcurffe they meete withall. To whom I anſwer, Firſt, let no difficulty of ſelfe-triall, in the point of the meaſure thereof diſmay any: let ſloth, contempt, and wilfulneſſe, bee abſent, and the Lord will both admit of their honeſt endeavour to trie: and alſo (the weaker they are) ſo much the more welcome them to the Sacrament, which is more eſpecially belonging to the weake than the ſtrong. Secondly, I ſay, Although by triall they meete with much corruption; yet better to be met with than concealed: Neither doe they meete with it to favour it, but loathe it; and they ſo meete with more corruption than they dream'd of, that alſo they finde a Pearle in their Dunghill, and more grace than ever they looked for: unleſſe ſlaviſh feare and unthankefulneſſe doe blind-fold them. Let them thereby the more praiſe God who pardoneth theſe their tranſgreſſions, and ſay, Who is a God like to our God? and then although they muſt adde, who is ſo corrupt a wretch as I? yet mercy ſhall drowne their ſinne in the ſea, never to appeare more. Therefore let them bee comforted; and looke what hath beene ſaid in the generall, touching Triall, let them wiſely apply to the particulars following, to helpe themſelves forward in the practiſe thereof. This much for the Vſes.

Mica 7. ult.

2 Generall. Obj. & of triall three-fold. 1 Eſtate. 2 Wants. 3 Graces.

Having thus ſpoken of the properties of triall: I come to the Object. And that is threefold: A Communicant is to try himſelfe, either, firſt, about his eſtate in grace. Or ſecondly, his wants, or elſe thirdly about his Sacramentall grace; concerning which, God willing, in the following Treatiſe more ſhall be ſaid in their order.

Chap. II.

Of the Tryall of our eſtate toward God.

Triall of eſtate.

Concerning which triall, although I know there be ſuch ſtrange ſpirits ſtirring in theſe our dayes, as take for granted, that all thoſe that are baptized, and live under the Goſpel in a viſible Church, are undoubtedly in good eſtate of grace without any more adoe; and therefore will reject this as needleſſe to try our eſtates by ſurer warrant: yet becauſe I know none of indifferent judgement, but abhorre their conceit: I ſhall take liberty to confute them with ſilence, and to proceede to ſhew what better triall of a mans eſtate towards God may bee found. Onely one objection of greater moment I muſt firſt remove out of the way, to wit, that the calling in queſtion of our eſtate towards God, upon every ſuch occaſion as the Sacrament, may ſeeme to inferre, that a Chriſtian eſtate is a very ſtaggering condition, which may eaſily bee doubted and ſuſpected, as alſo it may ſeeme to turne Chriſtian liberty, into a ſlaviſh and fearefull bondage. To which I anſwer, that it is no ſuch matter. The reaſon of the triall is this, Firſt, the Sacrament being a ſeale of the Covenant

nant of grace (as oft hath beene said) and no converting meane of the graceleſſe unto grace (properly) needes it muſt be, that every one who would finde it as a ſeale to his ſoule of the encreaſe of grace received, muſt firſt approve his eſtate in grace to be ſound: except the Spirit of God ſhould be made a ſervant of ſinne, and ſubject to the preſumption of hypocrites, willing to ſet his ſeale to a blanke. Things ſtanding in relation, import an excluding of ſuch as are out of that relation: Ex. gr. If the Prince ſhould graciouſly proclaime that he would renue the Charter of ſome Corporations in ſuch a Countie: No Village, Towne or Places that never had any ſuch priviledge from the Crowne, would be ſo idle as repaire to the King, for they are excluded. If the Parliament grant the King a ſubſidie from his ſubjects, no man that knowes himſelfe to be no ſubſidie man would prepare any ſuch mony for the King; for the buſineſſe concernes him not. So is it here. The Lord calls his free denizons by ſpirituall baptiſme, to renew the aſſurance of their pardon, peace, and adoption, at his Supper; and promiſeth there to all ſuch, a further increaſe in the graces of his covenant: ſhould then any be ſo mad as claime a part in this Sacrament, who never have beene baptiſed, or called, and partakers of the Spirit of grace at all? Now then how ſhall that be diſcerned? True it is, thoſe that are free borne, and true members, know it, or may doe, as Paul quickly could tell Lyſias, he was a Roman. But who ſhall ſtoppe the mouthes of Aliants and ſtrangers, ſuch as are of Aſhdod and Cham, when they come to pleade themſelves Iſraelites? I meane when hypocrites come to the Sacrament, pleading themſelves to be Gods people: doubtleſſe there muſt be ſome Rules of Triall which will not deceive; they muſt be urged to prove their Genealogie, or elſe be convinced to be counterfeits.

But be it granted, that this triall of eſtate concernes alſo ſuch as are Gods people: yet it followeth not that they cannot uſe it, but they muſt by and by be anxious and perplexed about their condition. No, farre be it from any to thinke ſo. The Lord affords all his, to ſtand faſt in their liberties, and to bee above the bondage not only of Popiſh or Iewiſh ceremonies: but of unbeleefe eſpecially: and to walke according to that they have received: For peace ſhal be to all that walke according to rule, even the Iſrael of God. Yea as it is ridiculous for any ſuch to ſeeke new grounds to build upon: ſo is it ſinful to ſtagger about the: old becauſe the covenãt of God is with us, as the Covenant of Noe, as the Covenant of the Sunne and Moone: yea everlaſting after theſe ſhall have an end. Farre other uſe are Gods people to make of this triall at the Sacrament. Firſt, many know not all ſuch grounds as their faith reſts upon, although they beleeve unfeinedly: ignorance may hinder them. Againe, although they had them in a readineſſe, yet by Satans deluding them with other diverſions to worldly objects, or by forgetfulnes, or being dazeled by ſome ſecret love of evill, or by the errour of others, theſe things may be grown ſtrange to them, dark and to ſeeke. Beſides, although it be not ſo, yet may it be a ſweete exerciſe for a beleever to be well skill'd in his beſt Evidences, and it may joy him to have the things revived in his ſpirit which hee hath knowne before, and eſpecially at the Sacrament, when they may moſt encourage him. Men doe looke upon their evidences of lands for more ends, than feare of their Titles. And yet I will not deny, but that (as the caſe may ſtand) the triall of a mans eſtate at the Sacrament may and ought to be anxious and ſollicitous: yea, and that ſo, that for the time he were better deſiſt than proceede: viz. when having ſnared himſelfe with ſome luſt which he cannot eaſily be rid of, he queſtions his eſtate thereupon: and till God have eaſed the hardneſſe and diſpaire of his ſpirit, through unbeleefe, perhaps he can neither perceive nor yet relliſh his evidences as he hath done. This may be one caſe in which this tryall may be uſed with ſome doubting and diſtemper: Howbeit neither is this ſo ordinary, but to be ſure not the only caſe. Therefore this objection is of no force.

2 Sorts of triall of eſtate.
1 Our firſt calling.

To proceede then: This tryall of our eſtate I would call to theſe two heads as briefly as I can. Firſt, to a mans firſt calling home to God. Secondly, to ſome eſſentiall markes either accompanying or following the ſame. Concerning the former of theſe, it ſhall not be amiſſe to give the reader a ſhort general view of calling, before I mention any tryall in ſpeciall belonging thereto. In a mans calling therfore, conſider firſt from what, ſecondly unto what, thirdly to what end God calls. Firſt the Lord calls a ſoule from an eſtate of woe and miſery through ſinne & curſe (common to it with all the poſterity of Adam wherein ſhee lay plunged, deadly; from a covenant (I ſay) with ſin, death and hell, wherein ſhe was wrapped. This he doth by the Miniſtry of the Law; which crying a diſmall and lowd alarme in the eares of a drowſie and ſleepie ſinner, awakens him from the dead. Being rouzed out of this ſleepe, it beholds a deepe gulfe ſet between the Lord and it ſelfe, ſo that it cannot come at him: By this meanes the soule is broken off from all her rotten propps either naturall through secure ignorance, or Religious through conceit of knowledge, or the old covenant of workes and performances. And (whether Publicane or Pharisee, before) this Law putting no difference, condemnes and kills a sinner in point of all his former life and jollitie in sinne, holding him under the arrest of Iustice in an estate of bondage, til it be brought to utter despaire in himselfe (more or lesse) of any redresse.

In calling 3. things, 1 from what?

Ephe. 5. 8.

cannot

Secondly, the Lord calls the soule to an estate in grace through the Lord Iesus. And this he doth by a most sweet voyce of the Gospel spoken in the eares of it while it lyeth in this Pit of selfe despaire. The which doth let in (by the degrees) a Spirit & Covenāt of grace into it: first in susteyning it from extremities by an hope of possible Deliverance: Secondly, by presenting the soule with an encreasing light & sight of the All-sufficient price of grace and reconciliation in Christ the satisfyer of wrath, & procurer of peace; Thirdly, by declaring himselfe fully appeased by this satisfaction, so that former anger is turned into welpleasednesse: Fourthly, by expressing his placable and pittifull heart to a sinner in an offer of a covenant with him; adding moreover, that hee would have him to be reconciled & receive his promise as freely as he makes it: Lastly, by enlarging his promise in the apprehension of the sinner both in respect of the infinite many good things contained in the same: as also the most free, full, gracious, faithfull heart of the promiser (loving, strong, and sure, which cannot lye:) I say by all these presentments of grace in a most apt, sweete, and powerfull manner: he workes in the soule such preparations of meditation, desire, esteeme, inquisition, restlesnesse of heart & unweariednes of meanes using: That at last this seede breaks out into fruit: so that the soule weighing all duly in the ballance, to wit, the worth of grace offered, the mercy of the offerer (beyond exception) and her unavoidable condemnation in refusing it; doth at last cast her selfe upon the promise, resigning up her selfe to it so farre, as to beleeve it to be her owne portion. 2. To what?

Thirdly, the Lord calls the soule from misery to mercy, to the end that it might enter into a covenant of holinesse; and become a Saint by calling, called to sanctification and the image of him that called it: That as the soule lives by grace, so grace might live in the soule. And this he doth by the voyce of the Spirit of Regeneration and Baptisme; The which by the immortall seede of the word, 3. Why? Rom. 1. 7.

sheddeth the love of God into the soule, to the end his seede may beget the image of God in it; By which meanes the whole bent and frame of it is changed, subdued and turned from sin to God; so that now Gods Spirit is that, unto and in it, which old Adam before was according to the capacity of the soule. This Power the Spirit of Grace workes in the beleever, because it is that Spirit of Christ which cannot bee divided in her parts of Reconciling and renewing, but carries the soule into Christ for both. More plainely and breefely, this Spirit writeth the purpose of the covenant of the soule, to wit, that it may have the law engraven in it, it may be cleansed, as by an inward new Principle, to walke in the Obedience of all Commandements of Law and Gospel, as compting them an easie yoake and perfect freedome.

Ierc. 31.33.

These three are wrought (according to the measure of mercy) in every called one: and are (not so much the markes, as) the parts of effectuall calling: and who so is thus called, is also in covenant with God, and by vertue thereof hath true right to the Sacrament of the Supper, for the growing up in the grace of the covenant. Howbeit because it is hard for a Camell to goe through a needles eye; and every poore soule cannot receive all this whole frame all at once to try it selfe thereby; I will helpe it a little, by taking it so into peeces, that each severall triall may enter in at the narrow doore the more easily; Let then the soule that would try it selfe about her calling, proceede in this or the like manner.

2. Triall of estate by markes of calling.

1 Marke Preventing Grace.

1. First, hath God called thee? Try it by his Preventing grace; canst thou say, That when thou thoughtest of nothing lesse than grace, yet God was found of one that sought him not; Did the Lord so mightily over rule and so order thy occasions, of education, company, acquaintance, calling, ministry, placing, employments, that in all thou sawest God spreading his net for thee, that thou mightest not run thy course, but be taken in it, and be brought homewards? Did the Lord, by this way of Providence, make thee of a dead, unsavoury peece of flesh, to begin to hearken after and savour the things of God? it is a good signe.

2. Secondly, canst thou say, That the Lord suffered thee not to content thy selfe with vanishing devotions, and groundlesse hopes or wishes of good: But by his word wrought thy heart, to see into thy corrupt heart and course. Did the Lord discover thee to thy selfe either in thy particular lusts, or generall bad course, or in thy Originall poyson of heart? Did he knocke thee off from all thy colours colours, shifts and excuses? Convince thee of sinne and curses, and cause thee to stincke in thine owne nostrils? Its a good signe: especially when the 10. Commandements did it.

Thirdly, did the Lord keepe thee from extremities in this case? Either from revolting backe to thy old lusts (as one weary of Gods yoake before the time) or rushing into desperation; or falling into a presumptuous loosenesse and peace of heart in this thy dangerous condition? I say, did the Lord hold thee downe under his hand of the spirit of bondage, till thy ranke, jolly and lusty heart were kill'd and tamed in thee? It is a good signe. 3.

Fourthly, when thou wast in thine owne sence as one hanging betweene heaven and earth, at an utter losse, joyleſse in any earthly thing, and yet voyd of spirituall: did the Lord yet in secret put some poore hope of not utter perishing into thee, and whisper thus, Yet what if the Lord will turne away his fierce wrath? And didst thou feele thy selfe by this meanes, stayd, till better newes came? It is a good signe. 4.

In the second place, I aske, hath God called thee? Try it by his Assisting grace, thus: Did not the Lord leave thee thus but ply thy heart with the word, and nourish thy feeble hope with more and more light in his Promise? Canst thou say this light was no Moone light, darke and doubtfull, but as the light of the morning, dawning and encreasing in thy soule? Its a good signe. 2 Marke. Assisting grace. 1. Mat. 24. 17.

Secondly, did this light vanish and fleete away into flashy pangs of joy, without any abiding, or did it draw thee to behold something in God, able to bottome thy hope as the Law was to unsettle thy rotten peace? Did it cause thy spirit within thee, to goe aside and hide this pearle, digest it, the worth, the weight of it? To ponder the truth and warrant of the promise, that thou mightest see how able it was to beare thee? So that thou wouldest not in so weighty a thing as this, leave all at six or seven, and trust rather than try. Its a good signe. 2. Mat. 13. 44.

Thirdly, when thy Affections were up in armes to pursue this grace, with a broken, hungry, heart and desire, felt'st thou the resistance of thy selfe and selfelove to breede in thy soule even the paines of conception, or quickning in thee? Did this cause thee to discerne selfe in the worke, selfe pride, selfe unworthinesse, selfe feares, selfe hope, carnall reason, cavills, objections? Feltst thou Satan heere to ply faster with buffetings and temptations, than (presently) the word it selfe could stay thee? Did this conflict of selfe 3.

againſt the light of the Word, ſo affect thee as the ſtrugling of the twinnes in her wombe affected Rebecca, when ſhe went to God for counſell? Didſt thou enquire ſtill for counſell, and by degrees labour to ſee the heavenly reſt and eaſe of a promiſe; the woefull reſtleſſe pudder of ſelfe within thee? Did this ſtill make thy ſoule more to loath ſelfe, and dive into the freedome and fulnes of Chriſt in the promiſe? Its a good ſigne.

4. Fourthly, when thou couldſt not feele ſuch an overruling power, in the word as thou deſireſt, but rather ſelf and doubting overruled the word: canſt thou ſay, that in this ſuſpence and darkeneſſe of thine, thou yet ſtroveſt to hold to the naked truth of God? To his faithfull covenant, in which he cannot lye; Saweſt thou enough in that to ſatisfie thee, although thou wantedſt a bucket to draw up this water out of the wells of Salvation? And did this ſuſtaine thee in the others abſence? Did the abſence of that thou wouldſt have, make thee ſo reſtleſſe after further meaſure, that yet thou didſt quietly ſubmit to be (the whileſt) as God would have thee? To be very glad, and boaſt of thy nothing, that the glory of grace, and the name of God might be magnified? That God might have his ends in meere grace to ſuch a baſe empty one, than thou thy owne ends in being filled to the brimme? This is a ſpeciall good ſigne.

5. Fiftly, didſt thou continue ſtriving thus, till the Lord drowned thy ſelfe and thy diſtemper both on right hand and left, in the truth of the promiſe? And doſt thou labour thus to hold it, according to it, as the truth is in Ieſus? Without hookes or crookes; reſiſting the dayly recourſe of ſlaviſhnes, eaſe, ſelfelove, puffing up, worldlineſſe, or any luſt which might defile the ſweetneſſe of Chriſt, and weaken thy faith in him? Are theſe markes in thee, true and ſoundly wrought? Then are they good, though weake. Thirdly, art thou called? Try it by the perfecting and fulfilling grace of God. Canſt thou then ſay, That the worke of faith is finiſht in thee with power and perſwaſion? Canſt thou ſay, if thou have beene deceived in beleeving, God hath deceived thee? If thou periſh by beleeving, thou art content? Canſt thou buy and ſell upon Gods Word? And doth the Spirit of the Promiſe deliver thee into it? Doſt thou finde that ſealing of heart thereby which fills thee with peace and joy through beleeving? Then is thy ſparke growne to a flame, and the Lord hath brought forth thy judgement to victory. Leſſe meaſure than this may yet be a true ſigne: but this is a fuller ſigne.

Eph. 4. 22.

3. Secondly, is the love of God in thy ſoule, as coales in thy boſome? Doth Doth it conſtraine and hemme in thy heart, to love him againe? 2 Cor. 5. 14.

To thinke no dutie too hard, no meaſure too much? Doth it worke life in graces, in Meanes uſing, and workes of piety and charity to God and man? Or is it a love comming from a dead faith: which will ſuffer thee to bee proud and ſelfe-loving, unmercifull, careleſſe, barren in fruits, worldly, covetous? Thy faith is vaine, and thy love rotten. But canſt thou ſay the love of God is a fire in thy bones, to purge thy droſſe, to kindle thy heart to all love, thanks, uprightnes, humblenes, innocencie, and fruitfulnes? Its a good ſigne. Iam. 2. 20.

3. Thirdly, hath God declared his righteouſneſſe unto thee, from faith to faith, both of kinde and meaſure? Try it then. For the former, thus. God hath given all his a double Portion: ſtanding in a coppyhold and a freehold; the one by grace imputed which the ſoule takes up by the Court Roule of the Promiſe, holding upon another; The other by a grace inherent, which it takes by the livery and ſeaſin of the ſanctifying Spirit. Try then: Canſt thou ſay thy faith hath both a hand to take the one and the other? To take both righteouſneſſe from faith of juſtification, to faith of ſanctification? Dareſt thou not ſever thoſe things which God hath joyned? Its a good ſigne of a faith pretious for kinde, if by the ſame faith, thou canſt receive both kinds of righteouſneſſe, though by a ſeverall conveyance. Rom. 1. 17.

4. Fourthly, try the meaſures of it. If Gods Righteouſnes be from faith to faith: it proceedes from one ſtep and degree to another: gets to it ſelfe more Promiſes, more evidences, yea ſtronger & greater. Canſt thou ſay, it is ſo with thee? doſt thou grow from faith of ſalvation to faith of governement? Is thy cheefe religion, thy living by faith? Is thy faith thy bottome for law obedience, and not thy Morality the bottome of thy faith? Is Chriſt revealed to thee from faith in his Prieſthood, to faith in his Prophecy and Kingdome, to guide thee and rule thee? Doth the peace of thy King ſo awe thee, that rather than thou wouldeſt forgoe it, thou wouldſt forgoe all? And, doth the Law of the ſame Spirit of Chriſt, which hath freed thee from hell, act all thy whole man, the powers and members of it, ſo that (in ſome meaſure) not thou liveſt, but the Lord Ieſus in thee, to doe all thy workes for thee? Its a ſweet ſigne.

5. Fiftly, Try thy ſelfe in the Bent and ſtreame of thy Spirit: Though thy errors and defects are many: yet if ſtill thy ſpirit be upright, thy Courſe (taking it generally) is ſound; thy frailties are covered, the Lord lookes not upon thee and thy ſinnes, but upon his grace in thee, Feare not: its a good ſigne, And thus might I be large. But I content my ſelfe with a draught in ſteed of many.

Triall 3. Fruits of calling.

Now becauſe this firſt tryall of calling, and of a good eſtate toward God, is more large and full than ſome weake ones can reach: At leaſt they may be diſmaid by the weightineſſe thereof: Beſides theſe, I will yet adde a ſecond ſort of markes, that is, ſome ſeverall fruits of grace as the ſoule may diſcover them more eaſily in it ſelf to flow evidently from faith of Gods elect: of this ſort are theſe following in which I obſerve no method, but name them as they offer themſelves, let every man take notice of himſelfe by his own earemarke.

1 Mark.

Firſt, if we abuſe no truth of God to wantonneſſe and ſecurity, its a ſigne wee be thoſe children for whom Gods Bread is prepared: For example, theſe are holy Truthes of God, and bleſſed encouragements: The Righteous fall ſeven times a day: The Lord ſees no iniquity in Jacob. Whom God pardons one ſin to, he will pardon all: No beleever can fall totally from God, God loves his when he afflicts them for their ſinne: In many things we ſin all: No man here can be perfect: but our perfection is the ſight of Imperfection: God compts our endeavours and willes for performances: Faith is not the excellencie of apprehending and feeling the good of the object, but our cleaving to a Word. All things, even ſinnne turnes to the good of Gods elect. None come to Chriſt ſave ſuch as are drawne by God. Our comfort ſtands not in our repenting, but beleeving (eſpecially:) and the like. Now the triall is, If theſe be ſnares to us, cauſing us to fall to ſloth and looſeneſſe, its a ſigne wee are dogs: but if they worke kindly to provoke us to jealouſie and more awe, its a ſigne of children. For example, the ſinnes of Gods people God turnes to their good, and he loves them when yet he afflicts them for ſinne, Oh then! how much more gracious will he be to ſuch as walke with him? Thoſe that truely beleeve are elected, Oh! how then will my ſoule ſtrive for Faith, that I may prove my election? Not be deſperate, becauſe if I be elect, I ſhall beleeve. In a word, when ſuch Truths are uſed for encouragement to the tender, not occaſion to preſume, its a good ſigne.

Prov. 24. 16. Numb.

Rom. 8. 28.

2 Mark. As Eph 5. 16.

Secondly, if we finde the Arguments of the world to worke in us by contraries: as for example. if when the world argues for looſeneſſe by the cuſtome of the times: we argue then for ſo much the more cloſeneſſe in walking with God: and then above all, thinke its a ſeaſon for us to draw neare to God. Pſal. 73. ult.

3 Mark.

Thirdly, if when we may (for ought man knowes) ſcape well and and avoid the marke of a ſinner: yea, when we are in moſt ſecret privacy from men, yet our conſcience checks us and keepes us as free from it, as if all eyes were upon us: And beſides, if the ſecreteſt paſſages of evill, gall and ſting us, although but omiſſions of ſome good, or defect in the ſecret paſſages of our ſpirit, wandering, remiſſe, formall in a Sabbath, in prayer or worſhip: if then we are brought upon our knees with confuſion, when men magnifie us for the duties we doe, its a bleſſed ſigne.

Fourthly, if we ſhrug and ſtart not at cloſe and neare Truths, as too hot and heavy for us: if we ſhun not information of ſuch, but feele a ſpirit joyfull in us that truth is brought to us even with the loſſe of ſome luſt, which the ignorance of it did nouriſh in us: its a ſure ſigne, that the more the Lord coſts us, the more we love him: and would loſe any thing for it. 4 Mark. Se Gen. 39. 20

Fiftly, if when we feele that God payes us home for any ſinne or liberty we corruptly lived in, wee then thinke it a cheape penny worth, and coſt well beſtowed, if thereby we may bee purged and reclaimed: and mutter not at the way of it. 5 Mark.

Sixthly, if that which ſets us on to ſuffer, bee the preſerving of the honour of God and the pureneſſe and power of godlineſſe, more than any reſpect of our owne praiſe or zeale; its a ſigne that we love the truth for it owne ſake. 6 Mark. 2 Sam. 6. 22, 23.

Seventhly, if Gods way bee not liked, becauſe it runnes in our ſtreame: but when our way runs in Gods ſtreame: If we preach not, pray not, worſhip not God, becauſe our ſtreame of credit, comings in, welfare, content to the fleſh, pleaſing of man, lyes that way: but our zeale and ſervice runs in Gods ſtreame, & fights under his banner, and good conſcience, its a good ſigne. For by this wee ſhew that wee chuſe rather that our channell ſtand dry when Gods is full: our crown, wealth, gifts be caſt into the dirt, ſo the Lords crowne may ſtand upon his head: than that our ſtreame and ends ſhould run full, and the Lords dry and empty. When we take no more care for Gods ends than himſelf looks for, abhorring to thinke God cannot ſpare us, except we ſerve him throughly with a craz'd conſcience: this is a ſweet marke in this bad world. 7 Mark.

Eightly, if we picke out and deviſe duties for God, when yet he ſtreightens us: ſo that when we cannot doe what we would, yet we doe what we can: if not openly, yet ſecretly: this argues wee ſerve God with our beſt wiſedome, and ſeeke not handſome ſhifts not to ſerve him at all. 8 Mark.

Ninthly,

9 Marke. Ninthly, if we so serve God, as none can, but such as wee in our condition: abhorring to serve him in a generality and with reservations. For example, If in bad times, wee onely rest in our faith and repentance, family duties and such as all times require: But serve not our time and Generation in the peculiar duties thereof.

Acts 38. Also if being rich, learned, honourable, Ministers, Magistrates: wee content our selves with such Religion as any poore, ideots, meane ones, and private ones may do: but for the duties of the rich as are rich, to honour God with our wealth, honour, parts, we are farre from it: This bewrayes us to be such as are nearer to our selves than God. The contrary to this bad signe is a good one.

10 Marke. Tenthly, if not onely we hate that calling and company, and occasions which admit us not to serve God: But rather chuse to forgo otherwise a lawfull calling, if to us necessarily encombred with conditions of an evill conscience, chusing rather to endure any streights, and to trust God in a pinching crosse, its a good signe. Many markes might be added, whereof good bookes are full, and the soules of such as are the Lords are convinced; as to love a Saint as a Saint, even a poore one that is so, better than the richest that is not: To be fruitfull in grace as well as gracious, to change no religion with the time; to mourne for sinne more than for sorrow, our owne sin more than others; and yet for both sinnes and sorrowes of others as our owne; to keepe the Sabbath closely, and with a thousand more: but these few I have chosen as perhaps agreeing best with these times, and because many are not convinced of them, as were to be wished. And thus much for the triall of our estate to God, necessary for such as come to the Lords Table.

Vse. Now I briefely end with the use of the Doctrine. First to all sorts Admonition in generall. better or worser, this I say, Trie your estate. All unregenerate
1 The unregenerate. ones doe it more fully, toze your consciences by the parts and marks of true calling and grace: And the regenerate also doe it, yet with more quietnes and lesse anxiety of heart, as knowing these markes belonging to them: The former sort labouring to get some sence of sinne, to rubbe their secure hearts to the quicke, and get off their deadnesse of spirit; awaking from the dead that Christ may give

3 Iob. vers. 2. ment serves not to be put into the mouthes of dead men, enemies of God and strangers from the life of grace: but into the soules of the living, that they may prosper and grow. How should such dare to receive the seale of a covenant of grace, being in a covenant with hell and death? Deceive not thy selfe: If thou be in covenant with God, the fruit of the lips hath done it, even the effectuall Ministery of the Law and Gospell; else thou art still as thou wert borne, in old Adams rotten stocke. There is no communion betweene lusts and Christ, betweene a proud, adulterous, hypocriticall worldly wretch, and grace. Trust to it, if the Lord never called thee, thou art not in covenant, so as by an actuall faith: if God never stopt thee in thy lewd course, laide it as a loade upon thy shoulders, presented thee with better hopes even the hope of immortality by the Gospell, digested in thy soule the value of this pearle till thou hast bought it. Except the Spirit of God have purified thy soule through beleeving: never count thy soule spirituall in the covenant, and therefore presume not upon the seale of it. Alas poore creature: No neede of these is wrought in thee as yet: no condition of them, no knowledge, no feare of the worst, no degree of desire, endeavour. 2 Cor. 6. 15. Acts 15.

If Gods deare ons, who have tasted his grace, yet find themselves so unfit to receive when they have fasted, prayed, worshipped and walked with God all the weeke long; where shalt thou appeare who never wert so in covenant at all? Renounce all thy false errors and counterfeit signes, colour not with God, (who will not be mocked) pretend not thy good meanings, civility, keeping of Church, paying of debt, being in charity, giving of almes, shedding of teares: these amount not to the markes of a calling: but say rather, Oh Lord, by all signes, I see I want the faith of the covenant of God, and have run into a premunire with justice all my life long, and each Sacrament hath seal'd up my judgement: God hath long suffered me, I dare heape up wrath no longer, I will a while cut off my selfe from the communion, that the whilst I may get the faith of the covenant. Doe so and prosper. Remember Miriam and how she was served; when she abused Moses, and would have yet abode in the Congregation: the Lord forbade her, saying, If her father had spit in her face, should shee not separate her selfe seven dayes? So doe thou, and make use of thy separation, to humble thy soule: And yet doe not abuse the Lords cutting thee off for a time, to lowre and quarrell with him, saying, This tryall hath hurt me, I had beene quiet and well, if I had beene let alone, and gone to the Sacrament, but this searching hath snared me, and now I am further off: No, this is nothing but Sathans delusion, who would for ever pull thee from the Sacrament: Num. 12.

Levit. 13. Prieſt have beheld thee, and cleanſed thee by beleeving. This ſickneſſe is not to death, but life: endure affliction in thy ſpirit a while, pray God to bleſſe this triall unto thee; repent with Miriam, and thou ſhalt returne with Miriam; and bleſſe God with Oneſimus, that thou departedſt for a time, that thou mightſt returne for ever. So much for the firſt ſort.

Vſe 1. Exhortation to Gods people.

Secondly, this is exhortation to Gods owne people, that even they alſo looke for this worke of trying their eſtate. Perhaps ſuch will ſay they have tryed it often, and hold it by faith daily, and therefore its needeleſſe ſo to doe: But I anſwer, yet honour this ordinance and renew your comfort, by reviving the memory and preſence of it: The oftner you doe it, the eaſier is the worke, and the gaine. Yee will object, Chriſt Ieſus is the ſame, yeſterday, to
Heb. 13. 8. day, and for ever. True, but your unbeleefe is great, your inconſtancy admitts infinite feares, waſtings, doubts, and diſtempers. Revive therefore the ſence of former mercy, and apply it each Sacrament a new: Bee not weary of getting daily more ſweetnes
1 Pet. 1, 10. in the promiſe, and proove your calling and election more ſure to your ſelues, as it is ſure in God: Pray for more inſight, ſavour and taſt of this worke: and injoy the comfort thereof at the Sacrament. The leſſe ruſt yee have gathered, the leſſe filing of your ſoule may ſerve. Take either the three points of calling before ſaid, which are the ſureſt, or ſometime revive the other markes and fruits of converſion: Doe not divide them, but try thy ſelfe by them all together if thou can: if not, then chuſe out ſome few concluding markes, and apply them to thy ſelfe: if it be hard, ſeeke to God to teach thee to ſearch them in thy ſelfe; mourne for any decay of them, and humble thy heart for it, and give not the Lord over, till both thou know that thou hadſt them, and (in meaſure) they appeare to thy ſelfe preſently: Recover thy loſſe, quicken
Heb. 12. 7. that hath wanzed, ſtrengthen the feeble knees and hands: and ſo doing bleſſe God, that by the occaſion of the Sacrament, thou haſt ſeene thoſe graces to abide in thee which thou thoughteſt thou wantedſt; for the Lords waies tend not to deſtroy, but to edifie, and not to turne thee off from the Sacrament with feare, but to ſend thee thither, with ſtronger conſolation and hope. So that thou ſhalt have ſmall cauſe to repent thee for obeying God: For loe, in this fat things, and fined wines: the which if the Master of the feast bid thee to; neither have any other, nor thy selfe authority to forbid thee.

But heere some will object: Put case many a poore soule doe stagger, and alledge, if these bee markes of a receiver, I am none, for I cannot proove my calling by any of these markes: But rather call into question, both my calling and the fruites: both faith and holinesse: for alasse, I feele not my selfe to live by the one, & I sin often against both law and grace, I am held under with lusts and corruptions. I answer: For grosser breaches of duty the Lord taskes thee to serious humbling and repenting, but not giving over thy confidence: As for ignorance, or infirmities unavoydable, they shall not hurt thee: if thou can say, I have beleeved formerly. I tell thee: the seede of God in thee is immortall; As appeares by thy longing after the Sacrament. If then thou suspect the worst by thy selfe for thy omissions, declining to ease, to world, to other evils, if thou desire to know the worst by thy selfe to vomit up thy morsels, and to recover thy hold upon the promise: if the fruit of the Sacrament be so precious to thee, that (so thou mightest find thy selfe an invited guest) thou wouldest not bee kept from the Table of the Lord, for the world: then I say, There is fire under the ashes, take them off, that it may appeare and burne out: Claspe about these markes (though but in poore measure) and when measure failes, cleave to thy uprightnesse, and let not Satan or selfe bereave thy heart of courage and hope to get by the Sacrament, but know, these must not beate thee from it.

Objection.

Answere.

Yea, (will some say) But when all is said that can be, If I want faith it selfe the chiefe grace that serves to cover all my unworthines, I cannot come. Now I feare I have it not; For why? faith overpowers, and prevailes in a true beleever above doubting, and carries the soule above all feares to the assurance and feeling of mercy, and fills the heart with comfort and joy; these I want, therefore I have no faith. I answer: Try thy selfe by that I have spoken about faith before: and let that stay thy spirit. Farre be it from us to affirme faith so to consist in the full sayles of perswasion, and in the flaming out of comforts, that where this measure is lacking, the soule is to balke the Sacrament, and lye downe in the cold Couch of the Law, and water it with teares continually, till this fulnes be attained. For to say truth, These are the effects rather of faith; (when judgement breakes forth for her unto victory) than the Act of beleeving.

Objection. 2.

Answer.

Mat. 11. 20.

One

Anſw. 1. By confeſſion.

One thing I muſt freely confeſſe: That there was never more cauſe than now in this forlorne Agefull of formality and diſſembling,(in which the devill and the error of the wicked would deceive the very elect,if poſſible)to preſſe upon the ſoule the neceſſity of faith with power. For,weake faith, hardly will beare out the ſtrong fiery darts of Satan, which now in this ſubtill world, are on foot to try our effectualneſſe of beleeving.Men heare preachers ſay,Faith is as true in the leaſt ſparkle of it, as in the whole fire:and faith may as much excell in infirmity to hold the promiſe upon former experience, as in the greateſt ſtrength,&c.

Now(as I ſaid before)what uſe doth Satan make hereof in hypocrites,ſave this? They neede not be ſo earneſt for faith, for the kind of it muſt ſave them, not the meaſure,and the weakeſt may be ſaved as well as the ſtrongeſt. I could in this reſpect wiſh,that ſo oft as Gods Miniſters fall upon theſe Arguments,they tooke as good paines to ſtave off the dogges, as to encourage the faithfull-weake ones. For when error hath once defiled a man in the root and truth of faith: then he growes preſumptuous to thinke that each wanzing motion & Pang after faith,is as good as that which is attended with ſelfe-deniall,and cleaving to the promiſe.Whereas faith of the true ſtamp,although it come ſhort of ſome feelings, ſtirrings,and much more that overpowring of ſpirit that quaſhes unbeliefe; yet the ſpirit of grace, puts forth it ſelfe in combat againſt their infidelity, ſets it in the forefront of Gods battery, (as Vriah was ſet by Ioab) maintaines no eaſe or ſloth in them,but rather mourning for their ſtanding ſo at a ſtay, with continuall care to proove themſelves to be in the faith, and their calling to it, to be effectuall. And in this warfare they looke for no diſcharge,till God have anſwered them in ſome meaſure.

2. By Solution.

But to anſwer the objection,& ſo to conclude,I affirme that not only the weake in faith, ſimply,but even the decayed in faith, yea the fallen into ſinne, if recover'd by faith, are not to be debarred from the Sacrament, till they become partakers of overpowring grace of the Spirit.It were exceeding abſurd for a Phyſition to ſay to one torméted with a burning ague,want of ſleepe,or like pain; That he muſt forbeare Phyſicke, & lie under his diſeaſe, untill he get more ſtrength,and recovery. What ſhall Phyſicke availe him after, if he die before? Or what needs it, if he be recovered?The Sacrament,I ſay ſtill,is rather the portion of the weake child,than of the ſtrong man,ſo that a looſe,dallying heart be abhorred; and

to

to ſuch this ordinance ſerveth. And (to ſay truth) ſuch poore ſoules neede not be urged to more ſorrow than they feele: for what ſorrow is like theirs who mourne under unbeleefe? and yet even ſuch (as experience proves) have found the Sacrament effectuall, to ſend them away much ſetled and confirmed. And ſo for anſwer of theſe doubts, and alſo the triall of our eſtate in grace, ere we come to the Supper, thus much be ſaid.

Chap. III.

Of the triall of our wants.

Next to the tryall of our eſtate, fitly offers it ſelfe to our view the Triall of our wants. The method whereof (God willing) ſhall bee this. Firſt to lay downe the grounds of this Triall. Secondly to ſhew the nature of a Chriſtians wants, and what ſort they are of. Laſtly, in the uſe to teach us in what duties the Triall of our wants ſtandeth. Tryall 2. Of our wants

The ground of this triall is manifold. Firſt, the neceſſity of Sacramentall trying of our wants, appeares in this, that as the Lord enjoynes all that receive, to prove themſelves to have grace: ſo he ſuppoſes all ſuch to have many wants therin. So long as this body of death, and back-byas of corruption cleaves to the regenerate ſoule to retard and weaken it, to defile, to diſable, to diſmay, to quench it: a poore ſoule ſhall never want matter to cry out, (even when groſſe evils are farre off) Miſerable man who ſhall deliver me? How ſhall I doe to get out of this my dead, luskiſh lazy and unſavory courſe? Who ſhall ſupply my wants? Now then if theſe wants be unknowne, how ſhall the ſoule be thankefull for the releeſe of them? How then ſhould a Chriſtian ſearch them out and mark them? In the duties of both tables, in the uſe of the ordinances, in the graces of the ſpirit, in the order of our whole converſation. For the firſt. The circumſtances of all duty, what wants have they? In the ground of our Actions, how ignorant are we of Gods perticular wil, how erronious in diſcerning the colors of good & evill, and eaſily miſtaken? how unwiſe in weighing the fitnes of inconvenience, ſeaſon or unſeaſonableneſſe, ſafety or ſcandall of our Actions? Why is it ſo, ſave for want of wiſedome & Iudgement? 2. In the manner of doing, how impure, unſavory, inconſtant, irreſolute? why, ſave for want of holineſſe heavenlyneſſe of minde, 2 things. 1. The ground of this trial 2. All have their wants. Rom. 7. 24. 1. Search. 2. Search.

3 Search. minde, courage? 3. For the measure, how remisse, lazy, cold, backward, and content with any thing? Why save for want of soundnes, integrity, and fulnes? 4. In the end, how corrupt, selfeseeking, forgetting both Gods honour, our owne peace and the good of others? Why, but through want of love, uprightnesse and selfedeniall? And so I may say of duties in speciall: How hard doe men finde it to keepe a mediocrity, and avoyd extremities? In worldly busines, to goe betweene loose carelessenes, or else extreame carking? either wholly improvident, or buried in the earth? Limit the duty of Charity and mercy, who understands himselfe bound to give according to his estate, but rather under it? In our words, who keepes a meane betweene silence, or jangling? In judging of others who shuns partiality, credulity, prejudice, censoriousnes?

Search 5. The like may be said of using the ordinances? In hearing what want of waking, attendance, reverence, mixing the word with faith? in the Sacraments, what seldomnes, unpreparednes, rashnes, and profanation? In prayer what formality, commonnes, and distrust? It were endlesse to insist in all.

The 6. In the exercise of graces, what carnality & sensuality is there to weaken the life of faith? What one grace of the Spirit, Patience, Love, Communion of Saints, mercy to the afflicted, Thankfulnes, Humblenes or the like, which hath not her langour and infirmity? As for the order of our Coversation, what weaknes appeares

The 7. not? Who observes Gods administration towards him or his, in Patience, Crosses, Mercies? Where is the man who lives by experience of former times? What want doe we finde of Quietnesse of spirit in taking up, or bearing our Crosses, if any thing tedious? Whom doth not prosperity puff up? And in family governement, company, liberties, buying, selling, and common life, how is it that Christians seeme as other ordinary men, because they know not what it meanes, to rule inferiors wisely, live with wife meekely and purely, ayme at doing or taking good, using liberty sparingly, and doing to others as we would be done to? Surely if wants be so rife in our whole course, how should a man who would finde releefe at the Sacrament, marke and survey them beforehand?

2 ground of this triall. The 2. ground of this duty of Triall of wants, is the wisedom of God in providing for the soules of his people, a supply of all their wants in the Sacrament of the Supper. A point which is yet as a Riddle to many receivers: who although they looke at the Supper of the Lord as a service of high devotiō, fit to hold men well occupied, pied, and keepe them from baſe earthly thoughts, yet alas! farre are they from once dreaming that it is ordeyned for a ſupply of all their wants. It needs a good perſpective to ſhew a man the Lord Ieſus Sacramentall, ready to fill the ſoule with all good things, much more to ſupply all our wants. Chriſt in the Supper is ſealed by the Father to give us all that his Promiſe conteines: Now if that offer proviſion againſt all defects, ignorance, unbeleefe, earthlineſſe: if that bee able to releeve the wants of the ſoule complayning that ſhe is unable to beare a croſſe, to enjoy a bleſſing, to live well in marriage, &c. What leſſe can the Supper conteine, ſave the ſealing up of that proviſion, and the unlocking of all Gods ſtore-houſe? The Lord in the Supper hath taken meaſure (as I have noted) of all the infirmities and wants of his Children: and although it bee not ſenſible to the eye of fleſh, ſave in a ſhadow of the Elements, (Bread to repaire ſtrength, and Wine to reſtore the Spirits) yet ſo it is, there is all the Lord Ieſus, (as one privie and ſenſible of all the wants of his members) to fill up every breach, to ſoder up every chinke and flaw of the ſoule, that can waite for him. How ſhould the ſoule then put on the Lord Ieſus his apparell to cover her, except her nakedneſſe in each part bee underſtood? Or, how ſhould thoſe Varieties of diſhes of Gods feaſt be fed upon, except each receiver feele his owne wants? Feaſts we know conſiſt of many dainties becauſe there are ſundry appetites, & each gueſt hath his ſpeciall longings. So here the Lords love in providing ſuch ſupplies in Chriſt ſhould teach each gueſt to enter into his own wants, except we ſhould thinke the Lord either ſo unwiſe as to abound in ſuperfluous proviſion, or to faile in neceſſary?

The third ground is taken from that ſpirituall inſtinct and nature which is ingrafted into all Gods people; and that is, to ſeeke the welfare of it ſelfe. Now that cannot be except it were ſenſible of her wants. Wee ſee it is naturall to each creature to procure the ſupport of it ſelfe by all meanes. The leaſt maime in a tree or plant or herbe, cauſeth a kind of ſence in the creature, for it will fill up the wound and knit the breach againe. The body of man beeing wounded, or the fleſh decayed, or the ſpirit, ſmite a feeling and compaſſion into the naturall ſoule, which lins not till by nouriſhment, cordials or Phyſicke, the want be repaired. So much more is it in the New creature; it cannot feele a want of grace in it ſelfe (except it be not it ſelfe, but fallen into ſome ſpirituall lethargy) but it is ſenſible of it ſelfe, & cannot lin till it out-grow it, and ſupply it by meanes, that ſo the welfare thereof may be recovered: Now what meanes are ſo like to eike up and repaire ſpirituall loſſes, as the Supper of the Lord? and how can that helpe, ſave by the due trials of our wants?

2 Generall. What and What ſorts of wants.

But to come to the ſecond generall; ſome may aske, What, and of what ſort are theſe wants? I anſwer, That wants are ſuch things as preſuppoſe true Grace, in the being of it. Wants then may be called either defects of grace, or decayes in grace. By defects I meane commings ſhort of that which ought to be: By decaies I meane failings and loſſes in that which hath beene. Defects are neceſſary aſwell as willing: but decayes wilfull and voluntary. Defects ariſe from ſundry cauſes; ſometime from unavoidable, or elſe unuſuall inabilities and impotency of underſtanding, memory, ſpirit and parts; Sometimes want of due meanes and helpes as of publique Miniſtery, private ordinances, counſell, fellowſhip or the like. But eſpecially I ſpeake of ſuch, as are cauſed by either the ſoules neglect of meanes by which ſhe might ſupply her wants, or uſing them leſſe frequently or fervently than ſhe ought: or elſe not wiſe and thrifty exerciſe or improvement of graces, occaſions, and experiences already attained. In like manner I ſpeake of decayes in what we have got, either for the kinde or number, or the meaſure and forwardneſſe.

Vſe 1. Terror.

Now I come to the uſes, and to direction for tryall of our wants. And (to ſpeake of two or three uſes ere I come to the maine.) Firſt, here is terror to all ungodly ones, they are wholy made of privations; ſpots are not ſeene in ſtained clothes: They cannot come to the Sacrament, becauſe they cannot try their wants. They have no wants to try; both becauſe they have no ſtocke of grace at all, and becauſe they are not ſenſible of the true Treaſure. Their miſery is, they have but one want, that is want of grace in generall, no God, no hope, no reconciliation, no faith. Oh! theſe are not as one who hath drunke ſome gall and wormewood, but are drowned in the gall of bitterneſſe, (as Peter told Simon Magus.) Act. 8. 23. They have no gaps or flawes, but lie to havocke and all is downe but the hedge and ditch: they have no wants or breaches, for all their life is a wide gulfe of diſtance, betweene God and them. When they ſee the godly mourne for ſome particular wants, as of memory, gifts to pray, to faſt, or of humility and the like, they doe not ſmite upon the thigh and ſay, O Lord, doe theſe (who yet have ſome good ſtocke of grace) thus complaine for a few wants, and am I no whit troubled that I want grace altogether? If the righteous ſo mourne becauſe here and there ſome want appeares, ſhal I be thus merry being a meere begger & a banquerupt? The one ſtreines at a gnat, and is troubled to ſee any gift of meekeneſſe, or of uprightneſſe in others which they want: and the other ſwallow a Cammell and ſticke not to ſay, They hope to doe as well as the moſt preciſe of them all. Tremble Oh ye wofull men! The Lord hath a feaſt of all good things, but you are incapable of them, yea bid him take them to himſelfe, they want none of his diſhes. They aske who ſhall ſhew us any good? good bargaines, marriages, fellowſhip at the Alehouſe, gold and ſilver: or if they be full of Gods hidden treaſure, it is from the earth: they are full and want nothing, therefore all that God powres into them runs over. Oh! doth it not ſcare ye that ye are bereft of any right to the Supper, or that whether ye come or come not, the Lord hath ſworne ye ſhall not taſte of his Supper? That he will turne ye back (at death) and bid ye ſatiate you ſelves with the things yee have gotten! Oh! be ſenſible and pray, or rather deſire others to pray for you, that if poſſible, the wickedneſſe and curſed barrenneſſe of your heart may be forgiven!

Pſal. 4 6,7. Pſal. 17. 14.

Luke 14. 24.

Secondly, here is admonition to all who would receive aright, that they beware of ſuch evils in this kinde both on the right hand and left, which might hinder them. On the right hand, let them be warned of two things. Eirſt, that they reſt not too much upon their quickſightedneſſe into their wants, their eſpiall of their uſuall infirmities; no nor yet their complaynings, mourning and teares for them, except due triall of wants doe attend theſe. There is a white Devill which will tell them: Oh! there be few Chriſtians who marke themſelves ſo narrowly as you! you are happy! No no, he puffes you up. Triall of wants ſtands not in theſe only: Their wants may periſh with them, if there be no more but ſight and complaint of them: and yet I ſay alſo that many come not ſo farre. Secondly, when the Lord hath truely humbled ye for your wants, ſeene and mourned for: doe not ſo overloade your ſelves with them, as on the other ſide to be ſwallowed up with exceſſe of ſorrow, as if the ſight thereof muſt needs drive ye from the Sacrament, and as if none were ſuch as you. Extremities are eaſily run into: but the Lord will have your ſorrow moderated and alayd with thanks and faith, that ye may come to the Sacrament for ſupply: Others are ſenſible of the ſame with you: and no wants have yet met you, ſave ſuch as are incident to the godly: the Lord would not ſhew ye your wants to queſtion your eſtate but to ſupply them at the Sacrament. Therefore be not diſcouraged, but argue thus, If the Lord would have caſt me off, he would have left me voyd of grace, and ſuffered mee to runne into groſſe offences, rather than humbled me in the ſence of thoſe wants which his owne may bee guilty of, that ſo hee might make mee better and according to his owne heart! If I could ſee, theſe wants ſhall turne rather to my good, than drive me away from God altogether.

Branch 3. Other terrours are alſo on the left hand, which this Doctrine meets with: The one is careleſſenes, the other fooliſhneſſe. For the former, beware leaſt we grow through a degenerate eaſe & ſloath of heart, ſurfetted with the love of ſome luſt or other, to ſhake off the ſence of our wants in a good courſe, and ſo fall to delight in a ſpirituall decay and commonneſſe of carriage, to thinke that if we can make a ſhift to rubbe through the day, weeke or moneth in a ſmooth manner without the taint of foule ſinnes; it skills not, although they be paſſed without any cloſenes, fruitfull ſpending the time, meditation, watching to heart, tongue and actions: If this errour once take hold of thee, it will turne thy wants quickly into ſecure contempt and looſe profaneneſſe. Abhorre it therefore. Se-

Branch 4. condly, take heed of the error of thy conceit moving thee to thinke, that the Spirit of Regeneration which is in thee, will act and provoke thee to improove the grace of God, whether thou ſtirre or ſit ſtill, ſleepe or wake. It is peſtilent dotage. True it is, the Spirit of grace is an active principle in the ſoule of the regenerate, it is a full eternall working Spirit of it ſelfe, able to ſupply all want, as Phil. 4. 19. Paul ſpeakes: Howbeit not whether we will or no: its a willing, not neceſſary or compelling principle, and is given us not to let it lie by, but by the daily uſe of meanes without and within, *eſpecial*ly by the hand of faith, to be continually jogged and ſet on worke. The ſharpeſt ſaw may lye upon the timber long and neere enough, but it will cut never the ſooner, except the lively hand of the workeman ſtirre and move it duely. How ſhall the Spirit of grace worke upon thee, outgrow and repell thy errors, amend and ſupply thy wants, while thou ſuffereſt it to lie ruſting and unprofitable in thee, both at other times, and alſo at the Sacrament?

Vſe 3. Comfort. Thirdly, this point affords comfort and encouragement to all Branch 1. thoſe who have tried themſelves about their wants. Firſt, hereby they may know themſelves by this marke to belong to God, becauſe

cauſe they are dayly occupied in the marking and laying to heart their wants. Poore ſoule I even that which moſt dejects thee. Alas! thou ſaiſt. If I had the perfections of ſuch or ſuch an holy Miniſter or Chriſtian, ſuch tenderneſſe and zeale, and heavenlineſſe of mind as I ſee ſuch doe walke with, it were ſomewhat. I anſwer thee: That theſe holy men and women whom thou honoureſt ſo much, came to their meaſure no other way than by feeling their wants; and if they do not ſtill feele them as they have cauſe, thy eſtate with all thy wants, is better then thers in all their perfection. Sence of wants is our beſt degree in this life. Which I ſpeake, not to hinder thy deſire of greater grace, but to comfort thee againſt them. Againe, I tell thee thy wants argue thou haſt a ſtocke of grace already, and therefore mayeſt be comforted.

Object. But it is but a poore ſtocke: I anſwer, the Lord is the maker of the poore and rich, and according to his admeaſurement, ſo is thy ſtocke, leſſe or more; and if thou have a ſtocke from the Lord, thou ſhalt not beare the blame of the ſmalneſſe of it, ſo thou ſeeke to increaſe and occupie till thy Maſter come. All cannot have great ſtockes: it is in the ſpirituall ſtocke as in the temporall. A ſtocke of twenty or forty pound for a poore man is as good as hundreds to a greater man. So here. Thoſe talents of knowledge and faith, nay though it bee but one, (ſo it be not buried in a napkin) which a poore ſoule hath, are ſufficient for his eſtate. Perhaps ſuch a poore Tradeſman, may by ſundry occaſions, want here twentie ſhillings, there forty, and ſo borrow and ſupply his wants, till his trade growes better, and his cuſtome increaſe. Yet for all this we count not ſuch an one a begger: But ſay thus, Alas poore man hee had never any great matter to begin with, but ye ſee he lives well, and brings up his charge, and keepes out of debt: and although he hath wants now and then, yet hee hath not ſpent upon the ſtocke, nor trades with other mens monies: Therefore it is good to helpe ſuch a one in his wants, to keepe him from want. Thus is it with a poore Chriſtian: he is not in want, yet he hath wants, but his ſtocke abiding. Againe, I ſay, be comforted in this, that thou art ſenſible of thy wants which thou couldſt not be, except thou hadſt a ſtocke. Onely they who have ſomewhat can thrive, becauſe they want ſomewhat to eike out their ſtocke with, and ſeeke more Ye ſhal never heare a begger going from doore to doore, to complaine that hee wants a featherbed, or a bedſted, or a ſtocke of money, or an handſome houſe, or good cloathes, or cleane linnen: Alas, his beggers coat, and cleane ſtraw in a Barne content him: his being in want, keepes him from the wants of a man that hath ſomewhat to take to. So here, A poore Chriſtian ſtocked with ſomewhat, is ever wanting ſomewhat; its an eye-ſore to him to ſee others have and himſelfe want: here hee mournes and complaines, Patience good Lord is wanting to my poore ſoule, I cannot be humble and deny my ſelfe as others doe, nor pray, nor be thankefull. Oh! beware leaſt your wants and complaints blinde yee from ſeeing your ſtocke and being thankefull. If ye had no ſtocke, we ſhould never heare of the wants which now ye mourne under. Againe, be com-

Branch 3. forted in another reſpect: God will ſupply all thy wants, if thou want not a ſtocke. He that hath, ſhall have more given him, till hee have abundance: But from him that hath not, ſhall be taken away, even that he had. The Lord is a bountifull Father, not like to the fathers of our fleſh; If a child be alway complaining to his father, what anſwer ſhall hee have but a checke? Thou art alwaies complayning of wants, I put all into the bottomleſſe purſe; But the Lord is a Father of all abundance, and will give more than we can aske or thinke: He upraideth no man, and yet gives plentifully: Open thy empty hand and the Lord ſhall fill it: and eſpecially at the Sacrament. Come in the true ſence and tryall of thy wants in Chriſt and faith for ſupply, and thou needeſt not doubt of ſupply. Onely be content with thy portion: The Lord hath not ſuperfluous grace, but he hath convenient. Although thou have not the richeſt apparell, coſtly plate to ſet forth thy Table, nor fare deliciouſly every day, which were to ſurfeit thee, and make thee forget thy ſelfe; yet if thou have honeſt ſufficiencie to keepe out of debt, pay every man his owne, and liveſt competently of thy Trade, its a great portion: He is a rich Chriſtian who ſits cloſe and comely to the Lord, though he bee not ſuperfluous. A comely Chriſtian hath cauſe to be thankefull.

Vſe 4. Exhortation. The laſt uſe of the point in that which chiefely toucheth the ſcope of the triall, and that is exhortation to all that come to receive, that Queſt. Anſw. firſt they try their wants. Queſt. How ſhall that be? Anſwer. By ſome directions helping thereto, either remote or neerer. The remote is, to beware of ſuch lets as hinder it. They are theſe, 1. When our eyes are more bent to ſpie out wants in others, than our own, &

1. Beware of lets. 1. lay a more heavie loade upon them than our ſelves. Strange it is how apprehenſive every one is of anothers blemiſhes: aske them what they thinke of ſuch a man, preſently his blot or defect offers

it

it ſelfe, but his good qualities are concealed. Why is this, ſave that our ſight ſtands rather in looking forward, than reflecting backe upon our owne inward infirmities. Nay, although wee come but once in their company, if there be any weakeneſſe in them, as of raſh zeale, or unſeaſonable ſpeech, paſſion, vanity, lightneſſe, &c. Oh we ſhall not neede to be taught what their diſeaſes are: whereas perhaps our owne are farre greater, though deeper and more ſubtilly covered than theirs, who becauſe they ſee not their errors, betray themſelves ere they are aware. Oh! we do but gueſſe at other mens, but our owne we know, and what helpes we have had to relieve them, though to ſmall purpoſe. He who dewells at home, ſhall have ſmall liſt or leaſure to looke after others. Another let is, falſe conceit, that our wants ſo they breake out no further, ſhall not prejudice or hurt us: All (ſay men) have wants, ſome or other, and the Lord will paſſe by them, and not looke ſtraightly what is amiſſe. But let us remember, That many a man who hath a pretty ſtocke, yet bearing himſelfe upon it, hath run himſelfe ſo farre into debt, that ſtocke and all have beene faine to pay them. Let no man ſlight his owne wants: a little errour not mended in time, hath brought ſad conſequences after it. Let us therefore redreſſe the ſmaleſt betime, and then the greateſt ſhall be prevented. 2. Let.

But to come neere the point in hand, ſacramentall triall of wants ſtands in theſe three branches. Firſt in a cloſe and impartiall overlooking our ſelves in our whole courſe, not onely when others watch us narrowly, but when we are by our ſelves: but more eſpecially to marke the inward paſſages of our ſpirits before God. And not onely doe this in a good moode, but to carry a wary eye conſtantly over our waies. Alas! perhaps many a man being at a Sermon, or under a ſudden Croſſe, or comming into ſome rare company, or ordinance: heares and ſees that which for the time ſmites him, and makes him lift up his hands and ſay, I ſee I am not as I ſhould bee (God helpe) but full of wants, too light, earthly, formall, &c. But when once they are come into their old Elements alas! they are as Saint Iames his foole, who turning his backe, forgets of what ſhape he was, or what ſpots he had. Therefore its a needefull charge, to heede every part of our life, to ſee where our want lies moſt: & as ſhe ſought where his chiefe ſtrength lay, ſo we where our chiefe weakenes lies. Sometimes alſo (to prevent ſelfe-love) to get ſome truſty friend who can tell us where hee thinkes the fence is loweſt, inuring our ſelves to be moſt patient and thankfull Wherein triall of wants ſtands. 1. Inquiry. Iudg. 16. 16.

full when our chiefe follies are told us. But our nature is rather to feede upon our praiſes. What poore man is ſo madde as to deny a rich friend to ſee his bare walls, or tell him of his empty purſe, if he knew him preſently ready to ſupply him? Therefore let us ſearch our ſelves in every corner; in our worſhipping of God ſee what wandrings, deadnes; in our communion what coldnes & uncheerefulneſſe; in our callings what commonneſſe and earthineſſe: in our companies what unprofitableneſſe there is; And it will be hard, but if we fetch from every part, we ſhall make our wants an heape.

2 Iudging our ſelves.

Secondly, after inquiſition of our wants, wee ſhould judge our ſelves for our wants; count them our eyeſores, and matter of deepe offence and ſorrow to us. Oh! that there ſhould bee ſuch a falling ſickneſſe in me of anger and techineſſe, to blemiſh my grace. As Bathſheba takes up Solomon with indignation, ſo ſhould we our ſoules, What, O the ſonne of my wombe, and of my deſires! ſhould Kings drinke wine, &c. So ſay thou. What oh my poore ſoule, ſhalt thou who feareſt God, bee ſo waſpiſh, ſo concited, ſo cold, ſo looſe in duty, ſo carnall, ſo wandering! Oh! Should ſo many vowes, prayers experiences, and reproaches by my infirmities, prevaile ſo little! Oh! mee thinkes, if I had ſtrength to hold my heart cloſe to God one day together with delight and ſavour, how joyfull ſhould I be at night? how many ſad checkes meete I in the day for my unſavory, barren wandering, and wearineſſe of good thoughts and affections! How lie I open as a thorow-fare to Satan in baſe thoughts and deſires, till I am ſnared? What many opportunities have I of doing and taking good when I meete with better and holier ones than my ſelfe, ſuch as ſtand with their moulders ready to catch any good ſpeech! And for lacke of wiſedome, love and grace, I vaniſh and am as ſapleſſe as the white of an egge without ſalt! Oh! How uncomely a thing is this, and how it diſguiſeth me! Oh Lord thou art privy how weariſome I am to my ſelfe by meanes hereof! As ground of an ill temper mends not with coſt, but upbraides the owner with barrenneſſe, ſo doth my heart caſt in my teeth all Gods coſt. I am as one in chaines by my wants, as if I of all others were foreſtalled from grace and welfare: others I ſee with my eyes daily out-grow their ignorance, their weake gifts in praye. and conference, their impatience under croſſes: Oh! how wiſe they grow, how skilfull, how wary, how fit to bee examples to others, how above the world? ſo that it ſcarſe appeares that ever they were of ſuch weakeneſſes before. Oh! doubtleſſe they they have got the ſtarte of me, for I feare as one once behind and ever behind; once techie fooliſh, and ever ſo: How ſhall Gods grace ever get honour by my thrift and forwardneſſe? Could I attaine to fill up my wants and breaches with the graces of ſuch and ſuch Chriſtians, how might I beſeeme my calling and place? Thus ſhould our wants bee as pricks in our eyes, and as thornes in our feete, to cauſe us to ſit uneaſily whereſoever we become. This indignation at our wants, upon our continuall eying and obſerving them, would purge us of ſelfe-love and conceit of our own worth and forwardneſſe, and provoke us to an earneſt ſeeking out for ſupply by any meanes whatſoever.

And that is the third and laſt rule: that we have theſe our wants ready ſummed up and at hand, when the Lord is making toward us with his Sacrament. If Naaman preſently upon converſion, had his hand upon his owne ſore, viz. his likelineſſe to correſpond with idolatry which yet he loathed: how ſhould we have our wants alway before us? How ſhould we pray, Herein the Lord be mercifull to me, (not when I goe to Rimmon) but when I goe to his Temple and Sacrament; (where the Lord Ieſus his fulneſſe of grace for grace, and according to all his members wants, is preſent (that as I feele my wants of grace to gap me, my unfitneſſe for marriage, for family duties, my abuſing of liberties, &c. So the Lord Ieſus would there meete me with his ſpeciall ſuplyes. Oh! if it were thus, how ſhould our hearts be on wing at the Sacrament, and how ſhould the fulneſſe of him who filleth all in all, both ſhame us for our unſutableneſſe to ſuch an head, raviſh us with his grace and proviſion, and transforme us from wanting to abounding, through faith in his promiſe! Herein Lord be mercifull to me, in that I loath pride, but it will not away: Thou bidſt mee ſhine to others in holy converſation, but for lacke of pureneſſe, I reflect my beames upon my ſelfe: Thou bidſt me converſe in heaven, and loe, my baſe affections are ſo glued to my gaine, and my thoughts to the earth, that I ſeeme to be as a bird whoſe wings are broken: What ſhall I doe then? Shall I ceaſe to ſhine, Shall I ceaſe to be heavenly becauſe of my wants? No Lord, but herein be gracious that I may ſhine with humility, and be above the world: Thou haſt promiſed that thou our God ſhalt ſupply all our wants, and doe for us above all wee can thinke or aske, Lord thy Sacrament is thy Seales: Seales include all Promiſes or Covenants: I ſee thee not with my eye, but in thy Promiſes: Lord ſeale them up to my weake faith: in this ſupply

ſupply of my want above all other, Lord ſhalt thou binde mee to thee for ever. Let others that want knowledge, finde a ſupply of it, but I want lowlineſſe, thankefulneſſe, ruling of my tongue and paſſions: oh let mee have my ſupply, each member her owne fulfilling; for every ſoule beſt knowes her owne ſorrow, and a ſtranger ſhall not enter into her joy. Thus come to the Sacrament in the triall of wants, and there waite and give not the Lord over till hee have anſwered thee, or given thee ſome handſell of ſupply, till more come; and ſo ſhall this direction make thee bleſſe God for the fruit of this Sacrament. More I might have added: but I conſider I ſhall meet with a fuller ground of enlarging my ſelfe when I come to the 5. Sacramentall Grace of deſire: To which I referre the carfull Reader: becauſe the grounds of this and that Chapter do well helpe to the underſtanding and practiſe of each other. And thus much of the triall of our wants.

Chap. IIII.

Of Sacramentall Graces: and firſt of Knowledge meete for the Sacrament.

The 3. triall of Grace.

THe third thing requiſite to be tryed by every Communicant ere he come to the Table of the Lord, is, Whether he hath all thoſe Sacramentall graces of the Spirit, meet for him that is invited to the Supper or no. Which graces are theſe five. First, Knowledge. 2. Faith. 3. Repentance. 4. Love. 5. Deſire or hunger after the Sacrament. Which I mention, firſt that the reader may underſtand thoſe queſtions which follow about them in generall. Which when I have cleered, I ſhall come to the firſt Grace of knowledge, and theſe two ſhall confine this Chapter.

Some QQ cleered.

The 1. Queſt. Why muſt our graces be alſo tryed? Anſw. Becauſe it is the ſureſt way to proove the former trialls to be ſecond. Its not enough that a man be Religious, and know his wants; But he muſt alſo be furniſht and in readineſſe with thoſe graces which are to bee excerciſed for the receiving of the Supper aright. A workeman muſt not onely bee skilfull of his trade, but likewiſe have all his tooles fit to worke in his trade, ready whetted and ſharpened for the nonce. Its not enough that hee who will buy a purchaſe be a man of ability, but that hee have his monies ready to tender upon the ſurrender, or taking poſſeſſion.

The 1. Why graces tried.

Anſw.

2. Queſt:

2. Queſt. Why are theſe five culled out from amongſt the reſt? Are not all other ſanctifying graces of the Spirit as eſſentiall as theſe? I Anſwer. All are as eſſentiall to a Chriſtian as theſe, becauſe hee ought to be no ſtranger to any gift of ſanctification in his meaſure: Howbeit all are not ſo Sacramentall (as I may ſay) becauſe all doe not ſo immediatly concerne the Act of receiving, as theſe mentioned. As it is needfull that who ſo uſeth any other Ordinance, have all graces for kinde, yet ſome one is more directly exercized in faſting, another in hearing, in conference. Queſt. 3. Are all theſe five equally neceſſary to receive well? Anſwer. No, not in the Act of it: for faith is the moſt chiefe and immediate grace of all the reſt for this worke, becauſe its the Appetite, Stomacke, and hand of receiving Chriſt to the ſoule.

Queſt. 2. Why theſe five? Anſw.

Que. 3. Are all theſe of equall neceſſity. Anſw.

Yet all the reſt are alſo needefull in their kinde, partly as Graces antecedent, partly as Attendant and Conſequent: for neither can Faith ſtand without knowledge, nor be approved without Repentance. Againe, in the Sacrament are more Relations than one: there is one from God to us to give us his Sonne, another from us to him, to returne our covenant: a third from each of us to another. That is, to increaſe in communion: No wonder then that in ſo many reſpects many graces are alike, (not equally) neceſſary: As in the act of going to a feaſt there are many complements required for the better doing of it, as attire decent, comely carriage, love and courteſie, but appetite is the principall: ſo here. Queſt. 4. Are theſe graces thus called, as if onely ſerving for the Sacrament, and then out of date? I anſwer, No, they are to bee uſed according to their object, Chriſt Ieſus and the promiſe, yeſterday, to day, and for ever: But in ſpeciall then: becauſe there Chriſt is ſealed to the ſoule, though the ſoule is alway to feede upon him as promiſed, both for daily pardon and ſtrength: Hee that will have his Armour to ſhow at the Training, or that will bring it into the field in the day of battle, muſt have it lie by him all the yeare long: The odds is, At the time of uſe, hee muſt put it to ſcouring, and buckle it on in cloſer manner and in good earneſt, than at other ſeaſons.

Heb. 13. 8.

Theſe generalls premiſed, I come to the firſt of theſe Graces, viz. Knowledge. Touching which I would handle theſe three points. Firſt, why knowledge is to bee had and tried for the Sacrament? Secondly, what knowledge for kind or meaſure is to be had? Thirdly, how ſhould a man try himſelfe about his knowledge? After which the uſe ſhall be applied of all the three. For the firſt, Knowledge ledge must be had and revived at the Sacrament. We know we offer up to the Lord a sacrifice of praise for the Lord Iesus. Is it a sacrifice, and shall it have no eyes? Durst any Iew have brought a Exo. 12 5. Paschall Lambe to God, maimed, halt, evilfavoured, but especially blinde? Say but one eye had beene out? especially if both? How dare wee then bring a service to God without the eye of knowledge? Againe, if it be an Eucharist or a thanksgiving, how shall we prayse God for that we know not: If we know not Christ, nor Reason 2. his Sacrament, how shall we thanke God, or remember his death? 1 Cor. 10. 18. Further, if the eye be blind and darkenes (which is the light of the whole body) how fearefull is that darkenesse? What a Sacrament Reason 3. is that, which requiring light in every part thereof, for the receiving it well, yet hath no knowledge at all brought unto it, to enlighten the mystery of it, and discouer each corner clearely? Besides, if the putting out of the right eye of the body, was such a reproach to all Israel, what then is the spirituall putting out of both, Reason 4 to the communion of Saints? Solomon telles us that without know- 1 Sam. 1 1. 2. ledge the heart is naught. Who dare goe to the Sacrament with a naughty heart, when God calls there are much as in any duty, My Prov. 19. 2. sonne give me thy heart? If we reade the 1 Cor. 11. 20. we shall see that when Paul went about to reforme the abuses of Corinth in Prov. 23. 26. their love feasts, he doth it by the light of the Ordinance: q. d. If 1 Cor. 11. 20. ye can finde any such corruption in the first institution, goe on: but if knowledge convince you, leave off your corruption. Excellent is 2 King. 23. 21. that of Iosiah, 2 King. 23. 21. Where he bid them keepe the Passeover according to all that which is written in the booke of the Covenant. If the patterne of the Covenant must be before their eye so oft as they come to eate the passeover (and no doubt the Priests and Levites did then take occasion to reade over and revive the booke of the Law, and the institution especially) how much more ought the knowledge of the will of God and the supper by name, be planted in all that receive it? And if that of the Apostle hold true in the smalest duties, how much more is this, Whatsoever is Rom. 14. 23. not of faith is sinne? meaning of sound knowledge.

Three points to be handled. 1 Why is knowledge to be had? Reaſon. 1.

Other reasons. 1. And there is good reason of it also: First, the Supper is Christ in a mystery: there are more mysteries in Christ Sacramentall than verball: Not to speake of all those things which I have noted in the former Treatise, consider this: The Supper conteines the union of Christ Emanuel God made flesh: The mystery of Sacramentall union of Christ with the Elements: The mystery of Christ Sacramentall cramentall united to a beleeving ſoule. The myſtery of faith in apprehending to it ſelfe thoſe particular benefits offred in the Sacrament, whereof not one is ſeene to the eye, but onely in a promiſe. Now tell me, doe all myſteries of naturall, civill trades, arts, require ſuch skill ere we can be better for them; and can we looke to receive this myſtery without knowledge?

Secondly, knowledge is the key of all other things needefull for preparation. How ſhall a man examine himſelfe in generall, try his eſtate by Law or Goſpel, or ſearch out his wants, ſave by knowledge of them? Not to inſiſt in the graces that follow: whereof faith conſiſteth, partly of a ſpeciall convincement of the underſtanding: and deſire of the Sacrament preſuppoſeth a knowledge of ſome thing amiable to the ſoule: (of unknowne objects there is no deſire.) ſo I might ſay of the reſt; knowledge therefore is eſſentiall to the Sacrament. When Paul prayes that the Epheſians might encreaſe in faith: he begins with the enlightning part of the ſoule: Chap. 1. Ver. 17. That ye being enlightened (ſaith he) in your mindes, may acknowledge him and the hope of his calling, &c. So that true knowledge is the roote of all true ſavour of the grace or graces of God. If thou kneweſt the gift of God, Iohn 4. thou wouldeſt have done ſo or ſo; So, if a man knew the Sacrament how would hee love it? But not to know it, includes a neceſſitie of not beleeving, or well receiving it. The ſecond. Eph. 1. 17, 18 Iohn 4. 10.

Thirdly, the fearefull penalty threatned in the word againſt bad receivers, is by name annexed to the not diſcerning of the Lords body. Now though I grant there is more in that than meere ignorance, yet that is one mother root of not diſcerning. For what is that which cauſeth Popiſh prophane ones, yea hypocrites to come to the Sacrament, as to common bread and wine in the ſhop or cellar, ſave that all colours are alike in the darke, and ignorance puts a difference betweene naturall things and ſpirituall? If knowledge then teach to diſcerne the body of the Lord, and to quit the ſoule of all this threat and vengeance, how needefull is it? The third. 1 Cor. 11. 29.

Fourthly, the Lord hath (no doubt) ordeined, and the Church moſt wiſely made uſe of this ſecond Sacrament of growth, that by occaſion of it ſhe might take notice of the thrift of her children in the doctrine of the foundation, and by name of Baptiſme, and ſo conſequently of ſuch things as they have beene taught in the Miniſtry. Alas, The Preacher followes not (nor can) all ſuch to their houſe as have heard him catechize or preach, to demand an account The fourth.

of his labours,(as were to be desired.)If then there were not some awe and bridle put upon men by the Church (which yet alas! few make use of among our Ministers)how should the Minister know the plight of his poore people from their baptisme to their grave? Though I grant,private visitation is needfull: but what one of an hundred looke after it of themselves till their deathbed? Now the Sacrament is so holy an act of worship that few are so basely vile as not to confesse that there ought to be some more than common scrutiny and search what knowledge they and theirs have gotten. Which confession prooves knowledge to be most necessary.

Objection. 1. But as the slothfull are curious,so the ignorant are cavillers, and first they object,that devotion would doe better with the Sacrament, than knowledge,especially for meane folke who have their trades to looke after, and being unbooke-learned cannot comprehend such depths as these. And therefore it were better that they did adore them with devotion, than search into them. I answere still, Cursed is all devotion with God, which is without knowledge;the heart of such is as sapelesse and barren of good, and as full of rottennesse as the most profane mans is, in Gods esteeme:Good meanings, and devotions,if it lye in Gods way and be full of eyes, not blinde and ignorant, are most pretious things: But without knowledge, selfe-deniall, and faith to enlighten the soule,devotion is as Sampsones bestirring himself when his eyes were put out; he was fit for nothing save to run the round and grind in the Mill. So doe devout ones,they are ever in motion, and never the nearer. Devotion of this kind is fittest for Papists, who are under a strange language, and a worship of mans braine, having no footing in the word: its best for them that know not what sacrifices they offer, but like fooles they know not that they doe evill: Its fit for the Masse, and for such like trash: But for the Sacrament its most unsavory. And as for their cavill,they are unlearned, and have trades to looke to: I grant, and therefore we require not of all, the like measure of knowledge: so there be a teachable heart willing to learn. If these men could from their trads argue as strongly against Alehouses and drinking, it were well. Sure it is, if the time which they spend there were spent in getting knowledge, as meane as they are, their trades would not keepe them from it. But what basenesse will not men stoope to, yea abase themselves to hell in their cavills, so they may live still in their profaneneſſe! I doe not allow any who are weary of their trades under pretence of hearing ring, or getting knowledge; but I say, trades neede not hinder from a diligent attendance upon the meanes, if the heart bee good. And as for the mysticalnesse of the Sacrament, it is so to such as plow not with Gods heifer, nor submit their carnall reason to the revealing of the Spirit: Otherwise (God be thanked) there is greater obscurity at this day, in matters lesse essentiall, than the most weighty. So that were it not for the meere sloath and profanenes of men, there neede bee no such complaint of religious difficulty. But the contempt of men, to whom Christ is hidden, might justly both deprive them of meanes, that so they might complaine for somewhat. But to end, one would thinke, that these men should reason contrarily and say; If I be so seely, and the Sacrament so darke, what an honour and praise were it for mee a simple man to have more skill and knowledge in it, than others above my ranke? Surely in other matters of hardnesse men dispute so: onely in these they are content to let all goe beyond them, yet God be thanked, there want not even amongst the seelieſt Christians, many whom God hath made wiser in his matters than their ancients and betters in worldly wisedome: that by these, the cavils of the other might be confuted.

Iudge 16.

2 Cor. 4.3.

1 Cor. 20. Psal. 119.99, 100.

To conclude, others alledge, For ought they see, they who have most knowledge of religion, and can talke of it best, are as bad in their lives, as they who have none: Therefore they thinke, the matter rests in conscience, not in knowledge. I answer, It is true, that they who know and obey not, doe lay a great block in the way of the ignorant. But let them speake, Is it their ignorance that makes them better? No surely. Well then, neither is knowledge in the fault that the other is so bad: No man shuns money, because the richest are so covetous; nor fine cloathes, because under them is hidden many a rotten body: So neither let them mislike knowledge for the sinnes of them that have it: No, its their hypocrisie, their profanenesse which defiles their knowledge. It is just with God to suffer ungodly men to defile each other: and them that know to lay offences in the way of the ignorant, that both the offender, and offended might fall and perish, because neither love the truth. True it is, that knowledge is not sufficient: a man with it may perish, but to be sure, he must perish without it. So much for these cavills; And also of the first branch.

2 Tim. 3.

2. Generall Question, what knowledge.

The second followeth: What knowledge there is requisite? I answer, First, the more knowledge a man brings (if conscience bee there-thee after) the better; too exact knowledge cannot bee had. And here I will crave leave of my Reader, to digreſſe a ſtep or two, and mourne to conſider that, which (according to that little experience I have had in my Miniſtry of late yeares) I cannot but ſay, (O that I were a lyer in this!) viz. That hundreds of poore people in our country there are (of whom I am perſwaded, they are the Lords and ſhall be ſaved) who yet by all the coſt and meanes which the Lord hath for twenty or thirty yeeres beene at with them, never came to ſee ſuch ſweete light, order and direction by the Catechiſme, that they can give an account of their faith and ſound knowledge therein. They reſt, in here a ſnatch and there a catch at a good point, in their good affections, innocent lives and blameleſſe carriages: But as for diſcerning of things, perſons, doctrines that differ, holding that which they have ſpent many a weary ſtep to come by, grounding themſelves upon the word for their eſtate and actions, and ſeeing how they have their warrants not from a Preacher (whom they love and like) but from the ſtrength of truth which cannot lie; growing up in knowledge, that ſo their hearts might waxe better, and themſelves more ſetled in Chriſtianity: Oh theſe things are as the ſound of many waters unto them, farre above them, ſhall I praiſe you in this (I ſpeake to you of my owne flocke) No, I praiſe you not. Eſpecially, where there is a manifeſt defect of that which might bee: As for invincible weakneſſe and want of reach, I am ſo farre from diſmaying ſuch, that I doubt not to ſay, the Lord will cloath their uncomely parts with the more honour, and ſupply ſome want of judgement, with much integrity and uprightneſſe of heart! Alas poore ſoules, if ye wanted this too, what ſhould become of ye! And becauſe I know not whether I ſhall ever ſpeake to you any more, let my words fincke into you! Enjoy your portion in truth and ſingleneſſe of heart, as a jewell exceeding all the skill and cauning of hypocrites. Vex not your ſelves too much for the want of that, whereby God doth ſo humble you: for who knowes what yee would prove, if your knowledge did equall ſome other graces and affections in ye! But to others this I adde, Seeke as much light to guide you in this deceitfull world, as poſſibly ye can! Let not all doctrines be alike with ye. Prize all, but above all, thoſe which teach yee your ſelves and Chriſt, and the well ordering of your converſations: bee wiſe as Serpents as well as Doves in innocency; let not the cunning jugling of Satan and diceplay of men men, Eph. 4.14. so gull ye as to picke out here one truth, there another, while he hath left you barren, so that all is one with you whether ye live under an idle, empty, fruitlesse ministery, or a grounded and fruitfull: And the like caution I might give yee in other respects: But I forbeare; onely let that hope and opinion which God and his people have conceived of you, be upheld in you with honour, least the Lord doe crosse you both with a staggering life, and a doubtfull death because of your dalliance. Ephe. 4. 14.

And so I returne againe to the point and answer, that it is one thing to speake of that measure of light which would doe best, another of that which is simply requisite. When I teach that knowledge is necessary, I speake not as if every one who falls short of exact and cleare and full knowledge, were to bee rejected; God forbid: for the grounds may bee soundly held by many who yet faile in these. For example, if I should question with many a Christian, in what nature Christ subsists, or how a person and a nature differ, and how Christs humanity is not a person, but a nature: perhaps I should gravell them, whereas yet they beleeve firmely the Lord Iesus to bee flesh, and truely God, and both made one Christ for the working out their salvation. The like may be said of other points which to the skilful are taken for granted, yet to them are not so cleare. As, how Christ should satisfie, and yet not taste of hellish torments; in what speciall office the act of satisfying standeth. To what part of the Catechisme each article of truth as the Sacrament belongs. So, I am perswaded, many a poore soule conceives not of each mystery in the Sacramentall union, although hee beleeve Christ to bee there present in his word and Spirit to a faithfull soule. Therefore of such knowledge this I say, The more the better, but many who want it may yet bee good receivers. I know I cast bread to dogges in thus saying, but weake ones must not want their due: let none abuse that to slightnesse and ease, which onely aimes at relieve of the weaker. Answere. Not exquisite but competent knowledge required.

But the question is, what knowledge is needfull? I answer, the Sacrament being one linke of the whole chaine of godlinesse, must necessarily presuppose a competent knowledge both of it selfe, and also of those doctrines which it depends upon. For example, the Supper is one of the Sacraments of the Gospel. Necessary therefore it is, that a man at least know what the other Sacrament of Baptisme is, upon which it dependeth. Secondly, both the Sacraments are part of those divine meanes ordeined by God to What this competency is. Answere 1. 2.

build up thē ſoule in the powēr and practiſe of grace. Needfull therefore it is that a Communicant know what the new creature meanes, what ſanctification is, what lets it hath from ſinne, Sathan, and world; what priviledges a beleever hath annexed by God to encourage him, and what thoſe meanes are which God hath afforded the ſoule to ſuſtaine it from decaying in ſpirituall
3 condition. Thirdly, the new creature and ſanctification being impoſſible to bee conceived of aright without the grace and gift of faith and the Spirit of the promiſe: neceſſary it is for the ſoule to know what a promiſe is, what ſaving faith in a promiſe is, what the Spirit of the Lord Ieſus is, which is the worker of this faith.
4. Fourthly, the promiſe depending upon the Merit and Satisfaction made to juſtice, without which God ſhould bee a lyer in promiſing to bee reconciled to the ſoule; moſt neceſſary it is (and that above all other things) that a man know who it is who hath ſatisfied the juſtice of God the angry judge: what thē Lord Ieſus is both in his obedience and death; how by vertue of both, the Father having accepted a ranſom from his Sonne, offereth moſt freely and faithfully the fruit of it to a ſinfull
5. wretch. Fiftly, this reconciliation preſuppoſing an eſtate of enmity and wrath, neceſſary it is, that the ſoule know by what meane wrath is diſcovered to belong by nature to every ſoule. And that is the Law of God. Alſo by what meanes the Law brings the ſoule to ſtand ſeaz'd before God as guilty of this wrath, and that ſo, as it may bee plunged into utter woe by it, in reſpect of any ability of
6. it ſelfe to wade out. Sixtly, becauſe wrath in God and enmity in us, preſuppoſing in us, ſome cauſe by which we contracted it, which is ſinne: needfull it is, that the ſoule know what it is, and how it came upon us, by whoſe ſinne, and what, viz. The Rebellion of Adam, and how that becomes ſetled upon us, how unavoidable it is, and what a ſtaine and guilt it hath brought upon all fleſh, none
7. excepted. Laſtly, leaſt it ſhould bee thought that God made man thus corrupt, to damne him; its neceſſary to know man was not made thus ſinfull and curſed at the firſt; but created in integritie of nature in all the parts, and in the Image of pureneſſe and holineſſe, even his who made him; and ſo ſhould he and we have continued to this day, had not we wilfully forſaken and defaced it by revolt from God.

Concluſion of the anſwer By this draught of the truth of God, its apparent upon what principles the Sacrament and the knowledge of it depends, viz. imme-immediately upon the knowledge of the meanes of ſalvation, next upon the knowing of the ſtate of regeneration: next upon the knowing of the worke of faith and promiſe: next upon a ſatiſfaction, and the Lord Ieſus the worker of it! next upon the worke of the Law convincing of the curſe: next upon the knowledge of ſinne: next upon the knowledge of creation. I goe backward, that the ſimpleſt may underſtand the coherence: ſo that by this cheine of doctrine (the laſt linkes whereof, that is, creation and the fall, are the firſt in order and ſo downeward) every one may ſee that a meete receiver, is not onely to know the nature and uſe of the Supper: but of ſinne, of the Law, of pardon, Chriſt, and the new creature: without which a Sacrament (ſeverally conſidered) is a meare ſhred, an Idoll, an object of blind devotion. To apply what I have ſaid both negatively & affirmatively: This I ſaid; That although in all theſe ſeven ſome-what there is which every Receiver comprehends not fully, yet the ſubſtance of truth in general is to be known by him, except he will come to he knowes not what, nor why. For example. Perhaps ſome poore ſoule diſtinguiſhes not the meanes of ſalvation one from another, Publicke, Private, ordinary, extraordinary, in the name and nature of each one: yet its neceſſary that he know the Supper to be a meane of Gods ordeining, for his growing in grace. So againe, perhaps every one cannot diſtinguiſh betweene the habite of a new creature, and the operations of holineſſe iſſuing thence: yet its neceſſary that he know all Gods people muſt be holy. Say againe, All cannot tell how many kindes of faith there are; By what ſteps faith is wrought: What is conteined in a promiſe: What Chriſt hath in ſpeciall obey'd in, or ſuffered: what the ſeverall workes of the Law are, how many kinds of ſin there be, and by what meanes Adams is derived to us: yet neceſſarie it is, that he be convinced of all theſe in their natures generally: and finde them wrought in himſelfe particularly. And ſurely if none may receive at all, ſave he who is in the ſtate of grace: needs it muſt follow that the leſſer muſt be where the greater muſt be: I meane, that knowledge there muſt be of all theſe, where faith muſt be, to give a man his ſpeciall portion in them. Howbeit, becauſe now we are about the triall of knowledge, apart from the other: and doubtleſſe many both Miniſters & people teach and heare this point of knowledge as a thing ſufficient to enable a Receiver: though I abhorre their opinion (as ſhall appeare in the ſequell) yet I would by this I have ſaid, ſtop the mouth of any ſuch as dreame of a knowledge which is not competent to ſalvation. Sure it is, a knowledge incompetent for ſalvation, cannot be competent for the Supper.

A demand. Some might here perhaps aske how they might bee directed to know theſe points ſoundly, to wit of the Supper and Sacraments, and all thoſe doctrines which they depend upon. I anſwer, that belongs not to this Chapter, but the Reader ſhall finde them all handled in my Practicall Catechiſme at large, and briefely toucht in the Anſwer. ſecond Chapter of this ſecond Treatiſe. And the doctrine of the Sacraments, eſpecially the Supper, is handled at large in the former Treatiſe, the three laſt Chapters; to which I ſend the Reader with this caution; That I handle theſe things at large here and there, not to the end that my booke ſhould never come into their hands, ſave when they come to the Sacrament, (for to what purpoſe were that?) but that they duly exerciſe themſelves in reading of the whole: That noting thoſe eſpeciall things which they moſt neede in the matter of knowledge and triall, they may be able to turne to them and make uſe of them familiarly, when they come to the Supper.

I ſhould now come to the third Branch; how a man may try himſelfe about this knowledge: But I conſider that this will better come in, in the uſe of exhortation; I will referre it therefore to that place, and being the breefer in other Vſes, inſiſt ſomewhat more fully in that.

Vſe 1. Exhortation, with confutation. Firſt then let this doctrine teach us to abhorre the woefull ſuperſtition of Popiſh Sacraments, and the woefull ignorance of Popiſh Receivers; who not onely in practiſe, but even in doctrine maintaine ignorance to be the mother of devotion, and ſo hatch in their boſomes all ignorant ones, as principall members of their curſed Synagogue: and to ſay truth, their ſacrifice of the Maſſe beeing it ſelfe a maſſe of confuſion, having no colour of bottome out of the word, who but the blinde are meete for it? Who but the deceived as willing to be led by blinde guides, as they are to lead them, would endure a Sacrament in an unknowne language? Iuſtly therefore both fall into the ditch of perdition. What one of a whole aſſembly knowes for what cauſe he is met? Or what doth he expreſly beleeve about the Sacrament, either touching the ordainer, the matter, the forme, the end? And put caſe they all knew that which Popiſh doctrine tels them concerning a Sacrament, yet how much better were it for them to be ignorant of it, than to know it? So that both their knowledge, and their ignorance are accurſed. I cannot thinke of a Popiſh Aſſembly, but that deſcription of the Poet, of the houſe of the Cyclops comes to my mind, wherein all darkneſſe and confuſion dwelleth, ſo that no man can tell what another ſaith. And how can they chuſe, when no man in ſpecial knowes what he beleeves, but wraps up his blind faith in the faith of the Church, and yet hath no gueſſe what his Church beleeveth? And yet more wofull it is to thinke that many of us who have lived in the light of the Church of God doe haſten to nothing more than to ſuch Popiſh ſcurfe and filth; being weary of the dazeling of ſunſhine.

Secondly, let this bee terror to all blind and ignorant receivers of the Sacrament, which (God knowes) ſwarme through the Congregations of this our Kingdome. Not to ſpeake of the thouſands that live under no meanes of light, who are rather to be pitied, that they diſcerne not the right hand from the left (whom God in due time prevent with light, ere the beſome of his wrath ſweepe away them and the cauſers of their miſery:) what ſhall I ſay even of the taile & ſcurffe of thoſe places, which have long lived under cleere knowledge of the Word and Sacrament, and yet through an incorrigible diſeaſe of ignorance, are yet as farre to ſeeke of knowledge, as if they had lived among the wild Iriſh? Such a wretched fagge end of people there is in the beſt places, whom no Sunne will tanne, no heate will warme; Neither good meanes amend, nor bad payre; but as the Windmill ſailes ever moving, but never ſtirring out of their place: ſo are they, ever learning but never comming to knowledge. As for the doctrine of the Supper, it is as eaſie to catch an Hare with a Tabour as to make them conceive what manner a thing it is: as if the Lord had branded them with his blacke-marke, If the Goſpel be yet hid, it is hid to none but ſuch as are loſt: Whoſe eyes the god of this world hath blinded that they ſhould never ſee the light and be ſaved. And yet (which is worſe) who ſo bold, ſo merry, ſo quiet and ſo conceited that all is wel with them? Give them the red brothwith Eſau, their belly ful, their luſts & pleaſures and take the Sacrament who will. If they once a yeare at Eaſter do receive with others, they thinke the holineſſe of the time and the crowde of Receivers ſhall ſhroud them: but as for any ſence of what they doe, what they want, what judgement they ruſh upon for their curſed profaning and trampling the bloud of Chriſt under feete, and not diſcerning the Lords body, its the furtheſt end of their thought! To whom (if they could heare) I would ſay; In Gods feare looke to your ſelves? This ſmooth ſtreame of yours will carry ye to hell laughing, and ye are never like to know your ſinne of ignorance till it hath brought ye into utter darkeneſſe and gnaſhing of teeth! If any ſence or ſparke of God remaine, and if ye be not wholly forlorne and hopeles, conſider this, that if thouſands of ſuch as know the doctrine of the Sacrament, yet for lacke of faith and love, ſhall periſh! What ſhall become of you that obſtinately and wilfully refuſe ſo much as to know? Your ſweete idiots life here ſhall turne to the moſt bitter ſence of wrath in hell, and there ye ſhall fill your ſelves with that ye have loved, even lie in darkeneſſe for ever: and yet your darkeneſs ſhall be rather want of comfort, than of conſcience; for the light of that ſhall ſo gnaw ye for your contempt of knowledge, that yee ſhall neede no other hell, than that within your owne boſomes. Prevent it betimes therefore.

Vſe 3. Admonition 1 To the Miniſters.

Thirdly, this is admonition to all Ignorant ones, to lay to heart and prevent the cauſe and ſteps to it, and the lets of true and ſaving knowledge. Firſt, let it warne all Miniſters, Parents, Governors and Gardians of others, to conſider the terrors of the Lord, and the ſinne of not diſcerning of the Lords body: That they tremble to be accеſſaries to the damnation of their ſoules. Say not, They are old enough, let them anſwer for themſelves: for if you informe them not, if ye who are ſet over them know their ignorance, ſee them running into the gulfe and ſtop them not, your lives ſhall goe for theirs, their bloud ſhall bee required at your hands. Let no ſloth, eaſe, love of your owne pleaſures, and ſpending the time in riot and profaneneſſe, or elſe in a vaniſhing courſe of worldly buſineſſe and carnall liberties, foreſtall your hearts and cut off occaſions of teaching them the truth of God. Catechiſe, preach, convince, and informe them of the truths, and by name of the Sacrament; do not turne the wiſedome of the Church, to a ſnare. If they reject your counſell, loe ye have ſaved your ſoules; they ſhall periſh in their ſinne: becauſe the ſoules were precious to you, and neglected by themſelves.

Branch 2. To the people. Admonition. 1.

And ſecondly, let all ſorts beware of the whirlepoole of deſtruction. Take heede of thoſe luſts which drowne ye in wilfull blindneſſe: love of your money, your drinke, your filthy uncleanneſſe, your pride and ſelfelove: Theſe will bewitch ye, and in your boſome wil cavill againſt the light and meanes of grace. Herodias did not ſo hate Johns Baptiſt, as theſe luſts hate the light, leaſt they should be gastered: They know the absence of meanes is the oyle to their flame; when there is none to controll or reprove, they are alive and jolly: But the word comming in, their feast is marred, they cannot bee quiet and merry. Beware of sloth and ease, lothnesse to stirre, alledging the way is long, the weather bad, businesse lying upon hand, when in truth heart is gone, and will is not at home. Beware of stumbling at the wants or sinnes of such as have knowledge: Nourish no prejudice against the Ordinances and Ministry: That it was a merry world ere they came: They cannot endure men should use any liberties. They are worse themselves in secret, than those they preach against. They shall not tie us to their girdles, &c. I say abhor all such errours of the wicked as foment this ignorance. Cast off all prejudice of knowledge, as the tediousnesse and difficulty, the needlesnes of it, the precisenes of it, the disrepute of the world. Breake through these armies to the well of Bethlem. Foster no secret love of the sweetnesse of ignorance: it kills as the Viper: Thinke not, that because this sinne deprives you of sence (for the time) of your danger, therefore ye shall avoyd it. No: the ignorance of the glasse of mercury water (among other glasses of rose water) and the drinking of it by errour, will poyson you and fret out your bowels, as well as if wilfully taken. In a word, as yee love your soules, so hate the steps leading to this hell of ignorance. And whereas the Devill would have you thinke its an harmelesse thing, a tame beast, and the mother of good meaning: know its an hideous mungrell: a monster of many heads. Cry out against it as Crescentius, that Cardinall did of the blacke dogge, which came into his chamber. Beate out the blacke dogge, beate him out. This ignorance is the true blacke dogge, and the Devill himselfe. Know that its as the surfeit and drunkennesse of the soule; for, as that surfeit, sometime makes men mad, sometime merry, sometime sullen, sometimes fearefull, sometimes bold and ventrous, sometimes quiet, but ever fooles, so does this: sometimes it breakes out into sottish stupor of heart, sometimes into madnesse and villany, sometimes into desperate presumption and scorne of all meanes, sometimes into slinesse and subtilty, sometime enmity and malice, sometime superstition and Popery, but alway to mischiefe and misery. And in a word, it makes every Idiot uncapable of the Sacrament, eating and drinke-ing his damnation, not discerning the Lords body. This damnation sleeps not, because thou sleepest: God shal awaken thee oneday with sad confusion.

ſhould

Wofull fruits of ignorance.

Psal. 4.

Lastly, this is exhortation to all Gods people that they bring knowledge with them to the Sacrament, and try themselves about the competency and savingnesse of it. If those whom it concernes, forget their duty to us, yet that shall not excuse us: let every one examine himselfe about his own knowledge. It will be asked how this triall shall be made? I answer. By these rules following, or the like. First, If our hearts tell us that we have so prized knowledge of Gods will and the Sacrament in speciall, that we have sought it as pearles: have attended upon the ordinances in season and out: have chosen rather to be at cost with God, than to forgo the knowledge of his truths. No heate in Summer, cold, raine, windes, snow in Winter have hindred us: but as he that soweth or reapeth, takes his season, so have we; ordering wisely, yea undervaluing other affaires, commodities, liberties, to make a purchase of truth, buying it whatsoever it cost us, not selling it whatsoever we may have for it, Wives, Farmes, Oxen: but returning to them with our second affections, when God hath had our chiefe courage and strength: this is a good signe.

Trials.

Phil. 3.

Secondly, if we goe not to worke by halfes, that is, to catch up knowledge in what kindes wee please, scumming off the fat and sweete of the easiest duties, or that which will stand with our own wills or knowledge of some Promises or priviledges. But as for knowledge of our selves, our natures, our sinnes, we are backward to them: If we rejoyce that there is a word that crosseth us in our belovedst sinnes, that smites us under the fift ribbe most mortally, coumpting it as balme: esteeming the words of the Minister in that kinde as sweete as any: refusing no information from God which concernes us, not kicking at it, but saying, The word of the Lord is good; its a good signe.

The 2.
Psal. 141. 5.
Esay 39. 8.

Thirdly, if as wee have sitten at the feete of Christ attentively while wee heard, so afterwards wee ponder the things wee have heard: digesting them, and chewing the cud of them; till they become nourishment unto us, and till that which is truth in the understanding, becomes love in the soule, causing the word to dwell plentifully in us, swaying us (as the Scepter of Christ) to all obedience in our course, living by faith, bearing our crosses and the like: its a good signe also.

Fourthly, if we come and goe, to and from the meanes of knowledge with appetite, savor, delight, and hunger. That is, if wee come with a view of our speciall errors and ignorances to be freed from

from them: and if when we have ſucked out the ſappe of one ordinance, wee are unwearied and goe to another, if by any meanes we may attaine to true knowledge: and that we take as well other occaſions to enquire, adviſe, pray, meditate, conferre, and reade the Scriptures, as at the Sacrament, and uſe extraordinary helps aſwell as ordinary, by others aſwell as our ſelves, yea the meaneſt; not diſdaining to be diſciples even to the Ant, the Horſe, the dumbe creatures, ſo we might learne, its a good ſigne. Prov. 6.6.

Fiftly, if the knowledge we get, be ſweete and harmonious, according to the analogy of faith. That is, cleere, evident, convincing, orderly, and agreeing with other parts of the word, unto which (as the linkes of a chaine) it belongs by coherence, ſo that by knowing ſome one threat, command or promiſe, wee conceive of more, and be not ſtill in darkeneſſe, and doubtfulneſſe, about the truths of God, its a good ſigne. The 5.

Sixtly, if as our knowledge encreaſeth, ſo our humility doth alſo grow withall. If it awe us, tame us, mortifie us, and teach us to denie our ſelves, as it did good Iudas, who ſaid, Lord what is the cauſe why thou ſhouldſt reveale thy ſelfe to us and not to the world, it is a good ſigne. Commonly men either are blockes under the meanes, or if they thrive in knowledge, the Devill puffes them up in the companies where they become, ſo that they muſt rule the roſt, and be praiſed, or elſe all is marred. But true knowledge ſerves eſpecially to ſhew us our ignorance, and ſo to abaſe us more than when we were empty: ignorance is ever moſt bold. The 6. John 14. 22.

Seventhly, if our knowledge bee a welſpring to runne out to others as well as to teach our ſelves. If our lippes be as a fountaine of life, and never ſtands as a lake, putrifying and ſtinking, but alway is dropping, as thoſe Olive branches, Zach. 4. were into the candel-ſtikes to maintaine their burning: So if we bee alway dropping as dew, and raine, upon others that are dry and barren, wives, children, others, its a good ſigne. The 7. Prov. 15 4. Zach 4.3. Deut 3.2.

Laſtly, if we revive the knowledge of the Sacrament in our own ſpirits, and linne not, till that we know of it, ſet our teeth on edge to the Sacrament, and whet an appetite in us unto it, it is a good ſigne, that we reſt not in the lazie habite of that wee know, but ſet it on worke to the end it ſerveth. Theſe and ſuch like Trials, may ſerve for this uſe, which if wee ſhall ſanctifie to our ſelves by prayer, they may ſtand us in ſome ſtead, for the triall of our knowledge. The 8.

To

Vse 5. Comfort. To conclude, becauſe I doubt not but the weake and tender Chriſtian will bee ready to ſnare himſelfe with theſe rules, and rather hold off himſelfe by them, than encourage himſelfe to the Sacrament. Therefore theſe two things let me adde. 1. Be not diſmayed in thy ſelfe by thy ſmall meaſure of knowledge, ſo long as there is ſoundneſſe of minde in thee, which may bee aſwell in a little as much. The Lord will require of thee according to that thou haſt, and no more. Be faithfull in a little, and thou ſhalt bee ruler over much. Excellent is that of our Saviour, Iohn 7. 17. If any man doe the will of the Father, hee ſhall know of the doctrine, more and more: and If a man keepe my word, I will come unto him, and acquaint with him. Looke to thy obeying heart, and that hath a promiſe of knowing, yea and that experimentally, which is better than all rules or conjectures. Againe, if thy knowledge bee ſound, though weake, yet let this bee no let of receiving the Supper: for that ſerves for the weake, both in knowledge and in all other gifts. Chriſt Ieſus is given of the Father, to be unto thee wiſdome aſwell as righteouſneſſe: come to his Feaſt, and it is a good time to aske it; for him hath the Father ſealed in the Sacrament to be thy Prophet, and hee will give thee of his fulneſſe, even knowledge, for knowledge, yea, richly and without upbraiding. And for this grace of Sacramentall knowledge, thus much.

Chap. V.

Of Sacramentall faith, and the triall of it.

Entrance. Take it for granted, that the wiſe Reader will remember that which was before ſaid, that faith is not required as all other graces are, that is, onely for the better receiving of the Sacrament. But that it is above all other the moſt eſſentiall grace, and the immediate inſtrument of receiving that which the Sacrament exhibites: by how much the more diligence ought to bee uſed by a Chriſtian Communicant, that this grace be tried to be ſoundly wrought in him, and revived in the Sacrament. This caution being premiſed, I come to the matter it ſelfe.

Grounds of this point named. For the better conceiving wherof, what this triall of faith in the Sacrament imports, I thinke it meete, by ſome ſteps to ground this point in the Readers minde, and to lay downe theſe three things: 1. That the Lord offers the good things which hee beſtowes upon his his faithfull ones, only by and in the way of a promise, which faith laying hold upon in speciall, takes the name from that promise: as Sacramentall faith is so called from a promise of a Sacrament. Secondly, that each particular promise depends upon a former maine promise; that is, the promises of Sanctification, upon the promise of Iustification, and the promises of more grace and growth upon the first promise of reconciliation, and spirituall or lively being in grace: so that he who would trie the latter. viz. a promise to grow by a Sacrament, must first trie his interest and part in the maine promise. Thirdly, that who so hath by sound evidence proved his right to the first; may and ought with the more ease prove his right to the latter, faith in that latter depending upon experience of the former.

Touching the first of these three, viz. That God offers and conveighes all his goodnesse by a promise alone (externally) conceive it by these few steps. First, it being God our Father all sufficient with whom the soule is to trade for his graces (as Saint Iames saith, Every good gift and giving commeth from the Father, who of his owne good will begat us) wee must know, God is infinite, incomprehensible. Needs then must it be that this infinite good conveigh himselfe to a finite subject by such a meane and way, as the poore weake carnall creature can reach it. For else what proportion is there betweene one and the other? How shall flesh comprehend a Spirit? No more than a little childs short arme can reach a thing farre beyond it. Therfore the Lord conveyes himselfe to the poore soule, by an ordinance: which is such a thing as consists of a spirituall, and yet an externall or sensible nature. An ordinrnce is the subject by which God communicateth himselfe and his goodnes, with a power of his Spirit to carry them to the soule: as by preaching of the Word to the eare, through the sound of a mortall voyce? By prayer, consisting outwardly of sentences and order: By the Sacrament also consisting of outward weake Elements: The Lord carries to the soule by these, most inward and spirituall things. The 1. ground Step 1. Iam. 1. 17.

Secondly, though an Ordinance have Gods good things conteined in it: yet still there is a great gulfe set betweene us, our spirit and minde, and betweene the good of these Ordinances; for wee are blinde, and they are mysticall and heavenly. Wee may sit and heare, and receive the Word, or the Sacrament, and yet wee may Step 2.

be held off as it were at ſtaves end from the good and life of an Ordinance. There muſt be a ſecond meane to bring us and them together. This mean muſt be the fleſh of the Lord Ieſus in an ordinance. All Gods good things being firſt given to Chriſt our head & Mediatour, that ſo by his fleſh they might be conveied to us familiarly: needs it muſt be, that except Chriſt be in an Ordinance, as our Prophet Prieſt, and King, that ſo by him they might bee united to us, firſt, ſenſibly, after ſavingly: it can not be that any Ordinance can doe us good; we ſhall ſtill be ſtrangers to it, though our bodies and ſences be never ſo neere it. For example, Prayer is an Ordinance, by which God imparts himſelfe deepely to the ſoule: yet except the ſoule caſt anchor upward by faith upon the fleſh of our Advocate giving ſtrength and life to it; Prayer is but a morall devotion, and a meere ſhaddow in reſpect of uniting thoſe good things to the ſoule. Likewiſe the Word of God preached, if it want the fleſh of Chriſt our Prophet and Head: it will carry nothing, ſave by a bare ſound into our eares: The words he ſpeakes are life and Iohn. 6. 63. ſpirit, and muſt be carried by the ſpirit of our fleſh into us, or elſe not at all. And note this. The more of Chriſts fleſh an Ordinance containes, the more it imparts Gods good things to the ſoule. And ſo the Sacrament of the Supper, conſiſting of the very materials of Chriſts fleſh and bloud, muſt needs bee very powerfull meanes of grace to the ſoule: and muſt needs carry the good things of Chriſt, both in point of ſatisfaction and of ſanctification, pardon, and holineſſe; into the ſoule in a more peculiar manner, as being the inſtruments of both.

Step. 3 Thirdly, as Chriſt in an ordinance is the way of Gods conveying himſelf: So Chriſt is conveied in an ordinance by a promiſe, or elſe not at all. Take away Chriſt, and an ordinance is nothing: and even ſo, take away a promiſe, and Chriſt, in an ordinance is of no effect to thee: The ordinance is excellent becauſe Chriſt is there: How be it thou art never the better for it, becauſe thou wanteſt a promiſe, by which Chriſt conveies it to thee. So many ordinances as God grants thee, ſo many promiſes he makes to thee of bleſſing: one ordinance is not the better for the promiſe of another: Prayer cannot looke at the promiſe of hearing: nor hearing of a Sacrament, becauſe each of theſe are ſeverall meanes of conveing Gods good things unto thee. But each ordinance muſt have a ſpeciall promiſe: Chriſt in it comes in and by the way and channell of a promiſe. The cauſe is plaine, becauſe no ordinances can bee ſavorie, rie, except mixed with faith, and faith there cannot be, where there is no promise for it to worke upon.

The conclusion then of this first ground, is this, If God will give his graces to the soule, it must be by the meane of an Ordinance, of Christ in an Ordinance, and of a promise. A promise is the immediate way by which Christ in an Ordinance is made ours. As the promise is, so faith beares her name: faith in a promise of the Sacrament, is Sacramentall faith: and he that would try whether he gets by the Sacrament, must trie his Sacramental faith. This for the first ground. Concluſ. of a ground.

Ere I proceede, let this point teach us to mourne for the common sort of Christians, and Receivers of the Sacrament, of whom I may say, as those in the Acts said to Paul of the Spirit: They never heard whether there were a Spirit or no. So, these worshippers of God, and hangers upon Christ & his Ordinances, yet cannot tell us, whether there be any promise or no, any faith in a promise or no. They keep their Church, and come to the Ordinances, pray, & receive, but the way of faith in the pomise they have not knowne. To whom I say, save for fashion sake: What differs a Popish corrupted ordinance from a pure ordinance of God (I say, in respect of good to thee) yea what differs thy absence from thy presence, in this regard? Oh tremble at this, all ye that professe God, and yet know not a promise, nay, I say! Professe to beleeve and yet know not a promise. Was it ever heard that faith could subsist without a Promise? Oh therefore I say to all such, judge what case ye are in: ye are without God in the world, and are still barren of all his good things, either of Reconciliation, or of regeneration: your Baptisme, hearing and receiving are emptie, and never doe you good: For you never got any thing by a Promise: A Promise never wrought upon you any life of God, or growth in that life: yee never saw neede of Gods good things, never emptied your selves by selfe-deniall: If ye had, these would have presently brought yee to a promise to be sustayned by, as the Woman of Samaria drew her neighbours to Christ. I conclude therefore, the faith which such pretend is an Idoll: a faith hanging upon the bare story of a God, a Creator, a Christ, a Redeemer, not in God; and such a faith is a meere hangby and formall notion of a thing a far off: its a faith of the Church, a faith of contemplation, a faith not of adherence to a promise, but of meere heare say of things, which thou never, either feltest any neede of, or soughtest any part in. And therefore whosoever thou Vse of this ground. Acts 2.

art whose faith is no other, know that thou liveſt a moſt woefull life, without any of Gods gracious influence, and when thou dieſt (except thou be changed) thou ſhalt die without comfort or hope. Therefore, to this thy hearesay of God and his good things, adde faith in a promiſe, and thou ſhalt enjoy God in an Ordinance, and by name in the Sacrament ſavingly, really, and comfortably. Ohlet all thy wearisome and miſpent former time, ſting thee for thy unprofitableneſſe, and now in time looke about thee.

The ſecond ground of this point.

I come to the ſecond ground. Every particular promiſe of good things from God, is planted in a generall and maine promiſe. So that hee who would try himſelfe whether this or that good thing be his or no (as the gift of patience, right uſe of the croſſe, growing by the Sacrament, &c.) muſt firſt try whether he be in the Covenant or no, which is the well-head of the reſt. For this one Covenant, to bee our God reconciled, includes, yea, gives a being to all other promiſes that God in this or in that, will be our All-ſufficiency. True it is, each poore ſoule ſees not this. The reaſon is, becauſe they judge of the chiefe promiſe, according to the limit of their preſent feeling; that is, becauſe in the agony of their loden ſpirits, they feele moſt needs of Chriſt to eaſe their conſcience of guilt, and to ſettle peace, therefore they ſee it not to reach further than their preſent neede. Whereas Chriſt being ſuch a gift as either is wholly denied, or wholly given, cannot be divided; but is by the ſoule (if ſhe knew it, and were not too narrow to containe it) received as he is given, all at once. Onely the ſoule retailes him in particular, as ſhe meetes with her needes of him; and then by recourſing to the maine promiſe, finds her right to all the reſt. As the ſmaller boates tied to the great ſhips, follow their motion, ſo is it here. At leaſure the ſoule comes to ſee her penny worths, which at the firſt appeared not: even as a purehaſe of worth, doth not all at once appeare to the buyers ſence, but at leaſure, as the commodities of it come to hand. Now when the ſoule comes to behold them, then ſhe ſees all couched in a generall gift of Chriſt made to be her peace and pardon. Secondly, the reaſon of this is, becauſe God is the God of order. He firſt ſets the ſoule out of the danger of Adams forfeiture of grace, becauſe the ſoule is not elſe capable of any good thing. Now in taking away this guilt hee aſſumes the ſoule againe into union and fellowſhip with him in all the good things which ſhe enjoyed before. When the gulfe is taken away which ſeparated the ſoule, then the way lieth open to the ſoule to recover all her privipriviledges in time paſt. Thirdly, this is true in reſpect of congruitie of providence: For having once granted a being to the creature of ſpirituall life, he doth therein binde himſelfe to a ſupporting of that life; elſe he ſhould plucke downe that which hee hath built, and undoe his owne worke. As David ſaith, I am thine, Lord, ſave me. I meane not that beleeving one promiſe ſhould ſave us a labour in beleeving the reſt: But become a good pledge of performing the reſt. As all the promiſes of God in Chriſt, are yea, and Amen: ſo, all ſpeciall ones are yea and Amen in the generall. He that hath given his Sonne, how ſhall he not with him give us all things? Pſal. 119. 94. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Rom. 8. 32.

The uſe of which briefely is, to inſtruct and convince us of that horrible treaſon to Gods Alſufficient promiſe, which every one is guilty of, who will not cleave to God in his firſt and maine promiſe of mercy and redemption. Alas, what man is there who oft deſires not to finde God good to him in the Sacrament, there to fill him with good things, ſeale up his pardon, purge out his corruption, and the like. But becauſe hee ſeekes not to know God in his Covenant, how ſhould his Seale doe him good? What is a Seale, ſave a relation to a former bargaine? If thou never ſtraked hand with God for his Chriſt thy righteouſneſſe, how cameſt thou in for his wiſedome, ſanctification, and redemption? They belong not unto thee: either thou muſt have all Chriſt to ſet thee out of feare, or thou haſt never a whit of his benefits. And to apply this to the preſent point, how ſhouldeſt thou come to God by ſpeciall faith in the Sacrament, when thou wanteſt him in the chiefe faith of the firſt promiſe? Oh! thou cutteſt off thy ſelfe, thou knoweſt not from what liberties, and mercies, when as thou art careleſſe to bee made ſure of the maine. Thou ſhouldſt diſpute thus: The time will come, when I ſhall crouch to God for ſtrength to beare the Croſſe, to be afflicted in all my afflictions, to die willingly, &c. But then why doe not I the whilſt make ſure in the maine with the Lord, that hee might finiſh his owne worke and ſave mee, becauſe I am his? Doubtleſſe if I dally with this, or goe upon falſe grounds, deceiving my ſelfe, the Lord will be guiltles in not regarding me, becauſe the time was when he cryed out to my foule, Beleeve, robbe me not of my glory, diſtruſt me not in my offer: But becauſe thou wert deafe to my cry, ſo its juſt that I ſtoppe mine eares at thine; goe therefore and ſeeke releefe of thy idols of eaſe, ſelfe-love, and the world which thou preferredſt before me. It is with thee as it was with Iſrael, Iudg. 1. 21. The Lord had given them one promiſe for for all, to drive out the Cananites; now becauſe they beleeved not the maine, therefore here one Cananitiſh city, there another prevailed, and became goades and prickes to them. And ſo, hence it is, that neither promiſe of Sacrament or of other Ordinances doe prevaile to purge out their luſts, but they remaine as thornes unto them, becauſe they never tooke paines to joyne iſſue with God in the truth of his Covenant to pardon them, and make them his beloved. Thus much for the ſecond ground, teaching, that the triall of ones ſpeciall faith, reſts in the triall of the maine.

Ground 3. The third ground iſſues from this ſecond, viz. That the triall of our firſt beleeving, may, and muſt make the other eaſie and familiar. Its our great ſinne if it be otherwiſe, For why? The Lord gives us aſſurance of the one in the other; yea, teaches us to argue from one to another without wavering, ſo farre as our weakeneſſe will permit. Excellent is that of Paul, Rom. 5. 10. If when we were enemies, we were reconciled by his death, how much more being frends, ſhall we be ſaved by his life? Marke his manner of ſpeech, How much more? If God made that eaſie to us, which ſeem'd impoſſible, how much more eaſie is that which is under a direct promiſe? If God had caſt us quite off being enemies, we had the mend in our owne hands, and could not complaine: But having his Word to make good our owne deſires, we have the Lord tied to us, and at a kinde of advantage, (be it ſpoken with reverence) ſo that we cannot bee defeated, Great is the oddes betweene being an enemy formerly, and being now reconciled. Hee that will releaſe a ſtranger from priſon, and pay an hundred pound for him; will (in reaſon) lend a friend twenty ſhillings. Such an argument is this here.

Rom. 5. 10.

Vſe of the third ground 1. Conviction. The uſe of the point is, firſt to condemne the practiſe of all ſuch, as having found the Lord above their expectation in the promiſe of reconciliation, yet dare not truſt him for ſome ſhreds (in compariſon) of bleſſings of leſſer nature, as to overcome their paſſions, revenge, worldlineſſe, &c. Oh! Thou art like Ahaz and his ſubjects, who would not tempt God in asking a ſigne, when as yet they beleeved not without it. The Prophet tells them: Is it not enough that ye weary men, but ye muſt weary my God alſo? Thou tireſt the Lord, when he ſeeth that none of his waies will prevaile againſt thy infidelity. But ſtill thou art ever out and in with him (as Ioabs ſword that could not hold in his ſcabbard) and puts him to cry out, Oh! Ephraim, oh, Iudah, What ſhall I doe, or how ſhall I intreate thee? Is the worke of faith as farre off now as when thou firſt beleeveſt?

Eſay 7. 12.

Verſe 13.

Hoſ. 6. 4.

Oh!

Oh! weake (if not froward wretch) how long ſhall I ſuffer thee? As they in the wilderneſſe, whom no miracles, no providence could perſwade, but were as farre to ſeeke at the end of fortie yeares as the firſt day. Oh! the Lord loves when his Schollers are apt to learne, (eſpecially this leſſon of faith by many warnings;) and when our experience teacheth us to buy and ſell upon his word. But ſo ſeeme to truſt God with the foiling the enemies of the hills, and yet not to truſt him with thoſe in the vallies: to pretend that they doubt him not for heaven, but diſtruſt him for earthly bleſſings, ſurely it either juſtly calls thy firſt beleeving into ſuſpition; or elſe argues a careleſſe heart not able to improove thy Talent of reconciliation, to warrant thy faith for a poore ſupply of this life. 1 King. 20. 23

Secondly, it ſhould very much preſſe upon thoſe in ſpeciall, who are to receive the Supper (in which the Lord offers the increaſe of firſt graces received in Baptiſme) to try their Sacramentall faith with all readineſſe of minde. Is it eaſier to doe by many degrees, than to beleeve the promiſe of mercy at firſt? And doth the Lord with farre greater eaſe (as I may ſay) beteame to the ſoule growing in faith, than breeding of it? Why then doe they who beleeve come to this triall with ſo much adoe, and bury the Talent of God unthankefully in the earth? As thoſe ſervants of Naaman told him, If the Prophet had bid thee do ſome great thing, wouldſt thou not have done it? How much more then, when hee onely bids thee, Waſh and be cleane? So ſay I, put caſe the Lord required the greateſt worke of thee, would it not ſeeme ſmall in reſpect of the good of the Sacrament? How much more when hee ſaith, Revive thy faith, in the promiſe of the Sacrament? If thou wert bidden to try what almes thou haſt given ſince thy laſt receiving, or what zeale thou haſt uttered againſt ſinne, &c. oh, how wouldeſt thou plod, and gather thy goodneſſe together? Now when the Lord ſaith, Revive the edge of thy faith once received, oft renewed, quicken it up in ſome Sacramentall promiſe or other, ere thou come to the Supper; loe, how hard a taske it ſeemes. Why? ſave that thoſe morall duties partly are from thy ſelfe, and are mixt with ſelfe-love: But the other is a meere divine grace without thee freely given, and relying barely upon the promiſe, and behold how tedious it is: whereas thou ſhouldeſt ſay, If I were found of God when I ſought him not, how much more eaſie will it bee when I ſeeke him unfeignedly? If mercy were free, when I had no promiſe, 2 King. 5. 5. Vſe 2. Eſay 65. 1.

miſe, who ſhould doubt of the more aſſuredneſſe of it, when God hath tied himſelfe: Surely the very eaſe of it ſhould teach us to diſpute ſtrongly for our ſelves, the Lord teacheth us to argue for our ſelves: In other matters that ſerve for our owne ends we can argue faſt enough; but in this, either God muſt put us to it, and ſhame us, or elſe we will loſe our benefit for lacke of pleading, and ſo come to the Supper, with a dead or unrevived faith. May not the Lord repent him of all his coſt, when hee ſees ſo ſmall profit? And thus much for this third ground.

The point it ſelfe.

Now having premiſed theſe things thus, let us apply them to the point in hand. The Queſtion then will be, how a Chriſtian may try his Sacramentall faith? I anſwer, by theſe two waies. 1. When he can proove by good evidences, that hee hath beleeved the promiſe of reconciliation already. Secondly, when he can revive his faith upon the promiſe of the Sacrament. Therefore of theſe two I will ſpeake a little, and ſo come to the uſe of the Chapter.

Two waies of trying faith.

1 Firſt, beleeving.

Queſt. It will firſt bee demanded, how a Chriſtian may finde and trie himſelfe to have beleeved ſavingly? To which I anſwer, this may be done ſundry wayes. 1. By the meane conducing (in the purpoſe of God) to beleeve. 2. The Object upon which the ſoule looketh, that it might beleeve. The 3. The Roote, out of which faith ſpringeth. 4. The Act it ſelfe of beleeving. 5. The ſcope and end which faith propounds to her ſelfe in beleeving. The 6. and laſt, The effects and properties aſcribed to faith. The other wherein I would lay downe theſe points, is this, 1. I would propound the truth of them. 2. Shew how the ſoule may trie it ſelfe about them. Which ere I enter upon, let the Reader (for avoiding of confuſion) take notice, that in the ſecond Chapter of this Treatiſe, under the head of aſſiſting grace, I named five trials which doe all agree with that which now I am to ſpeake of the triall of beleeving. Onely there neceſſitie lead me to ſpeake of the end of calling, here more ſpecially, I treate of ſaving faith: Let not any thinke that I make theſe two, diverſe: But let him borrow what light that point will affoord for the better conceiving of this; and ſo adde what this point affoords to that: knowing that the grace of faith is the upſhot of calling. This by the way.

How may firſt beleeving bé tried.

Anſw.

1 Poſition. The meane conducing to faith.

Now for the firſt Poſition. The meane conducting unto faith, is, the diſtinct underſtanding of the Doctrine of the ſatisfaction of Chriſt, both in life and death. It was the foundation of Election, Ephe. 1. 3. (not the cauſe) in which the Lord anſwered his owne owne Iuſtice fully, to the end that hee might ſet open a doore of mercy to poore Adams loſt poſterity. Now, that which was a mean ordained by the Lord, for the declaring of his righteouſneſſe in ſaving, muſt be the mean alſo to conduct the ſoule to faſten upon the offer of God. For why? As nothing ſave a ranſome could ſtop the courſe of Iuſtice, or cauſe, him to be reconciled with a ſinner: ſo, nothing can ſtop the feare of conſcience guiltie of wrath, nor warrant her, that ſhe may be reconciled to God, ſave this propitiation. Till the ſoule come to know, that anger is not in God; ſhe cannot thinke ſhe may dare come neere him; ſeeing ſhee knowes him to be a conſuming fire. Therefore, 2 Cor. 5. 20, 21. Paul grounds a fearefull ſoule ſtrongly upon this bottome. Bee reconciled to God (poore ſoule) For why? He hath made him to be ſinne that knew none (both by obeying and ſuffering) that we might be the righteouſneſſe of God in him. So ſaith Elihu; Iob 33. 24. Deliver him, for I have received a ranſome.

Rom. 3. 25.

Eſay 27. 4.

2 Cor 20. 21.

Iob 33. 24

The triall then of faith by this Rule is this. Canſt thou ſay truely that in the conflict of thy ſoule with Gods anger for thy ſins, (thy long lyen in, deepely died ſinnes, both of omiſſion, commiſſion, mortall, ſpirituall, offences and revolts) thou haſt beheld the meane of grace, in the Alſufficient merit of Chriſt? Hath this ſtai'd thy heart, that God hath cut off his plea againſt thee, in giving his Son to ſatisfie? Canſt thou ſay, that thine high Prieſt hath brought thee to God, and cauſed thee to ſee his face with joy? Haſt thou ſent Satan to Chriſt, and told him, God cannot be ſatisfied, and yet angry ſtill? Haſt thou found ſtrong conſolation (in the purſuite of Satan) from this, that thou beholdeſt this citie of Refuge, the ſatisfaction of Chriſt as a ſure Sanctuary to reſcue thee from the avenger of bloud? Haſt thou dranke of this brooke (or well-ſpring) and lifted up thy head in hope of being accepted? Deny not thy ſelfe; if it hath been thus with thee, it is a good ſigne: I ſay, a good ſigne, if thou haſt any condition of faith, any feeling of thy burden, wrought in thee, and ſending thee to this meane. For why? By vertue of this price, the righteouſneſſe of wrath is turned into a righteouſneſſe of mercy; ſo that it is a meete and equall thing with God (having thus received a ranſome) to forgive: yea in Chriſt, God himſelfe was reconciling the world: and now hee doth declare his righteouſneſſe in juſtifying a ſinner through the faith of Ieſus: yea thou maiſt ſay with David, Save me O Lord, according to thy righteouſneſſe. See Rom. 5. 16. 2 Cor. 5. 18, 19.

Triall by this

Heb 10. 20.

Pſal. 110. 7.

The ſecond object.

Briefely for the ſecond. The object of faith, which is the promiſe, which containes two things, either the good things offered in the promiſe, or the hearty meaning and purpoſe of him that freely makes the promiſe. The good things offred in the promiſe, (pardon, peace, a purged conſcience, life of grace, ſupport in grace, the earneſt penny of the Spirit, and the like) ſerve to draw the affections (which carry the ſoule) unto God, and to daſh out of countenance all falſe objects of gaine, eaſe, pleaſure, luſts, to draw the ſoule to God in deſire, eſteeme of mercy, and in hungring, mourning, and endeavouring after Chriſt. Secondly the manner of offering theſe good things, being free, full, faithfull, entire, and ſimple, (exceeding deſirous the ſoule ſhould embrace them, ſorry it ſhould reject them, urging it to beleeve) ſerves to put it out of queſtion, that the Lord meanes as he ſpeakes: elſe needed hee not to have prevented us at all: but ſeeing even when wee were enemies deſerving, nor deſiring any favour, yet the Lord out of the meere graciouſneſſe of his heart would needs beſtow it upon us; therefore he would have us conclude, he will not repent him of his freedome, if we come in to lay claime and pleade this promiſe.

Rom 5. ut ſupr.

Triall by this

Try thy faith then by the promiſe, thus; firſt, whence came thoſe diſpoſitions of heart in thee, I meane thoſe teares of thine, thoſe deſires prayers, faſtings, and diligent ſearchings after grace? Came they from ſelfe-love, or from an heart of baſeneſſe, bringing thy money and coſt to God to buy mercy? If ſo, thou haſt little to boaſt of: but if the good things of the promiſe wrought them in thee, if thou canſt ſay, that faith, and the preparations to faith proceeded from the promiſe: The good thing offered therein, drew thee to God, as with cords. If thou canſt ſay, that thy good affections could never purchaſe faith; rather that promiſe which bred faith, bred alſo thoſe affections in thy ſoule, becauſe thou ſaweſt God willing to ſave thee, therefore thou mourneſt after him, prayeſt unto him, and (as Nineve) couldſt not give him over: the riſing of the Sunne, cauſed this dawning of heart in thee, and theſe making towards grace, it is a good ſigne. Secondly, try thy ſelfe thus: If the freedome, fulneſſe, and ſtrength of the promiſe, have truely wrought upon thee, then thy baſe conceits of the Majeſty of God are vaniſhed, I meane thy enmity and hatefull ſpirit is gone And whereas thou once couldeſt not thinke a good thought of him, but all thy thoughts framed him rather to be angry, envious, cruell, unbeteaming; now thou ſtoppeſt, and (as one better ſetled) beginſt

Ionas 3. 9.

to

to say; oh my poore soule, who couldst never get out of thy slavery and slightnesse thinke of the promise a little better? What wilt thou say if by all this offering, urging, expostulating, charging to be reconciled upon paine of hell, the Lord meanes thee well? Perhaps he may. If while hee seekes to save thee, thou devise how to get out from him; will it not be bitter at last? Thus weake hope breakes the yce, and sets the soule forward. Then the Spirit of grace createth in thee both thoughts and affections of such strange goodnesse, bounty, long-suffering, free grace and compassion, that thy heart breakes into wondrings at him, and saying, Who is a God like to our God, forgiving and passing by the sinnes of his people? Who could finde his enemie at the vantage, and not destroy him? Therefore my soule is even carried into the streame of his grace, and perswaded to beleeve. I see the good will and meaning of his heart shining in his promise; and whereas it was wont to be a barren sound and emptie noise for me to heare a promise: now I see it as a vessell standing full and running over, yea, a streame to carry me in, with holy confidence, saying, If the strength of Israel can lye, if free grace, if faithfulnesse it selfe can shrinke backe and deny it selfe, I am content to perish. Thirdly, trie it thus; If a promise have beene thy Object, then thou confessest that the power it selfe to beleeve is in a promise as well as the motives to beleeve. The promise is the instrument of the Spirit to perswade: And as when the Lord made a promise to the Iewes that if they did come to the Temple to worship, he would keepe their dwellings and goods safe the whil'st: Lo, this promise had in it such a power as held off all Robbers and enemies from attempting any pillage: they durst not, they could not; so much more in the promise to a loaden heart, there is alway the strength of God to effect that which he promiseth: and such a soule needs not stand out stranger-like and say, here is a sweete promise, if I could beleeve: But here is a promise strong and able to cause me to beleeve it: If in any measure these tryals be in thee, they are all good signes.

Mica. 7. ult.

1 Sam. 24. 19.

Thirdly, trie thy faith by the roote of it, which roote is selfe-denial. All other graces seeme to have some inherencie, and being of their owne in the soule: onely faith is rooted in the overthrow of a mans selfe. This selfe is nothing else save the spirit of old Adam, resisting the Spirit of grace; and as we see in defenced Cities some of their Bulwarkes are out-workes and retrenchments, others are maine Forts neere the walls, wherein their chiefe strength

Tryall 3. By the roote of it.

consisteth: So here, selfe hath her out-workes, selfe-wealth, selfe-ease, credit and esteeme, learning, parts, experience. These are more easily cast downe, because Christ and they are of two severall kindes. Others are sorts of greater consequence, in which the heart more trusts, as carnall reason and the wisedome of the flesh, which 2 Cor. 10. 5. Paul in 2 Cor. 10. 5. calls high thoughts and strong imaginations of flesh, setting themselves up against the obedience of faith; so also Religious duties and performances, whether will-worships of Papists, or duties required, as Iewish righteousnesse by the Law, and all the devotions of carnall Protestants. To these I may adde the secret counterminings of the heart, mixing it selfe with the preparation to faith, and so destroying the worke of God, as selfe-mournings, desires, and use of meanes. Now of all these, the Scripture tels us, That if any will beleeve, he must deny himselfe, and be content to be stript of all those, or else grace will not dwell in him. Trust not in thy owne wisedome, but trust in the Lord, Pro. 3. 5. So Prov. 3. 5. Paul, That I may be found, not having my own righteousnes of the Law Phil. 3. 9. but of faith. See how Paul opposes them. All the frame of Creation, Redemption, yea, of the whole Word of God prooves it. God will Esay 42. 6. not give his glory to another. He that boasteth, must boast of the Lord. Two sutes of apparrell may as well agree with one body at once, as selfe and Christ (in equall termes) to a soule. The red earth had never had the breath of life put into it, if it had not beene a meere dead patient, and at Gods dispose to be as he would have it.
Rom. 11. 32. The flesh of Christ had no subsisting in it selfe, save in the Godhead: and what is else that of Paul, God shutting up all in disobedience, that he might have mercy upon all? Not of the willer or Rom. 9. 16. the runner, but God, &c. The Doctrine of imputation, what doth it import, save that righteousnesse stands in counting that as ours, which is none of ours? What else is that of the Apostle, Rom. 11. 6.
Rom. 11, 6. If of Workes, not of Grace; else Workes were no workes: If of Grace, not of Workes: else Grace were no Grace.

Triall by this. Try thy selfe then by this Rule, dost thou observe this back-byas of corruption in thy soule, alway playing her parts, and resisting grace? Is this spirit of originall sinne as irkesome to thy spirit, as the most odious sinnes of swearing or theft? Is it so much the more suspected, by how much the more fine spunne and subtill, running in the streame of thy best Religion? Dost thou feele it in the worke of the Law, of the Gospell, of Sanctification, still resisting grace, and starting as much from the Word as the Sacrifice from the knife of the Prieſt? Doſt thou wholly ſet thy ſelfe againſt it, both ſelfe on the right hand, deceiving thee with thine owne hopes and deſerts; and on the left ſcaring thee with feares of unworthineſſe? Art thou as well afraid of a white Devill, as a blacke; yea, more? Doſt thou tremble to thinke that ſelfe ſhould ſhare with God in thy converſion? Doſt thou chuſe rather to be as baſe as dung and dogs meate? yea, when thou haſt done all, doſt thou thinke thy ſelfe no neerer heaven thereby, than if thou wert a Publican? Doſt thou confeſſe that there is no blood, no merit, no congruity in ſelfe, to purchaſe any dramme of grace? And that it is juſt with God rather to ſeeke himſelfe glory by abaſing all fleſh and carnall propps, than to ſuffer ſelfe to pirke above him, or mixe with him? Yea, canſt thou ſay, oh Lord! I chuſe to lye as the duſt under thy footſtoole, and to be at thy pleaſure, as a fatherleſſe Orphan, to doe with me what thou wilt: yea, when thou art under the deepeſt abaſement and ſelfe-deſertings, and without a ſubſiſting in thy ſelfe; Canſt thou ſay, Verily, gladly will I be under this buffeting, (though it be as a pricke in the fleſh) that Gods grace may be another ſelfe and a new principle of comfort to ſtay my ſelfe upon? Yea, in the want of carnall ſtay, I wait upon the promiſe to be my ſtay. If it be thus in any true meaſure in thee, it is a ſweete ſigne. 2 Cor. 12. 9.

I come to the fourth ground of trying faith, to wit, by the act of it. And that in two things; Firſt, in the naked and free conſent of the whole ſoule to the truth of God, which is, that he will eaſe the loaden ſoule, comfort the mourning, and ſatisfie them that hunger after righteouſneſſe. The Lord requires that the ſoule ſimply rely it ſelfe upon this bare Word of his, becauſe he will performe it, without deſcanting this way or that againſt it. Secondly, in the relying upon the meere and free act of Gods not imputing ſinne, or imputing righteouſneſſe to the ſoule; yea, a righteouſneſſe inhering in another, and not in thy ſelfe. The Lords act of eſteeming and reckoning to the ſoule the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, is as reall an act, as if he had infuſed a reall habite of it into the ſoule to dwell perſonally in it, as it dwelt in Chriſt. The fourth ground. The act of faith. Mat. 5. 4. 5. 6. Eſay 1. 16. Pſal. 32. 1.

Try thy ſelfe then by this rule thus. Firſt, canſt thou ſay truely, that in the beleeving of Gods Promiſe thou didſt directly goe from a word, to a word without adding or mixing the ſlime of thy own conceits to defile the pureneſſe of it? Didſt thou with Peter, emptied of himſelfe, obey and ſay, At thy Commandement Lord, I will let downe, thoughelſe I ſhould not? (Luke 5. 5.) Canſt thou ſay, oh Triall by this. Luke 5. 5.

Lord, thou bidst a loaden wretch come unto thee to take ease: as if there were no more circumstance in it, than onely so: Lord, I have found my soule loden and pinch'd by thy Word, therefore I come to thee for ease; beleeving that seeing thy selfe art the Author of both words, therefore thou, who wouldst so really lode me, canst as truely ease mee? Canst thou say, Lord in thy words, is neither hooke nor crooke, and therefore as I seeke to adde nothing to it, so neither doe I detract, nor dare I, (Revelation, Chapter 22. verse 18.) but take thy truth as it is in Iesus, even truth it selfe subject to no exceptions or cavills of flesh? I enquire not why thou dost it, or why for mee, and not for many hundred thousands, that lye in their blindnesse still: Secrets are for thee: but revealed promises are for mee: and therefore to thee I leave the one, and claspe so much the more closely to the latter, by how much the former is more above me. If thou canst finde in thy heart thus freely to concurre with free grace, saying: Be it to thy servant as thou hast spoken, I dare not despise thy Counsell for my salvation, or gainesay and give thee the lye, but put my seale to thy Word that it is true: I say, againe, if in any true measure thou canst doe thus, it is a sure signe. And secondly, if the Act of God in heaven justifying a poore wretch, by his bare accompting him his righteousnesse, (when yet corruption abides in him exceedingly) yea his perfect righteousnesse; can so farre prevaile with thee as to say, O Lord, thy one witnesse and approbation of me, is to my conscience, as a thousand, though I neither see thy face, nor can heare thy voyce; yet O Lord I accompt my selfe as thou esteemest me, even thy perfect righteousnesse in the midst of my greatest sinfulnesse: and all because thy accompt is a done deede: and my faith compts it done in earth, because it is done in heaven: I say, this act of thy faith is a good signe.

The 5 ground The end.

The fifth ground is from the end of thy beleeving, and that is, that God may have the glory of his rich grace in saving a lost soule. The last and full end of God in thy pardon and salvation is not, that thou mightest be happy, but that himselfe might be glorified. This the Lord so lookes at, that all other ends are but second hand ends unto him, although reall ends.

The tryall of this.

Try thy selfe also in this. Hast thou sought the name of God (as cheefe) to be shrined and set up in the most inner man and secret of thy soule, above all thine owne ends? Hath the wisedome of his way of saving his elect entred into thy soule with admiration?

tion? Hath it more affected thy poore humbled ſoule, that God one day ſhall be admired in thee and them that beleeve, becauſe they obey'd the promiſe when they heard it: than that thou thy ſelfe ſhalt be admirable and glorious (for ſo thou ſhalt be) in that glory of his? Are all thy ſprings in him? All thy thoughts in him? thy delights, love, and affections in his moſt rich, wiſe and glorious grace in Chriſt? Is thy Spirit wholly drunke up in his wiſedome, as the Queene of Sheba's in Salomons? Couldſt thou chuſe rather to be cut off from God (if poſſible, which yet is not) rather than to rob him of his glory? And is it thy chiefe crowne to know thy glory and thy life to be hid with him in Chriſt? I confeſſe this is to fleſh and carnall reaſon, a riddle; therefore it is the Lord who hath revealed it for a ſpeciall good marke unto thee of ſound faith.

Laſtly, among many other Properties of faith in the Scriptures, as that it is unfeigned, ſaving, &c. Theſe two are moſt uſuall. Firſt, Its called effectuall. Secondly, precious. Try thy ſelfe then about theſe. First, by the efficacy of thy faith. Faith is called effectuall for this cauſe, That it overcomes the world. It beares downe before it thoſe diſtempers which aſſaulted the ſoule under temptations and doubtings. Not that the ſoule is quite free: but as farre as it beleeves, ſo farre it drownes her diſtempers as in a Sea of forgetfulneſſe. Theſe are of many ſorts. Sometimes the ſoule was held under ſlaviſh bondage againſt the freedome of mercy, ſo that all promiſes ſeemed to be loſt upon her: Sometimes ſhe was pufft up with vaine preſumptuous hopes of a welfare without bottome. Sometime againe carnall ſence prevailed, bearing downe the promiſe with the unlikelihood, and contrariety to appearance: ſometime quarrelling with her ſelfe about the election of God, and caſting the blame of unprofitableneſſe and unbeleefe upon her not being choſen: otherwiſe objecting her corruption and body of death, and the members thereof unmortified: often carried to rebellion and fretting againſt God, feeling her ſelfe defeated of her hope. Againe, ſometimes alleadging the greatneſſe, continuance of her ſinnes, her adding of ſpirituall ſinnes againſt the Goſpell, to morrall againſt the Law: beſides, often oppreſſed with the ſence of an hard heart not able to mourne or repent: oftentimes concluding againſt her ſelfe, becauſe many beleeved long ſince ſhee beganne to be humbled: or becauſe not humbled ſufficiently, or fallen from ſome ſteppes of tenderneſſe and humbleneſſe formerly atteined: or becauſe, ſhee began no ſooner, with a thouſand of of the like diſtempers, ſome from melancholy, others from ignorance, or raſhneſſe. Now then try thy ſelfe: hath God wholeſomely held thee under theſe buffetings, to ſhew the endleſneſſe and the reſtleſneſſe of them, to the end thou mighteſt by the power of the promiſe, here loſe one, there another? Haſt thou beaten them downe, as children with boughs beate downe Waſpes or Hornets flying in their faces? Haſt thou found the promiſe to allay thy horrours? and perfect love in God to baniſh theſe feares and enemies, ſo that as thoſe accuſers of the woman, Joh. 8. one after another they vaniſh and yeeld to the truth? Doſt thou feele thy temptations to Atheiſme, to deny the Scriptures, to deſtroy thy ſelfe, to caſt off hearing and uſe of meanes, and to fall off as Peters Chaines when the Angel ſmote him on the ſide? And doſt thou with Hanna ſhake off ſadneſſe, by the voyce of Ely, the promiſe? Doſt thou grow wiſer, teachabler, more hopefull than before? It is a good ſigne. For thus Abraham looked at the promiſe, not at Sarahs wombe, nor the ſlaying of Iſaac: So Caleb, ſo others.

1 Sam. 1.12. Num. 14.9. Iudg. 13.21.

Secondly, is thy faith a precious faith? Then it is more unto thee than all other thy graces, as a Iewell is above any other wealth: Faith having ſetled that upon thee which no other grace could, doſt thou keepe it as preciouſly as ſuch a Iewell deſerveth? Doſt thou account of other graces, as they borrow light from this? It is well: But eſpecially try it by this: Precious things will goe a great way.

Preciouſneſſe in 4. 2 Pet. 1.2.

2 How farre hath thy faith gone with thee? Hath it waited upon thee in thy courſe, and ſhall it ſo doe, till it leave thee at heaven gates? Haſt thou lived by it as upon thy ſtocke, in bleſſings, croſſes, duties, liberties? Pretious things will beare the tryall, as gold and the like.

3 Haſt thou beene much buſied in trying thy faith, willing to heare the worſt aſwell as the beſt, and to take nothing upon truſt? Precious things are of ſingular operation, as the ſpirits of wine, &c.

4 Hath faith brought ſuch ſweetneſſe into thee, as makes the ſweet of luſt bitter? Hath it purged thy conſcience from ſtrong luſts? Hath it derived the power of Chriſt thy King into thee, to ſway thine heart, canſt thou ſay thou carrieſt Chriſt as coales in thy boſome? By theſe effects and properties and ſuch other, examine the truth and ſtampe of thy faith, and if they appeare in thee, come to the next point of Sacramentall tryall with comfort. Thus much for the firſt tryall of faith in the firſt promiſe.

Second triall of faith by reviving it.

I come to the ſecond tryall of reviving thy faith at the Sacrament. Now this faith differs not from the former in ſubſtance, but but thus: it is a turning from the generall promiſe, to the particular promiſe of an ordinance, as the Supper. For the better direction of the reader, I will lay downe this duty by ſeverall ſteps, diſtinctly, firſt propounding the ground, then adding the tryall.

For the firſt of theſe. I ſayd before, that each ordinance of God is a ſeverall channell to convey the Lords goodneſſe in Chriſt to the ſoule. Although there be ſundry ordinances, and ſundry manners of conveyance, yet one hinders not another, but each hath his ſpeciall grace under the cheefe, (which is the Preaching of the Word) for the ſupply of ſeverall wants in the ſoule. The benefits of Chriſt are diſperſed diverſely in the ordinances, but ſtill Chriſt is one in all. 1 Steppe.

Try thy ſelfe then thus by the firſt rule. Doſt thou revive thy faith by turning the eye of thy mind carefully upon the ordinance, of the Sacrament, as the hand of God to ſettle the gift of Chriſt thy food and refreſhing upon thee? Doſt thou behold this ordinance! (ſo oft as it is offered) as a renued gift of God to the ſoule? as a marke of the wiſedome of God, plying thee with the Supper, as he knowes thy dayly ſpirituall ebbings and decayes require, And doth the hearſay of each Sacrament turne the ſpirit of thy minde towards it as a ſolemne object, which may not be wanted? Doth it poſſeſſe thy thoughts and memory more than common objects and paſſages of this life: Doe thy thoughts ſo mind it, heede it, doth thy memory ſo reteine it, as that it ſurvives other occaſionall matters, thy ſelfe longings while they be over, that this may poſſeſſe thy ſpirit? And doth thy preparation unto it cauſe all other things to lye by? It is a good ſigne of reviving. Tryall by it.

Secondly, proceed to thy Affections. I noted in the former Treatiſe in the chapter of the Supper, that the good things offered in the Supper are manifold. Looke backe and reade them. I ſpake alſo there of thoſe ends which the Lord gives them for, viz. That the ſoule may be healthy, growing, ſetled and fruitfull.

Try thy ſelfe alſo by this ground. Doth thy heart by the conſidering of all thoſe good things, revive and ſummon up all thy affections of love, joy, thankes, zeale, deſire after them? Doth not thy minde reſt in a bare view of them, till all the affections are up in Armes to covet them? And is it with thee as with a crazie diſeaſed man, comming into a Phyſitians cloſet, and there is ſhewed a boxe wherein his medicine lyes, which being applyed will heale him? Doth not ſuch a man faſten his eyes upon that boxe? Will he looke off? Is not that boxe precious to him for the medicines ſake? Trials by this.

Doth

Doth he not ſtand upon thornes till it be taken out and put into his hand? Doth he not thinke each minute an houre? and doth hee take thought for the parting with his money to buy it? Even ſo heere. Doſt thou digeſt the good things of the Supper, till thou have cauſed thy heart to conceive an heate of appetite and love of them? Doſt thou ponder them ſo as to leape for joy to thinke that thou ſhalt be healed there of pride, ſelfe, wrath: and filled with meekeneſſe, and heavenly minde, and gifts for thy place? It is a good ſigne, thou haſt revived thy faith for the Sacrament.

Math 13.44.

3 Steppe. Thirdly, the Lord offers the good things of the Supper in the like manner and with the ſame heart; wherewith he offered whole Chriſt in the firſt promiſe, and covenant of grace. He offers Chriſt thy food and reſtorative with as free, beteaming, honeſt and full an heart of love, as ever he did the other. There is no oddes, except for the better: for here is this ordinance (above all other) the Lord ſeales up his gift to the ſoule: that is, conveies it with the beſt ſtrength he can.

Try all by it. Try thy ſelfe then by this rule. Doſt thou revive and quicken the blunt edge of thy weake faith by this conſideration? Doſt thou beate out deadneſſe, benummedneſſe of faith, by this ground? Feeleſt thou as free and naked an aſſent of heart to this offer. Take, eate, drinke: as thou didſt to the firſt promiſe: Be eaſed. Take my yoake and my refreſhing to thy ſoule. Doſt thou charge upon thy ſelfe ſtrongly to reſiſt thy unbeleefe in the Sacrament hereby? Doſt thou urge it thus, my ſoule, except the Lord ſhould meane as hee ſpeakes: hee ſhould doubly falſifie himſelfe? His Sacrament is a double ſtrength, there is both a covenant and a ſeale in it: therefore it is a double confirmation, or elſe a double deceit. Oh! dareſt thou thinke the Lord can lye in that wherein he ſeekes thy double aſſiſtance? If thou dare not, then let faith here double her ſtrength and edge. If the ſtrength of man be but weakeneſſe to God, then what muſt this weakeneſſe be? how ſhould weakeneſſe it ſelfe gather life and ſpirit from it? If thou canſt thus revive thy dead faith at the Supper, it is a good ſigne.

Luke 22.19, 20.
Mat. 11. 29.
Heb. 6. 18.
1 Cor. 1. 25.

4 Steppe. Fourthly, (and eſpecially) I told thee before, that each ordinance hath his ſpeciall promiſes annexed to it, as prayer and faſting, thankeſgiving, &c. As that one of theſe ſhall caſt out Devils, which elſe will not goe out. And that he who prayſeth God, glorifies him: So the Supper hath ſpeciall promiſes. Take, eate, this is my body, Drinke, this is my blood of the New Teſtament. Both are given, and ſhed shed for you. My flesh is meate indeede, and my bloud drinke indeede. He that eateth my flesh hath eternall life: shall be satisfied: shall not hunger nor thirst any more, with many others. Luke 22. 18. Iohn 6. 55.

Trie thy selfe (above all) by this ground. Doth this promise really present the truth of God in speciall to thy soule? There are thousands of Receivers in the Church of God. But doth this promise speake in speciall to thee, as if there were no more Receivers save thy selfe? Is the promise of thy soule such a security as a specialty is from an able debtor, for the paying of a great debt: So that doe thou but sue the bond, and the law will restore thy debt: Is it so here? Thy name is not written in the Scripture, yet the promise assisted by the Spirit of Christ, layes the grace of the Sacrament as it were in thy lap (as Boaz did the Barley into the lappe of Ruth:) so that the Lord speakes by it in thy eare thus; Take it, drinke it. It is a sweet signe. Againe, doth the power, yea the omnipotency of God shine in the promise to thee, so that whereas thou doubtest how Christ can be in heaven bodily, and yet in the Supper Spiritually, thou wondrest how he should be in thousands of communicants at once, and how poore elements should be one with him, to convey him to thee: yet the power of a promise can effect this? Dost thou see that all the attributes of God attend his love, least thy soule should be frustrate? It is a good signe. Againe, doth the promise settle and beare down the feare and bondage of thy heart, arising from thy present sence of unworthinesse, darkenesse, and deadnesse? Doth it worke thy spirit to a holding fast of Christ, although unbeleefe would stave him off? And whereas thou would give God the lie ten times, during the space of one Sacrament, yet doth he promise, still hold thee close to him, till hee answer thee: so that as that poore dogge, Matth. 15. rather than the Lord Iesus shall send thee away empty, scraps and crummes shall serve thy turne? Canst thou feele such succour from a promise (notwithstanding thy formality and flatnesse were great before) and thy experience of fruit by former Sacraments be small? Dost thou thus strive in hope against hope, and fight for life against thy base Spirit? These are all good signes of faith revived for the Supper. Triall by it. Ruth 3. 15. 2 Cor. 2. 5. Matth 15. 27.

Fiftly, try thy selfe by the testimony of a good conscience. That will appeare by this. It dares not equivocate and dally with God, by serving him very studiously in one part of thy christian course, but forsaking him in many: but say thou with Paul, I have exerci- 5 Steppe. Act. 23. 1.

ſed my ſelfe in good conſcience continually.

Triall by it. Try thy ſelfe then by this rule, thus. Canſt thou ſay (as oft as thou art going to the Sacrament) Oh Lord, I make a ſhew of very ſolemne preparing my ſelfe and trying my faith, when I goe to thy table. But if it were onely my practiſe now at this time, and at no other, I ſhould goe and come from thee with a ſad heart. No Lord, I bleſſe thy name, I doe live by faith daily: I can ſay with Paul, The life I live is by faith in the Sonne of God; I appeale to thee who knoweſt, that if I goe to heare the word, I mixe it with faith; if I pray, I looke to my Advocate; if I have a Croſſe, I live in faith in Chriſt for ſtrength, ſelfe deniall and patience to ſupport mee; if I proſper, I beleeve all is pure to the pure, and given me in mercy; and in this faith thus trained and ſet on worke, I humbly come to the Sacrament, looking that as in other parts of life, and of worſhip, the Lord hath beene with me, ſo he will not leave me to my ſelfe in this. Tell mee, canſt thou ſay thus in truth, bee it never ſo poorely? It is a ſweete ſigne of a revived faith.

Gal 2.20. Heb.4.2. 1 Sam.7.12.

6 Steppe. Sixtly, try thy ſelfe by thy Sacramentall experience. The Sacrament being one meane of a Chriſtans food and growth, it becomes every one, having communicated, not by and by to vomit up his morſels, but to digeſt the bred of life till he find it his owne, bloud of his veines, fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone. By this meanes, every ordinance dwelling in the ſoule, will adde nouriſhment to it and better it dayly: which could not be, if it be forgotten as faſt as it is enjoyed.

Triall by it. Let thy tryall from hence be this: Doſt thou dayly quicken up thy ſelfe at each Sacrament, in the memory and experience of former fruit received? eſpecially, when thou haſt found it ſweeteſt unto thee at any ſeaſon, when thou haſt felt thy ſelfe moſt emptied in thee; faith moſt cleare and ſenſible, thy ſoule freeſt from earth and ſenſuality, and ſo of the reſt: haſt thou kept this experience by thee, as a child holds a ſweete thing in the palate as loth to forgoe it? Doſt thou by this triall goe to the Sacrament afterward with more hope and expectation of the like? Or, if thou have found the cantrary, that thou haſt had but a dead Sacrament of it, what doſt thou? Poſt it over and forget it, hoping it will be better? Or doſt thou record it often, and uſe it as a ſpurre of greater care & ſerious dealing with God next time, being afraid to tempt him: and yet loath to forſake him, although he ſhould hold thee off ſtill? If thou canſt thus revive thy faith by thy experience, it is a good ſigne.

2 Cor. 12.8.

Seventh-

Seventhly, Gods people ſo oft as they draw neere to him in duties, dare not ruſh upon him, but firſt humble themſelves in duſt and aſhes, as moſt baſe wormes and corruption. Then they pray for aſſiſtance in the ordinance, meditate and conferre about the right doing, and the fruit of it. Try thy ſelfe then by this. When thou goeſt to the Supper, doſt thou ſwell in the conceit of thy former ſtrong faith? Doſt thou ruſh upon God without prayer, or meditation? Or rather doſt thou jogge the arme of the Spirit (as the clapper ſhakes the corne into the Milſtone) that it may let fall the benefits of Chriſt out of the Sacrament into thy ſoule? That thou maiſt come to receive with better ſavour and ſtrength than thine owne? Doſt thou begge with the Apoſtles, Lord revive my faith? Lord make it a ſweete exceeding day: Lord, let not the meeting of profane blind receivers defile me! Let the fellowſhip of thine Angels and my brethren refreſh me! give me that I come for Lord, and deceive me not? Dareſt thou not through eaſe and ſloath neglect the ſanctifying of one ordinance by another? Doſt thou engrave the promiſe thus in thy heart, and blow up the poore ſpakle within thee? It is a good ſigne. 7 Steppe. Gen. 18. 27. Triall. Luke 17. 5.

Laſtly, try thy ſelfe thus: Doſt thou hold and cloſe with this faith of thine, thus revived, till thou appeare before the Lord in his ordinance? Suffereſt thou not Sathan to come betweene thee and home, the cup and the lip, to rob thee of thy wedding garment: but doſt thou claſpe it unto thee, that it may not fall off, till it have poſſeſſed thee with the gaine thou cameſt for? Doſt thou lay in to day, now for the bread of the day? And each Sacrament doſt thou ſay, Chriſt Ieſus, yeſterday, to day, and the ſame for ever? Its a ſigne of faith quickned in thee. So come and proſper. So much for the latter triall. 8 Steppe. Heb. 13. 8.

I conclude the Chapter with ſome uſe. And becauſe the whole is one uſe of triall (which is the ſcope) the ſhorter uſe ſhall ſerve. I will not trouble the Reader with former uſes: as to mourne for the wofull faith of ordinary receivers: or, reproofe of Gods owne, for counting this triall tedious, which God hath made a ſweete yoake to his: I will partly warne, partly exhort, partly comfort the good Receivers, and ſo end. Firſt then I warne them that they ſlight not this duty, reſt not in former faith, thinking the Lord tied to their girdles: Tempt him not to alter his courſe by your ſloth: but hold on ſtill triall of faith. Remember its the chiefe Sacramentall grace of all the reſt: All other without this, are fruitleſſe or counter- Concluſ. Vſe 1. Admonition counterfeit. This muſt giue both being and luſtre to all. Bring this and feare not. The Devill will fight againſt this as the King of all: if hee can wreſt this way, hee cares for no more, becauſe upon this hinge the doore turnes, I meane the joy of well, or ſorrow of ill receiving hangs upon it.

Vſe 2. Exhortation. Secondly, be exhorted to bring this faith; 1. Dare not venture without it. Faith in the Supper anſwers the act of ſprinkling the poſts of the Iſraelites doores, when they firſt eate the Paſſeover. Branch 1. Tell me, Durſt any Iew not ſprinkle his owne doore with bloud? Exod. 12. 21, 22. Durſt hee not as well omit the Sacrament? Did hee not feare the deſtroying Angell in caſe of neglecting it? Was not the promiſe of paſſing them over (when all Egypts firſt borne were ſlaine) in the doing of it? Therefore as thou wouldeſt ſhunne danger of greater nature, looke to it. Remember that faith doth ſet thee as thoſe Lamps under the oyle, dropping into thee from the promiſes of the Sacrament. Branch 2. 2. Againe, try thy faith, firſt in the maine promiſe. If thou finde thou wanteſt it, deſiſt for a time. Come not in thy baſe unbeleefe: rather make uſe of what I have ſaid about faith, and bleſſe God, that by ſuch an occaſion thou maiſt ſtore thy ſelfe with it for hereafter, and art now convinced of thy want. Perhaps thou never hadſt knowne it, ſave by ſuch an occaſion: therefore ply it hard, while ſeaſon laſteth. But if thou have got it, yet neglect not to conſider Gods worke in thy converſion, bleſſe him that thou canſt proove by what meane thou cameſt by it, what a promiſe is, what the roote of faith is, what the act, effects of it are: confeſſing it were hard for thee now to begin, or to be without it. Branch 3. 3. Revive it alſo as oft as thou commeſt; muſing of theſe laſt trials, or ſome of them, and linne not till thou finde them in thee more or leſſe, that ſo the Sacrament may light upon thee as dew upon dry ground, and thou maiſt count the approach of the Supper, joyfull newes, above the joy of a feaſt or banquet.

Vſe 4. Admonition Laſtly, let it be conſolation to all poore beleevers. The beſt will ſooneſt complaine. Oh! ſaith one, Here bee ſo many Rules, that I am confounded to thinke of my ſelfe, or to try my faith by them! But I anſwer. Proove but a droppe or dramme of faith unfeigned, precious and effectuall, and the Lord and thou ſhall not differ about meaſure. Bee ſure thou have any, and then know the Supper is an ordinance to make weake ones ſtrong, not onely (nor cheefely) to Objections remooved. make ſtrong ones ſtronger. Touching the objection of the weake, I have ſpoken in the Chapter of the triall of our eſtate. To adde a word word more, another objectiō is, I cannot find the promiſe ſo powerfull as to overpower & perſwade me to beleeve with full ſtreame of heart. I anſwer, I grant that oft the phraſes and ſimilitudes of Scripture imply, That faith is a ſenſible thing, and a conviction of heart: So its called, John 16. 9. Its called the rayning downe of righteouſneſſe: The receiving of Chriſt: The buying of the Pearle: The running into the ſtreame, Eſay 55. 6. and the like, as drawing neere to God, comming to God: Howbeit we muſt know the ſpirituall ſenſe of theſe phraſes imports not alway a reflexe, ſight and knowledge that we have it, and much leſſe ought we to ſtumble at ſuch phraſes as imply the meaſure of faith, as to be carried with full ſaile: To rejoyce with joy unſpeakeable, &c. Onely let a poore ſoule beware of reſting in any meaſure, till hee have attained faith with power and feeling: (which is a ſtranger in theſe dayes.) But to haſten; this I adde, Many talke of the overpowring of the heart, who know not what it meanes: it is not the meaſure of full aſſurance, but the true drawing of the ſoule from Idols to the living God. Therefore poore ſoule diſmay not thy ſelfe: perhaps thou ſeeſt not full light of beleeving, nor the whole breadth and length of it as yet, not yet what the Lord meanes to ſettle upon thee: Thou art as one that dreameth: yet God was at worke to deliver Iſrael, when they were as they that dreamed. Long anguiſh cauſed them to heare of a Saviour, as one that was farre off: yet hee was neere. Give not the Lord over, but even in the darkeſt bondage, cleave to the meanes, ſeeke the Lord, and leave the ſucceſſe to him, be not taken off from hope by any feare within or without. Reade Acts 12, Peter in his ſleepe thought he ſaw but a viſion of deliverance: yet the Lord was at worke even then: He came not at firſt clearely to conſider the matter. But what did he? Surely he did as he was bidden, even in his dreame: he aroſe, ſhooke off his Chaines, put on cloake and ſandales, followed the Angell through iron doores and gates: and at laſt, when hee was paſt danger, the Angell departing, he underſtood all the buſineſſe. So perhaps the Lord will doe by thee. When all Angels and proppes are gone, and thou left to the bare promiſe, ſtript of other helpes, thou ſhalt bee as glad to cling to the Lord in it, as ever thou wert backward to it? But in the meane time, be doing as thou art bidden, and obey, and thou ſhalt one day ſee light. Receive the Sacrament with weake faith (for ſo God bids thee) and more ſhall be given thee. And ſo I ſhut up this weighty triall of Sacramentall faith.

Chap. VI.

Of the triall of repentance at the Sacrament.

Entry upon repentance. Caveat 1.

I Muſt in the entry upon this point, advertiſe the Reader of ſome generalls, which may make for the better conceiving of the ſcope of the whole Chapter. Firſt, let him remember that which was before ſaid, That in preſſing the tryall of repentance, I doe not meane that repentance concurres to the act of receiving ſo properly as faith: But in a ſecond reſpect, as affording a ſweet witneſſe to the truth of faith already ſhaped in the ſoule: as alſo to honour the pureneſſe of the ordinance with ſutable pureneſſe of conſcience and courſe. The ſecond thing I would have noted is: That although in this tryall of repentance, it is to be ſuppoſed that each receiver of the Seale, muſt firſt be in covenant, that is, have his heart renued: and in that reſpect that whole labour might be ſpared, how the ſubſtance of repentance may be tryed: yet, conſidering that it is not alway with receivers as it ought to bee, but many ſtill will come without it. Therefore as I have done already in the point of faith, to ſhew the true forme and being of it, ere I come to handle the renewing of it at the Supper: So here I will doe for the grace of repentance. The rather leaſt any ſhould alleadge his ignorance what it is, or wherein it ſtandeth: yet I will be ſhort, becauſe I have elſewhere handled it largely, viz. in the third part of my Catechiſme, in the two firſt Articles. The third thing I note is, That our ſpeciall and maine inquiry ſhall be (in this triall) about daily exerciſe and renued practiſe of repentance at the Sacrament, and not only as repentance is taken for ſome penitent affection occaſioned: but as it is taken for that walking with God which conſiſts in the duties of mortified and quickned obedience to God and men: and that either in an ordinary courſe of innocency, or in the caſe of ſome ſpeciall revolt.

The ſecond.

The third.

Grounds of the point, firſt Scripture.

Before I handle the triall of either the ſubſtance or the practiſe hereof, I will ground the neceſſitie of this triall both in Scripture and reaſons. For the former whereof: Firſt, the Analogy of the old Paſſeover will prove it: wherin ſundry charges were given which typifie repentance, and that in each part of it. As we know the ſorrow and irking of heart, and mourning brtterly for ſinne committed, was urged under the ceremony of ſowre hearbes; not onely to shew what it cost the Lord Iesus ere he could satisfie: But to shew what they are who come to the Sacrament, even such as pierced him by their sinnes, and therefore ought to come in bitternesse to the signes of his body and bloud, and eate their sweet meate with sowre sawce. So also the Lord required a separation from the filthinesse of the heathen, when they came to eate the Paschall Lambe, Ezra 6. 21: yea from all legall pollution, Num. 9. 6. which as it concerned the Iewes alway in any offering or worship, so especially at the Passeover. And the Apostle, 1 Cor. 5. 7. urgeth one other solemne ceremony of casting out leaven. He that kept in his house any leaven at that time, more or lesse, was to be cut off. Now least we should thinke this to have lost his force under the Gospel, hee saith, Purge out therefore all sowre leaven (meaning their Communion with that incestuous man, which sowred their holy assemblies) that wee may be a cleane lumpe, even as ye are unleavened. And why? For Christ is our Passeover sacrificed for vs: therefore let us eate him with sincerity and repentance. And the weaning and abstinencie of the poore lambe from the damme foure dayes before, typified no lesse than separation of such as worship God thus, from the love of their sweet lusts and liberties, that they might be free for the Lord: and when the Apostle urges the Corinthians to examine themselves: what intends he save that having defiled themselves by their love feasts, they would search and cast out that sinne, ere they came to the Sacrament.

Now for Reasons. First, every ordinance requires repentance least the ordinance bee defiled. Tit. 1. 15. To the pure, all things (not onely meates) are pure: But to the impure, all things (both blessings, crosses, and ordinances) are defiled. The sin of man can put no defilement into the things themselves, but it makes them so to the sinners that use them. It is a rule concerning both Minister and people, Be yee holy, that beare the vessels of the Lord. And, I will compasse the Altar with washen hands. And the Prayers of them that turne their eares from the word, are abominable. S Paul requires us to lift up pure hands without wrath and doubting. And S. Peter bids them that would heare to grow therby, to cleanse all superfluities away. Secondly, no man can cōfort his own heart that he hath saving faith except he have repentance. Act. 3. 26. Act. 15. 15 But true repentance argues faith, because it onely purifies the heart. True faith workes by love, and the end of the commandement is love: from whence? from a pure heart, and whence is that? from faith unfaigned. See Gal. 5. 6. Acts 24. 16. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Triall of repentance.
1 By the ſubſtance.
Tit. 3. 5.

But I haſten to the triall of it. And firſt (very briefely) of the ſubſtance of it wrought in the ſoule. This may be tryed by the roote of it. No repentance can ſubſiſt without an inward principle: That is, the ſpirit of renovation wrought by the Word and Baptiſme, putting into the ſoule a ſeede of God, and the Image of God as farre as in theſe ſuburbes of heaven, I meane in the militant Church, may bee obtained. Now for the opening this to the Reader, let him in a few points conceive and try himſelfe.

In ſundry particulars.
1. The mother of it.
Epheſ. 3. 17.
2 Cor. 5, 14.

Firſt, in the mother and nurſe of it: That is, faith, ſhedding the love of God, Rom. 5. 5. into the ſoule, being of it ſelfe deſtitute of all ſuch liſt, ability, life or ſavour. The Lord in reconciliation, by faith becomes our ſanctification. God having freed us from our old yoake, will put upon us a new moſt willingly, which eaſes our heavie hearts, and pacifies the conſcience, ſets the minde in frame, and ſhewes us Chriſt in his true & lively colours; not a Chriſt of looſeneſſe, but as the truth is in Ieſus. That having the root of his love ſet in our hearts, we may containe his ſweetneſſe, and it may ſet us on worke, yea conſtraine us to doe the like to him. Oh! How ſhould this try us? What is our repentance? Is it a cutting off ſome ſhreds of evill, or a pang of good devotion now and then in tempeſt, thunder and lightning, in our paſſion of feare, or when God pleaſes us. Or is it an inward workeman at the roote of our hearts, and doth it ingraft and inoculate us into his ſtocke? Doth it as a corner ſtone hold in and incompaſſe us, that wee can more forbid fire in our boſome to burne us, than the love of God to compell us to love him and turne our hearts to him? It is a good ſigne.

Prov. 6, 27.

2 By the matter.
Act. 26. 18.

Secondly, try it in the materiall of repentance. Its a converſion or turning home to God frō our Idols: a ſetting of our face backward from evill, and our backes forward to goodneſſe: and that in a contrariety. As if a foole going on pilgrimage to Rome, and her Idols, ſhould there bee ſmitten, and turned home (with Naaman) to the true worſhip of the living God. This triall with ſearch alſo, for the repentance of moſt is no ſuch turne. Men have rectified thoughts (ſome-

(sometime) of a good course, and their sinnes irke them, and tire them, and cause them to ease themselves by complaints, and turne aside from them in their accusing moode: But it is with them as it is with Sea-men, who can hold their course as well when they coast about, as when the winde is on their backes. So do these: their lusts keepe still in their spirit, though they keep them out of sight as David did Absolon, forbidding him his presence, when yet his heart was with him. But these lusts will come againe as Absolon, and that with more violence and sway, afterward, because the heart is not turned from them, and set in a contrarietie. Hatred is not become love, nor love hatred, outside is not inside, and inside outside: Still old love abides, and the falling out of old friendly lusts, prooves a renewing of love. A bad signe. 2 Sam 14.14.

Thirdly, try it by the inward forme and nature of renovation, which is the worke of the Spirit in fusing the habit of Gods holinesse into the soule; and letting in the efficacy of his power into the same, to forme it to a new creature in righteousnesse, and according to the Image of the Creator. Its the second breathing of the Lord the breath of life, not to be a living soule, but a quickned spirit. Try thy selfe hereby: if repentance be in thee, then the Lord Christ is in thee, and stampes thee for his owne, sets his superscription upon thee as upon his coine: causes thee to bee like himselfe, and endues thee with his owne savour and qualities, purgeth thy old caske, and sweetens thee with new liquor: Now pureness, innocency, faithfulnesse, thankefulnesse, soberness and contempt of the world, with deniall of thy self, are powred into thee. If then thou finde no presence or operation of new savour, instinct, appetite and affections to be wrought, but old Adam still as hee was wont, as sensuall, carnall, proud, selfeloving, thou hast no repentance. By the forme. Ephe. 4.22. 1 Cor. 15.45. Ier. 31.33.

Fourthly, try it by the parts of renewing, quickning, & killing. By quickning, I meane that power of Christ his righteousnes & resurrection, not only in a dead habit, but in a revived power: whereby thy dead spirit to the matters of God is stirred & changed to a lively life of grace. We doe not say that a man is alive to his trade and businesse, when he lies on his deathbed: though he live, yet hee is not lively, unwearied, active and cheerefull to it. Againe, by killing, I meane, that other part of the Spirit of Christs crosse and grave, which destroyes that old life and vigor of sinne, that rankenesse, jollitie, and crowne of pride which was in corruption: For, 4. By the parts. 1. Quickning. Rom. 6.8,9,10. Rom. 8.11. 2. Killing. Rom 6 6,7. Rom. 8.10.

though ſinne be call'd but a privation; yet by the law it conceives a kinde of being, and becomes living, turbulent, rebellious, and venemous in the ſoule, till the power of the law of Chriſt doe ſuppreſſe this ſtrong man and ſpoyle him, and tumbles him into the grave of Chriſt, that he may lie and putrifie there. This is an excellent triall, when a man can ſay, I was once dead to goodneſſe, without the Goſpel: but now I am lively to it, and I was alive to ſinne, and where I would be, but now dead to it, as a woman to a dead husband, as Abigail to dead Nabal. A living death, and a dying life is in my ſoule, and a ſtirring ſpirit in both; my owne dead and living ſpirit is gone, and Chriſts both dead and living ſpirit is come in place, and in both my heart is ſtirring, and on wing, neither ſlat in mortifying evill, nor unoccupied in good, but to both ſet at liberty. I ſay this is good.

Rom. 7. 9.

1 Sam. 25.

5. By the Extent.

Fiftly, try it by the extent both in parts and degrees. If it be ſound renewing, it will be both univerſall, and increaſing. In the firſt reſpect it is like Leaven, which being hid in three peeckes of meale, leavens all, and ſowers all: So doth this Leaven of renewing, it ſeaſons and ſweetens all the parts; the underſtanding, judgement, and memory: The will and choiſe therof, the paſſions, the ſpirit and conſcience, the appetite of nature, the ſences, and the members. Though it be weake in all, yet it is entire and through all, body, ſoule, and ſpirit. And it is increaſing in all, for life is growing as life is decaying: Try thy ſelfe by this alſo. For it is with moſt of us as with one that is in debt, who perhaps would ſell off ſome peeces of his land lying out of the way and leſſe looked at. But as for his faire lands of inheritance, which lie cloſe and about his Mannor, he will not deface them, nor ſell them for any price. So it is with moſt men: Their renewing ſtands in ſome outſides, they can tip their tongues, or colour their braines, and command their ſences; but when Gods Image muſt be in the inner man alſo, they will none of that: Their ſpirit muſt ſtill run it owne ſtreame, to die for it. And ſo for their growth: many have ſome violent offers of goodneſſe, as mercy, zeale and religion: but alas! All they doe, addes no one cubite to their former ſtature, they keepe not the good they had, much leſſe put it to advantage, growing to more ſweetneſſe and eaſe by experience, or cleaving to God with fuller purpoſe of heart, when they ſee the moſt to warpe. This is a bad: but the contrary a good marke.

Mat. 13. 33.

Rom. 12. 2.

2 John 8.

Act. 11. 23.

6. By the contrary.

Sixtly, by the comfort of the Spirit within it ſelfe. For becauſe we wee live here to bee conformed to our head Christ, therefore wee cannot be wholly spirituall and mortified, but we abide in part renewed, in part old: (not because Christ cannot make us better, but because we are not capable of perfection till we live by sence.) Therefore grace will worke a perpetuall sence of strife in our soules against the law of sinne in our members. Not onely a desire to be with our head in fulnesse of glory: But the whiles to grone and sigh under our burden; till every drop of bloud thereof bee spent: especially to warre against our strong, personall, beloved lusts which fight in us; till the house of Saul bee downe, and the house of David be up. We shall feele this combat in us, as Rebecca felt in her wombe by her twins: Till the Lord answer us, The elder shall serve the younger. Try then thy selfe herein: if this strife be held up in thee by the Spirit, not in thy judgement only against thy ill will and lusts: But in the very same part of thee, in which corruption fights: judgement against judgement: will against will, affections against affections, conscience against conscience, grace against grace, it is a good signe. But if sinne rule, and there be not scepter against scepter, if there bee much foyling, many falls, few or no resistances, but rather willing slavery and bondage both by sinne, and to it, it is a poore signe. And this is all I will say of a mans trying the roote of renovation in himselfe: Perhaps the view of these may do some good to comfort an heart that can finde them, or admonish such as are decaied: or scare such from the Sacrament as never had them. But I hasten to that which more neerely concernes Sacramentall repentance, which is the practise of repentance.

1 Cor. 13. end

Psal. 157. 2. Rom 8. 23. 2 Cor. 5. 2.

Gen. 25. 22.

Concerning which I will divide my selfe into these two maine heads: First, The practise of it in an usuall course of Christianity. Secondly, in our revolts: And my method shall be this. First, to lay down the will of God about them both, and in what particulars they stand. Secondly, in the use of the doctrine, to presse the triall of them at the Sacrament with a revived affection. For the former then, the usuall practise of repentance, may be thus divided, either to the first understanding part; secondly, the willing or affecting part; thirdly, the acting part in the life. The judiciall part stands in the inquiry and search of those speciall errors, abuses, and corruptions of heart, tongue or life, which have passed us from Sacrament to Sacrament or before: beginning (as hee Gen. 44. 12.) at the eldest, and ending at the youngest: Both spirituall, as hardnesse, 2 By the practise of it. In two things. 1. Ordinary cause.

Either in the understanding.

Lam. 3. 40. deadneſſe and defiledneſſe of heart: of the tongue, raſh, idle, uncharitable, falſe, vaine offenſive or ſuperfluous words: morrall of the heart and life: hollowneſſe, earthlineſſe, unprofitableneſſe, As ſearch. ſelfe-love, pride, rancor and bitterneſſe of ſtomake, paſſions of rage, baſe feares, hopes, joyes, ſorrowes: unrighteous, unmercifull, cenſorious deedes and paſſages, or the like. Theſe although (like Saul, and Gehazi's booty) they lie hidden, muſt bee watched as they utter themſelves and breake out, notice being taken and a Regiſter of them kept by us, that they may ever be before us when we come to the Lord. And if the conſcience play booty in concealing, or excuſing them, the ſoule muſt goe to the candle of the Lord Prov. 20. 27. which ſearches the bowels of man, and begge light to diſcerne, and ſtrength to convince it ſelfe of them, & the curſe due to them, till the ſoule be even cauſed to ſtop her owne mouth, and give up her weapons of defence, ſtanding as mute and guilty before God, of them. Concerning which worke of ſearch, becauſe I ſpake in generall in the firſt Chapter of this Treatiſe. I remit the Reader to that place. Here onely this: It were good for us to make uſe both of our beſt friends and worſt enemies, if wee would know our ſelves: and not wholly be our owne judges. Our friends perhaps Helpes to ſearch. ſees us better than wee our ſelves, ſpy out our ſecret haunts, looſe 1. liberties, declining in our zeale, and falling to our pleaſures, loving them and ſuch baſe companions as become us not, for our pleaſures ſake, more than Gods ſecret company, or his ſervants. So alſo our 2. enemies ſometimes might tel us our ſecret corruptions: As he once 3. who fought with his enemy, ſearcht out that impoſtume which his friend could not. Yea Gods croſſes (as great enemies as we thinke them) if wee would hearken to their voyce, would tell our hearts preſently, what the ſinne is which God aymes at: perhaps unfruitfull deadneſſe under bleſſed meanes of grace, dallying with the ordinances, neglect of our family; earthlineſſe, and walking looſely 4. with God. And although we ſhould not neede to ſeeke out to ſpy the faults of others for lacke of our owne: yet it were a good way to ſearch our own in the glaſſe of the ſinnes of theſe times, the deſperate formalnes of men, and abhorring of any more religion than will runn in the ſtreams of our eaſe and wills: Idolatry, contempt 5. of the beſt examples. To end, if ſome of us would but aske our conſciences for what ſinnes we are faint on the ſudden, to forſake and turne backe upon the Sacrament for feare of ſhame (when yet perhaps wee came into Church with purpoſe to receive); it were not amisse. And so much for this judiciall part.

not

The next is the soule part, or the affecting. And here in the first place is required a broken mourning heart for sin being thus searched out, and that with uprightnesse and tendernesse, as Zachary describeth it: They shall see him whom they have peirced, and mourne as one that mourneth for his sonne and heire: yea, they shall be in bitternesse (note the phrase) that is, godly sorrow shall soke and sape them, they shall bee in the power of it, so that it shall over-rule them, they shall not easily shake it off; yea it shall bee exceeding sorrow, as that of Hadrimmon for the sadde losse of Iosia: and further it shall bee fervent and sincere, both signified by the secrecy of it, husband apart, wife apart, and family apart; as wee say, Hee mournes truly that mournes without witnesse. Such a sorrow, such teares, hearty and unfaigned, not in a moode, comming from a full heart, impotent and powring it selfe out before God plentifully, because it hath greeved the spirit of so good a God, so patient and long suffering; I say such a one is the true badge of repentance: which issues from faith. Wherein either teares are abundant, as at Bochim or Mizpeh when the people drew buckets before the Lord; or else in the want thereof, the heart sheds teares of bloud, and the soule sighes under a burden which she cannot well utter. This sorrow usually beares the name of repentance as being a maine companion inseparable from it: and that true eating of sowre hearbes of him that ate the Passeover: which hearbs grow no where, save in the garden of grace. Onely the love of that God whom the soule hath dishonored even in the middest of mercy, and when she peirced the Lord of life, then was the Lord willingly peirced to death by her, that she might live, Act. 2. 37. I say, this love onely can melt a heart of stone, and breake it in peeces, so that it cannot but repent, whereas before by the hardnesse of heart, despising the patience of God, it could not repent. True search of heart will worke true brokennesse, and cause the belly to tremble, and rottennesse to enter into the bones, that it may finde peace in the day of trouble. Yea as the Lord turned the captivity of Iob, when hee prayed for his friends: So, in this through mourning of heart, the Lord turnes the captivity of the soule and converts it to himselfe. No terrors of conscience can soften an hard heart; but rather they will harden it and binde it up to greater hardnesse: As we see, an hammer may breake a bell in gobbets fit to be melted: but the fire onely can melt them, that so they may be moulded a new. So the love of God can onely effect this mourning after God, and broken heart, a moſt welcome ſacrifice to God: till which the ſoule cannot became the Lord, herſelfe to bee offered up unto him, Rom. 12. 2.

Rom. 12. 2. 2 Confeſſion. Hoſ. 14. 2.

Secondly, the heart thus broken breakes out into confeſſion; and (as Hoſea ſaith) takes words unto her ſelfe to expreſſe her ſorrow: for confeſſion is the true vent of godly ſorrow. This confeſſion is an uttering and powring of the heart out to God, when once ſorrow hath filled it to the brimme: and therefore in all thoſe texts almoſt where we have examples of ſorrow, confeſſion followes immediatly. Confeſſion (without this open, full, and affected heart) is as ſapleſſe and barren a thing and as unſavory a formality as can be: Onely this broken heart will breake out into open and ingenuous confeſſion, which elſe keepes the impoſtume within her ſelfe, and hides it. Thus David ſweetly, Pſal. 32. ſaith, While I hid my ſinne, and nourisht an hard heart, my bones were conſumed, and the fire burnt within me: But when my heart thawed, then I acknowledged my ſinne, that is, powred out my ſoule in confeſſion; and thou forgaveſt mee the iniquitie of my ſinne. This confeſſion is ſampled by the matter which is ſearched out, & according to the ſorrow which the heart conceiveth: and by both becomes a moſt humble, plaine, tender and hearty expreſſing of ſinne to the Lord, not only in the ſubſtance, but the circumſtances of aggravation. Its no mincer or leſner of it, but to the uttermoſt enlarges it againſt her ſelfe: according to either the greatneſſe, the extention and effects, the hainouſneſſe of it by the perſon committing it, the perſon againſt whom, the heart wherewith, the time when, the place where, and all to make up an ingenuous confeſſion againſt it ſelfe. Oh! that one under ſuch meanes of mercy, even in coole bloud, with the heart of a Traytor, ſhould with ſo high an hand, with ſuch ſpirituall wickedneſſe offend the Lord (ſay it be by uncleaneneſſe, by living in a courſe of unprofitable hearing, hypocriſie, formality, vaine glory, pride, earthlineſſe, eſpecially unbeleefe, or as the caſe requires) yea that I ſhould ſinne againſt ſuch mercies and longſuffering of God leading me to repentance, and that to the horrible ſcandall of Religion, and hardening of many in the like ſins! Oh woefull wretch, how ſhall I looke thee in the face! Thus confeſſion turnes up the bottome of the heart, with ſhame & deteſtation, yea, treading it ſelfe under Gods feet as unworthy to breathe in his aire, or look up to heaven; and makes it ſelfe vile and odious, comparing

Pſal. 32. 5, 6.

paring it selfe in her filthinesse, with the pure eyes of God. See the confessions of the holy men in Scripture, (Ezra, Daniel, David, Iob, Paul, and others) confounded in themselves for their sinnes. Dan. 9 8. Ezra. 10. 1. Ezra 9. 6. Psal. 51 3. Iob. 42. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 10

Thirdly, the soule having thus arraigned and indited her selfe before God, doth receive sentence against her selfe pronouncing her selfe by her guilt, to lie justly under the vengeance of God for her sinne: and doth justifie God in all his sayings, that he may be righteous (whatsoever becomes of her.) Yea she brings her selfe even to the suburbs of hell, as she deserves: looking at Gods glory above her owne redresse. This exceeds any repentance of an hypocrite: whose terrors and confessions are but to vomit up the morsells which lourde the heart for the present, but after are welcome. This I say, is the third step: So to condemne her selfe as to applaud and justifie Gods sentence: If he say, she is a Traytor, she grants it; if he say she is cut off, and accursed, she confesseth it righteous: in all the Lords accusings and judgings shee prevents him and judges her selfe, saying, True Lord, thy judgements are just: If thou should'st make all my dayes miserable, it were but just, if all wrath at once should seaze upon body, name, minde, conscience, goods, wife and children, all were just, yea whatsoever is not hell, is mercie: hell it selfe being but just: and under this confusion and heape of guilt and wrath she lies, as one held downe with it; as one that lies under the ruine of some peece of building, falling upon and oppressing of his body. As we see oddes betweene a face made white with colours, and appalled with a disease: betweene a vizard and a countenance consumed and worne with lying bedred: which (though no man speaks) utters its owne weakenesse. And this spirituall subjection of a penitent heart lying under her sin and shame, the holy Ghost much expresses true repentance by: saying of Ephraim, I was as an heifer that knew no yoake, but after I was corrected I turned: Yea I smote upon my thigh, yea I was ashamed and confounded because I bare the reproach of my youth. This holds the pearking proud heart of man, under the hand of God wholesomly: and sometimes the anguish and confession of the soule workes upon the body: so David and Iob tell us, that the wrath of God turned his moisture into the drought of Summer: That his flesh was as a bottle in the smoake: that it was consumed, loathed dainty meate, and was brought to the grave. By which we must not conceive pangs of despaire, but the wounds of the conscience under the guilt of sin as sinne, and wrath as wrath, so much Ezra 9. 6. Psal. 51 3: Iob. 42. 6. Thirdly, sentencing herselfe. Psal. 51 4. 2 Sam. 24. 17. Ier. 31. 18. Psal. 32. 4. Iob. 33. 20, 21. Psal. 6. 6, 7.

the

the more bitter by how much more ſuſtained by God in the hope of pardon: for all true Repentance, yea each ſeede of it preſuppoſes ſome ſeede of true faith in pardon.

The fourth, Indignation.

The fourth and laſt in this kinde is Indignation and holy revenge of a mans ſelfe, as his owne greateſt enemy for his ſinne: Which followes upon the other, becauſe the ſoule that loves God, hates whatſoever reſiſts his righteouſneſſe: and as it doth hate ſinne in others, ſo eſpecially in her ſelfe, becauſe it knowes it ſelfe beſt: which zeale and anger againſt ſinne doth not onely ſtand in a meere pang of paſſion and diſtaſte, but even in a revenge of it ſelfe upon both it ſelfe and ſinne and all inſtruments thereof, in token of utter deteſtation. And why? becauſe it meanes no more to meddle with it; for if it did, it could not attaine to this degree. Firſt it conceives a true enmity againſt the ſinne ſimply as ſinne, and oppoſite to the Image of God, be it greater or ſmaller, and the deeplier, as it diſhonours God moſt deepely. This is a worke of the Spirit putting a contrary principle into a man, to hate that which he loved, and love that which he hated, a thing which to fleſh, is impoſſible, for no man ever hated his owne fleſh. As it was with David, that nothing could cauſe him to hate Abſolon: neither the murther of Amnon, nor deflouring of his Concubines, nor treaſon againſt his own perſon: ſo it is with a naturall man, nothing can ſet oddes between him and his luſts, the amity with them is ſo rooted. When therefore true enmity is ſet between ſinne and the ſoule, that it can ſay, Lord I hate it, yea as my rankeſt enemy, its a worke of the Spirit: for before it counted him her enemy, who ſought to ſow the leaſt diſſention betweene ſin and her ſelfe. Then ſecondly, ſhe hath indignation againſt her ſelfe for ſin: We know how our nature is given to miſ-cal our enemy; So doth a repenter miſ-call himſelf. Thus the Corinthians are ſaid to revenge themſelves for that bolſtering up the inceſtuous perſon in his ſinne. David called himſelfe (not in a pang but cordially) a wretch, a foole, a beaſt for his diſtruſt of the promiſe. Paul alſo, O miſerable man! And this revenge reacheth to the very inſtruments of ſinne, that they may never provoke the ſoule to the like any more. As we may ſee in thoſe, Act. 19.19. who deſtroyed their curious bookes of Witchcraft, amounting to a great value. Yea laſtly, the ſoule of a penitent revenges it ſelfe by intercepting all proviſion of old luſts, and denying it ſelfe the lawfulleſt liberty (if tending to occaſion the ſinne) as Iob would vow that hee would not feede his eye with ſo much as looking at a maide, maide, to cut off lust: so farre would hee bee from fulfilling it. Prov. 5. 8. And Salomon bids the young man to balke the way, and not so much as to come neere the strange woman. This is to beare the voluntary markes of Christ, even to cut off the right hand, and pull out the eye that offends. Mat. 18. 8. And this for the fourth point of affection.

The third and last is the life part, or the part of practise. And therein a repenter doth two things. 1. Renounces his sinne, 2. Returnes to the Lord. Reade Esay 55. 7. For the first, What were the other two, but meere equivocation, without this? This is called a departing from iniquitie: a forsaking of our evill way and workes: and is used by the holy Ghost as a description of repentance. When the soule so falls out with sin, as that it sues a divorce, and abhorreth a Reconciliation. Saying with David, Remove farre from mee all the wayes of deceit. This is the soules utter resigning up all her right and possession of sinne: so that as she who hath given up her right to her land, never lookes to bee a penny the better for it, nor to receive one penny maintenance by it, so here. And this is very materiall. For sinne is like an old harlot which will plead welcome after a long intermission, by old familiarity and sweetnesse. As that harlot which Austine answered: when she met her lover and told him it is I. He answered, but I am not I. When all unlawfull gaines in shops and trades, old base company, & unlawfull games: When old stollen pleasures and waters offer themselves in a golden cup, saying, How canst thou want us? Then for the soule to answer by wofull experience, how dare I buy repentance so deare? How dare I returne to that I have abhorred? What fruit have I had of those things, whereof I am ashamed? Doe I hasten to woe, that I repent me of my repentance? When Achish saw David to goe against Saul and bare armes against him: Hee told him: Now he had made himselfe stincke in Sauls nostrils, hee shall returne no more. How odious were it then for thee to returne to that sinne, which the Lord hath caused to stinke in thy nostrils? An hypocrite would faine be a repenter, but he would keepe that which cuts the throate of repentance: As David would faine be King of Israel and keepe his crowne but his first question is, Is the yong man Absalon, alive and safe? What absurdity was here? Or how could these two stand together? But repentance answered as Cushi did, Would all the enemies of the Lord were as he is! Hee is thrust through and dispatcht, never to trouble thee with his treason more. So here, The third. The life. Esay 55. 7. Either' in renouncing sin. Psal. 116. 29. renouncing renouncing of evill ſtands at the elbow of repentance, and when the old remnants of luſt ſuggeſt to the ſoule how ſweete it is, to keepe under-hand ſome ſweet partnerſhip with ſinne, as uncleaneneſſe, againe ſhe prompts it thus, How ſhall thoſe that are dead to

Of returning to God. The latter part of the practice, is, returning to the Lord. For repenting is no ſtaggering betweene two: its no darke carriage, rather ſtanding in the abſence of ſome vices, than the practiſe of vertues. But, an apparant turning from the one that it might returne to the other: not to one or two duties, but to the Lord, univerſally, entirely, equally and faithfully, uprightly, and conſtantly, according to the meaſure of mercy received. And by this phraſe the holy Ghoſt uſually urgeth repentance. For why? returning to God is ſuch a cloſing with God in the promiſe of reconciliation and mercie: as proceedes to a cleaving cloſe to him in all his revealed will thoſe meanes uſing, which ſerve either to purge out corruption, or to nouriſh goodneſſe; obſerving and favoring all occaſions offered to draw neerer to God in the fellowſhip of his graces, and in the increaſe of holineſſe. And to this courſe ſhe endeavours (as infirmitie will admit) to bend the aime and ſtreame of her ſpirit, her thoughts and affections, without wearineſſe walking with God, till hee come unto her, watching to it, girding to it, and ſtanding with her loynes girt and lamps burning, that at the comming of the Lord ſhe may be found faithfull and well occupied. And thus much for a view of a Chriſtian ordinary practiſe of repentance, ſo farre as I thinke meete for this place; leaſt any pretending willingneſſe to try themſelves, ſhould alledge they know not how. Luke 12. 36.

The ſecond followeth, that is, the practiſe of repentance by occaſion of revolting from God. For we have hitherto ſpoken of repentance, rather as it is Gods way, than as many finde it to be or practiſe it. They have many ſtarting holes, and goe in and out of order as horſes out of their traces; y many make the way of God nothing elſe ſave a falling ſickneſſe, ever a falling and a riſing, as thoſe in Iudges did: which the Lord abhorres. Sometimes by their ſecret and inward declinings of heart & ſpirituall wickednes and infidelity, hypocriſie, formalitie, and timeſerving, ſecurity, pride, &c. Sometime by morall open falls into worldlineſſe, uncharitableneſſe ſtrong paſſions and luſts, neglect of the meanes. In this caſe, the Lord hath provided a repentance of recovery, and redreſſe of ſuch falls; for ſhall a man fall and not ariſe? Shall he lie ſtill in the ſlough as an Aſſe under his burden? No, but repent of his backeſlidings, and make up his breaches, and make peace againe. But how? (may ſome ſay) is this to be done? I will give a ſhort draught of this alſo, and ſo draw to application of the whole, by way of triall. The 2. In revolts; Iudg. 4. and 6. and 7, 8. &c. Ier. 8. 4. Ier. 3. 14.

Know then, that for ſubſtance, this repentance is no other than the former: onely it differs in circumſtance. And for the better conceiving of it, obſerve theſe particular acts of it. Firſt, as the Lord ſuſtaines his people ſo, even by that ſeede of his in them, that they ſhal not totally ſhake out the ſpirit, nor yet powre out themſelves ſo far into ſin as to ſinne with a full bent and ſtreame of ſoule, but with a checke and controll of grace: ſo, when conſcience is awaked by any word or work of God upon them, they are kept from extremity of utter deſpaire. Corruption through the malice of Satan, is alwayes ready to ſuggeſt utter deſerting of Gods, & that they are caſt out of his ſight. As we ſee in thoſe pangs of the beſt of Gods children in Scripture, And that, 1 Branch Eſay 38. 11. Pſal. 31. 11 Ionah 2. 4.

Lam. 3, 18. Scripture, Hezekia, David, Ionah and others; yea in the Church of God, forsaken for a time in captivity: all which were by temptation, brought to the graves brinke, and to themselves cut off from
Ier. 2, 25. the land of the living: and to say, No, no. There is no hope. Here then the first worke of returning to God, is, To stay and stop themselves in this headlong ruine; and by some glimpse of God a far off to be kept from utter dashing in peeces. Thus wee see in all those examples (if wee looke into the texts) that the Lord wrought a stop
Iona 2. 2. of despaire: Ionah in the Whales belly, and in his horrors, yet stayes up himselfe by an hope: Yet (saith he) I will looke backe to thine
Lam. 3, 19. holy Temple: and the Church in the Lamentations, considered and felt the gall and the wormewood, (that is, that God smote her not to cast her off, but to draw her to repent) and so she had hope. It cannot bee thus with the reprobate: who as they fall totally, so
1 Sam. 23. 6. they want an eye to see God in their horrors, but apprehend as dis-
Mat. 27. 5. mall and finall desertion of God, as Saul, Iudas, and others; so that they are sent away packing from the presence of God without pitty, and left to what end themselves chuse, even oft to lay violent hands upon themselves, the Lord not caring what becomes of them. It is not so here: But some light is given to them that see Gods meaning in the afflicting of their soules with wrath, not that hee might give them a taste of hell a comming: but that hee might pinch them to returne home, and to turne them from the pit.

2 Branch. Secondly, the Lord addes a more cleare sight of himselfe to his fallen servants, and causes them more fully to call to minde his mercies of old, and thereby to be more sensibly upholden. This is caused by a reviving of his seede in them, which cannot die: So Psal. 119. 52. David, even in his agonies when (to his feeling) the Lord had forgotten him: yet remembring times past, was comforted. [An hypocrite I know will catch at these things to bane himselfe, but children must not be starved therefore] They seriously weigh this, That neither their goodnesse did first worke their pardon, nor yet that sinne (truely repented of) can cut off their estate in grace: for why? The gifts of God are without repentance: and his Covenant Esay. 54. 8, 9. is eternall. Even as the covenant with Noe (as the Prophet speakes)
Rom. 11. 29 The Lord Iesus being made sin, all sin for the elect, sin of offence & 2 Cor. 5, 21. sin of revolt, they dare not abridge his merit, and therefore conceive the covenant (by this meanes established) to be sutable. This then is the 2. step of the return of the godly: The experience of former free mercy, whē they had no title: therfore now having a title which which sin cannot cut off the elect from) they much more are stayed by it. By which meanes she sees, that even the sinnes of deepe hardnesse of heart yeelding to temptation, and the violence of lust, secure lying still for a time in sinne; or other sinnes, as falling to embrace the world, cleaving to base fellowship in evill, are yet curable revolts with God, and there is balme in Gilead for them, to heale them: not to encourage the soule to tempt God further, but in the sense of bottomlesse mercy to returne home for ever, as Onesimus, by occasion of his running away, became better to Philemon, than ever. Philem. 15.

The third steppe is, that grace in the children of God fallen, doth cleere up the understanding from that confusion which sinne else would cause in them, and deterre them from God, and from any heart to returne. Thus it is with the hypocrite: his minde doth so present the multitude of sinne, in so intricate a manner, that it confounds the spirit, and causes him to thinke, that his sinne is above pardon. The slavery of his defiled minde is so great when hee weighes the woefull course which he hath runne, adding drunkennesse to thirst, and heaping up wrath against the day of wrath, that he is one who hath runne out above his ability to pay; and therefore his booke of accounts is irkesome to cast over: it is death to him to thinke of it Thus it was with Cain: each hundred of yeares that hee lived, the debt of his murther was so encreased by other sinnes and the penalties thereof, that at last it became inextricable. But repentance in the true children of God causes the view of sin and the chaine thereof to be presented with some hope of forgivenesse; because although perhaps the conscience is amazed, yet its not privy to that treachery which the wicked were carried by in sinning. And therefore their sin is said to be ever before them: they are said to come to themselves; Peter is said to weigh his sinne ere he went out; which argues, that the weight of it oppressed him not. This reviving of the minde from the horrour and oppression of it, is a great mercie in the midst of such misery. Ionah was infolded as in a Labyrinth of Sea, Whale, and Conscience; yet in this gulfe hee was not swallowed up, but conceived in his minde a possiblenesse for God to bring order out of his confusion. So that the first occasion of revolt, the circumstances attending, the degrees following, and the danger incurred, rather serve to magnifie mercie, in keeping the soule from utter Apostacie from the living God, than to beate off the soule from hope.

The fourth (and one of the maine) is the recovering of a ſenſible and broken heart, after long hardneſſe by the deceitfulneſſe and ſweet baites of ſin. A moſt ſweete fruite of the ſpirit of election. For it was not poſſible for the hard heart of Saul or Iudas to relent, upon the check of conſcience: there was no drop of the ſeede of repentance in them. It would ſeeme impoſſible, that Peter and David after ſo long a lying in ſo hideous ſins, ſhould at the firſt conviction of Nathan, relent, and breaking through all the barres of his ſinne, ſay, I have ſinned. It was not in the words ſpeaking, (for Saul and Iudas ſpake the ſame) but in the broken heart which uttered them. But the cauſe was, That grace and mercy, which lay at the roote. Oh! that they ſhould after ſuch mercy once felt, and vowes ſo oft renewed, ſo baſely handle the Lord, and hazard (as much as in them lay) their title to heaven, and ſell their birth-right! And yet ſhould the Lord renew a ſecond Charter, or rather the firſt a ſecond time! Oh! it pierces him to the quick! This chaſes away the cloudes of dedolence and impenitencie, and cleares the coaſt againe.

The fifth Branch.

The fifth is, That yet they doe not ſo eaſily ſhake off their feares: the Lord ſo orders it, that either by his word or workes, they feele his wrath for their revolt, ſo ſeiſing upon their conſcience, that it doth worke out and purge their corruption (through mercy) ſo that they vomite up their ſweete morſels: And as one under the Phyſician his hand, lying in an hot Bathe, ſweates out the venome of his diſeaſe, ſo is it with a penitent ſoule. God mixes gall and wormewood for them to drinke: He cauſes them to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of their youth with ſorrow, though long ſince committed; he payes them for old and new at once, makes their bed a bathe of teares; till he have cauſed all that ſinne which they dranke in with ſuch greedineſſe, to returne backe with as much loathſomneſſe! Then, being under this racke, he makes them feele in their owne ſpirits, how their ſinnes lies upon his ſhoulders; and by their owne pinching he makes them confeſſe: Now I ſee what my pride, ill company, ſtolen liberties come to, and muſt coſt, ere I be ted of them! As I like ſuch ſawce, ſo let mee returne to the meate againe! I thought I had but dallied, I caſt arrowes and darts into the fleſh of the Lord Ieſus, in part! But now they gugge mee! Now I ſee the Lord will not beare all, I muſt beare ſomewhat, and if I provoke him, it muſt be to the confuſion of my face. As I troubled and grieved the Spirit of God, ſo the Lord troubles mine this day! The ſhame, ſhame the ill report, the ſorrow and ſting, outward and inward, which I ſuſtaine; ſinne is no triſle.

Sixtly, the Lord now in ſeaſon proceeds to offer himſelfe in a promiſe to this revolting penitent. And that in two kindes. Firſt, That their revolt hath not extinguiſht mercy. See Eſay 57. 17. I will heale their covetouſneſſe, Ier. 3, 1, 2. If a mans wife play the harlot, wilt thou returne to her? Wilt thou not write her a Bill of divorcement? Yet returne to me, and I will receive thee after all thy whoredomes! And againe I will heale all their backeſlidings, &c. So Revelations, Chapt. 3. verſe, 19. Be zealous and amend. Yea the ſpirit of grace in that fulneſſe of ſatisfaction by Chriſt, doth fix and ſettle ſuch promiſes upon the ſoule, ſo that it heares them not as the ſound of many waters, but dwels upon and digeſts them as concerning her: So that they leave not a wanzing conceit, as in preſumptuous hypocrites, who ſinne that grace may abound. But they ſo faſten upon the promiſe as a reall comfort to cure them of their falling ſickneſſe. Secondly, the Lord reveales the promiſe to them, as the due order of their recovery: For whereas the ungodly doe returne to their trade, upon the ſuppoſall that their doggiſh vomit ſhall ſerve the turne: Loe, the Lord alway comes betweene the revolting and repenting of his owne, with a ſavory application of the promiſe: teaching them, that if there were no more but their mourning to make up their repentance, Alas! It would vaniſh and come to nought. Therefore he would have them lay hold upon the promiſe of free grace, which may quiet and cleanſe their conſcience, and reſtore them to that former influence which they had from grace: And although their pipes are ſet ſtill in the welhead, yet becauſe they are ſtopped, the Lord by faith cleares the paſſage of grace for them, that they may partake that ſtrength and encouragement from their head, which may cauſe their repentance to be ſound, and put new hope of holding out into them.

And this alſo may ſerve for a view to the Reader, of Repentance upon Revolts.

Vſe. of it, 1. Having thus finiſhed the ground of Sacramentall repentance, I ſhould adde the trialls. But ſeeing that will better agree with an uſe of triall by it ſelfe, I will haſten to the Vſes of the point, and conclude with Examination. The firſt Vſe then of this point is,

Terror. 1 Sort. Terrour to many, who dare ruſh upon the Sacrament without this grace: Alas! they know not wherein this preparation ſtands. They make of Repentance no other than the ſpeaking of three words at their death: By the which reaſon they might as well put off the Sacrament till they die. As for the ſearch of their ſinnes: alas, looke how they have walked, ſo they walke ſtill, the workes

Eſay 3. 9. of the fleſh are manifeſt. No man neede light a torch to ſearch out thoſe ſins which they proclaime, as Sodomie, drunkenneſſe, ſwearing, Sabbath-prophaning, uncleanneneſſe, lying, covetouſneſſe and all other abominations; and yet when the Sacrament comes, to it they will goe. Their ſinne is written in their forehead, and lies cluttered in their ſoule, and unſearch'd from ſeven yeares to ſeven. If any ſeeke to convince them, (Preacher or friend) they are ſo high and ſtately, ſo jolly and alive, that they are ready to lie in

Luke 18. 1, 2. the faces of their reprovers. And as they reverence not man whom they ſee, ſo much leſſe God whom they ſee not. Nay, moſt of them ſhunne the light, leſt their ſins ſhould be ſeene. As for any breaking

Luke 15. 18. ſin comes amiſſe) or returning with the Prodigall; ſo, in ſtead of making up their revolts, their whole life is nothing elſe but one falling ſickneſſe: if their courſe were but ſurvey'd one day, how from morning to evening they cut out the day, ſpending it in the purſuit of one luſt under another, from drinking to luſt, from that to gaming, pleaſures, eating, company, ſloth and ſenſuality: it were eaſie to eſteeme what their whole life amounts unto.

Secondly, to theſe I may joyne another ſort of common and carnall or civill Proteſtants and Hypocrites, who thinke themſelves the beſt receivers: but alas if repentance be as I have ſaid, rooted in renovation of the Spirit, planted in a courſe of walking with God, and redreſſe of their falls: then are theſe Phariſees as farre off as the other Publicans; for they were never rolled upon their leez, and therefore their taſte and filth abides in them. They are cloſer than the former, but no chaſter; their leaven is not purged out, ſtill in the midſt of all their hearings, Prayers, and Sacraments, as falſe, unbeleeving, unrenewed, and unmortified in heart, tongue, affections as ever: their ſin hath ſeene no light this many yeares, but is keept within as the mizers hoord: If they can with much adoe keepe out of groſſe evils, ſimper before the honeſter ſort, and get up their names once, let them alone to maintaine their opinion with ſlineſſe and temporiſing ſubtilty; when yet in all theſe wayes of theirs, ſeeming good in their owne eyes, they were never renewed by repentance: not to ſpeake of a worſe kinde of ſome of them, who have ſo long dallyed with God and men, till they have deceived themſelves, and grow open revolters and returners with the dogge to their vomits againe. And yet in theſe ſinnes, either the heate of open, or the guilt of ſecret wickedneſſe, who but they dare venture upon the Sacrament?

2 Sort.

Ier. 48. 11.

Prov 30. 12.

Oh! yee wilfull reproaches, and ſpots of Aſſemblies, (more worthy of Church cenſure, than private terrour of a pen) how dare ye ruſh your ſelves upon this rocke of the Sacrament, and ſplit your ſelves in peices? But perhaps ſome of you are not ſo farre gone: but you will ſay, It is a good thing to come to the Sacrament with repentance, and hereafter you hope to repent, but as yet yee finde it too hard a taske; hereafter you hope to turne a new leafe, (they goe farre that never turne) and fall to keepe your Church better, and heare, pray, and reade good books: But oh poore wretch! what wilt thou do the whileſt? The Sacrament is preſent, & calls each moneth or quarter upon thee; Repent, repent, and come, elſe come not: and thy repentance is to come, thou haſt none for the preſent; what? Look'ſt thou to be welcome in hope of after-repenting? What if thou be taken away (as thouſands have beene, who have hoped for more) before another Sacrament come? Oh foole! rather bleſſe

God for theſe warning-peales of the Sacrament, and that it will not let thee lye ſleeping in thy ſinne, but awakens thee to repent:

Acts 8. Oh! ply the worke in ſeaſon, if it be poſſible, that the wickedneſſe of thy courſe may be forgiven thee; then ſhalt thou rejoyce (as many have done) for the watch-word of a Sacrament, if it ſhall ſend thee to the Law, and to the covenant for an humbling and convincing of thy ſinfull ſoule, and a hunger after righteouſneſſe; then ſhall the ſeale be ſweet unto thee. But as for this dallying with God for hereafter, alas! it is not, becauſe thou meaneſt to bring it at laſt, but to ſpin out time, and ſpare thy ſelfe a labour of repenting at all. For why? Is it not as eaſie for thee to alleadge it next Sacrament as this? When ſhall there be an end?

Admonition. And ſay thou hadſt a leaſe of thy life (as Cain had to no purpoſe) what uſe wouldſt thou make of it, ſave to abuſe the patience of God leading thee to repentance, and according to thine hard heart

Rom. 2. 4. which cannot repent, heape up wrath againſt the day of it. Thou promiſeſt repentance hereafter, and loe, God is hardening thee for time paſt; How ſhall the clay that lies in the Sunne be ſofter? Oh breake off thy dallyings! Thoſe many peales which both Word and Sacrament have rung in thine eares, have made them deafe, and ſhalt thou repent with a deafe eare, who couldſt not with an open? If God will give each penitent ſoule forgiveneſſe, will hee therefore give each ſinfull dallyer, repentance? How wilt thou anſwer him for thy not renewing thy covenant with him at each Sacrament? Whereas thou rather haſt renewed and ſealed up to thy ſoule thy covenant with thy luſts, and made each new Sacra-

Come not at the Sacrament while thy falſe heart is in thee: eate not thine owne bane and condemnation; excommunicate thy ſelfe (if the Church doe not, or the Miniſter cannot) till thou repent, and the Lord bleſſe this counſell to thee.

Vſe 2. Reproofe. Secondly, here is ſharpe reproofe to Gods owne people, for living in any ſuch baſe diſtemper, as might blemiſh their repentance, and make their Sacrament uncomfortable. I know the world is ready to caſt falſe aſperſions upon the beſt. But as for ſuch, their innocencie is their breſt-plate; and they may take ſuch accuſations, Iob 31. 36. and weare them openly without feare, as Iob ſpeakes. No, I onely ſpeake of ſuch as truly and deſervedly are caſt upon profeſſors of piety (either ſound or thinking themſelves ſo) as this, who are ſo zealous

zealous as they in the first Table, in hearing Sermons (three or foure on a Sabbath) and receive Sacraments duly and often; but where be their fruits? Where is their repentance, or their good workes? How many leave their places where the Gospel is to be supported, and the poore releeved, and lye in private houses in the Citie, pranking up themselves in fashions, raking up portions for their children, taking their ease and jollity, neglecting calling and charity, and living upon their Revenues, without either good doing, or giving example; making it their life to hearken after newes, or to improve their wits and braines in all abilities, and under colour of much hearing and Religion in publick, open the mouthes of Papists against Protestants, as Solifidians, and fruitlesse in good workes. So others have God much in their mouth, but breake their promises as fast as they make them; they will bite and pinch in their dealings, are hard and sore in their buyings and bargaines: Others not to be trusted, but time-servers, and affecting the company of the sensuall and carnall, more than the godly; very intemperate in their pleasures, loving them more than God, and their wills better than heaven: passionate and soone stirred to rage, but hardly appeased; if displeased, fierce: living in the married estate very offensively, bringing up their children dissolutely, and the like. Oh! consider in the feare of God, what dishonour you doe to the Sacrament, and what bad preparation you make for comfort there? If any of you be such for want of soundnesse, looke to your selves, and set Saint Iames his Trumpet to your eares; Oh vaine man, knowest thou not that faith without workes, and repentance, is dead, drie and saplesse? Seest thou not how thou passest thy time away in an empty, proud, and idle Religion, as unsavory to God and men, as pleasing to thy selfe? But if there be soundnesse in thee, seeme not worse than thou art; honour thy faith with fruits, and lay up such a treasure for thy selfe against thy receiving, as may meete thee there with joy, and give thee more sweete peace than all thy ease, fashions, and seeking thy will can give thee. Remove that (Butt) which enemies to profession shoot at, zealous, but covetous, religious, but proud, hatefull, &c. And give Religion the entire honour of thy heart, as well as thy shewes, and then shall one Sacrament be more truly sweete to thee than many, and Religion shall truly honour thee, as well as thou hast honoured it.

Iam. 2. 2. 20.

Thirdly, it should instruct us what necessity of mourning there is for the wofull impenitencie and prophaneneſse of many, and hypocrisie pocriſie of others, who make the Sacraments their ordinary diet. And yet who ſhall gainesay them? How had we neede to pray for the ancient diſcipline of the Church, for the purging of ſuch? And the whiles to turne our feaſt into a faſt of ſorrow, for the boldneſſe of ſuch ſpots; and the offence cauſed by ſuch, to them that deſire the pureneſſe of the Ordinances? When Xerxes beheld hundred thouſands of ſouldiers on an heape, he wept to thinke in how ſhort a time ſo many men ſhould be ſwept from the earth; how ſhould then a Chriſtian heart (which hath prevented that danger to it ſelfe) lay to his ſoule the ſad ſpectacle of ſo many thouſands, as, either for lacke of meanes or elſe under the contempt of meanes, daily ruſh themſelves into hell, and eate and drinke their owne judgement for want of repentance?

Vſe 4. Exhortation. Fourthly, let it be exhortation to ſuch as would receive worthily, to bring repentance with them to the Supper. Let even the approach of the Sacrament ſmite your tender hearts to thinke how poorely yee have profited in repentance, ſince your laſt receiving. Yea, what a curſory ceremony their vile hearts would make of the Sacrament, if the Lord did not ring this Alarum-bell in their eares. 1 Sam. 12. 19. Even as they, 1 Sam. 12. 19. mourned (in the time of thunder and lightning) for all their lewdneſſe, but eſpecially their asking of a King: So at the ſeaſon of the Supper ſhould each Chriſtian revive his repentance, and mourne as for all, ſo eſpecially the ſinne of bad receiving. Gen. 41. 9. As Pharoah's Butler could ſay, This day my ſinne comes to my remembrance; ſo ſhould every good man ſay ſadly upon the day of the Sacrament: Oh Lord, how poorely prepared went I to it? When God revived me a little, ſoone forgat I it: Even as the foole that hath ſeene his face in a glaſſe! Alas, the old favour hath returned inſtantly. I ſee Gods Sacrament ſeaſons me not with feare any long time together; an hundred toyes have worne off the edge of it from mee; and I am over head and eares, if not in luſts, yet in calling, buſineſſe, liberties, vanities, retaining no thought of my Covenant there made? Oh! revive your repentance yet more lively and cordially than before: There is a way of getting and gaining more by the Sacrament than yee are aware. If yee would deny your ſelves, mourne for your ſlightneſſe, and bring faith to ſeale up better care and covenant with God, there is no time paſt, but the Sacrament ſhould arme you ſtronglier than ever againſt Satan and your luſts: frame and mould you more to obedience with delight in the inner man, prevent falls, reſtore you being fallen, fallen and cauſe you to grow in grace more than ever. Which if you had once taſted, who ſhould drive yee from the Sacrament? Or ſhould yee come to Church, meaning to receive, and yet depart without it? or (which is worſe) give advantage to the Devill and the world to ſet upon you the more fiercely, by occaſion of this defiling your ſelves. No ſurely, but be confirmed in comming, the oftner, the welcomer.

Fifthly, and eſpecially make we this Doctrine, a rule of triall to us about our Sacramentall repentance. I have laid down 3. grounds in this Chapter, which might ſerve for this uſe, to a careſull heart. Likewiſe in the triall of our eſtate, Chap. 2. at the end, I have ſaid ſomewhat which ſorteth well with this point. Yet leaſt I ſhould leave the Reader unſatisfied, let me here helpe ſomewhat toward ſetting this triall on worke, I will cull out ſome few, leaving the Reader to apply the Reſt: Vſe 5. Examination.

And firſt, try thy ſelfe by this marke. Thou knoweſt the Sacrament is a reall ſetting before thine eyes, the body & bloud of Chriſt ſlaine and crucified. Now it was prophecied by Zachary, that repentant ſoules ſhould ſee him whom they have pierced and mourne. How is it then with thee? Doſt thou mourne to ſee the Lord Ieſus pierced at the Sacrament? Doſt thou as well take thought for him as for thy ſelfe? Is thy heart broken, to thinke how thy pride, hollowneſſe, and ſelfe-love have ſhed his precious bloud, and beene the ſpeare to pierce him? I meane not that thou ſhouldſt whip thy ſelfe for the cruelty of the Prieſts and Scribes, (as Papiſts doe, themſelves being as bad) but that the coſt of thy redemption doth abaſe thee, and thy ſinne humble thee even to hells brinke in thy owne ſenſe. And doth it deepely affect thee, that thy ſinne cauſed the Lord to lay ſuch loade upon his Sonne? Doth it make thy ſin truly irkeſome to thee? And dareſt thou not the ſecond time crucifie Chriſt to thy ſelfe? but rather carrieſt all thy beloved darlings to his Croſſe, that they may there loſe their life and heart-bloud, ſacrificing them in an holy recompence unto him. It is a good ſigne. Triall 1. Zach. 12. 10. Rom. 12. 2.

Secondly, art thou willing by any meanes to be informed of thy ſinnes, not onely morall, but alſo ſpirituall, thoſe that doe moſt defile thy ſpirit, and vexe the Spirit of grace? Is that Miniſtry moſt welcome to thee, which carrieth in the ſpirit to ſearch the depth of thy heart? When thou canſt overtake thy ſubtill heart, and finde out the turnings and tricks of it, the farre-fetch'd devices of it to keepe thee in ſuch a courſe, as maintaines ſelfe and Triall 2. Ephe 4. 30.

Triall 3. Thirdly, is the uprightneſſe of others the servants of God more highly esteemed by thee, than thine owne, yea than the opinion of others, though they thinke never so highly of thee? Feeleſt thou no bottome in other mens praises, when thy heart tells thee they

And doſt thou desire they might thinke of thee as thou art, that they might as well pray as prayse God for thee, as being privy that the greateſt part of thy vertues are not the least part of thy corruptions? Doſt thou still see an excellencie in the members of Christ above thine owne? And some such base

Triall 4. Fourthly, canst thou yet acknowledge that good which God hath done for thee with true enlargedneſſe of heart, and without swelling? Canst thou joyne humility with thanksgiving, without prejudice to each other? And although thou feeleſt when evill is present, as pride, selfe, yet thou dareſt not bite on Gods glory in thy obedience, because there will goe some scurfe of thine in the streame? But thy heart prayeth, Lord let me shine still and honour thee, but dash all shining upon my selfe, and getting up into thy saddle by mine owne stirrops? It is a signe of a wise and holy seeking Gods end: and that thine heart is cleane.

Triall 5. Fifthly, doſt thou love righteouſneſſe it selfe as righteouſneſſe, 1 Theſſ. 5. 22. be the thing and subject of never so small a nature? And doſt thou hate sinne as sinne, be it never so little in thine eye? Is the one precious to thee for that pure natures sake which it resembles, and the other loathsome, because it is opposite to it? It is a good signe.

Triall 6. Sixthly, when thou feeleſt thy heart touch'd for thy sinne, and humbled in prayer: dareſt thou not stay there, but proceedeſt to renounce it as seriously? Or rather, doth not thy tongue goe before Mat. 26. 33. 56. thy heart? So that when occasion is offered, it seemes sweeter and welcomer, than when there was none? As Peter vowed to stick to his his Master when there was nothing to trie him, but when there was, then to stick to him was too hard and heavy to him. If it be thus, thou knowest not thine owne spirit. Take an ensample; Thou professest that thou darest not be unrighteous; but it falls out, that thou art convinced of some bad dealing: now thou art willed to renounce it, that is, to make such a satisfaction as thou hast damnified, not being thine owne judge, but as they who are wise thinke best? If thou be as free in renouncing, when either shame by open confession, or losse by restitution lies upon it, it is a good signe; else thine heart playes booty.

Seventhly, are the sinnes of others, the sorrowes of the Church, as sensible, bitter, and laid to heart by thee, as thy owne? And canst thou drowne both other joyes and sorrowes of thine owne in these? And accordingly to thy affections, so are thy prayers, endeavours, procurements for the peace of the Church, and against her miseries, and those that cause it? And canst thou forget thy selfe and thy businesse for this purpose? It is well. Triall 7. Psa. 119. 136.

Eightly, dost thou rejoyce alway to be crossing thy selfe in those succours and supports of thy sinne, which thy corruption suggests to thee, if grace did not gainesay? As for example, findest thou thy selfe eager of base gaine? And when it tickles thy spirit, canst thou in the chiefe of that sweetnesse, cut off thy hand and foote, and intercept this fuell of thy lust, even by revenging thy selfe upon thy selfe, and giving that to the poore, or a good use which hath beene the instrument of fulfilling thy lust? It is a good signe. Triall 8. 2 Cor. 7. 9.

Ninthly, if God call thee to suffer for a truth of his, about which thou feelest a strife; on the one side it is suggested to thee, that there be greater truths to suffer for, in which thou couldest finde more comfort than in that truth thou art called to suffer for: on the other side, thou canst not deny the lesser truth to be a truth; in such a case, to be willing to suffer for any truth, commending thy selfe to God, and craving that thou maist not be afraid to suffer for greater if called to it: yea, to count the price of any truth to exceede thy best contentments; it is a good signe. Triall 9.

Tenthly, if not onely thy knowledge doe sway thee to dutie, but thy conscience also. And if there be wrought in thee, not only some generall awe of God, but also a quickning power, acting, and putting thee forth to the lively delight in good, and hatred of evill, (whereas an hypocrite hath only a dead-hearted knowledge without power) it is a good signe. Likewise, when the experience Triall 10.

thou haſt of ſinne and of grace is not dead, but a ſtirring experience, quickning thee to goodneſſe, and mortifying of corruption, it is a ſweet ſigne. I might be larger; but I leave the Reader to collect others from former grounds. By the paw judge of the Lion. Thus much for the triall of revived repentance at the Sacrament.

Vſe 6. Conſolation. Laſtly, This Doctrine affords us uſe of Conſolation, which belongs to all the poore ſervants of God, that cannot (as they would) comfort themſelves in their triall of repentance. Oh! ſay they, our life is a continuall revolting from God, but rare repenting: if (ſay they) repentance be ſuch as thing as ſtands in the renewing of the ſoule, the ordinary practice of the life, and recovery out of our falls, we cannot ſay much for our repentance. Well, but I demand of thee, Are theſe wrought in thee, for the kinde? Is there a ſound heart in all, though much weakeneſſe? Then thy weakeneſſe ſhall not ſunder thee and the Lord at the Sacrament. But why then (will you ſay) doe you preſſe repentance ſo ſtrictly? I anſwer, Not to urge repentance in perfection here, for that is for heaven; but to provoke all beleevers to the greateſt meaſure that they can here attaine unto. And let ſuch be comforted, that the Sacrament belongs to them for their further increaſe. It is as if a poore Lazer ſhould have ſaid, He was not worthy to ſtep into the poole, when the Angel had roared the water. Oh! but if the poole ſerved to heale ſuch an one, it had beene a wrong to have deprived himſelfe of the poole, by that argument which rather ſerved to encourage him. God ſees not the unavoidable defects of his owne, nor imputes them: he lookes at that which is good and his owne in them, and paſſes by the bad which is theirs. In this caſe thy faith muſt

Rom. 10. 4. fulfill the righteouſneſſe of the Law, when thine owne is too weake: That muſt be thy chiefe Robe to cover thee, though thine under-garment be worne and thinne. Oh! but they cannot mourne (they ſay) their hearts are dead and ſenſeleſſe; no ſooner doe they reſolve upon a forſaking of ſinne, but it ſalutes them againe preſently. They keepe no Covenant almoſt which they renew at the Sacrament. Well, I praiſe you not for this: yet I hope you mourne, that you are ſo mourneleſſe, and you are not dead ſo farre forth as

Heb. 12. 12. you feele it. Strengthen the feeble hands, and make ſtraight that which is crooked: Revive the edge, and furbiſh the blade of your repentance. But to refuſe the meanes of your growth and increaſe, becauſe you are weake, were to conclude; That becauſe you are but poore, therefore you moſt ſtarve your ſelves. Nay rather, you have the more neede of ſtrength; Goe to the Sacrament that your complaints may be fewer; abſtaine not becauſe you feele cauſe of complaining. For ſo you may adde oyle to the flame, and the devill will rejoyce, but to be ſure your ſelves ſhall be the greateſt loſers.

And touching the triall of Repentance ſo much.

Chap. VII.

Of Sacramentall love, and the triall thereof.

I Come now to the fourth grace required of all true partakers of the Lords Table, which is Love. A moſt maine grace for the Sacrament, and of ſpeciall familiarity with it. And for the better conceiving hereof, I purpoſe (God willing) to handle theſe three things. Firſt, I will ſhew what this Love is; ſecondly, I will prove the truth of the point by Scripture and Reaſons; thirdly, I will make uſe of the Doctrine, and therein I will propound the trialls of this grace. Premiſing ſtill this caution, that as needefull a grace as this is, yet I make it not of that eſſentiall nature for the very act of receiving as Faith, though otherwiſe moſt neceſſary for the Supper, becauſe it is that grace which improves and beautifies the whole Communion of Saints, and much more the Communion (for ſo we call it) of the Supper.

The fourth grace is Love.

Entry.

Three things.

For the 1. of theſe three; Sacramentall love (differing no otherwiſe from the grace of love, than as reviving of it differs from the thing it ſelfe) is a grace of the Spirit in the ſoule of man, and the daughter of faith, renewed by occaſion of the Sacrament in all true receivers; whereby they are ſo united unto all that are their fellow-members, that they enlarge themſelves to all occaſions of their good, for the ends of Communion. In this deſcription are ſix diſtinct things: 1. The Author of it: 2. The begetting cauſe: 3. The circumſtance of reviving: 4. The forme or being of it: 5. The act of it: 6. The end it propounds. For the firſt, I call it a ſanctifying grace of the Holy Ghoſt in the ſoule. Vſually we plant Love in the Affections and concupiſcible part: But here I plant it in the Will of the ſoule, aſcribing to it an higher ſeate, than an appetite or paſſion, as being grounded in the choyce and purpoſe of the ſoule, and planted by a farre ſtronger agent than affections are, and to an higher end: But of this I ſay the leſſe, That the ſpirit is the right of all fruits of the Spirit, The fruites of the Spirit are love, Rom. 5. 5. joy, peace, &c. And the like he ſaith in ſundry places. For the Spirit ſhedding the love of God into the barren and hatefull heart of man, cauſeth it to conceive like love to them who are begotten, as that was in him that begat. Hence that of our Saviour: Thou evill

Fourthly, that which eſpecially is occupied about brethren, ſuch as are borne of God, members of the militant Church: All theſe arman, but of God.

§ Vſe. To diſcerne this Coyne of heaven from all counterfeite ſtampes

Gen. 49. 5. lowſhip in ſinne; Simeon and Levi, brethren in evill: yea, this is almoſt as ſtrong and deepe as hell. Theeves have their league, and drunkards their love, union and fellowſhip, yea ſworne brotherhood. The ſpirit of errour and hereſie is ſtrong to linke the heart in love: yea Ieſuites are ſo knit to their Catholicke league, 1 Cor. 13. 1. that death cannot diſſolve it. And yet Paul implyes, that this may want true love. Men have a gariſh humour of love and pangs of affection, ſo that in a moode, they pretend the greateſt love, but on the ſudden, they either ſtabb each others, or elſe hate each other more than ever they loved. As the bands are which tie men, ſo is their love. Carnall luſts, gaine, ſweetneſſe of manners, politick reſpects to make uſe of each other, naturall regards, likeneſſe of manners, or profeſſions, or diſpoſition of ſoothableneſſe and courteſie derived from Parent to Childe, or a civill love, ſtanding

in

in an entercourſe of mutuall offices, (love me, and I will love thee) or ſuch like; all of them are a ſort of love which Religion doth not diſanull, but ſeaſon and ſubordinate in the elect, to this fruit of the Spirit, even as the powers of the naturall and ſenſible ſoule are ſubject to reaſon. A Chriſtian hath other love, yet from a better principle of ſpirituall love.

The ſecond thing is the begetting cauſe of it, and that is Faith effectuall and unfained. Hence Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 5. ſaith Love proceedeth from a pure heart, and faith unfaigned: and as a workeman both makes a toole of his trade, and workes by it alſo: ſo faith begets this love, and worketh by it. Now faith in this worke doth two things: 1. It breeds it; 2. Purgeth it: Firſt it breeds it, and that two wayes: 1, By an infuſing quality: 2. By a perſwading. The infuſion of it is this: Faith having poſſeſſed the ſoule with the love of God in reconciliation, diffuſeth this love into the faculty of the Will, planting it there and cauſing the ſweet therof to dwell in it. Chriſt comes not into the heart without the Spirit of Chriſt. Now the Lord Ieſus his manhood was filled with this grace of love; the Spirit of the Godhead ſhedding it without meaſure into him: That from his fulneſſe wee might receive grace for grace. Looke then what a loving heart, tender, mercifull, forbearing, forgiving, doing good to body, to ſoule: looke what amiableneſſe, gentleneſſe, uſefulneſſe was in his heart, that is ſhedde into the beleever. Now what that was, his whole life ſhewed: hee loved and prayed for his rankeſt enemies, died for thoſe that crucified the Lord of life, converting three thouſand of them at once: hee loved Mary and her Siſter Martha, and Lazarus and Iohn his Diſciple moſt deerely, See Acts 2. 22. How hee went about, doing good even to all, healing diſeaſes, preaching, converting. This Spirit then of the head is derived to us, to be a privy marke unto us, whether we are his or no: for hee that loveth not; is not of God; for God is love, and hee who loveth, dwelleth in God. Secondly, by perſwaſion. For this ſee 2 Cor. 5. 14. The love of Chriſt conſtraines us for wee thus judge, &c. Marke there is a ſecret perſwaſive in this love, to cauſe us to love one another; and that by judgement and good reaſon. This is that which Paul preſſes to the Epheſians, Walke in love as Chriſt alſo hath loved us, and hath given himſelfe for us, as an offring of a ſweet ſavour. So againe, Put on as the Elect of God, the bowels of mercies, kindneſſe, forbearing, &c. Why, Even as Chriſt forgave you, ſo alſo doe yee.

This

This is a ſtrong diſpute from relation of head to members, reaching to all holineſſe, but eſpecially to this branch. For what a diſproportion were it for us, to joyne the body of a Lyon, fierce and cruell to the head of a Lambe, loving and meeke? What villany were it for a man, dealt mercifully withall by his Maſter, to take his Epheſ. 2. 13. fellow by the throate? If Chriſt hath deſtroyed enmity, broake downe the wall of ſeparation, and made peace for me when I was paſt hope, how ſhould I love and live with my brother? Chriſt ought me nothing, but I owe him my ſelf. Should I after ſuch love, Philem 19. ever know any enmity? Or if I ſhould, ſhould not ſuch love as this quaſh it for ever? If I ſhould live in heart-burning, jealouſie, bitterneſſe, and hatred, ſhould I not looke that the ſweet morſell of 1 Ioh 4. 10, 11 mercy ſhould come out at my noſtrils? Hence it is, that S. John ſo preſſeth this point: Herein is love, not that we loved him, but hee us: Beloved, if God ſo loved us, we ought alſo to love one another.

Secondly, Faith doth purge love from manifold corruption; by name from theſe eye-ſores: Firſt, from all partiality. Wee reſtraine and limit our love to ſuch perſons as we our ſelves affect for ſome parts and endowments: others are not ſo precious in our eyes; wee cannot affect them, becauſe we ſee cloſeneſſe, harſhneſſe, techineſſe, pride and ſelfe, to abound in them. But love is unpartiall, as well reaching to the undeſerving, provoking, as to the amiable (in point of ſoundneſſe, I meane, though extent may differ) and overcomming evill with good: for the roote of it is an higher thing than ſelfe-love, and drownes all diſtaſtes in him, that forgate all our injuries and died for us. Secondly, from all inconſtancie. Every foole lives in his moode, while the pang laſteth. But as the torrent is ſoone up and ſoone downe, ſo it is with many lovers, they are either as high as the skies, or as low as hell, either men are the beſt with them, or worſt living. Whence is this?
Gal. 1. 18. from their fickle heart, which wants a bottome. Love cauſes the ſoule to be firme, conſtant, equall; and if occaſions be offered of any breach, yet ſoders it up betimes, that they grow not deepe and incurable. So thirdly, from all ſo injudiſciouſneſſe, and error. Love is wiſe, imparting it ſelfe, as it ſees the object requires: it is not alike to all. There is a falſe and counterfeite love in ſome men, who out of either a weakeneſſe, or formality of courteſie, will impart themſelves to ſuch as they meete with very gently: and a man would thinke this came from a deepe habit of love; But if yee obſerve them, it commeth from a ſlightneſſe and emptineſſe, for they will will impart themſelves to all alike: The beſt Divine in a countrey, and the vericſt Ruffian ſhall ſhare equally in their affections, no difference. They will be liberall to good cauſes, but ſo they will to bad and baſe ends alſo. What a fulſome love is this? what amiableneſſe, diſcerne theſe in the object of their love, who can love the hatefull and to be abhorred as well as the beſt? Fourthly, from all weakeneſſe and ſuſpiciouſneſſe. There is in ſome tempers a marvellous jealouſneſſe, which makes them ſo conceited, that the leaſt toy, or wry countenance, puts them into a new frame, when as yet the occaſion conceived is meere nothing in all the world. Melancholy may afford ſome ſeede to this ill humour, but pride is the fomenter of it, and ſelfe-love the nurſe. It is enough that theſe men thinke themſelves ſlighted or wronged: it skils not whether they be or no: conceit affords realneſſe ſufficient. But this love is too rough hewne to couch cloſe in the building of communion, candor and ingenuouſneſſe of ſpirit, loath to thinke ill of that which is ſo, (more than needs muſt) but abhorring it, when no cauſe is, and rather ſtiving to interpret all at the beſt, is a more meete ſtone to lye in this frame. Fifthly, all ſtreightneſſe, and (as I may call it) hide-boundneſſe of ſpirit: many Chriſtians are of ſo dry a temper, ſo narrow-breſted, that their love lyes onely in a courſe of flight trifles: they thinke it a ſuperfluity, to love in any other meaſure, than that they may feele no vertue to goe out from them to others. They cannot beteame any, the enlargement of their bowels: they thinke it waſte, to breake a boxe of oyntment upon the feete of the Saints: But if any ſhreds will ſerve, ſuch ſhreds as they can part with, and feele no loſſe, yee ſhall have from them. This cauſeth them to be uncomely members in the Communion of Saints, and their love to be odious and unſavory: for love is as her object requires, where an ounce is needed, a dramme ſhall not ſerve the turne: (within her power) a pound is as ready as a ſhilling, or a ſhilling as a penny. O yee Corinthians ſaith Paul) I am enlarged unto you; becauſe I love you, I can beteame you any thing, even my owne ſoule: ſo, love is bountifull, and not ſhrunke up as a bottle in the ſmoake. Sixthly, All ſelfe and ſelfe-love, the very bane of communion. When men will alwayes ſet ſome ſuch addition to the grace of a man; that although hee ſeeme to love for grace; yet except there bee ſome other by and ſquint ayme, of ſweetneſſe and courteſie; of pleaſure, gaine, reputation, or that which ſome way ſatisfies it it ſelfe; alas, their

Whereas true love is ſelfe-denying and cleane-handed: Sets heart where God ſets his; and although (as the caſe may ſtand) offices of loue are due and owed, yet for thoſe reſpects, a good man abhorres to love; and loves for that excellency of grace which he beholds. ſently, unheard, and unknowne: Whereas love is ſupporting and tender, chooſing rather never to eate fleſh, than to offend the weake: But ſome if their conceit bee croſſed, (though never ſo mildely and with reaſon given) yet with a prejudicate heart, foreſtall their intentions, ſuſpect and ſhunne their perſons, and judge them inſtantly for refractary and opinionate; not remembring that ſo it hath ever beene, and will be in the Church, that in ſome particulars which ſome allow, others will ſtraine and ſcruple; and therefore ſuch ſhould bee forborne and tendred, ſo farre as may ſtand with the common peace. Gal. 6. 1. 1 Cor. 8. 10.

Laſtly, and eſpecially Diſſimulation. Other vices ſeeme to teare the coate, but this to ſtabbe the heart of communion: Therefore Paul chargeth, that love be without diſſimulation: let there be no falſe brother, who under colour of love, ſhould undermine his brother. 9. Diſſimulation. Rom. 12. 9. 1 Iohn 3. 18.

Paul alſo ſaith, All have not faith: he meanes there, fidelity to be truſted: ſound to God and his brother. Such as can ſay to their brethren, I am as thou art, my horſes as thy horſes: I am weake in my love but ſure and true; whereas it is with many as it was with Ioabs ſword. It is ſometime in and ſometime out. They are not true and conſtant in their love, yea many, their tongues are ready to jangle, and their feete to carry tales againſt thoſe whom they will ſeeme to love and honour; be like hypocrites, they ſpeake faire words, and their words are as ſmooth as oyle, but their tongues are as ſwords and coales of Iuniper; yea themſelves as Ioab taking Abner and Amaſa by the beard in great love, and with the other hand ſhed their bowels to the earth: Theſe are ſome few of thoſe many diſtempers which faith purgeth love from, or rather them who profeſſe to love: By the which judge of the reſt. 2 Theſ. 3. 2. 2 King. 3. 4. 2 Sam. 20. 10.

The third point is, that this love is to be revived at the Sacrament: hence it is called Sacramentall. No winde of an Ordinance but bloweth good to love: for all are (more or leſſe) ſanctified to this purpoſe, ſweetely ſayd the Pſalmiſt; Oh, how good and comely a thing it is for brethren to dwell together! Meaning, that as cohabitation is a great improver of civill love; ſo the houſe of God, in which Gods weather-beaten ſervants in this world doe meete together, is a ſingular band and provoker of love. When they conſider one God, Chriſt, Spirit, truth, one Baptiſme, one Supper, one hope, one faith: (all which the Ordinances of word, prayer and Sacraments doe exhibite) Oh! how doe they conceive heate 3. of love, before theſe rods? But above all, the Sacrament of the Supper is ordeined for love. So ſaith Paul, The bread which wee 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17. breake, and the wine which wee drinke, are not they our Communion with the body and blood Chriſt? And what of this? Marke how hee inferres: For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of one bread. Many wheate Cornes and grapes doe not more partake of one loafe and cup of wine, than the Receivers doe of one Chriſt. So that next our partaking of him, wee partake of each other, and that under the moſt reall Symboles of Communion. The Papiſts may in this teach us, who when they have any villany which they would moſt combine and ſecret themſelves in, come to the Sacrament. In this (I grant) baſely, that they ſtretch it to ſtrengthen helliſh communion. But well, if by it they did provoke themſelves more to ſerve in love, to bee faithfull and painefull for each other. Therefore the Pſal-
Pſal. 122. 5. miſt ſpeaking of the union of the Church, addes, There are the thrones of diſcipline; and aſſemblies of Religion; as if they were the ſinewes of it. And who is hee (that is not utterly debaucht) whoſe heart hath not this inſtinct, that the Supper is for love? Vſe having prevailed to call it, The Communion. Witneſſe the Conſcience of the worſt, (though rotten) who then count it a maine thing to be at amity; though it be but while the day laſteth.

The 4. The forme. The fourth point, is the forme and eſſence of Love; that is, Vnion. Ieruſalem is as a City compacted; that is, dwelling cloſe; noPſal. 122. 4. ting, that love takes all joynts, and compacts them together; not onely them whom other bands of nature, civilneſſe, or family hath linked, but ſuch as are otherwiſe ſtrangers and farre off. Hence Eſay 11. 6. the Prophet ſaith, that under the Goſpel, the Lambe and the Lyon ſhould feede together: (that is, put off their contrariety) and the little childe ſhall then put his finger into the hole of the Cockatrice. So Paul, Hee hath reduced (or contracted) all into one Eph. 2. 15. by his death, making peace, and deſtroying enmity; All both in heaven, earth, and under it, being brought to a league, either to love, or not to feare each other, either ſo findes or makes one. As the ſoule makes the body one, by the band of the ſpirits: ſo doth love make the members of this ſpirituall body, one. One

ſuch diſproportion of particulars, for yeares, gifts, birth, wealth, place, or manners; yet this grace makes all unequalls, equall and one. There could not elſe be ſuch a ſenſiblenes between the members, ſuch ſympathy, likeneſſe of minde, of heart, of courſe, if this were not. One Spirit cauſes them (though ſo farre off as England and America) to be one. We know a member cut off, feeles no more the welfare or paine of the body. But union cauſes each toe to bee afflicted with the affliction of the legge, thigh, backe, or head. All Eph. 4. 16. are knit by the mediation of fit joynts, ſinewes and bands into one, and therefore grieve or joy in each others griefe, or welfare; yea, doe but cut off theſe Pipes of union and ſenſibleneſſe, and what becomes of that inſtinct which ſends every member about the others buſineſſe? the foote to goe, and the hand to worke for the good of the whole?

The fifth point, is the Act or exerciſe of Love. This ſtands partly in the negation of all oppoſite vicious diſpoſitions, as wrath, crying, bitterneſſe, ſullemeſſe, envie, rejoycing in the evill of others, heart burning, contention, quarrels, jealouſies, uncharitableneſſe, unmercifulneſſe and the like, of which I ſpake in the act of faith purging: and partly in negative acts as occaſion is offered. For inſtance; hiding of a multitude of ſinnes when they may be hidden: paſſing by offences both in word and deed, concerning our name, or goods ſo farre as may be: if neceſſity require, that wee (by law) ſeeke defence of both, then that ſtill the heart looke at her owne honeſt cleering, rather than at any perſonall revenge: not interpreting things left-handedly, (an heatheniſh quality) but as fairely as poſſibly they may be conſtrued: So alſo forbearing the ſeelineſſe, weakeneſſe, and leſſer meaſures of other mens graces: their techineſſe, errours, and follies. Waiting to ſee the end of a thing: not ſo rejudging perſons, intents, events raſhly: Forgiving ſuch as have offended us, whether in their heate, or coole blood, eſpecially if we find them ready to ſeek it by making amends, abhorring implacableneſſe, yea and this often, not to ſeven times but ſeventy times ſeven; even as we our ſelves would bee heard in the like from God: So alſo, modering of juſtice in caſe of ſtrife, vantage of Law: Extreame right may prove extreame wrong. When a poore man then is fallen into our hand, wee may not deale in the hardeſt manner; cauſe all credirors to come about his eares and to undoe him: or take for pledges his Bible, his garment, bed, mil-ſtones, bread, &c. Adde to theſe others of like nature. Secondly,

4. To the bodies in generall of all poore Saints whom we muſt alwayes have among us in ſteede of Chriſt himſelfe, to diſcover what ſpirit of love is in us, towards whom we muſt ſhew love, frankely and freely, beteaming and cheerefully in all ſimplicity, with bowels, that is, abundance of compaſſion to ſix and ſeven, diſperſing not grudgingly, upbraidingly, or niggerdly. To theſe true poore not onely rates for collection are due, (as to all) by the Law, but ſeverall and privie mercy. Now here, as the bodily diſtreſſe lyes in ſpeciall, ſo doth mercy draw lines from the center of Gods Commandement, (To doe good and to diſtribute forget not. Caſt thy bread upon their waters, &c. to each neceſſity: one love extending it ſelfe to many operations, according to judgement. If ſhe beholds the tattered or naked ſhe earnes to cloathe them: if the hungry to feede them: if pennileſſe, to money them; if ſicke, to viſit them, if impriſoned, to comfort and releeve them: or howſoever their ſorrowes are, in their credite, ſtate, poſterity or the like, to ſuccour and ſtand by them. So againe (and moſt of all) to the ſoules of the faithfull; to extend our charity according to their needes. Not each one tending himſelfe and looking to his owne private welfare of ſoule; but to ſee that the commonwealth of ſoules proſper. And here love is full of eyes twards the weake in knowledge, to enlighten them as Aquila did Apollos: Toward the offenſive to reſiſt and reprove them ſharply, as Paul did Peter: towards the fallen either by weakneſſe, to reſtore them and joynt them, Gal. 6. 1. or by revolt, to gaſter and recover them: to comfort the ſad, to warne the unruly, and to exhort and quicken the weake and ſtaggering. Generally by good example to walke ſo unblamably toward all, that the bad may be daunted, and the good heartened, built up and furthered in their moſt holy courſe.

Secondly, as a fountaine narrow at the ſpring, diffuſeth it ſelfe in her paſſages; So Love: ſhee alway begins at home; enlargeth her ſelfe to them that are a farre off: even the whole Church in the corner, in the country, in the kingdome, in which ſhe liveth: yea further, even to other lands and the Churches thereof. One ſpirit poſſeſſeth the whole body for each members good, and each member for the good of the whole, & that both for outward and ſpirituall good. For outward, that all promiſes of proſperity belong to the Church: So if it ſeeme good to providence, ſhe may enjoy them.

2. Generall. Diffuſion of love. 2 Theſ. 3. 3 Ioh. 2.

Thus David, Pſal. 144. 12. prayes for this, That our ſonnes may be as plants, our daughters as poliſhed ſtones: That our garners be full, our ſheepe plentifull, our oxen ſtrong: and no beggers in our

Secondly, rejoycing to conſider, that the Lord hath yet reſerved to himſelfe many whoſe hearts are upright with God, holding their firſt love entire, and their zeale unſpotted with the filth and dregges of the age and time; ſerving their generations as David did, Act. 13. 38. Which work though I might have ſpared; yet knowing that weake ones as well as ſtrong may meet with my Booke: I will (after I have grounded the point) come to application, & among other uſes to examination

2 Generall. For the point then, this it is, Love thus deſcribed is a neceſſary grace grace for the Sacrament. And it appeares first by proofes thus: The Analogie of the Passeover, which the Lord commanded to be eaten in one house; not only lest the Lambe should be broken & divided, but rather to typifie this Sacramentall love & union between those that received it. Again, whence was that. That no bone of it should be broken? Surely not only to typifie the Lord Christ, that he that enjoyeth him, enjoyeth him whole: but to shew also, that those who will be bone of his bone, and make him their nourishment, must be whole, unbroken, and unshattered in their Communion: as we know his seamelesse coate was another type of this want of rupture and division in the Church. In Psal. 133. David is ravished with love and amity of the Church in the use of the ordinances, of which this was one. And what saith he? Oh how comely and good a thing it is for brethren to dwell even together? Even to come together as one man! And he resembleth it to the fragrant oyle of Aarons consecration, and the fruitfull dew upon Hermon and Zion. Yea, even those love-feasts as badly as they were used, yet intimate that ancient Churches desire to nourish Sacramentall love. And Text of Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 18. who by this Sacrament, and the element thereof, presseth Christian love, (as in Eph. 4. 5. he urgeth it by the Oneship of God, Christ, Baptisme, and Faith) doth cleerely prove it. The bread we breake made of many graines; the wine we drinke consisting of many grapes: what is it but our love and fellowship in the body? And one speciall proofe must not be forgotten: Reade John 12, and 13, and 14. where Christ exhorted his Disciples about sundry things immediately before the Supper; this is one of the many and oftest urged, that they would obey his new commandement, and love one another. Have peace in your selves & each with other: Five or sixe of such passages there. And the Evangelist doth not so expresse that consent and love of the Church in this Sacrament of breaking bread: But hee inferreth strongly thereby that it was a peculiar grace to be brought thither.

The proofes. Exod 12.3. Num 9.12. Exod. 12.8.9. Psal. 133.1.

For why? first whereby shall the soule more comfortably satisfie it selfe about the truth of her faith, then by this love? for faith worketh by love. The workeman and his tooles goe alway together. 2. Reason 1.

Secondly, by what shall we testifie our soundnesse of judgement, touching the way of Gods communicating himselfe unto each member by and through the body. than by comming to receive in love as well as in faith? And how can they better declare their humility than by this, that they acknowledge, the roote beareth them up, not they it? Reason 2.

But

Reason 3. But the third reaſon is chiefeſt: The Sacrament containing the very inſtruments, bands and cordes, by which the Lord Ieſus reconciled his Church to himſelfe, to make it one, viz. his body and blood, who ſhould dare to defile it with enmity? Even Heathens themſelves loathed ceremonies in their worſhip, repugning to their inſtitution: as to admit of dwarfes to Hercules his ſacrifice; to ſuffer ſuch to come to Bacchus his Feaſts as were too ſad; to Venus, who affected virginity; to Saturnes, who were nor ſad ſolemne. What comelineſſe than ſhall the Lord looke for at his Sacrament? That all who come to a Sacrifice grounded in love, ſhould not dare to come in bitterneſſe, and ſo defile it?

Reaſon 4. Fourthly, if all other ordinances doe ſo abſolutely urge it, that elſe they are marred, how much more this? Looke two texts, one 1 Tim. 2, 8. in 1 Tim. 2. 8. Lifting up pure hands, without wrath. And 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. Where all ſuch as covet the Word, are bidden to caſt off all ſuperfluity of malice and wrath, and envies, &c. Now if this be ſo neceſſary for all, how much more for this?

Reaſon 5. Laſtly the conſcience excuſing us in this, that we bring love, doth alſo leave us well appaid in ſundry things of farre greater conſequence: As that we love him who begat; That wee are borne of 1 Iohn 3. 14. God, that we are verily Chriſts Diſciples, that we are paſſed from 1 Iohn 4. 7. death to life, with an 100. more. Now he who hath evidence of all theſe within himſelfe, how ſweetly may he ſit at the Sacrament not onely with Saints, rejoycing in their mutuall welfare, but even with Angels? So much for Reaſons.

3. Generall. The Vſes. Now I conclude with the uſes of the Doctrine, Firſt let it bee terrour to all that dare abuſe the ſupper by comming to it without this Sacramentall grace of love. And (to terrifie them by degrees) they come to the fore-ranke that cloake their treachery and villany both in their own hearts, and againſt others, under this ordinance. Ieſuites eſtabliſh their trayterouſneſſe againſt Princes, States and Common-wealths, by this meanes; and digge deepe to hide their

So ſhall the Sacrament be to all ſuch as under their receiving it, doe hide their griping uſury, unmercifulneſſe; For who (thinke they) they) will judge us such in the second Table, seeing us to be so devout in the Sacrament? Doe ye not see (say they) how folke balke the Sacrament when they are come to it? But alas! we goe through stitch with it. It is true, so ye doe, if that were the worst, if ye were as ready to be purged of your rancor and malice; Then I would say ye had put one a brest-plate indeede of proofe; But now yee are armed with a paper defence, which conscience and the wrath of God will shoote through one day. Cleanse your hearts ye sinners, and purge your hands ye hollow minded. Lay away your colours, and pluck off these mufflers of uncharitablenesse; and so ye are allowed to compasse the Altar of God with washen hands and in innocencie of love. Agree with your Adversary not onely man but the Lord quickly, soder not nor equivocate, but deale sincerely. Empty out all filth and turne the bottome upward, that ye may bee the children of him who as an innocent Lambe shed his blood for enemies, that you might not know any save his. This feast of the Lambe will be a costly feast to you, that want, nay cast of this lappe of the wedding garment from you.

Iam 4.8. Psal. 26.6.

Secondly, terrour againe to all who basely blanch over their owne conscience, by seeking a kinde of peace and good will betweene themselves and their enemies just before the Sacrament. Not for true reconciliation as if they desired that, but to keepe in the Sacrament from comming out at their nostrils: Ohye wretches! yee defile your selves wilfully in the things ye know. Not much unlike that Iew, who being under feare of breaking the Sabbath in taking ship, and yet willing to goe, hired a Turke to thrust him into the ship, mocking his conscience. Who hath taught you thus to paint the outside of your rotten Tombes of hollow love, with such varnish. knowing the inside to be as it is? For no sooner is the Sacrament over, but ye returne to your vomit, to your former jarres and quarrels, and so weare your sin as a marke upon your faces for all to see, and for the Lord in wrath to curse you, saying, Never grow love from such rootes or trees of bitternesse any more, such as proclaime their sinne as Sodome.

Branch 2.

Thirdly, terrour to all such, who (although their lives swarme with the sinnes of selfe-love, rage, envie, tale-bearing and unpeaceablenesse, yea grinding the face of the poore, &c. yet they dare wipe off all crummes from their mouth; and come to the Sacrament Nay some are so empty of this heart of love, that with him in S. Iames, they dare dally with love, & say to the needy, Be warmed, cloathed and and fedde, yet themselves give them nothing. Others there are of a currish and Nabalish disposition, that their oyle of love is not sufficient for their owne Lampes, but most churlishly deprive even such of their due who are of their owne flesh, as drunkards, &c. Oh monsters! how dare yee lift up your head before the Master of this Feast? and crucifie againe him that dyed for such traytors as your selves? How dwelleth Sacramentall love in such?

Iudge 12. Oh be feared from thus adventuring any further! Come no more, O ye fearefull spots of assemblies, into the holy place, in which Christs body and blood are offered: lest (as dogges)

Act 8. 22 yee catch at them, and bane your selves! Pray (if possible) that these wickednesses may be forgiven you.

4. Branch. Fourthly, all such ungodly youths, men or maides whose practice is, (in Cities and great Townes) to turne the day of the Sacrament into a Sacrifice to Bacchus, and spend five or sixe houres of the Sal both in junketting, chambring, and wantonnesse, tossing of pots, eating of dainty belly-cheere, playing at stoole ball, barley-breake, dancing, and such base behaviours. If yee aske them why? Oh, say they, we have received too day, this is a merry day with us! But if a Turke saw you in this your holy-day worke, what manner of God would they thinke yee serve? And this is a more woefull blindnesse because sometime both Minister and chiefe of their Parish (not to speake of their Governours) encourage them to it, and have no sense of any sinne: but thinke it a very fine way to make youth love well together! Oh yee profane creatures? Doe yee despise Gods holy bands, to bring in your owne rotten packthred? and doe ye turne his sacred ordinances into such scurfe?

Gal. 6. 7. If ignorance and base custome be the cause, be informed: if profanenesse, be also terrified; God will not be mocked. To conclude the whole use, seeke the remedy of all this: There is hope if yee be not hardned; seeke to know your enmity with the Lord himselfe, and get his love to be shed into your soules, which may constraine you to love his people, and so come to the Supper and welcome. Despise not this my counsell.

Vse 2. Reproofe. Secondly, let it be reproofe even to Gods own Servants, and likewise admonition to search their hearts and lives for all this sowre leaven of false love, and venome, which many of them dare suffer to clogge them from Sacrament to Sacrament; though perhaps they keepe the sore sweete, and so that it festereth not, yet they are very careleſse in casting out that bitter roote which daily springeth eth up and defiles them, through their proneneſſe to fall to it, Oh! true love is a jewell indeede, not every Merchants portion, nor eaſily preſerved when it is gotten! Loth (I grant) we are to be noted for ſo unſociable and loveleſſe ones, that none can live by us, unfit for a Church or a Common-wealth; yet the Lord onely knowes what ſecret rootes and rindes there abide ſtill. Oh! wee ſhould not top out the chiefe of the ſheafe onely, but threſh cleane, and fanne our ſelves throughly of this ſcurfe! Having eſcaped a gulfe, we ſhould be afraid of a ſhallow! Oh how ſhould we break our hearts to thinke what pettiſhneſſe and waſpiſhneſſe we walke with in our family, among wife, children, and ſervants? What pride, vaineglory, unkindneſſe, unforberance doe we utter therein? What croſſeneſſe and heart-burning among neighbours, if it be but for their fences and cattell? What buying and ſelling of each other for trifles? Oh Lord, if others of thy people did not more good than I, in releeving poore Chriſtians, and upholding good cauſes, all muſt needs goe to ruine? I feele what a weake prop I am! I live as if at my death I ſhould dye undeſired! A clod of the earth, and bundle of ſelfe-love, borne for my owne uſe! Wit I have enough to bite in all fruits of love, but none to utter them with bounty and beteaming! And ſome of us are ſo groſſe, as to thinke that good workes are but boaſtings of our goodnes; as for us we will renounce them, and be ſaved by faith! God keepe me from thy ſalvation! Learne poore wretch, That faith alone juſtifieth, but is not alone in her fruits. Others of us, if we be of any uſe at all by our love, yet are puffed up in conceit of our worth and ſervice, and how much other hang upon us, and how little we upon them; whereas wee ſhould ſerve them in love, and feele no vertue to have come from us! How many of us are far from ripping up the ſeames of our ſoules, from diſtaſting of ſuch as cannot brooke us? How ſoone are we weary, & by one act of love, thinke our ſelves exempted from many? how many partiall have we? how rare and odde ones are they whom we can affect and humour! Oh caſt up theſe morſels, deare friends, and let all our receivings be with the unleavened bread of ſincerity.

Thirdly let it be exhortation and examination, both to get and receive this grace at the Sacrament. First get it, goe over thoſe ſixe branches before, and by prayer, importune the Lord to bleſſe the meditation of them, for the breeding of love unfained in thee. Thinke not the Sacrament to be a breeder of it: that onley by faith is there improved and nouriſhed. And ſecondly, revive it at thy comming comming to the Supper, as thou wouldst come from it with cheerfulnesse. Some few rules I have here set down for thy triall herein.

Triall 1. Math. 6. 3. First, If thy right hand flatter thee not, and know not what thy left hand doth; that thou hadst rather doe many kinde offices of love, though none should know of it, than neglect one of them when thou seest God calls thee to it.

Triall 2. Secondly, If thou canst truely say, thy soule hath not what it would, neither doth any blood runne aright in thy veines, so long as thou knowest the Church, or any chiefe members of it to lye under distresse: although thy selfe dost swimme in prosperity. Nehem. 2. 3. Thinke of Nehemiah and Uriah.

Triall 3. Thirdly, if thy heart will not suffer thee to rest content with thy plodding about thy affaires and businesse, except thou can in the midst and sweetest thereof breake off and say, Now doe I neglect the service of my time, and so returne unto it. As Ioseph, full of affections to Benjamin, sought occasion and cryed, Have every man Gen. 45. 1. from me, and so fell upon his necke.

Triall 4. Fourthly, If the love of God shed into thy heart, bee so sweete, and make thee so well apayd in thy selfe, that thou feelest a pretty ease, in dispensing with the base affronts and wrongs of ill-affected ones, or persons who discourage thee: That by this peace passing Phil. 4. 7. understanding, thy heart is so loathed, that thy froward, sullen qualities, and those darts of hatefull thoughts are even quenched in this blood of thy satisfier. Also when thou findest thy enemies so displeased, that thou canst not reach or win them by all thy love, yet even then thou art so farre from wearinesse in well-doing, that thou desirest to hooke them in by thy prayers, begging their conversion rather for their own good, than to be quit of their injuries.

Triall 5. 5. If in the desire of the subversion of the implacable and impenitent enemies of the Church, thou dare not forestall the Lord, or teach him when to send fire to consume: but submit thy judgement and will to the secrets of Gods judgement, who onely knows the measure of their malice, and the incorrigiblenesse of their hearts.

Triall 6. 6. If we dare not rest in a propensenesse of our constitution, to be courteous, loving, and usefull, (which may come from nature and selfe-love) or onely loathe currishnesse and harshnesse out of a morall distaste, and cannot rest, till we can prove that our love is not from the will of man, or from flesh, but from God.

Triall 7. 7. If when we feele our base hearts steightned in the Communion of Saints; then we can ever be revenged of our selves for it, and can

can with defiance caſt off our owne ends and ſhreds, rather which keepe our hearts in bondage, than ſhrinke in any loving affection or ſervice to which God calls us.

8. That our love's channell runne as freely and beteamingly to the Miniſters of God or others, when they are diſabled by age or other infirmities from their former abilities and employments, as when they improved themſelves to the uttermoſt, and were joyced in their light. Triall 8. Gal. 4. 14.

9. That we count it a farre greater mercy, that we give, than if we receive. Being a kinne to that excellent Church of Macedonia, whoſe grace was this, to eſteeme the Lord farre kinder in lending them an heart to give to Jeruſalem, than Jeruſalem it ſelfe had cauſe to be thankefull for her reliefe. Triall 9. Act. 20. 35. 2 Cor. 8. 1.

10. That in the preſence of God we can finde, that the very approach of the Supper, ſummons our hearts to caſt off all ſuch oppoſition to love, as hath crept into our boſomes: bleſſing God, that it is a correction day to us; finding in our ſelves, upon, and after the Sacrament, our love and communion to be as a ſpring-tide in us. Triall 10.

11. If the Lord hath given us an heart to beare downe all diſcouragements of love from without, and all carnall objections from within, which might weaken it: As that we doe but fleſh our enemies againſt us, and make them more bold to inſult over us, by our lenity and forbearance, than if wee did deale with them as they have done with us, That they are of a dogged baſe nature, and will not bee wonne with any love; that no fleſh and blood could containe it ſelfe in ſo perſonall, ſo bitter, and hatefull provokings, and wrongs, &c. The like cavils we have againſt all other actions of love, as giving, lending, &c. So in Law caſes, if wee be led by the rules of neceſſity, quitting of our ſelves from injuries which elſe we could not; alſo love of peace, ſerving providence for the manifeſtation of right: and although we be loſers, yet reſting in Gods will, and learning to deny our ſelves, to be more patient and content to offer and waite upon him who will pleade our cauſe; abhorring all covetous and revenging ends of our owne. Many more trials might have beene added; but I referre the Reader to the former grounds to helpe himſelfe. Triall 11.

The laſt uſe is Conſolation and encouragement to Gods people of two ſorts: Firſt, to all ſuch as walke in love, & make it their path and way. Many a good Chriſtian will ſay, I cannot boaſte of many evidences, but this I thank God, I can ſay, that my heart goes with the Uſe 4. Conſolation. Branch. 1.

the cauſe of God, to his Religion, Covenant, Ordinances, I love the Saints, &c. My affections and endeavours goe that way when I cannot goe, yet I can creepe, and me thinkes the dogge of a good man is welcome for his Maſters ſake. I abhorre that ſelfe ſeeking, and ſelfe-love, which reignes in the world, I practice compaſſion and love to all, both meane and great, knowne and unknowne, neere and farre off: and my prayers are caſt in as a lot among the prayers and petitions of the Church. I deſire no welfare ſave in hers, and as ſhe fares, ſo doe I deſire to doe. Oh! rich ſoule be comforted. The Lord hath ſet his marke upon thee, and called thee Hephziba, one in whom his ſoule delights, his Love, his Dove, his Vndefiled one. Thy name is as a precious oyntment, therefore the daughters follow and love thee. By thine example many have loſt their bruti ſh and ſavage qualities, and beene taught to feede with Lambes. They ſay of the Panther, that ſhe hath ſo ſweete a breath, that ſhe allures all the beaſts to her thereby: So that hereby ſhee hath her name. So is it with thee, the ſavour of thy amiableneſſe, ſhall honour thee whereſoever thou becommeſt, till at thy death thy workes ſhall follow thee. Though the Scripture bee written, yet as the name of Mary that annoynted Chriſt, and Dorcas, and Cornelius are in the word, ſo ſhall thine be in the Church. Oh! enjoy thy ſelfe and come to the Sacrament with comfort, for the Lord Ieſus ſtands there ready with open breſt to welcome thee.

Eſay 62. 4.

Marke 14. 9. Act. 9. 36. & 10. 2.

Branch 2. Laſtly, it may alſo afford encouragement to ſuch as feare themſelves in this tryall of their love. And I confeſſe (as the manner of the world now is) there is ſo little practice of this grace to be ſeene that it were enough to quench the love of the firſt. Therefore I wonder not to heare ſo many to complaine of crackes and flawes in their love, and to ſee that men learne to halt, of them that are lame, to be froward with the froward, ſullen, teſty, unkind and unthankefull, with ſuch as are ſo. Thy complaining therefore of thy ſelfe is juſt; yet beware leſt hereby thou debarre thy ſelfe of the Sacrament. Tell me then, Art thou heavie to feele ſuch ſcurfe in thee? that thou careſt not how others fare, ſo thou canſt ſleepe in a whole skinne? and that the practice of gentleneſſe and mercy doth ſo hardly faſten upon thee? Doſt thou combate within thy ſelf againſt all naughtineſſe in this kind, and nouriſh the motions of that ſpirit which is pure, peaceable, gentle, and full of goodneſſe, and beare down the other as much as is poſſible? Deceive not thy ſelfe, and I dare not bar thee from the Lords Table: Although thou hadſt poore fruits to boast of, yet sith our Lord Iesus hath not forgotten a promise of reward to a cup of cold water to a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, I cannot exclude thee from the benefit of the Supper. Math. 10.42. Onely take heede least thou catch at such an encouragement to any evill end, that still thou maist keepe thy conscience defiled, with the like pangs, and yet venture to receive: But let the Sacrament bring a speciall reviving of love unto thee; the very sight of thy brethren at the house of God, let it renew that poore sparkle that is in thee: Thinke that thou art come to the soules of mercifull and Heb. 12.2. holy men, and art as in a corner of heaven, while thou maist sit among them: And if this incouragement belong to thee, it shall worke kindely and not by contraries. And for this use and the whole triall of love thus much.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the desire after the Sacrament, and the triall thereof.

WE are now come to the last, but not to the least of those five graces preparing for the Sacrament, which is desire or longing after those good things contained in it. Concerning the handling whereof I shall not hold the Reader long in the grounds of this grace, as I have done in the former: Because those points which serve to the opening of desire, either concerning Christ himselfe our All-sufficient nourishment; or else the triall of our owne wants: (of both which I have, both in the former and in this latter Treatise spoken) shall not neede any repeated discourse. Onely my method shall be this. 1. I will briefely speake a word of the object of this desire. 2. I will prove the Doctrine. 3. I will make use of it sundry wayes, and therein, if any thing may be added, either for the procuring of, or the triall of the soundnesse of this desire, I shall mention it, and so conclude. The 5. grace: Desire. Entry.

Affections are strong and vehement things in their pursuite, and not stirred up or provoked in us save by objects of great allurement and perswasion, especially spirituall affections require eminent objects to raise up and to improve them. Naturall affections of joy, love, hope, sorrow, feare, or desire, must have suitable objects to quicken them up: otherwise they lie flat upon the earth. How much more must it needs be so here in holy and divine affections, whereunto our nature is lesse inclined, and the flame (for lacke of daily supply of oyle and matter to nourish them) doth easily decay and vaniſh. Sacramentall deſire and longing therefore muſt needs preſuppoſe ſome more than ordinary object, to excite and maintaine it; elſe neither would a carnall heart eaſily riſe to it, nor yet a good heart hold appetite and deſire to it long together.

The object of deſire is Chriſt.

Sundry wayes therefore it pleaſes the holy Ghoſt in Scripture to expreſſe this object to the eye of the ſoule. The thing it ſelfe being in ſubſtance one, the Lord Ieſus the nouriſhment of the living ſoule in grace and goodneſſe; yet the eloquence of the Spirit appeares in no argument ſo great as in this one, to wit, the due laying him out in his colours, that the dead ſpirit of man might behold and eſteeme him as an object well deſerving her beſt affections. Hence it is that in the Song of Salomon ſo many alluſions taken from carnal objects of deſire, are uſed to provoke the ſoule to the like ſpirituallneſſe of deſire. As when he is brought in like an amorous bridegroome of choiſe perſonage, beauty, and proportion, and that from head to foote: as if ſome curious Abſolon were to be ſeene, in whom from top to toe, there was no blemiſh. His head, lockes, eyes, lips, bodie, and all his liniments are painted out to us, that it may appeare he is the chiefe of ten thouſand. The like courſe takes our Saviour himſelfe, in the Sermons and Parables which paſſed from him: wherein his chiefe drift is to magnifie grace under the name of the kingdome of heaven, meaning nothing elſe ſave the power and efficacie of the Goſpel offring to the ſoule his ſatisfaction and ſanfication, for pardon and life eternall. And ſometimes he compares himſelfe to a Pearle of great price, which he who found, ſold all to buy it. Alſo to a Treaſure hidden in a field, which ſo affected him that ſaw it, that he bought the field it ſelfe to purchaſe it. Hence alſo it is, that both in old and new Teſtament, the Lord expreſſes the grace of Chriſt by the ſimilitudes of all kinds of creatures, which either by their precious neſſe or by their uſefulneſſe, doe draw mens affections. Of the firſt ranke are, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, wrought gold, robes, apparell, and white linnen, treaſure, ointments: of the latter ſort, are, bread, corne, wine, oyle, milke, honey, waters, &c. Not as if theſe were as good as grace: but that hereby the carnall ſoule of man, (of it ſelfe eaſily ſnared with the love of ſuch things (yea meaner) might underſtand, that looke what excellencie is in theſe together for the content of our outward appetite, that infinitely much more is in this for ſatisfying of the ſoule: ſith all theſe are uſed but as ſhaddowes to diſcover this.

Illuſtration of it.

And to ſay the truth, let us marke well, and we ſhall perceive one principall principall scope of Paul, (that chiefe of Apostles) in all his Epistles, is this, to set forth the priviledge of Beleevers to be such as doth not consist in some shreds, but in admirable glory, He would have us to know, Christianity is not, making a shift to rub through, or some covering of our infirmities, supply of some wants, or cleansing out the staine of some odious sins: But, an estate of excellency, choise welfare, and curious contentation to the soule, such as Adam at his best never enjoyed. Reade these Texts, Col. 1.9,10,11,12. where he speakes of a beleever thus, as, That he may be filled with all spirituall understanding; That he may walke worthy of the Lord unto all well-pleasing; That he may be fruitfull and encreasing in the knowledge of God; That he may be strengthened with all might unto all long-suffering and joyfulnesse. So Eph. 1.17,18. he desires that, They might know the hope of their calling, the rich inheritance of the Saints, and the glorioous power of Christ, mortifying them, and quickning them by the power whereby he raised himselfe. So Ephe. 3.17. That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith: that being rooted in love, yee may comprehend the bredth and depth, &c. and know the love of Christ which passeth all knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulnesse of God. So also Philip. 3.8.10. I count all things but dung in respect of the excellency of Christ. The power of his resurrection, the fellowship of his sufferings, and conformity to his death. Nay, in one place he saith, Col. 2.9,10, That in him we are compleate. Saint Peter also witnesseth that Christ is no bare gift, but that The Divine power hath given us all things pertaining to life and godlinesse through him. To what end doe I heape up these? Surely, that the Lord Iesus his excellencie rests not in himselfe, but is derived to all his members, and that to the end, that he may be all in all with them, and winne the honour and love of their affections.

To come a little neerer then to our matter in hand, it must be some eminent object in the Sacrament, which must draw the soule to it in this Sacramentall desire. It must be more than the eye can see, for thats no object of any affection at all, scarce so much as a naturall appetite. But what is that? Surely that spiritually which the Elements resemble naturally, I meane full and compleate nourishment. If the soule can see this, it will draw desire without question. Now we know that bread and wine united, containe in them perfect food, and cherishing to the whole man, that is, to the body and spirits of nature. Even so Christ our nourishment in the Sacrament, is compleately so to the soule, both for renewed peace and holineſſe. And to open this, we may ſee when the holy Ghoſt lights upon Chriſt Sacramentall, he forgets his ordinary ſtile, and riſes into an unuſuall one; for then, it makes the Father an extraordinary great houſekeeper, brings him in as a man that builds himſelfe a ſumptuous houſe upon ſeven hewne Pillars, prepares his fatlings and dainties, his wines and ſpices. Nay, then it tels us, that in thoſe dayes the Lord will make a feaſt in the mountaines, a feaſt of all choiſe delicate things, fat meates and wines throughly ſtale and refined. Nay then it brings him in as a King who is diſpoſed to magnifie himſelf in the making a feaſt to his Subjects at the marriage of his Sonne. So that looke what is in a feaſt, either for quantity, fulneſſe of diſhes, variety of choiſe dainties, or qualitie, as rareneſſe, preciouſneſſe, exquiſite dreſſing, muſique, company, ſafety of things eaten, without feare, either that they may ſurfeit the gueſt, or breed ill bloud. All that is to be applied to the feaſt of the Lord Ieſus our nouriſhment, which God the Father makes to his Church at the Sacrament of the Supper, And yet that is not all; for whereas that may be eaſily thought to come from the magnificence of the maſter of it: but as for poore wretches, and hunger ſterven ſoules, how ſhould they come neere it? The anſwer is, that onely for ſuch it is prepared, even for beggers, and ſuch as are found among the hedges, and by the high-wayes ſides, for loſt and forlorne ones; it is the office of Gods hand-maides and Miniſters to invite, to bring in, yea, by all arguments of perſwaſions to force even ſuch (not the fat, luſty, and fed ones) to the feaſt of the King. Now if it be thus, who doubts but a feaſt of the mountaines, a feaſt of all delicacies, a Kings feaſt, offered with ſo ſolemne an invitation, yea, threat of contempt, yea, to the moſt unworthy, yea, with ſuch a welcome at the feaſt as this: Eate good things, and let your ſoules delight themſelves in fatneſſe, I ſay, who can deny, but here is an object of the beſt and moſt earneſt deſire and longing? Theſe things I have thus in a ſhadow premiſed (to ſpare repetition of the ſubſtance contained under them) leaſt the Reader might conceive me to ruſh upon the point without ſome ground of preparation.

The point it ſelfe.

I come now to the point it ſelf, & the proofe therof. That is this, Chriſt Ieſus our nouriſhment in the Supper muſt be received with a longing deſire. For proofe of it, take firſt the Analogie of the Paſſe-over. In that there were ſundry ceremonies noting out this deſire, For firſt what did that typifie, that the Lambe ſhould be ſeparated from the teate of the damme, foure dayes ere it was ſlaine? Surely not onely to teach mortifiedneſſe of luſts and liberties, but eſpecialy the the deſire which the ſoule ſhould feele in her ſelfe; as we know the poore Lambe made many a mornefull bleate after the damme in that time. Againe, what ſignified thoſe firſt guiſes of eating the Paſſeover, ſave deſire in a ſpeciall degree? I meane, their eating, with their ſhooes on, and ſtanding? Their ſtaves ready in their hands, and their haſting to be gone? Doubtleſſe it argued earneſt deſire. And therefore, Luke 22. verſe 15. it is ſaid expreſly of Chriſt, that he exceedingly longed to eate the Paſſeover with his Diſciples. If he ſo deſired it, what ought they to doe? Alſo thoſe ſowre hearbes (or ſawce made of them as ſome write) what doe they ſhew but the ſharpning of appetite? Exod. 12. 6. Verſe 11. Luke 22. 15.

For the Reaſons alſo, theſe few may ſerve. 1. the apppetite of the ſoule after Chriſt our nouriſhment is as requiſite for a receiver as the deſire after Chriſt our life, is requiſite for a convert. But we know that hunger after Chriſt our life, is one of the conditions and marks of faith Therfore is this alſo a marke and condition of a true receiver. Eſpecially if we conſider that the Sacrament is a fuller and more feſtivall exhibiting of Chriſt than the word alone. Objection. How can this be true, ſeeing the ſoule once ſatisfied with Chriſt her life, ſhall never hunger more? Anſwer. He ſpeakes of hunger in that kinde, not of each renewed act or meaſure of it. Hee meanes not that any ſhall ever taſte Chriſt after, who hunger not after; but that they ſhall never be ſo hungry any more, as when their ſinne ſtung and ſcorched them. Reaſon 2. All other ordinances require it of ſuch as will partake them with fruit. As 1 Pet. 2. 2. If yee will covet the ſincere milke, &c. Great appetite (even as great as an infant after the breſt) is due to hearing of each Sermon, to each faſt: how much more to each Sacrament? Thirdly, it is urged the rather for that it is a great ſigne the other foure graces are wrought alſo. For what better argues the ſcouring out of thoſe luſts of ignorance, infidelitie, profaneneſſe or uncharitableneſſe, than when the ſtomacke of the ſoule hath gotten an appetite, after the Supper? Fourthly, and eſpecially, how elſe ſhould the ſoule declare it ſelfe to judge aright of the Sacrament to be the Lords feaſt, except it come to it with (at leaſt) ſuch a preparation as any common feaſt requireth? Not to adde this (though not the leaſt reaſon) that the Lord offers Chriſt our Nouriſhment to us, that we might exceedingly much fare the better for him. How ſhall we ſo doe, except we hunger after him? If any meate truly ſtrengthen, refreſh, and ſatisfie the body, it is that (above all) which is eaten with beſt appetite? Reaſon 1. petite? Other meate may prove humorous, which is eaten with a fulsome stomacke. This for Reasons.

Meanes of attaining it.

Ere I come to the use, me thinkes I heare some asking, How may this grace be attained? I answer, by sundry steps wrought in the soule, by name these: first, a sensible heart of her daily and hourely wants: about which reade Chapter the third of this latter Treatise. Secondly, Sight of Christ Sacramentall and his fulnesse. For, where there is no hope of supply, there the soule hath no list to feele her needs. But the knowledge of Gods feast will worke hope of being satisfied: Meditation therefore and pondering hereof with prayer, will cause the soule to hunger without horror or despaire; other hungers there may be after a thing denied, yea impossible: But the desire of the faithfull is sweetned, and strengthened by the fulnesse of the supply, joyned with the promise of him that inviteth, and welcometh, freely, and bountifully. Thirdly, by the experience of the Saints in their former receivings, when they came empty, and found that filled such, and sent the full empty away. So much of this.

Use 1. Terror.

Now the third part of the Chapter remaines, viz. the use of the Doctrine. And this is manifold. First, it is terrour, and that to all such as come to the Sacrament without desire, and yet blanke not at it. The thing that should breede appetite in them, to wit, Christ and his dainties, pardon, peace, grace, and heaven, savour no more with them than the white of an egge without salt: Yee wofull ones! What, are yee such impure Swine, that these Pearles which God offers you to ravish your dead hearts with, you smell of them, and trample them under your feete in the dirt? Aske such after the Supper ended, what saw yee there? They answer, they saw a goodly company of people, and a faire cloath, a golden Cup, and wine powred out: but as for Christ, or any dramme of good in him to relish their soule, they saw no more than the blinde Batt. To what end then have Gods Messengers so dispensed him unto you? Surely that it might be verified, The eares of this people are waxen deafe, and their hearts fat; seeing they perceive not, and hearing, they understand not, least they should convert, and heale them. If yet Christ be hidden, hee is so to none but those that shall perish, whom Satan hath more power over to darken, than the Lord to enlighten. Oh Lord! but to consider how great a part of our Christian Church consists of such, would gaster a good man. They savor nothing save backe, and belly, and trade, and pleasures.

2 Cor. 4. 4.

Phil 3. 18.

pleasures, and drinke, and gold: if ye would preach of such things, ye were for them. But Alas! As for desire of the savour of Christ in the Sacrament of nourishment, a Dogge savours a chip as much. Why? Of a thing unknowne there can be no desire. Why then come such? Vpon unsavory, sapleſſe, and senseleſſe termes? Perhaps one hath been sicke, or upon a journey, and his wife was loth to receive, till they might goe together? I doe not mislike the joyning of couples: but if God by disease have hindred thy husband, or by absence, must his wife needs hold off; what scurffe is this, for sinister ends to balke the Sacrament? Oh! the qualmes of cold undesirous Communicants, should justly stirre the faithfull to loathe it in themselves. Such as come not with desire, either may come or not come upon any base pretext, as, because they see others come, or because tis Easter, or because they thinke it is a better thing (at so holy a time) to be among devout folke, than to sit in the chimney corner at home alone. So, alas! Many come, because they came not last time, and they are loath to be noted to absent themselves too often; or because some of their neighbours receive to day: Oh fulsome beast! Avant from the presence of that God who will be followed in the savour of his ointments; who will receive no sacrifice from any, but such as have salt in them, and season it therewith? Marke 9.50. Who abhorres a dead beast with the throate cut, and not raised up and burning upon his Altar: if the least drop of reliſh were in thee, could these be the motives to bring thee to Gods table? God give thee an heart to tremble at thy sottish profaneneſſe; and if meere ignorance have hitherto caused it, adde no more drunkenneſſe to thirst, least the Lord by some fearefull hand rend thee from thy companions with horror at thy death, or else leave thee a most saped and senseleſſe conscience in thy presumption. Tremble to thinke how many thousand of affections of Gods Ministers, both by Sermons and Sacraments, must finally be lost upon such stones and stockes! If yee lay sicke npon your beds, and your stomackes were lost, what an outcry would your wives make in the eares of the Physitian, saying, Helpe for Gods cause, my husband is a dead man, he takes nothing. But Oh thou beast! Thou takest neither droppe nor crumme of the flesh or bloud of Iesus Sacramentall, and yet feelest no aile. Beware least sence be reserved for thee in hell, except thou repent.

Secondly, here is also reproofe even of Gods owne for comming to the Sacrament without renewed appetite. It is with many unsa- Vse. A reproſe Mat. 11.7,8,9 very receivers, as it was with Iohn Baptiſts hearers; at the firſt they rejoyced in his light, but ſhortly they became ſo fulſome, that their ſavour was gone. So that our Saviour upbraides them ſaying, What went ye out into the wilderneſſe to ſee? a reede ſhaken with the winde? Or a man wearing ſoft raiment? Their zealous devotion was turned into forme and cuſtome. So it is with theſe. Thoſe ſacred layes of firſt love which ſhined in you at your firſt receivings, then, when the Sacrament was as hony to your taſte; ſo, now they are damped and cooled: Plenty makes no daintie now with you; but except God rouſe yee up to meditate of the object which firſt drew your affections to burne within you, while hee preached and reached out the Sacrament unto you, ſo that the ſame fulneſſe makes as great daintie as ever, and the oftner the greater, God ſhall not hold him guiltleſſe of this forfeit: I tel thee the very beſotted Papiſt ſhall riſe up againſt this ſapleſſe age, and condemne it: for they (as Eſay ſaith) inflame themſelves under every greene tree with their Idols. They burne in their adulterous deſire after their Wafer and their ſapleſſe god, their Agnus Deis, and Crucifixes, Images of the Virgin, and the Saints. But as for us, the Lord Ieſus preach'd and offered in the feaſt of a Supper, leaves us as barren, emptie and ſaporleſſe as a chip. Oh brethren be zealous and amend. What cold or ſurfeit hath taken us, that the things of God ſhould wax as dry Manna to the Iſraelites! Could the Lord endure their brutiſhneſſe? Did he not ſweare they ſhould not enter into his reſt? If there be but a dramme of old appetite and ſparke of old fire left upon the Altar, take Gods bellowes of indignation and blow it up that it die not. Strengthen the feeble knees and hands, that they faint not. Hath the day beene wherein the morning watches of a Sabbath have beene more precious than all the dayes of the weeke? And yet every houre in the day appointed for Gods honour, more ſweet than the houres of eating and working: and is now meate, drinke, gaming, and pleaſure ſo full of taſte, that Chriſt and his Supper can afford no appetite? The Lord recover it in thee (if thou be his, he will) by ſome ſmarty croſſe or ſting of conſcience, rather than ſuffer thy affections to lie buried in the earth. Doe as thoſe doe who muſt carry home logges or timber which are ſunke and buried in ſome dirty ditch, or quagmire: firſt they muſt raiſe it by their skill, unſettle it; and then being looſe, they may carry it, and carry it home. So doe thou: if there were ever true deſire in thee, lo, its ſunke into ſome dirtie pit of the world, leud company, ſloth, and eaſe: raiſe

Num. 11. 4.

Heb. 12. 11.

Heb. 12. 12.

raiſe it firſt out of it, and after thou ſhalt the better carrie it home with thee to Gods houſe. Oh! I touch a ſinne, now more freely than I know any in the Church: viz. of ſleepy dead Sacraments without affection. If thou ſeeſt that the Lord will not take off this cover of darkeneſſe, and dampe of undeſirouſneſſe from the body (becauſe of their long deſperate careleſneſſe) yet ſtep in for thy owne ſoule that it periſh not in this common, yea, Epidemiall lethargie. Eſay 25 7.

Thirdly, let this be admonition to all that know what this point meanes, to be weary of all thoſe enemies of deſire, which haunt the ſoule in an inſenſibleneſſe and indifferencie of appetite toward the Sacrament. They are theſe; firſt, a reſting upon former affections in receiving, and ſuppoſing they are ſtill the ſame, when as yet they are oppreſſed and ſurfeited with ſuch ſcurffe as hath choked them, and therefore are not now at hand as they have beene, to cheere us daily at the Sacrament: whereas affection had neede be revived daily, in ſecret above all things. What ſhould be a Chriſtians exerciſe, but this, to try how thoſe promiſes of the Sacrament can affect us? as this, Chriſt is my feaſt of full nouriſhment, his fleſh is meate indeede, &c. Theſe would have affected me in time paſt, but now they will not ſtirre me. As that Courtier told Alexander, that he would appeale from him drunke, to himſelfe ſober; ſo had wee neede to doe when we feele neither judgement nor affections, tender and open to the Sacrament, (nor perhaps to any thing elſe, either word, or workes of God (ſhake thy ſelfe before God, and ſay, It is not with me as it hath beene, I have hung zeale and eſteeme of Chriſt upon the hedge, other matters have defeated them, of their birthright. Secondly, be warned againſt unbeleefe. This takes off the ſoule from all her right to Chriſt, and therefore marres her plea; If I be the Lords, I have right to his nouriſhment, and cannot chuſe but pleade it, as the infant pleads with the mother for the breſt. But if Satan doe get in ſo farre as to dazle the ſoule with unbeleefe; lo, all the ground of gracious appetite is gone; and then, what ſucceeds but fulſomneſſe and ſtaggering? Vnbeleefe is the death of the ſoule: Doth the dead child miſſe the breaſt? No, no: above all things abhorre this wofull enemy of infidelity, and nouriſh faith to the conſervation of the ſoule, Heb. 10. ult. If the ſoule be upheld in her life and being, life muſt have nouriſhment, and want of it, will proove hunger. But if the ſoule have once withdrawne it ſelfe from the body, what is it but a carrion? Thirdly, Heb. 10 38.

Thirdly, surfeits of lusts.

cast all superfluity out of the soule, which hath secretly soked at unawares into it. The wombe that will conceive, must be cleane from all former conception: it will not conceive upon conception. If then a proud heart loving it selfe, if a techy revenging spirit, if the love of gold and silver, if gallantnesse, jollitie, and pride of life, scorning to take it as we have done; if uncharitablenesse, slighting, and neglect of meanes defile us (as alas, what is easier, if a man be let loose to walke after the guise of the world) how can appetite last? If ye will covet the Word, purge out all your superfluities, for they oppresse the seate of appetite, and while they lye there, small appetite will appeare. Fourthly, cast out the tickling excesse of all lawfull liberties, eating, drinking, feasting, recreations, pleasures, and vanities, of all sorts. To goe beyond our bounds in these, under pretence of warrantablenesse, doth as much jarre with the spirit of a Christian as open offences: for, by these colours Satan withdrawes the Spirit from a close cleaving to God, selfe-deniall and faith; poisons it with liberty, bewitches it with ease, and corrupts it with a declining of heart from that diligence, sincerenesse, power, and delight, wherewith it formerly walked. Adde to these, such as thou hast felt to dampe affection in thee, perhaps ill marriage, a bitter roote of infinite branches, jealousies, suspicions and ill affectednesse to each other: Never looke that the appetite after grace can hold, while such scurffe is nourished. I tremble to see by wofull experience, how farre some dare venture in this kinde. So also crossings in our estates, and health, and businesse which drawes the heart off, (for the most part) from God, as also too much businesse and padling in the world: many irons being in the fire at once to distaste affection, and to craze the sweete temper of it for Christ and his Sacraments.

1 Pet 2.1,2.

Fourthly, excess of liberties.

Pro. 23.2.

Vse. 4. Exhortation.

Vse of helpes and motives.

Fourthly, let it be exhortation to all Gods people in these dangerous dayes, (wherein scarce one of an hundred, quits himselfe without some cracke and flaw) to looke to spirit, fervencie of desire and affection to all the will and wayes of God constantly (as far as our weakenesse will permit) to file off our rust, and scrape off the barren mosse that will overgrow a tree of righteousnesse; to cast our Snakes skin, and Eagles bill; and to scoure our selves upon the salt marshes (as sheepe doe) that health and appetite may be preserved. I meane afflictions wisely used. Be wary of thy company, keepe the watch of God, preserve tenderneſse and jealousie, double the use of best meanes, set God above them, and renue thy Covenant nant daily. This will easily worke Sacramentall appetite in thee: Come with it to the Supper; empty thy stomacke, bring not thy browne bread and cheese in thy pocket, to feede on at Gods feast: (the fowlest contempt which thou canst offer him.) Remember, desire after Christs fulnesse, is the most proper and peculiar worke of a guest, if he would have his inviter thinke well of his presence. Marriage feasts powre out men into affection: and without it such occasions are odious; but to God much more. If a Iudge oppresse, being in the place of Iustice; it is horrible. So for a communicant to come with a dead heart, and no stomack to Gods feast, is most wofull. Say to Christ, as once he said to his Apostles; Lord, with desire I have desired (note the phrase, Luke 22.15.) to eate this Passover with thee. Lord nourish it in my soule, I desire, Lord, pardon my indifferencie. Thou seest that commonly looke what thou seekest earnestly, thou getteſt: eager pursuit of money, of will, or lust, compasseth them: so desire of the Sacrament shall attaine her end. Esau with teares sought a blessing, not a spirituall, but a temporall: if he had an heart to have craved a better, he had had it. Take heede least the Lord thus lode thee one day, for thy fulsome receivings: and let all this be some quickning of thy soule to receive aright. Luke 22.15. Heb. 12.17.

Fiftly, come to the triall of this grace, with thy selfe seriously: whether it be renewed at the Supper or no; some few markes I will mention, leaving the Reader to judge of other trials by these. First, this is one maine one: If the sight of that fulnsse of grace that is in this feast of Christ, doe emptie our soules to the bottome of all selfe-sufficiencie of our owne. Contraries applied to each other doe greatly enlarge one another: ignorance with knowledge, pureneſse with corruption, the modesty of a Matron, with the impudence of a Harlot. Try them, hath the Lord Iesus his fulneſse emptied thee of all thy base counterfeit shewes, and left thee confounded in thy selfe for thy seeming vertues, thy barrenneſse of grace, thy fulneſse of corruption? Thou seest what Christ is, doth thy owne spirit beginne to smite in thee, to consider what thou art compared with him? Alas! if there were no more to lay thee open to thy selfe, than now and then, to meete with here a shred and there another of sinne: thou wouldest be oppressed with selfe-love, and waxe a dunghill of drosse. Onely Christ can truely perfect the discovery of naturall poyson. If then all that is said of Christ leave thee as it found thee, its a signe of a wretch. But if confounded and empty, a good signe. Vse 5. Triall of it. Triall 1. Luke 5.8.

Secondly,

Triall 2. Secondly, it will not there ſtay neither, but thy emptineſſe will ſo pinch and diſquiet thee, that thou ſhalt finde no reſt in thy ſelfe: The Spirit of Chriſts Sacramentall fulneſſe will affect thy ſpirituall ſtomacke, as long faſting will thy body. Thou knoweſt what a grievous paine thy ſtomacke will feele: and how thy veines will ſhrinke and take on with intollerable grinding, till their emptineſſe be filled. Try then, doth the want of a meeke, humble, patient, ſoft heart pinch thee and give thee no reſt? If a man ſhould have ſaid to Rachel (when ſhe ſo longed for children) Be quiet, for thou haſt a loving husband dearer to thee than ten ſonnes; would ſhe not have beene more fierce? So when thy ſoule is pinched within thee for ſome odious luſt which thy hard heart will not be ridde of; and then the devill comes in with his contents, and tells thee what gifts, what opinion thou haſt in the Church, how God bleſſes thee with wealth, &c. How doth it affect thee? Is it as a dagger to thy heart? Canſt thou ſay, Nay, ridde me out of this my wofull chaine, and I will be cheerefull, but elſe the more I have, the more is againſt me, that one ſo bleſſed by God, ſhould carry an heart about him ſo hardned with pride and eaſe, or the ſenſuality of the fleſh. Nothing can ſtill an hungry appetite, but meate, or a thirſty, but drinke. If then this pinching of thy ſoule be wrought in thee, which counts every bauble droſſe, till thou get that which thou wanteſt, it is well.

Gen. 30. 1.

Triall 3. Thirdly, hungring appetite after Chriſts nouriſhment will cauſe eager hearkning after food. Naomi going out of her dwelling for famine, being in Moab, yet could not be quiet with that diet, but ſtill liſtened, till at the laſt ſhe heard the Lord had viſited his people with bread. So is it here, if thou be throughly pinched, all thy whole thoughts, inquiries, will be after this bread of life. Thou wilt be ſcarce an houre together in this pinching want, but thy prayers wil be earneſt with God to ſatisfie thee with Chriſts fulneſſe. Thou wilt give him no reſt, nor thy eyeliddes any ſleepe, till the Lord have ſpoken peace to thee, and rid thee out of thy thraldome.

Ruth 1. 6. Prov. 18. 2.

Triall 4. Fourthly, when thou haſt it, thou wilt feede ſavorily upon it, as an hungry man kept long from his meate. The Lord Ieſus Sacramental will reliſh with thee above all the world, if once thou have got him. Try then: With what ſavour doſt thou ſit at Gods Table? Is it to thee above the Courts of Princes? Canſt thou there lay hold upon the promiſe, and feede ſavorily of that portion which the Lord deales out according to thy neede? Doſt thou ſay, I ſee Lord, the the tables of great Epicures serve to stuffe the belly with meates and wines: But he that would fill his spirit with thy savour, and be satisfied with thine Image, and get communion with thy Spirit, let him come to thy house and feast. Oh! I doe not grudge them their portion, but in secret I blesse thee that mine owne is falne into so good a ground. Oh! let me live thus in thy Cellars, and drinke of thy flagons, and I shall never envie them their corne and wine; but enjoy my owne portion with sweet savour, and full contentment, and spend all my life in thy Temple. One thing have I desired of the Lord, and will not cease; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all my dayes to behold his beautie. Ephe. 5.16. Psal. 23. 6. Cant. 2. 3, 4, 5 Psal. 27 4.

Fifthly, thou wilt beteame this thy portion to others, without grudging, as having felt what it is to be starv'd and pincht with neede. He that hath beene at deaths doore through hunger, if he ever become able, he will be very bountifull to hungry ones. So will they who finde this fulnesse of Christ to satisfie them with it, afford and by all meanes openly or privily convey it to others. Nay, they will use meanes to bring them to feele this pinching want, that so they may helpe them with that sweete satisfaction which themselves have gotten. When those poore Lepers that breake into the campe of Aram, had (beyond hope) filled themselves, they began to Checke themselves, that they had not done well, in that they had so long concealed it: So doth every soule which hath met with the treasure of Christ in the Sacrament, he thinkes thus, Lord this is a blessing not belonging to one or two, but to the whole body of the Church! Oh that I could tell how to impart that little which I have got to as many as neede it? Especially to such as are neere me, husband, wife, children, kindred and neare neighbours! I can but wonder how a thing of such excellency as this is, should so little move me, to improve it! Try then thy selfe by this: Whether when God hath satisfied thee in his house, thou hoardest all up to thy self, never dreaming of anothers wants? Or whether with Sampson, having found honey in the dead Lyon (the Lord Iesus) thou goest away feeding thy selfe, and giving to father and mother, yea, and (more than hee would) telling them the true meaning of thy Riddle. Triall 5. 2 King. 7. 9. Iudg. 14. 9.

Sixthly, if being richly bested, thy supply causeth thee to covet more and more afterward? If it be a nourishment and a fountaine of water flowing out of thy belly to eternall life, not easily forgotten and laid aside? Triall 6.

Lastly,

Triall 5. Lastly, if having abstained more than ordinarily from this feast, thou finde thy appetite to grow the more strong by the meanes, than if thou receivedst often. Strong stomacks are knowne by this, that when their ordinary houre is past, yet they wax more hungry. Whereas the weake stomacke decaieth thereby. We say, many bad meales make the last a glutton. If this be a true signe, doubtlesse there be many of us who might have a marveilous stomacke. Try then, is the Lord more fulsome or more sweete by absence? Is Psal. 84. 3. 4. the deferring of thy desire the very fainting of the soule? Doth thy intermission renew thy love, thy longing, thy joy, thy fondnesse, thy fainting of heart after the Sacrament? It is well. These few to an honest heart may helpe more forward.

Vse 6. Comfort. The last use is comfort to all weake desirers, who are ready to thrust themselves from the Supper for want of measure. I have smal joy to comfort either false desirers, or revolters to their old carnall desires. I send such to the use of admonition, and upon search to cease venturing to profane the ordinance till their glut be vomited up. But I know also many a poore soule whose desire is constant, yet cannot be satisfied. For say they, it would have long ago broken out into beleeving. But I wanze still in a bare desire. Is it even so, do yee account true desire so bare a thing? No; the Lord shall not breake thy bruised Reede, nor quench thy smoaking flax till judgement doe breake out into victory. Be it knowne, desire is no bare thing, but precious and fruitfull, and shall end in fulnesse. Therefore be not dismayed: come to the Supper, be sure it is no surfeit, but a faint desire, and the Master of the guests, when he spies thee, will picke out the best dainty of all his feast, and lay it unto thee. And this also shall serve for this fifth and last grace of desire, and the triall of it, and so in generall, concerning the whole doctrine of Sacramentall preparation. Which the Lord so blesse, that all his servants to whose hands this poore Treatise may come, may meete with some morsells, which may cause them not to repent them of their travaile.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Of the due behaviour of a Communicant in the act of receiving.

NOw according to our order prefined, we proceed to adde ſomewhat concerning the worke it ſelfe of receiving: The communicant then having taken due paines for the making himſelfe fit for the Supper, is not there to reſt, but to go to the Sacrament to eate of that bread, and drinke of that cup, as Paul ſpeaketh. Now to give the Reader a taſte beforehand of the ſubject matter of this Chapter, let him know it is twofold, The one concerneth the comming unto, the other due receiving of the Sacrament. For the former, I will by this occaſion ſpeake a little of the neceſſity of comming to the Sacrament, both in generall as concernes all that are worſhippers, and in ſpeciall, thoſe that are prepared for it. For the latter I ſhall handle it either in that due carriage of the receiver towards the whole ordinance, or towards ſome paſſages thereof. For the whole ordinance it ſelfe, the receiver owes a double carriage, either of communication, or of perpetuation: The former being a thankefull raiſing of heart to God the Father, in praiſe for the Lord Ieſus. The latter being a preſervation of the integrity of this ordinance (by the incorrupt uſe thereof) from all corruption of humane deviſes. The carriage of the receiver concerning ſome occaſionall paſſages in the Sacrament, is a ſpirituall accommodation of the ſoule, attending ſo to the outward Sacramentall acts there performed, that hee finde himſelfe much quickned in the grace he brought with him, and edified in the reſpect of that fruite which he lookes to carry away.

Of the cariage at the Sacrament.

Entry and diviſion.

1. Point. Neceſſity of comming.

For the firſt of theſe. The words of the Apoſtle are plaine. So let him come, and eate of this bread, and drinke of this cup. Which words are not permiſſive (let him if he will) but imperative; let him, I command him upon paine of my wrath and diſpleaſure. But many reaſons there are to prove it alſo. Firſt, who can deny but the Church and ordinances of the Goſpel are more excellent than thoſe under the Law? Reade theſe Texts, Heb. 9. 11. 23. Heb. 5. 1, 2. &c. Heb. 3. 5, 6. with many more. Now in the old Teſtament we ſee how ſolemne a penalty is threatned againſt him that in coole blood (having no plea by ſickneſſe, or journey, and buſineſſe to alledge)

Proofes. 1 Cor. 11. 28. See Treatiſe 1 Chap. 1.

Num. 9. 13. ledge) ſhould forbeare to keepe the Paſſeover; even ſuch a one (ſaith the Lord) ſhall be cut off from his people. Nay, it ſeemes that although legall pollutions might hinder ordinary ſervices and ſacrifices, yet the neceſſity of the Paſſeover, tooke away the barre of ſuch pollutions: ſo that the touching a dead man, or being in a journey, and about common buſineſſe might not infringe it. The Lord by this meane providing for the honour and neceſſity of the Sacrament. How much more neceſſary then are the Sacraments of the Goſpel to be frequented? And how ſevere a cenſure of excommunication lyes upon the violaters of them?

Vſe 7.

If now the Lord ſo ſeverely plagues a receiver for want of worthy receiving, how much more will he plague a non-receiving diſpiſer? If a Prince ſend for ſome of his Subjects to appeare before him: whereof ſome appeare, but bow not the knee to doe homage, others refuſe to waite upon him at all, whether of theſe two thinke we incurre greateſt diſpleaſure?

Reaſon 1. 1 Cor. 11. 29

Secondly, to what iſſue comes all we have ſaid hitherto concerning Supper preparation? Can wee conclude ſuch a thing to be needeleſſe, as requires ſuch a coſtly entrance? It might then be ſaid, Why is this great waſte? No ſurely. So neceſſary a preparation cannot argue a ſlight duty. If all the land had ſummons by a day to waite upon the King in their colours, for a warlike expedition, were any ſo fond as to deeme that enterpriſe idle, which coſt ſuch a tedious addreſſement?

Reaſon 2.

Thirdly, the ſubſtance it ſelfe of the Sacrament is a thing of neceſſity and that abſolute. If a man were in a ſhip like to be caſt away, he would ſay, its not neceſſary I keepe my corne or proviſion, but its neceſſary I keepe my life. So here. Its not neceſſary that we thrive, or live long, or live at all, (for we may be happy without any ſuch) but it is neceſſary we have the life of grace in our ſoules. Now the Sacrament is Chriſt our life and nouriſhment. Except yee eate the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blond, ye have no life in you, Ioh. 6, 53. What caſe are ſuch miſcreants in then for ſoule life, as abhorre Sacraments?

Reaſon 3.

Fourthly, the induſtry and paines taken by thoſe famous worthies and reſtorers of the collapſed Paſſeover, both in their commiſſions ſent about, their munificence in providing lambes for ſuch as wanted, and their charge given perſonally to the people, to keepe the ſame to the Lord, doth ſufficiently argue that theſe holy Princes were fooles, if the thing they undertooke were a needeleſſe triſle?

Reaſon 4. 2 Chron. 20. 23. 2 Chron. 31. 27, 28.

How

How much leſſe then is the uſe of the Paſſeover of the Goſpel a needleſſe thing?

Fiftly, if the Lord preſſe oftenneſſe of comming to the Supper as a neceſſary duty, how much more is a comming and tendring of our perſons to God, needeleſſe? If ſcanty comming bee a ſinne, what a fearefull premunire then runne they into, that refuſe at all to come?

Laſtly, if the ſcope of the Supper be peculiar honour and thanks to God for Chriſt, and a ſolemne holding out his death till he come: what a ſinne is that which cuts off both the generall end of the worſhip, and the peculiar ſcope of thise? But I dwell no longer upon a point ſo cleere: To brutiſh ſwine reaſon is loſt; and to the good it is needleſſe. Reaſon 5. Luke 22. 21.

Before I leave the point I muſt adde a few uſes. Firſt, terrour to all profane Eſau's, who being out of love with the Sacrament through loathing of examination of their woefull profane lives, (which indeede are ſo intricate and over whelmed in ſinne, that they admit none) make it their conſtant practice to abandon all Sacraments. And when they are cut off by mens cenſures for this their contempt, they are content ſo to live & are no whit troubled: a man knowes not whether the diſeaſe or the remedy doe worſe with them. I might compare them to Cain, ſave that I ſhould wrong him by unjuſt a compariſon. Cain, becauſe hee had villanouſly and ſacrilegiouſly defiled the ordinances which Abel and he joyned in, was debarred of them and for ever caſt out of Gods preſence: But as curſed as he was, he could lay it to heart, and ſay it was too great for me to beare. But theſe Atheiſts and ſwine are ſo far from that, that they willingly content themſelves to be caſt out, & think it is a good barre to keep them from that which they are glad to be ridde of. If ye aske why they do thus, they ſay, they have buſineſſe to doe, and cannot skill of this new doctrine of Triall, or cannot be reconciled with their enemies. But Oh monſters in the ſhape of men! doth the Lord appoint ye one ordinance to fit yee for another, as the Sabbath to exempt ye from your work; and the doctrine of tryall, that ye might come better prepared, and do ye picke a quarrell with the one to balk the other? Do ye turn Gods helpes to lets? Surely ye ſhal pay double for your contempt, both of the means & the duty it ſelfe. If a man bid his ſervant goe to walke in his field from morning to night, & he run to the Alehouſe & neglect his labour: when his maſter comes to reckon with him, will it be an ex- Uſes. 1 Terrour. Gen. 4. 14.

cuſe for him to ſay, Truly I was taken up ſo betweene your houſe and your worke, that I neglected it? No, his maſter will anſwer, Oh thou baſe wretch, when I commanded thee my worke, did I not forbid thee whatſoever might turne thee from it? I will pay thee double; both for thy Ale-houſe hanting, and thy forbearing of my worke alſo. Oh! But if they come not, they ſhall not eate (ſay they) and drinke their owne damnation! Anſwer, Yet they eſcape not: let them tell mee whether of theſe ſentences bee more eaſie, viz. They eate and drinke their owne condemnation by comming, or take him, and bind him, caſt him into utter darkeneſſe, where there is wailing, weeping & gnaſhing of teeth, for not comming? If there bee any oddes, much good doe them with it: But their deepe Logicke cannot helpe them to any.

Objection.
Anſwer.
1 Cor. 11. 29.
Luke 14.

Oh! That thoſe into whoſe hands the keeping of both Tables is committed, would another while turne their eyes to hunt out theſe beaſts! and the edge of their authority betimes to cut off ſuch from the City of God! Oh that they would turne the backe thereof unto all godly and upright hearted ones, whoſe joy is to partake the ordinances in their beauty and pureneſſe! My ſoule within me faints, to thinke how unanſwerable a ſacriledge, and horrible a plague they are guilty of, who having the coercive power committed unto them, ſuffer our Sacraments to be made execrable, either by the profaneneſſe of receivers, or the Atheiſme and Popery of abſenters and Recuſants! Oh! compell them in Gods feare to come! not by thruſting any particular man upon the Supper, beeing unmeete: but by providing, that whoſoever may bee prepared and will not come, may pay for both contempts. Thus did thoſe Magiſtrates whom before I named, I end this point thus: First, let the Magiſtrate know, that as the Miniſter of God repreſents Chriſt in his propheticall office, teaching every ſoule to be prepared to come, and then joynes the Kingly office, to debarre him thence till prepared: So the Magiſtrate onely exerciſes their Kingly office, to force all to come. Secondly, all ye wicked refuſers, ceaſe your quarrelling with God, and turne edge againſt your ſelves and ſay, Woefull wretch, as the caſe ſtandeth with thee, whether thou come or come not, thou art both waies ſnared and accurſed. There is no way for thee but to humble thy ſelfe, firſt prepare, and then come.

Vſe 2.
Reproofe.

Secondly, this reproves all Chriſtian receivers (for ſo they would faine be named, and perhaps ſome may bee religious) who though they come, yet ſcant God as much as they can in the number of his his Sacraments, and come as ſeldome as poſſibly any honeſt men can come. What a ſhame is this? Perhaps a wiſe obſerver may note at ſome one Sacrament twenty to abſent themſelves, whom no cauſe moves, ſave that they received laſt time! Why? are yee afraid leaſt mercy ſhould compaſſe ye as a ſhield, and follow yee from Sacrament to Sacrament? Doth not this convince ye, that ye turne your backes upon God, becauſe his yoake is burthenſome? Conſider it in Gods feare (I ſpeake ſpecially to mine owne) and remember that Paul calls for oft doing of it. And the primitive Church having lately loſt Chriſts body, did daily behold his ſpirituall preſence in the Supper. Truly, ſuch as doe ſow ſparily, ſhall reape ſparily; and hee that will doe no more for God than needes muſt, ſhall have no more of him than needs muſt. No, no, the Lord muſt be ſerved fuitfully; with all our ſtrength and courage: Delight in the Lord, and he will give thee thy hearts deſire. The ordinances muſt be throughly plyed and waited upon, yea, made the uttermoſt of, by all ſuch as looke to thrive upon them: Dallyers, and timeſervers, and ſcanters of God, ſhall never drinke of the brookes of butter and hony which flowes from theſe fountaines. And O lazy receiver, who takeſt turnes with God, what doſt thou know whether the turne be the right one or the wrong? and whether God will follow thee or no, when thou commeſt at thy pleaſure, or forſake thee for thy forſaking him? One ſhould thinke, that an aſſembly of ſuch as have beene taught the way of this worſhip, ſhould not (after 20, 30, or 40 yeares) balke the Lord every each Sacrament for lack of liſt or leaſure to prepare themſelves: but rather count it their great gaine (next to Gods honour) to come often. I know not how generall this ill cuſtome is: But have obſerved it ſo much where I leaſt wiſh it, that I muſt complaine and call for redreſſe. Surely none ſtreighten God in his Sacrament, ſave thoſe that take the uttermoſt of their owne liberties in profits and pleaſures, and vanities: It is commonly ſeene, that they thinke all ſpirituall ſervice too much: thinke alſo all liberty to the fleſh too litle: Be aſhamed of this your courſe: you would ſoone tell God of it, if he ſhould bleſſe you by halfes, as you ſerve him. Oh! ſerve not the Lord with ſhreds which coſt ye nothing. Count ye his ſervice perfect freedome, and his burthen light, if ye be the children of the free, and not the bond-woman.

them when they have done, and comming betweene cup and lip) diſſwade them from eating that bread and drinking of that cup. I tell you he is a ſubtile ſophiſter, and hath ſo bewitched ſome novices, that they have made themſelves away, under this pretext: leſt they ſhould live longer and ſinne. And he can ſuggeſt unto ſome fearefull ones: That ſeeing they have done to the uttermoſt to prepare themſelves, it is no great matter for the act of receiving it: ſeeing the endeavour with God is as the deede it ſelfe. And ſo it is (I grant) where more cannot be attained; but not where it may: for Phil. 2. 13. he ſaith, It is God by whom yee have both the will, and alſo the power to doe. Put the caſe an husbandman ſhould plough and ſow and fence, and waite the whole yeare for his Crop; and when it is ripe, hee ſhould keepe his bed and ſay, I have prepared for haveſt to the uttermoſt, therefore now I will let my wheate ſtale in the eare for lacke of reaping. Would not all chronicle this man for a foole! yet ſuch folly there may be found in the profeſſors of Religion: For why? many who both in their owne judgement, and other mens have approved themſelves to bee the Lords, and abhorre to foſter any ſinne in them which might diſable them from comfort: yet, pretending their unſufficiencie, or from an unthankefull heart, or melancholick feares, or foureneſſe and ſullenneſſe: ſuddenly kick downe all their building, and refuſe to come to the Table of the Lord. But oh poore deluded creatures! What is this, ſave to confound Gods iſſues and ends? What is it but in a ſort to condemne the righteous, and to juſtifie the wicked? What is it, but to croſſe with God, and to make that ordinance which ſerves for edifying, not onely to ſerve to no ſuch uſe, but rather to a worſe uſe, than if no ſuch ordinance at all had beene? For why? Doth it not as equally contradict the rule of Triall, that a prepared ſoule ſhould not come, as, that an unprepard one ſhould come? Let them know that they offend as much in not comming, as if they having not tryed themſelves, durſt come. And the Sacrament eſpecially ſerving for the ſupply of our wants: theſe bereave themſelves not only of the end of triall, but of the end of the Supper it ſelfe. I warne them therefore to be wiſe & adviſed. Do not beſtow much time in trimming & preparing to meet the bridegroome; and when the marriage day & feaſt is come, then looke ſowrely, & make queſtion whether thou ſhouldſt meet him or not. This were to make a May-game for the devill, to eſcape the gulfe & make ſhipwrack in the haven: rather lay hold upon the Lord Ieſus in the day & ſeaſon of his grace and ſay, Lord, the meanes I have uſed, preparing to the end: let me not (like a foole) take my labour for my paines, but attaine the end of my labour, in comming to thy Sacrament, that both my ſoule and body may honour thee together, and both carry away comfort of thy promiſe: remembring how fearefull a thing it is, to ſeparate the things which thou haſt put together. Thus much for the firſt head.

A communicants generall carriage.

Having thus brought on the Communicant from his preparation, to the Table of the Lord: Now I come more neerely to direct him about his due carriage there. And firſt for ſuch generall carriage both of body and minde, as concernes every ordinance; I will be ſhort, as haſtening to the more pertinent carriage at the Table. For the externall carriage firſt, it muſt not be unrevenred, gazing, idle, offenſive, light, wandring, wearieſome: nor yet Popiſh, formall, reſting in ſome outward geſture, without any reverence of ſpirit; but ſober, compoſed, attending the duty and beſeeming it. Vnto which, ſinging of Pſalmes of praiſe may be added, ſo farre as may not confound the action. And Almes alſo at the end of the Action, in token of true Thankeſgiving; that ſeeing we cannot reach the Lord, our love may fall upon his poore Saints. As touching the behaviour of our ſpirits, they are to be preſent with God: All the Liturgies of the old and new Church have that ſolemne clauſe in them [Lift up your hearts; We lift them up to the Lord:] And moſt excellently (rather like a Preacher than a King) Ioſia charges the people thus, 2 King. 23. 21. Keepe the Paſſeover to the Lord your God. A ſtrange phraſe. If he had ſaid, Pray to the Lord, or, give thankes to the Lord, we ſhould have conceived it; but hee ſaith, keepe the Paſſeover to the Lord; meaning, Raiſe up holy, heavenly hearts and affections toward the Lord, who is preſent to ſee your diſpoſitions, and thereafter to requite you. This for the generall, more in the particulars will be occaſioned.

But more ſpecially the Lord requires of all his, peculiar behaviours at his Sacrament. The firſt of theſe duties that concerne them, is commemoration, or thankſgiving for the Lord Ieſus: The Father preſents him at the Supper in his fulneſſe, that we may make it as a Monument of his death, and of all his benefits. This is that he ſaith, Doe this in remembrance of me. As we ſee in Colledges and houſes founded by the bounty of great men that they have ſolemne dayes of commemoration, to rehearſe the names and bounties of their benefactors, ſo the Churches day, & ſeaſon of thanks for Chriſt & his benefits is the Sacrament of the Supper: Hence it is called the Eucharist or Thanksgiving. Now to this end it were not amisse for us, to set before us those patterns of thankes which we reade of in Scripture for the benefits of Christ. If we reade the 63 of Esay the first sixe verses, we shall see how the Prophet breakes out into a gratulation for Christ: Who (saith he) is he that commeth up from Bozra with red garments, glorious in his apparrell, mighty to save? Wherefore art thou red, and thine apparrell as he that treadeth in the winefat? I have trodden the wine-presse alone, &c. I will mention the loving kindnesse of the Lord, according to all the goodnesse, &c. So also that of Saint John, Revelation 1. Verse 5. Who is the faithfull witnesse and first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the earth: who hath loved us, and washed us from our sinnes in his owne blood, and hath made us Kings and Princes unto God and his Father: to him be dominion and glory for ever. See the like 1 Tim. 1. 17. Now unto the King immortall, invisible, the onely wise God be honour and glory for ever and ever, Amen. So Paul 1 Cor. 15. Oh hell where is thy victory? oh grave where is thy sting? The sting of death is sinne, and the strength of sinne is the Law: But thankes be to God who giveth us victory through our Lord Iesus. See also Rom. 7. 24. Who shall deliver me from this body of death? I thanke God through Jesus Christ our Lord. We see, the Saints of old could make Songs of the Lambe, and his deliverance: Moses and Miriam gave no greater prayse for their deliverance from Pharao, than they could make songs for Christ; But how should we doe so? Surely if we would take the like course with our base hearts at the Sacrament, which they could doe without it, wee should doe as they did. They filled their soules to the brimme with the meditation of his benefits: So should we doe at the Sacrament. The Lord gives us a feast of him in all his dishes, wee may choose which our appetite most longeth after, all summed up in the seales of his body and blood:) meditate of that love which made him forget glory, and become shame, a worme of the earth: continue with long suffering and baseneſse, thirty yeares upon earth, that he might be called and annointed to suffer and dye. Consider his miseries reproaches and indignities, from the vassalls of Satan: his being tempted by the Devill: spending dayes and nights in fasting and prayer: willingnesse to be taken by his enemies, and to endure his fathers wrath to the uttermost, and crying out: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Cull out what parcell thou thou canst from the cratch to the crosse, such as affords the deepest, the divinest grounds of meditation, able to conquer and ravish the soule, and to blow up that sparkle of love and thankes which is kindled in thee. Thou canst turne thee no way, but matter will offer it selfe to thee, to raise affections to the Sacrament.

Matter being thus raised, set thine heart on worke therewith: Let admiration at this love of Christ so set upon thee, a traytor, a rebell, when thou wert (not the most unprofitable or unworthy, but) most treacherous of a thousand others; let it cause thee to cry out: Why shouldst thou thus reveale thy selfe to me, and passe by so many? What should move thee to empty thy selfe to the bottome of thy excellent conntents, that thou shouldest obey even to the death of the crosse, and that for such a wretch as I. Oh! how my soule is linked to thee! How doe I love thee? What parts, wealth, esteeme, hopes, welfare, yea life it selfe should not be dung to me in respect of thee! Whom have I in heaven but thee, or whom in earth to be compared to thee! Yea this abundance of thankes to Christ should carry thy heart through him to God the Father, as Paul, Col. 3. 17. speakes. O Father, how couldst thou spie out such a sinner as I out of a thousand, to choose and call mee home? how couldst thou forgoe thine onely Sonne, and suffer him to be made the off-scouring of the earth, rather than I should perish! Oh! who is a God like unto our God, forgetting and pardoning the transgressions of the remnant of thine heritage! Oh! My soule magnifieth the Lord, and my flesh rejoyceth in God my Saviour! From both the Father and the Sonne, let thy thankes proceed to the Holy Ghost: Oh blessed Spirit, who bloweſt where thou listest, what moved thee to make this Sacrament, such a sweete seale of pardon, and heaven to such a staggering distrustfull creature as I am? Why hast thou assured my soule by these sweete pledges of security, that I shall not perish, nor for ever be separated from thee! My soule shall never forget such a blessed Spirit, as hath conveyed his best assurance into my soule, so barren and empty thereof before.

The ſecond duty, is perpetuation; intimated in that clauſe of our Saviour. For ſo doing, ye ſhew forth the Lords death till he come. I will touch it but briefly. Firſt know, it is not with the Sacrament of the Supper, as it was with that daily Sacrifice which the Iewes offered to God morning and evening. That was deſtroyed when the Temple of Ieruſalem was ruined by Titus Veſpaſian. But the Supper of the Lord Ieſus, typified (in part) thereby, is to laſt till the worlds end in one part of the Church or other. Popery by their curſed Maſſe, & other hereticks by their devices, for many hundred yeares together (through Satans enmity) interrupted ſhrewdly the purity of Chriſt Sacramentall. They brought in a Sacrifice for a Sacrament, and defiled this ordinance ſo farre, that they quite defaced it. The Iewes (as hiſtories relate) in deriſion of the Supper, and of the Lord Ieſus, were wont every Eaſter, to ſteale a Chriſtian childe or ſtripling, and to crucifie him upon a croſſe: all (as much as in them lay) to destroy the true doctrine and memoriall of Christ Sacramentall. Truth is odious to the factors of superstition: and at this day, what doe Papists reproach with so base termes as the Supper of Protestants, calling the Table of the Lord by the name of an Oyster Board, and the Sacrament by the name of the Heretick ordinary? alleadging, that their Altar and Transubstantiation are the onely true meanes to honour Christs Sacrifice, which they offer to God for the sinnes of quicke and dead, but not receive from God as a pledge of forgivenes and holinesse. Now marke, the Lord in all ages hath still upheld the glorious beauty of his entire Sacrament, against all such corruption and profanation. And that especially by sustaining his poore servants to shed their blood, in the defence of this cause. We know how many hundreds in King Henry the 5. 6. 7. 8. dayes, but more openly in Queene Maries, suffered in our own nation for the defence of this cause of God: besides the thousands of Martyrs in other Countries by the Inquisition and tyrannie of Popish Bishops. Neither are we to looke, that in any age (till the kingdome of Christ come) this holy ordinance shall ever want enemies: who either openly or secretly, in part or wholly, will seeke either to undermine and obscure the purity and honour, or overthrow the substance of this Sacrament. But all in vaine: for this shall stand as a brasen pillar in the midst of the flood, and shall survive all corrupters and enemies; and shall be perpetuated in her honour and integrity, till the comming of the Lord Iesus to judgement, when all heresie shall perish with the breath of his mouth; & Satan himselfe is driven from earth, and confined for ever to hill. How upheld.

But how shall this great worke be effected and continued in the Church so long, and so daily? Surely by those his people who are members of the militant Church, who (like Champions of Christ) shall stand out for this precious Iewell committed to their trust and safegard. Both Ministers by their diligent teaching the doctrine of the Sacrament, and vindicating thereof from the cavils and corruptions of Popery: And the whole Church both Ministers and people, by their receiving this Sacrament according to the pure institution of the Lord Iesus without leaven of mans mixture: Both these, I say, are appointed to perpetuate the honour and dignity thereof, in spite of all enemies. Indeed I grant, that perhaps each poore soule in receiving, doe not punctually attend this; but the Lord attends it in them, & effects it by them, while he sustaines them by faith and good conscience, to come & partake this ordinance, incorruptly Illustration of the meanes of upholding it.

corruptly and ſincerely. We ſee then what a maine charge lyes upon every ſound Chriſtian: though he be no Martyr, yet he is a confeſſour to the truth of the Sacrament ſo oft as he receives it, according to the ordinance. He holds out with an hand openly to all that can ſee, the death of Chriſt, till he come: and by his cleaving cloſe to the will of the Ordeiner, becomes a witneſſe to Chriſt Sacramentall: bearing downe, as with a ſtreame, all popiſh, ſuperſtitious, Jewiſh, wilworſhipping enemies of this holy Sacrament.

Onely ſuch as by faith cleave to the inſtitution of Chriſt, the doctrine of a Sacrament and Sacramentall relation, the promiſe of the Lord Jeſus to be preſent till the end of the world with all ſuch: I ſay, onely thoſe that abandoning a Sacrament of forme and deede done, reſt upon the power of a promiſe for making good the fruit of their receiving to their ſoules in the Spirituall nouriſhment of the Lord Jeſus, doe beare witneſſe to the Sacrament againſt all uſurpers; who elſe by their trickes and devices would robbe the Church of this Monument. Therefore it concernes every true Chriſtian, not onely to take upon truſt from others, the doctrine of the Sacrament, but to underſtand it themſelves warily in their receiving, that they cleave to the rule of Chriſt, and ſtop their eares to all Popiſh chapmen in this kinde, who if they might be hearkned unto, in their conſecrated ſtones, adoration, and other curſed ceremonies, ſoone would the honour of the Sacrament lye in the duſt. The duty lyes, not only upon the Doctor of the chaire, or the Preacher in the pulpit, but upon each member of the militant Church, That he ſhew forth the death of the Lord till he come. Keepe the truſt which is repoſed in thee, poore as well as rich, unlearned as well as skilfull, baſe as well as honourable. In this thou ſhareſt with the beſt (for kinde though not degree) that in thy receiving corruptly or purely the truth and glory of the Sacrament is either preſerved or betrayed to the enemies of the death of Chriſt. If a man ſhould betruſt thee at his death with the diſpenſing of his wealth, and managing of his Orphans, as truly, as if he were alive to behold: tell me, durſt thou be falſe to a man? And ſhalt thou dare to be falſe to God, who hath betruſted thee with the Church treaſure, I meane the preſervation of his Sacrament in her pureneſſe? Looke well to thy ſelfe therefore: Thou art now a Guardian of Chriſts Orphan, not a mans: and he will not hold him guiltleſſe who ſhall forfeit this truſt. And this be ſaid of the ſecond behaviour of each communicant in the act of receiving.

The great duty of a receiver urged.

The

The third followeth, which I call, holy accommodation of the senses and spirit of a receiver, to those Sacramentall Acts both of Ministers and people, occasioned at and during the time of the Supper. In the former Treatise I have handled them at large with their use: Here I only touch upon them briefly, in point of Actuall behaviour. The sum is, that the Sacrament hath enough in it to busie and take up the whole man of him that receives it: and it is no dead object, but lively and fruitfull, to exercise him who delights in it: So that he shal not need to borrow devotion from the marking how this man and that woman carrie themselves, or by reading of Chapters, and such like helps. But the Lord will have him bend his senses to marke what acts are there passing betweene God and his people; for he knoweth that the behaviours fetcht from the Sacrament are ever safest and best at the Sacrament. And that by marking these acts, the soule of a beleever will gather one wholesome occasion or other to edifie it selfe: as for example. When he beholds the Minister of God standing in Gods stead, and separating the Elements; he gathers, that God the Father hath given the Lord Iesus to the Church; and thereby comforts himselfe in the free gift of God. Duty to the Sacrament in her acts and passages. The first.

Secondly, when he sees him to blesse and breake the Elements: he remembers that himselfe pierced and brake his body and sides by his sinne, and provoked the justice of the Father against him, which causes him to eate this Lambe, and to mixe sweete meate with the hearbes of mourning and contrition. The second.

Thirdly, when he heares the minister offer the Elements to himselfe in particular, he heares in him the voyce of the Father, exhorting him to apply the Lord Iesus to himselfe for his peculiar strengthening against Satan, the world, and corruption. The third.

Fourthly, beholding himselfe to thrust forth his hand to take, eate and drinke the Elements: he rejoyceth to thinke, that God hath united them to Christ inseparably, that by the power of the ordinance, the one might carry the other into the soule, and the soule might fasten with faith and hunger upon both, as the true Nourishment of grace, peace, joy, unto eternall life: so that no enemy shall be ever able to frustrate the fruite of this Sacrament. Also when he sees the Church partake with him in these mysteries, he perceives an inward tender love and communion, quickned in his heart, & drawing him to rejoyce in his own welfare (as a member) in, and under the welfare of the Church; through which (as the body) each member receives her own special influence from the head. The fourth. The fifth.

Yea

The ſixth. Yea the Pſalmes and Almes of the Congregation, ſung, and given from a cheerefull and charitable heart, both to God and his poore children; doth provoke him to doe likewiſe, to ſing with a grace in his heart to the Lord, and to diſtribute with a loving ſpirit to the neceſſities of the Saints. All which being pertinent relations to the Acts adminiſtred, doe further and ripen the ſoule in the grace of the Sacrament, ſo that it ſhall not neede to repent her of her labour, but with the end of the Sacrament reape alſo the fruit and carry away the bleſſing, and returning God the glory. And thus much of the behaviour of the Communicant at the Sacrament; which if it were well weighed, what difference ſhould we ſoone ſee? a maine difference betweene the baſeneſſe of man, and the Pro-

Concluſion. viſion of God? Alas, this would baniſh all earthly, wearieſome, ſenſuall, wandring carriage of communicants: who either for lack of ſound knowledge, or elſe want of ſavour of heart, are faine to fill up the time of long Sacraments, with moſt tedious thoughts and affections, and ſo defile themſelves in an irkeſome receiving of that, whereto they made ſo ſolemne a preparation. Whereas we know, that as it is a greater commendation to a ſubject, to demeane himſelfe duly in the preſence of his Soveraigne, than only to ſpend thoughts before hand, how he may doe it: ſo it is no ſmall comfort to a poore ſoule that he hath painefully prepared it ſelfe, when alſo it can converſe with God in the ordinance, ſo, as it may lay no offence in the Lords and her owne way, from a plentifull diſpenſing of mercy upon her ſelfe, while the ſeaſon of diſpenſing laſteth.

And thus much for this Chapter.

Chap. X.

Touching the due carriage of a Receiver after the Sacrament ended.

The third and laſt Generall, carriage after. TO conclude the whole Treatiſe, let me alſo adde a word or two concerning this laſt, but not leaſt duty of a communicant after the Supper; a piece of worke very little regarded by the moſt. But let us know, that as ſome part of the Sacrament was entred upon in preparation, ſo ſome part of it is to be doue after the publick action ended. I confeſſe it is counted a ridiculous thing by the moſt to be ſo preciſe, as never to have done: but to goe from Church to chamber, & there finiſh the work.

But

But to ſuch as make conſcience of other ordinances in private, this will be more welcome: and no paines will be thought too great for the attaining of ſo great commodity.

Briefly then, the Supper being ended, a Chriſtian receiver ſhould in private ſet himſelfe in the preſence of God, and performe theſe two duties: The firſt of faith. The other, due ſurvey of his receiving. Touching the firſt. A Chriſtian muſt cloſe up the whole action with the Amen, and ſo be it of faith, lotting upon the word of God, that it ſhall be to him in the fruite of his travell, according to that which God hath cauſed him to looke for. It comes in my minde what is recorded, Acts 12. of the Church aſſembled together in Maries houſe. They had beene earneſt to God for Peter in their prayers. It pleaſed God to heare them, and breake chaines and priſons by them: and to ſend Peter miraculouſly among them, as they deſired. Now when the Damoſell came in and told them it was Peter, they told her ſhe was madde; it was an Angel. Whence came this, that they ſhould ſo hardly beleeve that which they had ſo earneſtly prayed for? Surely, becauſe faith is ſuch a ſtranger to our ſpirit, even when it is at the beſt, that it ſeemes to bee a grace above us. Carnall reaſon, feare, and diſtruſt are alway upon the latch ready to breake in when we have beene moſt ſpiritually occupied, (how much more then ordinarily) and to buzze into our eares thus: Thus now thou haſt beene buſied, and as thou thinkeſt thou haſt diſcerned that which few have done at the Sacrament: But what if all this thy labour ſhould bee loſt? What if God ſhould doe neither good nor evill? What if for all this, thou ſhalt be no better than if abſent? Oh! Here then let thy faith ſtill bee attentive to guard thy ſoule, as Satan is with his fiery darts to diſmay thee: bee able to quench them by faith: thinke it no ſtrange thing that unbeliefe hath never done aſſaulting thee: but ply thy ſelfe with this ſhield and Armour, till thou have frayed away Sathan from thee, and recovered thy former part in the promiſe. Say thus, Lord was thy word ſtrong at my going to the Sacrament, and is it weake at my returne? Doeſt not thou alway ſpeake the ſame thing? Is there any ſhadow of turning in thee? Shall I in the generall ſay with Martha, Ioh. 11. 23. 39. I know thou canſt doe all things; but when it comes to the puſh, then ſtart backe and ſay, Hee ſtinketh? Farre bee it from mee Lord thus to bee at a ſudden loſſe, as if thy promiſe were no bottome ſufficient to cleave to? This is the firſt thing which the Lord

Act. 12. 15.

Lord lookes for, that thy faith ſhould bee as reall as the promiſe: and that thereby thy heart ſhould bee fenced from the feares and diſtempers of carnall ſenſe and diſtruſt, which elſe will breake in upon thy wanzing heart, and weaken thy confidence: Alas! we ſee nothing, nor heare any voyce from heaven: wee behold the boldneſſe and preſumption of Hypocrites, who after their receiving, are as merry as the beſt: and this troubles a poore ſoule when he findes ſtaggering, inſtead thereof. But, diſcourage not thy ſelfe: better is ſome feare where there is a treaſure to looſe, than all mirth, when thy heart is empty. Onely let this bee thy practice, Lot thou upon the truth of God, to beare downe all thy doubts and diſtempers, as faſt as Diſtruſt and Sathan plies thee with them.

Faith lots upon the promiſe.

Diſpute for God as Iehoſhaphat did for victory. Didſt not thou ſay O Lord, that when our enemeis aſſaulted us on every ſide, if we looked toward thy Temple, thou wouldeſt heare from heaven and deliver? Marke: very little appeared for him, all rather was againſt him; but he ſhooke all off with this caſting himſelfe, and lotting upon the word of promiſe. Said I not to my Lord, Deceive mee not (ſaith that Shunammite to Eliſha:) Shee had lotted upon his word, ſo that when the child was dead, ſhe was cheerefull, and went to the Prophet to pleade the promiſe. When Adonijah was got to bee King, poore Bathſheba and Nathan agree to goe to David, and encounter him thus: Did not my Lord the King ſay alway in our hearing, Salomon ſhall reigne; how then is it that Adonijah reignes? Can theſe ſtand together? So ſhouldeſt thou ſay, Lord is not thy fleſh meate indeede, and thy bloud drinke indeede? Saidſt not thou, that he that eateth the one and drinketh the other, hath eternall life in him? Haſt not thou promiſed, that thy Sacrament ſhall chaſe away my feares, my diſtruſt, my old luſts of covetouſneſſe, and uncharitableneſſe, impatience, and the like? Whence is it then that ſtill they dare aſſault mee? The Lord tells thee, this is to try whether thou wilt reſt in the worke wrought, or relie by faith upon the word, that it may bee a done deede, as it was a ſpoken word. Give not the Lord over then, caſt not away thy confidence, but lot upon the word and ſay, I beleeve it muſt be ſo Lord, becauſe thou haſt ſaid it: and if any ſhould come and tell mee, me thinkes you are better, ſince the laſt Sacrament, I ſhould not thinke it ſtrange; but anſwer, you ſay the truth, indeed, I beleeve I am ſo, for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it: therefor if I ſhould bee but as I was before, I ſhould make the Lord a lyer, and doe unſpeakeable wrong to him by my unbeleefe. Thus much for the firſt duty.

2. Duty ſurvey of our receiving. in 3 Acts. 1. In caſe of diſapointment.

The ſecond duty followeth: That a Chriſtian after his receiving, muſt ſurvey the worke and the fruit of it, how hee hath gained by his receiving, or what he hath loſt, and accordingly apply himſelfe. And that in theſe three paſſages following. For, if he finde himſelfe diſappointed of that fruite which he looked for, that God hath not aſſiſted him in his attempt, if he feele that ſtill his heart is dead and darke, and the ſpirit hardened from receiving ſuch grace as God offers; then is he not to ſhake off all at 6. and 7, but to looke well about him. He is to conſider, that ſuch a watch word from God is not for nought, the Lord is not wanting uſually to his ordinance altogether. If in ſtead of a melting and broken heart, more cheerefull by the promiſe, more penitent and more watchfull upon the Sacrament, hee feeles the contrary evils to appeare; ſullenneſſe, looſeneſſe, deadneſſe, unmercifulneſſe; then hath he neede to conſult and give ſentence. And whereas hypocrites and time-ſervers looke at nothing, ſave how they may diſpatch the worke, and then make account that God is tyed to their girdles, although ſtill their corruption feſter and ranker in them ſo much the more; the people of God are impatient of ſuch ſhuffling and confuſion.

What to doe in that caſe,

And they conclude there is a pad in the ſtraw ſtill: there is ſome excommunicate thing hidden in their tent, which they would not caſt out. And therefore, howſoever conſcience was content that they ſhould take ſome paines to prepare themſelves, yet the chiefe worke was neglected, and therefore either their perſon is ſtill unaccepted of God (being in his uncleanneſſe) or elſe ſome beloved luſt lyeth glowing at the heart, unſeene or elſe unpurged out. Thus was it with thoſe Iſraelites, Deut. 5. 29. and Ioſhua the laſt, and Iudges the 20, all who thought well of themſelves, vowed themſelves to the Lord: prepared themſelves very ſtrongly to fight in a good cauſe againſt villanous treſpaſſers. But God was not with them, but ſlew 42000 of them, even by thoſe men of Gibea, worſe than themſelves: The reaſon was, that although the cauſe was good, yet they were unfit to handle it at that time, their conſcience being crazed with Idols. But when they ſaw the roote of the malady, they durſt no longer kicke againſt the pricks: but fell ſadly to ſearch out their ſinne by faſting and prayer, to breake their hearts before the Lord, to weepe, repent, and renew covenant. And upon this the Lord altered his courſe alſo; and at the third onſet, gave them the victory. Even ſo muſt it bee with theſe: they muſt not give the Lord over in this Sacramentall diſcovery: they muſt bleſſe him unfainedly that hath rather by frowning upon them, and by turning a day of feaſting into a day of ſorrow, ſhewed them their corrupt condition, than to leave them ſtill hardned in their ſinne! Oh! If thou belong to the Lord, thou canſt not endure ſo bitter a countenance of his to be caſt upon thee; but recover his favour by a thorough purging out that venome which defiled thee: yea if ordinary meanes will not ſerve, extraordinary ſhall; of the practice whereof, I have ſpoken in the chapter of Repentance, and the triall thereof.

The 2 Act in caſe of want of feeling.

Secondly, if thou finde it to be otherwiſe upon due ſurvey of thy receiving; to wit, that thou haſt beene faithfull to God and thine owne ſoule in the worke: ſo that thy conſcience doth not accuſe thee, nor the Lord frowne upon thee: and yet for all that, thou ſtill wanteſt that feeling and ſavour of the Sacrament which thou deſireſt to walke with: then thou art to apply thy ſelfe otherwiſe; that is, thou art to conceive, that as yet thou art not fitted to receive ſuch meaſure of grace, nor to uſe it well; but rather wouldeſt be puffed up with it, and not to bee able to honour God with it. The Lord therefore goes about to try thy deſire, how long it will laſt, and how long it will thirſt after the grace of the Sacrament, and againſt the next time, grow more earneſt by this thy forbearing: The Lord would empty thee more of thy ſelfe, and convince thee how unworthy a veſſell thou art to have it powred into thee, and hee had need buffet thee, and bring thee low before hee dare truſt thee with it: and, ſeeing all this is not from hatred, but in love, ſet thine heart at reſt, make no haſt, nor limit the Lord, but patiently waite and bee well doing, and in time the Lord ſhall breake the pride of thine heart, and let in his promiſe by faith ſweetly into thee, ſo that thou ſhalt not repent thee that thou wert for a time deferred, that thou mighteſt bee after rewarded with more comfort, and learne to boaſt of the Lord.

What to do in this.

2 Cor. 12.9.

The 2. Act in caſe of ſatisfaction.

Thirdly and laſtly: If thou finde that the Lord hath ſweetly ſatisfied thee with that fruit of the Sacrament which thou wenteſt for to his feaſt of the Lord Ieſus; ſo that now thou art as one ſet at liberty, cheerefull in heart, meete for thy calling, and purpoſely bent to obey: Then thou art to apply thy ſelfe a third way. And thou art to doe ſomewhat for the preſent, and ſomewhat for time to come. For the preſent, to renue againe thy thankefull heart to God, who at laſt hath heard thy deſire, and quit thee of thine adverſary which alway upbraided thee with thy unfruitfull Sacraments: and now with poore Hanna to receive this comfort, as one that meanes no more to looke with a ſad heart, but to honour the Lord in the ſtrength of his owne gracious faithfulneſſe: and to knit thine heart to him by the band of ſo undeſerved mercy. Secondly, for the preſent alſo thou muſt ground thy ſelfe in experience of Gods love, that it may be a pledge in thy boſome of like, yea (if thy ſin let not) of greater mercy, that thou maiſt not bee to ſeeke of it. For the time to come, thou art to practiſe two things. 1. To uſe ſome meanes. 2. To exerciſe ſome Graces. For the firſt, thou art to ſet thy ſelfe on worke to pray and ſeeke the Lord to nouriſh this fruit of the Sacrament in thee: and by all meanes to blow it up as with bellowes, yea, to hatch this mercy in thee, that it periſh not. As Paul bids Timothy, to preſerve that truſt committed unto him, by the laying on of hands. And ſo ſhouldeſt thou take heede leaſt thou looſe 3 Iohn verſe 8. the good things thou haſt laboured for, till thou get a full reward.

to

What to doe? 1. For preſent. 2. For time to come. 1. Exerciſe ſome meanes. 2 Tim. 4. 14.

Likewiſe there are two graces of the Spirit which all ſuch have cauſe to practiſe. The firſt is feare. The ſecond is care. By feare I meane as Heb. 2. 1. Taking heede leaſt theſe good things leake out, through the ſecret chinkes and crackes of our falſe hearts. Iealouſie of looſing grace, is like the tender eye-lid, which keepes any offence from the eye. And watcheth narrowly to all occaſions againſt all temptations of the world and Satan, whereby this pearle might be endangered and imbezzeld. The mother whoſe the living childe was, would not give any way to the cutting it in ſunder, but the falſe mother would; and by that Solomon bewrayed her. So is it here. An hypocrite who wants this Treaſure (as the proverbe ſaith) will ſing before the theefe, having nothing to looſe, although he goe in the midſt of a thouſand dangers, hee is not troubled: but the traveller who carries a round charge about him or behind him, cannot be ſo merry. Hee comes not to a place of robbing or hazard, but he will be ſure to have his company neere him, and to have his hand upon his hilts. Oh! he is ſenſible of his money! So is a true Chriſtian: The grace which hee receives from Gods hand, brings with it a jealous heart, leaſt by ſome meanes or other he forgoe it. Bleſſed is he who thus feareth alway, and ſtandeth, upon his watch.

2. Some graces. 1. Feare. 2 King. 2. 2. 8. Pro. 12. 8.

2. Care.

Secondly care. That is, hee is very ſtudious and painefull to improve that Talent which hee hath received from the bounty of the Sacrament. If he finde that faith and her fruits be planted truely, he playes the occupier of theſe Talents. Wee know a bare man, having gotten a ſtocke together, and borrowing upon uſe daily, had neede to looke to himſelfe, as knowing all his hope is in his credite, that he can hold quarter, and keepe dayes of payment. So ought it to be with a Chriſtian: he goes every Sacrament deeper and deeper into Gods Books. That faith, peace, and grace which he meets with at the Sacrament, is as a new borrowed ſumme of the Vſurer. If hee come not to the Sacrament for the better, hee knowes hee comes for the worſe. Therefore all his care is, how hee may improve this treaſure, and bee daily able by his occupying, to keepe credit with God, and to finde favour with him for new receits, as his needes require. The grace of the Sacrament is coſtly and requires good improvement: And except a man walke in the exerciſe thereof more faithfully and fruitfully, the Lord will withdraw his gifts, and come upon him as a hard maſter, who will exact the uttermoſt penny of encreaſe. And wee know that commonly if the Vſurer fall ſore upon a debter, he breakes his backe. To avoyd this miſery, learne this. The more God betruſts thee with, the more care doe thou nouriſh in thy ſelfe that thou grow: that ſo the Lord may receive his owne with increaſe. And by this meanes of renewing thy ſelfe after the Sacrament thou ſhalt finde the fruit of it to abide in thee conſtantly: and to bee a meane of thriving in a good courſe. Which grace the Lord grant! And for this third duty after the Sacrament, and ſo of the whole doctrine of the preparation, and this ſecond treatiſe, thus much be ſaid.

CHAP. XI.

Shewing ſome directions how a communicant may finde his preparation to the Supper, ſweete and familiar.

IT is the will of God that all his people doe finde his yoake eaſie, and his burthen light: both in thoſe duties which ought ever and at each inſtant to be done, as to beleeve, repent, to live well, and to bee ready to dye: as alſo thoſe which are for ever due, but not at every inſtant to doe: But at ſuch ſeaſons as are meete and appointed for them, as, to preach, heare, pray, receive the Sacraments. To inſiſt in the Supper onely in this place: The Lord loves not that it ſhould be a toyle to his people, either to try themſelves before, or to communicate at the Table, or to ſurvey their worke after. Yet impoſſible it is, but ſo it muſt be and will be to ſuch as pleaſe themſelves in nothing, ſave in their eaſe & formality of ſerving of God: But to ſuch as know that God will have his yoake put on, and hath promiſed to make it ſweet, it will become ſo, if they will yeeld neckes to it, and beleeve. Let none miſtake me herein. I know that no man muſt diminiſh or take away the leaſt dramme of weight from any ſervice of God: it were curſed preſumption and ſacriledge to doe it: and curſed be he that doth the worke of God negligently. Yet neither ought any to adde any weight of his owne to the Lords worke, and to make it heavier than himſelf hath made it: But take it as God hath framed it, moſt light and cheerefull to an heart applyed thereto. Now to apply what I have ſaid, to this Sacrament: What one worke of God (among the outward) is ſo ſhrugged at, and wearifome to the moſt, as this of Triall and receiving the Supper? On the one ſide men feele a great difficulty in the diſpatch, and on the other ſide, the Kings command is ſtreight, a neceſſity is laid upon them, and woe to them that doe it not; and what comes of this? Surely they breake through it with head and ſhoulders, and doe it as they can, their owne eaſe and ſloath they will not ſhake off, and the Lords yoake they are loath to tak on. To prevent this eye ſore, I have ſet down theſe few directions, which I commend to the teachable: as for the foole (ſet in his frame) I know though one ſhould bray him in a morter, yet would not his folly depart from him.

Rules againſt it. 6.

Rule 1. Tit 1.15. And firſt generally ſeeing that onely To the pure all things are pure; and nothing be it never ſo pure is ſavory to an uncleane heart, whoſe minde and ſpirit is defiled: Let therefore this bee the firſt rule, That the heart and conſcience be pure, and ſo preſerved daily: for ſo the inner man will delight in the Law of God, and the bent and ſtreame of the ſoule will goe that way, although wee bee not continually buſied in the outward performance therof, as in receiving the Sacrament, or hearing &c. Whereas they, who ſtill abide in their uncleaneneſſe, and their hearts are corrupt within them, are at no time fit for any duty, whether preſent or abſent; for why, they delight onely in that which followes their own principle, yea in any thing, ſave that which tends to the honour of God, and their owne profit and comfort. So then, firſt I ſay, let us get a beleeving heart, and a pure minde thereby, nouriſhing it daily, and then the inward man will bend it ſelfe to walke with God, in ſuch duties as it meets with, be they liberties or croſſes, be they hearing, prayer or Sacrament, nothing ſhall (through mercy) come amiſſe to a prepared heart: But as the playing of all leſſons is equally ſeaſonable to a well tuned inſtrument, ſo here.

Rom. 7. 24.

Rule 2. Secondly, being ſet thus in frame, wee muſt ſo goe to worke daily. That is, wee muſt live by faith, daily apprehending Chriſt to our ſelves in his promiſe, for the ſupport of our life by his daily influence and nouriſhment. For ſeeing the Lord is willing to give us Chriſt to be our wiſedome and holineſſe, and to be ours to put on and doe all we have to do in, as well any day, yeſterday and for ever, as well as today. Heb. 13. 8. yea as well every day as at the Sacrament, to become our meate indeede and drinke indeede: what (ſave unbeleefe) ſhould hinder, why we ſhould not take him every day as well as any day, him (I ſay) with all the benefits, as pardon, peace, and direction, both for doing and ſuffering, living and dying well? Chriſt is not for a Pageant or Proceſſion, to gaze on once a yeare, but for uſe & to live upon daily, as Paul ſaith Now live I, yet not I but Chriſt in mee: and the life I live is by faith in the Sonne of God. To this end conſider further, that wee receive the ſame Chriſt in the Sacrament, and in the promiſe: If then we be upholden by faith in the promiſe dayly, that Chriſt will bee our patience, ſtrength, hope, and will doe all our workes in us: Then by the ſame faith the Sacrament will be welcome to us, although it were as daily as in the primitive Church, Act. 2. becauſe ſtill wee receive the ſame Chriſt, though in a differing conveyance. Deceive not thy ſelfe about thy life of faith, and then thou ſhalt not be eaſily unprepared for the Sacrament. The Souldier that lyeth alway in Gariſon is fitter to encounter the enemy in the field, than one that commeth from the ſhop or plough, untrained for the battell.

Gal. 2. 15.

in

Eſay 26.16. Acts 2.end.

Thirdly, we muſt be vigilant againſt thoſe evils daily which ſteale into us, whereby we make a ſeparation betweene God and us, and ſo, betweene us and his Ordinances; ſetting a gulfe betweene us and them, ſo that we cannot come at them eaſily, as the Sacrament by name: and contrariwiſe, we muſt maintaine our daily fellowſhip with God daily, in faith, patience, meekeneſſe, diligent uſe of meanes, meditating of the word, abſteyning from techineſſe, worldlineſſe, pride, inconſtancy, unthankefulneſſe, remiſſeneſſe of ſpirit, buſying our ſelves about other, or more things than wee are called to, &c. Which although at the time of committing them, they ſeeme nothing: (we not thinking of after-reckoning, or what hurt they will doe us) yet in the meane time, we are corrupted and hardned therewith ere we are aware. Little dreaming what an ill handſel they make us toward the Sacrament. And moreover, when we would finde them out and confeſſe them at the Sacrament, wee cannot ſo eaſily bring it to paſſe, our hearts being a farre off to ſeeke through their diſtemper. So then (in a word) keepe we our hearts undefiled, and ſhun occaſions as wee may: and wee ſhall finde our Sacrament-worke mightily ſet forward thereby: ſo that the ſolemneſſe and hardneſſe of the taske will bee well over: and wee ſhall come to it not as a Beare to the ſtake, but as to our appointed foode; for why? Is not this our fellowſhip with grace much furthered thereby? Marke but this: When we have newly beene at the Sacrament, wee ſeeme pretty well affected: And what hinders us from being ſo continually, if ſuch ſcurfe brake not out to defile us? but wee imagine (baſely) that fellowſhip with ſinne and Chriſt, light and darkeneſſe, may be held together, which cannot be.

Rule 3. Ephe 6.18. James 4.2. Heb. 3.14. Pſal. 32.3. 2 Cor. 6.16.

Fourthly, if we have beene prevented by Sathan, our own looſeneſſe or other occaſions, and have fallen into the ſinnes before named,

Rule 4.

Lam. 3. 40. med, or the like: That we practiſe a daily repentance thereof, breaking our hearts, and faſtning upon the promiſe, (by which we muſt get pardon, and new ſtrength to obey) and abhorre all ſodering up of our falls by our owne devices. All men will confeſſe that ſinne muſt be repented of, or elſe it will hurt us; but we make queſtion of the time when it muſt be; and ſo Sathan bids us, put it off till after when more leaſure is, or till the Sacrament come: for then it muſt be done, and then as good make but one worke of it, as many, and ſpare our ſelves a labour; and repent of all altogether. But he that is wiſe, finding out his errours and ſinnes daily, will repent daily, and not put it off ſo long till hee have forgot it, and ſo the worke will prove the more tedious. Beſides, daily repentance keepeth the heart faſt and tender, and preſerves us wary of offending afterward. Even as when the water is much frozen by an hard and deepe froſt, either it muſt be broken and kept thin every day, that ſo the cattle may drinke eaſily; or elſe it will renew her hardneſſe, ſo that it will be hard to peirce it: Even ſo if wee ſuffer our hearts to goe on in ſinne, till we come to the Sacrament, we ſhall not have them ſoft at our command, but ſhall be much cumbred with them.

Rule 5. Fiftly, our experience of former receiving ſhould helpe and ſtrengthen us againſt next time; We ſhould not be as riven veſſells which ſuffer the liquor to run out as faſt as it is powred in; Or as the ſive, which while it is in the water, holds water as well as a paile; but if out of it, then preſently draines out: Contrariwiſe we ought, when we come from the Sacrament (as I have ſaid) ſeriouſly to ponder what good we have gotten there, or when we have failed in: if we have failed, we ſhould covenant to humble our ſelves, till we have caſt out that failing, as unbeleefe, ſloath, uncharitableneſſe, which deprives us of the fruite we looked for, as peace, joy, growth in grace. But if at the Supper we have felt theſe to revive in us, then ought we to retaine their worke and power in us, from 1 King. 19. 8. day to day, till we receive againe. When Eliya had eaten bread and dranke water, hee went on forty dayes in the ſtrength of it. So ſhould we who have fed upon other dainties, and ſo ſhould we not be alway new to begin, but keepe our old grace, and increaſe new, which is indeed to grow by the Sacrament. But of this before.

Rule 6. Laſtly, we muſt ſo uſe all private meanes of Religion, as they may be helps to the publike. For private meanes are often, publike ſeldomer: If then ſo oft as we prayed, or read, or conferred, or meditated, we could have our eyes upon that hard taske of the Sacrament, and either pray for bleſſing upon it after, or elſe bleſſe God for the good we have formerly received: If we would in private by our ſelves muſe of it, and aske others how they have found it eaſie: we ſhould finde the Sacrament a cheerefull and comfortable worke for us to goe about, in compariſon of that we doe. But wee commonly mind theſe things all at once, when the Sacrament calls upon us: which maketh it ſtrange unto us, becauſe it is not the object which our eye was upon before hand. And for theſe ſixe Rules of direction, thus much.

ment,

CHAP. XII.

Why the Sacraments are ſo unworthily partaken by ſome, and ſo unfruitfully by others.

TO that which I have ſaid of the unpreparednes of men to the Sacrament in the former Chapter: I may adde ſomewhat of the unprofitableneſſe and unfruitfulneſſe of them, in this laſt period of my Booke. No man neede wonder that hee who is awcke and unwilling to a worke, commonly findes it to thrive with himſelfe accordingly, that is, to prove barren and fruitleſſe. Therefore the former Chapter might be a reaſon ſufficient of this. Howbeit becauſe the ſore is deepe, I will dive a little further into the cauſes hereof, both in the worſer ſort, as alſo in the better, touching upon the remedies briefely. Moſt receive unprofitably.

In the worſer ſort (for I would have none think that I confound the diſeaſes of all ſorts) I have obſerved ſome cauſes to proceede from inward, ſome from outward reſpects. Touching the inward: firſt, one cauſe is the generall ignorance of people. True it is, Popiſh blindneſſe and error is removed, touching the merit, neceſſity and worke wrought: and generally people are free from bread worſhip: yea they thinke there is ſome excellent thing in the Sacrament; but if yee come to the upſhot of the matter, namely to demand what a Sacrament is, to what end ordained, what fruite it affords, and how to be received: yee may goe (even in Townes duely and well catechiſed) and picke out ſcores yea hundreds of people, who can give no common ſenſible account of this ordinance: But are as blinde, about the doctrine of it, as the mole in the earth. What then shall be said of such as live in utter darkenesse? The cure of it is, that these understand, that as Hosea saith, they perish for lacke of knowledge, yea ignorance rotteth the heart and maketh it naught; and therefore that they cast out this bitter roote, and get some measure of light: and plucke off the cover of darkenesse.

Remedy. Hos. 4. 6. Esay 25.

2 Cause. Superstition. A second cause, is superstition; causing a solemne yea Popish over reckoning of the Sacrament, viz. That it is so holy a thing that all must not meddle with, fitter to be shrined up under a Canopy, than brought forth into over ordinary use: Alas! few men are worthy to come to such mysteries: It is well for them they have devout hearts, and love them: But as for that wisedome, faith, and charity, which is necessary to partake them, they come short, and so (they doubt) doe many that make themselves skilfuller than they: Therefore they finde enough of it to come at Easter, and sometimes neglect it then also. Oh! blinde idiots! The devill hath cast upon you the oyle of superstition to burne you up, as hee hath cast the water of contempt upon the former. But for remedy know, That the Lord loves not extremities: he will neither admit the despising scorner, nor the superstitious esteemer, but count them both guilty. If God allow the Sacrament to his faithfull people in ordinary, thy superstitious mannerlinesse is out of season: let reverence bring thee to God, but cursed bee that superstition which beates thee off.

Remedy.

3. Cause. Profanenes. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Ioh. 3. 20. A third cause is brutish profanenesse of life. What communion is there with Christ and Belial? Many doe so debauch their lives with odious drunkennesse, cosenage, lying, swearing, Sabboth breach, with other abominations, proclaiming their sinne as Sodom, abhorring the light, and maintaining their lusts and pleasures against it: that their hearts are powred out as water: and there is no heart left in them to looke after the Sacrament: They tell themselves in secret, That such holy things are not for dogges: Swine more become the trough than the Table: The Devill also takes on and torments them (if they dare looke toward the Sacrament,) and tells them, They have another trade to thrive upon, their whoring, their riot, their roaring, and emptying themselves into their lusts without all controll, and stabbing all that give them a crosse word, must be their joy and delight, and in stead of all Word and Sacrament.

Mat. 7. 6.

Remedy. And thus they desperately goe on saying, There is no hope, Jeremy 2. 25. The remedy is, That they submit to Gods terrours, and stop their their ungodly courses, and try if the terrors of God can tame them, and bring them into some generall compasse.

A fourth cause is, conceit of mens civilitie, innocencie and good life among men: but voidnesse of grace, and being quite estranged from the life of Religion. Now how can such finde any relish in the Seale of that Covenant which they regard not? Its enough for them that they keepe their Church, shun the Alehouse and drunkennes, be no open profane offenders: but they keepe quarter with their owne Idoll, and set up that in stead of God, his Word and Sacrament, their harmelesnesse and curtesie, must goe for pay with men, though they be never so fulsome in Gods account. I condemne not civility, nay I praise it: yet the resting in a principle of our owne, starves the heart of Gods grace, when a man resolves there to pitch. Let these men learne to be out of all favor with themselves, knowing that their excellencie stands in a thing which is quite underline of grace, and so seeke to season their soules with true understanding of their enmity with God, and care to keepe covenant with him, which onely can make the seales savory.

4. Cause. Conceit of civility being out of Covenant.

Remedy.

Some outward causes there are also of this: First the want of the Ministery, and meanes of knwledge of Gods Ordinances, and the Supper by name. How should Ministers preach of the Seales that understand not the doctrine of Christ himselfe? Nay I mourne to speake it, divers Ministers neither unlearned, nor unpainefull (in their kind) nor ungodly; yet in point of the Sacrament, doe little acquaint either themselves or the people with it, almost through the yeere except in a passage a farre off. I dare not boast my selfe, I know well mine owne wants: but if I might draw any to emulation, I durst say, That whereas my poore labours for twelve yeares, were more upon this, than any other one point; I am not ashamed to say, I found the argument more fruitfull at the end, than all the while. And doubtlesse many good people there are who mourne for the barrennesse of their Ministers in this kinde, as much as their owne deprivall of the benefit.

2 Externall causes. 1 want of meanes.

Remedy.

Secondly, base example. Sinne, 1 Pet. 1.18. goes strong in the streame of tradition. When as in a towne you shall have twentie families into which the knowledge and favor of the Sacraments never entred: how should it discend into their children? No. But as 2 King. 17. ult. that worship which those Samaritans had learned, was continued many hundred yeares after, even till Christs time, Ioh 4. So here, looke what unsavorinesse of Sacraments was in in the grandfather and father or mother, it deſcended as an inheritance to their poſterity, running in the bloud as a diſeaſe. There-Remedy. medy is, that young ones doe withdraw themſelves from ſuch curſed cuſtomes of prophaneneſſe, and ſuffer the word to ſeaſon their hearts more deepely with grace and the love of holy things more deepely, than lewd cuſtome hath leavened them with the contrary.

3 Scandall. Thirdly Scandall. When the bad ſtumble at the actions and lives of ſuch as are frequent receivers (who may bee hypocrites) and when they ſee that ſuch dare cogge and cozen men of their eſtates, undoe men by breaking and running away: and ſometimes be as joviall and merry companions as themſelves, as to lye, traduce others, breake promiſes, play the worldlings, and the like; Oh! they conclude, There is no great matter in receiving the Sacraments, and if this be the religion of ſuch, let us abide ſtill drinkers, &c. Oh! fearefull ſcandall! Thou ſhouldeſt binde thy ſelfe by receiving to an inoffenſive courſe of meekeneſſe and love, that thou mighteſt winne honour to the Sacraments. But for redreſſe hereof, let ſuch Remedy. conſider the woe to all that offend others, and all that are offended at others. Its juſt with God to ſet one againſt the other, that ſuch may periſh who love not the truth: One ſhall not neede to mocke the other. This for the firſt.

Now for the better ſort, even with them alſo it is not well. They
2. Better ſort. debarre themſelves of the ſweete fruit they might enjoy. And Cauſes. why? Surely becauſe the entire value and honour of the Sacra-
No ponde- ring the ſpiri- tualneſſe and worth of Sa- craments. ment is not nouriſhed in their hearts, the true gaine of them continues not in their ſoules. They ponder not the ſpirituall nature of them, they beleeve not that God can bleſſe them as he hath promiſed, they hold no ſtrength from them any time, but forget it by their vanity and giddineſſe. They cannot ſee how the Spirit of Chriſt gives efficacy to the Sacrament to purge them from the wrath, revenge, lightnes, abuſe of liberties: and the leſſe they gaine by them (through their owne ſinne) the leſſe they love them. Much leſſe doe they conſider the ſealing power of Sacraments to give the ſoule aſſurance of that which other Ordinances alone cannot. The Remedy. remedy whereof, being that which oft hath beene preſſed, I neede not urge it. Only I aime at this, that I might give the Reader a view together of theſe diſeaſes for his better recovery.

2. Cauſe. Hiding of their ſinne. Secondly, even the better ſort are much given (oft times) to hide their owne follies, and to beare with themſelves too much, even in thoſe errors which breake out openly enough to the eye of the wiſe wiſe obſervers. Now if the ſight of our wants is not all that God requires of his people, what ſhall be ſaid to ſuch as in ſelfe-love applaud themſelves, and looke ſo much at their few commendations, that they are loth to acknowledge their blemiſhes. And ſure it is, he that walkes with ſence of few wants, makes God ſuperfluous in his Sacraments. For remedy hereof, goe to the Chapter wherein this point is purpoſely handled.

Thirdly, many of theſe are deepely tainted with worldlines and have no meaſure in their earthly buſineſſe: whereby neither their preparation to the Sacrament, nor their ſurvey of it, either before or after can finde roome with them. All is too little, for worke, worke. Oh! thou ſhalt have thy belly full of it one day (with aking and ſorrow) when conſcience ſhall preſent thee with thy ſinne, and ſhew thee how many Sacraments, and the fruit of them, this gulfe of the world hath devoured without recovery: And what a narrow entrance into heaven, it hath cauſed to thee, who (if thou hadſt been enlarged to Gods opportunities, as they to thee) mightſt have found a large doore opened unto thee. Then ſhalt thou bee wearie of thoſe cavills which thy covetous heart hath caſt upon the Sacrament, as theſe; Where finde ye that ſo much coſt is required to the Sacrament, that men muſt lay aſide their buſineſſe, and looke after that? Nay, where findeſt thou that the matters of ſo divine a Nature muſt ſtoope to thy baſe traſh? And ſo ingroſſe thy heart; that when holy things are in hand, thy ſoule is no where leſſe than where thy body is? So that thou hadſt as good doe never a whit, as never the better? The Remedy is, Reſigne up thy ſelfe and ends to God: make him the Moderator, and hee will not defraude thee of thy worldly due, if thou wilt be ruled: But if thy ſelfe be judge, the Lord muſt needes prove the loſer. To theſe I might adde more. As that men make a dead worke of the Sacrament; they live not by faith in it, they walke not humbly and tenderly, but ſuffer ſmaller evils to lurke in them and defile them; till they feele conſcience crazed, they make not up their breaches by ſpeedy repenting, but ſoder and cruſt them over, they ply not Sacraments with other private and perſonall helpes meete to preſerve the grace thereof; but in the midſt of their ſlightneſſe, vanities, and pleaſures which they mixe with holy things, they looke to fare as well as thoſe that watch cloſely to thoſe ſuccors; wherein as they are foulely deceived, ſo let them know, that the Lord is righteous, and will not conceale the labour of love in his better ſervants to equall the ſlight and
